THE TECHNIQUE OF INDEXING. By MARY PETHERBRIDGE, Nat. Sci. Tripos, Indexer of the East India Company's Records, the Drapers' Company's Records, the Warrington Corporation Records, &c. Price 5s. net.—Published by the Secretarial Bureau, 52A, Conduit Street, London, W.

ABSTRACTS of the WILLS in REGISTER SOAME, 1620, in the PRIORATE COURT of CANTERBURY. This Volume of over 600 Pages, now ready, contains concise but exhaustive Abstracts of every Will in the two volumes known as Register Soame, containing 1,366 Wills, with 40,000 References to Persons, and 10,000 to Places, all thoroughly indexed. The volume will be delivered at 6dols., or 23s. (carriage extra). All correspondence relative to the work may be addressed to the Editor, J. HENRY LEE, 14, Clifford's Inn, London, E.C. Subscriptions should be sent to M. C. NASH, Treasurer, New England Historic Genealogical Society, Somerset Street, Boston, Mass., U.S.A.

ON SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 25, WILL BE PUBLISHED THE NEWSPAPER PRESS DIRECTORY, 1905, SIXTIETH ANNUAL ISSUE.

Price 2s. net.

Post free, 2s. 6d.

C. Mitchell &amp; Co. 1 and 2, Snow Hill, Holborn Viaduct, E.C.

RARE AMERICANA.

THE HISTORY of HADLEY, MASSACHUSETTS. With Family Genealogies. One of the best pictures of colonial times and customs extant. A reprint of this rare book is in the press. An Historical Introduction will be added, with special reference to the Regicides.

Subscription price $5. Edition limited.

H. R. Huntling &amp; Co., Springfield, Massachusetts, U.S.A.

or E. F. Stevens &amp; Brown, 4, Trafalgar Square, London, W.C.

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS.IN PREPARATION.FACSIMILES OF FIFTEENTH CENTURY BOOKS.

A Series of Twelve Photogravure Facsimiles of rare Fifteenth-Century Books printed in England and now in the University Library, Cambridge.

The first four books will be:—

1. GEOFFREY CHAUCER'S ANELIDA and ARCITE, from the unique Copy of the Westminster Edition of William Caxton (1477-8). 10s. net. [Nearly ready.]

2. The TEMPLE of GLAS, by John Lydgate, from the unique Copy of the Westminster Edition of William Caxton (1477-8). 12s. 6d. net. [Nearly ready.]

3. THOMAS BETSON'S RYGT PROFYTABLE TREATYSE (from St. Jerome, St. Bernard, Gerson, &c.) (1500), from the Copy printed by Wynkyn De Worde in Caxton's House.

4. AUGUSTINI DACTI SCRIBE sup TULLIANIS ELOGANCIJS & VERBIS EXOTICIS in sua FACUNDISSIMA RETHORICA INCIPIT FORNATE LIBELLUS, from the unique Copy printed at St. Albans (about 1479-80) by "The Schoolmaster Printer."

Only 250 Copies of each Book will be printed, and the plates will then be destroyed. The Books will be printed upon Hand-made Paper and will be bound in grey paper boards, quarter vellum, with vellum side label. Subscribers to the whole Series of 12 Volumes will be entitled to a reduction of one-fifth of the published price.

A Prospectus and Specimen Page, showing the size and style of reproduction, will be sent upon request.

A COMPANION to GREEK STUDIES. Edited by Leonard

WHIBLEY, M.A., Fellow of Pembroke College, and University Lecturer in Ancient History. With 141 Illustrations and 5 Maps. Demy 8vo, 18s. net.

The Contents include Chapters on Geography, Fauna and Flora; History; Literature, Philosophy, and Science; Art, Mythology, and Religion; Public Antiquities; Private Antiquities; Criticism and Interpretation, contributed by H. F. Tozer, Canon Tristram, R. D. Hicks, Sir R. Jebb, Dr. Henry Jackson, Dr. Gow, Dr. F. C. Penrose, Prof. E. A. Gardner, Dr. Waldstein, F. R. Earp, A. H. Smith, Prof. Ridgeway, Dr. Archer-Hind, L. Whibley, W. Wyse, R. J. G. Mayor, H. J. Edwards, Prof. Oman, A. B. Cook, Miss Harrison, Dr. Wilkins, Dr. M. R. James, F. Warre Cornish, Lady Evans, Prof. Allbutt, R. A. Neil, P. Giles, E. S. Roberts, J. Rendel Harris, Dr. Verrall, and Dr. Sandys.

*A Prospectus will be sent on application.NICETA of REMESIANA: his Life and Works. By A. E.

BURN, D.D., Trinity College, Cambridge, Rector of Handsworth and Prebendary of Lichfield, Examining Chaplain to the Lord Bishop of Lichfield. Crown 8vo, 9s. net.

BIRMINGHAM POST.—"Who wrote the 'Te Deum' ?.....Dr. Burn comes forward to tell us who the author was, and all that at present is known about him.....Dr. Burn's is the first edition of what remains to us of Niceta. It is a strange story. The author, if we may believe Dr. Burn, of that matchless hymn of praise, was the missionary Bishop of Remesiana, in what is now Serbia, who was engaged in converting Goths and Dacians."

NOW READY FOURTH EDITION.

The GROWTH of ENGLISH INDUSTRY and COMMERCE

DURING the EARLY and MIDDLE AGES. By W. CUNNINGHAM, F.B.A. D.D., Fellow and Lecturer of Trinity College, and Vicar of Great St. Mary's, Cambridge. Fourth Edition. Demy 8vo, 12s. 6d. net.

BY THE SAME AUTHOR.

The GROWTH of ENGLISH INDUSTRY and COMMERCE in MODERN TIMES. Third Edition. Demy 8vo. In Two Parts. Part I. The MERCANTILE SYSTEM. Part II. LAISSEZ FAIRE. 25s. net.

WESTMINSTER GAZETTE.—"One of the finest studies in economic history that has yet been produced in this country."

The RISE and DECLINE of the FREE TRADE MOVEMENT. Crown 8vo, 2s. 6d. net.

PALL MALL GAZETTE.—"The series of Cambridge Lectures contained in a little volume bearing the name of Dr. Cunningham will not be long in securing their place in the literature of the Tariff controversy."

THE CAMBRIDGE HISTORICAL SERIES.—New Volume.

General Editor: G. W. PROTHERO, Litt.D.

SCANDINAVIA: a Political History of Denmark, Norway, and SWEDEN from 1513 to 1900. By R. NISBET BAIN, Author of 'The Daughter of Peter the Great,' 'Charles XII. and the Collapse of the Swedish Empire,' &c. Crown 8vo, with 5 Maps, 7s. 6d.

London: Cambridge University Press Warehouse, Ave Maria Lane. C. F. CLAY, Manager.

MR. EDWARD ARNOLD'S NEW BOOKS.

THIRD IMPRESSION.

THE UNVEILING OF LHASA.

By EDMUND CANDLER.

With a large number of Illustrations and a Map.

Demy 8vo, 15s. net.

SPECTATOR.—"Mr. Candler has written a book of remarkable interest. That, indeed, was assured by its subject; but the manner of writing is as admirable as the matter. Other books on the Expedition may be written fuller of detailed information, but none can be more thoroughly imbued with its romance. One of Mr. Candler's most notable gifts is a power of vivid, sympathetic delineation of scenery. There are many passages in his book which are delightful pictures."

ATHENÆUM.—"Mr. Candler's bright and moving narrative, which seems so full of incident as to create some curiosity as to what his successors will find left to describe."

WESTMINSTER GAZETTE.—"The everyday incidents and accidents make the real romance of the enterprise. They are set forth in Mr. Candler's account with a vividness and charm which make the whole volume delightful reading."

IMPORTANT MUSICAL WORK.

ALESSANDRO SCARLATTI: his Life and Works. By EDWARD J. DENT, Fellow of King's College, Cambridge. Royal 8vo, with 100 Musical Illustrations, 12s. 6d. net.

TIMES.—"Mr. Dent has done his work so thoroughly that English students may well be proud of the fact that their country has produced a book of this kind, which cannot fail to be generally accepted as the authority on Scarlatti. The style of the book is strong and unaffected, concise and direct. As we began by saying, it is one upon which the author and the publisher may well be congratulated. It is worthy to stand beside any German or French work of the kind."

PALL MALL GAZETTE.—"A much-needed biography in a field where there are special or notable predecessors."

The EVOLUTION THEORY.

By AUGUST WEISMANN, Professor of Zoology in the University of Freiburg. Translated by Prof. J. ARTHUR THOMSON. 2 vols. royal 8vo, with many Illustrations, 32s. net.

STANDARD.—"Whether the 'Evolution Theory' does or does not command our allegiance, we close the book with the sense that we have been listening not only to a man of exceptional learning, but also to one of great intellectual power. It is permeated by the same serene, judicial, and philosophic spirit as the writings of our own Darwin."

ASTRONOMICAL DISCOVERY.

By HERBERT HALL TURNER, D.Sc. F.R.S., Savilian Professor of Astronomy in the University of Oxford. Demy 8vo, with Diagrams, 10s. 6d. net.

ATHENÆUM.—"In this work astronomical discovery is treated of in such a way as to render it of great interest to general readers as well as to professed astronomers. The typography of this admirable work is excellent."

DAILY MAIL.—"Prof. Turner's new book is of extreme interest."

WESTMINSTER GAZETTE.—"A volume of unusual interest. In its fascinating chapters the story of some half-dozen discoveries is developed in an exceedingly attractive manner."

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'KNOWLEDGE IS POWER.'
FACTS and IDEAS. Short Studies of Life and Literature. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

WORLD.—"With a fine feeling for style, a remarkable knowledge of his subjects, keen sympathy, and much humour, the author of this really remarkable book, which should find a place in the library of every school and be given as a prize to every boy who shows a desire to make the acquaintance of large subjects and big men, treats of nearly everything worth treating under the sun in short pithy essays."

SECOND IMPRESSION.

GHOST STORIES of an ANTI-

QUARY. By M. R. JAMES, Litt.D., Director of the Fitzwilliam Museum, Cambridge. Bound in art canvas, 6s.

GUARDIAN.—"We do not hesitate to say that these are among the best ghost stories we have ever read; they rank with that greatest of all ghost stories, Lord Lytton's 'The Hunted and the Haunters.'"

SPHERE.—"This well-printed and charmingly bound volume is a collection of really good ghost stories."

MISS MONTRESOR'S NOVEL.

THIRD IMPRESSION NEARLY EXHAUSTED.

The CELESTIAL SURGEON.

By F. F. MONTRESOR, Author of 'Into the Highways and Hedges,' 'At the Cross Roads,' &c.

GUARDIAN.—"In 'The Celestial Surgeon' Miss Montresor is at her best. The character-drawing, as is usual with the writer, is excellent; the characters are all living, human beings, neither too good nor too bad for everyday life."

QUEEN.—"Miss Montresor's admirable perception of the lights and shades in human character has never shown to better advantage than in 'The Celestial Surgeon.'"

London:

EDWARD ARNOLD, 41 and 43, Maddox Street, W.

INTERESTING TOPOGRAPHICAL WORKS.

CHEAP AND REVISED EDITION.

In large 8vo, handsomely bound in cloth and fully illustrated.

SWEET HAMPSTEAD AND ITS ASSOCIATIONS.

By Mrs. CAROLINE WHITE. With numerous Illustrations of Eminent Persons, Historic Houses, and Picturesque Localities.

"Hampstead is extraordinarily rich in literary associations, which Mrs. White chronicles with a charm of style born of true enthusiasm."—Outlook.

CHEAP EDITION.

In demy 8vo, illustrated, cloth gilt, price 5s.

EAST ANGLIA AND THE GREAT CIVIL WAR.

The Rising of Cromwell's Ironsides in the Associated Counties of Cambridge, Huntingdon, Lincoln, Norfolk, Suffolk, Essex, and Hertford. With Appendices and Illustration. By ALFRED KINGSTON, F.R.Hist.S., Author of 'Herefordshire during the Great Civil War.'

"The reader will find abundance of details, collected from many sources, that throw a great deal of light on particular incidents of the time; and he will see that these minor details give the past a colour and liveliness which are not to be met with in some more pretentious histories."—Pall Mall Gazette.

In demy 8vo, handsomely bound in gilt-lettered cloth, and illustrated, price 7s. 6d.

EWENNY PRIORY, MONASTERY, and FORTRESS.

By Col. J. P. TURBERVILL.

"This little book is one of the best examples we have ever seen of antiquarian work."—Guardian.

In small crown 4to, cloth, gilt lettered, profusely illustrated, price 6s. net.

DUNSTABLE:

ITS HISTORY AND SURROUNDINGS.

By WORTHINGTON G. SMITH, F.L.S. F.A.I. F.R.S.A. Ireland, &c.

"Enough is indicated in this pleasant volume to suggest an enjoyable trip to this old world place."—British Architect.

In handsome crown 8vo volumes, issued at short intervals, price 3s. 6d. net.

EARLY LONDON THEATRES (IN THE FIELDS).

By T. FAIRMAN ORDISH, F.S.A. Fully illustrated with old Maps and Sketches.

"A valuable work, capitally done, and makes interesting material for the historian, and our author avails himself of his opportunities with skill and judgment."—Black and White.

In demy 8vo, handsomely bound and illustrated, price 6s. net.

BYGONE LONDON LIFE:

Pictures from a Vanished Past.

By G. L. APPERSON, I.S.O., Author of 'An Idler's Calendar.' With many Illustrations.

"The book is fascinating from the first page to the last. The antiquarian, no less than the general reader, will find it all that he could desire."—Sunday Sun.

In crown 8vo, cloth, illustrated, price 6s.

OLD ENGLISH SOCIAL LIFE AS TOLD BY THE PARISH REGISTER.

By T. F. THISELTON-DYER, M.A.Oxon., Author of 'Church-Lore Gleanings.'

"One of the most fascinating books which has been issued for a long time."—Genealogical Magazine.

ELLIOT STOCK, 62, Paternoster Row, London, E.C.

MESSRS. WM. BLACKWOOD & SONS

6s.

NOW READY.

6s.

THE YELLOW WAR.

By "O,"

Whose pictures of incidents witnessed during the war in the Far East have been appearing in Blackwood's Magazine and attracting wide attention.

"What gives these powerfully presented episodes their peculiar value, is the fact that the narrator has kept the human and personal aspect of the war so steadfastly to the front.....This remarkable book."—World.

"A book to be read, and not merely to taste."—Standard.

SOME NOTABLE NEW BOOKS.

MEMORIES: an Autobiography.

By Miss CONSTANCE C. F. GORDON CUMMING.

With Illustrations by the Author. Demy 8vo, 20s. net.

"The book, with its entertaining mixture of memories and tradition, will please readers of very various taste.....Well illustrated."—Times.

"This is a fine full book of deep present interest."—Standard.

A HISTORY of the INDIAN

MUTINY. By G. W. FORREST, C.I.E.

With Maps, Plans, and Portraits. 2 vols. 38s. net.

"It is not the least of Mr. Forrest's merits that his book has the poetical touches which so splendid a story demands."—Athenæum.

"This history of the Mutiny is the best that has been published."—Daily Chronicle.

"The publishers have produced it in splendid style."—Scotsman.

"A standard work on the subject."

Daily Telegraph.

BRITISH ECONOMICS in 1904.

By W. R. LAWSON. Crown 8vo, 6s. net.

"One of the most thoughtful and original contributions to the study of National Policy that the Fiscal controversy has produced in England."

Daily Mail.

POEMS.

By Alfred Noyes. Small

4to, 7s. 6d. net.

"Here beyond question is the work of a genuine poet."—Daily Chronicle.

SOME SUCCESSFUL NOVELS

The EDGE of CIRCUMSTANCE.

By EDWARD NOBLE. 6s.

"A book of altogether remarkable and outstanding merit.....A piece of literature."

Athenæum.

"Unprecedented and surprisingly fine story."

World.

The FIGHT.

By Sibyl Creed. 6s.

"There is real life in 'The Fight.'.....We see them all, and they are real people."—Times.

SALLY: a Study.

By Hugh Clifford, G.M.G. 6s.

"It may be doubted whether any writer, with the exception of Mr. Conrad, has given us better narrative pictures of the Malay Archipelago than the author of 'Sally.'"—Athenæum.

The COMPANY of DEATH.

By ALBERT LOUIS COTTON. 6s.

"A novel of quite unusual promise."—Spectator.

The TENTH EDITION of JOHN CHILCOTE, M.P., 6s., is now ready.

WILLIAM BLACKWOOD & SONS,
Edinburgh and London.

DUCKWORTH &amp; CO.'S NEW LIST OF ANNOUNCEMENTS.

BOOKS AND THINGS.

A Volume of Essays. By G. S. STREET. Crown 8vo, 6s.

"Of all light essayists there are few more consistently engaging. Mr. Street never writes a foolish thing—seldom, indeed, anything that is not remarkably clever."—Daily Chronicle.

THE PURPLE LAND.

By W. H. HUDSON, Author of 'Green Mansions.' Crown 8vo, 6s.

[Second impression now ready.

"This enchanting romance. Extraordinary charm. A more romantic recital of adventure it would be difficult to imagine.

"Has no competitors and need fear no rivals."—Spectator.

PROGRESS. PROGRESS.

By R. B. CUNNINGHAME GRAHAM. Crown 8vo, 6s.

"In 'Progress' he is himself from beginning to end.....He is an artist. ....The book cannot fail to absorb..... There is that which not only arrests, but imprisons the imagination."—Daily Chronicle.

THE CHILD.

By KARIN MICHAELIS. A Psychological Study of the Child Mind. Translated from the Swedish by JOHN NEILSON LAUVERIK. Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d.

THE GREY BRETHREN.

By MICHAEL FAIRLESS, Author of 'The Roadmender.' Uniform with 'The Roadmender.' Cloth, 2s. 6d. net; leather, 3s. 6d. net.

GOSSIP. GOSSIP. GOSSIP.

By BENJAMIN SWIFT, Author of 'In Piccadilly.' Crown 8vo, 6s.

THE VICISSITUDES OF EVANGELINE.

By ELINOR GLYN, Author of 'The Visits of Elizabeth,' and 'The Reflections of Ambrosine.' 6s. [Ready Thursday, March 2.

THE HOUSE OF BARNKIRK.

By AMY McLAREN, Author of 'From a Davos Balcony.' Crown 8vo, 6s. [In the press.

THE DISCIPLE'S WIFE.

By VINCENT BROWN, Author of 'A Magdalen's Husband.' Crown 8vo, 6s. [In the press.

REVOLUTIONARY TYPES.

By I. A. TAYLOR. With an Introduction by R. B. CUNNINGHAME GRAHAM. Demy 8vo, 7s. 6d. net.

"Miss Taylor has made living, breathing figures of all the dead she has touched, and in a manner enthusiastic yet grave has reminded us that in all lives of hope and endeavour there is a triumph more profound than can be measured by success."—Outlook.

REAL STORIES OF RUSSIAN LIFE.

TWENTY-SIX MEN AND A GIRL.

By MAXIM GORKY. With Portrait. Paper, 1s. 6d. net; cloth, 2s. 6d. net.

"Brings us face to face with bare human nature."—Pilot.

IDEALS AND REALITIES IN RUSSIAN LITERATURE.

By PRINCE KROPOTKIN. With Portrait. Demy 8vo, 7s. 6d. net. [In preparation.

POEMS BY T. STURGE MOORE.—Crown 8vo, 1s. net each.

PAN'S PROPHECY.

The ROUT of the AMAZONS.

The CENTAUR'S BOOTY.

The GAZELLES, and other Poems.

TO LEDA, and other Odes.

THESEUS, MEDEA, and Lyrics.

A BOOK OF THE SEASON. FULL OF GOOD STORIES.

THE REMINISCENCES OF AN IRISH LAND AGENT.

Being those of SAMUEL H. HUSSEY. Compiled by HOME GORDON. Royal 8vo, with 2 Photogravure Portraits, 12s. 6d. net.

"A more vivacious, candid, or indiscreet recital we have seldom encountered. A human document, a storehouse of anecdote and of shrewd obiter dicta. Very entertaining book."—Spectator.

A LIFE OF WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE.

By Dr. W. J. ROLFE. Demy 8vo, 8 Illustrations, 10s. 6d. net.

ALBERT DÜRER.

By T. STURGE MOORE, Author of 'The Centaur's Booty,' &c. With four Copperplates and 50 Half-tone Engravings. Pott 4to, 7s. 6d. net.

VERROCCHIO.

By MAUD CRUTTWELL. 48 Illustrations. Pott 4to, 7s. 6d. net.

MEDIÆVAL ART, A.D. 312-1350.

By W. R. LETHABY. With 60 Plates and many Original Drawings by the Author. Post 8vo, 8s. 6d. net.

ITALIAN MEDALS.

By C. VON FABRICZY. Translated by Mrs. GUSTAVUS W. HAMILTON. With Notes by G. F. HILL, of the British Museum. Small 4to, 42 Plates, 10s. 6d. net.

Ask your Bookseller to show you all the Volumes issued in DUCKWORTH'S POPULAR LIBRARY OF ART.
Cloth, 2s. net; leather 2s. 6d. net.

REMBRANDT.

MILLET.

DURER.

GAINSBOROUGH.

ROSSETTI.

FRED WALKER.

WATTS.

BOTTICELLI.

LEONARDO.

FRENCH IMPRESSIONISTS.

AUGUSTE RODIN.

By CAMILLE MAUCLAIR, Author of 'The Great French Painters,' 'French Impressionists,' With 40 Illustrations. Photogravure Frontispiece. Crown 4to, 10s. 6d. net. [Ready on Thursday.

METAPSYCHICAL PHENOMENA.

By Dr. JOSEPH MAXWELL. Translated by Mrs. FINCH. With Prefaces by Sir OLIVER LODGE and Prof. CH. RICHET. Large crown 8vo, 10s. net. [In the press.

This book is probably the most important contribution of recent years in the way of a scientific and methodical examination of the phenomena variously known as "spiritistic," "occult," or, to use the term now suggested by Mr. Richet, "metapsychical."

CRITICAL ESSAYS AND FRAGMENTS.

By the late S. ARTHUR STRONG. With Memoir by LORD BALCARRES. Royal 8vo, with 22 Illustrations, 16s. net. [In the press.

GIOTTO.

By BASIL DE SELINCOURT. 45 Illustrations. Pott 4to, 7s. 6d. net. [In the press.

PISANELLO.

By G. F. HILL. 50 Illustrations. Pott 4to, 7s. 6d. net. [In the press.

VELAZQUEZ.

By AUGUSTE BRÉAL, Author of 'Rembrandt.' With 45 Illustrations. Cloth, 2s. net; leather, 2s. 6d. net. (In the "Popular Library of Art.") [Immediately.

MACMILLAN & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

NEW VOLUME OF ESSAYS

BY SIR ARCHIBALD GEIKIE

LANDSCAPE IN HISTORY, And other Essays.

By Sir ARCHIBALD GEIKIE, D.C.L. F.R.S. 8vo, 8s. 6d. net.

THE MYTHS OF PLATO.

Translated, with Introductory and other Observations, by J. A. STEWART, M.A., Student and Tutor of Christ Church and White's Professor of Moral Philosophy in the University of Oxford. 8vo, 14s. net. [Classical Library.]

SHAKESPEAREAN TRAGEDY.

Lectures on 'Hamlet,' 'Othello,' 'King Lear,' and 'Macbeth.' By Prof. A. C. BRADLEY, LL.D. Litt.D. 8vo, 10s. net.

TIMES.—"The book is a great achievement. Nothing has been written for many years that has done so much as these lectures will do to advance the understanding and appreciation of the great things in Shakespeare's greatest plays.....One may well doubt whether in the whole field of English literary criticism anything has been written in the last twenty years more luminous, more masterly, more penetrating to the very centre of its subject."

ENGLISH MEN OF LETTERS.—New Series.

Crown 8vo, gilt tops, flat backs, 2s. net each.

THOMAS MOORE.

By STEPHEN GWYNN.

TIMES.—"An admirable book.....Mr. Gwynn has surely said the last word about this warm-hearted, volatile personage, whose tact and taste in writing verse were for so long mistaken for passion."

SYDNEY SMITH.

By GEORGE W. E. RUSSELL.

ACADEMY.—"Mr. George Russell's biography is adequate and sympathetic. He has selected his material with discretion, and has let Sydney Smith tell his own story as far as possible.....The book is a coherent, intelligible account of a great man."

MACMILLAN'S NEW NOVELS.

Crown 8vo, gilt tops, 6s. each.

GERTRUDE ATHERTON.

THE BELL IN THE FOG,
And other Stories.

ALFRED TRESIDDER SHEPPARD.

THE RED CRAVAT.

OWEN JOHNSON.

NICOLE; or, in the Name of Liberty.

A BOOK OF WIT AND HUMOUR.

THE WORKS OF

ARTHUR CLEMENT HILTON

(Of Marlborough and Cambridge). Author of 'The Light Green.' With 2 Illustrations, together with HIS LIFE AND LETTERS, by Sir ROBERT EDGCUMBE. Fcap. 8vo, 5s. net; vellum, gilt top, 12s. 6d. net.

DAILY CHRONICLE.—"The champagne of parody..... A born humourist."

PALL MALL GAZETTE.—"Wit on the wings of metre. Highly remarkable. Sir Robert Edgcumbe's memoir is a model of affectionate and tributary sympathy. There are parodies brilliant enough to persuade one almost that the same hand wrote the parent and the parasite. There are things in this delightful little book that will live among the best examples of English wit."

ATHENÆUM.—"This record of a bright, short life was well worth making, and Sir Robert Edgcumbe has told us with modesty and grace just what we wanted to know. A parodist, classic at his best, and long since promoted to that rank by the dignity of frequent misquotation."

SPECTATOR.—"We have always had a special affection for the irresistible audacity of 'The May Exam.'.....We have nothing but congratulations to offer Sir Robert Edgcumbe on his pious act of homage to the memory of his friend and contemporary A. C. Hilton. To a collection of Hilton's Cambridge brilliant jeux d'esprit he has added a number of other pieces."

SPEAKER.—"Will be welcome."SCOTSMAN.—"Sunny collection."

MACMILLAN &amp; CO., LIMITED, London.

MR. PERCEVAL LANDON'S GREAT WORK ON TIBET.

In 2 vols. royal 8vo, with over 250 beautiful Illustrations and 7 Maps, price 2l. 2s. net.

LHASA.

An Account of the Country and People of Central Tibet, and of the Progress of the Mission sent there by the English Government in the Year 1903-4.

Written, with the help of all the principal persons of the Mission,

By PERCEVAL LANDON,
Special Correspondent of the Times.

With an Introduction by

Col. Sir FRANCIS YOUNGHUSBAND,
K.C.I.E.

An Illustrated Prospectus sent free on application.

EXTRACTS FROM SOME REVIEWS.

"It is unlikely that English readers will be offered a more sumptuous, elaborate, or more picturesque account than has been written by Mr. Landon. As he explains in his acknowledgment of the help which has been so generously given to him by the chief actors in the Tibetan Expedition, his object is to make 'Lhasa' a book of Tibetan reference, and for the present it will certainly hold the field"—Times.

"Mr. Perceval Landon is to be highly congratulated on a brilliant achievement. Presented with an unique opportunity, he has risen to it, and produced, perhaps, the best book ever written about Tibet and its capital. He has seen with the eye of an artist, and described with the pen of a poet, the last home of romance in the world, the last mystery that had hitherto been preserved inviolate from the eyes of strangers."—Daily Chronicle.

"The climax of the narrative of course is the approach to Lhasa, and Mr. Landon does not miss his opportunity. In a few pages, now eloquent, now rhetorical, he describes his first sight of the city, which so few strangers had ever beheld, and which for centuries remained a place of dreams. Of the illustrations it is impossible to speak too highly, and we know not where the art of photography has been carried to a loftier pitch of excellence."—Daily Mail.

"Of the several writers who have given us their impressions of Col. Younghusband's expedition, Mr. Perceval Landon, whose account is now issued, has best succeeded in forcing the reader to share the glories of the Tibetan Wonderland."—Standard.

"The feeling of romance is so pervading that one feels as if being carried away in a dream-journey. But the narrative is true and exact in all its details, for Mr. Landon combines the almost contradictory qualities of scientific accuracy, intense picturesqueness, and the artist's love of colour."—Morning Post.

"This book is likely to rank as a standard work on the sacred city of Buddhism, and a special word of praise must be devoted to the magnificent series of photographs, many of them reproduced in photogravure."—Daily Telegraph.

"The book is a monument of the excellence of the method of modern literary production. The illustrations raise immediately before the mind of the reader the whole panorama of these remote and secret lands."—Daily News.

"Mr. Perceval Landon has written an admirable account of the Tibet mission, and pictured it with the most beautiful of photographic illustrations. No more interesting book of travel has been published for a decade."—Daily Express.

"Mr. Landon's book is not only worthy of its noble subject, but deserves to rank among the best tales of travel in a language rich in such literature. We are tempted to call it a traveller's classic."

St. James's Gazette.

"In no book or journal yet before the public is there to be found an account so striking, so picturesque, so vivid, of the Tibetan capital, country, and people, as will delight and astonish the readers of this latest work on a subject of wonderful variety and charm."—Globe.

London: HURST & BLACKETT, LIMITED,
182, High Holborn, W.C.

J. M. DENT & CO.'S LIST.

MEDIÆVAL TOWNS.

VENICE.† VENICE.†

[New Vol. ready.]

By THOMAS OKEY.

Illustrated by NELLY ERICHSEN.

Write for Prospectus of Series.

ASSISI.* BRUGES.† CAIRO.† CHARTRES.† CONSTANTINOPLE.* FERRARA.† FLORENCE.† LONDON.† MOSCOW.* NUREMBERG.* PERUGIA.* PRAGUE.* ROME.† ROUEN.† SEVILLE.† SIENA.† TOLEDO.* VERONA.†

Pocketable, * cloth, 3s. 6d. net; roan, 4s. 6d. net.

† Cloth, 4s. 6d. net; roan, 5s. 6d. net.

THE TEMPLE AUTOBIOGRAPHIES. New Volume.

THE AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF BENJAMIN FRANKLIN.

Edited, with a Sketch of his Later Life,
By W. MACDONALD.

Illustrated. Long fcap. 8vo, 3s. 6d. net.

Previous Volumes.

BENVENUTO CELLINI. HECTOR BERLIOZ. Translated by Anne Macdonald. Edited by Katharine Boulton.

THE TEMPLE BIOGRAPHIES.

New Volume.

Major-General HARRISON.

By the Rev. C. H. SIMPKINSON.

Illustrated. Crown 8vo, 4s. 6d. net.

PREVIOUS VOLUMES.

G. F. WATTS.

MAZZINI.

By Hugh Macmillan.

By Bolton King.

ROBERT BROWNING. By Edward Dowden.

NEW VOLUME OF THE ### TEMPLE CLASSICS.

With Photogravure Frontispiece, bound in blue cloth, 1s. 6d. net; in green lambskin, 2s. net.

The ATHENÆUM says:—"This wonderful series of little books is now extending to the byways of literature and the paths of the scholar, having long since given us the standard volumes which interest the ordinary reader."

THE GULS HORNBOOKE. By THOMAS DEKKER. Including also 'The BELMAN of LONDON' and 'LANTHORN and CANDLELIGHT.' Edited, with Notes and Marginalia, by OLIPHANT SMEDLEY.

NEW VOLUME OF THE ### TEMPLE PRIMERS.

THE ### ENGLISH PATENT SYSTEM.

By WILLIAM MARTIN, M.A. LL.D.

Pott 8vo cloth, 1s. net.

NEW NOVELS NOW READY.

BY THE AUTHOR OF

'CORNET STRONG OF IRETON'S HORSE.' YESTERDAY'S TO-MORROW.

By DORA GREENWELL McCHESNEY.

The PALL MALL GAZETTE says:—"A delightful story, with a heroine, Mistress Hilary Compton, such as the author of 'Remond' would have bowed low before."

THE ORIFLAMME IN EGYPT.

A Tale of the Twelfth-Century Crusades.

By DEAN BUTCHER of Cairo.

THE TORCHBEARERS.

By MARY BRADFORD WHITING.

The PALL MALL GAZETTE says:—"It is a very charming story.....The book should enjoy a great success."

Crown 8vo, 4s. 6d. net each.

London:

J. M. DENT &amp; CO. 29 and 30, Bedford Street, W.C.

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 18, 1905.

CONTENTS.

|  | PAGE    |
|--|---------|
| OXFORD AND ITS STORY ... ..  | 199     |
| THE NEW ENGLISH DICTIONARY ... ..  | 200     |
| THE LIFE OF LORD DUFFERIN ... ..   | 201     |
| A DICTIONARY OF SLANG ... ..   | 201     |
| A NEW BOOK BY ANATOLE FRANCE ... ..  | 202     |
| NEW NOVELS (An Act in a Backwater; The System; Yesterday's To-morrow; The Virgin and the Scales; The Torch-Bearers; The Marathon Mystery; The Weans at Rowallan) ... ..  | 203-204 |
| ORIENTAL LITERATURE ... ..   | 204     |
| FOLK-LORE] ... ..  | 205     |
| OUR LIBRARY TABLE (A Modern Campaign; The Yellow War; Dod; The Enchanted Woods and other Essays; Old Gorgon Graham; A Geometrical Political Economy; Imperial Vienna; The Burden of Armaments; Two Book Catalogues) ... .. | 206-208 |
| LIST OF NEW BOOKS ... ..   | 208     |
| THE ADVANCED HISTORICAL TEACHING FUND; DRUMMOND AT ST. GERMAINS; CROMWELL ON SIR JOHN PALGRAVE; CHAUCER AND BOCCACCIO; THE SPRING PUBLISHING SEASON; SALE ... ..   | 209-210 |
| LITERARY GOSSIP ... ..   | 210     |
| SCIENCE—VICTORIA HISTORY OF WARWICKSHIRE; SOCIETIES; MEETINGS NEXT WEEK; GOSSIP ... ..   | 211-213 |
| FINE ARTS—CELTIC AND SCANDINAVIAN ANTIQUITIES OF SHETLAND; THE NATIONAL GALLERY; WATER-COLOURS AT PATERSON'S GALLERY; ADOLPH MENZEL; ARCHÆOLOGICAL NOTES; NOTES FROM ROME; SALES; GOSSIP ... ..                            | 214-217 |
| MUSIC—MASSNET'S LE JONGLEUR DE NOTRE-DAME; GOSSIP; PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK ... ..   | 218-219 |
| DRAMA—THE LADY OF LEEDS; MOLLENTRAVE ON WOMEN; THE DIPLOMATISTS; A CASE OF ARSON; GOSSIP ... ..  | 219-220 |
| MISCELLANEA—COLERIDGE'S POEMS ... ..   | 220     |

LITERATURE

Oxford and its Story. By Cecil Headlam. With Illustrations by Herbert Railton. (Dent & Co.)

It was time that the history of Oxford should be written scientifically. In most extant Oxoniana the wood is lost in the trees, the University hidden by the colleges. Mr. Headlam sets himself to extricate it, and, with certain limitations, has succeeded, for he treats the colleges as incidents in University development, and the buildings generally not as sporadic outgrowths of beneficiary whim, but as illustrating progressive University history.

When the eighth century opened Oxford was a bank of gravel, uninhabited, fringed by dense forests, sloping northward from a swampy network of streams. To this solitude about the year 727 came Frideswide, daughter of a Mercian prince. She built a little church, founded a nunnery, lived and died amongst her sisters. In the Christchurch Lady Chapel to-day is a brass which marks her probable tomb. Burnt to the ground in 1002, her church was rebuilt by Ethelred, whose work remains in the massive arches of the present cathedral. Round this nucleus grew the town of Oxnaforda; whether Oxen-ford or Ousen(river)-ford no one can be certain. The question was debated through vols. iii., iv., v., and vi. of the Ninth Series of Notes and Queries. Humble wooden houses grouped themselves on the rising ground, extending northward to what was afterwards the Bocardo Gate. Their city church, St. Martin's, whose tower still dominates the upper High Street, was built in 1034 by the monks of Abingdon Abbey.

But a central church was not enough. In times when Danes were swarming through the land, a town that desired to preserve existence must be fortified. On three sides Oxford was protected by the Isis and Cherwell and their many streams, now mostly built over or drained away; on the north side it was open. In the high artificial pile known as the Castle Mound, Mr. Headlam sees the starting-point of an earthen wall or vallum, which before long enclosed a town of about a thousand souls, and was in 1071 strengthened by Robert D'Oigly's Castle, the massive keep of which still frowns on visitors entering Oxford from the railway station. A strong high wall with towers and bastions was erected on the site of this older vallum in the time of Henry III.; its circuit is still clearly traceable in High Street, Merton, New Inn Hall Lane, Broad Street; and is preserved absolutely intact in the picturesque boundary of New College Garden. The town was further protected, after the Norman fashion, by strongly built churches at convenient spots, with towers which still, in some instances, retain a military character. Such were St. Michael's adjoining the North Gate, and St. Peter's at the East Gate; while to these, for purely religious purposes, were added St. Mary the Virgin, St. Mary Magdalen, St. Ebbe's, and St. Cross in Holywell. By the wife of Robert D'Oigly's nephew, in 1129, was reared the Abbey of Osney (Ousen-ey), whose "merry" bells still hang in the Christchurch towers, while the royal palace of Beaumont rose about the same time just outside the Bocardo Gate. By the end of the twelfth century Oxford had become a stately town of stone houses, and boasted sixteen churches. The Jews, encouraged by the early Plantagenet kings, brought wealth to her mercantile community; charters granted by the same sovereigns confirmed the liberties of her citizens; their merchant guilds and craft guilds became highly organized; their self-government by bailiffs and aldermen was complete; and the town stood in the first rank of English municipalities. But meanwhile there was springing up within her bosom a rival power, destined to restrict her freedom and to eclipse her fame, for during the last years of the twelfth century we trace the genesis of the University.

A university, says Mr. Headlam, was a "guild of study." Just as apprenticeship necessarily preceded admission to the privileges of a craft, so, in an age of new-born eagerness to learn, no one could be qualified to instruct without licence from a teaching community, whose credentials came to be known as academical degrees. The first great teaching school of Western Europe was in Paris, where John of Salisbury lectured and Thomas à Becket learned, whither flocked for instruction the "four nations" of France, Picardy, Normandy, England. Suddenly there appears at Oxford a similar Studium Generale, well organized with masters, students, faculties, due, as has been conjectured, to an expulsion from Paris of foreign students by the French king. What guided the emigrants to Oxford we cannot tell, but there, in the year 1185, Giraldus Cambrensis found them planted, with an academic population of some 3,000 souls. Of the cuckoo's egg thus dropped into its nest the city was less tolerant than the hedge-sparrow. In 1209 a furious quarrel broke out between town and gown; King John, interdicted by the Pope and hating everything ecclesiastical, supported the town, and the angry scholars removed themselves to Cambridge, returning home triumphant, after John's surrender, with legatine authority over the town, which has substantially continued ever since.

To Oxford, as to England generally, the advent of the friars brought increase of energy, intellectual and spiritual. In 1224 arrived the earliest Franciscans, barefoot, ragged, mendicant, uncouth, and settled in the unwholesome marshy suburb round St. Ebbe's, to preach in word and deed with passionate abandonment the gospel of self-sacrifice, which in the Carceri of Assisi their great founder had exemplified and taught. From his rule of poverty, his disdain of worldly goods and human learning, they soon fell away—accepted gifts, acquired property, accumulated wealth and learning; their convent, second only to St. Frideswide's and Osney, rose upon the site now known as Paradise Square. Duns Scotus and William of Ockham were amongst their distinguished pupils; and Roger Bacon was a brother of their Order. Stimulating mental activity, they directed it not to philosophical and humanistic studies, but towards the "nothing but theology" of which Bacon sadly speaks, and which soon degenerated into barren scholasticism. Grasping and ambitious, they provoked the jealousy of the Oxford rulers, and the ill-will of the whole secular clergy, in whose defence a step was taken presently, destined to change the whole constitution of the University; for it issued in the foundation of colleges.

So early as 1229 money had been given to the University by William, Archdeacon of Durham, for the maintenance of certain masters, chaplains, and students, and had been invested in land and tenements, which came to be called the University Hall. This was afterwards enlarged, and formally equipped with statutes; and grew later still into what is now known as University College. But in 1280, before the incorporation of this Hall, the first "college," as we now use the term, had been founded by Walter de Merton, a seminary exclusively for the training of secular as distinguished from regular clergy; and this new concept of "academical education under collegiate discipline, but secular guidance," was followed by every subsequent benefactor at either university, and revolutionized, for good or evil, university life in England. From this time the establishment of successive colleges marks and accompanies a regular development in university, nay in English history. Stapeldon Hall, afterwards Exeter College, and King's Hall, now Oriel College, were both daughters of Merton, founded, like their parent, as bulwarks against the friars. On the other hand, the College of Lady Devorguilla Balliol owed its creation to the influence of a Franciscan friar; St. Bernard's, now St. John's, was a convent of Cistercian monks; and Gloucester Hall, which in the eighteenth century became Worcester College, was founded as a Benedictine abbey. Lincoln arose as a stronghold of orthodoxy against the Lollards. Queen's was eleemosynary and local: its scholars were to be "poor boys," its fellowships restricted to North-countrymen. High above any of its forerunners in architectural grandeur and elaborate legislation was the "New" College of St. Mary Winton apud Oxon, followed before long by Magdalen, matre pulchra pulchrior, and by All Souls', both due to Fellows of Wykeham's College. Brasenose was founded in order to combat the new learning, which already flourished at Corpus under Bishop Foxe's auspices, and was to receive yet more vigorous extension in the rising Cardinal College. Jesus, the first Protestant College, dates from 1571; the Anglican framework of Wadham showed the disgust of its Papist founders at the iniquity of the Gunpowder Plot. After a long interval the Newmanism was commemorated by Keble College; while Somerville, Lady Margaret, Mansfield, attest revolutionary expansiveness in the closing nineteenth century.

We have followed out, as Mr. Headlam has failed to follow, this sequent significance of collegiate development. Starting with a clear conception of its birth, he scatters hither and thither amongst other matters, loose beads without a thread, the details of its adolescence and maturity. Apart from this he has done well: the progress of the University is fully traced; the rise and extension of the smaller halls, the growth of the Chancellor's autocracy, the Scotist and Thomist controversies, the suppression of Wycliffe and the Oxford Lollards, with the avenging revolt of the new learning against the Schoolmen, are orderly unfolded; and a spirited passage parenthetically depicts the population, manners, costumes, of mediæval academic Oxford. The sixteenth and seventeenth century chronicles, of reformers and martyrs, of Elizabeth's visits, Charles's Court, James's tyranny, though often told before, contain valuable matter interspersed. Perhaps the concluding chapter, cut down apparently through lack of space, might better have been omitted.

Mr. Headlam is fond of indulging himself in authoritative dicta, such as are apt to irritate some readers without enlivening the narrative, unless tempered by the saving grace of humour. That modern cosmopolitans are "in theory free-traders and in practice thieves"; that the final cause of professorial manifestoes is "to warn practical men to vote the other way"; that the educational danger of to-day is "to speculate in science without any proper previous training in the humanities"; that Mr. Butterfield "ruined Merton and perpetrated Keble"—are points arguable at the least, not to be settled by the αὐτὸς ἐφη of an annalist. Sumere superbiam, Horace warns us, is the prerogative of a muse, not of a mere mortal chronicler.

There are sixty illustrations, in tinted lithograph or in black and white. They are no doubt recently executed; but they recall the rather "fluffy" workmanship of early Victorian ladies, and the shaded pencil drawing taught in schools of art about 1856-60. The tinting, effective probably in the original drawings, becomes often blotched in the reproduction. Most satisfying to an Oxford eye are the Christchurch interior, and the fine St. Mary's barley-sugar-columned Gate. The High Street also comes out well; as do Wadham, the Radcliffe dome, Magdalen from the bridge, and the view from the top of the Sheldonian. We note a typographical slip on p. 186, and several errors in the index, occurring under Jesus, Brasenose knocker,

"De hæritico comburendo." "Joe" Pullen should be spelt without an e, the good Principal having been christened not Joseph but Josiah. There are two mistakes in the boar's head stanza—trust one who has more than once heard it at the Queen's Christmas dinner. "Lincoln Spire" is a feature novel to Oxonian memories; and the view of Magdalen Tower on p. 230 is not from Addison's Walk, which runs from opposite the Mill to the height terminating the vista. The Proctor's "pen-wiper" was probably no purse, but the survival of a tippet, and is attached to noblemen's gowns as well. Servitors remained at Christchurch far into the nineteenth century, carrying up dishes, it was said, to the high table once a year, in reminder of their menial origin. We remember a recent bishop when an undergraduate wearing their untasseled cap and unpleated streamers to the Commoner's gown, and obtaining a double first in spite of the poverty which excluded him from private tuition. And can it be that the highwayman Claude Duval is written down in text and index under the illustrious name "Dumas"?

A New English Dictionary on Historical Principles.—M—Mandragon. (Vol. VI.) Edited by H. Bradley. (Oxford, Clarendon Press.)

THE Dominie would indeed have emitted a full-breathed "Prodigious!" had he lived to peruse the article on 'Make' (vb.) and its combinations which forms the pièce de résistance of this double section, the only word as yet treated which rivals it in bulk being 'Go.' The columns occupied by 'Make,' and such of its cognates and derivatives as are ranged with it in lexicographical order, would, if printed in moderately comfortable type and bound as an octavo volume, amount to about 150 pages. The ninety-sixth section, on "make up," has sub-sections numbered from "a" to "n," and two of these have sub-sub-sections numbered from (a) to (h) and (a) to (j) respectively. It is noteworthy that the archaic idiom quoted from the 'Ingoldsby Legends,' "I saw a little vulgar boy—I said, 'What make you here?'" is only used in questions introduced by "what." Though we can "make a voyage, a tour, &c.," we are told, "the English idiom is apparently capricious in excluding many locutions which would seem to be parallel with these; we cannot, e.g., use make with obj. a ride, a walk (cf. German einen Spaziergang machen). The "ragging" term "to make hay" in a man's rooms—i.e., to upset his furniture and effects—is duly noticed, by the insertion of a reference to "hay." We find the proverb "Many a little makes a mickle," which will doubtless be illustrated under 'Mickle' or 'Muckle,' in the Chaucerian form "Manye smale maken a greet." Pope's "Worth makes the man, and want of it the fellow," is quoted to illustrate the senses, "To be sufficient to constitute; to be the essential criterion of."

Under 'Make'=fellow, equal, "mate" is not mentioned, so we conclude that it will not be regarded as a corruption of "make," as has been stated elsewhere erroneously; but we might have had explicit information on the point. The usual educated pronunciation, save before the Queen, of "Ma'am," namely, "Mæm," is ignored, though it is clearly to be inferred from the quotation, dated about 1850—"Well, Marm,"—Mr. Cotton preserved that broad pronunciation of the ellipsis Ma'am from Madame, which was formerly considered high bred, and is still the Court mode" (Lytton). "Madam" is pronounced "Mædm," and by ellipsis "Mæ'm," spelt "Mam" in the quotation from Dryden, "Madam me no Madam, but learn to retrench your words; and say Mam;..... as other Ladies Women do."

Compounds with "mal-" seem to be getting fashionable. Out of about fifteen of these which have not been noticed in other dictionaries—not including obsolete words—"maladaptation," "maladminister," "malappropriation," "maleducation," "malgovernment," "malgrace," "malobservation," "malorganization," and "malpraxis" are in recent use, as is "malcreant," a faulty substitute for "miscreant," which a weekly journal introduced lately. Other modern revivals or borrowings are "maladive," Ital. "Malebolge," "malaxate," "malaxation" (=kneading), "malefaction," "maliferous," and "malism" (the positive degree of "pessimism"). The craving for novel modes of expression is no doubt natural, and in conversation its indulgence may be inevitable, but it might be controlled in formal compositions, in deference to the sound principle of parsimony.

The last page contains two perversions, due to "popular etymology" of "mandragora," namely, Caxton's "mandglorye" (from French "main de gloire"—Mr. Bradley refers to "Hand of glory") and "mandragon" (=mandrake). Ben Jonson, in 'Cynthia's Revels,' made one of the characters call an indifferent critic "a mere 'mammothrept' in judgment," whereupon Braithwait, by an amusing misunderstanding, took the pompous novelty to mean "critic," instead of "nursling," and wrote "strict mammothrept," "severe mammothrept." A more universal error made the English interpret the Old French "malapert" (for "mal appert" =inexpert) as "mal apert" (=improperly bold). By a similar misconception, the "magnanimus" man became "great in courage," or "superior to petty annoyances," instead of "high-souled," even in the Latin of the Schoolmen.

The fabulous birds of which Sylvester, translating Du Bartas, says, "Those passing strange and wondrous Mamuques..... Foodless they live; for th' Aire alonely feeds them: Wingless they fly," got their name, Spanish Mamuco, from "Mamuco Diata," a misprint for Manuccodiata, the Latinized Malay name for bird of paradise.

The vile uses to which the short forms of Mabel, Margaret, and Maud are put are enough to make these forenames unfashionable: "Mab"=slattern, mop; "Madge"=barn-owl, magpie, a heavy hammer used in soldering; "Mag"=chatterbox, magpie; "Malkin"=mop, scarecrow.

In the figurative section of 'Mameluke,' Hudibras, Samuel Butler's Puritan knight, should appear as a foil to the fighting slaves of the Roman See. It would be interesting to know why "Maintenon cutlets" have been taken, but "maitre d'hôtel" butter and sauce left. Perhaps the latter attributive has been found in cookery-books only.

This instalment contains a number of terms of natural science and law and "a hitherto unexampled profusion of words from Oriental, African, and South American languages," but still offers plenty of instruction and entertainment to the general reader.

Dr. Murray has brought the letter P down to "pennached"; and a portion of R, edited by Mr. Craigie, from "Ree" onward, is announced for April 1st.

The Life of the Marquis of Dufferin and Ava.

By Sir Alfred Lyall. 2 vols. (Murray.)

THE finest parts of Lord Dufferin's interesting career were his commissionership in Syria in connexion with the Anglo-French intervention, now forgotten, and his governorship of Canada. His viceroyalty of India was far less important, and, in spite of the conquest of Burma, he was not conspicuous among the great men who have held that office. His two final embassies constituted dignified retirement, and when he held them his loss of hearing had made him prematurely old. As a Governor-General of Canada Lord Dufferin was distinguished, perhaps, above all others, and he never showed his wisdom more conspicuously than when he argued with Queen Victoria to be allowed to take the title of "Quebec" instead of that of "Ava."

By far the best thing in the volumes before us is a conversation with Bismarck, which is one of many to be found in various memoirs, but which is new and different, and exceedingly well reported. It would be idle to attempt to give its principal points or to quote it. We confine ourselves to a sentence at the end, in which Lord Dufferin describes Bismarck as thinking that the best guarantee to Germany against a warlike policy on the part of France is Anglo-French friendship:—

"As long as we are friends.....France is unlikely to fall into the hands of Russia; but if we shake her off, like a woman of doubtful virtue, into the arms of Russia she will go."

The story of Lord Dufferin's commissionership in Syria is out of date; that of his viceroyalty of Canada has often been told. When he was sent to St. Petersburg as ambassador he had a chance to distinguish himself again as greatly as he had in Syria and in Canada; but for some reason not yet explained—possibly the reason which he gave—he insisted on being sent from St. Petersburg to Constantinople. It was observed at the time by Lord Granville to their common friends that "Dufferin has been living among people who all want to go to Constantinople, and he has caught it." Lord Dufferin himself put his desire for the change entirely upon health—upon the effect produced on him, and perhaps on those about him who were dear to him, by the depressing climate of St. Petersburg. It is not the case that there existed a desire for his "transfer to the Embassy at Constantinople." There is an appendix by Mr. Kennedy upon the St. Petersburg Embassy, in which it is suggested that it was a success, though he adds, "It would be idle to pretend that he regretted exchanging the banks of the Neva for the shores of the Bosphorus." The fact was that, if health would have allowed, Lord Dufferin ought, for his own sake and for that of his country, to have stayed at St. Petersburg. It is a curious fact that Sir R. Morier, who was not considered a tactful ambassador, and who was expected to be a failure at St. Petersburg, made there the one undisputed success of his career. Lord Dufferin ought to have done even better in the same place.

When he was moved to Constantinople he had an ungrateful task, which he performed with skill, but the performance of which was not important. As Mr. Goschen had previously found during his special embassy, upon which the embassy of Lord Dufferin followed, nothing at Constantinople really matters. In Egypt Lord Dufferin also did extremely well, but he was engaged in constructing a house of cards. Although a graceful Irishman, not always serious, on this particular occasion Lord Dufferin did for a time take seriously his Egyptian Parliament; but he forgot it in the course of a successful, though not extraordinary, administration of Indian affairs.

A matter which is alluded to in the second volume before us in stronger terms than are habitual with Sir Alfred Lyall is one of interest in connexion with Lord Dufferin's Egyptian experience; but it is not made plain. The disaster to the Hicks expedition was really a far more serious matter in itself than the fall of Khartoum, which was infinitely more showy. The question whether Gordon was "abandoned" has been discussed ad nauseam in connexion with Mr. Morley's 'Life of Gladstone,' but the Hicks disaster led directly to the loss of the Soudan. It was the main incident, and the death of Gordon was subsidiary. The question of responsibility and of abandonment was historically more important in the Hicks case than it was in that of Gordon. Sir Alfred Lyall quotes some interesting documents upon the subject, but he does not clear up the question of responsibility. The words "deserted by the Government under which he was serving" appear to refer not to the home Government, as some might think, but to the Government of the Khedive. The Egyptian Government was under the control of the British representatives at Cairo, and they were under the control of the home administration. On the other hand, it is obvious from letters quoted by Sir Alfred Lyall that the Government at home was opposed to the Hicks expedition, but refused to interfere by an absolute veto. How far, it may be asked, did Lord Dufferin or did Sir E. Malet support the Hicks expedition? We are told in the present book that there is a letter from Major Hicks to Lord Dufferin in which he says that his "support has gone with Lord Dufferin." There is a quotation from the 'Life of Mr. Childers' in which he states that he was "alarmed to find.....Dufferin corresponding with Hicks." These passages suggest that Lord Dufferin, with or without instructions, did give some countenance to the expedition; but we repeat that it is a curious fact, after the charges which have been made about the abandonment of Gordon, that the responsibility for the original disaster which caused the abandonment of the Soudan has not been settled.

The choice of matter for the book is probably the best that could have been made, as Sir Alfred Lyall's judgment may be trusted. He no doubt had great difficulty to contend with, in the fact that so long and varied a career had produced an enormous amount of correspondence, all of about the same character and merit, among which it was difficult to choose. A passage from Lord Dufferin's letters which describes a Mohammedan procession, such as may be seen once a year in almost any Mohammedan country, does not strike us as being sufficiently important for insertion. But we may be wrong, and we fully admit that many of the descriptive passages which have been picked out are excellent. There is an odd slip on the next page in Lord Dufferin's own account of the manner in which the First Chamberlain at Constantinople behaves in interpreting for the Sultan: "touching his breast, his lips, and his forehead at every sentence the Sultan spoke." It is not the Sultan's speech which is saluted, but when the interpreter begins to interpret what may be in itself a long speech, he makes the customary reverence to his master, and this he repeats on every occasion during the translation when he alludes to the august name.

It is curious to find in the charm and polish of Lord Dufferin's style the persistence of repeated examples of the Irish would for should. Lord Dufferin had no brogue, but this transmutation, as it seems to us, is one more clinging than a peculiarity of pronunciation, and intercourse with Canadians and with the Scotch in India tended to perpetuate a form which seems a peculiarity to us, although Lord Dufferin was in a majority among the users of the English tongue.

Dictionary of Slang and Colloquial English.

By John S. Farmer and W. E. Henley. (Routledge & Sons.)

THE recently completed work on 'Slang and its Analogues,' in seven volumes, on which Mr. Farmer and the late Mr. Henley lavished so much time and labour, is a long way ahead of any similar collection in its wealth of words and quotations; but it was printed for subscribers only, and was too expensive as well as too extensive for the ordinary man. This new work, in a single volume, abridged from the previous seven, and issued at a moderate price, ought to have a wide sale, for its 534 pages are packed full of unrivalled information. Quotations which give the authority for words are generally omitted, but a date in many cases indicates the earliest use found. The abridgment has been well done, and we need not repeat our praise of the wide-reaching research of the authors. We shall do better service by mentioning some points in which the volume, excellent as it is, can be improved. New editions seem certain to be called for, and we hope that the publishers will have the enterprise to improve the book on each occasion of the sort. In various directories the type is kept standing for this purpose, and we should be sorry to conclude that the English language was less worth accurate record than, say, the obscure ancestors or latest progeny of titled families. Mr. Farmer has, we notice, retained some errors that we have pointed out. Doubtless others have supplied, or could supply, similar notes, and we would remind him that the best scholars are always the readiest to accept correction. It is human to err, diabolical to persevere in error, says a Latin improver of the old proverb.

Mr. Henley was very strong in flash words and all the dialects of ancient roguery. Mr. Farmer has long been a zealous and successful searcher in old plays, and on what may be called the literary side of slang is an excellent guide. Where the volume is weak is in the region of sport, school, and university. Thus the familiar phrase, "That's not cricket," is omitted, which a German dictionary-maker of considerable merit naturally took to mean, "That's no light affair," ignorant, perhaps, of the extraordinary hold that sport has on the life of the English people, and the seriousness with which it is regarded. An amusing instance of this feeling is that you cannot represent a county at cricket unless you are born in it, or have two years' residence in it to your credit, whereas parliamentary representation demands no such qualifications. Cricket, in spite of Mr. Kipling, holds its own as a matter of prime importance, so that many will be surprised to see "donkey-drops" defined as "slow roundhand bowling, such as is seldom seen in good matches, but is effective against boys." As a matter of fact, one of the most striking features of recent cricket is the revival of "donkey-drops" in the best matches. Experts tell us that Mr. Bosanquet, their most brilliant expositor, is pretty sure to play for England this summer, and wheedle some Australians out of their wickets by such insidious trundling. The cricketing sense of "slog" is hardly indicated. To "tonk," originally used of a ball, is much wider in range and application than appears here. It commonly indicates a thorough victory by one team over another. "Sprint" and "sprinter" are both omitted, as well as the "tape" which closes the runner's course. "Blooding," a not very pleasant feature of the end of the fox, might have been included as hunting slang. The process is described in 'Plain or Ringlets,' chap. lxii., by the creator of Jorrocks. A "bagman," or fox brought out in a bag and turned out before the hounds, is duly noted. "Metallician" is a puzzling word to the innocent, who will find no clue to it here.

We take a few words from an article on Cambridge (Morning Leader, March 13th, 1902), and look for them in this book. The writer says: "After 'hall' (i.e., dinner) the blood will perhaps play 'pills,' which are billiards, for a while." Mr. Farmer reports that "blood"—fast man is "now obsolete"; puts "Oxford Univ." after "hall" in the sense above, as if it was not common in both the chief universities; and does not mention "pills," in the sense indicated, at all. "Brunch" is omitted, though the article just mentioned tells us, what we know, that "the word is compounded of breakfast and lunch, and the meal is too." A "pi" man is not necessarily a "sim"—indeed, we doubt if those who represent the views of the Rev. Charles Simeon's former following at Cambridge are not now in a minority. "A Kiplingism," we may mention, was the phrase at the end of the eighteenth century at Cambridge for a piece of bad Latin. We hope it will not upset learned biographers two thousand years hence, who may confuse a pretentious Senior Wrangler who became a vinous dean with the author of the 'Recessional.' 1794 is the earliest date given for "gyp," a college servant, but the admirable 'Record of Admissions to the College of St. John the Evangelist, Cambridge,' part iii., 1715-67, which has an account of a gentleman who kicked his "jip" (sic), puts the use of the word earlier. We may add two more university phrases which are as dead as the "pretty young horse-breaker" or the fame of Martin Tupper. The gay spark of 1849 paid his "breezy tribute" to female beauty by exclaiming "What a stunner!" or "What a slap-up gal!"

Of course, it may be said that much slang of the sort is too esoteric to be included in a general dictionary. This applies, however, equally to the lingo of the Stock Exchange. Of abbreviated and perverted names for various shares, such as "Brums," a very long list is included, procured, it is added, with much difficulty; but we do not notice the explanation that a "stock" is a regular unit on the Exchange, meaning a thousand pounds' worth of any one stock.

The very liberality of these pages in the matter of the inclusion of words and phrases induces one to suggest additions. It is evident, of course, that much slang is on trial. The word of to-day may be gone to-morrow, and when the public has decided what is fittest to survive, the philologist may not agree with that immense and respectable body in awarding the honours of his dictionary to its favourites. He may even—since tout savant est un peu cadavre—be unaware of many popular phrases, as our humorous judges pretend to be. In the present case we think that more attention would have been paid by an alert observer to words of the last decade or so. The Boer war, for instance, gave us "Stellenbosched," not a word of happy memory, and a wide use of "Kopje," which has now been dropped; Mr. Barrie gave us "Little Mary," which still lingers here and there, though it has ceased to be general; and Sir John Gorst is the author of the Parliamentary manoeuvre known as "Manipoor-ing." The works of many vivid writers, whose strong point is the England outside England, have introduced a good deal of cosmopolitan and colloquial English, while the humour of Mr. Dooley is extending the tongue of Chicago. There is an excellent dictionary of Australian words, but we think it odd that no one has produced a colonial word-book which would represent English speech all over the globe. "Sonny" and "Salue!" are two familiar words of this sort which might puzzle the stay-at-home Englishman. Mr. Farmer gives the first, but not the second. The meaning of other colonial words, such as "jaggery," is beyond easy conjecture.

The slang of earlier Victorian days is beginning to have the attraction of history. Prince Albert was generally credited with introducing in 1843 a new headdress for the infantry called the Albert hat, which was described as a cross between a muff, a coal-scuttle, and a slop-pail, and was no more popular than "the Brodrick" of recent days. The fact is that neither of these head-coverings allowed the soldier to "sport the quiff," which is, when Mars dallies with Venus, one of the valued insignia of war. In 1838, according to Mr. Ashton's capital book of gossip concerning the period, the "scold's bridle" was sent for by a magistrate to be used on a termagant wife. This ancient instrument of repression was called a "brank." "Brown Bess," the old regulation musket, is noted, but not a "Manton," which was the common term for a gun such as sportsmen used. Should not "crimp" have been included? Thackeray was very indignant when Tait's Magazine said in 1846 that "the Peninsular and Oriental Company were so fortunate as to crimp Mr. Titmarsh," as a special correspondent for a festive occasion, and wrote a letter to Punch objecting to the word. The long clay pipe known as a "churchwarden" is duly mentioned by Mr. Farmer, but he ignores a form of pipe now much more popular—the "bulldog." "Composites" and "diachylum" were familiar terms fifty years ago; but the superior persons occasionally encountered, who cannot read 'Pickwick' because its slang is so unintelligible, will certainly need to be told that candles and plaster are meant. A "garibaldi" was a famous blouse; but we can hardly expect any dictionary to go into all the nomenclature of fashion in attire. The minx of 1717 wore "a French Alamode, and an Indian Atlas, as well as a Callicoe Smock and a pair of Genoa stockings," and two of the articles might puzzle glib writers on dress to-day, though they were sufficiently familiar to figure in a popular pamphlet when George I. was king. Even our modern dictionaries are strangely at variance with the people who make our clothes as to what they should be called.

We have dwelt chiefly on words this dictionary does not include, but we do not wish, to use an expressive word for which Mr. Farmer has found a place, to "crab" it. It is full of interest and entertainment, and we do not think it likely that it will be superseded, for a generation at any rate, as the standard work on slang in one volume. All those who aim at a small and sound library of books of reference should secure it, while its possession will lighten the labours of the various organizations which pretend to the knowledge of the American "information bureau" in literary matters.

---

Sur la Pierre Blanche. By Anatole France.
(Paris, Calmann-Lévy.)

THE editor of the Revue des Deux Mondes told an interviewer last week that he was a fast reader, and instanced his perusal of the book before us in two hours as an example. We do not know whether it would be possible for any one to gallop through it without skipping in that time, but feel sure that it would be impossible to do so without missing many beauties worth attention both for the thought conveyed and the style in which it is couched.

When we heard that M. Anatole France had been visiting Rome with Mr. Bernard Shaw, we confess to a curiosity which led us in the first few pages to try to find G. B. S. among the four companions of Langelier, who comes nearest to being M. France himself, and Commander Boni, who discharges the duties and occupies the rooms of our correspondent Commander Lanciani of real life, though he does not seem to us to hold the same opinions. The most careful examination of the witty conversation in the Forum does not reveal to us a G. B. S. M. Anatole France is himself in his usual fashion—rather more himself, perhaps, in this volume than in any of his others.

To the artist and the man of letters it is enough that M. France remains the first of living stylists, certain to be one of the stylists of all time. To them it will be a relief to find that politics and the recent struggle of M. France and his friends against the "Nationalists" have had no permanent effect upon his writings, of which at one time they seemed to have disturbed the even course. As a teacher our author stands out more clearly in this book than elsewhere. From our point of view there are, of course, faults of taste. It would be possible to collect passages to show that M. Anatole France is wilfully immoral or destructive. But such passages are few and unimportant in comparison with others, either purely noble or ironical in a noble sense. It is doubtful whether Tolstoy himself has done so much for the cause of peace as has M. France in this one book, playfully, and as though not knowing what he did. To the members of English-speaking churches our author will, indeed, in this volume appear needlessly hard towards St. Paul. We are inclined to doubt, however, that Apostle's popularity outside the English-speaking world, and the irreverence of M. France in this respect may, after all, harm him only with a limited public.

The construction of 'Sur la Pierre Blanche' is even more peculiar than that of 'Man and Superman.' The book opens with the conversation of the five Frenchmen and the Italian in the Forum, but this almost immediately gives place to a short story told in Commander Lanciani's room. It is laid in the time when St. Paul was at Corinth, and when the Roman rulers of Greece had hopes of the probable mildness of the future reign of the young Nero. It is intended to give the Roman view of Judaism and of the early Christians. Then follows a commentary by the author on his own story in the form of a renewed conversation, much longer than the story itself. The whole book is in the commentary, and it is the finest work that M. Anatole France has done. Last of all there comes a dream of the Collectivist Europe three centuries hence—inferior work to the commentary on the Roman story, but yet, we think, the best of all the many dreams of this description which have been published in recent years.

Those who do not like the writing of M. Anatole France—chiefly Frenchmen of different politics—will be inclined to suggest that the author is telling us all the time, "See how well I've drawn the later Romans; how inferior to them, how unfit to speak with them, was Paul, or, indeed, any early Christian! Yet how admirably I have proved that my later Romans should have foreseen the certainty of the destruction of their sham Olympus, in which they did not believe, by the appeal of Christianity to the slave majority."

It will perhaps also be suggested that, however easily the Roman puppets of our author appear to move, they are not Romans, but only so many various versions of M. France. This kind of criticism leads straight to the belief that M. France is both the honest Bergeret and the delightful scoundrel Jérôme Coignard. We recognize, of course, the "douce ironie" of M. France in all his characters, including his late Romans. But his late Romans are all in a sense corrupt, and M. France is, in his politics and his dreams, essentially a fanatic in the best sense of the word. He will laugh with his corrupt Roman at a baited Jew, and will explain the many reasons why the Jew must expect to be baited; but, after that, he would in real life let himself be chopped into little bits to defend him. In this book, superficially, M. France is with the Romans against Paul; but essentially, in spite of his Latin culture, to which, as he says, Paul was unable to address himself, M. France is with Paul against the Romans.

The incidental passages of extraordinary merit are, we think, more plentiful in this volume than in any other of M. France's writing. To take those in less than a third of its length—those to be found between pp. 197 and 304—we find the "Yellow Peril" delightfully satirized, the Russo-Japanese war perfectly summed up, and little definitions, such as that which explains that "modern civilization consists in the White States quarrelling over the extermination of the Red, Yellow, and Black Races, and the pillage of three of the quarters of the globe."

The pains taken by the empires of China and of Rome not to find each other in the world, during the many centuries of their common existence, is playfully developed in the same part of the book. Another definition which pleases us declares that

"barbarism consists of all anterior states: Present custom, which now forms the civilization contrasted with barbarism, will be barbarism as soon as it becomes the past."

The colonial history of France is given in a nutshell: "She has for seventy years robbed and hunted the Arabs for the purpose of peopling Algeria with Spaniards and Italians." Democracy is touched by the way:—

"Of course I know that the peoples are not reasonable. How could one understand it if they were, when one sees of what they are made? but there is an instinct that often warns them of that which may do them harm."

Modern peace is "pompous peace.... weighed down with phantom glory." A description of "what we shall hear at lunch to-morrow" is too long to quote. The ineptitude of society is thus brought out in a fashion which leads up to the preparation for the millennium of M. France in the Socialist state. He tells us in passing that "the aristocrats and the rich have always displayed a preference for manual toil," and when he has made us jump, he goes on to explain that they certainly have never used their brains, while they have spent their time in hunting, shooting, war, and many other diversions in which the body takes more part than the mind. Liberty, Equality, and Fraternity are then criticized, and no old Whig and no Tory can be harder on them than is the literary Socialist. Lastly, in this third of the volume we find that one of the joys promised to us for the future is that the poets are to be confined by the rules of their art to saying beautiful things "wholly devoid of meaning."

NEW NOVELS.

An Act in a Backwater. By E. F. Benson. (Heinemann.)

ONE of the things Mr. Benson seldom fails to achieve in his stories is the appearance of natural and unforced conversation. He has the secret, by some happy knack of his own or by some clever contrivance, of making his people talk well and in character. Whichever it may be in reality, it at least always looks like the result of the first methods of—if we may say so—want of method. In a book like this, this trick of dialogue assures at least one condition of success—for here success a good deal depends on smart talk rather than on the actions and destinies of the talkers. As a background Mr. Benson chooses an ancient English cathedral city. The "well-informed reader" is sure to fancy he identifies "Wroxton" nestling among its downs, chalk-streams, and water-meadows. Into its consecrated quiet enter at the beginning of the story several members of an aristocratic family, a younger son and his sister and an aunt. Their advent causes a great deal of curiosity and fluttering among the aborigines of Close and town. For one thing, the newcomers "settle down" in a queer open-handed fashion unknown in Wroxton annals. One of the most interested onlookers is a certain colonel of volunteers, so distantly connected with the fresh arrivals as not to be really connected at all except in his own mind and conversation. He is a fervent adorer of the peerage, and longs to add to his own importance in the town by hanging on to its skirts. Though he does not develope, he is good enough as a character-sketch, and possible enough as a human being. A man of local habitation and a name for anything but suavity of manner (at least at home), he becomes almost servile in the presence of "titled persons." These latter point the contrast between provincial middle-class ways and ideas and the outlook of those differently born and bred. Beyond this Mr. Benson's county family have little significance, and there is nothing very brilliant or vital in their drawing. Love's young dream is impersonated by the young girl of this family and a painter, whose father is a canon, his mother being a stern believer in temperance and other virtues. A pair of spinster sisters (who do not look so young as they feel) are amongst the actors in this light sketch, which has yet an undercurrent of more serious import. An epidemic of typhoid for a time holds the city. One of the poor spinsters is also attacked by another and worse malady, which must prove mortal. In both ordeals the "aristocratic family" come well to the front and show their mettle and powers of sympathy. This, or this approximately, is the sum and substance of Mr. Benson's new book. These misfortunes are treated with feeling, but they do not, somehow, seem to fit the rather superficial character of the story. And in this superficiality its merit seems to us to lie, rather than in the touches of deeper thought and action.

The System. By Percy White. (Methuen & Co.)

THE System is a school for young rationalists, started by an ardent reformer of the sort that our universities are still producing—clever, crammed with political economy, somewhat wild, and certainly priggish, but strong in self-sacrifice. The school comes in the latter half of the volume, which is not dull (Mr. White could not be that), but certainly not so gay as the first hundred pages or so. In these the young iconoclast from Oxford, who is also an exile from his Tory family, is seen launching a new and serious paper. He gives his creator many opportunities for epigram, which are admirably used. Mr. White's good things are not only excellently said, but also, it seems to us, tolerably true. He has never been happier in his exposure of the taste of the age in which we live. The women of the story are nice without being notable.

Yesterday's To-morrow. By Dora Greenwell McChesney. (Dent & Co.)

SOME time since Mr. Andrew Lang offered to novelists an attractive figure, which in his historical researches he had unearthed. This was James la Cloche, the eldest natural son of Charles II., who was born in Jersey. Certain portions of the history of this James Mr. Lang traced, but his career is wrapped in mystery. The author seems to have taken the hint, for one of the chief characters in her romance is Henri de Rohan, a Jesuit emissary, who is no other than James la Cloche. We fear, however, that this recorded part of his life does not belong to history. He is not the hero of the book; if it has a hero, it is an elderly cavalier, who has spent twenty years in the slave plantations of America. The weak point of the tale is that there is no convincing reason why Ambrose Fielding should, on his return, have concealed his identity from his son. Apparently he does so because he does not wish to claim the estates from that son; but Walter Fielding was not worthy of so much consideration, and his father, who acted as his confidential servant (not a novel device this in fiction), should have known that well enough. The plot centres in the intrigues which were involved in the succession to the throne, and many familiar figures, such as Anthony Ashley, appear in it. The writer has command over her invention, which is usually felicitous, and tells a story with spirit and gusto. It was clear from the first that she intended to make a tragic use of Ambrose Fielding, and that conclusion is dramatic and effective. But we are not convinced by it, any more than we are by the conversion to Quakerism of the Court beauty and her lover, who may, in a way, be considered as the heroine and hero of the ingenious story.

The Virgin and the Seales. By Constance Cotterell. (Methuen & Co.)

WE have found this a very readable novel, brightly and cleverly written, especially in the development of the heroine's character. Both as a child and as a girl of nineteen she is an attractive and interesting person, and her relations with her guardian, also well, though not so fully drawn, form the feature of the story. We do not care for the scene at the railway station at the close of the book, which is too melodramatic and rather overdrawn; nor is the wicked Mrs. Ambury very convincing; but the dialogue throughout is bright and natural, and the story runs easily on to its appointed end.

The Torch-Bearers. By Mary Bradford Whiting. (Dent & Co.)

A NOVEL which begins with an Italian saying, "Yonder is the dome of Milan Cathedral," does not commend itself at the outset. And yet—in spite of the fact that an English gentleman becomes a police spy, that the middle-class people seem to have walked straight out of Mr. Marion Crawford's novels, that the author is hazy in her notions of the Italian republican parties, that a conspiracy such as she describes would have been full of inspired Italian students aged between sixteen and twenty (a class she seems never to have met)—the basic facts of the national life are clearly observed, the story is good, and so well told that at the end the present reviewer asked himself, "Is there, by any chance, an external dome to that mass of confectioner's Gothic?"

The Marathon Mystery. By Burton E. Stevenson. (Harper & Brothers.)

THIS is the best detective story that we have read for a long time, and has the advantage of being well written, free from lapses either into bad grammar or bad taste. False clues to the perpetrator of the opening murder are most ingeniously worked in, and the villain, before he meets his dramatic end, has nearly involved an innocent man in a second crime. The methods of detection are those of Sherlock Holmes, but the story has an originality of its own, and is none the worse for its American setting, which does not make it in any way unintelligible to readers on this side of the Atlantic. Mr. Stevenson is to be congratulated on his success in a much frequented field.

The Weans at Rowallan. By Kathleen Fitzpatrick. (Methuen & Co.)

THE author's description of the "Weans" at Rowallan, and their quaint environment of Irish human nature and Irish landscape, are amusing and pleasant. The chapters consist of episodes in the childhood of a band of Irish brothers and sisters who, though "gentry," have lost the ways and language of "sich," and acquired an original charm of their own. They are often naughty and wilful, but they have their "feelings," which are strong ones. There is also an old serving-woman, whose goodness to her charges, "the childher" and their stricken mother, is of a beautiful quality. Much of the children's time is spent in pranks and diversions of unauthorized varieties. Perhaps excessive prominence is given to their religious "views"; and their invocations of their Maker (and threats when their odd requests are not granted) are too numerous. We think that the story would not have suffered had the underlying motive been made just a trifle less obscure. One of the funniest episodes is the children's Dorcas Society, when they furbish up the wardrobes of their dead forbears and proceed to clothe the village in incongruities of all sorts. Some of the fun is tinged with the unconscious pathos of child life and the mixed mirth and melancholy of the Irish peasantry.

ORIENTAL LITERATURE.

A Heifer of the Dawn. Translated from the Original Manuscript by F. W. Bain. (Parker & Co.)—In the Great God's Hair. Translated from the Original Manuscript by F. W. Bain. (Same publishers.)—These are two volumes of a series of romances which has been received with a considerable amount of favour in this country. It purports to be translated from some old Indian manuscript—a pretence that will impose on no one who knows anything about Indian romances or Indian manuscripts. Unfortunately, most English readers can lay claim to no such qualification; and the press notices of these volumes abundantly show that they have been generally accepted as translations from some Indian original. Whatever satisfaction is to be obtained from misleading the reading public and its representatives in the press Mr. Bain must possess in full measure. Whether such satisfaction has been legitimately obtained, or whether it is worth having when obtained, are questions which we are not called upon to discuss. All that need be said here is that Mr. Bain's charming stories are well able as literature to stand on their own merits.

Mr. Bain has been fairly successful in catching the spirit of the Indian romance; but to what a very slight extent he has preserved the form may be seen at once by comparing his stories with any genuine English version of a Sanskrit original, as, for instance, Miss Ridding's translation of 'Kādambarī.' Even his stories and his characters, so far as they are not original creations, owe at least as much to the 'Arabian Nights' and to the Old Testament as to any Sanskrit romances or dramas. His work, in fact, is a blend of a kind with which we have in recent years become familiar both in art and literature.

Much parade is made in prefaces and notes of a learning which will by no means bear testing, for inaccuracies in words and ideas are by no means few or far between. The only point on which Mr. Bain can be congratulated in this connexion is that he has succeeded in avoiding on the title-pages of these two volumes an elementary grammatical blunder such as appears in the Sanskrit title of one of his previous volumes, 'The Descent of the Sun.' For the rest, he uses an extraordinary system of transliteration, which has certainly been employed by no European student of Sanskrit for the last two generations. This might have been forgiven if the transliteration were consistent or accurate; but it is neither.

The Web of Indian Life. By the Sister Nivedita (Margaret E. Noble) of Ramakrishna-Vivekananda. (Heinemann.)—Regarded as a contribution to exact knowledge or as an attempt to find a solution to some of the many difficult problems presented by the state of society in the India of to-day, this book has small claims to serious consideration. On the other hand, it is itself a human document of no ordinary interest. It is the work of a lady who abandoned all that the intellectual life and the social refinement of the West have to offer in order to work as a teacher among Hindu women, to live their life and to share their thoughts. Probably no more sincere attempt to see Indian social life from the inside has ever been made by a European. No such attempt can be completely successful while the caste system continues to interpose barriers which no amount of sympathy or good intention can surmount. Strangely enough, Sister Nivedita seems scarcely conscious of the extent to which these barriers have come between her and the object which she sought to achieve—perfectly free and unrestrained intercourse with the women of India. In describing the old Hindu caste-woman whom she induced to become her servant, for instance, she says (p. 16):—

"This aged servitor was capable enough of the wholesale floodings of the rooms which constituted house-cleaning, as well as of producing boiling water at stated times for the table and the bath. For some reason or other she had determined in my case to perform these acts on condition that I never entered her kitchen or touched her fire or water-supply."

And again:—

"I poured out a cup of tea and held out the pot to Jhee for more hot water. To my amazement she only gave a sort of grunt and disappeared into the inner courtyard. When she came back, a second later, she was dripping with cold water from head to foot. Before touching what I was about to drink she had considered a complete immersion necessary!"

The reason for the old lady's conduct in both cases is, of course, perfectly evident; but Sister Nivedita's own experiences do not prevent her from saying on the very next page that she found in Indian life generally an absence of the "unmeaning caste-restrictions" of which she had heard in her childhood. Indeed, on the subject of the caste-system and of the position of women in India she is hopelessly optimistic, and throughout the book she regularly defends or eulogizes institutions, such as the treatment of child-widows, for instance, which have called forth words of burning indignation from the leading reformers among the Hindus themselves. She undoubtedly shows that very beautiful characters are formed under the system; but such an observation need scarcely be limited to modern India. Trial and suffering have at all times and in all countries produced beautiful characters; but the fact in no way justifies their infliction.

If Sister Nivedita is an unsafe guide in social questions, she is still less to be trusted when she undertakes to deal with matters of Indian history or literature, and it is much to be regretted that no scholarly friend was at hand to prevent the publication of such chapters as those on 'The Indian Sagas' and 'The Synthesis of Indian Thought.' It would be as easy as it would be distasteful to multiply instances of misunderstanding or misstatement. It must suffice here to quote or mention only a few, taken almost at random, from two portions of the book:—

"It must be remembered that there never was, in India, a religion known as Buddhism, with temples and priests of its own order."—P. 161.

"It will not be difficult to show that the much vaunted science of Moorish Spain was neither more nor less than the tapping of Indian culture for the modern world."—P. 165.

"Hinduism is a convenient name for the nexus of Indian thought. It would appear that it takes some thousand to fifteen hundred years to work out a single rhythm of its great pulsation. For this is about the period that divides the war of the Mahabharata from Buddha, Buddha from Sankaracarya, and Sankaracarya from Ramakrishna, in whom the immense pile reaches the crowning self-consciousness."—P. 167.

On p. 280 (foot-note) we find the Charvaka system of philosophy classed as one of the six orthodox schools; and on p. 283 an "immemorial antiquity" is attributed to the use of the decimal notation in India.

It is pleasant to turn from these defects to the strong point in the book. Chaps. ii. to vi., which deal with various phases of woman's life in India, are full of deep womanly sympathy, and will be read with interest and admiration by many who will be repelled by the want of coherent reasoning and knowledge which characterizes other pages.

Life of Omar al-Khayyâmî. By J. K. M. Shirazi. (Foulis.)—The author of the latest biography of Omar Khayyâm is himself a Persian, and has enjoyed "the privilege of access to certain extremely rare and interesting MSS. of unquestionable authenticity, the property of the Royal House of Persia, and of private persons, noblemen, and heads of religious houses, to whom they have been handed down as heirlooms. Thanks to religious prejudice, all or most of these are practically inaccessible to Europeans, many of them being regarded as objects of veneration which it were sacrilege to submit to the eye of an infidel. As will be seen in the following chapters, the conclusions to be drawn from a careful study of those MSS. differ considerably in certain important respects from the opinions commonly accepted by Western students of Omar and his works."

By a strange oversight Mr. Shirazi nowhere tells us what are the titles of these MSS. and the names of their authors; in fact, he makes no further reference to them, except to record that a friend of his own—Hadji Mirza Mahmoud Shirazi of Zanjan and Tabriz—has in his possession a MS. of the thirteenth century, dealing with the lives of various poets, in which it is noted that Omar lived to a great age, being over one hundred years old at the time of his death; while in connexion with the statement that Omar was born at Basang he says:—

"I have been at the pains to institute investigations among MSS. existing in the libraries of private persons in Persia, but without eliciting anything in the nature of corroborative evidence."

The conclusions to which Mr. Shirazi has presumably been led by his study of these mysterious documents are more interesting, but even less probable, than the bare notice that Omar exceeded the century. He contends "that Omar, though a native of Persia, was not of Persian origin, but belonged to an Arab tribe, al-Khayyâmî, a name which is commonly used as his surname and has given rise to the legend that his father, and even the poet himself, followed the trade of tent-making. Now, except in conjunction with that of Omar the poet, the name occurs nowhere in Persian MSS., and the best authorities are agreed that neither in ancient nor in modern Persia does the name al-Khayyâmî exist as a patronymic. Among Arabs, on the other hand, the name is fairly common, as also among the nomadic tribes of Khuzistan and Luristan."

Notwithstanding his preliminary flourish of hitherto untapped sources of information, Mr. Shirazi does not produce any evidence whatever in support of this astonishing hypothesis. According to him, the Khayyâmîs were an Arab tribe who "doubtless had good reasons of their own for migrating to Khorasan." Mr. Shirazi doubtless has equally good reasons for being uncommunicative; otherwise he might have indicated how the Khayyâmîs managed to conceal their existence so cleverly that they are not even mentioned by any Arabian genealogist. A writer who can change nationalities and create tribes by a stroke of his pen is in one sense beyond criticism. After this, it seems hardly worth while to point out that the wasfiyya of Nizâmî 'l-Mulk, comprising the well-known 'Story of the Three School Friends,' which Mr. Shirazi describes as "the spontaneous testimony of a personal friend and contemporary,.....a document of incalculable importance to the student," is derived from a compilation written in the fifteenth century and is almost certainly fictitious. Like his countrymen in general, the author shows a distinct turn for speculation, and the chapters on Omar's philosophy and the causes of his unpopularity in Persia may be read with pleasure and profit, even if they contain little that is new.

Messrs. Routledge send us a handsome and convenient edition of the Rubâiyât of Omar Khayyâm, translated by FitzGerald and accompanied by the familiar introduction. Each stanza receives a page to itself, the type is large and clear, and Mr. Gilbert James's illustrations, though they can scarcely be taken as models of Oriental costume, are decidedly effective.

Annali dell' Islam. Compilati da Leone Caetani, Principe di Teano. Vol. I. (Milan, Hoepli.)—This is the first instalment of what promises to be a more extensive and magnificent history of Islam than any that has hitherto appeared. It will cover a period of nine hundred years, from the Hijra, or flight of Mohammed, in 622 down to the Ottoman conquest of Egypt in 1517, and will contain the history of all the Moslem races with the sole exception of the Turks. The author's object is to set forth in strict chronological order the vast mass of material, inaccessible to most European students, which is stored away in Oriental manuscripts and in lithographed or printed texts, and at the same time to illustrate the original sources by a running commentary which embodies the results of modern criticism. Full and exact references are given in every case, so that the work when complete will serve as a general index to the great Mohammedan histories. Special paragraphs are devoted to the most important historical and chronological questions, and the events of each year are followed by an obituary of persons eminent in politics, literature, and science; while, in order that the main lines of development may be easily traced, a comprehensive study of political, social, and religious movements is prefixed to the history of the corresponding period.

That Prince Caetani has designed his work on a grand scale is sufficiently shown by the fact that the first volume of 740 pages only brings us to the end of the sixth year after the Flight. Nearly half the space, however, is occupied by an admirably written introduction, where such topics are discussed as the value of the most ancient traditions concerning the Prophet, the legends relating to his early life, his precursors, his prophetic mission, and the course of his conflict with the Meccan aristocracy. Of particular interest are the sections (189 sqq.) in which the author treats of the nature of Mohammed's inspiration, his personal character, and the diverse spiritual phases through which he passed. Although the notion that Mohammed was an extraordinarily gifted impostor has long been discredited, there are many who still believe with Sir William Muir that he was a victim of diabolic suggestion, or incline to Sprenger's opinion that his religious enthusiasm was due to hysteria and disordered nerves. It is clear in the light of subsequent research that Mohammed's inspiration is closely connected with the old Arabian view, which he himself shared, that poets were supernaturally possessed and inspired by jinn (the genies of the 'Arabian Nights'); he at first believed himself to be thus possessed, but finally became convinced that he was the organ of a higher being, whom he identified with the Holy Ghost of the Gospel. According to this theory, which is the obvious sequel to Dr. Goldziher's investigations, Mohammed, as the author observes, must have been entirely sincere at the outset, nor can we fairly suspect him of conscious fraud while he remained in Mecca, except on the celebrated occasion when he admitted the heathen goddesses as partners with Allah, an episode of which Prince Caetani doubts the authenticity. He maintains that the oldest revelations have been lost, and shows by statistics drawn from the Koran that Mohammed did not immediately claim to be the Messenger of God, but only arrived at this idea "as the ultimate result of a long moral evolution." His conception of the Prophet's character marks a great advance, inasmuch as it takes account of the society in which Mohammed grew up, and depicts him not as an isolated phenomenon, but as the child of his age, superior to the rest of his countrymen, yet to a large extent swayed by the same feelings and superstitions—no semi-insane "degenerate" or instrument of Satan, but a man who for many years anxiously sought and honestly preached the truth as he saw it. We congratulate Prince Caetani on the completion of this sumptuous volume, itself a monument of patient labour and lucid exposition, and offer him, on behalf of all who are interested in the history of Islam, our best wishes for the successful continuation of a work so excellently begun. It should be added that the style is easy and most attractive to the literary reader.

FOLK-LORE.

Folk-lore of the Musquakie Indians of North America, and Catalogue of Musquakie Beadwork and other Objects in the Collection of the Folk-lore Society. By Mary Alicia Owen. (Nutt.)

County Folk-lore.—Vol. IV. Examples of Printed Folk-lore concerning Northumberland. Collected by M. C. Balfour, and edited by Northcote W. Thomas. (Same publisher.)

THESE are the extra volumes given by the Folk-lore Society to its members, in addition to the quarterly magazine Folk-lore, for the years 1902 and 1903 respectively, but they have both been issued since the beginning of the present year. They form vols. li. and liii. of the Society's series of publications.

Mr. Hartland, in a preface to Miss Owen's work, explains that she contributed a paper on the subject of the Musquakie Indians to the British Association at the Toronto meeting in 1897, which led to a request from the Council of the Folk-lore Society that she would favour that Society with a fuller and more detailed statement of the information she possessed about the people. She not only consented to do this, but also presented to the Society a collection of beadwork and ceremonial implements which she had slowly accumulated during many years of direct personal intercourse with members of the tribe. This collection is displayed in the Museum of Archaeology and Ethnology at Cambridge by the courtesy of the University authorities. The present volume has, therefore, a twofold function: it is a treatise (94 pp.) on the folk-lore of the Musquakies, and a catalogue (53 pp. and 8 plates) of the collection.

Miss Owen introduces the catalogue with the following shrewd remarks, which aptly express the spirit in which she has pursued her researches, and display her insight into savage character:—

"The objects here catalogued are not merely pretty and picturesque, they are almost without exception ceremonial. This statement is made for the sake of those students of folk-lore who have warned collectors of wild people's property that they should neglect the merely pretty and picturesque, and gather in such objects as are ceremonial, a fair enough warning till one comes to realize that to the wild man, surrounded by civilization, and making a stand against it, everything that pertains to his free and savage past has become a ceremonial object. The Musquakie, hating and repelling civilization, yet to an extent succumbing to his environment and availing himself of its conveniences, buys his plate and cup, his flour, his shabby cheap clothes, all for everyday use and wear, from the white trader; but when the time comes for his wedding and his burial, for the solemn high festivals of his religion and their attendant feasts, he must wear the garments his women make for him, the ornaments fashioned by his skill and theirs, and eat the food of his ancestors, prepared in the old way, and served in the vessels that by usage have become sacred. And as the husband is the wife is, with perhaps an increase of affection for her gay garments, because they enhance her good looks."

The collection consists of 110 specimens, 24 of which are selected for illustration in the eight plates (two of which are coloured), and 14 by woodcuts in the text. The artistic forms of the beadwork are very various, mainly geometrical, and the patterns are in many cases significant, representing the symbols of secret societies, the qualification of the worker as a "woman with spots on her face" (that is, one who has had many religious dances given in her honour, each dance entitling her to a spot), the shaman who powwowed the work, running water, incidents in tribal history, &c. We note also some musical instruments, among them a whistle to call ghosts, which "is an instrument accursed; in former times, any man or woman found possessing one was burned at the stake; whistling with it is a shocking crime; it summons myriads of ghosts to dance and make bad medicine."

Among the miscellaneous objects are a set of divorce-sticks—the ceremony of divorce consisting in breaking a stick in the presence of the head chief's council. These specimens must suffice to indicate what a very fine collection Miss Owen has generously presented to this country, and how illuminating and interesting her comments upon the several objects are.

The Musquakies are a branch of the great Algonquin family, and are known to the whites and to other Indian tribes as Outagamies, or Foxes. They first appear as settled on the banks of Lake Superior in the seventeenth century. Thence the remnants of the tribe were crowded southward along the valley of the Mississippi, and now they have a holding of 3,000 acres in the State of Wisconsin. The tribe is a limited monarchy, having an hereditary chief and seven sub-chiefs, each presiding over one of the clans, and assisted by a council. The head chief's council assembles four times a year, and he has also the advice of a cabinet of "honourable women." On the subject of their beliefs Miss Owen observes that a "mee-sham"—a mysterious something given to the first Musquakie man, who was born from the shoulder of Hot-Hand, one of two brothers who figure in their legends of origin—is known to the men of the tribe, but no man has ever revealed the secret to a woman. The squaws speculated as to what it might be, but a buck, from whom Miss Owen sought information, said, "What for you ask? Him all same like your ark to covenant." On their dances she observes:—

"When you have learned the seasons and reasons for a Musquakie's dances you have little further information of him to seek. He dances for health, he dances for wealth in corn and ponies, he dances to honour his Manito ah, he dances to please the totems, to placate or expel the devils; he celebrates his successes and strives to retrieve his failures by dancing. This interests the folk-lorist, but it annoys the agent and missionary so seriously that they have represented to the Government that it is impossible to christianize and civilize these people so long as these heathen practices are permitted. In consequence, the agent has been allowed to forbid all saltatory exercises. This means, of course, that hereafter it will be difficult for white people to see what is bound to go on."

Miss Owen has been able to obtain a good description of the dances, which are the religion dance, the corn-planting dance, totem dances, the green-corn dance, the woman dance (for men who, not coming up to the tribal standard of manliness, were compelled to dress as women), the bear dance, the buffalo dance, the discovery dance, the young dogs' dance, the horses' dance, the scalp dance, the dead man's medicine dance, the young servants' dance, the birds' dance, and the presents dance (for collecting wedding gifts). After chapters relating to the customs of the tribe in the several periods of life, Miss Owen presents a collection of folk-tales. Many of her excellent observations might be quoted, if space allowed, but the specimens we have given will show that the volume is not only a valuable monograph by a competent observer, but also very good reading.

The volume of 'County Folk-lore for Northumberland' is the sixth in order of a useful series of works issued by the Folk-lore Society, in which the items of folk-lore relating to a particular county that are scattered over various publications issued during the last two centuries are collected and digested. In the present issue sixty-one works have been thus treated, and this volume, with the Denham tracts and Henderson's 'Folk-lore of the Northern Counties,' published by the same Society, contains all that is known of the folk-lore of Northumberland. Such a work is calculated to be of service to an observer, and may save much trouble in going over ground that has been already well gleaned. The plan involves a certain amount of repetition, and the inclusion as items relating to Northumberland of things that may be observed in other counties also; but it is good work, and work that will not need to be done over again.

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

ONE of The Times correspondents in the Russo-Japanese war, Mr. David Fraser, gives us, under the title A Modern Campaign ("wireless telegraphy" being mentioned in the sub-title), an interesting volume, published by Messrs. Methuen & Co. The book, after introductory chapters on the establishment of The Times system of wireless telegraphy, deals chiefly with the operations under General Kuroki. There is a special allusion in the preface to the neglect of our home Government in artillery rearmament, and there is a chapter on the subject. Mr. Fraser tells us in the preface that "the chapter on artillery was written before the Government decided to rearm, and has been left....." We are inclined to doubt the accuracy of this statement. The Government decision to rearm the artillery was announced early in 1904. In several reviews in The Athenæum of books on the South African war it has been pointed out that rearmament had been pressed on the Government before that war; and that an excellent French gun offered by a first-class firm was refused about 1897. But it is open to the Government to say that they have now adopted a better gun than any gun of 1897 or even of 1899, except the French Government gun, the construction of which was a profound secret; and that if they had rearmed before the South African war the experience of that war would have forced upon them a fresh rearmament at the present time. We maintain our own opinion; but the facts which we have stated shake the position of Mr. Fraser. It is the case that the daily press has set up a claim for having during the present winter forced rearmament upon the Administration. We cannot, however, see that the action of the Administration during this winter has in any degree departed from the principle laid down early in the last session of Parliament. We wish that Mr. Fraser in his chapter upon the subject had told us exactly how matters stand with regard to the Japanese and the Russian field-guns. He appears to suggest that the Japanese field-gun is an absolutely old-fashioned weapon. That may indeed be the case with many that he has seen in the field, but it is contrary to the official information laid before the Government of India more than a year ago, and made public at Calcutta in the discussions on the Indian Budget

Mr. Fraser also states that the Russian field-gun, though much quicker in its fire than the Japanese gun, is "not a true quick-firer, according to the latest ideas." His words suggest of the Russian field-piece that it is an old-fashioned gun with a spade attachment. Here, again, a different statement has been made to the Indian Government by the Military Member of Council, and elsewhere by many other authorities. We imagine that on both sides there has been a partial rearmament with modern quick-firers, but that the strain of the war has involved the use of a large number of old-fashioned field-guns.

ANOTHER volume on the war, of a very different description, is published by Messrs. Blackwood & Sons, under the title The Yellow War, by "O." The cover is a little startling for a book issued by so staid a firm. The contents are striking, and the style is a brilliant imitation of that of two sets of war writings dealing with South Africa, which justly created much interest when published by Messrs. Blackwood. The author, whoever he may be, has much of the best modern power of describing war. His book will not stand comparison with the writings of "Linesman," because the latter author was dealing with known events, and was in a responsible situation, whereas "O." may be, and in some cases certainly is, drawing only on his imagination. There is, however, not the least attempt to mislead or deceive.

WE have nothing to say this year about Dod's Parliamentary Companion (Whittaker & Co.), except that in the 1905 volume of this useful pocket companion some mistakes previously pointed out by us no longer exist, and that we have not discovered new ones.

The Enchanted Woods, and other Essays on the Genius of Places. By Vernon Lee. (Lane.)—This is a book to dip into—a book, as it were, to read in swallow-flights, or rather seaweed fashion. Before the modern and fashionable vogue of what has been called the "spirit of place" it would have been styled impressions of travel. Vernon Lee has a wide and catholic sensitiveness to impressions the most various, and renders them with the sureness and precision of a photographic lens, and the delicacy of a practised artist, to whom the research of the unique phrase has become an almost automatic faculty. Her sympathies are universal; all spirits of men find her responsive, and all in a mood of amiable, one might say relishing appreciation. It is the appreciation of a writer who is a connoisseur in life, an artist in the extraction of its choice sensations. A refined hedonism, modified by a spirit of humanity and the cult of friendship, modified also by the sparing restraint of the "wise pagan," presides over these impressionary sketches. The lapidary style of intimate and conscious selection, to which she has accustomed us, is in these essays relaxed and relieved by an admixture of familiar, sometimes almost conversational ease, which harmonizes with the casual and personal character of the essays themselves, and makes them fluent reading despite their deliberate artistry. For they are essentially the careful gossip (if we may use such a phrase) of a cultivated woman recalling the fortunate moments of her travel experience, the moments which have left a trace on her emotional memory. Read as such, and one or two at a time, they have a charm; they do actually bring to the reader the peculiar breath of many places in many lands, an atmosphere of many and diverse human types, and the scenes of which those types are, as it were, the vegetation. But the genius of place which they detect and register with such unfailing sensitiveness is, after all, an external and superficial spirit. They do not penetrate; there is no searching subtlety in their analysis. They have nothing of the repose, the central substance, which comes from thought. It is too purely emotional, the flitting record of the cultured seeker after exquisite sensations. Once or twice they touch a deeper, a more homely, less æsthetic note, and at such times they have a more arresting appeal.

One does, perhaps, feel that the seeker is too resolutely and consciously vigilant to turn the lens of her mind towards each fresh variety of impression. Nor does the interblending of a light and chatty style always escape an air of conscious effect. Sometimes, not content to be merely casual in phrase, she drops into little fragments of (may we call it?) feminine slang. St. Anthony, finding that not he but St. Paul is the original first hermit, is "just a tiny bit vexed," though "quite dear and good about it all." Nothing can "come up to" the tenderness of the arrival of "the dear old saint at the other dear old saint's cave." The ladyish mannerisms have a suspicion of calculated device. The hermits (again) often nest in settlements, colonies of friends (thinks Vernon Lee); "charming people, about whom I refuse to hear a single one of the horrid things which historians, and ascetic writers, and professional stylists like Flaubert, have had the bad taste to write." It is a good instance of the "charming wilfulness," the "delightful feminine waywardness," the literary monie, as a fore-calculated sleight of style; and one may admire or not according to one's sympathy. To us, this inveterate feminine archness and prepurposed pettish or caressing whim are tiring. Here they are in designed contrast with such orchidaceous style as (elsewhere):—

"Ivory-tinted marbles,.....the cathedral cupola shaped like a dry poppy-head, and the pomegranate-shaped dome of the baptistery—reddish and purple and frosted with white; and beyond them the pale blue sky, recently washed by rain, with just one feathery cirrus."

That is her descriptive style at its best and most characteristic. Admirably worded, it yet leaves perhaps a less vivid and definite picture than might a sentence of less deliberately inlaid phrasing.

THE success of Mr. G. H. Lorimer's 'Letters of a Self-made Merchant to his Son' has produced the inevitable sequel. We find in Old Gorgon Graham (Methuen) the same qualities which characterized the former volume. There is no falling-off in the brightness, the wit, or the epigrams. You may dip at random and come upon sentences that set your teeth on edge, and leave you between depression at this remarkable outlook on life and appreciation of the pungent satire. In this book Pierrepont, the son, is getting on, but he is not yet married when we renew his acquaintance, and he is by no means entrusted with the conduct of the celebrated pork-packing business. "A man's son," says old Gorgon Graham, "is entitled to a chance in his business, but not to a cinch." The son is anxious for his father to retire, but the old man clings to business, "not because I'm indispensable to the business, but because business is indispensable to me." He knows no other means by which he can get ten solid hours of fun a day. One wonders if that really is the explanation of Chicago, and is inclined to accept it. Anyhow, the father will only retire to the cemetery. There are a good many things he doesn't know, he confesses, "but hogs ain't one of them." Throughout the letters there is plenty of shrewd common sense, delivered in what we suppose we must style English, and there is a surfeit of epigrams, as this: "When a woman's bad, there's always a man at the bottom of it; and when a man's good, there's always a woman at the bottom of that too." Mr. Lorimer coruscates and scintillates. He is always doing cart-wheels or letting off catherine-wheels, and he does both admirably. In its kind the book could not be bettered; but will he be content with it? It shows capacity to do much more, if the author like. But if there is a demand for such work as this we suppose he will continue at it, and we shall be invited to laugh at writing and ideas of this sort:—

"Honeybunch was a good girl, but she was as strong as a six-mule team, and a cautious man just naturally shied away from her. Was a pretty free stepper in the mazes of the dance, and once, when she was balancing partners with Doodums, she kicked out sort of playful to give him a love pat, and fetched him a clip with her tootsey that gave him water on the kneecap.....After that the boys used to make Honeybunch mighty mad, when she came out of dark corners with Doodums, by feeling him to see if any of his ribs were broken."

A MAN of much ability, a public servant of high merit, Mr. H. Cunynghame, publishes through the Oxford Clarendon Press A Geometrical Political Economy, of which there is not much to be said, save that it exactly corresponds with a modest second title. The little book does not set up new theories so much as explain to a somewhat unwilling public the method of stating the theories of economic science by means of diagrams.

IN Imperial Vienna (Lane) the drawings by Mr. Puchinger are not sufficiently attractive to make the volume acceptable as a picture book. They are, in fact, so sketchy and uninspired that one has to look to the letter-press for the raison d'être of this bulky volume. But the literary contents of these pages, by Mr. A. S. Levetus, are by no means above reproach. The English is both odd and clumsy. Here are a few specimens:—

"The count bore his disasters courageously, and leaving behind the least of all his treasures—for he left all to his creditors—he vanished....."

"It was built in 1706, and came over into the Schönborn family sixty years later, in 1846."

"The auditorium has three tiers of boxes, the lower one on to the parquet or stalls, and the parterre, which is the same as the pit except that fashionable people go there, for the seats are dear."

"Waldmüller had many contemporaries, among them Johann Nepomuk Geiger, who carved meerschäum pipes, one of them, representing 'The Destruction of Troy' and having no less than eighty figures, being sold to an Englishman for 2,000 florins."

"Vienna and round Vienna has much of Tilgner's work."

These instances could be added to, but they may suffice to show the style of this book. We are told of the view of a building being "fore-shortened" because a statue has been erected in front of it, of "painted gallery architectures" and "residence flats," and of the Emperor dressed "in ornate." But the author is worst in all questions concerning art. Perugino, Raphael, Andrea del Sarto, and Correggio are set down as belonging to the Venetian School, which "is also very good." We are told that Friedrich Schmidt, the architect of the magnificent Gothic Rathhaus, "went to Italy for his Rathhaus." The Tegetthoff monument meets with the author's disapproval, "because the granite column has a superfluity of ornament," and because it is "far too high for one to see the figure, however one may crane one's neck in search of a view." Mr. Levetus may be forgiven for ignoring the fact that the column is an almost exact copy of the Duilium column, but he might know that a monument of this type is not meant to be looked at from its base. The column is placed in a very open position, at the intersection of numerous wide streets and avenues, and can be seen to great advantage from whichever side it is approached.

But this is only an isolated instance of attempted criticism. On the whole, the author contents himself with explaining that the works of art are very beautiful and artistic. When he enters into details we come across such statements as this:—

"Here is Makart's original sketch to a 'Midsummer Night's Dream,' as also many beautiful miniatures also by Vienna artists, for this little gem is part and parcel of the history of art in the city."

Perhaps the compositor who set "Wechtenstein" for Liechtenstein, "badalchin" for baldaehin, "haupt ton" for haut ton, is responsible for the phonetic spelling of some of the masters' names; but the little word "and" placed midway in Dosso Dossi's name can hardly be his doing, and makes us suspect Mr. Levetus of being an accomplice in the perpetration of such spellings as Carnova, Van Hals, Tenier, Alleso Baldovinetti, Rigau, Tiapolo, Buiardini, Vivarihi, Philippine Leppi, and Luca Giordana.

Page after page is devoted to anecdotes and biographical notes of second or third rate artists, but Makart is dismissed with six lines—Makart, the only Austrian painter whose name has become widely known outside the confines of the dual empire. Two lines each are given to Schindler, Pettenkofen, and Canon, whilst Müller is not even mentioned.

The stage, the schools, the social life, and the politics of Vienna are treated in the same superficial manner. Thus, in speaking of the Home Office, Mr. Levetus says: "In this wing are the offices of the Minister President (Prime Minister), as also the greater part of the suite of rooms which form his dwelling, for he lives on the spot." To every resident in Vienna—and Mr. Levetus has lived in Vienna for years—it is known that Dr. von Koerber, the master politician who alone was able for five years to guide the ship of State through the turbulent waters of obstruction, the man who had no fewer than three palaces at his disposal, lived with his aged mother in modest bachelor's quarters, not in Fischer von Erlach's sumptuous building.

No allusion whatever is made to the burning question in Vienna, which gives the key-note to the social life of the town—the racial hatred between Gentile and Jew, which has assumed such proportions that the whole city is divided into two hostile camps, and social intercourse between Jew and Christian is made almost impossible.

"It would be well," says Mr. Levetus, "were a book written on all the great works which have found a home in Vienna. The number of collectors is very large, and it is rarely that one gets an opportunity of seeing them."

We should welcome such a book, but cannot recommend our author as a suitable person to write it.

A COMMITTEE of the Cobden Club, under the chairmanship of Mr. Shaw Lefevre, publishes, through Mr. Fisher Unwin, The Burden of Armaments, which is for the most part a plea for the reduction of expenditure upon the fleet. The Athenæum is not concerned with matters that affect current politics, so that we need only note that the language used with regard to Germany constitutes somewhat of an understatement: "It is true that certain fire-eaters and braggadocios in Germany talk loudly of efforts to rival England as regards her navy." The important point is that no one counts in Germany except the Kaiser, and that the note of alarm was sounded by the German Emperor himself. We admit that, in spite of recent controversies over an unimportant speech, the relations of the countries are better than they were some months or some years ago; but the German Emperor is busily engaged in trying to accelerate the rate of construction of his new battleships and to increase their number; and he is likely to be successful on both heads. It is necessary for us to look forward for some years, and clear that, while we may be happy on the side of the United States and of France, we cannot close our eyes to probabilities in the case of Germany and of Russia. There is no ground for considerable anticipation of German or Russian efforts, but there is ground for retaining a reasonable margin of superiority. The doctrine of the book before us is "that we should make an effort to return to the standard of strength and numbers, and consequently of expenditure, which was thought amply sufficient six years ago, immediately before the war in South Africa."

It may be taken as admitted that we should make every effort to reduce expenditure upon the army, and to check undue expenditure upon the fleet; but the particular test taken, of the Estimates of 1899, is rather empirical than scientific.

MESSRS. PICKERING & CHATTO's new catalogue comprises one of the most extensive and varied collections of tracts and pamphlets ever offered for sale, there being 2,933 publications described within the compass of 234 pages. Nearly all date from the seventeenth and early eighteenth centuries, and are so far as possible classified in sections. Those concerning Charles I., Charles II., the Commonwealth, and Cromwell include many of great scarcity and interest, the titles and even the imprints in the majority of instances being quoted in full. Pamphlets and tracts, from their ephemeral nature, frequently become excessively rare, and after a few decades indeed are often introuvable. The latter half of the seventeenth century was an age of pamphlets, but that such a number should be found together between the covers of one catalogue in 1905 is somewhat remarkable. Their interest is largely political, although a goodly number deal with economics, trade, and kindred subjects.

ANOTHER new catalogue which is noteworthy is that issued by Mr. Jacques Rosenthal, the well-known Munich bookseller. It comprises 600 entries, and includes upwards of 150 incunabula printed in Germany, Switzerland, Italy, Holland, Belgium, and Spain. The majority of these are more or less well known to bibliographers, but some are incorrectly described by Hain and others. Mr. Rosenthal has, however, been fortunate in acquiring a few which are unrecorded, and this fact gives his new catalogue a distinct bibliographical value. His No. 20 ("Antichristus"), 'Le Livre et Auctorites des Saints Docteurs,' with neither name of place, printer, nor date (but probably issued between 1470 and 1480), is an unknown edition, and differs considerably from all those described by the late Mlle. Pellechet. The text is in Latin and French, and there are 21 leaves with 20 fine woodcuts, one of which is reproduced. No. 81, 'Bonifacius VIII., sextus liber decretalium cum apparatu Joh. Andree professoris,' printed circa 1479, also without date, name of printer, or place, is another hitherto undescribed rarity, extending to 76 leaves folio. An unrecorded example of the Perpignan press of Jean Rosenbach, circa 1500, 'La verge Maria del Puix de França,' "en langue catalane," is both interesting and rare. Most important of all the unknown books is the 'Missale Wratislaviense,' No. 373, printed by Petrus Schoeffer, circa 1490. In addition to many other fine books, the catalogue records some manuscript Books of Hours, notably a magnificent example executed in Italy in 1497 for Giovanni Bentivoglio, with beautiful miniatures by Francesco Francia (1450-1517).

We have on our table The United States of America, by E. E. Sparks, Part II. (Putnam's),—Letters from Rome in 1903, by R. H. Edleston (Simpkin),—Rossini, by W. A. Bevan (Bell),—Blackie's English School Texts, edited by W. H. D. Rouse: Macaulay's First Chapter (Blackie),—The Works of R. W. Emerson: Vol. IV. Miscellaneous Pieces (Bell),—The History of the Isle of Sheppey, by A. A. Daly (Simpkin),—The Japanese Floral Calendar, by E. W. Clement (Kegan Paul),—Points in Punctuation, by J. Bygott and A. J. L. Jones (Jarrold),—Le Serment, by Jules David, edited by C. Hugon (Oxford, Clarendon Press),—Report of Proceedings at the Sixth Congress of the International Co-operative Alliance, held at Budapest, September, 1904 (P. S. King),—Analysis of Drawing, Painting, and Composing, by H. L. Moore (The Author, 31, Margravine Gardens, W.),—A Complete Class-Book of Naval Architecture, by W. J. Lovett (Longmans),—Notes and Questions in Physics, by J. S. Shearer (Macmillan),—Cottonseed Products, by L. L. Lamborn (Constable),—The Diseases of Society, by G. F. Lydston, M.D. (Lippincott),—The Oriflamme in Egypt, by C. H. Butcher (Dent),—Stolen Waters, by Lucas Cleeve (Fisher Unwin),—The Sherrods, by G. B. McCutcheon (Ward & Lock),—The Temptation of Anthony, by Alice M. Diehl (J. Long),—The Dynamic of Christianity, by E. M. Chapman (Gay & Bird),—The Spirit of God in Biblical Literature, by I. F. Wood (Hodder & Stoughton),—and A Theist's Apology, by W. Lloyd (P. Green). Among New Editions we have Free Trade, by Lord Avebury (Macmillan),—Forgotten Heroes, by the Rev. C. J. Casher, D.D. (Thynne),—Japanese Girls and Women, by Alice M. Bacon (Gay & Bird),—and The Laws of Bridge and a Guide to the Game, by Boaz (De La Rue).

LIST OF NEW BOOKS.

ENGLISH.

Theology.

Gammack (A. J.), Good Friday, 16mo, 2/6 net.
Strode (M.), My Little Book of Prayer, 16mo, boards, 2/6 net.
Torrey (R. A.), Real Salvation and Whole-Hearted Service, cr. 8vo, 3/6

Law.

Meares (J. W.), Indian Electricity Act, 1903, 10/6 net.
Roberts (J.), The Inventors' Guide to Patent Law and the New Practice, 8vo, 2/6 net.
Whiteley (G. C.), Licensing Act, 1904, cr. 8vo, 5/ net.

Fine Art and Archaeology.

Hubbard (A. J. and G.), Neolithic Dew-Ponds and Cattle-Ways, roy. 8vo, 3/6 net.

Poetry and the Drama.

Trevelyan (R. C.), The Birth of Parsival, 12mo, 3/6 net.

History and Biography.

Balkan Question, by various Writers, edited by L. Villari, 8vo, 10/6 net.
Browne (General Sir James), Life and Times, by J. J. M. Innes, 8vo, 18/ net.
Cassell's History of the Russo-Japanese War, illustrated, Vol. 1, roy. 8vo, 15/ net.
Churchill (Winston Spencer), by A. M. Scott, cr. 8vo, 3/6
Dufferin and Ava (Life of Marquis of), by Sir A. Lyall, 2 vols. 8vo, 35/ net.
Fraser (D.), A Modern Campaign, cr. 8vo, 6/
History of the Commune of 1871, translated by E. M. Aveling, 8vo, 12/6 net.
Holyoake (G. J.), Bygones Worth Remembering, 2 vols. 21/
Wellesley (Hon. F. A.), With the Russians in Peace and War, 8vo, 12/6
Wellington's Campaigns, Peninsula—Waterloo, also Moore's Campaign of Corunna, by C. W. Robinson: Part 1, Rolea to Busaco, 8vo, 3/6 net.
Wilson (H. W.), Japan's Fight for Freedom, Vol. 1, 12/6 net.

Geography and Travel.

Dickens Country (The), by F. G. Kitton, 8vo, 6/
Lhasa, by Percival Landon, 2 vols. royal 8vo, 42/ net.
Wall (J. C.), Shrines of British Saints, 8vo, 7/6 net.
With the Pilgrims to Mecca, by Hadji Khan and W. Sparrow, 8vo, 12/6 net.

Sports and Pastimes.

Sportsman's Year-Book, 1905, edited by A. W. Myers, 3/6 net.

Science.

Blondlot (R.), N Rays, translated by J. Garcin, 3/6 net.
Constant (T. E.), The Naked-Eye Anatomy of the Human Teeth, 8vo, 7/6 net.
Fanning (F. W. Burton), The Open-Air Treatment of Pulmonary Tuberculosis, cr. 8vo, 5/
Horner (J.), Tools for Engineers and Woodworkers, 9/ net.
Middleton (G. A. T.), Building Materials, 8vo, 10/ net.
Sequeira (J. H.), An Elementary Treatise on the Light Treatment for Nurses, cr. 8vo, 2/6

General Literature.

Allchin (W. H.), An Account of the Reconstruction of the University of London, Part 1, roy. 8vo, sewed, 2/6 net.
Alston (L.), Modern Constitutions in Outline, 2/6 net.
Ashton (M.), The Head of Gold, cr. 8vo, 6/
Burden of Armaments, by the Cobden Club, cr. 8vo, 3/6
Cameron (Mrs. L.), Rosamond Grant, cr. 8vo, 6/
Castaigne (A.), Fata Morgana, cr. 8vo, 6/
Cay (N.), A Foe in the Family, cr. 8vo, 6/
Clergy List, 1905, 8vo, 12/6
Cobb (T.), Sophy Bunce, cr. 8vo, 6/
Debrett's House of Commons and Judicial Bench, 1905, 8vo, 7/6 net.
De La Pasture (Mrs. H.), Peter's Mother, cr. 8vo, 6/
Dod's Parliamentary Companion, 1905, 18mo, limp, 4/6
Hatton (R.), Figure Composition, 8vo, 7/6 net.

Holdsworth (A. E.), A New Paolo and Francesca, cr. 8vo, 6/
James (H.), The Golden Bowl, cr. 8vo, 6/
Jeannie Jemima Jones, by the "Blunderland" Cartoonist, 8vo, 3/6
Johnson (O.), Nicole, cr. 8vo, 6/
McLeod (M. J.), The Culture of Simplicity, cr. 8vo, 3/6 net.
Miall (D.), The Powers of Darkness, cr. 8vo, 3/6
Municipal Year-Book, 1905, 8vo, 3/6 net.
Sheppard (A. T.), The Red Cravat, cr. 8vo, 6/
'Shipping World' Year-Book, 1905, cr. 8vo, 5/
Steuart (J. A.), The Rebel Wooing, cr. 8vo, 6/
Yellow War (The), by O., cr. 8vo, 6/

FOREIGN.

Theology.

Stählin (O.), Clemens Alexandrinus: Vol. I, Protrepticus u. Pædagogus, 13m. 50.

Fine Art and Archaeology.

Cain (G.), La Collection Dutuit, 1,000fr.
Claudin (A.), Histoire de l'Imprimerie en France au XVe et au XVIe Siècle, Vol. 3, 100fr.
Lapauze (H.), La Tour au Musée de Saint-Quentin, 100fr.
Roscher (W. H.), Die Sieben- u. Neunzahl im Kultus u. Mythos der Griechen, 4m.

Poetry.

Nolhac (P. de), Poèmes de France et d'Italie, 3fr. 50.

Philosophy.

Garbe (R.), Bhagavadgītā, aus dem Sanskrit übers., 4m.
Gomperz (H.), Weltanschauungslehre: Vol. I, Methodologie, 13m.

Bibliography.

Erman (W.) u. Horn (E.), Bibliographie der deutschen Universitäten, Part 2, 40m.
Récsy (V.), Incunabula et Hungarica Antiqua in Bibliotheca S. Montis Pannonie, 8m. 50.

History and Biography.

Gorce (P. de la), Histoire du Second Empire, Vol. 7, 8fr.

Philology.

Boor (C. de), Georgii Monachi Chronicon, ed., Vol. 2, 10m.
Diehl (E.), Procli Diadochi in Platonis Timæum Commentaria, II., 8m.

General Literature.

Bernard (T.), Amants et Voleurs, 3fr. 50.
Cardeline, Les Destinées Rivaies, 3fr. 50.
Nau (J. A.), Le Piéteur d'Amour, 3fr. 50.
Roux (H. le), Prisonniers Marocains, 3fr. 50.

THE ADVANCED HISTORICAL TEACHING FUND.

LAST July we gave an account of the second year's work of the Committee of Management. A further report has lately been issued, and a public meeting was held on Friday, February 3rd, with a view to secure sufficient money to carry on the lectures beyond the term for which the Committee had in the first instance been able to arrange with the funds (altogether about 650*l.*) entrusted to them by the donors and annual subscribers. This sum has provided the stipends of two lecturers—Mr. Hubert Hall and Mr. I. S. Leadam—for three years.

Mr. Hall having completed a year's course of lectures on the 'Sources, Diplomatic, and Palæography of English Official Historical Documents,' it was thought that a more practical character might be given to these lectures if they were utilized to meet academic requirements in connexion with post-graduate work in research for higher degrees at the London University. It was also felt that students who take modern history as a subject for the Honours Examinations required special assistance to enable them to use the historical texts prescribed for the mediæval period. A further object was to supply graduates and others engaged in research with a simple apparatus for textual criticism. Mediæval history is admittedly based, to a large extent, upon State documents, whether such as, having been utilized by the early chroniclers, are now lost, or those which are still in existence. Many of the latter have been printed in various collections of documents; but the plan of such editions does not enable the student to realize exactly the origin, nature, and form of these historical texts. Such a realization is an essential part of the intelligent study of historical documents, whether printed or in manuscript. Moreover, of late years critical editions and admirable reproductions in facsimile of early manuscripts have paved the way for a more complete and systematic study of European history by means of illustrative documents. A course of lectures on select historical documents, illustrating the internal development of England, Wales, Scotland, Ireland, and English possessions abroad during the Middle Ages, was given by Mr. Hall in Michaelmas Term, 1904. The object was to combine, so far as possible, a practical knowledge of the sources, published and unpublished, with a critical examination of the selected documents and texts. In connexion with each lecture a working bibliography, for the use of the students, was sketched and filled up provisionally in the "seminar," or class for private practical instruction. It will be still further revised and supplemented by the bibliography to be compiled for the course of lectures on the external relations of this country with her insular neighbours and dependencies and with continental States. This latter course is being given during the present (Lent) term. It is also contemplated to append to this bibliography a list of the original MSS. referred to in the course of the lectures, and used for the purpose of critical demonstration in the "seminar," a special feature of this course of lectures having been the opportunity afforded for personal examination by the students of nearly all the chief printed editions, facsimiles, and original MSS. referred to. The critical side of the instruction has been found a most interesting feature of the course. The process of selecting the proper authorities for particular subjects, and the discussion of their several editions and reputed value, should prove of the utmost assistance to those entering upon research work, either for academic honours or as a means of literary employment. Mr. Hall's lectures have been attended regularly by twenty students, including a professor and a research-fellow from universities in the United States, a Japanese student, five candidates for the Doctorate in the University of London, and graduates of English, Scottish, and Welsh universities.

Mr. I. S. Leadam has continued his courses of lectures on the Tudor Period, in connexion with original authorities. His classes have included several graduates engaged in educational work, and studying with a view to the Doctorate. One of these has recently produced a thesis on the 'Early History of the Hanse in England,' for which he was awarded the degree of M.A. by the University of Wales. Other post-graduate theses are in process of preparation for submission to the University of London. Another member has been engaged in search among various collections of MSS. for matter throwing light upon the political history of the first half of the eighteenth century, with a view to a future publication.

Both lecturers delivered their courses in the rooms of the London School of Economics and Political Science.

The Committee, having come to the end of their modest resources, decided to hold a public meeting to invite pecuniary support in order to develop their work, which had been carried on without interruption for three years with equal vigour and success, although limited by the smallness of the funds at their disposition. A public meeting was accordingly held at the theatre of the Royal United Service Institution on Friday, February 3rd, when the Right Hon. R. B. Haldane occupied the chair. There was a representative attendance. Mr. Haldane said that it was hardly necessary for him to remind them of the extraordinary situation in which London found itself, with no school of historical research. Probably there was not a capital more rich, if so rich, in records. He did not mean merely the Record Office, though that in itself signified a great deal. He did not mean merely the British Museum, though that was a great institution. He did not refer even to the private or semi-private libraries, such as those of the Inns of Court, in which there was much wealth of material. But he had in mind those obscure offices possessed of long historical continuity, and containing in themselves the documents in which reposed the traditions of long-forgotten controversies and of facts which had been occasionally contested. In the records of the Privy Council, to mention that alone, there was a vast mass of historical material. The Judicial Committee and the other committees of that body had accumulated in convenient form material which was unknown to the historian, and only waited for those who would wish to work upon it. Then, again, our great historical country houses must be taken into account. Their owners were generous, many of them large-minded men, who were willing to place their possessions at the disposition of those who would make what they contained valuable to the world.

Sir Spencer Walpole moved and Prof. C. H. Firth seconded:—

"That this meeting hears with satisfaction the report of the work done during the past three years under the direction of the Advanced Historical Teaching Fund Committee, and expresses its conviction that in the interest of historical studies and of higher education in the metropolis it is desirable that the work of the Committee should be continued, and that one or more lectureships in history should be placed on a permanent basis."

The resolution was carried unanimously. Other speakers were Sir James Ramsay, Mr. Sidney Lee, and Lord Davey. Dr. G. W. Prothero (Chairman of the Committee of Management) said that those who had had to do with the movement did not wish it to be confined to the study of historical documents alone. They regarded the study of those documents as a necessary substratum, but they desired to establish these lectureships as the nucleus or the beginning of a fully developed school of history within this metropolis. They wished to establish those lectureships, if possible, on a permanent foundation; and they wished to add to them lectureships in other studies, all of which might be said to belong to advanced history teaching. They wished to establish lectureships in what the Germans called Hilfswissenschaften—the auxiliary studies—the knowledge of money, the knowledge of seals, the knowledge of geography, and so on. They hoped to establish a staff which would lecture on municipal, social, and other branches. They looked forward to the time when a fully equipped historical school, such as existed in many places on the Continent, should exist here. He need hardly mention to them the multitude of universities in Germany which were admirably provided with historical teachers. All those teachers had had what were called their special classes for teaching the method of history. In our universities hitherto a good deal of history had been taught, but the method of studying history had not hitherto been taught except by a very few persons. The work of the Ecole des Chartes in France was well known. In America post-graduate study had made very great advances. They wanted their school in London to draw to itself persons who had taken their degrees, and who intended to devote themselves to the study of history, and they desired to equip them in the essentials which they must have at their command if they were to be historians. The Grotes, and other historians of that calibre, could never come into existence really unless the preliminary work had been done of dull, dry-as-dust research, as it was called. That was the conviction on which the Committee had gone, but they wished to go further and to develop a large and fully equipped school of history.

The result of the appeal at the meeting for support has been satisfactory. In donations and annual subscriptions for three years a little more than 500*l.* has been received or promised. Among the donors Mr. and Mrs. Fels have contributed 50*l.*, and among the subscribers Lord Davey has promised 30*l.* annually for three years, and Mr. W. E. Darwin 20*l.* a year for the same period. The Committee have every hope, therefore, of being able to continue their work for at least three years more. The members of the Committee of Management are: the Right Hon. James Bryce, M.P., Mr. W. A. S. Hewins, Dr. G. W. Prothero (chairman), the Master of Peterhouse (Dr. A. W. Ward), Mr. Sidney Webb, and Mr. Henry R. Tedder (hon. secretary and treasurer), secretary and librarian of the Athenæum Club.

DRUMMOND AT ST. GERMAINS.

King's College, Aberdeen.

In calling attention, in last week's Athenæum, to Drummond's letter purporting to describe the fair at St. Germain, no mention was made of a possible solution of the chronological difficulty, which is not without support from internal evidence of style. The reference to the heroine of the 'Astrée' proves nothing against 1607 being accepted as the missing date, since we now know that D'Urfé's romance was first printed in that year (cf. 'Catalogue des Livres du Baron James de Rothschild,' Paris, 1887, vol. ii. p. 197). On the other hand, the allusion to Marino points, as has been shown, to 1618 or later. May it not be, then, that we have to do with a literary rifacimento of old "notes de voyage," in which the writer sacrifices one of the unities to show the extent of his reading?

JOHN PURVES.

CROMWELL ON SIR JOHN PALGRAVE.

Rosslyn, Upper Sydenham.

DR. GWENOGVRYN EVANS'S discovery of a new Cromwell letter (given in The Athenæum of February 4th last) is particularly interesting, as it was already well known that such a letter was written, and even, in part, what its contents were. It is dated June 13th, 1643. On June 15th the Committee of the Eastern Association dispatched the following to Sir Thomas Barrington and the rest of the Deputy Lieutenants of Essex:—

"Gentlemen,—Having received a letter to second former desires from Colonell Cromwell for the speedy advance of Sr John Pagroves regimt out of Wesbich and of our three companies sent out of our garison, according to the Lord Generall's comande for the increase of the Parlm't forces under the Lord Grey of Groby, for the giving checke to the enemy in his insoleney, and seeing the Queene is on her march with 1200 horse and 3000 foote as credibely informed by Colonell Cromwell's letter, and that their forces are beneath that number, we cannot but againe and againe represent unto you the great necessity of replenishing our garison with those three foote companies which we have earnestly desired of you by our last, seing we have but one voluntier company in Cambridge.....We pray you faile us not with supply of moneys, for else our garison forces may mutiny and disband, and ten brave peeces of Ordinance all almost mounted for service, besides a good fort, and all well furnished, be a pray to the enemy and a rendivous for the enemy to annoy the counties in association."—Egerton MS. 2646, fol. 267.

It will be noted that the Committee did not share Cromwell's confidence in the safety of their county. They quote the alarming part of his letter, but discreetly omit the rest, and use his statements as a text for their urgent application for more forces to protect Cambridge itself.

It is impossible to speak confidently without seeing the original, but I venture to suggest that the phrase printed by Dr. Evans "Holland is frou teen [sic]" should probably read "Holland is fronteer"—i.e., the fens of Holland formed a barrier against the enemy on the north. Horsea Bridge—carrying the Peterborough road over into Cambridgeshire—was an important military position. A year later, when the Royalists had seized Crowland, in the fens, one of the directions from the Derby House Committee to the Committee of the Association was to send forces to Horsea Bridge "to keep that pass" ('S. P. Dom., Interregnum,' E 19, pp. 71-3).

The letter discovered by Dr. Gwenogvryn Evans was written from Nottingham, where Lord Grey of Groby, Major-General of the Midland Counties Association, had been joined by Cromwell, Hobart, and the younger Hotham, with a view to effecting a junction with Lord Fairfax's army in Yorkshire.

Sir Edward Ashley, or Astley, was one of the Norfolk Astleys, nephew and also son-in-law to Sir Jacob or Lord Astley, the well-known Royalist commander. SOPHIE C. LOMAS.

P.S.—There is another missing letter from Cromwell to the Committee of the Eastern Association, written in the summer of 1643; a letter received at Cambridge on July 23rd. Is there any hope that this also may be found?

CHAUCEER AND BOCCACCIO.

Fiveways, Burnham, Bucks, February 8th, 1905.

In his article on Chaucer in the 'Dictionary of National Biography' Prof. Hales, after discussing the possibility of Chaucer's having made the acquaintance of Petrarch and Boccaccio on the occasion of his first visit to Italy in 1372-3, offers the tempting suggestion that Chaucer "may have been present at Boccaccio's first lecture on the 'Divina Commedia' on August 3rd, 1373." Unfortunately, Prof. Hales is in error as to the date of this lecture. As a matter of fact, the petition of the Florentines for the establishment of the Dante chair was not taken into consideration by the Signoria until August 9th in that year, and the inaugural lecture was not delivered until more than two months later, namely, on October 23rd, 1373. This we know for certain from an entry in the diary of a fellow-citizen of Boccaccio, Guido Monaldi, who, among the events of the year 1373, records: "Domenica a di ventitrè di Ottobre cominciò a leggere il Dante M. Giovanni Boccaccio." As we know, equally for certain, that Chaucer was back in England on November 22nd, 1373, on which day he received his pension in person, the possibility that he attended Boccaccio's first lecture on Dante in Florence a month previously must be regarded as somewhat slender. I have no data at hand for estimating the length of time required for the journey between Florence and London in the fourteenth century; but seeing that in the eighteenth, in the days of posting, it took from ten to twelve days for Horace Walpole's letters (travelling with dispatches in the Secretary of State's bag) to reach Florence from London, it does not appear probable that Chaucer, four hundred years earlier, can have covered the distance within the short space of thirty days. Consequently, I am afraid the pleasing picture, suggested by Prof. Hales, of the future narrator of 'The Canterbury Tales' seated at the feet of the author of 'The Decameron' must be withdrawn from the Chaucer gallery.

PAGET TOYNBEE.

THE SPRING PUBLISHING SEASON.

MESSRS. SWAN SONNENSCHNEIN & CO.

announce: in History, Geography, Biography, &c.: The Growth of the Manor, by Prof. Vinogradoff;—The Races of South Africa, their Migrations and Invasions, by George W. Stow;—A Forgotten Heroine: Queen Maria Sophia of Naples, by Clara Tschudi, translated by E. H. Hearn;—Dictionary of Indian Biography, by C. E. Buckland, C.I.E., from 1750 to the present time;—Memories of Madras, by Sir Charles Lawson. In Philosophy and Theology: Physiological Psychology, a translation of the fifth and wholly rewritten German edition (1902-3), by Prof. E. B. Titchener, in 3 vols.;—The Bible from the Standpoint of the Higher Criticism: The New Testament, by R. Balmforth;—The History of Philosophy, by Dr. J. E. Erdmann (fifth German edition, revised by W. B. Erdmann), an English abridgment, translated and edited by W. S. Hough. Science and Technology: Student's Text-Book of Zoology, by Adam Sedgwick, Vol. II.;—The Biology of British Politics, by C. H. Harvey;—and new editions of Sanatoria for Consumptives in Various Parts of the World, by F. R. Walters, revised and enlarged; Handbook of Systematic Botany, by Dr. E. Warming, edited by Prof. M. C. Potter; Introduction to the Study of Organic Chemistry, by J. Wade; and An Elementary Text-Book of Botany, by S. H. Vines. In Belles-Lettres and Fiction: A New Classical Library, edited by Dr. Emil Reich, including translations from Herodotus, Plato, Plutarch, Tacitus, and the Pandects;—The Sound of a Voice that is Still: Passages from the Writings of Clifford Harrison;—Random Recollections, by Pearce Morrison;—The Little Cyclopædia of Common Things, by Sir G. W. Cox, brought up to date by F. B. Sonnenschein;—Dictionary of German Quotations, by Lilian Dalbiac;—Dictionary of Spanish Quotations, by the late T. B. Harbottle;—Bendish, by W. St. Clair;—A Queen of Unrest, by Harry Tighe;—When the World Went Wry, by M. F. Wilson. In Education: A Practical French Grammar, by F. W. Aveling;—Arithmetical Examples, by J. Logan;—new editions of The Kindergarten System; The Student's Pestalozzi; and The Cyclopædia of Education;—and Technical Education in Evening Schools, by C. H. Creasey.

MESSRS. DUCKWORTH & CO.'S

announcements include: Critical Essays and Fragments, by S. A. Strong, with Memoir by Lord Balcarras;—A Life of William Shakespeare, by W. J. Rolfe;—Ideals and Realities in Russian Literature, by Prince Kropotkin;—Metaphysical Phenomena, by Dr. Joseph Maxwell, translated by Mrs. Finch;—Auguste Rodin, by Camille Maclair;—Albert Dürer, by T. Sturge Moore;—Giotto, by Basil de Sélincourt;—Pisanello, by G. F. Hill;—Velazquez, by Auguste Bréil;—The Grey Brethren, by Michael Fairless;—A Modern Mystic's Way;—The Vicissitudes of Evangeline, by Elinor Glyn;—The Disciple's Wife, by Vincent Brown;—Progress, by R. B. Cunningham-Graham;—The House of Barnkirk, by Amy McLaren;—Gossip, by Benjamin Swift;—The Child, by Karin Michaëlis;—and After London, by Richard Jefferies, a new edition.

MR. NUTT

has in hand: Bloomsbury, by C. F. Keary;—To Windward, by H. C. Rowland;—The Three-Cornered Hat (El Sombrero de los Picos), by P. Alarcon, translated by Lady Goodenough;—The House in the Woods, by Arthur Henry;—Gubbio, History, Legend, and Archaeology, by L. McCracken;—India and the Apostle Thomas, by the Right Rev. A. E. Medlycott;—and The English and Scottish Popular Ballads, edited by F. J. Child, with Introduction by G. L. Kittredge.

SALE.

MESSRS. HODGSON included in their sale last week the following: Gould's Birds of Great Britain, 5 vols. morocco, 51l. Smith's Catalogue Raisonné of the Works of the Dutch, Flemish and French Painters, 9 vols., 28l. Burlington Fine-Arts Club Catalogues of the Netherlandish and Ferrara-Bologna Schools, 2 vols., 8l. 12s. 6d. Hakluyt's Voyages, the new reprint in 12 vols., 7l. 12s. 6d. The Edinburgh Edition of Scott, 48 vols., 9l. 15s. Kipling's Works, édition de luxe, 22 vols., 10l. 5s. Freeman's Norman Conquest, 6 vols., 5l. 10s. Cayley's Mathematical Papers, 14 vols., 7l. 12s. 6d. The First French Translation of Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress, 12mo, 1685, 15l. Fox and Burnyeat's New-England Fire Brand Quenched, 1679, 10l.

Literary Gossip.

AMONG the articles which will appear in the March number of The Independent Review will be the following: 'Recollections of Mr. Gladstone,' by Mr. C. S. Roudell; 'Watts and National Art,' by Mr. Laurence Binyon; 'A Levantine Messiah,' by Mr. H. N. Brailsford; 'A Ticinese Village,' by Prof. James Sully; and a review of Myers's 'Posthumous Writings,' by Mr. Arthur Sidgwick.

MR. FISHER UNWIN will publish this spring a volume by Mr. C. F. G. Masterman, entitled 'The Peril of Change: Essays written in Time of Tranquillity.' Through study of contemporary literature and religious and social changes the author endeavours to read the signs of the time. The attitude is that of expectancy, in a passing period of quietness, before the coming of a time of disturbance. The book includes notices of the men of the age which is passing — Gladstone, Spencer, Henley, Sidgwick, Myers, and others; essays dealing with some writers of the younger generation; and examinations of recent ideas in thought and the newer tendencies of society, and of the influence of religion on the life of to-day.

MESSRS. HUTCHINSON & Co. announce the early publication of a new historical work by the author of 'A Court in Exile,' the Marchesa Vitelleschi. In her first book she dealt with the house of Stuart from the abdication of James II. to the death of Cardinal York; in her new work 'The Romance of Savoy' the Marchesa tells the story of another Stuart, Anna Maria d'Orleans, niece of Charles II. and wife of Victor Amadeus II., Duke of Savoy. The two volumes contain several inedited letters and many illustrations reproduced by special permission of the Italian royal family.

MESSRS. METHUEN will publish immediately a book by Mr. James Douglas, entitled 'The Man in the Pulpit.' It contains about forty impressionist portraits of popular preachers, ranging from the late Dr. Temple to the present Dr. Torrey, and including agnostic revivalists. The method adopted is an audacious experiment in literary caricature.

THE copyrights of Mr. Aubrey de Vere's poetical works have passed into the possession of Messrs. Burns & Oates. Mr. de Vere used to say that he could easily be well off—he had only to stop publishing. But the Irish poor of Westminster, to whom he bequeathed his volumes of verse, have already benefited by the bequest in a substantial sum.

MR. G. B. BURGIN's new novel 'The Marble City' is to be published immediately by Messrs. Hutchinson & Co. The author has gone, as usual, to Canada for his background, and uses the reported but little-known existence of a buried city and its treasure as the main plot of his story. Though an Englishman by birth, Mr. Burgin is a British North American by adoption, and the little village of Four Corners, where the principal action of this story takes place, he has made peculiarly his own.

THE Council of the Royal Historical Society has nominated the Rev. William Hunt, a vice-president of the Society, for election as President in the place of Dr. G. W. Prothero, whose term of office expires this month. Dr. Hunt's exceptionally wide range of historical knowledge and permanent residence in London should prove valuable qualifications for the post.

Temple Bar for March contains a paper on 'Facts, Fallacies, and Curiosities of Taxation,' by Mr. Benjamin Taylor. The Rev. S. C. Watkins, in a paper on 'Scientific Birdnesting,' advocates observation and notes rather than pillage. In 'A Byway' H. J. M. describes Viterbo, and Miss H. H. Colvill writes on her experiences 'From South to North in Spain.'

A CORRESPONDENT points out that Mr. A. C. Manston is in error last week, if he refers to the absence of accent in Barbey d'Aurevilly's name as a fault. So Barbey himself spelt it, as may be seen, he adds, from the title-page of 'Les Diaboliques,' or any other of his works.

MESSRS. LONGMAN write to explain that the new edition of the 'Verney Memoirs' noticed by us last week is not a reissue of the first two volumes, but is reduced from the original four-volume edition published in 1892-9.

MR. JAMES THIN, of Edinburgh, has reprinted his interesting reminiscences of Edinburgh booksellers and publishers, in a small volume, for private circulation.

Macmillan's Magazine for March contains an article on 'British Seamen for British Ships,' in which Mr. Wulff Rice describes the existing unsatisfactory state of our mercantile marine; Mr. Lewis F. Day discusses 'The Profession of Art'; 'Mole-Warfare' deals with the construction and firing of a mine-gallery by Japanese engineers; S. G. Tallentyre begins with 'Diderot' a series of articles on "The Fellow-Workers of Voltaire"; and a lengthy article on 'Kurds and Christians,' by Mr. F. R. Earp, embodies the results of personal observation.

THE Senatus of Edinburgh University has offered the honorary degree of D.D. to the Rev. Alexander Lawson, Professor of English Literature in St. Andrews University, and of LL.D. to Mr. Alexander Graham Bell, of Washington, Prof. Cheyne, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, Prof. George A. Gibson, Dr. J. H. Jackson, Dr. William Keen, Dr. Augustus Waller, and Col. Sir F. E. Younghusband.

THE members of the Central Committee of the International Associations of the Press will visit London, on the occasion of their spring meeting, during the first week of May, devoting May 4th, 5th, and 6th to their deliberations. The Committee of the British International Association of Journalists is busy arranging a programme for the reception of its colleagues, in which it hopes to combine business and pleasure as efficiently as it did in 1900. The last meeting in London is still remembered as specially successful, because it was not overcrowded either with work or entertainment. The main business of the May séance, which may possibly be held in the hall of the Institute of Journalists, is to arrange the tenth Congress of the Press, which opens at Liège on August 27th.

THE Librairie Ollendorff begins this week the issue of a new edition of the complete works of Victor Hugo, in forty volumes, of which four will comprise unpublished materials. This edition promises to be the final one, so far as such things can be final. It is being printed at the Imprimerie Nationale. The first volume in the series is 'Notre Dame de Paris.' Attention may be here called to the success which has attended M. A. Fayard's bold experiment of publishing novels by first-rate authors, illustrated by the best artists, at 95 centimes per volume. The series was started twelve months ago with M. Bourget's 'Cruelle Énigme,' with seventy-five illustrations by A. Calbet. It was intended to limit it to twelve volumes, but as over one million copies have been sold, the publisher has decided to continue it, and some hitherto unpublished works will be included. The books are beautifully printed on fine paper, and altogether marvels of cheapness.

JUST as we go to press we regret to hear of the death of General Lewis Wallace, the author of 'Ben Hur' and other books. 'Ben Hur' sold enormously, but 'The Fair God' was the best of the general's stories—a powerful and romantic treatment of the defeat of Montezuma by Cortes.

THE love-letters received by Victor Hugo from Juliette Drouet have lately been found in Guernsey, and will shortly be printed. Their discoverer and editor is Mr. H. Wellington Wack, an American friend of M. François Coppée. Hugo's own letters appeared some time since.

SOME interesting particulars are afforded by the Bibliographie de la France of the sale of the books of M. Anatole France. His "Histoire Contemporaine" has been most successful, 'L'Orme du Mail' being in its 77th edition, 'Le Mannequin d'Osier' in its 75th, 'L'Anneau d'Améthyste' in its 69th, and 'Monsieur Bergeret à Paris' in its 55th. His other most popular books are 'Le Crime de Sylvestre Bonnard,' 85 editions, and 'Le Lys Rouge,' 86. After these there is a big drop to 'Thaïs' and 'La Rôtisserie de la Reine Pédauque,' 59 and 51 editions respectively.

WE note the publication of the following Parliamentary Papers: Numerical List and Index to the Sessional Printed Papers of February 17th, 1903, to August 14th, 1903 (1s. 9d.); and Appendix to the Seventeenth Report on National Education, Ireland, Section IV., List of Schools in Operation (1s. 3d.).

SCIENCE

A History of the County of Warwick. By H. Arthur Doubleday and W. Page. Vol. I. (Constable & Co.)

THE first of the four great volumes assigned to Warwickshire by the "Victoria County History" scheme follows on the lines of its predecessors—that is to say, the first half is given up to the various branches of natural history, and the second to a series of treatises on man and his works, from prehistoric times down to the Domesday Survey.

It is more usual in notices of fine works of this description to reserve any remarks on plans or illustrations for a brief concluding paragraph. There are, however, few matters connected with book-making in which there has been so great an advance in the last quarter of a century, or even in the last decade, as in that of cartography. The latest methods have been so happily used for the maps of this volume, and so much care has been taken to secure their accuracy, that we must draw particular attention to their number, merits, and practical usefulness. The geological map aptly illustrates Mr. Cantril's article, and although there is more sameness in the general level of Warwickshire—which only rises to modest undulations, varying less than 300 feet in altitude—than in some of its neighbours, the plan of its surface formation, with the occasional patches of eruptive rock, as shown on the chart, is of genuine interest to other than technical geologists. More particularly is this the case if this first map is studied or consulted side by side with the orographical map, which clearly signifies, by its varying colours, the approximate height above sea-level of any given district, parish, or village.

Mr. J. E. Bagnall gives a comprehensive survey of the flora of the county. It is not so brilliant as in some shires; but the well-wooded district around Atherstone and Hartshill—with such characteristic rarities as the wood vetch (Vicia sylvatica), or that scarce bramble the Rubus bloxamianus—differs much from the valley of the Leam or the Stour, and still more from the parts round Chester-ton, Itchington Holt, and Southam Holt, where brackish pools are to be found that give birth to such unexpected maritime plants as the sea club-rush or the celery. Hence a coloured map of the whole county, divided into carefully defined botanical districts, planned out by Mr. Bagnall, will be particularly helpful to a botanist either resident in the shire or sojourning for a time in this much-visited county. This map presents ten separate botanical districts, called respectively Tame, Blythe, Anker, Avon, Leam, Sow, Stour, Alne, Arrow, and Cherwell, after the rivers into which they drain. All of these form part of the basin of the Severn, except the Cherwell, which drains into the Thames.

In following up the archaeological traces of man, maps are of the highest value, and afford at once to the intelligent a speedy and comprehensive grip of the particular period. Good as is Mr. Clinch's succinct article on early man in Warwickshire, it gains immensely in perspicuity by the admirable illustration which is put before it. This map is given in white, the adjacent parts of other shires being darkly shaded so as to throw it up. The county area bears five varieties of marks or symbols in red, which distinguish between (a) settlements and camps, (b) interments, (c) drift implements, (d) miscellaneous finds, such as neolithic implements, and (e) bronze implements.

Mr. Haverfield discourses on Romano-British Warwickshire—and no one could do it better—in some twenty-five well-illustrated pages; and again the map prefixed gives special value to the treatise. It is on the same general plan as the one on prehistoric man, that is, it bears red symbols on a white ground. Two sets of symbols are used to denote permanent civilized occupation: a square for a village, and a triangle for a villa. Then there are red dots for miscellaneous finds, with red lines for Roman roads, and dotted red lines for doubtful Roman roads. In this case it is an advantage to have the various red symbols continued on the darker background of the adjacent counties, for, as it is needless to say, the Romans knew nothing of our later shire boundaries. From this map it is evident that the county must have been very frequently traversed in parts by the Romans, though the great stretch of forest land in the north-western half of it was but little known to them. In fact, as Mr. Haverfield points out, the position of Warwickshire is such that almost all who then wished to go from the south to the north of our island, or vice versa, must have touched this county. First, the great and lengthy road known as Rycknield or Icknield Street passes through Alcester, and, after leaving the county, enters it again, first to pass through Birmingham, and thence on to Lichfield. Secondly, the Watling Street, or great road north from London through St. Albans to Wroxeter, enters, or rather begins to border, the county at Dunsland, four miles south-east of Rugby; thence to Mancetter it divides Warwickshire, first from Northamptonshire and then from Leicestershire. At Mancetter it runs through the north of the county, leaving it at Fazeley below Tamworth. And, thirdly, Warwickshire is traversed by that cross-country Roman road known since Saxon times as the Fosse; it enters the county at Stretton-on-the-Fosse, in the extreme south of the shire, passes through Chesterton, Stretton-on-Dunsmore, and Street Ashton, and thence over the Watling Street at High Cross into Leicestershire. The map marks yield but five sites where evidence has been found of settled occupation, namely, High Cross, Mancetter, Chesterton, Alcester, and Cave's Inn. The last named, which is little known, is on the eastern edge of the county, on Watling Street, about half-way between Rugby and Lutterworth. Of villa residences, or country houses of Roman landowners, there are but four shown on the map throughout the whole shire. The paucity of this kind of settlement in a district crossed by important roads seems somewhat remarkable, and is ably discussed and explained by Mr. Haverfield.

The Anglo-Saxon remains of the county are not of particular moment, but the map which shows the sites of interments and miscellaneous finds illustrates well Mr. Smith's short article.

Domesday has again, we are glad to notice, fallen into the hands of Mr. J. H. Round, in whose scholarly introduction there is not an involved sentence or a single unnecessary word. But if his treatise were not lucid and interesting, it would be almost surprising to note how much could be learnt and readily apprehended from the special map of this part of the great survey. On this every manor mentioned in Domesday is entered, those belonging to the king in red capitals, those of the Abbey of Coventry in smaller red type, those of the Count of Meulan (the chief lay tenant) in black capitals, and other manors and holdings in ordinary type. The general position of the ten hundreds into which the county was divided in Domesday time is also shown on the map. The varying density of the names on the chart is a guide to the natural characteristics of the particular district. This density is greatest in the fertile valleys of the Avon and the Arrow, whilst the names are far apart in the forest district of Arden in the west and north-west of the county.

The last and most useful article in this volume is on 'The Ancient Defensive Earthworks' of Warwickshire, by Mr. Wil-loughby Gardner. In addition to over thirty distinct plans of the more remarkable examples, there is a preliminary map of the whole county, whereon are marked seven different classes of these earthworks by distinct symbols. It is scarcely possible to exaggerate the value of such a chart as this of a subject which has received definite and satisfactory treatment within the last few years.

The illustrations of this volume, apart from cartography and plans, are good of their kind and fairly numerous. The frontispiece, a winter picture of Warwick Castle, by Mr. W. Hyde, is a beautiful drawing and well reproduced. We notice one piece of carelessness in editing. Both Mr. Clinch in 'Early Man' and Mr. Smith in 'Anglo-Saxon Remains' have been allowed to describe and illustrate the fine set of Late Celtic bronze discs, ornamented with spiral and enamel work, found at Chesterton, and now in the Warwick Museum. These are so essentially Celtic that the handling of them ought to have been left to Mr. Clinch. It is a pity, too, that the editors cannot agree to one term for this peculiar artistic and effective Late Celtic pattern. To our mind "divergent spiral" is the best and most descriptive phrase, a term, we believe, of Mr. Romilly Allen's coining; but it does not matter so much what it is if only one is employed. As it is, in this one volume Mr. Clinch is content to call the self-same pattern briefly "spiral"; Mr. Smith gives us the choice between "flamboyant spirals" and "trumpet-shaped curves"; whilst Mr. Haverfield (who has his own little say and illustration of it, though it is not Roman) speaks of "returning spirals."

SOCIETIES.

ASTRONOMICAL.—Feb. 10.—Annual Meeting.—Prof. H. H. Turner, President, in the chair.—The Secretaries read the Annual Report of the Council, including obituaries of deceased Fellows and Associates, reports of observatories, and notes on the progress of astronomy during the past year.—The President delivered an address, describing the work of Prof. Lewis Boss, of the Dudley Observatory, Albany, N.Y., to whom the Gold Medal of the Society had been awarded for his long-continued work on the positions and proper motions of fundamental stars. The medal was handed to his Excellency the American Ambassador for transmission to Prof. Boss.—The Jackson-Gwilt Gift and (bronze) Medal were awarded to Mr. John Tebbutt for his important observations of comets and double stars, and his services to astronomy in Australia, extending over forty years.—The ballot for officers and Council for the ensuing year resulted as follows: President, Mr. W. H. Maw; Secretaries, Mr. T. Lewis and Mr. E. T. Whittaker; Treasurer, Major E. H. Hills.

GEOLOGICAL.—Feb. 1.—Dr. J. E. Marr, President, in the chair.—Messrs. C. Griffith, V. S. Sambasiva Iyer, G. M. Lawford, W. R. G. Rivington, F. E. Studd, C. A. Süsmilch, and Isidore Tom were elected Fellows.—The communication read was 'On the Sporangium-like Organs of Glossopteris browniana, Brongn.,' by Mr. E. A. Newell Arber.

SOCIETY OF ANTIQUARIES.—Feb. 9.—Sir Henry Howorth, V.P., in the chair.—The attention of the Society having been called to the fact that the ancient bridge at Claypole, Lincolnshire, was threatened with destruction and the substitution of an iron bridge in its place, the following resolution was proposed from the chair, seconded by Lord Balcarras, and carried unanimously: "It having been reported to the Society of Antiquaries of London that the ancient bridge at Claypole has been seriously injured by the passage of steam traction engines and other heavy traffic, the Society wishes to express its opinion that the bridge, which is an unusually perfect example of the fourteenth century and a very picturesque object, is of great historical value, and hopes that those responsible for its custody will take such steps as are necessary for its preservation." It was also resolved that copies of the resolution be sent to the Kesteven County Council and the Claypole Rural District Council.—Mr. Henry Laver, Local Secretary for Essex, exhibited, and read some notes descriptive of, a number of urns, &c., from a Late Celtic grave found near Colchester.—The Rev. C. V. Collier communicated an account of a discovery of tessellated pavements and other vestiges of a Roman house at Harpham, E.R. Yorks. Drawings of the pavements found were also exhibited. One of them represents the very unusual device of a maze or labyrinth.—Mr. J. C. Stebbing communicated a photograph and rubbing of a cast-iron grave-slab in Rotherfield Church, Sussex, apparently of the fifteenth century, bearing for device a doubly impressed ornamental cross.—The Rev. H. J. Gepp, through Mr. Lionel Cust, exhibited a painted wooden memorial tablet from Adderbury Church, Oxon, with portraits of Thomas More, gent. (ob. 1586), and his wife Mary, daughter of Anthony Bustard, Esq.

ENTOMOLOGICAL.—Feb. 1.—Mr. F. Merrifield, President, in the chair.—The President announced that he had appointed Dr. T. A. Chapman, Dr. F. A. Dixey, and Prof. E. B. Poulton as Vice-Presidents for the session 1905-6.—Mr. H. St. J. Donisthorpe exhibited specimens of Oligota granaria found in a granary at Holborn, the only other localities reported hitherto being Shoe Lane and Scarborough.—Mr. W. J. Kaye exhibited a specimen of the Erycinid butterfly Mesosemia cuneata, pinned in its natural position of rest to show its resemblance to the head of a small mammal, such as a mouse.—Dr. T. A. Chapman exhibited a variety of the female of Lycena melanops. As a mere aberration it was interesting, but it was of value as showing that the position in the genus for long accorded to the species, whether by accident or design, close to the Arion-Euphemus group, was correct.—Mr. F. Enock exhibited a living female of H. defoliaria, taken as late as February 1st, at rest on an oak, and another female taken January 28th in the same wood at Bexley. He also exhibited on behalf of Mr. L. Newman, of Bexley, a male Notodontia ziczac crossed with a female N. dromedarius, with two hybrids bred, together with typical larva of N. dromedarius and hybrids, the colour of the hybrids being that of dromedarius, while the markings were those of ziczac.—Mr. O. E. Janson exhibited a living specimen of Aceridium aegyptium, L., found in a cauliflower in Bloomsbury, and probably imported from Italy.—Mr. G. C. Champion exhibited two specimens of Malachius barnevillei, Puton, captured by Mr. Thouless at Hunstanton in June, 1899, a recent addition to the British list.—Mr. H. W. Andrews exhibited male and female specimens of Machimus rusticus, M., a rare Asilid, taken in cop. at Freshwater, Isle of Wight, on August 13th, 1903.—Mr. W. J. Lucas exhibited a female specimen of Panorpa cognata, taken at Byfleet Canal on August 23rd, 1904. The species occurs at Folkestone, and is said to be found in the New Forest. It is a little difficult at times to identify the female alone, but Mr. K. J. Morton also had identified the specimen exhibited as P. cognata. For comparison he also exhibited female specimens of P. communis and P. germanica.—Mr. Gilbert Smith read a paper by himself and Dr. D. Sharp, entitled 'A Revision of the Genus Criocephalus, with Notes on the Habits of Asemum striatum and Criocephalus fuscus.—Mr. G. C. Champion contributed 'Notes on another Excursion to Spain,' by himself and Dr. T. A. Chapman.—Dr. T. A. Chapman read papers 'On the Matrimonial Habit of the Species Heterogynis, Ramb.' and 'On the Pupal Suspension of Thais.'—Mr. E. Meyrick communicated a paper on 'Lepidoptera from New Zealand.'

METEOROLOGICAL.—Feb. 15.—Mr. Richard Bentley, President, in the chair.—Mr. E. Mawley presented his Report on the Phenological Observations for 1904. The weather of the phenological year ending with November, 1904, was chiefly remarkable for the persistent rains in January and February, the absence of keen frosts in May, the long continuance of hot and dry weather in July, and the small rainfall during the autumn. Throughout the year wild plants came into flower behind their usual dates, but at no period were the departures from the average exceptional. Such spring migrants as the swallow, cuckoo, and nightingale made their appearance in the country at as nearly as possible their usual time. The yield of wheat per acre was the smallest since 1895, while those of barley, beans, and peas were also deficient. On the other hand, there were good crops of oats, potatoes, and mangels. The best farm crops of the year were, however, those of hay, swedes, and turnips. Both corn and hay were harvested in excellent condition. Apples were everywhere abundant, and all the small fruits yielded well, especially strawberries; but there was only a moderate supply of pears and plums.—The other papers read were 'Observations of Meteorological Elements made during a Balloon Ascent at Berlin on September 1st, 1904,' by Dr. H. Elias and Mr. J. H. Field; and 'The Winds of East London, Cape Colony,' by Mr. J. R. Sutton.

INSTITUTION OF CIVIL ENGINEERS.—Feb. 14.—Sir Guilford L. Molesworth, President, in the chair.—The papers read were 'Alfreton Second Tunnel,' by Mr. E. F. C. Trench, and 'The Reconstruction of Moncreiffe Tunnel,' by Mr. D. McLellan.

ANTHROPOLOGICAL INSTITUTE.—Feb. 14.—Prof. W. Gowland, President, in the chair.—Dr. A. C. Haddon gave a most interesting exhibition of native dances and ceremonies from the Torres Straits. In addition Dr. C. S. Myers sang several of the native songs which are sung at the dances, and accompanied himself on a native drum.—Mr. E. B. Haddon then read a paper on 'The Dog-motive in Bornean Design,' which was illustrated by many excellent lantern-slides. Mr. Haddon pointed out that the methods of tattooing are constant among the tribes of Borneo, and that most of the patterns are derived from the Kenyah and Kayan tribes. He demonstrated by slides how the different patterns are all derived from the dog-motive. The rosette pattern, for instance, which is tattooed on the shoulders of the men, is directly derived from the eye of a dog, although the Iban tribe, who have adopted the pattern, call it by the name of various fruits and flowers. The conventional tattoo pattern found on the firearms of Kenyah and Kayan men in Sarawak, although modified out of all recognition, is also clearly derived from the same source, as it is named asu, which means dog. From this same pattern a series can be traced to the Iban pattern, which is said to represent a scorpion, but which was clearly originally a dog. Similarly the so-called prawn pattern was shown to be derived from the dog-motive.

MATHEMATICAL.—Feb. 9.—Prof. A. R. Forsyth, President, in the chair.—Mr. E. Cunningham was elected a Member.—Dr. L. N. G. Filon was admitted into the Society.—The President referred to the loss sustained by the Society by the death of Mr. R. Tucker, who held the office of Secretary for thirty-five years, and moved a resolution of condolence with Mr. Tucker's surviving relatives. This was seconded by Dr. Glaisher, and carried unanimously.—The following papers were communicated: 'On the General Theory of Transfinite Numbers and Order-Types,' by Dr. E. W. Hobson; 'On a Certain Function defined by a Power Series,' by Mr. G. H. Hardy; 'On the Reducibility of Covariants of Binary Quantities of Infinite Order,' Part II., by Mr. P. W. Wood; and 'The Maclaurin Sum-Formula' and 'The Asymptotic Expansion of Integral Functions of Finite Non-Zero Order,' by the Rev. E. W. Barnes.

PHYSICAL.—Feb. 10.—Annual Meeting.—Dr. R. T. Glazebrook, President, in the chair.—The Report of the Council was read by the Secretary. The number of Fellows now on the roll is 425, an increase of seven over last year. Fourteen new Fellows have been elected. There have been four resignations, and the Society has lost by death one Honorary Fellow, Prof. Villari, and three Fellows, namely, Prof. J. D. Everett, W. T. Goolden, and Dr. Lawson. The Report of the Treasurer for 1904 was read by the Secretary.—The following officers and Council were elected for the ensuing year: President, Prof. J. H. Poynting; Vice-Presidents, those who have filled the office of President, together with C. Chree, H. M. Elder, Prof. J. A. Fleming, and J. Swinburne; Secretaries, W. Watson and W. R. Cooper; Foreign Secretary, Prof. S. P. Thompson; Treasurer, Prof. H. L. Callendar; Librarian, W. Watson; other Members of Council, T. H. Blakesley, C. V. Boys, A. Campbell, Prof. W. Cassie, W. B. Croft, W. Duddell, W. A. Price, S. Skinner, Prof. F. T. Trouton, and Prof. S. A. F. White.—Prof. Poynting then took the chair, and delivered an address on 'Radiation Pressure.'

MEETINGS NEXT WEEK.

- MON. Royal Academy, 4.—Lecture by Prof. G. Aitchison.
- Bibliographical, 5.—'The Localization of Books by their Bindings,' Mr. Strickland Gibson.
- Society of Arts, 8.—'Internal Combustion Engines,' Lecture II, Mr. Dugald Clerk (Cantor Lecture.)
- TUES. Royal Institution, 5.—'The Structure and Life of Animals,' Lecture VI, Prof. L. C. Miall.
- Institution of Civil Engineers, 8.—Discussion on 'Alfreton Second Tunnel' and 'The Reconstruction of Moncreiffe Tunnel'; Paper on 'Surface-Condensing Plants, and the Value of the Vacuum Produced,' Mr. R. W. Allen.
- Society of Arts, 8.—'The Queen Victoria Memorial as compared with other Royal Memorials Abroad,' Mr. Marion H. Spielmann.
- WED. Society of Arts, 8.—'Some Misconceptions of Musical Pitch,' Mr. J. E. Borland.
- Geological, 8.—'The Order of Succession of the Manx Slates in their Northern Half, and its Bearing on the Origin of the Schistose Breccia,' Rev. J. F. Blake; 'The Wash-Outs in the Middle Coal-Measures of South Yorkshire,' Mr. F. E. Middleton.
- THURS. Royal Academy, 1.—Lecture by Prof. G. Aitchison.
- Royal, 4.
- Royal Institution, 5.—'Recent Work of the Geological Survey,' Lecture II, Prof. J. J. B. Teall.
- Institution of Electrical Engineers, 8.—Discussion on 'The Value of Overhead Mains for Electric Distribution in the United Kingdom.'
- Antiquaries, 8.—'Notes on Fourteenth-Century Conveyancing,' Mr. T. E. Kirby.
- FRI. Physical, 5.—'On the Curvature Method of teaching Geometrical Objects,' Dr. C. V. Drysdale.

- FRI. Institution of Civil Engineers, 8.—'Morecambe Sewerage: Method of laying a 15-inch Cast-Iron Sewer under the London and North-Western Railway,' Mr. F. D. Flint; 'The Reconstruction of Bow Bridge over the River Lea,' Mr. H. M. Rootham. Students' Meeting.
- Royal Institution, 9.—'Fungi,' Prof. Marshall Ward.
- SAT. Royal Institution, 3.—'Archæology,' Lecture I., Mr. D. George.

Science Gossip.

MESSRS. DUCKWORTH & Co. are publishing 'Metapsychical Phenomena,' by Dr. Joseph Maxwell, translated by Mrs. Finch. The book should be of special interest, for it presents a kind of interim report by Dr. Maxwell of a series of experiments, already extending over several years, undertaken by him without any bias or preliminary hypothesis as to the possible causes of the alleged facts. The title embodies the phraseology by which Prof. Richet prefers to describe the phenomena otherwise known as "occult" or "spiritistic."

THE Royal Society for the Protection of Birds will hold its annual meeting at the Westminster Palace Hotel next Tuesday. The ruthless slaughter of rare birds constantly reported shows the need of support to this excellent body.

At Gresham College four lectures on 'The Infinitesimal Calculus' (Second Series) will be delivered from Tuesday to Friday next inclusive, by Prof. W. H. Wagstaff.

THE Prix Lacaze, of the value of 10,000 francs, awarded every four years by the Paris Faculté de Médecine to the author of the best work concerning tuberculosis, has just been given to Dr. André Jousset.

NEW editions of Mr. Lynn's 'Remarkable Comets' (twelfth) and 'Remarkable Eclipses' (seventh) were issued last week by Messrs. Sampson Low, Marston & Co. That the information is well brought up to date is shown by the references to the last returns of Encke's comet and Tempel's second periodical comet, as well as to the total solar eclipses of 1903 and 1904 as past.

WE have already noticed the death of Prof. Ernst Abbe, of Jena; but we may call special attention to his astronomical labours. He took charge in 1877 of the University Observatory at Jena, an institution which had been much neglected and had almost fallen into decay. After a few years of superintendence, Abbe found the only satisfactory means to restore it to efficiency was to erect a new building and furnish it with instruments. This was done by 1889, and as Abbe's health did not admit of his undertaking night-work himself, he appointed Prof. Otto Knopf as Observer; and when he resigned the directorship in 1901 the latter was nominated his successor.

THE partial eclipse of the moon which will take place to-morrow evening will be best seen in Western Asia and Eastern Europe. At the middle of the eclipse (7h. 0m. Greenwich time) the moon will be vertical over Southern India, and 0.41 of her disc will then be obscured. She will rise at Greenwich at 5h. 16m., already involved in the penumbra; but the first contact with the shadow will not take place until 5h. 54m., the last at 8h. 7m., and the moon will be clear of the penumbra at 9h. 19m.

THE Harvard College Observatory Circulars, Nos. 90 and 91, announce that Miss Leavitt's examination of the photographs taken of a large nebulous region in the constellations Scorpio and Ophiuchus has resulted in the discovery of no fewer than one hundred and five new variable stars, the last of which will be reckoned as var. 262, 1904. Scorpi.; whilst a similar examination of plates taken for observations of Phoebe, the ninth satellite of Saturn, near the triad nebula in Sagittarius, has led to the detection of sixteen new variables there, the last of which is numbered var. 278, 1904, Sagittarii. Of all these stars, only one (the ninth in the latter list) exceeds the tenth magnitude when at its highest. The one in question ranges between 9.5 and 11.9. The first nebulous region mentioned extends over many square degrees in the constellations Scorpio and Ophiuchus. Like the great nebula in Orion, it has a tendency to attach itself to individual stars, the principal condensation being about the quadruple star  $\rho$  Ophiuchi.

M. FAYET's last discussion of the orbit of Borrelly's comet (e, 1904) clearly shows that it is an ellipse of short period, probably of about seven years in duration. The perihelion passage took place on the 17th inst., at the distance from the sun of 1.40 in terms of the earth's mean distance, and its brightness is now only about half what it was at the time of discovery.

THREE new small planets are announced from the Königstuhl Observatory, Heidelberg: one detected by Dr. Götz on the 8th ult., and two by Prof. Max Wolf on the 26th. Prof. Bauschinger, Director of the Astronomical Recheninstitut at Berlin, states that a discussion of the orbits of those bodies discovered in 1904 has resulted in the assignment of permanent numbers to twenty-seven of them, the last of which was detected by Dr. Götz on October 14th, and will be reckoned as No. 548.

FINE ARTS

The Celtic and Scandinavian Antiquities of Shetland. By Gilbert Goudie. (Blackwood & Sons.)

IT needed not the modest preface to assure us of our author's "absorbing interest" in his subject, and his readers will be hard to please if they do not gain a reflected experience of the same kind.

There is an interest all their own in these islands "remote and bare," in the silent memorials which have stood through phases of war as wild as their surrounding seas, in the traces of the Picts and the Papes, in signs of the long Scandinavian occupation, in documents bearing on the transition from the old manners and language to the new, in evidences of an ancient naval and strategic importance which might revive.

The book is a condensation, in chronological sequence, of the result of thirty years of patriotic study. It is remarkable for painstaking and clearness; a little ponderous and circuitous in style; weighted, too, with some repetitions of which our author is aware, but, on the whole, a good specimen of antiquarian work.

In Shetland "there are no relics," says Mr. Goudie,

"that can be safely asserted to be earlier than the Celtic, or, as it is usually designated in its northern relationships, the Pictish race (locally Pekts)."

Besides instruments of the Neolithic period (the oval polished stone knife of disc shape here exemplified is not known to have been found out of Shetland), grave-mounds, cists, and standing stones exist, but no great discoveries appear to have been made in regard to them. More is known about the "brochs," which the author, probably with reason, attributes to the pagan Celtic period, contesting the views of Pinkerton and the late Dr. Fergusson.

The islands contain some eighty sites of these "Pictish" towers, which are held to have been constructed for defence against Vikings and others. That of Mousa (Moseyarborg of the sagas) is twice mentioned in connexion with incidents in Scandinavian history. As late as 1155

"Erlend, with the widow of Maddad, Earl of Athol, went to Shetland, where he was besieged in the castle of Mousa by her son Harald, Earl of Orkney."

Of the broch of Clumlie a ground plan is given:—

"In this long-buried town.....one may recognize the place of strength of a local magnate or of a small village community of vast antiquity. The dwellings of a few modern representatives still cluster round its ruins. As a community this has been successively, first, of pagan Celts, in probably the early ages of the Christian era, or in pre-Christian times; secondly, of Celts Christianized at a later period; thirdly, of pagan interlopers from Scandinavia, who overran and absorbed those native Celts in the ninth century, and in all probability were the demolishers of the town, or, at all events, suffered it to fall into decay; and, fourthly, of the descendants of those Scandinavians settled and Christianized in the century following. From that time the town has come down through the Scandinavian and Scoto-Scandinavian period, first, as a picturesque ruin with the village comfortably settling at its base; and, lastly, as a mysterious fairy mound, the contents of which had been attempted to be explored."

We quote this passage as incidentally an accurate résumé of the history of the islands. To the post-Christian times probably may be assigned the Ogam inscriptions which appear here, as elsewhere, but nowhere in Dalriadic territory. Our author dwells upon the St. Ninian's and Lunnasting stones. He does not seem acquainted with Mr. Nicholson's interpretations, lately published (see Athenæum, No. 4006). He deals with the coincidences, local and monumental, between St. Ninian's in Shetland and the possibly parent church at the saint's own Whithorn in Galloway, which are striking enough.

But, of course, the essence of Shetland history is Scandinavian. First, the Runic stones, of which some half dozen have been found, built up in walls and otherwise maltreated, and then a long series of documents testify to the dominion of the Norseman, A.D. 870 to 1468. The most striking trait of the Norse character is the "law-girdled" freedom. The udal system of freeholds was accompanied by one of legal declarators of title, as in the Schuynd Bill, in which excambions and devolution of property were witnessed before the Fowd, constituting a perpetuation of testimony as valuable as the Scottish Register of Sasines. Of these, as of many other documents, full extracts are given here. To a conveyancer there is much pleasant pabulum in the quaintness of the "general words." "Fra the heast stane in hyll to the lawest in the eb," a sixteenth-century formula, brings the Norse skuthald, or common appendant, very vividly to the mind.

A legal article might well be written on this book, with its references to lawright-men and ranselmen, customs of opgestry, dues of wattle, umboth duty, and the like. It may be said that after the arrival of the Stewart earls, and notably of their first factor, the egregious Laurence Bruce, of Cultamalindio, the burdens were retained, but the Norse rights of the islanders gradually disappeared. Among other interesting documents may be named a mortgage by Else Trondsdaughter, a sister of that Anna whose unhappy connexion with the Marian Earl of Bothwell is noted by Dr. Masson in his Introduction to vol. xiv. of the 'Register of the Privy Council of Scotland.' Other references are made to matters touching general history, especially the repeated attempts by the kings of Denmark and Norway to redeem the islands. The book ends with a number of antiquarian notes on the Shetland mill, ploughs, and other instruments.

THE NATIONAL GALLERY.

THE retirement of Sir Edward Poynter from the Directorship of the National Gallery has naturally given rise to a good deal of speculation. Already names of possible candidates for the post have been discussed. This is, we think, premature. A great opportunity has arisen, which, if it is not now embraced, may not arise again for a long time. Even more important than the question of who the new Director is to be is the question of the position the Director is to occupy. That can more profitably be discussed during an interregnum, and it is, therefore, most desirable that the appointment should not take place until some satisfactory solution of this preliminary problem is attained.

It is notorious that the present system has not worked well. To those who are outside official life it is not given to know the exact details of procedure; but it is an open secret that Sir Edward Poynter has never had a free hand. We have always endeavoured to bear this in mind, and in our criticisms of the purchases made for the nation—criticisms which, in fairness to the public, have at times been severe—we have endeavoured to lay the blame rather on the operations of a clumsy and inefficient machinery than on individual persons, whose precise share in any particular transaction could never be ascertained.

We believe that no connoisseur, however confident he might be in his own judgment, would be likely habitually to buy pictures for the nation without at least comparing notes with other authorities whose judgment he had reason to trust. For himself or for a private individual he might dare this; but where the responsibility is so heavy and the light of criticism so searching, he would be likely to fortify his personal opinion in the best way which lay to his hand. This being so, the relative position which the Trustees and the Director have, so far as we can gather, occupied to each other in the past is not the best which can be conceived for compassing the objects for which they are intended to co-operate. The Director should, we believe, have at once greater freedom of action and a correspondingly greater responsibility. He should, if possible, be in touch with the most learned and authoritative opinion obtainable, and he should be ready to make every use of this wherever possible; but while many authorities might be consulted, the final decision as to the merits and desirability of a work of art should rest with one man. The case for or against a particular work may be stated for him by some specialist who knows a particular branch of the subject better than the Director himself; but with this assistance he should be in a position to judge absolutely whether the work is, in all the circumstances, a desirable acquisition for the National Gallery.

The Trustees would be naturally the first to be consulted, and they would have the further duty—in itself a serious and important one—of deciding at the end of a given period whether the Director had fulfilled his functions adequately, or whether a still better man might not be found; and for that reason it would be well that re-election at the end of a term should not be regarded as a foregone conclusion.

The other important principle which at the present juncture might well be discussed is that of the subdivision of the National Gallery into ancient and modern art. That division already virtually exists in the disposition of the pictures at Trafalgar Square and Millbank; and if the State is ever to accomplish anything in the way of encouraging modern art, it can, we believe, only be done by giving to the keeper of the Tate Gallery a free and independent position, and, if possible, allocating to that institution a certain yearly sum, either deducting it from the sum allotted to the National Gallery as a whole, or, in view of the inadequacy of this, by a separate and extra grant. No large sum need be asked for this purpose; a skilful Director of the Gallery for Modern Art ought to be able, by appealing to the patriotism of artists, and the honour which such a purchase confers on the artist, to secure every year a few masterpieces of modern art for a comparatively trifling amount. Such an arrangement would set the Director of the National Gallery free to devote his whole time and energy to the purchase of the works of old masters; and in view of the keen and incessantly increasing competition for whatever is really important in this kind, his work will be none of the lightest if we are even to hold our own, still more to make up some of the leeway which maladministration in the past decade has made painfully evident.

We have endeavoured to state what we believe is the general opinion of those who know something of the extreme difficulty of buying works of art, and who recognize that, with the slender funds at the disposal of the National Gallery, the only chance of success is to get the best man, and to trust him as far as possible. It is only so that the nation can hope to compete with the private collector or with the directors of certain foreign museums, who have the advantage of implicit confidence in their discretion and judgment.

Whatever decision be arrived at, we may be sure that, if the present opportunity for investigating the whole question is made use of, great improvements in the existing machinery will be found practicable.

WATER-COLOURS AT PATERSON'S GALLERY.

A SMALL and select exhibition of water-colours at this Gallery is worth a visit, if only for the sake of seeing a few drawings by Mr. Crawhall. We could name artists who produce more than is good either for themselves or the public, but Mr. Crawhall sins against both by the opposite extreme. He hardly ever exhibits, and apparently he hardly ever produces, for of the four drawings here shown, two have been seen before. But these are of such exceptional merit that some one should surely make it his business to force Mr. Crawhall to give scope to his talent. Of these two the Aviary (No. 7) made its appearance many years ago at the New English Art Club. It is a brilliant arrangement of masses of positive colour, laid on with a masterly dexterity of touch, and a grasp of the main lines of characteristic form; but it shares with much of the work of the Scotch School, to which Mr. Crawhall has affiliated himself, the fault of a too summary simplification, and a want of subtlety in the contours of the masses. The other drawing, the Black Cock (8), is much more remarkable. The artifice of the patterned design is more skilfully concealed; the rendering of form, without losing anything of brilliancy and decision, is at once more searching and more sympathetic; while the design has the breadth and large decorative intention of an Oriental painting. The other two drawings are altogether slighter, and are hardly more than hors d'œuvre to whet our appetite for more serious and important work; but they show the same certain and rapid grasp of the characteristic direction of line, though in itself the line might have more flexibility and be more continuously expressive. We cannot help grudging Mr. Crawhall to the Scottish School, because we think that in other artistic circles he would develop yet more remarkable powers. As it is, he seems to be confined by the habit of asserting at all costs too wilful and too summary a unity.

This, perhaps, is at the bottom of a certain dissatisfaction which accompanies one's admiration also for Mr. Nicholson's work, of which there are some delightful examples in the present show. The little studies of Oxford are very vigorous in light and shade, and at once discreet and piquant in colour. The still life again shows a real and personal colour sense, and is altogether a charming invention. Ben, a boy playing with a Punch and Judy, has also great vivacity, but the convention by which the boy's face is rendered is wanting in subtlety and fulness of content. It suits to perfection the wooden faces of his playthings.

A delightful little landscape by Mr. Clausen, and some by Mr. Peppercorn, which show real distinction and refinement of colour, and two large and well-massed drawings by Mr. Macgregor, are among the other exhibits of interest.

ADOLPH MENZEL.

ALTHOUGH posterity may not fully ratify the verdict which has recently been pronounced that Adolph Menzel, who died on the 9th inst., was the greatest German artist of the nineteenth century, there will probably be a consensus of opinion that he was one of the greatest and most original forces of his times in his own country. Art, moreover, has no topographical limitations, and his book on Frederick the Great was not only an artistic triumph, but also exercised a powerful influence over the illustrators of various European countries—notably England, and Charles Keene and Du Maurier more especially. It is curious to note that Menzel, who began his artistic life, and remained to the end, as an "independent," yet achieved great success as a Court painter. The two things are usually so antagonistic that they are rarely found in one man. Romney, for example, was not a Court painter, but Winterhalter was! It is not easy to imagine anything less in line with the Court portraits of convention than the great official works of Menzel. He painted up to his own ideas rather than worked down to the level of his subjects.

Menzel distinguished himself in no fewer than three branches of fine arts—in lithography, in design, and in oil painting—and either of these would have stamped him as a genius. He was born at Breslau on December 8th, 1815, the son of a lithographer, at whose death Adolph Menzel found himself, at the age of fifteen, the sole support of his mother, and compelled to carry on his father's business, which he did for several years. He himself designed many things, such as title-pages and book-covers, and there can be no doubt that his training as a lithographer gave him an immense advantage in his earlier efforts as an illustrator. His great opportunity came with the invitation to illustrate Franz Kugler's popular life of Frederick the Great. To this he devoted four years, and produced about four hundred drawings, which were engraved by Vogel, Unzelmann, and Müller. The book appeared in 1840. Its success was immediate; the historical accuracy of the illustrations was universally admitted, and the death-knell of "theatrical" painting sounded. The whole "atmosphere," indeed, was so perfectly reproduced that Wilhelm IV. commissioned Menzel to illustrate the official edition of the works of Frederick the Great, and this immense task occupied him for about seven years. Menzel's artistic work in connexion with the life and times of Frederick the Great is analogous to that of Meissonier for Napoleon I., and each may be said to have given both life and actuality to what was fast degenerating into a dreamy "legend."

Not satisfied with his remarkable success as an illustrator, Menzel took up painting in oils and water colours, and achieved equal success with historical subjects and with the various scenes of Court life in Berlin. His important pictures of this period range from 'Frederick the Great at Sans Souci,' 1855 (exhibited at the Salon of that year), to 'Frederick the Great on the Night of Hochkirch,' 1867, and with the latter picture he may be said to have finished with historical subjects. 'The Coronation of King Wilhelm at Königsberg,' 1861, and 'King Wilhelm starting to join the Army,' the thrilling scene in Berlin on July 31st, 1870, have not been judged faultless, but they must for all time remain the two greatest pictures of events which had far-reaching effects on the history of modern Germany. The war was one which Menzel must have regarded with mixed feeling; for at the great Exhibition in Paris of 1867 he became acquainted with Meissonier, with Stevens, Courbet, and others, and it was in Paris that he produced "his first pictures of popular contemporary life," in which, as in his historical subjects, he was a pioneer. It was with Meissonier that he became the most intimate, hampered as both were by a complete ignorance of the other's language. "It was curious," says one writer,

"to see the two together at exhibitions—the little figure of Menzel with his gigantic bald forehead and the little figure of Meissonier with his gigantic beard, a Cyclops and a Gnome, two kings in the realm of Liliput."

Menzel has left several souvenirs of his visit to Paris, notably the 'Sunday in the Tuileries Gardens.'

Menzel depicted with equal success nearly every phase of continental life, and his subjects range from the famous 'Ball Supper' of 1870 to a glowing picture of the busy life in the Piazza d'Erbe, in Verona; from the famous 'Cercle' of 1879, with the figure of the Emperor in red uniform, surrounded by the Court celebrities of the day, to 'The Forge' of 1878; and from 'Divine Service at Kösen' to the grimy realities of every-day working life. Profound as was the impression created by his works on German art, it may be questioned whether he has created a new school. He has left no followers, and his work forms a distinct and independent chapter in the history of modern art in Germany. But his greatness will not be denied; he has died full of years and full of honours. On January 1st, 1899, the Emperor conferred upon him the Order of the Black Eagle, the first instance in which this distinction has been given to an artist. But posterity will judge him not by the innumerable honorary distinctions, academic and otherwise, of which he was the recipient, but by the high quality and originality of his works.

Menzel's works are very little known in England, although he was for many years a Foreign Member of the Royal Academy, and of the Royal Water-Colour Society, to which he sent two works. The French Gallery in Pall Mall exhibited in 1903 a collection of his pictures. To the Paris Salon he was long a contributor, of later years chiefly of drawings and water-colours of monks and churches, which always had a great attraction for him.

W. R.

ARCHÆOLOGICAL NOTES.

PROF. DELITZSCH's third lecture on 'Babel and Bibel' reads much like an attempt to revive a controversy, always more popular than learned, which has now lost all actuality. In showing that an ethical tendency can be detected in Babylonian religion he has, of course, an easy task. Few people are as bad—or as good—as their creed, and in commercial communities such as those of Babylonia, a respect for truth and upright dealing soon manifests itself. A like evolution in ethics has taken place in like circumstances in China, where it seems to have no connexion whatever with religion. As to charity, in the sense of love of one's neighbour, this also is mainly a product of city life, and in the last centuries of Imperial Rome was as much to the fore as ever it seems to have been at Babylon, though in both cases the institution of slavery was a check upon its full development. Nor are Prof. Delitzsch's new arguments for the existence of a monotheistic basis for Mesopotamian religion any more convincing than the old. That the worshippers of Marduk in Babylon tried to represent most of the other gods as forms of their own special deity is plain from the tablet published some years ago by Dr. Pinches, but there is no reason for thinking this doctrine was ever accepted outside Babylon, or that it went further than the fancy of the Greeks for seeing their own gods in those of the barbarian, as when they spoke of Amen as Zeus, and of Osiris as Dionysus. In Assyria, indeed, Asshur was held to be the king of the gods, and to him was attributed almost unlimited power, as was natural in a Semitic autocracy, where subjects possessed hardly any rights as against their sovereign. Yet even here Ishtar of Arbela reigned with him, and Tiglathpilezer I. speaks of her as the first among the gods. To Prof. Delitzsch's preconceived conclusions we much prefer the dictum of Prof. Jastrow that "the monotheistic tendency" in Mesopotamia never rose beyond a tendency, and had little, if any, ethical results.

Dr. Alfred Jeremias has quickly followed up his remarks on the Old Testament in somewhat the same sense as Prof. Delitzsch, by a brochure entitled 'Babylonisches im Neuen Testament.' He seems to think that the religious syncretism current at the beginning of our era may have had more purpose in it than is generally thought, and that, unconsciously or otherwise, it formed the indispensable preparation for Christianity. There is, no doubt, much in this position, though it might, perhaps, be treated with more breadth of view and more first-hand knowledge of the facts than here appears. The expectation, for instance, in the West of the birth of a "god-like child," at once a king and a saviour, as shown in Virgil's Fourth Eclogue, is undoubtedly to be traced to the influence of the Persian religion, perhaps even in the shape of that Mithraism which was then beginning to steal into Europe. But there is no occasion to go back, as does Dr. Jeremias, to Babylon and its very shadowy Paradise for the origin of "water of life" in the New Testament. "Give to me, O Osiris, the cooling water!" is to be found on hundreds of tombstones of Greek worshippers of Sarapis, and the inscription and the idea that it conveys must, therefore, have been much more familiar to the primitive Church than any early Babylonian beliefs. So in the Jewish Apocalyptic literature Egyptian influence is as clearly marked as Babylonian. The seven-headed serpent in the 'Pistis Sophia'—quoted by Dr. Jeremias only at second hand, and as a "cabalistic text"—has much closer analogy with the many Apeps, Rereks, Naus, and other demoniacal serpents in the 'Book of the Dead' than with any animal known in Babylonian legend. Had Dr. Jeremias carried further his researches into the 'Pistis Sophia,' he would have seen that the serpent in question here means death, which may have been a tradition inherited from Pharaonic times.

In The American Journal of Semitic Languages, Prof. James H. Breasted, of Chicago, discusses a phrase found in the Karnak inscription set up by Sheshonq I., the Biblical Shishak, who was probably Solomon's suzerain. This he would read "Heqal Abram," or Field of Abraham, and he claims that as this inscription was erected in the tenth century B.C., and is, therefore, far older than any Biblical MS., it is the earliest mention of the name of the patriarch extant. M. Maspero, however, as Dr. Breasted records, has already dealt with the phrase in the Transactions of the Victoria Institute, and would read the last word as Ablim, or as a supposed plural of Abl=meadow. Dr. Breasted also asserts that his reading is supported by Prof. Erman and Dr. Schäfer. His somewhat acid remark that "the customary juggling with Semitic roots taken from a Hebrew dictionary is a pastime which may be indulged in by anyone with a slight knowledge of hieroglyphics," is, in this connexion, amusing.

M. Legrain has at last published a summary of the results of his work at Karnak in 1903. The new discoveries include a representation in bas-relief of the wars of Amenophis II. against the Rutennu or Syrians. This shows for the first time the group of the chariot-borne Pharaoh smiting his enemies, which was later made into a conventional type by Amenophis III., Seti I., and Rameses II. There are also a geographical list of the same king's victories; a well-preserved and beautiful group in black granite of Thothmes IV. and Queen Tia; and a series of bas-reliefs from Amenophis IV.'s Temple of Aten, which last are said to be important. All are going to the museum at Khasr-el-Nil.

M. Maspero has written for the Institut Égyptien an interesting article on the little figures "in the round" discovered in Egyptian tombs, which were much in evidence in the exhibitions of antiquities by M. Naville and Mr. Hall and by Mr. Garstang respectively, held last year in London. He has little difficulty in showing that the object of burying these dolls—as they were at one time thought to be—with the dead, was to ensure the continuance in the next world of the services of the baker, butcher, and brewer that they represent, and that they replaced the primitive slaughter of slaves upon the bier. He thinks that this interpretation can be applied even to the regiments of cavalry and infantry represented in a few instances, which were supposed to help the prince with whom they were buried to defeat his enemies in the Netherworld. He also gives some reasons for thinking that they were nearly always hidden in a pit or well, so that they might act as a sort of reserve if the tomb should be broken into and the frescoes, which were supposed to serve a like purpose, were destroyed. If any fault can be found with the essay, it is, perhaps, that the writer does not sufficiently insist on the essentially magical character of these rites, and on the belief, common to practisers of magic all the world over, that the pictured or sculptured representation of an act would cause similar action elsewhere.

Prof. G. Arvanitakis has communicated to the same body a collection of funeral steles in Greek, made for the most part in Christian times, which present some novel features. One, which speaks of "the twentieth year of the twentieth indiction," brings further confusion into the question of the indiction, which has been generally supposed to consist of fifteen years only. Others seem to show that one of the forms of the Greek "Macarios," or "blessed," in itself apparently a transcription of the Egyptian Ma-kheru, was μακαρίτης. Another, reading "Eat manna," upon three Eucharistic spoons seems to be an allusion to the promise in Revelation to the Church of Pergamos, "To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the hidden manna." The most important of them, according to Prof. Arvanitakis, is that engraved on the base of a bas-relief representing a woman suckling an infant in the well-known style of the representations of Isis nursing Horus. The female proclaims herself the "herald of her brother," which can be identified as one of the expressions by which Isis declares her relations to her husband Osiris. But it concludes with the words Σέβασμα πανακίας, no doubt in allusion to the magical "healing" by Isis of the mutilated remains of her murdered spouse. Yet it may be doubted whether this may not be the origin of the epithet "Panagia," so early applied to the Virgin Mary by the Christians of Egypt. The inscription dates from the first year of Antoninus.

NOTES FROM ROME.

THE rediscovery of the cemetery of Commodilla has been hailed with great satisfaction by Christian archaeologists as well as students of ancient topography. There are two sets of documents concerning these long-lost catacombs: the itineraries of pilgrims, which tell the truth, and the Acta Martyrum, which, in the present case, do not. We gather from the first that between the Via Ardeatina and the Via Ostiensis, somewhere along the present Strada delle Sette Chiese, there were catacombs named, from the (otherwise unknown) female owner of the ground, Cœmeterium Commodillæ and that pilgrims used to visit them on their way from St. Sebastian's to St. Paul's, or vice versa, to perform their devotions at the grave of St. Felix and St. Adauctus. The Einsiedlen itinerary adds to these two a third and not less uncertain name of a female martyr: a porta ostiensi.....per porticum.....usque ad Sc'm Paulum: inde ad S. Felicem, et Adauctum, et Emeritam.

The Acta say that Emerita suffered martyrdom in the persecution of Valerian (257-8), and her associates in that of Diocletian (303-5), and give many details concerning their trial, passion, and execution—all apocryphal. In fact, Delahaye has proved the Acta to be a pious novel framed by a priest, Benedict by name, on the pattern of the Acts of St. Afra of Augusta Vindelicorum (Augsburg), whose feast day, August 5th, coincides with that of Emerita. There is no doubt that a saint of this name has existed, and that her grave in the catacombs of Commodilla was the goal of many pilgrimages. As regards, however, her association with a would-be Santa Digna, her alleged partner in martyrdom, it rests only on the mistaken evidence of a broken epitaph showing the words:

DIGNAE ET MERITAE VIRG(ini)
"to.....(name lost) worthy and deserving maiden"—the "worthy" and the "deserving" having been changed by devout, but ignorant priests from mere adjectives into names of saints.

Pope Damasus, after decorating the crypt of Felix and Adauctus with marble incrustations and fresco paintings, wrote for their grave a short poem (seven hexameters), the text of which is known from copies made by early pilgrims (Einsiedlen, Lauresheim, Closterneuburg, Goettweih, &c.). The oratory was restored by Popes John I. (523-6) and Leo III. (795-816), and finally abandoned to its fate towards the middle of the ninth century.

In 1720 Boldetti came across it by accident, by following the track of a landslip which had occurred in the vineyard of the Cavaliere Mandosi. He found at the bottom of the chasm a fragment of the poem of Damasus mentioned above, and also three figures of saints, painted above an "arcosolium," and inscribed respectively with the names SCS FELIX, SCS ADAUCTVS, SCA MERITA.

Having gathered all this information, and having ascertained that the Vigna Mandosi of the eighteenth century corresponds to the one now owned by Signor Giuseppe Serafini, the Commissione di Archeologia Sacra has undertaken the rediscovery and permanent excavation of Commodilla's cemetery. The chapel or oratory of the three martyrs was re-entered on December 11th, 1903. It contains a remarkable set of paintings with the figures of the Redeemer, of Peter and Paul, of the Virgin Mary and St. Stephen, besides those seen and described by Boldetti. One hundred and twenty-four inscriptions, in more or less complete state, were discovered in the adjoining galleries. One refers to certain repairs made at the time of Pope Syricius (384-99); the others are mostly gravestones of no special importance. The earliest date marked upon them is the year 367; the latest is the year 527, when the cemetery had already become the property of the Chapter of Santa Sabina. One contains the following complex indications:—

"here lies.....[name lost] who was born in the year 386, under the Consulship of Honorius and Evodius, on the 23rd day of August, on a Sunday, on the twelfth day of the moon, and under the sign of Capricorn."

What makes, however, the exploration of this cemetery singular and almost unprecedented, is the discovery on February 14th, 1904, of a wing absolutely intact, that is to say, a wing no human being had entered since the year (523-6) when its entrance was walled up by the masons of Pope John I. The graves are still marked by special objects of recognition which were embedded in the mortar when it was fresh, such as drinking-cups, perfume bottles, lamps, toys, and labels cut out of bone, one of which contains the words, "Victor vivas in Deo!" ("Victor may you live with God!") But the best information we have gathered from the find is this: that the workmen employed by Pope John I. in walling up the entrance to the gallery had first rifled the more promising graves of their valuable contents. The tombstones by which they were sealed have been found lying in fragments on the floor, and among the objects of recognition mentioned above, none was left which had the least marketable value. We shall reckon, henceforth, the beginning of the spoliation of the catacombs from the first quarter of the sixth century instead of the last quarter of the seventh.

An interesting gaming table has been discovered in the cemetery of Marcus and Marcellianus on the Via Latina. It is inscribed, as usual, with six words of six letters each, engraved on the right and left of the middle line, in the following manner:—

|        |        |
|--------|--------|
| PARTHI | OCCISI |
| BRITTO | VICTVS |
| LVDITE | ROMANI |

This is not the first instance of an allusion to the latest political events on a gaming table. De Rossi published in 1891 the wording of another, found in the cemetery of Priscilla, which refers to the invasion of the barbarians in the year 271, and to their defeat (by the Emperor Aurelian, the builder of the walls of Rome) on the banks of the Metaurus. The last one belongs to the time of Diocletian, and alludes to the two great victories gained in the years 296 and 298 at the two opposite ends of the Empire by his colleagues. The foes of the Empire defeated in the East, however, were not Parthians, but Persians, the Persian dynasty of the Sassanidæ having occupied the Parthian kingdom of the Arsacidæ since the year 226. The allusion to Britain is evident. Constantius Chlorus had just put an end to the rule of the usurpers Carausius and Allectus. It seems a curious fact that the only epigraphic record of such an event should have been found written on a gaming table, employed to seal the grave of an obscure Christian in the catacombs of Marcus and Marcellianus.

The best-known Jewish catacomb in the suburban district of Rome is the one discovered by Antonio Bosio on December 14th of the year 1602 in the hills of Monteverde, somewhere above the present railway station of Transtevere. Bosio attributed it to the Hebrew Transtiberine community on account of the seven-branched candlestick and the formula "here rests in peace" by which several tombstones were distinguished, but he did not carry his exploration very far, probably on account of the crumbling and dangerous state of the crypts. Several attempts have been made since to re-enter the crypts—the first by Bianchini at the beginning of the eighteenth century; the second by Gaetano Migliore about 1750; the third by Padre Marchi in 1843; the fourth by an amateur, whose name I have forgotten, in 1892. I have described this last attempt in 'New Tales of Old Rome,' p. 247. The vineyard under which the cemetery is excavated has been lately identified with that called "Colle Rosaro," which was the property of Bishop Ruffini in the seventeenth century, of Muzio Vitozzi in the eighteenth, and belongs to Marchese Pellegrini at the present day. Here, not many weeks ago, a descent into the crypts was discovered, and two or three galleries were explored. They are entirely in ruins; still the symbol of the seven-branched candlestick outlined in red tint above several loculi, and the formula EN IPHNH KOIMHCIC, visible on one or two broken epitaphs, leave no doubt about the identity of the place. Its exploration and its illustration have been entrusted to the specialist best qualified to carry them through, Dr. Nicholas Mueller, who is Professor of Christian Archaeology in the University of Berlin.

The reason why I have gathered the elements of this correspondence from the field of Christian antiquities exclusively is that no discovery has been made lately in pagan and classic Rome. At all events, no official account of any such finds has been published by the Board of Antiquities since the month of March, 1904, much to the disappointment of the subscribers to the Notizie degli Scavi.
RODOLFO LANCIANI.

SALES.

THE sale at Christie's, on Tuesday, of Messrs. Lawrie's collection of art books, to which reference was made in The Athenæum of last week, produced 1,043*l.* 6*s.* for 111 lots. The prices were throughout unusually high, and nearly the whole of the books, it is understood, go back to one of the two partners in the recently dissolved firm. Many of the books still in print sold at very nearly the prices at which they were published, and at considerably more than second-hand booksellers are in the habit of asking for them. The most amazing example of all was the copy of George Redford's Art Sales, 1888, originally published at 5 guineas, and now usually valued at 20*l.* This particular copy has the second volume interleaved and extended to two volumes with manuscript additions, and also three other MS. volumes uniform with Redford, containing the record of picture sales to about 1902; this set realized 160*l.* There were also Algernon Graves and W. V. Cronin, History of the Works of Sir Joshua Reynolds, 1809-1901 (subscribed at 25 gs.), 62*l.*; a collection of 24 of Christie's illustrated sale catalogues, including those of the Carmichael, Pender, Magniac, Hope, and others, 15*l.* 10*s.*; an extensive and valuable collection in 73 vols. of French picture sale catalogues from 1767 to 1896, with the prices, and many illustrated, 39*l.*; a collection of sale catalogues of pictures, &c., principally Christie's, from 1892 to 1904, with the prices, in 12 vols., 12*l.* 10*s.*; two copies of John Smith's Catalogue Raisonné of the Works of the most Eminent Dutch, Flemish, and French Painters, with the Supplement, 1829-42, 38*l.*; another copy, interleaved, with numerous MS. notes and additions, 9 parts bound in 14 vols., 72*l.*; J. Chaloner Smith, British Mezzotint Portraits, 1884, illustrated edition, 38*l.*; Edmund Lodge, Portraits of Illustrious Personages of Great Britain, 1835, large paper, with 240 portraits, proofs on India paper, 12 vols. in 6, 24*l.*; Sir E. J. Poynter, The National Gallery, 1899-1900, and L. Cust, The National Portrait Gallery, 1901-2, 5 vols., 22*l.*; Sir Walter Armstrong, Gainsborough and his Place in Art, 1898, 11*l.* (published at 5 gs.); and Sir Henry Raeburn, by the same, 1901, 5*l.* 5*s.*; Galerie du Palais Royal, with upwards of 350 highly finished engravings by J. Couchée, brilliant impressions, 1786-1808, 20*l.*; W. Bode and C. Hofstede de Groot, Complete Works of Rembrandt, Paris, 1897-1902, one of 500 copies (the concluding volume to be supplied when published), 50*l.*; and Sir Joshua Reynolds, Works, 500 mezzotint engravings of portraits, historical and fancy subjects, engraved by S. W. Reynolds and others, 5 vols., 78*l.*

The same firm sold on the 11th inst. the following works:—Drawings: J. Downman, A Young Girl, in a pink dress, holding some cherries in her lap, 78*l.* L. Deutsch, The Emir, 99*l.* J. F. Herring, The Derby, 1835, 71*l.* Pictures: T. S. Cooper, Summer Showers, 262*l.* T. Faed, The Bather, 162*l.*

Fine-Art Gossip.

MESSRS. AGNEW held a private view yesterday of water-colour drawings at their Old Bond Street Galleries.

MESSRS. OBACH & Co. hold a private view to-day of oil paintings, drawings, and lithographs by Fantin-Latour.

TO DAY also 'Dutch and Venetian Waterways,' an exhibition of water-colours by Miss Emily M. Paterson, is opened to private view at Mr. McLean's Gallery.

MR. ANDREW COLLEY'S exhibition of oil paintings of Holland, Italy, &c., in figure and landscape, is now on show at the new premises of the Modern Gallery, in 61, New Bond Street, till the 4th of March.

A SHOW of sketches of 'Meadow, Wood, and Garden,' by Miss Burnaby-Atkins, is also on view at the Modern Gallery.

AN exhibition of pictures and drawings by the late Edward Neale will be held at 107, Marylebone Road from Monday, the 20th, to Saturday, the 25th inst. inclusive, and will be open from 11 A.M. to 5 P.M. Edward Neale, who was a pupil of the late Joseph Woolf, and well known as an animal painter of the first rank, was also a good horseman, shot, and fisherman, and had a first-hand acquaintance with nature. It is to be hoped that this exhibition will be useful to all interested in ornithology, which science he did a good deal to advance by his illustrations to E. T. Booth's 'Rough Notes' and the late Lord Lilford's 'Birds of the British Islands.'

MESSRS. WILLIAM MARCHANT & Co. have opened additional premises at 2, Haymarket, opposite the Carlton Hotel.

It will interest many English readers to learn that the well-known collector Mr. Charles J. Freer, of Detroit, proposes not only to give his fine-art collection to Washington, but also to erect a suitable museum for its reception. Mr. Freer lent fifty of his Whistler pictures and drawings to the Boston Exhibition a year or so ago, and since then he has purchased the famous Peacock Room, which was exhibited in Bond Street before it was transferred to America some months since. The New York Evening Post characterizes Mr. Freer's gift as "if not the first of its kind in America," at all events "the first of importance." Mr. Freer owns not only a good collection of pictures by American artists, but also a fine one of Japanese colour-prints and paintings.

MR. E. A. WALTON, painter, Mr. W. Birnie Rhind, sculptor, and Mr. John Kinross, architect, have been elected members of the Royal Scottish Academy. Should the Government agree to the Calton Hill as a site for the proposed new National Gallery, the Town Council of Edinburgh is prepared to grant the same without monetary consideration.

MR. E. F. STRANGE will lecture to the Society of Designers on 'Ornament from Old English Rood-Screens,' on Tuesday evening, March 7th, in the galleries of the Royal Society of British Artists, Suffolk Street, Pall Mall.

WE are sorry to hear of the death of M. Rodolphe Kann, the picture collector. M. Kann, who amassed a large fortune in South Africa, built himself a palatial residence in the Avenue d'Iéna, Paris, and formed one of the finest private collections of old masters in existence. M. Kann was himself an almost infallible judge of the artists of whose works he made a special study, and never allowed himself to be carried away by the blandishments of the picture-dealer. For some years he had been in very indifferent health. His fine collection (the fate of which is still uncertain) was always open to the inspection of properly accredited visitors.

WE are invited to view, on February 28th, at the Grafton Galleries paintings and sculptures by Emil Fuchs.

MESSRS. DURAND-RUEL & SONS, of Paris, have issued a remarkably cheap volume of reproductions of some of the more interesting pictures now on view in their exhibition at the Grafton Gallery, which, it may be mentioned, closes on Saturday next. The forty-two plates reproduce forty-seven of the pictures, and form a most handy volume for reference.

THE landscape painter Oswald Achenbach, whose death in his seventy-eighth year took place recently at Düsseldorf, was for several years professor at the Düsseldorf Academy. His paintings, more ideal in their treatment than those of his well-known brother Andreas, whose pupil he was, were chiefly representations of Italian scenes. Among the best are 'The Market-Place of Amalfi,' in the Berlin National Gallery, 'Villa Torlonia,' &c.

THE death is reported from Rome of Pietro Vanni, well known to visitors of that city by his picture of the plague in Siena in the Gallery of Modern Art, and his 'Funeral of Raphael,' which hangs in the Vatican.

THE Journal des Arts of February 4th prints in full the report of M. Henry Maret dealing with the purchases and "commandes" of the French Administration of the Beaux-Arts up to June 20th, 1904, presumably for the financial year ending on that date. There are no fewer than 172 entries of purchases, the total of the payments amounting to 586,235 francs. For his two decorative panels for the Panthéon M. Detaille received 50,000 frs.; for a picture for the French Embassy at St. Petersburg M. G. Becker had 30,000 frs.; and for his engraved plate of the triptych after Ugo van der Goes, L. Flameng received 22,000 frs. These are the three highest payments; the others are on a fairly liberal scale.

THE extensive art collection of M. Louis Germeau, the dispersal of which began at the Hôtel Drouot last Monday, and will not conclude until next Saturday (25th), contains a highly interesting little box in "argent doré et niellé," known as the reliquary of Thomas à Becket. It is regarded as one of the most important works of the nielleur of the twelfth century, and measures 55 mil. by 70 mil. On the two large sides of the box are representations of Thomas à Becket and of his entombment, with inscriptions. On the two smaller sides are figures of angels and other ornaments. The owner of this reliquary was offered a very large sum for it some years ago, but he refused to part with it, and there can be very little doubt that it will now realize a large amount. It may be mentioned that two articles, both totally different, called the reliquary of Thomas à Becket, have passed through English sale-rooms: one was lot 1320 in the Bernal sale of 1856, a small coffer of copper gilt, richly enamelled; and the other was in the Libri sale on June 1st, 1864. This was in gilt metal richly adorned with cloisonné.

THE rearrangement of some of the rooms at the Luxembourg Gallery is now completed, and they were thrown open to the public a few days ago. Some of the more important of the recent acquisitions by the State have been hung, notably 'Le Coin de Bataille' of Hoffbauer; 'Ma Femme et ses Sœurs,' by Caro-Delvaile; 'Haleurs,' by Adler; 'Noce en Bretagne,' by Estienne; and 'Coylas, Mendiant Espagnol,' by Lappara. There are also new pictures by Bergerat, Lepère, Paul Buffet, Desvallières, Jacques Martin, Le Sidaner, Troncy, and Cottel. The whole of the room devoted to works of foreign artists is taken up by English painters. Besides additions to the sculpture, special reference may be made to the temporary exhibition of hauts-reliefs by Rodin. The director of the Cluny Museum has also set forth for public inspection some of the recent acquisitions, notably the fine collection of rings of the sixteenth, seventeenth, eighteenth, and nineteenth centuries, bequeathed to the museum by Baron Arthur de Rothschild.

A 'PHOTOGRAPHIC AND PICTORIAL SURVEY AND RECORD OF ESSEX' has been inaugurated by the Essex Field Club for the purpose of gathering a permanent collection of photographs and other pictures, also maps, plans, and various documents, so as to give a comprehensive survey and record of all that is valuable and representative of the county of Essex and of the neighbouring rivers and sea. The hon. secretary, Mr. Victor Taylor, will be glad to correspond with societies of kindred nature, archaeological or photographic societies, and with any one willing to assist in the work of the survey. His address is Ashleigh, Buckhurst Hill.

MUSIC

MASSENET'S 'LE JONGLEUR DE NOTRE-DAME.'

M. MASSENET's latest opera, 'Chérubin,' libretto by Maurice Léna, based on an old legend of the Middle Ages, was produced at Monte Carlo on Monday, and, according to notices in the Paris papers, with brilliant success. The merits of some works written for the stage are only gradually recognized; one or two now extremely popular were, indeed, failures at the outset. The numerous successes of M. Massenet are apt to raise a doubt in the minds of those who have not heard his recent works as to whether reports have been exaggerated. Last Monday we had an opportunity of hearing a performance at the Paris Opéra-Comique of 'Le Jongleur de Notre-Dame,' originally produced at Monte Carlo in 1902, and first performed at Paris, May 10th, 1904. We heard 'Salomé' last year in London, the music of which seemed for the greater part out of keeping with the dramatis personæ; especially was this the case with the Jean. In 'Le Jongleur' the composer has caught the right musical atmosphere. The story is quite simple, and the same may be said of the music, although it is the simplicity which comes of rare artistic skill. The prior of a convent, outside of which Jean the Juggler is singing a profane song to amuse the crowd and thereby to gain a few pence, remonstrates with him, and Jean, allured by the sight of brother Boniface returning from market loaded with good things for the monks, decides to give up his vagrant life and enter the convent. In Act II. the monks are seen occupied, one rehearsing an anthem, another painting a statue of the Virgin, and others in various ways; to Boniface is assigned the humbler duty of preparing the food. Jean is worried. He cannot sing in Latin, he can neither paint nor carve wood; but Boniface bids him not be discouraged—the Virgin will accept any offering, however humble, provided it be offered in the right spirit. In the third and last act Jean decides to offer her the only thing within his power, i.e., his songs and juggling tricks. He does so, and suddenly a bright light illuminates the altar, and the hand of the statue of the Virgin moves, beckoning Jean towards her. He advances, and the monks, who had witnessed his strange conduct, and thought him out of his senses, now call out, "A miracle! a miracle!" Jean falls dead in front of the altar, and the prior, advancing, announces the blessing in store for the simple-hearted Jean. The soft "Amen" of celestial voices is then heard, and the curtain falls. The work, it should be noted, is styled a "miracle," and not an opera. The solemn scene was received at the close with little applause; and silence throughout the piece would have been the most fitting attitude.

Certain ecclesiastical phrases and cadences add to the quaintness of the music, while in the legend related by Boniface to Jean the composer is at his best; but the whole shows refinement and delightful colouring. The orchestration throughout the work is, indeed, masterly. In the old miracle plays, even in the most solemn, there was a comic element by way of contrast. Here we have a more fitting one: Jean's secular calling and the homely remarks of Boniface serve as excellent relief to the seriousness, tenderness, and pathos of the piece.

The performance under M. Luigini was most satisfactory. Jean, Boniface, and Le Prieur were admirably impersonated by MM. Maréchal, Fugère, and Allard. The only woman's part is the role muet in the altar scene at the close.

Musical Gossip.

MR. PERCY GRAINGER and Mr. Herman Sandby gave a pianoforte and violoncello recital at Bechstein Hall last Monday evening. The strength of the first-named artist's technique was fully demonstrated in his effective performance of Tchaikowsky's exacting Sonata in G major, and he also showed skill in his treatment of two rhapsodies by Sir Charles Stanford, founded on scenes from Dante's 'Inferno,' the first of these, called 'Beatrice,' being suave and poetical. Mr. Sandby, who draws a rich tone from his instrument, played Valentini's Suite in E, and two movements from Marcello's Sonata in F, and also joined Mr. Grainger in some of the latter's interesting duets on Scandinavian folk-music.

AT the third Monday Subscription Concert at the Æolian Hall the programme was provided by Madame Blanche Marchesi and Miss Janotha. The vocalist introduced several new songs, amongst these being two clever and picturesque examples, 'Chevaux de Bois' and 'Mandoline,' by Claude Debussy; two striking 'Poèmes du Silence' by Ernest Moret; and André Gedalge's piquant 'Au Rossignol.' Madame Marchesi also brought forward Miss Isabel Hearne's tasteful songs 'To Heliodore' and 'With Courage,' and Madame Liza Lehmann's 'Mutterliebe,' singing all with her customary ability and judgment. Miss Janotha played solos by Chopin.

SIR EDWARD ELGAR will conduct the London Symphony Concert at Queen's Hall on March 8th, when the programme will be entirely devoted to his works. It comprises two new compositions, the March in C minor, 'Pomp and Circumstance' No. 3, and the Introduction and Allegro for string orchestra. The scheme also includes the concert overture 'In the South,' the 'Cockaigne' Overture, and the 'Enigma' Variations. Two extra concerts have been arranged: one on April 11th under the direction of Wassili Safonow, from Moscow; the other on June 6th under Arthur Nikisch.

TEN scores were sent in to the Paris Academy of Fine Arts for the Rossini Prize, but not one was deemed worthy of it. Honourable mention, however, was made of the score bearing the motto "Alea jacta est," and should the composer desire it, the sealed paper containing his name will be opened. The same libretto, 'L'Ame de Paris,' by M. Fernand Beissier, will again be offered to candidates for next year's competition.

MLLE. VANDA LANDOWSKA, whom we are shortly to hear in London, is giving concerts of ancient music with harpsichord, also pianoforte, at Paris. Her first one last week was very successful.

SIR EDWARD ELGAR'S 'Enigma' Variations were performed for the first time in Paris at the Concert Colonne last Sunday afternoon.

To celebrate his hundredth birthday, on March 17th, Mr. Manuel Garcia will be presented with his portrait, painted by Mr. John Sargent, R.A. The veteran musician will be entertained at dinner in the evening.

THE programmes of the Concert Society at Turin at its forthcoming season will include Giuseppe Martucci's Second Symphony, and one by Gustav Mahler, each under the direction of its composer; also Elgar's 'Orchestral Variations.' A series of eleven concerts is announced to be given at the Victor Emmanuel Theatre: two to be conducted by Max Fiedler, one by Giovanni Bolsoni, one by Siegfried Wagner, two by Arturo Toscanini, two by Martucci, two by Weingartner, and one by Oscar Nedbal.

THE following are the dates, together with the works, of the Mozart festival performances at the Residenz Theater, Munich, in the autumn: September 11th and 19th, 'Figaro'; September 13th and 17th, 'Cosi fan tutte'; and September 15th and 21st, 'Don Giovanni.'

EDWARD GEORGE DANNREUTHER, who died last Sunday at Chester Studio, S.W., was born November 4th, 1844, at Strasburg. He wrote an interesting set of papers in The Monthly Musical Record on 'Wagner and the Reform,' besides contributing articles to Grove's 'Dictionary of Music'; his treatise on 'Ornamentation' is the standard work on the subject. He was appointed Professor of the Pianoforte at the Royal College of Music in 1895. He was especially known as the friend and champion of Wagner, and founded the Wagner Society in 1872.

THE opera 'Fiamma,' libretto by Luigi Sbragia, music by Mario Pieraccini, which failed to win the prize at the Sonzogno competition, will, according to the Ménestrel of February 12th, be shortly produced at La Pergola, Florence.

PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK.

|        |   |
|--------|---|
| SUN.   | Concert Club, 3.30, Bechstein Hall.                       |
| —      | Sunday Society Concert, 3.30, Queen's Hall.               |
| —      | Sunday League, 7, Queen's Hall.                           |
| MON.   | Subscription Concert, 8.30, Aeolian Hall.                 |
| TUES.  | Miss Marie Hall's Violin Recital, 3, Queen's Hall.        |
| —      | Miss Alys Bateman's Concert, 8.30, Bechstein Hall.        |
| WED.   | Mr. Leon Sametini's Violin Recital, 3.15, Bechstein Hall. |
| —      | Miss Ivy Angove's Orchestral Concert, 8, Queen's Hall.    |
| —      | Miss Ethel Rooke's Violin Recital, 8.30, Bechstein Hall.  |
| THURS. | Broadwood Concert, 8.30, Aeolian Hall.                    |
| FRI.   | London Ballad Concert, 3, Queen's Hall.                   |
| SAT.   | Symphony Concert, 3, Queen's Hall.                        |
| —      | London Trio, 3, Bechstein Hall.                           |
| —      | Madame Albani's Concert, 3.30, Crystal Palace.            |

DRAMA

THE WEEK.

WYNDHAM'S.—'The Lady of Leeds,' in Three Acts. By Robert Marshall.

ST. JAMES'S.—'Mollentrave on Women,' a Comedy in Three Acts. By Alfred Sutro.

ROYALTY.—'The Diplomats,' a Farce in Two Acts. By Sydney Grundy. Founded on 'La Poudre aux Yeux' of Labiche and Martin.—'A Case of Arson.' By Herman Heyermans. Translated by Howard Peacey.

To what shifts managements are driven in their attempts to obtain novelty is testified by the class of pieces they are content, or at any rate compelled, to produce. Of last week's works which, by the employment of indulgence or euphemism, can be regarded or described as new, two are those of men belonging to our very youngest school of authors, while a third is an adaptation by one who may perhaps be styled a stage veteran. As a first product it is doubtful whether one of these would have had a chance of finding its way before the footlights, or when there of passing muster, to say nothing of building a reputation. It is doubtful, indeed—sanguine as is the self-estimate of authors, and flattering as is the tale which Hope is in the habit of whispering in their ears—whether any of the three writers would have dreamt of submitting his future career to an arbitrament such as would attend the choice of any of the works as an opening production. It follows, then, inferentially at least, that the recent plays are either "pot-boilers," brought forward to meet a new and unexpected state of affairs, or works rejected and shelved, but now judged capable of being furbished up to serve a temporary purpose, and accepted, faute de mieux, by starving managements.

Entering upon his career of dramatist after an honourable and active life, Capt. Marshall, in addition to quickness of perception, a full sense of humour, and a pleasant literary style, had had experiences such as it is granted to few men to acquire. Aided by these gifts and possessions, he raced to the front with unexampled rapidity, and became a spoiled child of fortune. Unless his 'Lady of Leeds' prove a check, he has hitherto never been at fault. This piece is, as the world now knows, a sort of parody of 'The Lady of Lyons.' So far as it is this, it is a success, not perhaps of the highest order, but a success. One act is distinctly entertaining. So soon as our author quits his original he becomes uninteresting. His observations on the life of to-day have none of the freshness of those on the life of yesterday, his picture of the humours of a bridge party is dull, and his plunging of the hero and heroine into a canal through the clumsiness of the former belongs to the most elementary aspects of rough-and-tumble farce. There remains Capt. Marshall's neat, polished, and effective style. The value of this may not easily be overestimated. It is not enough, however, to support a piece which is otherwise invertebrate. Hampered by the conditions under which they found themselves, the actors were not at their best, though they may perhaps soon be so. On Mr. Weedon Grossmith and Miss Nancy Price fell the chief burden of the performance. Mr. Vane Tempest and Mr. C. M. Lowne made the most of thankless parts.

Mr. Alfred Sutro shares with Mr. Hubert Davies the responsibility of being the youngest of our successful dramatists. His 'Walls of Jericho' is perhaps in its line the most successful of modern dramatic efforts. But for its triumph and the success thereof begotten, his 'Mollentrave on Women' would scarcely have found its way on to the stage. Though owing, possibly, some suggestion to the thirty-seventh Nouvelle of 'Les Cent Nouvelles Nouvelles' and the 'On ne s'avise jamais de Tout' of La Fontaine, his new work is pleasantly and quaintly conceived, has a humorous and piquant title, and a pleasing first act. The author is unable, however, to carry out his own conceptions, and a stream swift-flowing at the outset finds its way through marsh lands to the sea. A public favourably disposed from the first received the performance with enthusiasm, and almost succeeded in resisting the somnolent influence of weak second and third acts. Before the play can be made sympathetic, a love interest between the hero and a fair widow must be strengthened. We are almost inclined to think that Mr. Sutro has backed the wrong horse of the two which represent his stable, and that he would have been wiser to accept a dénoûment which apparently he went out of his way to avoid. Mr. Eric Lewis played in happiest fashion as Mollentrave, the writer of a book on women which is accepted as authoritative; Miss Marion Terry exhibited her ripe powers as a widow, and Miss Lettice Fairfax was entertaining as an ingénue. The play may be seen with a certain measure of enjoyment, but is far below the expectations raised by its author's previous work.

So great was the popularity enjoyed by 'A Pair of Spectacles,' an adaptation of 'Les Petits Oiseaux' of Eugène Labiche, that Mr. Sydney Grundy, largely on the credit of his treatment of it, became the acknowledged paragon of adapters. At some time of his career, then, he executed a rendering of 'La Poudre aux Yeux,' which may be regarded as a companion piece of the same author, produced a few months (October 19th, 1861) earlier, and belonging to the same period of development. This he has now brought out, without being well advised in so doing. It is only by way of contrast that the later adaptation can be compared with the earlier. Out of a neat and sympathetic comedy, satirizing pleasantly bourgeois weaknesses and pretension, leaning a little in the direction of exaggeration and caricature, Mr. Grundy has made a farce in which exaggeration and caricature run riot. Some clever actors are engaged in its production, but make, as a rule, little of their respective parts.

Against this rather saddening exhibition of English shortcoming we may put one foreign triumph. 'A Case of Arson' is an authorized rendering of 'Brand in de Jonge Jan,' a one-act piece by Herman Heyermans, given for a solitary occasion in Dutch at the Albert Hall Theatre on July 1st. Since the appearance of the original Mr. Henri de Vries has, by way of fitting himself to appear in English, acquired a considerable knowledge of our language. The work, in which he plays seven different characters, shows the investigations of a magistrate into a crime which has been committed in his district. A cigar factory has been burnt down. Its destruction is clearly due to design, not to accident, and has involved some lamentable loss of life. In the course of the investigation conducted the guilt is brought home to an individual against whom suspicion had not been directed, and a confession is wrung from him in a fashion familiar enough in French law, which apparently conforms to that of Holland. In this powerful and rather gloomy little piece Mr. de Vries assumes the seven characters examined by the magistrate. The task of differentiating these is cleverly accomplished, and the exhibition of the various individuals, all belonging to types immediately above the peasant, is a tour de force, and furnishes opportunity for some display of psychology.

Dramatic Gossip.

MISS TREE'S appearance as Hero adds to the picturesqueness and interest of Mr. Tree's presentation of 'Much Ado about Nothing.' Hers is a pleasant, ingenuous, and agreeable performance. Loth as we are to father any interference with Shakspeare's text, we would suggest that in the case of an impersonation so exceptional in some respects, allusions to Leonato's short daughter should be altered or omitted, as begetting a species of mirth inconsistent with the intention and aim of the play.

'HEART OF GOLD,' a one-act play by Miss Beatrix de Burgh and Mr. Lawrence Grant, was produced at the Coronet Theatre on Saturday. Its scene is laid within the Russian lines at Manchuria, and the action shows the suicide of a Japanese maiden who has facilitated the escape of her lover, a prisoner, after pledging her life not to do so. It was fairly acted, and received with favour.

'OUR FLAT,' a three-act farce, first produced in the country, and still highly popular there, and seen in 1889 at three London theatres, has been revived at the Comedy. Mr. Willie Edouin remains, as he always was, its principal support. His performance of Nathaniel Glover, a theatrical manager, is a clever piece of caricature. Miss Nora Lancaster gives also an excellent piece of acting as the heroine.

It is stated that Mr. Walter Stephens, who offers a considerable contribution to the fund for a repertory theatre, has ready for production an adaptation of 'Paradise Lost,' permission to act which is refused by the Censure. Dryden, having received from Milton a contemptuously accorded permission to tag his verses, wrote his 'State of Innocence' and 'Fall of Man,' which, though thrice printed in the seventeenth century, were never performed. It was concerning this, presumably, that Marvell wrote to the poet:—

Or if a work so infinite be spann'd,
Jealous I was that some less skillful hand
(Such as disquiet always what is well,
And by ill-imitating would excel)
Might hence presume the whole creation's day
To change in scenes, and show it in a play.

ON Tuesday next Mr. James Welch, Mr. Henry Kemble, Miss Annie Hughes, and Miss Compton will appear at the Avenue in 'Mr. Hopkinson,' a light comedy by R. C. Carton.

M. COQUELIN sees no necessity for an English repertory theatre, and expresses a doubt, which others are disposed to share, whether such a thing is obtainable in this country.

'LEAH KLESCHNA,' a drama by Hugh Morton (Mr. Charles McLellan), was said to have been obtained by Mrs. Patrick Campbell. Later and more trustworthy intelligence states it to have been secured by Mr. Frohman, who will produce it in London by Easter, with Sir Charles Wyndham as Paul Sylvaire and Miss Lena Ashwell as the eponymous heroine.

MISS TITA BRAND promises in May a short West-End season, to begin with 'Othello,' in which she will play Desdemona.

MADAME RÉJANE has arranged for a three weeks' season at Terry's Theatre during the coming summer.

The production at the Imperial by Mr. Lewis Waller of 'Romeo and Juliet' is postponed until Easter.

WE regret that by a printing error Covent Garden was in our last issue given for the Coronet as the scene of Mr. Benson's forthcoming experiment.

'DER KILOMETERFRESSER' is the title of an amusing if nondescript farce in three acts of Herr C. Kraatz, which is the latest novelty at the Thalia Theater, Berlin. Herr Thralscher, known for his performance in 'Charley's Aunt,' plays the hero. The title indicates a "scorcher" on a motor-car.

ZOLA'S 'Thérèse Raquin,' first produced at the Théâtre de la Renaissance in July, 1873, has been revived at the Odéon, in the repertory of which theatre it will henceforth remain.

OF three novelties produced at the Théâtre Antoine, 'L'Amourette,' a three-act comedy, is the most ambitious. It is neither very original nor very striking, but is at least moderately cheerful, which in the case of pieces given at this house is a novelty.

'DAS GERETTETE VENEDIG,' a five-act drama by Herr Hugo von Hofmannsthal, produced at the Lessing Theatre, Berlin, is an adaptation of Otway's 'Venice Preserved,' in which Fräulein Triescho played Belvidera; Herr Rittner, Pierre; and Herr Bassermann, Jaffier.

MISCELLANEA*COLERIDGE'S POEMS: NEW INFORMATION.

Heidelberg, Bergheimerstrasse 45, Feb. 7th, 1905.

WITH reference to the communication under the above heading in The Athenæum for February 4th, it ought to be pointed out that Mr. Bertram Dobell, the well-known bookseller and editor of Traherne's poems, had already done something towards fixing the origin of 'Fancy in Nubius.' On p. 2 of his Catalogue No. 116, issued in November, 1903, the poem was printed from Charles Lamb's autograph in a copy of the 'Sibylline Leaves' which had been in Lamb's possession. The title is 'Fancy in the Clouds: a Marine Sonnet'; there are a few textual variations from the standard version, and the ascription at the end is to "S. T. Coleridge, Little Hampton, Oct., 1818." The date cannot, of course, be maintained in the face of Mr. Weare's discovery. It is probably only another instance of Coleridge's frequent lapses of memory where autobiographical data were concerned—or the error must be laid to the gentle Elia's charge.

LIONEL R. M. STRACHAN.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.—J. H. M.—G. W. P.—G. le G. N.—F. M.—received.

A. E. S.—Duly inserted.

W. H. C.—Already allotted.

W. A.—T. A.—Not suitable for us.

No notice can be taken of anonymous communications.

THE ATHENÆUM,
PRICE THREEPENCE.TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION BY POST.

To all parts of the United Kingdom.

|                      |     |     |     |     |    |   |
|----------------------|-----|-----|-----|-----|----|---|
| For Twelve Months... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 15 | 3 |
| For Six Months       | ... | ... | ... | ... | 7  | 8 |

For all Countries within the Postal Union.

|                      |     |     |     |     |    |   |
|----------------------|-----|-----|-----|-----|----|---|
| For Twelve Months... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 18 | 0 |
| For Six Months       | ... | ... | ... | ... | 9  | 0 |

JOHN C. FRANCIS,

Athenæum Office, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

THE ATHENÆUM.*SCALE OF CHARGES FOR ADVERTISEMENTS.

|                           |    |    |    |    |   |    |    |
|---------------------------|----|----|----|----|---|----|----|
| 5 Lines of Pearl ..       | .. | .. | .. | .. | £ | s. | d. |
| 75 " " " (Half-Column) .. | .. | .. | .. | .. | 0 | 3  | 6  |
| A Column ..               | .. | .. | .. | .. | 1 | 16 | 0  |
| A Page ..                 | .. | .. | .. | .. | 3 | 3  | 0  |
| A Page ..                 | .. | .. | .. | .. | 9 | 9  | 0  |

Auctions and Public Institutions, Five Lines 4s., and 8d. per line of Pearl type beyond.

IN THE MEASUREMENT OF ADVERTISEMENTS, CARE SHOULD BE TAKEN TO MEASURE FROM RULE TO RULE.

Advertisements across Two Columns, one-third extra beyond the space occupied, the first charge being 30s.

JOHN C. FRANCIS,

The Athenæum Office, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, London, E.C.

MESSRS. BELL'S
NEW BOOKS.

COMPLETE CATALOGUE POST FREE
ON APPLICATION.

THIRD AND CHEAPER EDITION. 6s. net.

THE ART OF
J. McNEILL WHISTLER.

An Appreciation.

By T. R. WAY and G. RAVENSCROFT DENNIS.

With numerous Illustrations.

[Ready February 20.]

"If anything were needed to give the world a just view of one whom it so entirely misunderstood in life, it is supplied by the admirably complete, sympathetic, and richly illustrated study of Messrs. Way and Dennis."
Mr. A. G. GARDINER in the Daily News.

CHEAPER REISSUE. Demy 8vo, 7s. 6d. net.

THE WAR OF THE
SUCCESSION IN SPAIN

During the Reign of Queen Anne, 1702-1711.

Based on Original Manuscripts and Contemporary Records.

By Col. the Hon. ARTHUR PARNELL, R.E.

[Ready February 22.]

BELL'S MINIATURE SERIES OF
GREAT WRITERS.

Pott 8vo, illustrated, cloth, 1s. net; or in limp leather, with Photogravure Frontispiece, 2s. net.

NEW VOLUME.

JOHNSON. By John Dennis.

[Ready Feb. 22.]

BELL'S MINIATURE SERIES OF
MUSICIANS.

Pott 8vo, illustrated, cloth, 1s. net; or in limp leather, with Photogravure Frontispiece, 2s. net each.

NEW VOLUME.

SCHUMANN. By E. J. Oldmeadow.

[Ready Feb. 22.]

BOHN'S LIBRARIES.

NEW VOLUMES.

CARLYLE'S FRENCH REVOLU-

TION. Edited, with Introduction, Notes, and Appendices, by J. HOLLAND ROSE, Litt.D., Author of the 'Life of Napoleon I.' 3 vols. small post 8vo, 5s. each.

A CHEAPER EDITION OF WHEATLEY'S PEPYS.

The DIARY of SAMUEL PEPYS,

M.A. F.R.S. Transcribed from the Shorthand MS. in the Pepysian Library, Magdalene College, Cambridge, by the Rev. MYNORS BRIGHT, M.A. With LORD BRAYBROOKE'S Notes. Edited, with Additions, by HENRY B. WHEATLEY, F.S.A. In 8 vols. post 8vo, 5s. net each. [Vols. I.-VII. now ready.]

* * * This reprint contains the whole of the text of the Diary, and the Notes and Index, as given in the ten-volume edition, the volume entitled 'Pepysiana' only being omitted.

"Mr. Wheatley has easily distanced all previous editors, both in the completeness of his matter and his annotations, and there is little doubt that this new classic edition of a classic will be a great success."—Athenæum.

THE YORK LIBRARY.

A NEW SERIES OF REPRINTS ON THIN PAPER.

Small 8vo, 2s. net in cloth, and 3s. net in leather.

NEW VOLUMES.

CERVANTES' DON QUIXOTE.

Motteux's Translation, Revised. With Lockhart's Life and Notes. 2 vols.

EMERSON'S WORKS. Edited and

Collated by GEORGE SAMPSON. Vol. IV. Containing Miscellaneous Pieces.

COLERIDGE'S TABLE TALK and

OMNIANA. Arranged and Edited by T. ASHE, B.A.

DRAPER'S HISTORY of the IN-

TELLECTUAL DEVELOPMENT of EUROPE. 2 vols.

Others to follow.

London: GEORGE BELL & SONS,
Portugal Street, Lincoln's Inn, W.C.

SMITH, ELDER &amp; CO.'S PUBLICATIONS.

MRS. HUMPHRY WARD'S NEW NOVEL.

ON MARCH 9 WILL BE PUBLISHED,

WITH 9 FULL-PAGE ILLUSTRATIONS BY ALBERT STERNER, crown 8vo, 6s.

THE MARRIAGE OF WILLIAM ASHE.

By Mrs. HUMPHRY WARD,

AUTHOR OF 'ROBERT ELSMERE,' 'ELEANOR,' 'LADY ROSE'S DAUGHTER,' &amp;c.

SHORTLY, with 20 Full-Page Illustrations, demy 8vo, 12s. 6d. net.

The STORY of an INDIAN UPLAND. By

F. B. BRADLEY-BIRT, F.R.G.S. I.C.S., Author of 'Chota Nagpore: a Little-known Province of the Empire,' &amp;c. With an Introduction by the Hon. H. H. RISLEY, C.S.I. C.I.E., Home Secretary to the Government of India.

* * This book attempts to strike the happy mean between the Blue Book and the novel, giving a picture of the real India which both so often disguise. It deals brightly with the history of an out-of-the-way district—a fascinating land of jungle and mystery—and gives a picturesque account of the many races that have peopled it from the earliest times, through Hindu and Mussulman supremacy down to its final subjugation by the British.

A VAGRANT ENGLISHWOMAN. By Catherine

I. DODD. Crown 8vo, 6s. [In March.]

* * Miss Catherine Dodd, whose educational interests have led her to know German life from within, depicts with clear but sympathetic touch many scenes of life, whether in a German university town or further afield, as it would appear to a cultivated Englishwoman living in close intimacy with the professional and student classes.

HISTORICAL MYSTERIES. By Andrew Lang.

With a Frontispiece. Small demy 8vo, 9s. net.

SPECTATOR.—"These stories are quite as sensational as any romance, and are told with a wit and a vivacity which few writers of fiction can hope to attain to."

VANITY FAIR.—"One of the pleasantest, most absorbing, and most learned of recent publications in the province of history."

WESTMINSTER GAZETTE.—"All are excellent 'mysteries,' and such as attract the curious or speculative mind."

COLONIAL MEMORIES. By Lady Broome,

Authoress (as Lady BARKER) of 'Ribbon Stories,' 'Stories about —,' &amp;c. Large post 8vo, 6s. net.

TIMES.—"Written with first-hand knowledge and a pleasing sense of humour."

PALL MALL GAZETTE.—"A most interesting, womanly, and observant book."

LEAVES from the DIARY of HENRY

GREVILLE. THIRD SERIES. By ALICE, COUNTESS of STRAF-FORD. 8vo, 14s.

TRUTH.—"Excellent reading from the first page to the last. There are many very good and quite new stories about well-known people."

WESTMINSTER GAZETTE.—"The book is full of good things."

TRAGIC DRAMA in ÆSCHYLUS, SOPHOCLES, and SHAKESPEARE: an Essay. By LEWIS CAMPBELL, M.A. Oxon, LL.D. Glasgow, Hon. D. Litt. Oxon., Emeritus Professor of Greek at the University of St. Andrews, &amp;c. Large post 8vo, 7s. 6d.

DAILY TELEGRAPH.—"One of the most masterly comparisons of the tragic methods of Æschylus, Sophocles, and Shakespeare that have appeared in English."

SCOTSMAN.—"Full of ripe learning and well-weighed opinions."

OUTLINES of the HISTORY of ART. By Dr.

WILHELM LÜBKE. NEW EDITION. Edited, minutely Revised, and largely Rewritten by RUSSELL STURGIS, A.M. Ph.D. F.A.I.A., Author of 'Dictionary of Architecture and Building,' 'European Architecture,' &amp;c. In 2 vols. imperial 8vo, copiously illustrated, 36s. net.

WORLD.—"The amount of added fact is great and important."

MRS. HENRY DE LA PASTURE'S NEW NOVEL.

AT ALL LIBRARIES AND BOOKSELLERS'. Crown 8vo, 6s.

PETER'S MOTHER.

By Mrs. HENRY DE LA PASTURE,

Author of 'Deborah of Tod's,' 'Adam Grigson,' 'Cornelius,' &amp;c.

* * In her new novel Mrs. de la Pasture breaks fresh ground in giving, with more than one love current, the story of the relations between a young heir and his widowed mother. The scene is laid in a Devonshire country house, the titular mistress of which is 'Peter's Mother.'

SHORTLY, with a Portrait Frontispiece, small demy 8vo, 10s. 6d. net.

TRACKS OF A ROLLING STONE. By the

Hon. HENRY J. COKE, Author of 'A Ride over the Rocky Mountains,' 'Creeds of the Day,' &amp;c.

* * The Hon. Henry Coke has gathered together many experiences of a varied and interesting career. There can hardly be another who was kissed as a child by Queen Adelaide, served in the Chinese War of 1840, explored the prairies when herds of buffalo still roamed there, and was welcomed as a guest of the Emperor Napoleon to the revelries of Compiègne.

TO LHASA AT LAST. By Powell Millington,

Author of 'In Cantonments,' 'In and Beyond Cantonments,' &amp;c. With a Frontispiece. Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d. net.

[First Edition nearly sold out.]

SPECTATOR.—"Major Millington has accomplished a difficult task with much success.....He has aimed at producing a light-hearted, slangy chronicle of the road. His jokes are nearly always good, and they are very numerous; and it is a triumph of a sort to have given so mysterious a journey the atmosphere of everyday life."

NEW AND CHEAPER EDITIONS OF TWO POPULAR BOOKS.

SHORTLY, crown 8vo, 3s. 6d. net.

The TRAGEDY of the "KOROSKO." By A.

CONAN DOYLE. With 40 Full-Page Illustrations.

DAILY NEWS.—"A fine story, the interest of which arrests the reader's attention at the start and holds it to the close."

The GREEN FLAG, and other Stories of War

and Sport. By A. CONAN DOYLE. With a Frontispiece.

DAILY TELEGRAPH.—"The battle picture is perfect of its kind. Altogether the volume is admirable."

JULIA. Second Impression.

By KATHARINE TYNAN. Crown 8vo, 6s.

MORNING POST.—"The story is altogether charming, and there is no single man or woman in it whom one would not like to know."

WESTMINSTER GAZETTE.—"A delightful picture of Irish life."

* * Messrs. SMITH, ELDER &amp; CO. will be happy to send a Copy of their CATALOGUE post free on application.

London: SMITH, ELDER &amp; CO. 15, Waterloo Place, S.W.

DAVID NUTT,
57-59, LONG ACRE.

JUST OUT.

CLASSICAL REVIEW.

Editor—J. P. POSTGATE, 54, Bateman Street, Cambridge.
Associates. England: H. B. WALTERS, British Museum
(Archæology)
America: WM. GARDNER HALE, University of Chicago,
T. D. SEYMOUR, Yale University, and J. H. WRIGHT, Harvard University.

Vol. XIX., FEBRUARY, 1905, No. 1, 3s. net.

Contents.

EDITORIAL and GENERAL:—

The Classical Association of England and Wales.
Classical Studies. The EARL of HALSBURY.
Latin Orthography: an Appeal to Scholars.

ORIGINAL CONTRIBUTIONS:—

The Use and Origin of Apostrophe in Homer. R. M. HENRY.

Suggestions on the 'Nicomachean Ethics.' L. H. G. GREENWOOD.

Notes on Marcus Aurelius. HERBERT RICHARDS.

Prohibitions in Greek. H. DARNLEY NAYLOR.

Greek Prohibitions. W. HEADLAM.

Modern Greek as a Help for Old Greek. ALEX. PALLIS and W. H. D. ROUSE.

Note on the Messianic Character of the Fourth Eclogue.
H. W. GARROD.

The Ambrosian MS. of Prudentius. E. O. WINSTEDT.

SHORTER CONTRIBUTIONS and NOTES by J. B. BURY,
C. H. MOORE, C. M. SMILEY, D. A. SLATER, H. W. GREENE, C. J. BRENNAN, F. HAVERFIELD, &c.

REVIEWS:

Kalbfeisch's 'Galen de Causis Continentibus.' T. CLIFFORD ALLBUTT.

Klostermann's 'Onomastikon' of Eusebius. R. G. BURY.

A New Translation of the 'Theophania' of Eusebius.
F. C. BURKITT.

Green's 'Odes of Horace.' E. W. BOWLING.

Hosius's 'Gellius.' W. M. LINDSAY.

Hale and Buck's 'Latin Grammar.' E. A. SONNEN-SCHEIN.

BRIEFER NOTICES.

CORRESPONDENCE.

REPORTS:—

Proceedings of the Oxford Philological Society—
Michaelmas Term, 1904. A. H. J. GREENIDGE.

The Classical Association of Scotland. W. LOBBAN.

VERSIONS:—

Three Jolly Post-Boys. R. Y. TYRRELL.

From Wordsworth. W. HEADLAM.

Song from Scott. D. A. SLATER.

ARCHÆOLOGY:—

Recent Excavations in Rome. THOMAS ASHBY, Jun.

The Excavations at Phylakopi. H. R. HALL.

Walters' 'Catalogue of British Museum Terracottas.'
CLEMENT GUTCH.

Butler's 'Architecture and other Arts.' R. PHENE SPIERS.

Studniczka's 'Trophy of Trajan.' P. GARDNER.

Helbig's 'Athenian Knights.' E. A. GARDNER.

BRIEF NOTICES.

Monthly Record. F. H. MARSHALL.

Archæological and Numismatic Summaries. H. B. WALTERS and WARWICK WROTH.

SUMMARIES OF PERIODICALS.

BOOKS RECEIVED.

* * Subscriptions (13s. 6d. post free) for Vol. XIX. are now due. New Subscriptions are earnestly solicited, in order to enable the Editor and Publisher of the CLASSICAL REVIEW to increase its size and extend its usefulness to Scholars.

NATIONAL PROVIDENT INSTITUTION

Estab.] FOR MUTUAL LIFE ASSURANCE. [1835.

Accumulated Fund over ... .. £6,000,000
Paid in Claims more than ... .. £12,400,000

PROFITS.

These are divided every five years solely amongst the Assured. At the 1902 Division a Cash Profit of £761,602 was apportioned amongst the members, being considerably more than one-third of the amount paid in premiums during the previous five years.

ENDOWMENT-ASSURANCE

Policies are issued, combining Life Assurance at minimum cost with provision for old age, and are singularly advantageous.

L. F. HOVIL,

Actuary and Secretary.

48, Gracechurch Street, London, E.C.
Applications for Agencies invited.

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

The best remedy for
ACIDITY of the STOMACH, HEADACHE,
HEARTBURN, GOUT,

And INDIGESTION.

And Safest Aperient for Delicate Constitutions,

Ladies, Children, and Infants.

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

DIGBY, LONG & CO.'S NEW LIST. THE ADVENTURES OF A NAVAL OFFICER.

By Capt. CHARLES HUNTER, R.N.
Edited by Sir SPENSER ST. JOHN, G.C.M.G.

In crown 8vo, cloth gilt, price 6s.
Morning Post.—"The story of Capt. Hunter's experiences is one of the most thrilling we have ever read. It is vivid in the extreme....It is delightfully readable from beginning to end."
Athenæum.—"The book is thoroughly enjoyable."

NEW SIX-SHILLING NOVELS.

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'THE CHAMELEON.'

THE DOLL'S DANCE.

By CLARENCE FORESTIER WALKER.

Pall Mall Gazette.—"A well-told and exciting story."

A FOE in the FAMILY. By Nowell
CAY, Author of 'The Presumption of Stanley Hay, M.P.'

Glasgow Herald.—"The characters are well drawn, and the plot, though slight, is cleverly worked up, and the interest of the reader never allowed to flag."

The LUCK of BELLA BARTON. By
G. W. APPLETON, Author of 'François the Valet.'

With 6 Full-Page Illustrations by C. KEMP TEBBY.

Scotsman.—"An exciting bit of fiction."

CELIA'S FORTUNE.

Times.—"A well-told story." By ADELINE SERGEANT.

Outlook.—"The novel shows Miss Sergeant's power at its ripest."

The MANDARIN'S FAN.

By FERGUS HUME.

Scotsman.—"A story of absorbing interest."

FAVOURS from FRANCE.

World.—"A charming story." By SARAH TYTLER.

Daily News.—"The book is well worth reading."

A DOUBTFUL CHARACTER.

By BRIAN WALCOT.

Lincoln Mercury.—"A cleverly-written story of the most absorbing interest."

NEW BOOK ON PRISON LIFE.

BOLTS AND BARS.

By F. C. VERNON HARCOURT.

In demy 8vo, with 14 Full-Page Illustrations, 3s. 6d.

Daily Telegraph.—"No better pictures of prison life have ever been written in this country."

In crown 8vo, cloth gilt, 7s. 6d. net.

The DIVINA COMMEDIA of DANTE.

Translated into English Verse by C. POTTER.

Aberdeen Press.—"This translation has led us to read again the great poem of Dante. It is a translation to be read with pleasure and profit.
The verse in English has music and rhythm, it glides easily along, and it bears with it the meaning of the poet in such a measure that the English reader may readily grasp it."

London: DIGBY, LONG & CO. 18, Bouverie St., E.C.

NOTES AND QUERIES.

GENERAL INDEXES.

THE FOLLOWING ARE STILL IN STOCK:—

GENERAL INDEX, £. s. d.

FOURTH SERIES ... 3 3 0

GENERAL INDEX,

SIXTH SERIES ... 0 6 0

GENERAL INDEX,

SEVENTH SERIES ... 0 6 0

GENERAL INDEX,

EIGHTH SERIES ... 0 6 0

For Copies by post an additional Threepence is charged.

JOHN C. FRANCIS,

Notes and Queries Office,

11, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

AUTHORIZED TO BE USED BY BRITISH SUBJECTS.

THE NATIONAL FLAG,

BEING

THE UNION JACK.

COPIES OF

NOTES AND QUERIES

FOR JUNE 30, 1900,

Can still be had, containing an account of the Flag, with Coloured Illustration according to scale.

JOHN C. FRANCIS, Notes and Queries Office, Bream's Buildings, E.C.

CLIFFORD'S INN.

For view of CLIFFORD'S INN, taken in 1892, see

NOTES AND QUERIES, April 2, 1892.

The same Number also contains Sketches of the ROLLS CHAPEL, OLD SERJEANTS' INN, the GATEWAY, LINCOLN'S INN, &c.

Price 4½d., free by post, of

JOHN C. FRANCIS, Notes and Queries Office, Bream's Buildings, E.C.

MR. JOHN LANE begs to announce that he will publish on FEBRUARY 21 the long-deferred authentic Biography of Robert Stephen Hawker, the famous Parson-Poet of Morwenstow, by his Son-in-Law.

THE LIFE AND LETTERS OF R. S. HAWKER

(VICAR OF MORWENSTOW).

By his Son-in-law, C. E. BYLES, with numerous Illustrations, including a Water-Colour Sketch of Hawker by the EARL of CARLISLE, Lithographs by J. LEY PETHY-BRIDGE, Reproductions of Portraits, &c. Demy 8vo, 21s. net.

Hawker was for forty years Vicar of Morwenstow, a lonely parish on the Cornish coast. He was an eccentric genius, whose mind took colour from its wild and romantic environment. Cornwall, in his youth, was the haunt of the smuggler and the wrecker, whose traditions he has embodied in his 'Cornish Ballads,' and 'Footprints of Former Men in Far Cornwall.' He is, perhaps, best known by the ballad with the old refrain—"And shall Trelawny die? Here's twenty thousand Cornish men will know the reason why"—a poem so full of the antique spirit as to deceive such an astute critic as Macaulay, not to mention Scott and Dickens. Tennyson visited Hawker in 1848, and drew from him much material for the 'Idylls.' Hawker's account of this memorable visit is given in the book.

AT ALL LIBRARIES, BOOKSELLERS', AND RAILWAY BOOKSTALLS ON FEBRUARY 21.

BOOKS TO ORDER FROM THE LIBRARY. WITH the PILGRIMS to MECCA:

The Great Pilgrimage, A.H. 1318, A.D. 1903. By HADJIKHAN, M.R.A.S., Special Correspondent of the Morning Post, and WILFRID SPARRO. With an Introduction by Prof. VAMBERY, and many Illustrations. Demy 8vo, 12s. 6d. net.

6s. NEW SIX-SHILLING NOVELS. 6s. HELEN of TROY, N.Y.

By WILFRID S. JACKSON, Author of 'Nine Points of the Law' ... 6s.

A NEW PAOLO and FRANCESCA. By ANNIE E. HOLDSWORTH ... 6s.

BEFORE the CRISIS. By F. B. MOTT ... 6s.

HELEN ALLISTON. By the Author of 'Elizabeth's Children' ... 6s.

CONSTANCE WEST. By E. R. PUNSHON ... 6s.

[Ready February 21.]

JOHN LANE, Publisher, London and New York.

THE REVELL COMPANY

HAVE JUST PUBLISHED

THE CULTURE OF SIMPLICITY.

By MALCOLM JAMES McLEOD.

Price 3s. 6d. net (postage 4d.).

In fifteen chapters the author considers the relation of simplicity to happiness, the home, culture, spirituality, the pulpit, and to literature. His object is to emphasize Lowell's saying that the "highest outcome of culture is simplicity."

LITTLE MISS DEE

Is the title of ROSWELL FIELD'S New Story, also just ready, price 3s. 6d. net (postage 3d.).

Those who have read the Author's 'Bondage of Ballinger' will find that the same flavour of Charles Lamb, combined with New England humour, characterizes his new story.

NEW FORCES IN OLD CHINA,

By ARTHUR J. BROWN,

gives some startling information on the transformation that has come over China since the Boxer Rebellion. Illustrated. 5s. net (postage 4d.).

The Spectator says: "It is profoundly interesting, and will well repay careful study."

MISSIONS and MODERN HISTORY:

a Study of the Missionary Aspect of some Great Movements of the Nineteenth Century. By ROBERT E. SPEER, Author of 'Missionary Principles and Practice.' 2 vols. 8vo, 15s. net (postage 7d.).

Mr. Speer takes up twelve of the greatest political and social events or catastrophes of the past century and shows their relation to, and bearing on, Christian missions.

DR. MURRAY MITCHELL'S NEW BOOK.

The GREAT RELIGIONS of INDIA.

By the late J. MURRAY MITCHELL, M.A. LL.D. With Map and Portrait. 5s. net (postage 4d.).

Contents:—1. Introductory. 2. Hinduism. 3. Zoroastrianism, the Religion of the Parsis. 4. Buddhism. 5. Muhammadanism. 6. The Religions of the Wild Races.

HOLY HIMALAYA. The Religions,

Traditions, and Scenery of a Himalayan Province. By the Rev. E. S. OAKLEY, of the London Missionary Society. With 16 Illustrations. 5s. (postage 4d.).

21, Paternoster Square, E.C.; and Edinburgh.

THE LIBRARY.

A QUARTERLY MAGAZINE OF
BIBLIOGRAPHY
AND LIBRARY LITERATURE.

EDITED BY

J. Y. W. MACALISTER

AND

ALFRED W. POLLARD,

IN COLLABORATION WITH

KONRAD BURGER, LEOPOLD DELISLE,
MELVILLE DEWEY, and RICHARD GARNETT.

A NEW VOLUME BEGINS THIS MONTH.

Among the Contents for 1904 were Articles on

Robert Proctor, by Alfred Pollard; the Perceval Legend, by Jessie L. Weston; Tottel's Miscellany, by W. W. Greg; Notes from the first French Translation of the Vicar of Wakefield, by G. F. Barwick; the Musée Dobrée at Nantes, by R. S. Faber; Bad Books, by R. F. Cholmeley; Secret Printing during the Civil War, by H. R. Plomer; Letters of Henry Bradshaw to Officials at the British Museum; Public Utilization of Existing Libraries, by James Duff Brown; a Cataloguing Bureau for Public Libraries, by Stanley Jast; Reviews of recent French and German Books, by Elizabeth Lee.

Printed at the Chiswick Press.

Single Numbers, 3s.;

Annual Subscription, 10s. 6d.

Bound Volumes, 12s.

A few Complete Sets still in print.

Published by

KEGAN PAUL, TRENCH, TRÜBNER & CO.,
LTD., Dryden House, Gerrard Street, W.C.

MR. HEINEMANN'S NEW BOOKS.

A FASCINATING BOOK OF MEMOIRS.

A BELLE OF THE FIFTIES.

Being Memories of Mrs. Clay, of Alabama, covering Social and Political Life in Washington and the South, 1853-66. Edited by ADA STERLING. With Portraits. 10s. 6d. net.

"That section of society which met in Washington before the Civil War could compare in cultivation, taste, and intelligence with the Courts of Europe. Mrs. Clay describes it with great spirit and vivacity.....She herself was a fascinating and brilliant figure, a clever and high-spirited beauty."—Times.

FRENCH PROFILES.

Studies in the Literature of France. By EDMUND GOSSE. Buckram, 7s. 6d.

"The method and the subject suit Mr. Gosse's happy talent for the aperçu..... easy and graceful literary portraits." Academy.

THE COUNTRY DAY BY DAY.

By E. KAY ROBINSON. With 24 Full-Page Illustrations. 6s.

"The best of writers on nature." Athenæum.

"An inexhaustible supply of fresh observation, which he gives us in a delightful setting."—Times.

THE LAND OF THE BLESSED VIRGIN.

By W. SOMERSET MAUGHAM. 6s. net.

"A book admirable in literary form.....One sees through the whole book the yearning love for the sunny land, the love of an artist."—Daily Chronicle.

NEW SIX-SHILLING NOVELS.

By HALL CAINE.

THE PRODIGAL SON.

"In truth a notable novel, and a work that may certainly rank with the best of recent fiction."—Westminster Gazette.

By E. F. BENSON. Eighth Thousand.

AN ACT IN A BACKWATER.

"One of the best of Mr. Benson's books.....Carefully and soberly written." Westminster Gazette.

By BARONESS VON HUTTEN.

Second Impression.

PAM.

"'Pam' is an excellent novel, well written, and containing some capital character studies."—Saturday Review.

By ELINOR M. LANE.

NANCY STAIR.

"Both interesting and well written. The authoress has drawn an entrancing figure of the heroine." W. L. COURTNEY, in the Daily Telegraph.

By MRS. BELLOC LOWNDES.

THE HEART OF PENELOPE.

"One of the best of recent novels.....a novel of quite exceptional power of interest."—Bookman.

London:

WM. HEINEMANN, 21, Bedford Street, W.C.

SELECTED FROM
CHAPMAN & HALL'S LIST OF SPRING BOOKS, 1905.

THE BURNING QUESTION.

RUSSIA on the EVE of REVOLUTION. By G. H. Perris. Illustrated.
Demy 8vo.

This striking and impressive book, founded upon close personal observation of all sides of subterranean life in the country of the Tsar, appears at a peculiarly appropriate time. It sets forth in graphic language and with absolute fidelity to fact the causes that have led to the present reign of terror, gives vivid word-pictures of the leaders of the revolution, and lets the reader into many suppressed stories of tyranny and oppression. A number of pictures, from photographs taken on the spot, add to the convincing quality of the narrative.

"THE ALIEN IMMIGRANT."

The PROBLEM of the IMMIGRANT. By J. D. Whelpley. Demy 8vo, 10s. 6d. net.

This book deals with the uses and abuses of the immigration system, and compares very elaborately the immigration laws in all the principal countries in the world. It is both statistical and critical, and contains a vast amount of information not hitherto accessible even to careful students of the subject.

MR. WELLS'S FANTASY.

A MODERN UTOPIA. By H. G. Wells. With numerous Illustrations by E. J. SULLIVAN. Large crown 8vo, 7s. 6d.

This is the last of the three books which contain Mr. Wells's views on the society of the future. It is lighter and more picturesque than 'Anticipations' or 'Mankind in the Making,' and is being illustrated with imaginative drawings by E. J. Sullivan, whose pictures to 'Sartor Resartus' were such a success.

A LEADER OF THE COURTS.

WILHELMINA, MARGRAVINE of BAYREUTH. By Edith E. Cuthell.
With numerous Portraits. Demy 8vo.

This is a romantic story from real history, dealing with a highly talented woman of the eighteenth century who moved in Continental Courts and founded the fortunes of the town of Bayreuth. It is constructed entirely from fresh material gathered from documents hitherto unknown, and gives a bright and spirited picture of Court life on the Continent one hundred years ago.

A STUDY IN DESCENT.

The PRINCIPLES of HEREDITY. By G. Archdall Reid, Author of 'Alcoholism: Its Cause and Cure.' Demy 8vo.

This is a highly important scientific work, throwing fresh light on the problem of heredity. It is anticipated that it will have a genuine effect upon modern thought.

SHAKESPEARE AND ANN HATHAWAY.

SHAKESPEARE'S MARRIAGE and DEPARTURE from STRATFORD.
By J. W. GRAY. With reproductions of Shakespeare's Manuscript and other Documents. Demy 8vo, 10s. 6d. net.

This book claims to throw new light on several important events in Shakespeare's life, and to correct various mistakes made by other biographers.

FOR ARTIST AND STUDENT.

FIGURE COMPOSITION. By Richard G. Hatton. With a large number of Illustrations from Ancient and Modern Sources. Demy 8vo, 7s. 6d. net.
This book is a companion to 'Figure Drawing.'

GISSING'S
IDEAL TRAVEL-BOOK.

BY the IONIAN SEA. By George Gissing. A New Edition, uniform with 'The Fields of France.' Crown 8vo, 5s. net.

It is felt that this book of Gissing's should appear not only in its large library form, but also in a handy shape for the ordinary bookseller. At the time of Gissing's death it was generally said that this was the best of his books, and that it was a pity it was not more generally accessible.

FOR THE DICKENSIAN.

SYNOPSIS of DICKENS'S NOVELS. By J. Walker McSpadden. 12mo, 2s. 6d. net.

This is a handy little desk-book, giving details of Dickens's stories.

A NEW HANDICRAFT.

THE NEW LACE EMBROIDERY. By L. A. Tebbs. With many Illustrations. 4to, 2s. 6d. net.

This is a little handbook to a new form of art needlework which is just now becoming fashionable.

THE MOST SUCCESSFUL NOVEL OF THE YEAR SO FAR IS

The APPLE of EDEN. By E. Temple Thurston, which has already run into Three Large Editions.

It is a strong book, dealing with the question of the Celibacy of the Priesthood, and has been highly praised by the critics.

The SPEAKER said:—"The Apple of Eden" is a conscientious and searching piece of work."

The ST. JAMES'S GAZETTE said:—"It is an able, outspoken, extremely human study—it is a book to read."

The KING said:—"It is a book which grown men and women may read and admire for its courage and serious aim."

A NEW NOVEL BY THE AUTHORS OF 'THE SHULAMITE.'

EVE—and the LAW. By Alice and Claude Askew, Authors of 'The Shulamite.'

A highly exciting story dealing with some aspects of the marriage question.

OTHER NOVELS TO BE ISSUED SHORTLY.

The MIRROR of KONG HO. By Ernest Bramah, Author of 'The Wallet of Kai-Lung.'

A humorous series of letters from a young Chinaman staying in a Bloomsbury boarding-house, giving his views of English life and manners, and the comic mistakes which he makes during his stay in London. A very entertaining book.

The SILVER KEY. By Nellie K. Blissett, Author of 'Bindweed,' &c,

This is a romantic story in the time of Charles II. It is full of movement and adventure.

London: CHAPMAN & HALL, LIMITED, 11, Henrietta Street, W.C.

THE ATHENÆUM

Journal of English and Foreign Literature, Science, the Fine Arts, Music and the Drama.

No. 4035.

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 25, 1905.

PRICE
THREEPENCE
REGISTERED AS A NEWSPAPER

BRITISH MUSEUM.
The READING ROOMS will be CLOSED from WEDNESDAY, March 1, to SATURDAY, March 4 inclusive.
E. MAUNDE THOMPSON, Director and Principal Librarian.
British Museum, February 21, 1905.

ROYAL INSTITUTION of GREAT BRITAIN,
ALBEMARLE STREET, PICCADILLY, W.

THIS DAY (SATURDAY), February 25, at 3 o'clock, DAVID GEORGE HOGARTH, Esq., M.A., FIRST of TWO LECTURES on 'Archæology.' Half-a-Guinea the Course.

TUESDAY NEXT, February 28, at 5 o'clock, Prof. KARL PEARSON, F.R.S., FIRST of THREE LECTURES on 'Some Recent Biometric Studies.' Half-a-Guinea.

THURSDAY, March 2, at 5 o'clock, Prof. H. H. TURNER, D.Sc. F.R.S., FIRST of THREE LECTURES on 'Recent Astronomical Progress.' Half-a-Guinea.

Subscription to all Courses in the Season, Two Guineas.

THE DANTE SOCIETY,
38, CONDUIT STREET, W.

The NEXT MEETING will be held MARCH 1.
The Rev. J. PAYLING WRIGHT, B.A., will LECTURE on 'LA LUPA DANTESCA.'
EDMUND GOSSE, Esq., LL.D., in the Chair.

ON THE FOUNDATION OF THE HIBBERT TRUST.

MR. L. R. FARNELL, M.A. D.Litt., Fellow of Exeter College, and University Lecturer in Classical Archaeology, will give a COURSE of PUBLIC LECTURES in the LARGE LECTURE ROOM of MANCHESTER COLLEGE, subject: 'ESSAYS in the ANTHROPOLOGICAL STUDY of RELIGION,' at 4.45 on each of the following dates:—

I. 'ANTHROPOLOGICAL METHOD as APPLIED to the COMPARATIVE STUDY of RELIGION.' Part I. THURSDAY, March 2; Part II. SATURDAY, March 4.

II. 'The INFLUENCE of CERTAIN IDEAS CONCERNING PURITY on EARLY RELIGION, LAW, and MORALITY.' THURSDAY, March 9.

III. 'THE RITUAL of PRAYER in the LOWER and HIGHER RELIGIONS.' THURSDAY, March 16.
Hilary Term, 1905.

HAKLUYT SOCIETY PUBLICATIONS.—NEW VOLUME.—Series II. Vol. XI. EARLY DUTCH and ENGLISH VOYAGES to SPITSBERGEN in the SEVENTEENTH CENTURY, including Hessel Gerritz, 'Histoire du Pays nommé Spitzberghe,' 1613, and Jacob Sezersz van de Brugge, 'Journal of Dagb Register,' 1634. Edited, with Introductions and Notes, by Sir W. MARTIN CONWAY, F.S.A. Pp. xvi-191, 3 Maps, 3 Illustrations, Bibliography, Index—Annual Subscription, One Guinea. A Complete List of Previous Volumes, with Index, can be obtained post free on application to the Hon. Secretary, BASIL H. SOULSBY, F.S.A., 3, Spring Gardens, S.W.

SIR JOHN SOANE'S MUSEUM,
13, LINCOLN'S INN FIELDS.
ANTIQUITIES, PICTURES, AND SCULPTURE.
Open Free, from 11 to 5, on TUESDAYS, WEDNESDAYS, THURSDAYS, and FRIDAYS, from March 1 to August 31.—Cards for Private Days and for Students to be obtained from the Curator at the Museum.

ETCHINGS by MAXIME LALANNE, 1827-86.
The late Artist's magnificent Collection.
Now on view at Mr. R. GUTENSTADT'S,
16, King Street, St. James's, S.W., 10 to 6 DAILY. Admission 1s.

ROYAL SOCIETY of PAINTER-ETCHERS and ENGRAVERS, 5A, Pall Mall East, S.W.—23rd ANNUAL EXHIBITION, including ETCHINGS and ENGRAVINGS by Sir F. SEYMOUR HADEN, P.R.E. Open 10 to 6. Admission 1s. HAROLD CHILD, Sec.

OBACH & CO.
EXHIBITION of OIL PAINTINGS, DRAWINGS, and LITHOGRAPHS by FANTIN-LATOURE.
NOW OPEN. 168, NEW BOND STREET, W.

OLD MINIATURES and SNUFF-BOXES from the well-known COLLECTION of Mr. ALBERT JAFFÉ, Hamburg. In order that English Collectors may have an opportunity of inspecting these before they are Sold by Auction at Cologne, they will be EXHIBITED from MARCH 1 to MARCH 4 at the FINE-ART SOCIETY'S ROOMS, 148, New Bond Street, London.

THE BOOKSELLERS' PROVIDENT INSTITUTION.
Founded 1837.
Patron—HER MAJESTY QUEEN ALEXANDRA.
Invested Capital 30,000l.

A UNIQUE INVESTMENT
Offered to London Booksellers and their Assistants.

A young man or woman of twenty-five can invest the sum of Twenty Guineas (or its equivalent by instalments), and obtain the right to participate in the following advantages:—

FIRST. Freedom from want in time of Adversity as long as need exists.

SECOND. Permanent Relief in Old Age.

THIRD. Medical advice by eminent Physicians and Surgeons.

FOURTH. A Cottage in the Country (Abbots Langley, Hertfordshire) for aged Members, with garden produce, coal, and medical attendance free, in addition to an annuity.

FIFTH. A furnished house in the same Retreat at Abbots Langley for the free use of Members and their families for holidays or during convalescence.

SIXTH. A contribution towards Funeral expenses when it is needed.

SEVENTH. All these are available not for Members only, but also for their wives or widows and young children.

EIGHTH. The payment of the subscriptions confers an absolute right to these benefits in all cases of need.

For further information apply to the Secretary, Mr. GEORGE LARNER, 23, Paternoster Row E.C.

TO TRUSTEES and Others.—A LADY of experience and highly recommended can RECEIVE into her own HOME a young WARD in CHANCERY or the CHILDREN of ONE FAMILY for reliable guardianship and capable supervision of Education.—Write, first, REFERENCE, Box 977, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

ELTHAM COLLEGE, KENT.—The ROYAL NAVAL SCHOOL.—EXAMINATION for ENTRANCE and other SCHOLARSHIPS, MARCH 27 and Following Days. Public School Life and Education, with Special Classes for all Navy and Army Examinations.—Apply to the Head Master, Rev. A. E. RUBE, D.D.

EDUCATION.

Parents or Guardians desiring accurate information relative to the CHOICE of SCHOOLS for BOYS or GIRLS or TUTORs in England or Abroad are invited to call upon or send fully detailed particulars to MESSRS. GABBITAS, THRING & CO.,

who for more than thirty years have been closely in touch with the leading Educational Establishments.

Advice, free of charge, is given by Mr. Thring, Nephew of the late Head Master of Uppingham, 36, Sackville Street, London, W.

COUNTY of LONDON.

In connexion with the New Scholarship Scheme, the Council has decided to appoint a CHIEF EXAMINER and TWENTY ASSISTANT EXAMINERS, to examine in Arithmetic and English Composition. The Candidates for Scholarships will be Boys and Girls between 11 and 12 years of age.

The duties of the Chief Examiner will be to correlate the system of marking adopted by the various Assistant Examiners, to attend the Meetings of the Board of Examiners, to set the Papers if required, or to advise generally with regard to the setting of the Papers, to advise with regard to the Examination arrangements, and to be generally responsible to the Executive Officer for the carrying out of the actual Examining Work, as distinct from Administrative Organization.

The duties of the Assistant Examiners will be to look over about 2,000 Papers, and to mark them in accordance with the general directions of the Chief Examiner.

The Examination will be held at the end of April, and it is essential that the results should be received not later than the second week in June.

The Chief Examiner will be paid a Fee of 100 Guineas, and each Assistant Examiner a Fee of 50 Guineas (to be increased at the rate of 6d. a Paper in the event of the number of Papers to be corrected by each Examiner exceeding 2,000). No Teacher serving in a Public Elementary School in London will be eligible for appointment.

Forms of Application, which must be returned not later than MARCH 7, 1905, and any further particulars, can be obtained from the Clerk of the London County Council, Education Offices, Victoria Embankment, W.C.

G. L. GOMME, Clerk of the London County Council.

TRINITY COLLEGE, DUBLIN.

CHAIR of ZOOLOGY and COMPARATIVE ANATOMY.

The COUNCIL will proceed to the nomination for the PROFESSORSHIP on WEDNESDAY, March 1, 1905.

Applications to be sent to the Registrar, who will furnish Candidates with details on application, and will receive whatever Testimonials they may offer.

R. Y. TYRKELL, Registrar.
Trinity College, Dublin, February 8, 1905

COUNTY BOROUGH of SUNDERLAND.

EDUCATION COMMITTEE.

BEDE COLLEGIATE SCHOOL.

Applications are invited for the HEADSHIP of the reorganized BEDE COLLEGIATE SCHOOL, SUNDERLAND, at a commencing salary of 500l. per annum. Candidates must be Graduates of a British or approved Foreign University, and must either have obtained Honours or submit evidence of the possession of a reasonably equivalent standard of attainment. Teaching and administrative experience in a Secondary School is indispensable. For further particulars and for Form of Application, written application should be made to the undersigned, to whom also applications should be sent, reaching the Town Hall not later than MARCH 12, 1905, and endorsed "Bede" in the bottom left-hand corner of the envelope. Applications should contain not more than four Testimonials. Canvassing for the appointment by any Candidate will disqualify for election to the position, but this prohibition will not apply after the first selection of Candidates by the Committee having charge of the appointment.

PITAS. M. BOWEY, Town Clerk.
Town Hall, February 11, 1905.

BRIDLINGTON HIGH SCHOOL for GIRLS,

EAST YORKSHIRE.

TO BE OPENED in SEPTEMBER NEXT.

The GOVERNORS are prepared to receive applications for the post of HEAD MISTRESS.

Applicants should have a University Degree in Honours or its equivalent, and have had suitable experience in a good Secondary School.

The Salary offered is 300l. per annum, together with a Capitation Grant of 1l. per annum for each Pupil in excess of 100 in regular attendance.

Forms of Application, and copies of the Regulations and Standing Orders for the Management of the School, will be supplied to intending Applicants.

Applications must be received by the undersigned not later than MARCH 18.

Canvassing the Governors will be considered a disqualification.

GEO. G. O. SUTCLIFFE, Solicitor.
Bridlington, Yorkshire.

WALSALL EDUCATION COMMITTEE.

SCHOOL OF ART.

Applications are invited for the post of HEAD MASTER of the WALSALL SCHOOL OF ART. Salary 250l., rising by 25l. per annum for meritorious service to 300l. Applications to be received not later than APRIL 7, 1905.—Further particulars and prescribed Form of Application can be obtained from the Director of Education, Education Offices, Walsall.

TECHNICAL SCHOOL, GUILDHALL, BATH.

A SCIENCE MASTER is REQUIRED for BOTANY, with some Chemistry and Physics.

Salary 150l. to 160l., according to qualifications.
For particulars apply at once to
A. GODFREY DAY, Director of Studies.

February 18, 1905

LADY PROOF READER, of some experience, wants SITUATION. In London preferred.—Apply, personally or by letter, J. E. F., Athenæum Press, Bream's Buildings, E.C.

Yearly Subscription, free by post, Inland, 15s. 3d.; Foreign, 18s. Entered at the New York Post Office as Second Class matter.

FRANCE.—The ATHENÆUM can be obtained at the following Railway Stations in France:—

AMIENS, ANTIBES, BEAULIEU-SUR-MER, BIARRITZ, BORDEAUX, BOULOGNE, CALAIS, CANNES, DIJON, DUNKIRK, GENEVA, GOLFE-JUAN, HAVRE, HYÈRES, JUAN-LES-PINS, LILLE, LYONS, MARSEILLES, MENTONE, MONACO, MONTE CARLO, NANTES, NICE, PARIS (Est, Nord, Lyon), PAU, ROUEN, SAINT RAPHAEL, TOULON, TOURS.

PARIS: W. H. SMITH & SON, 248, Rue de Rivoli; and at the GALIGNANI LIBRARY, 224, Rue de Rivoli.

CHESTER EDUCATION COMMITTEE.

CITY AND COUNTY SCHOOL FOR GIRLS.

An ASSISTANT MISTRESS, with University Qualifications, is REQUIRED in MAY, to teach principally Mathematics and Elementary Science in above School, and in Pupil Teachers' Centre attached to it. Class Singing, Junior English, and Games desirable also.

Salary 110l., rising by annual increment of 5l. to 120l.
Apply to the HEAD MISTRESS before MARCH 8.

The travelling expenses of the selected Candidates will be paid by the Committee.
A. E. LOVELL, Secretary to Committee.
Education Offices, 92, Northgate Street, Chester.

LADY LUMLEY'S GRAMMAR SCHOOL

FOUNDATION, PICKERING, YORKS.

Application is invited for the post of FIRST ASSISTANT MISTRESS. Salary 110l. Good English and French essential. State other Teaching Subjects.

Apply to
E. G. HIGHFIELD, Head Master.
13, Crown Terrace, Scarborough.

TOTTENHAM URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL

APPOINTMENT of ASSISTANT LIBRARIAN.

The PUBLIC LIBRARIES COMMITTEE invite applications for the appointment of ASSISTANT LIBRARIAN.

Candidates must not be less than 21 years of age, and have experience of Public Library Work, including the Cataloguing and Classification of Books.

The Salary will commence at 80l. per annum, increasing annually by 5l. to 100l., afterwards by 7l. 10s. annually to a maximum of 130l. per annum.

Applications to be made on Forms to be obtained of Mr. F. J. WESS' Librarian, 395, High Road, Tottenham, or of the undersigned, and to be returned, with copies of not more than three Testimonials, to me, not later than MARCH 6, 1905.

Canvassing in any form will disqualify.
EDWARD CROWNE, Clerk to the Committee.
712, High Road, Tottenham, February 20, 1905.

HOLIDAY TUTORSHIP desired by OXFORD

CLASSICAL SCHOLAR. Has travelled Abroad. Good Testimonials.—Apply Box 987, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, E.C.

ASSISTANT EDITORSHIP WANTED, in

LONDON or the PROVINCES by a UNIVERSITY MAN. Has had great experience as Editor and Leader Writer. Special knowledge of Far East.—Address Box 963, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

ADVERTISER desires post as LITERARY

ADVISER to PUBLISHING FIRM. University Classical Honours Man.—Address A. H. S., Box 962, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

UNIVERSITY MAN (27), with knowledge of

Anglo-Saxon, &c., and of Oriental Subjects, desires, after Easter, APPOINTMENT as READER, or in other suitable capacity, to Firm publishing Educational or similar Works.—Address N. Y. Z., care of 10, Oat Lane, Wood Street, E.C.

LIBRARY or LITERARY WORK.—GENTLE-

MAN well acquainted with current Literature, Printing, and Bookbinding, seeks ENGAGEMENT. Reliable and careful Worker. Highest references.—Write Pooks, 19, Adelaide Road, Brockley, S.E.

TRANSLATION, REVISION, RESEARCH,

REVIEWING, INDEXING, and other LITERARY WORK, or non-resident Secretaryship. Classics, French, German, Italian. Special Subjects, Mythology and Literature. Varied experience.—Miss SELBY, 53, Talbot Road, W.

TRANSLATIONS.—Graduate of University of

Paris is OPEN to TRANSLATE, or ADAPT into ENGLISH from any of the Romance Languages (French, Spanish, Portuguese, Italian, Roumanian), or vice versa.—Box 989, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

LITERARY RESEARCH undertaken at the British Museum and elsewhere on moderate terms. Excellent Testimonials.—A. B., Box 810, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

INDEXING, by a very experienced Hand. High-class Work only undertaken.—V. S. G., Replingham Road, S.W.

GENTLEMAN, with long and valuable experience of the Book Trade, SEEMS a CHANGE. Thorough general knowledge, including Cataloguing.—Box 989, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

ADVERTISER, who has been in the service of a well-known Literary Man for nineteen years, is anxious to obtain a post as an ASSISTANT in a LIBRARY or BOOKSELLER'S SHOP. Can be highly recommended. Age 30.—Box 982, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

THE AUTOTYPE COMPANY,

74, NEW OXFORD STREET, LONDON,

Invite Inquiries from those seeking

PERMANENT PHOTOGRAPHIC REPRODUCTIONS

OF THE HIGHEST POSSIBLE EXCELLENCE.

THE COMPANY'S PROCESSES—

Autotype Solar (Carbon).

Autotype Mechanical (Collotype).

Auto-Gravure (Copperplate Engraving).

ARE EMPLOYED BY—

The Trustees of the British Museum.

The Local Government Board.

Many Learned Societies, Leading Publishers, and Artists of Repute.

Examples of Work may be inspected and all information obtained at—

THE AUTOTYPE FINE-ART GALLERY,

74, NEW OXFORD STREET, LONDON, W.C.

REVIEWING.—LADY JOURNALIST, accustomed to the work, would like to undertake REGULAR WORK for DAILY or WEEKLY PAPER. Terms moderate.—Address G. V., 82, Cambridge Road, Kilburn, N.W.

JOURNALIST (25) desires CHANGE. German and French, acquired abroad. Sub-Editor or Literary Assistant. London preferred.—Box 986, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

TRAINING for PRIVATE SECRETARIAL WORK and INDEXING—Apply Miss FETHERBRIDGE (Nat. Sci. Tripos), 62A, Conduit Street, Bond Street, London, W.

LONDON WEEKLY (good) WANTED to BUY.—Write, stating price, circulation, receipts, expenses, &c., in confidence, to CAMEL, care of Willing's, 162, Piccadilly, W.

TYPE-WRITING.—MSS., SCIENTIFIC, and of all Descriptions, COPIED. Special attention to work requiring care. Dictation Rooms (Shorthand or Type-writing). Usual Terms.—Misses E. B. and I. FARRAN, Donington House, 30, Norfolk Street, Strand, London.

TYPE-WRITING promptly and accurately done. Ten years' experience. Excellent references. 10d. per 1,000 words. Reduction for quantity.—Miss MESSER, The Orchard, Cotterill Road, Surbiton, S.W.

TYPE-WRITING undertaken by highly educated Women (Classical Tripos; Cambridge Higher Local; Modern Languages). Research, Revision, Translation.—THE CAMBRIDGE TYPE-WAITING AGENCY, 10, Duke Street, Adelphi, W.C.

AUTHORS' MSS., SERMONS, PLAYS, ENVELOPES, CIRCULARS, and all kinds, TYPED at home (Remington), 9d. per 1,000. Good paper. Orders promptly executed.—M. L., 7, Vernon Road, Clapham.

SHORTHAND and TYPE-WRITING.—Authors' MSS., Plays, Sermons, Reports, &c., 9d. per 1,000. Legal and General Copying. Accuracy and Despatch guaranteed.—Miss N. E. ROBINSON, 8, Westover Road, Wandsworth Common, London, S.W.

TYPE-WRITING.—The WEST KENSINGTON OFFICES. Authors' MSS., Translations, &c. Legal and General Copying. Circulars, &c., duplicated. Usual terms. References. Established twelve years.—SIXES & SIXES, 229, Hammersmith Road, W. (Private Address: 13, Wolverton Gardens, Hammersmith.)

TYPE-WRITING.—SERMONS, AUTHORS' MSS., &c., carefully and promptly executed. 8d. per 1,000 words, paper included.—Miss A. MANSIE, Strathairn, New Barn, Longfield, Kent.

AUTHORS' MSS., NOVELS, SERMONS, PLAYS, REVIEWS TYPE-WRITTEN accurately and promptly, 9d. per 1,000 words. References to well-known Writers.—M. STUART, Thirlbank, Roxborough Road, Harrow.

AUTHORS' MS. TYPE-WRITTEN at moderate charges. Latest Remington Machines for Hire Weekly. May be used on Premises. 3d. per Hour. Private room if required. Hours 10 to 9.—29, Bedford Row (basement, area steps), Theobald's Road, W.C.

THE AUTHOR'S AGENCY.—Established 1879. The interests of Authors capably represented. Agreements for Publishing arranged. MSS. placed with Publishers.—Terms and Testimonials on application to Mr. A. M. BURGESS, 34, Paternoster Row.

MR. GEORGE LARNER, Accountant and Licensed Valuer to the Bookselling, Publishing, Newspaper, Printing, and Stationery Trades. Partnerships Arranged. Balance Sheets and Trading Accounts Prepared and Audited. All Business carried out under Mr. Larner's personal supervision.—28, 29, and 30, Paternoster Row, E.C., Secretary to the Booksellers' Provident Institution.

NEWSPAPER PROPERTIES

BOUGHT, SOLD, VALUED; and supplied with every requisite. Write for The COMPLETE JOURNALIST, sent post free.

The Imperial News Agency,
London: 2 and 4, Tudor Street, E.C.
America: 700-706, Fourteenth Street, N.W., Washington, D.C.

C. MITCHELL & CO., Agents for the Sale and Purchase of Newspaper Properties, undertake Valuations for Probate or Purchase, Investigations, and Audit of Accounts, &c. Card of Terms on application.
Mitchell House, 1 and 2, Snow Hill, Holborn Viaduct, E.O.

ATHENÆUM PRESS.—JOHN EDWARD FRANCIS, Printer of the Athenæum, Notes and Queries, &c., is prepared to SUBMIT ESTIMATES for all kinds of BOOK, NEWS, and PERIODICAL PRINTING.—13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.O.

Catalogues.

PICKERING & CHATTO'S CATALOGUES.

CATALOGUE of TRACTS and PAMPHLETS, chiefly Historical and Topographical, 238 pp. 8vo, with Descriptions and Selling Prices of 3,000 Rare Tracts and Pamphlets, including Items on Africa—America—Queen Anne—Astrology—Bedfordshire—Berkshire—Buckinghamshire—Cambridgeshire—Civil War—Charles I. and II.—Channel Islands—Cheshire—Commonwealth—Cornwall—Oliver Cromwell—Cumberland—Derbyshire—Devonshire—Dorsetshire—Durham—Economics and Trade—Queen Elizabeth—Essex—Flanders—France—George I. and II.—Germany—Gloucestershire—Hampshire—Herefordshire—Hertfordshire—Holland—Ireland—James I. and II.—Jesuits—Jews—Kent—Lancashire—Law—Leicestershire—Lincolnshire—London—Middlesex—Monmouthshire—Norfolk—Northamptonshire—Northumberland—Nottinghamshire—Oxfordshire—Poetry—Popish Plot—Pretender (the Young and Old)—Printing—Prynne—Quakers—Rutlandshire—Prince Rupert—Scotland—Shropshire—Somersetshire—Spain—Spanish Armada—Staffordshire—Suffolk—Surrey—Sweden—Wales—Warwickshire—Westmorland—William III.—Wiltshire—Worcestershire—Yorkshire. Paper cover, post free, 1s.

CATALOGUE of ENGLISH LITERATURE, noted Bibliographically and Biographically, including First or Early Editions of the Writings of practically every English Author from Chaucer to R. L. Stevenson. 504 pp. 8vo, with Descriptions and Selling Prices of nearly 4,000 Rare Books, half-cloth, post free, 3s. 6d. This Catalogue has been pronounced on all sides to be the most interesting Bookseller's Catalogue on the subject ever issued.

CATALOGUE of SPORTS, PASTIMES, ARTS, SCIENCES. 222 pp. 8vo, with Descriptions and Selling Prices of nearly 2,000 Old or Rare Books upon almost every Branch of Sport, Science, or Art, paper cover, post free, 1s.

CATALOGUE of MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS, 126 pp. 8vo, with Descriptions and Selling Prices of about 900 Old or Rare Books, including Works on Africa, America, Australasia—First Editions of Books Illustrated by Randolph Caldecott, George and Robert Cruikshank, Richard Doyle, Harry Furniss, James Gilray, Ernest Griset, John Leech, Hablot K. Browne (Phiz), Henry Alken, Thomas Rowlandson, and numerous Rare Works with Coloured Plates—an interesting Collection of Old Curiosities, Erotica, Facetiae, Old Romances, Chap Books, and Children's Books—numerous Topographical Works relating to most of the Counties of England, Ireland, Scotland, and Wales—fine Illuminated Manuscripts, with Miniatures—a valuable Assortment of Early Typographical Specimens, including many Rare Editions Principles and Examples of the Early Printers. Paper cover, post free, 1s.

CATALOGUE of NEW PURCHASES. Books on all Subjects, including a fine Collection of Stamped and Elaborately Gilt-Tooled Old Bookbindings, and several very beautiful Ancient Illuminated Manuscripts. 578 pp. 8vo, containing Descriptions, with Selling Prices, of 4,000 Valuable Books, illustrated with 9 Coloured and 198 Reproductions of Manuscripts and Old Bindings, cloth, post free, 6s.

It has been found necessary to make the above charges for our Catalogues, to prevent an inundation of applications from irresponsible persons. The cost of the Catalogue will, however, be deducted from the first order of 1l.

PICKERING & CHATTO, Antiquarian Booksellers,
66, HAYMARKET, LONDON, S.W.

LEIGHTON'S

ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE of EARLY PRINTED and other INTERESTING BOOKS, MANUSCRIPTS, and BINDINGS.

Part VIII. SHE—T, with 150 Illustrations, price 2s. NEARLY READY. Parts I.—VII. containing A—SHA, with 1050 Illustrations in Facsimile, price 17s. the 7 Parts.

J. & J. LEIGHTON, 40, Brewer Street, Golden Square, W.

GLAISHER'S REMAINDER BOOK CATALOGUE.

FEBRUARY SUPPLEMENT NOW READY, Comprising all most Recent Purchases in PUBLISHERS' REMAINDER STOCK. Books in NEW condition, at REDUCED Prices.

WILLIAM GLAISHER,

Remainder and Discount Bookseller, 265, High Holborn, London.

MESSRS. HENRY YOUNG & SONS possess one of the LARGEST STOCKS of OLD and NEW BOOKS in GREAT BRITAIN, and they will be glad to hear from any one in search of Books out of print, as they can in many cases supply them at once.

ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE MONTHLY. Price 6d.
12, South Castle Street, Liverpool.

H. H. PEACH, Antiquarian Bookseller, 37, Belvoir Street, Leicester, issues CATALOGUES of MSS. and OLD BOOKS post free to Book Collectors. No. 9 contains Turner Engravings—Shelley—Housman—Cruikshank—Caricatures, &c.

CATALOGUE No. 42.—Drawings—Engravings.—Turner's Liber Studiorum—Lucas's Mezzotints after Constable—Engravings, Hogarth, Girtin—Etchings, Palmer, Whistler—Japanese Colour-Prints—Illustrated Books—Works by Ruskin. Post free, Sixpence. Wm. WARD, 2, Church Terrace, Richmond, Surrey.

THE INTERNATIONAL BOOK CIRCULAR, No. 139, containing a Special Article, entitled 'SOME CONTEMPORARY FOREIGN CHEMISTS,' by Dr. M. O. FORSTER, together with an exact Bibliography of their Publications, and 2 Double Plate of their Portraits. Specimen Copies gratis.—WILLIAMS & NORGATE, Book Importers, 14, Henrietta Street, Covent Garden, W.C.

PORTRAIT of GEORGE MEREDITH, after the celebrated Painting by G. F. WATTS, R.A., Engraved by W. BISCOMBE GARDNER. Limited to 600 Artist's Proofs at One Guinea each. Size, 12 in. by 8 in.—Address W. BISCOMBE GARDNER, Hothly, Hind Head, Surrey.

PAINTINGS and DRAWINGS.—Pesaro, Wouvermans, D. Cox, Copley Fielding, E. Landseer, Morland, J. Peel, Rathbone, &c. Inspection invited.—GUY HALL, 189, West End Lane, N.W.

MARLBOROUGH.—TO BE SOLD, WITH POSSESSION.—AN HOLME, on the London and Bath Road, within a mile of Marlborough College, with fine Views of the magnificently timbered Slopes of Savernake Forest, a DETACHED FREEHOLD RESIDENCE, with Six Bedrooms, Dressing Room, Three good Reception Rooms, and Domestic Offices. Stable, Lodge, Gardener's Cottage, and other Out-buildings. Well-timbered Grounds, nearly Four Acres, bounded and intersected by the River Kennet. Solicitors, Messrs. KAYS & JONES, 37, Norfolk Street, W.C. Particulars of Mr. MARK JEANS, Marlborough.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS.—WINTER APARTMENTS.—Comfortably Furnished Sitting-Room and One Bedroom. Pleasant and central. No others taken.—R. H., 66, Grove Hill Road, Tunbridge Wells.

Sales by Auction.

Autograph Letters and Historical Documents.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C., on THURSDAY, March 2, and following Day, at 1 o'clock precisely, AUTOGRAPH LETTERS and HISTORICAL DOCUMENTS, including Specimens of Queen Victoria, Prince Albert, Lord Lovat, Lord Nelson, Edmund Burke, Robert Burns, J. M. W. Turner, Queen Henrietta Maria, W. Wordsworth, Sir Walter Scott, Napoleon, Thomas Carlyle, Robert Browning, Charles Dickens, Sir John Vanbrugh, Dr. William Harvey, Dr. Johnson, Benjamin Disraeli, Rev. John Newton of Olney, Edward Fitzgerald—a very fine Autograph Letter of Philip Melancthon—Two valuable and most interesting Series of Autograph Letters of Gilbert White to his Brother and Niece.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

The Collection of Autograph Letters and Manuscripts of Composers and Musicians of the late JULIAN MARSHALL, Esq.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C., on SATURDAY, March 4, at 1 o'clock precisely, the COLLECTION of important LETTERS and MANUSCRIPTS in the AUTOGRAPH of FAMOUS COMPOSERS and MUSICIANS, including Gluck, G. F. Handel, F. Haydn, Paganini, H. Purcell, F. Schubert, R. Schumann, Mendelssohn, and others, the Property of the late JULIAN MARSHALL, Esq., of Belsize Avenue, N.W.; also a remarkably fine Manuscript in the Autograph of J. S. Bach.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

Curiosities.

MR. J. C. STEVENS'S NEXT SALE of CURIOSITIES will take place on TUESDAY, the 28th inst., at half-past 12 o'clock, and will include a CONSIGNMENT of CHINESE and JAPANESE PORCELAIN, LAQUER WARE, BRONZES, &c.—Carved Ivory Boxes—Figures—Satsuma Bowls—Cloisonné and Art Metal Ware; also Old English China—Wood Carvings—Native Weapons—and the usual Miscellaneous Assortment.

Catalogues may be had on application to Mr. J. C. STEVENS, 38, King Street, Covent Garden, London, W.C.

Scientific Apparatus—Surveying and Drawing Instruments—fine Microscopes, &c.

FRIDAY, March 3, at half-past 12 o'clock.

MR. J. C. STEVENS will OFFER, at his Rooms, 38, King Street, Covent Garden, London, W.C., SCIENTIFIC INSTRUMENTS and APPARATUS—Photographic Apparatus—Gramophone and Records—Optical Lanterns and Slides—Electrical Apparatus—Tools—Fishing Tackle—and a large quantity of Miscellaneous Goods.

On view day prior 2 to 5 and morning of Sale. Catalogues on application.

Important Collection of Lepidoptera.

TUESDAY, March 14, and WEDNESDAY, March 15, at 1 o'clock.

MR. J. C. STEVENS will OFFER, at his Rooms, 38, King Street, Covent Garden, London, W.C., the FIRST PORTION (unless previously disposed of by Private Treaty) of the unrivalled COLLECTION of BRITISH LEPIDOPTERA formed by the late PHILIP B. MASON, Esq., M.R.C.S. F.C.S. F.Z.S. F.E.S., &c., of Trent House, Burton-on-Trent, comprising Long and Superb Series of most of the Rare and Extinct Species—fine Varieties and Local Forms in the best state of Preservation; also many Valuable and Historic Specimens and Types from the Hayworth and other Collections, together with the first-rate Standish and other Cabinets in which they are contained.

On view the Monday prior and mornings of Sale. Catalogues, ready a week prior to Sale, post free on application.

Important Sale of Birds' Eggs.

MR. J. C. STEVENS has received instructions to OFFER for SALE on THURSDAY, March 16, the FOURTH and FINAL PORTION of the COLLECTION of BIRDS' EGGS termed by HEATLEY NORLE, Esq. The Sale will include one of the finest Specimens of the GREAT AUK'S EGG ever offered, together with such rarities as White's, Siberian, and Black-throated Thrush—Waxwing—Scarlet and Pine Grosbeak—Nutcracker—Needle-tailed Swift—Honey Buzzard—Golden Eagle—Iceland and Jyr Falcon—Snow Goose—Pectoral and Marsh Sandpiper—Greenshank—Dusky Redshank—Pomarine Skua, &c.

Catalogues, in course of preparation, may be had on application to Mr. J. C. STEVENS, 38, King Street, Covent Garden, London, W.C.

MR. J. C. STEVENS, Auctioneer and Valuer, 38, King Street, Covent Garden, London, W.C., begs to announce that SALES are held at his Rooms regularly for the DISPOSAL OF ANTIQUE FURNITURE, WORKS OF ART, SILVER PLATE, JEWELLERY, BOOKS, COINS, PICTURES and ENGRAVINGS, SCIENTIFIC INSTRUMENTS, and all kinds of MISCELLANEOUS PROPERTY.

Valuations for all purposes.

Terms and all particulars on application.

Valuable Books, including a Portion of the Library of Major GORDON, removed from Wimbledon; the Library of the late Mrs. VINCENT, removed from Shinfold, Sussex, and other Properties.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their Galleries, 47, Leicester Square, W.C., on THURSDAY, March 2, and Following Day, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, valuable BOOKS, including Proceedings of the Civil Engineers—Annales de Chemie, 48 vols.—Macaulay's Works, 10 vols.—Burton's History of Scotland, 8 vols.—Shelley's Queen Mab, First Edition, ncut.—Morris's British Birds, 6 vols.—Lowe's Ferns—Art Journal, 32 vols.—Shepherd's Vignette Designs, Coloured Plates—Hassell's Original Specimens of Water Colours, Coloured Plates—Pissis d'Avennes—The Oriental Album, Coloured Plates—Encyclopedia Britannica, Ninth Edition—Century Dictionary, 8 vols.—Lang's Prince Charles Edward—Skelton's Charles I.—Robson's Grampian Mountains, Coloured Plates—Heppelwhite's Cabinet Maker, 1789—Ciceronis de Officiis, Paris, 1599—Orrery's Plays, 1690—Horticultural Society's Transactions—Chesterfield's Letters, 2 vols.—Humphreys and Westwood's Moths, 2 vols. Coloured Plates—important Collections of Autograph Letters—Book-Plates (Ex-Libris)—Sporting Books—Old Playing Cards—Illuminated MSS. on Vellum, with Miniatures—First Editions of Scott, Dickens, Thackeray, Lever, and other Modern Authors—Civil War Tracts—Original Drawings by "Phiz"—Savonarola, Exposition del Pater Noster, Woodcut's d.—Ackermann's Repository, 40 vols.—Shelley's Prometheus Unbound, First Edition, ncut.—Lillywhite's Cricket Scores and M.C.C. Cricket Scores, 13 vols.—Curtis's Botanical Magazine, Complete Set—Archæologia, 56 vols.—Ackermann's University of Oxford, 2 vols. Coloured Plates—Suckling's Suffolk—Homefield's Norfolk, 11 vols.—Goldsmith's Traveller, First Edition—Redford's Art Sales, 2 vols.—A Series of Works on Philosophy and Science—Book of Common Prayer, Edinburgh, 1637—Eytton's Shropshire—Norfolk Archaeology, 14 vols., &c.

Valuable Engravings and Drawings, the Property of a Gentleman.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their Galleries, 47, Leicester Square, W.C., on FRIDAY, March 3, at 10 minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, a COLLECTION of ENGRAVINGS and DRAWINGS, comprising Military Portraits, Costumes, and Reviews—Fancy Subjects by Bartolozzi, Ryland, Sherwin, Hurbury—Mezzotint Portraits after Romney, Reynolds, J. R. Smith, Hoppner, &c., including many fine full-lengths—Old London Views, many in Water Colour; and a COLLECTION of NAVAL SUBJECTS, including a most interesting Relic, namely, the Log-Book of His Majesty's Ship Arrow, in which is contained Two Copies of Letters written by Admiral Lord Nelson on his Flagship Victory, &c.

Libraries of Dr. F. ARNOLD LEES, removed from Leeds, and of F. LEES, Esq., of Paris.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their Galleries, 47, Leicester Square, W.C., on MONDAY, March 20, and Following Days, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, the ABOVE PROPERTIES, comprising First Editions of Modern Authors and Works in General Literature.

Modern Publications and Reminders.

MESSRS. HODGSON & CO. will SELL by AUCTION, at their Rooms, 115, Chancery Lane, W.C., on THURSDAY, March 2, at 1 o'clock, MODERN PUBLICATIONS and REMAINERS, including Surplus Stock of the Old Company of GEORGE ROUTLEDGE & SONS, Limited, comprising Editions of Standard Authors and Popular Novels, in cloth and quires—Juvenile and Story Books; also a Selection of Recent Publications from a Reviewer's Library.

To be viewed, and Catalogues had.

Rare and Valuable Books, including Portion of the Library of the late H. E. WATTS, Esq., Modern Fine-Art Books, &c.

MESSRS. HODGSON & CO. will SELL by AUCTION, at their Rooms, 115, Chancery Lane, W.C., on TUESDAY, March 7, and Two Following Days, at 1 o'clock, RARE and VALUABLE BOOKS, comprising Armstrong's Sir Joshua Reynolds, Edition de Luxe, and J. M. W. Turner, Japanese Paper Edition—the Wallace Collection, by E. Molinier, 2 vols.—Foster's Miniature Painters, 2 vols.—Editions de Luxe of Fielding, Thackeray, and Dickens—Apperley's Life of a Sportsman, First Issue of the First Edition, and other Sporting Books—Burton's Arabian Nights, Original Edition, 16 vols.—a Collection of Books by or relating to Cervantes, and others on Spanish Literature—Ruskin's Modern Painters, &c., 9 vols. Original Editions—Complete Sets of the Surtees and Chetham Societies' Publications—Nash's Worcestershire, 2 vols., and other Topographical Books—Works relating to Cornwall—First Editions of Swift, Fielding, Jane Austen, Borrow, and others—Sets of Standard Works in Handsome Bindings.

Catalogues on application.

MESSRS. CHRISTIE, MANSON & WOODS respectfully give Notice that they will hold the Following SALES by AUCTION at their Great Rooms, King Street, St. James's Square, the Sales commencing at 1 o'clock precisely:—

On TUESDAY, February 23, the COLLECTION of ETCHINGS and ENGRAVINGS of the Rev. S. N. TEBBS, deceased.

On WEDNESDAY, March 1, UNSET PRECIOUS STONES of the Rev. S. N. TEBBS, deceased.

On THURSDAY, March 2, and FRIDAY, March 3, PORCELAIN, OBJECTS of ART, and OLD ENGLISH FURNITURE, from various sources; and ORIENTAL CLOISONNÉ ENAMELS of FREDERICK ELKINGTON, Esq., deceased.

On SATURDAY, March 4, MODERN PICTURES and DRAWINGS, the Property of the late FREDERICK ELKINGTON, Esq., and others.

By order of Executors of the late Dr. ISAAC ROBERTS, F.R.S. F.R.A.S.

CROWBOROUGH BEACON, SUSSEX.

In a magnificent position (about 780 feet above sea level), commanding extensive and delightful views.

MESSRS. LANGRIDGE & FREEMAN have received instructions to SELL by AUCTION, at the Mart, Tokenhouse Yard, E.C., on FRIDAY, March 17, at 2 o'clock, the FREEHOLD RESIDENTIAL ESTATE known as STARFIELD, within about 1½ miles of Crowborough Station (L. B. & S. C. R.), it comprises a well-built Detached Residence, containing Dining Room, Drawing Room enclosed Verandah, Five Bed and Dressing Rooms, Bath Room, and Offices; also Library, Laboratory, Ice Observatory, with revolving hemispherical copper-covered Dome, Belvedere Tower, &c. There are excellent stone-built Stables, Outbuildings, Greenhouse, Gardener's Cottage, and Entrance Lodge. The Pleasure Grounds, studded with Ornamental Trees, include Tennis Lawn, productive Kitchen Garden, and Fruit Plantation. The whole property contains 4½ Ir. 3½, a portion of which could be utilized for the erection of additional residences. The property will be so offered as to give the purchaser the opportunity of securing the exceedingly valuable Telescopes and other Astronomical Instruments, &c.

Particulars, &c., of Messrs. ALISON, STEVENS & Co., Solicitors, 14, Castle Street, Liverpool, and (with orders to view) of the AUCTIONEERS, 28, Queen Street, Cheapside, E.C., and Tunbridge Wells.

THE FORTNIGHTLY REVIEW.

MARCH, 1905.

Contents.

The CONSTRUCTION and POLICY of the NEXT GOVERNMENT. REVOLUTION by TELEGRAPH: a Letter from Russia. By R. L. RUSSIA'S SOCIAL and POLITICAL CONDITION. By Alexander Kinloch. IBSEN in HIS LETTERS. By William Archer. The FUTURE of AIR-SHIPS. By Alberto Santos-Dumont. The RUSSIAN NAVY from WITHIN. By Chersonese. HOW PORT ARTHUR FELL. By Richard Barry. The ROMANCE of the CENSUS. By Dr. T. J. Macnamara, M.P. The MARRIAGE CONTRACT in its RELATION to SOCIAL PROGRESS. By Vere Collins. A FORGOTTEN SOLDIER-POET. By May Bateman. WAS BACON a POET? By George Stronach. EUGÈNE FROMENTIN. By C. G. Compton. HAS PAUPERISM DECLINED? By John Holt Schooling. HARRISON AINSWORTH. By Francis Gribble. FRENCH LIFE and the FRENCH STAGE. By John F. Macdonald. A MODERN UTOPIA. Chaps. 8 and 9. By H. G. Wells. London: Chapman & Hall, Limited.

NOW READY.

In crown 4to, tastefully printed, handsomely bound in Roxburghe, with gilt top, price 7s. 6d. post free.

THE VOLUME OF

THE ANTIQUARY for 1904.

The ANTIQUARY is an illustrated Magazine devoted to the study of the Past, and the Volume for 1904 contains, in addition to other valuable Articles, numerous Papers on Antiquarian Subjects.

NOW READY.

In imperial 8vo, tastefully printed, handsomely bound in crimson cloth, with Copious Index, price 15s.

VOLUME VII. OF THE

GENEALOGICAL MAGAZINE.

Elliot Stock, 62, Paternoster Row, London, E.C.

WILL BE PUBLISHED ON MARCH 1.

A HISTORY of DESIGN in MURAL PAINTING.

BY

N. H. J. WESTLAKE, F.S.A.

Vol. II.

FROM the SECOND until the END of the TWELFTH CENTURY.

London and Oxford: J. Parker & Co.

THE FAUNA of BRITISH INDIA,

Including Ceylon and Burma.

Published under the Authority of the Secretary of State for India in Council.

Edited by W. T. BLANFORD.

Medium 8vo, with numerous illustrations.

MANMAMIA. (For Sets only.) II.—FISHES. 2 vols. I. each.—BIRDS. Vol. I. II.; Vols. II–IV. 15s. each.—REPTILIA and BATRACHIA. (For Sets only.) II.—MOTHS. 4 vols. I. each.—HYMENOPTERA. Vols. I. and II. I. each.—ARACHNIDA. 1 vol. 10s.—RHYNCHOTA. Vols. I. and II. I. each.—BUTTERFLIES. Vol. I. II.

London: Taylor & Francis, Red Lion Court, Fleet Street. Calcutta and Simla: Thacker, Spink & Co. Bombay: Thacker & Co. Limited. Burma: Myles Standish & Co. Rangoon. Berlin: Friedländer & Sohn, Carlstrasse, 11.

A HISTORY of JAPAN during the CENTURY of EARLY EUROPEAN INTERCOURSE (1542–1651).

By JAMES MURDOCH, M.A., in Collaboration with ISOMI YAMAGATA. 1 8vo vol. of 714 pages, with Maps.

Printed and Published at the Offices of the Kobe Chronicle, Kobe, Japan. Only 1000 Copies of the First Edition have been printed, all the Copies being numbered.

The Athenæum (London) says:—"This book...is well worthy the attention of those who care to acquire a trustworthy and adequate knowledge of that singular phase in Japanese history which may be termed the Christian century."

Copies of the Work (price 11. 2s. 6d.) may be obtained on application to the London Agent, Mr. George Young, 25, Gray's Inn Residences, Clerkenwell Road, E.C.

NOW READY, THE DIAMOND JUBILEE EDITION OF THE NEWSPAPER PRESS DIRECTORY, 1905, AND ADVERTISERS' GUIDE.

SIXTIETH ANNUAL ISSUE.

Price 2s. net. Post free, 2s. 6d.

C. Mitchell & Co., Advertising Agents, Mitchell House, 1 and 2, Snow Hill, Holborn Viaduct, E.C.

THE ISLAND of the TIBER (with Illustrations); The Whistler Exhibition; The Society of Painter-Etchers; Architectural Education (Institute of Architects); London Master-Builders' Dinner—Presentation to Mr. Collis; Design for a Winter Garden (Grissell Medal Prize); New Insurance Offices, Norwich; Church of St. James, Ealing; Types of Concrete-Steel Structures (Student's Column), &c.—See the BUILDERS of February 25 (4d.); by post, 4d.)—Through any Newsgator; or direct from the Publisher of the Builder, Catherine Street, London, W.C.

MESSRS. LONGMANS & CO.'S LIST.

PALL MALL GAZETTE.—"If there were a medal among journalists, as well there might be, for public services rendered, we think Mr. Villiers and his book would have an excellent 'fighting chance.'"

PORT ARTHUR:

Three Months with the Besiegers.

By FREDERIC VILLIERS.

With 35 Illustrations, 2 Facsimiles, and a Map, 8vo, 7s. 6d. net.

ST. JAMES'S GAZETTE.—"A vivid combination of the descriptive and the pictorial artist....It is the real thing, and not a line of padding."

DAILY MAIL.—"A brilliant and moving record of the earlier operations before Port Arthur."

NEW EDITION (Fourth Impression) JUST PUBLISHED.

ENGLAND IN THE AGE OF WYCLIFFE.

By GEORGE MACAULAY TREVELYAN, Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge.

With 3 Maps. 8vo, 15s.

DAILY CHRONICLE.—"Mr. Trevelyan has at one bound placed himself in a high position among the historical writers of the day, and has given promise of a distinguished future."

ATHENÆUM.—"Mr. Trevelyan's book is among the most elaborate monographs on his period that exist....His account of the insurrection in London is quite the best thing in the book, and is by far the most vivid and complete narrative of that side of the movement that we at present possess."

NEOLITHIC DEW-PONDS and

CATTLE-WAYS. By ARTHUR JOHN HUBBARD, M.D., and GEORGE HUBBARD, F.S.A. F.R.I.B.A. With 25 Illustrations. Royal 8vo, 3s. 6d. net.

SPECTATOR.—"The original purpose of the writers seems to have been to solve, if possible, the problem of how these camps [of the Neolithic Age] on the summits of the chalk downs were supplied with water. In following the surmise of the late General Pitt-Rivers....they have been able to reconstruct, with every probability, a far more suggestive picture of the life of the inhabitants than has yet been drawn."

MODERN CONSTITUTIONS in

OUTLINE: an Introductory Study in Political Science. By LEONARD ALSTON, M.A. Trinity College, Melbourne, B.A. Christ's College, Cambridge, Deputy Professor of History, Elphinstone College, Bombay. Crown 8vo, 2s. 6d. net.

The BIRTH of PARSIVAL. A

Drama. By R. C. TREVELYAN, Author of 'Cecilia Gonzaga' and 'Polyphemus, and other Poems.' Fcap. 8vo, 3s. 6d. net.

NEW EDITION (1901).

THESAURUS of ENGLISH WORDS

and PHRASES, Classified and Arranged so as to Facilitate the Expression of Ideas and Assist in Literary Composition. By PETER MARK ROGET, M.D. F.R.S. Recomposed throughout, Enlarged and Improved, partly from the Author's Notes, and with a full Index, by the Author's Son, JOHN LEWIS ROGET. Crown 8vo, 9s. net.

WORKS BY WALTER BAGEHOT.

BIOGRAPHICAL STUDIES. Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d.

LITERARY STUDIES. 3 vols. crown 8vo, 3s. 6d. each.

ECONOMIC STUDIES. Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d.

LONGMAN'S MAGAZINE.

MARCH. Price SIXPENCE.

HAY FEVER. By Walter Herries Pollock and Guy C. Pollock. Chaps. 6-7.

TIME and TIDE. By L. Jebb.

The JARUS MERCY. By G. W. Murray.

The MAKING of a MAN. (In 2 Parts.) Part I. By Capt. Vaughan.

A PORT of STRANDED PRIDE. By E. Hallam Moorhouse. The VAGARIES of TOD and PETER. By L. Allen Barker. WILD WHEAT. By M. E. Francis (Mrs. Francis Blundell). Chaps. 6-8.

AT the SIGN of the SHIP. By Andrew Lang.

LONGMANS, GREEN & CO. 39, Paternoster Row, London, E.C.; New York and Bombay.

CHATTO &amp; WINDUS PUBLISHERS.

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'THE ENDLESS HERITAGE.'
Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

HEIRS OF REUBEN.

By CHRIS HEALY,

Author of 'Confessions of a Journalist.'

"The book is cleverly arranged, and relates the experiences of a Fleet Street journalist acting as amateur detective in Whitechapel."—Daily News."Admirably clever work."—St. James's Gazette.
Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

TALES of the FIVE TOWNS. By Arnold BENNETT, Author of 'The Grand Babylon Hotel.'

"Handles his material with as much confidence as Mr. Hardy and Mr. Phillpotts do, and makes his locality expressive of his purpose as plainly as those masters of the picturesque make theirs."—World."There are not many passages in the true literature of the life of the English people that are finer."—Vanity Fair."Mr. Bennett has not his equal in the description of the upper strata of the great middle class."—Spectator."Almost worthy of Daudet."—Morning Post."Thirteen stories.....If this volume prove unlucky, then verily the public does not know a good collection of stories when it sees it."—Daily Chronicle.FLEUR-DE-CAMP. By A. Godric Campbell.
Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s."A strong and picturesque book."—Glasgow Herald."A Napoleonic romance, which displays considerable graphic skill in its descriptions of the battles of Austerlitz and Eylau."—Athenæum."Fleur-de-Camp is a very winning heroine, whose adventures and whose love story have a compelling interest."—Week's Survey.A SPOILER of MEN. By Richard Marsh, Author of 'The Beetle.' Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

[March 23.]

The YOUNGEST MISS BROWN. By Florence WARDEN, Author of 'The House on the Marsh.'
Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

[April 3.]

The ERROR of her WAYS. By Frank BARRETT, Author of 'Fettered for Life.' Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

[April 27.]

The WILD MARQUIS: Life and Adventures of ARMAND GUERRY de MAUBREUIL. By ERNEST A. VIZETELLY, Author of 'With Zola in England.'
Crown 8vo, cloth, gilt top, 6s.

[Shortly.]

The LIFE of CHARLES DICKENS as REVEALED in his WRITINGS. By PERCY FITZGERALD, F.S.A. 2 vols. demy 8vo, cloth, 21s. net.

[Shortly.]

The ESSAYS of ELIA (Both Series). By CHARLES LAMB. Fcap. 8vo, cloth, gilt top, 2s. net; leather, gilt edges, 3s. net.

The DECAMERON of BOCCACCIO. With a Frontispiece. Fcap. 8vo, cloth, gilt top, 2s. net; leather, gilt edges, 3s. net.

LI TING of LONDON. By George R. Sims ('Dagonet'). Fcap. 8vo, picture cover, 1s.; cloth, 1s. 6d.

[Shortly.]

THE ST. MARTIN'S LIBRARY.

Printed in clear type on fine paper; full size of page, 8½ by 4½ inches. Cloth, gilt top, 2s. net each; leather, gilt edges, 3s. net each.

Important Series of Eleven New Volumes in the Press.

MACULAY'S

HISTORY of ENGLAND. In 5 vols.; and

JUSTIN MCCARTHY'S

The REIGN of QUEEN ANNE. In 1 vol.

A HISTORY of the FOUR GEORGES and of WILLIAM IV. In 2 vols.; and

A HISTORY of OUR OWN TIMES, from the Accession of Queen Victoria to 1830. In 3 vols.

The other Volumes are as follows:—

LONDON. By Sir Walter Besant.

ALL SORTS and CONDITIONS of MEN. By Sir Walter Besant.

The DEEMSTER. By Hall Caine.

The WOMAN in WHITE. By Wilkie Collins.

ROBINSON CRUSOE. By Daniel Defoe. With 37 Illustrations by George Cruikshank.

UNDER the GREENWOOD TREE. By Thomas Hardy.

CONDENSED NOVELS. By Bret Harte.

The AUTOCRAT of the BREAKFAST-TABLE. By Oliver Wendell Holmes. With Illustrations by J. G. Thomson.

The LIFE of the FIELDS. By Richard Jefferies.

The OPEN AIR. By Richard Jefferies.

NATURE NEAR LONDON. By Richard Jefferies.

[March 16.]

The CLOISTER and the HEARTH. By Charles Reade.

"IT IS NEVER TOO LATE to MEND." By Charles Reade.

MEMORIES and PORTRAITS. By Robert Louis Stevenson.

VIRGINIBUS PUERISQUE. By Robert Louis Stevenson.

MEN and BOOKS. By Robert Louis Stevenson.

NEW ARABIAN NIGHTS. By Robert Louis Stevenson.

ACROSS the PLAINS. By Robert Louis Stevenson.

The POCKET R. L. S. Favourite Passages from Stevenson's Works.

SKETCHES. By Mark Twain.

The COMPLETE ANGLER. By Walton and Cotton.

London: CHATTO &amp; WINDUS, 111, St. Martin's Lane, W.C.

MR. MURRAY'S NEW BOOKS.

SECOND IMPRESSION NOW READY.

THE LIFE OF
THE MARQUIS OF DUFFERIN AND AVA.

By Sir ALFRED LYALL, P.C.

With Portraits, &amp;c. Demy 8vo, 2 vols. 36s. net.

TIMES.—"This book will not disappoint the reader's natural expectations that it will prove of great interest.....Sir Alfred Lyall holds no mean position in our literature as a poet and essayist, and he brings to his present task the special qualifications of personal acquaintance of Lord Dufferin, and of familiarity with the East."PALL MALL GAZETTE.—"The personal interest of the book is great enough of itself to recommend it; there is nothing in its pages to show, indeed, that their author had any other intention. But its political interest is yet greater. In that respect it is of more value than any other book of the kind that has been published for years."WESTMINSTER GAZETTE.—"A real work, and not a mere compilation.....This is the final life."

ESSAYS ON FOREIGN POLITICS.

By the late LORD SALISBURY. Large crown 8vo, 6s. net. [Ready next week.]

BIOGRAPHICAL ESSAYS.

By the late LORD SALISBURY. Large crown 8vo, with Portrait, 6s. net. [Ready next week.]

THE LIFE AND TIMES OF GEN. SIR JAMES BROWNE

("BUSTER BROWNE").

By Lieut.-Gen. J. J. MCLEOD INNES, R.E. V.C. With Portraits, Illustrations, and a Map of the N.W. Frontier. Demy 8vo, 18s. net.

THE BALKAN QUESTION.

A Series of Studies of the Present Condition of the Balkans and of European Responsibilities. By Various Writers. Edited by LUIGI VILLARI. With a Map. Demy 8vo, 10s. 6d. net.

SECOND EDITION.

RUSSIAN AFFAIRS.

By GEOFFREY DRAGE, Author of 'Cyril,' 'The Labour Problem,' &amp;c. With Maps. Medium 8vo, 21s. net.

DAILY TELEGRAPH.—"An encyclopædia of everything relating to 'All the Russias'.....A volume which no library and no well-equipped politician can afford to be without."A NEW EDITION, THE NINTH, OF
THE HISTORY OF INDIA.

The Hindu and Mahometan Periods.

By the Hon. MOUNTSTUART ELPHINSTONE. With Notes and Additions by E. B. COWELL, M.A., late Principal of Sanskrit College, Calcutta. With Maps. Demy 8vo, 15s. net.

A CHEAP EDITION OF CHARLES DARWIN'S WORKS.

Uniform with 'Origin of Species,' 'Descent of Man,' &amp;c.

THE VARIATION OF ANIMALS AND PLANTS UNDER DOMESTICATION.

With Illustrations. Large crown 8vo, 2 vols. 5s. net.

GEOLOGY: Processes and their Results.

By THOMAS C. CHAMBERLIN and ROLLIN D. SALISBURY, Heads of the Departments of Geology and Geography, University of Chicago, Members of the United States Geological Survey. With Maps, Plans, and numerous other Illustrations. Demy 8vo, 21s. net.

CHEAP EDITION.

HAWAIIAN ARCHIPELAGO:

The Palm Groves, Coral Reefs, and Volcanoes of the Sandwich Islands.

By the late Mrs. BISHOP (Isabella L. Bird). With Illustrations. Large crown 8vo, 2s. 6d. net.

POEMS.

By BLISS CARMAN, Author of 'The Pipes of Pan,' 'Songs of the Sea Children,' &amp;c. Limited Edition on Hand-made Paper. 2 vols. folio, polished Persian, 27. 2s. net.

POPULAR EDITION.

SELF-HELP.

By SAMUEL SMILES. Reset from New Type and printed on larger Paper. 3s. 6d.

JOHN MURRAY, Albemarle Street, W.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

MESSRS. METHUEN have just published a book of the greatest charm and the most poignant interest,

DE PROFUNDIS. By Oscar Wilde. Crown 8vo, 5s. net.

This very remarkable book was written in prison, and expresses the philosophy which the author gathered in his two years' imprisonment. It is of the highest interest, not only for the light which it throws on the curiously complex nature of its author, but also for its intrinsic beauty.

GREAT ZIMBABWE. By R. N. HALL, part Author of 'The Ancient Ruins of Rhodesia.' With numerous Plans and Illustrations. Royal 8vo, 21s. net.

GASPARD de COLIGNY, ADMIRAL of FRANCE. By A. W. WHITEHEAD. With many Illustrations and Maps. 12s. 6d. net.

"An important and original contribution."—Daily Chronicle.
 "A fine piece of historical portraiture, vivid in individual characterization, and conceived in a spirit of impartiality."—Academy.
 "The book is a thoroughly good one in every respect."—Guardian.

ENGLAND UNDER the STUARTS. By G. M. TREVELYAN, Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge, Author of 'The Age of Wyclif.' With Maps and Plans. Demy 8vo, 10s. 6d. net.

This is the Fifth Volume, though the first published, of the Six Volumes of a New HISTORY of ENGLAND (Edited by Prof. C. W. C. OMAN), from the earliest times down to the year 1815.

"It is the most interesting account, in a small space of Stuart history, which it has been our fortune to encounter. It is the work of one who has a competent knowledge of his period, a keen eye for the picturesque, and a remarkable command of phrase. He has sympathy for the causes of civil and religious liberty which lends his work the touch of emotion indispensable to an effective description of great personages and great events."—Manchester Guardian.

A HISTORY of ROME: during the Later Republic and the Early Principate. By A. H. J. GREENIDGE, M.A. In 6 vols. Vol. I. (133-104 B.C.). With Maps. Demy 8vo, 10s. 6d. net.

"A worthy introduction to Gibbon. Mr. Greenidge is a deep political thinker and an admirable writer."—Outlook.

"His diction is clear and pleasant, his judgments based upon definite conceptions of persons and things."—Manchester Guardian.

The LIFE of FATHER IGNATIUS, O.S.B. By the BARONESS DE BERTOUCH. Illustrated. Demy 8vo, 10s. 6d. net.

"Full of miracles and prodigies."—Daily Mirror.
 "A curious and remarkable volume."—Daily Telegraph.

"The book is a most readable one and introduces us to an undoubtedly remarkable character."—Bystander.

SHRINES of BRITISH SAINTS. By J. C. WALL. With numerous Illustrations and Plans. Demy 8vo, 7s. 6d. net. [The Antiquary's Books].

OLD GORGON GRAHAM. Crown 8vo, 6s.

This is a pendant to Mr. Lorimer's 'Letters of a Self-made Merchant.'

"Lovers of homely humour and shrewd common sense will be delighted."—Morning Post.
 "The present series are written in the same vein as the earlier collection, and reach quite as high a standard both as regards sound advice in business and private life and shrewd wit and keen observation of men and manners. All is good, and there is a smile—of approval as well as of amusement—at nearly every line."—Daily News.

ENGLISH SEAMEN. By ROBERT SOUTHEY. Vol. II. RICHARD HAWKINS, GRENVILLE, ESSEX, and RALEIGH. 6s.

The Second Volume of a well-known Series of Lives by Southey, the First Volume of which was published by Messrs. Methuen some years ago.

A MODERN CAMPAIGN; or, War and Wireless Telegraphy in the Far East. By DAVID FRASER, the Times Special Correspondent. Illustrated. Crown 8vo, 6s.

SICILY. By DOUGLAS SLADEN. With 234 Illustrations. Crown 8vo, 5s. net.

JEREMY BENTHAM. By C. M. ATKINSON. Demy 8vo, 6s.

ANECDOTES of SOLDIERS. Edited by J. H. SETTLE. Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d. net.

This book contains over 1,500 stories of soldiers in peace and war.

A HISTORY of RUSSIA from PETER the GREAT to ALEXANDER II. By W. R. MORFILL, Oriel College, Oxford. With Maps and Plans. A Cheaper Edition, crown 8vo, 3s. 6d.

WINSTON SPENCER CHURCHILL. By A. M. SCOTT. With Portraits and Illustrations. Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d.

A MIDSUMMER NIGHT'S DREAM. By WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE. Edited by H. CUNINGHAM. Demy 8vo, 2s. 6d. net. [The Arden Shakespeare].

TIMON of ATHENS, and TROILUS and CRESSIDA. By WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE. Edited, with Introduction and Notes, by W. J. CRAIG. Pott 16mo, leather, 1s. net each. [Little Quarto Shakespeare].

The LIFE of JOHN RUSKIN. By W. G. COLLINGWOOD, M.A. With Portraits. Fifth Edition. Crown 8vo, 2s. 6d. net. [Half-Crown Library].

The GOLDEN POMP. A Procession of English Lyrics. Arranged by A. T. QUILLER COUCH. Second and Cheaper Edition. Crown 8vo, 2s. 6d. net. [Half-Crown Library].

Messrs. Methuen are publishing a series of books under the above title which will contain many books of general interest and first-rate quality at the low price of 2s. 6d. net. They are well printed and bound uniformly in cloth.

ENGLAND'S RUIN. Discussed in Sixteen Letters to the Right Honourable Joseph Chamberlain, M.P. By A. M. S. METHUEN. Crown 8vo, 3d. net.

NEW NOVELS.

THE GOLDEN BOWL. By HENRY JAMES. Second Edition. Crown 8vo, 6s.

"Nothing more exquisitely and pathetically beautiful than the character of Maggie, the herosically patient, persistent, developed little wife and daughter, is to be found in the gallery of modern fiction."—Standard.

"It is impressively clever. The mind out of which this work is spun is of astonishing capacity and insight."—Daily Mail.

"To give any idea of the infinite subtlety and delicacy with which the author narrates his story is beyond the strength of mortal reviewer."—Daily Chronicle.

The SECRET WOMAN. By EDEN PHILLIPOTS. Third Edition. Crown 8vo, 6s.

"The Secret Woman' is beyond all question one of the greatest novels in literature. It is a masterpiece. It sets Mr. Phillpotts among the immortals. By virtue of this superb achievement he enters the company of the masters. He is the fellow of Fielding and Scott, Dickens and Thackeray, Meredith and Hardy, Turgenev and Tolstoy. I have said nothing of the noble prose in which this great novel is written. I have said nothing of the rich vitality of the minor characters. I have said nothing of the deep humour of the rustics, who are, indeed, the best rustics since Thomas Hardy's challenged Shakespeare's. The scene between Barbara Westaway and Arcott is profoundly dramatic. It is as fine as anything George Eliot ever wrote. Joseph Westaway is a wonderful piece of humorous portraiture. So is Joshua Bloom. So is Mr. Tapp. Altogether, I do not hesitate to say that Mr. Eden Phillpotts has added a masterpiece of the first order to the treasury of English fiction."—Star.
 JAMES DOUGLAS in the Star.

MRS. GALER'S BUSINESS. By W. PETT RIDGE. Crown 8vo, 6s.

The CASTLE of the SHADOWS. By Mrs. C. N. WILLIAMSON, co-Author of 'The Lightning Conductor.' Illustrated. Crown 8vo, 6s.

The SYSTEM. By PERCY WHITE, Author of 'The West End,' &c. Third Edition. Crown 8vo, 6s.

"Very life-like and intensely readable."—Daily Mail.

"Mr. White's good things are not only excellently said, but also, it seems to us, tolerably true. He has never been happier in his exposure of the taste of the age in which we live."—Athenæum.

"The System' is in Mr. White's best manner and contains both thought and pleasant-tries admirably mixed."—Morning Leader.

"Mr. White is not less interesting than usual, and his firm touch, his quiet humour and cynicism, his assured methods are all here."—Standard.

The GATE of the DESERT. By JOHN OXENHAM, Author of 'Barbe of Grand Bayou.' With a Frontispiece. Second Edition. Crown 8vo, 6s.

"Mr. Oxenham tells his story with vigour and vividness. A lovely and entertaining story of modern adventure."—Outlook.

HIS ISLAND PRINCESS. By W. CLARK RUSSELL. Illustrated. Crown 8vo, 6s.

"Devised with unusual invention."—Daily Mail.

"Interesting, surprising, and exciting."—Morning Leader.

"There is abundant life and colour and movement, sympathy and tragedy, and plenty of incident."—St. James's Gazette.

The TEMPESTUOUS PETTICOAT. By ROBERT BARR, Author of 'The Countess Tekla,' &c. Illustrated. Crown 8vo, 6s.

BARHAM of BELTANA. By W. E. NORRIS. Crown 8vo, 6s.

The VALLEY of the SHADOW. By WILLIAM LE QUEUX. With 2 Illustrations by A. H. BUCKLAND. Crown 8vo, 6s.

The MYSTERY of the MOAT. By ADELINE SERGEANT. Crown 8vo, 6s.

"Highly sensational, bright, and vivacious."—Scotsman.

"An excellent specimen of Miss Sergeant's powers, very fascinating and entertaining."—Lloyd's.

"Full of excitement from start to finish."—Morning Leader.

The WEANS at ROWALLAN. By K. FITZPATRICK. Crown 8vo, 6s.

"A delightful book. Indeed, we think it is one of the best books about children published since the days of Mrs. Ewing."—Speaker.

"He must be dull indeed who does not fall a willing captive to the fascination of these fatherless children."—Outlook.

"Quite unusually good, and the humours of life in the Irish house are set forth with much gusto, cleverness, and sympathy."—Daily Mail.

HE that EATETH BREAD with ME. By H. A. MITCHELL KEAYS. Crown 8vo, 6s.

"A really interesting and remarkable novel."—Guardian.

"A remarkable book and of much solid power."—Morning Leader.

"Great is the power of atmosphere and greater still the charm of good writing."—Daily Graphic.

HEART of MY HEART. By ELLIS MEREDITH. Crown 8vo, 6s.

"Curious, unique, informing, and obviously the outcome of experience."—Standard.

"Delicate fancy, descriptive vigour, and uplifting moral."—Glasgow Herald.

"A book of unusual merit, written with genuine literary charm and distinction."—Daily Mail.

The VIRGIN and the SCALES. By CONSTANCE COTTERELL. Crown 8vo, 6s.

"Written with freshness of inspiration. The story is good, very good, and captures the mind with the freshness of early flowers."—Black and White.

"Bright and lively and clever."—Speaker.

MADAME BUTTERFLY. By J. LUTHER LONG, co-Author of 'The Darling of the Gods.' Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d.

Kindly write to Messrs. METHUEN for particulars of their Two New Series, "METHUEN'S HALF-CROWN LIBRARY" and "METHUEN'S SHILLING NOVELS."

METHUEN & CO. 36, Essex Street, Strand, W.C.

MACMILLAN & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

SHAKESPEAREAN TRAGEDY.

Lectures on 'HAMLET,' 'OTHELLO,' 'KING LEAR,' and 'MACBETH.' By Prof. A. C. BRADLEY, LL.D. Litt.D. 8vo, 10s. net.

SPECTATOR.—"We have no hesitation in putting Prof. Bradley's book far above any modern Shakespearean criticism that we know, worthy to rank very near the immortal work of Lamb and Coleridge. It is, indeed, difficult to praise it in language which shall do it justice, and yet seem free from exaggeration. For it is more than a study of Shakespeare; it is a unique piece of constructive criticism, which from its freshness of method and distinction of form deserves to rank as the most important exercise in the craft since Matthew Arnold's 'Essays in Criticism.'"

NEW VOLUME OF ESSAYS BY SIR ARCHIBALD GEIKIE LANDSCAPE IN HISTORY, And other Essays.

By Sir ARCHIBALD GEIKIE, D.C.L. F.R.S. 8vo, 8s. 6d. net.

CLASSICAL LIBRARY.—New Vol. THE MYTHS OF PLATO.

Translated, with Introductory and other Observations, by J. A. STEWART, M.A., Student and Tutor of Christ Church and White's Professor of Moral Philosophy in the University of Oxford. 8vo, 14s. net.

SECOND IMPRESSION NOW READY. THE DIARY OF A CHURCH-GOER.

Crown 8vo, gilt top, 3s. 6d. net.

CONCLUDING VOL. JUST READY. TWELVE ENGLISH STATESMEN. CHATHAM.

By FREDERIC HARRISON. Crown 8vo, 2s. 6d.

ENGLISH MEN OF LETTERS.—New Series. Crown 8vo, gilt tops, flat backs, 2s. net each.

SYDNEY SMITH.

By GEORGE W. E. RUSSELL.

DAILY TELEGRAPH.—"A warm-hearted, spirited, and remarkably attractive piece of biography, rich in excellent portraiture, and full of acute but indulgent criticism. In short, we have here one of the best-written volumes in all the distinguished series which it adorns."

THOMAS MOORE.

By STEPHEN GWYNN.

MACMILLAN'S GUIDE TO ITALY AND SICILY.

With 19 Maps and 36 Plans. Fifth Edition. 10s. net.

MACMILLAN'S NEW NOVELS.

Crown 8vo, gilt tops, 6s. each.

ALFRED TRESIDDER SHEPPARD. THE RED CRAVAT. GERTRUDE ATHERTON.

THE BELL IN THE FOG,
And other Stories.

OWEN JOHNSON.

NICOLE; or, in the Name of Liberty.

JAMES BARNES.

THE UNPARDONABLE WAR.

MARCH NUMBERS NOW READY.

THE CENTURY MAGAZINE.

Illustrated. Price 1s. 4d. Annual Subscription, 16s.

The MARCH Number contains:—

The NEW SIEGE WARFARE at PORT ARTHUR. By Richard Barry, an Eye-Witness of the Siege.
SKYSCRAPERS of NEW YORK. Shown in a Group of New Etchings by JOSEPH PENNELL.
SANDY. A Story. By Alice Hegan Rice, Author of 'Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch.' IV. Illustrated.
And Numerous other Stories and Articles of General Interest.

ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE FOR CHILDREN. ST. NICHOLAS.

Price 1s. Annual Subscription, 12s.

MACMILLAN & CO., LIMITED, London.

MR. PERCEVAL LANDON'S GREAT WORK ON TIBET.

In 2 vols. royal 8vo, with over 250 beautiful Illustrations and 7 Maps, price 2l. 2s. net.

LHASA.

An Account of the Country and People of Central Tibet, and of the Progress of the Mission sent there by the English Government in the Year 1903-4.

Written, with the help of all the principal persons of the Mission,

By PERCEVAL LANDON,
Special Correspondent of the Times.

With an Introduction by

Col. Sir FRANCIS YOUNGHUSBAND,
K.C.I.E.

An Illustrated Prospectus sent free on application.

"Our correspondent has had such opportunities of studying the internal politics of Tibet as perhaps no European ever before obtained."

Times (Leader).

"It is unlikely that English readers will be offered a more sumptuous, elaborate, or more picturesque account than has been written by Mr. Landon. As he explains in his acknowledgment of the help which has been so generously given to him by the chief actors in the Tibetan Expedition, his object is to make 'Lhasa' a book of Tibetan reference, and for the present it will certainly hold the field."—Times.

"Mr. Percival Landon is to be highly congratulated on a brilliant achievement. Presented with an unique opportunity, he has risen to it, and produced, perhaps, the best book ever written about Tibet and its capital. He has seen with the eye of an artist, and described with the pen of a poet, the last home of romance in the world, the last mystery that had hitherto been preserved inviolate from the eyes of strangers."—Daily Chronicle.

"The climax of the narrative of course is the approach to Lhasa, and Mr. Landon does not miss his opportunity. In a few pages, now eloquent, now rhetorical, he describes his first sight of the city, which so few strangers had ever beheld, and which for centuries remained a place of dreams. Of the illustrations it is impossible to speak too highly, and we know not where the art of photography has been carried to a loftier pitch of excellence."—Daily Mail.

DR. OTTO NORDENSKJOLD'S GREAT WORK on the SOUTH POLAR REGIONS.

In 1 vol., medium 8vo, Illustrated by over 250 Reproductions of Photographs taken especially for this work, 4 Coloured Plates from Paintings, and 3 Maps, 18s. net.

ANTARCTICA: Two Years amongst the Ice of the South Pole. By Dr. OTTO NORDENSKJOLD.

"The story which is graphically told in this profusely illustrated volume adds an eloquent chapter to the long record of daring enterprise beyond the sea, undertaken for a definite useful purpose. The book is full of vivid accounts of the wonders of these distant regions."—Daily Chronicle.

A BOOK OF ANECDOTE ILLUSTRATING LITERARY LIFE IN LONDON.

In 1 vol. large crown 8vo, with 16 Portrait Sketches, 6s. net.

TWENTY YEARS AGO. By EDMUND DOWNEY, Author of 'Through Green Glasses.'

[Ready February 21.]

NEW NOVEL BY PHILIP L. STEVENSON.

In 1 vol. crown 8vo, 6s.

A GENDARME of the KING. Being the Experiences of the Laird of Lindourie with the Great Frederick in the Seven Years' War. By PHILIP L. STEVENSON.

London: HURST & BLACKETT, LIMITED,
182, High Holborn, W.C.

DUCKWORTH & CO.

AUGUSTE RODIN.

By CAMILLE MAUCLAIR, Author of 'The Great French Painters,' 'French Impressionists.' With 40 Illustrations. Photogravure Frontispiece. Crown 4to, 10s. 6d. net. [Just out.]

Messrs. Duckworth announce the publication of a volume dealing with the life, ideas, and work of M. Auguste Rodin, the great French sculptor, who has succeeded Whistler as President of the International Society. The author, M. Camille Maclair, knows Rodin intimately, and he has dealt with his personality as well as his work, with the psychological as well as the artistic side.

ALBERT DÜRER.

By T. STURGE MOORE. 4 Copperplates and 50 Half-tone Engravings. Pott 4to, 7s. 6d. net.

VERROCCHIO.

By MAUD CRUTTWELL. 48 Illustrations. Pott 4to, 7s. 6d. net.

MEDIAEVAL ART, A.D. 312-1350.

By W. R. LETHABY. With 60 Plates and many Original Drawings by the Author. Pott 4to, 8s. 6d. net.

ITALIAN MEDALS.

By C. VON FABRICZY. Translated by Mrs. GUSTAVUS W. HAMILTON. With Notes by G. F. HILL, of the British Museum. Small 4to, 42 Plates, 10s. 6d. net.

A LIFE OF WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE.

By W. J. ROLFE, Litt.D. Demy 8vo, 8 Illustrations, 10s. 6d. net. [Just out.]

IDEALS AND REALITIES IN RUSSIAN LITERATURE.

By PRINCE KROPOTKIN. With Portrait. Demy 8vo, 7s. 6d. net. [Ready in March.]

BOOKS AND THINGS.

A Volume of Essays. By G. S. STREET. Crown 8vo, 6s.

"Of all light essayists there are few more consistently engaging. Mr. Street never writes a foolish thing—seldom, indeed, anything that is not remarkable clever." Daily Chronicle.

THE GREY BRETHREN.

By MICHAEL FAIRLESS, Author of 'The Roadmender.' Uniform with 'The Roadmender.' Cloth, 2s. 6d. net; leather, 3s. 6d. net.

VELAZQUEZ.

By AUGUSTE BRÉAL, Author of 'Rembrandt.' With 45 Illustrations. Cloth, 2s. net; leather, 2s. 6d. net. (In the "Popular Library of Art.") [In the press.]

NEW FICTION. GOSSIP.

By BENJAMIN SWIFT, Author of 'In Piccadilly.' Crown 8vo, 6s. [Just out.]

THE PURPLE LAND.

By W. H. HUDSON, Author of 'Green Mansions.' Crown 8vo, 6s. [Second Impression now ready.]

"This enchanting romance. Extraordinary charm. A more romantic recital of adventure it would be difficult to imagine. Has no competitors and need fear no rivals." Spectator.

PROGRESS. PROGRESS.

By R. B. CUNNINGHAME GRAHAM. Crown 8vo, 6s.

"In 'Progress' he is himself from beginning to end.... He is an artist.... The book cannot fail to absorb.... There is that which not only arrests, but imprisons the imagination."—Daily Chronicle.

NEW BOOK BY ELINOR GLYN, AUTHOR OF 'THE VISITS OF ELIZABETH.'

Crown 8vo, 6s.

THE VICISSITUDES OF EVANGELINE.

[Ready on March 2]

DUCKWORTH & CO. 3, Henrietta Street, W.C.

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 25, 1905.

CONTENTS.

|   | PAGE    |
|---|---------|
| THE EXPEDITION TO LHASA ... ..  | 231     |
| MR. HOLYOAKE'S REMINISCENCES ... ..   | 232     |
| THE CHURCH IN MADRAS ... ..   | 233     |
| SYDNEY SMITH ... ..   | 234     |
| CROSS RIVER NATIVES ... ..  | 235     |
| NEW NOVELS (His Island Princess; Lady Penelope; The Gate of the Desert; Diane; Helen of Troy; The Religion of Evelyn Hastings; The War of the Sexes) ... ..   | 236-238 |
| THE STUDY OF JAPANESE ... ..  | 238     |
| SHORT STORIES ... ..  | 238     |
| OUR LIBRARY TABLE (The Balkan Question; Uganda and its Peoples; Sociological Papers; The Thackeray Country; The Dickens Country; The Autobiography of Franklin; Poems of Fergusson; Dickensiana; Reprints and New Editions; A "Pocket Anthology" of Lyrics; Debrett's House of Commons; The Clergy List) ... .. | 239-240 |
| LIST OF NEW BOOKS ... ..  | 241     |
| THE ORIGINAL BODLEIAN COPY OF THE FIRST FOLIO OF SHAKESPEARE; COMPULSORY GREEK AND SCHOOLMASTERS; THE ADVANCED HISTORICAL TEACHING FUND; A FRAGMENT OF CANTON; THE SPRING PUBLISHING SEASON ... ..  | 241-242 |
| LITERARY GOSSIP ... ..  | 243     |
| SCIENCE—THE DYNAMICAL THEORY OF GASES; ANTHROPOLOGICAL NOTES; SOCIETIES; MEETINGS NEXT WEEK; GOSSIP ... ..  | 244-247 |
| FINE ARTS—ALBERT DÜRER; FANTIN-LATOUR; PORCELAIN AT MESSRS. DUVEEN'S; ROMAN BRITAIN IN 1904; SALES; GOSSIP ... ..   | 247-250 |
| MUSIC—MADAME CARRENO'S AND HERR VON DOHNANYI'S PIANOFORTE RECITALS; MISS MARIE HALL'S VIOLIN RECITAL; GOSSIP; PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK ... ..   | 251     |
| DRAMA—MR. HOPKINSON; GOSSIP ... ..  | 251-252 |

LITERATURE

Lhasa. By Perceval Landon. 2 vols. (Hurst & Blackett.)

MR. PERCEVAL LANDON, correspondent of The Times with the Tibet Expedition, claims that his work has been "written with the help of all the principal persons of the mission." It is consequently more or less an official work, and in it, if anywhere, is to be found the full history of the advance to and occupation of Lhasa. This special character and high pretension make it all the more regrettable that some errors of fact and date should have crept into the earlier and historical pages of the work. These somewhat shook our confidence in the writer, and created at the beginning a slight prejudice against him in our mind, which we are pleased to say the perusal of his most interesting and, indeed, charming narrative subsequently entirely removed. Mr. Landon has acquitted himself of his main task so well that he will not regard it as a severe reproof if we point out in the first place the few blemishes to which we have referred.

Speaking of the mission of George Bogle, the first envoy sent to Tibet by Warren Hastings in 1774, Mr. Landon says, on p. 13, "his object was not Lhasa." Of course, every one acquainted with the rudiments of Tibetan history knows that he was sent by Hastings to the Teshu (now Tashi) Lama, "the guardian of the young Dalai Lama, the sovereign of the country," but Bogle expected, and was commissioned, to go on to Lhasa. In Hastings's letter of appointment of May 13th, 1774, Bogle was given power to establish, if he thought it useful, "a residence at Lhasa," and to leave there such persons as he considered fit to act as agents "till a proper resident can be appointed." Bogle did not reach the forbidden city, but it cannot be said that "his object was not Lhasa." A few pages further on Mr. Landon calls the well-known French missionary-traveller Huc a Jesuit. He was a Lazarist, not a Jesuit. Mr. Landon's chronology is also defective. He dates Nadir's invasion of India in 1727 instead of 1739; he talks of "the Old Guard at Fontenoy" more than sixty years before there was an Old Guard; and he places the capture of Lhasa by the Eleuths in 1717 instead of 1710. Sir Henry Howorth is entitled to the credit among English writers of having cleared up this point by the aid of the Russian envoy Unkoffsky (see 'History of the Mongols,' vol. i. pp. 643-4), who, visiting the Eleuth head camp or capital a very few years after the event, states precisely that the expedition to Lhasa took place in 1709 or 1710.

When Mr. Landon leaves the shadowy past, he finds himself in his true element as a keen observer, with a lively sense of the beauties of nature and a felicitous diction to bring them before the mind of the reader. On the very threshold of the journey the foliage of Sikkim, which Hooker spoke of as unparalleled anywhere, inspires his pen. The giant rhododendrons in this valley are described as being over 80 feet, or as high as a London house, orchids grow like weeds, and timber, from the oak to the juniper, abounds; then, as Sikkim is left behind, there is a sharp and sudden change from a land of green foliage to a region of barren rock. From Sikkim the expedition, after a first experience of aridity, passed over the Natula Pass into the Chumbi valley, which was to have been the security for the war indemnity promised by the Tibetans in the treaty, but which is apparently to be given up now. If Sikkim is remarkable for its trees and plants, Chumbi seems to be most productive of granite, incomparable in colour and of a hardness that almost defies dynamite. The third and final stage is reached at the northern exit from Chumbi. Here the Himalayan landscape is left behind, and for three thousand miles northwards, with the exception of the Sanpu valley, the "scenery remains monotonous, waterless, heart-breaking."

We have thought it most suitable in treating a book dealing largely with natural scenery, and with strange and almost unknown sights in a newly opened country, to call attention to the three stages so clearly marked in the character of the region through which our representatives passed. The major part of Mr. Landon's first volume is given up to this side of the subject, and, indeed, throughout his narrative he appears to us to have subordinated with prudent discrimination his account of the daily experiences, political and military, of the mission, to the description of a new land and a strange race. As a chronicler of daily events he has rivals, as a describer of the picturesque and the curious he has struck out a line of his own. There are only two incidents of the campaign in his version to which we wish to refer specifically because they have not been mentioned elsewhere. One is that the night attack on the mission at Changlo, during the absence of Col. Brander's force, was only repulsed with the ease that it was by the fact that a mere boy, the last-joined recruit, who had been almost rejected, fortunately saw men moving at a short distance from the stockade whom the sentries had failed to discover. The second matter, gratifying to our national pride, was the admission by the Tibetans that the English did not attack women or enter their nunneries, for which reason the treasures and ornaments of many of the monasteries were hastily conveyed on our approach to these places of safety. Indeed, there was a curious and striking contrast between the confidence reposed by the Tibetans in our proceedings, and the fatalistic belief in the lamas' charms against our weapons (agreeing in this with the belief of the Boxers) with which other Tibetans, as at Gyantse, fought us under hopeless conditions to the bitter death. The following passage, besides giving a favourable instance of the author's descriptive powers, also provides a strange picture of peace during war:—

"Agriculture is a serious business with the Tibetans. Here and there, but very rarely, the darkened garnet or dirty amber of a lama's dress adds a note of colour to the thirsty stretch of alluvial soil, fenceless and flat. But generally the work is done by quiet little figures whose patched grey dresses are blotted out among their own furrows, and whose very existence is often betrayed only by the slow plod and turn of the scarlet-and-white head-dressed yaks in the plough-yoke. Among these people there is no shyness, scarcely even curiosity.....Always, of course, there was civility as we rode by. The Tibetan peasants' manners are perfect. The small boy jumps off the harrow upon which he has been having a ride, and, stopping his song, bows with his joined hands in front of his face, elbows up, and right knee bent. A householder smiles, exhibits two inches of tongue, and gives a Napoleonic salute as we pass by, pulling his cap down over his face to his chest. Rosy backed and breasted sparrows fly in a twittering company before us through the grey-white willowthorn brake, and a vivid golden wagtail flirts his tail beside a puddle. Redstarts sit on the top of prayer-poles, and hoopoes flash black-and-white wings by the stream. Ruddy sheldrake and bar-headed geese barely move aside from a wet patch of recent ploughland as we approach, and iridescent black-green magpies, half as large again as our English luck-bringers, keep pace beside us with their dipping flight."

Mr. Landon gives a tolerably complete account of the Russian agent, the Buriat Dorjief, who acquired so remarkable an influence over Tibetan politics of recent years, and he exposes the full course of Russian intrigue at Lhasa. Whatever hopes and ambitions the Emperor of Russia may have entertained in this quarter, he certainly could never have anticipated the honour his Tibetan admirers had reserved for him, viz., that the spirit of Tsong Khapa, the Luther and Reformer of the Tibetan Church, had been reincarnated in his Imperial person! The reader of these pages will learn from them how this move was parried by those in the Lhasa Council who were not bound to Russia, and how the late Queen Victoria herself was accorded another reincarnation as a sort of set-off to the Tsar's. If Dorjief was our enemy because he was a Russian sympathizer and subject, it was our misfortune to have incurred the animosity of another Tibetan of far greater influence in the earlier phases of the question by an accidental affront with which politics had nothing to do. This was the Shata Shapé, or Prime Minister, who had been ducked in a pond at Darjeeling for some rudeness, intentional or not, to an English lady, and who had returned to Lhasa in no amiable frame of mind. His support helped the progress of Dorjief's plot, and contributed to lead the Dalai Lama astray; but there came a day when he was charged with lukewarmness and other more definite faults, deposed from office with his brother ministers, and cast into prison. There does not seem then to have been any one of influence enough to arrest the Dalai Lama in his anti-English policy. The Chinese Amban tried for his own purposes, but failed so completely that he became alarmed for his personal safety, and sent a singular request to the Maharajah of Nepal for a thousand Gurkha soldiers. This is not the only case in which Mr. Landon throws light on what may be called the secret minor incidents of the expedition.

Half of his second volume is taken up with a description, in the fullest and most faithful detail, of the city of Lhasa. The idea of giving an exhaustive account of the mysterious city before it again returned to its normal state of concealment was singularly happy, and not less so has been Mr. Landon's execution. Curiously enough, the same idea does not appear to have presented itself to the other writers on the subject, and consequently Mr. Landon has this field entirely to himself. His final account amply bears out his first impression that, "judged by the standards of the East and West alike, Lhasa is a city which can hold its own with most." The mission found it "unique, dowered with a mingled magnificence and green luxuriance for which no step of our long journey had given us warning." With regard to the Potala itself, Mr. Landon states that "further acquaintance does but increase one's amazement and admiration."

The illustrations, which form a special feature throughout the two volumes, include views of all the principal buildings of Lhasa, and some of the most effective have been taken in colour from pictures by Countess Helena Gleichen. These give a very realistic representation of the exceptional wealth and variety of hues and shades in a Tibetan landscape. The pictures of the Turquoise Bridge, and the view of Lhasa showing the golden roofs of the Jo-kang Cathedral, are two of the most striking of the attempts to convey to the reader's eye a faithful appearance of the extraordinarily brilliant colouring of landscape and building in this weird country, which might otherwise be set down as mere phantasmagoria. There is, of course, another side to this attractive aspect of Tibet, and although we do not refer to it, Mr. Landon does not omit the description of the squalor and the dirt that exist side by side with priestly pomp and splendour of a curious and antique sort. It would not be far from the truth to declare that the national life of the Tibetans—who seem, by all accounts, to deserve a better fate—is blighted by degrading superstition and the selfishness of an ignorant priesthood, who have exploited the simple trust of their countrymen for their own indulgence. In conclusion, we may congratulate Mr. Landon on his success, because it was not easy to do what he has done. To use his own words, he has unquestionably imparted to his narrative more than "a flash from that aurora of fascination which haloed every step we took in this strange country, which danced will-o'-the-wisp-like along our road before us, which at the end sat like St. Elmo's fire within the shrine of the great golden idol in the heart of Lhasa."

Bygones Worth Remembering. By George Jacob Holyoake. 2 vols. (Fisher Unwin.)

MORE than twelve years ago, on December 31st, 1892, we reviewed Mr. Holyoake's 'Sixty Years of an Agitator's Life,' and now we have from him these two volumes of 'Bygones,' which show that the veteran agitator, or, more properly, the "young patriarch," is as full of energy as ever. As a contribution to the history of the political and social progress of the nation these 'Bygones' are of great value, for Mr. Holyoake, as is well known, has taken part in almost every recent attempt of importance to improve the condition of the people. Born in "tinder-box days," he had to strike a light for his grandfather's early pipe by means of flint and steel. After sundown

"the household lived in gloom. Children who could, read, as I did, by the flickering light of the fire, which often limited for life the power of seeing."

There were no public wash-houses, and one pump in a yard had to serve several families. Sir Edwin Chadwick said "that more dissensions arose over party pumps in a day than a dozen preachers could reconcile in a week." This unfortunately is still the case in some few instances. Mr. Holyoake considers that "of all the benefits that have come to the working class in my time, those of travel are among the greatest." In his early days third-class passengers to Brighton travelled in an open cattle-truck, exposed to wind and rain, and a journey from Newcastle to London took a third-class passenger from a quarter to five in the morning until nine in the evening. In later years Mr. Holyoake took a leading part in obtaining the repeal of the penny a mile tax on all third-class fares.

In his youth men were paid late on Saturday night.

"Poor nailers trudged miles into Birmingham, with their week's work in bags on their backs, who were to be seen hanging about merchants' doors up to ten and eleven o'clock to get payment for their goods."

The working hours were twelve or more a day, and the wages were cut down at will. Mr. Holyoake relates that "a pressman in my employ has worked at a hand-press twenty-four hours continuously before publishing day." In these times "the mechanic had no personal credit for his work, whatever might be his skill. Now in industrial exhibitions the name of the artificer is attached to his work, and he is part of the character of the firm which employs him." He has also now—if co-operation prevails—"a prospect of participating in the profits of his own industry." At the present time, Mr. Holyoake tells us, "two hundred workshops exist on the labour co-partnership principle.....sixteen years ago there were little more than a dozen workshops owned and conducted by working men. There are more than a hundred now, and hundreds in which the workers receive an addition to their wages, undreamt of in the last generation."

Mr. Holyoake's first public discussion in London was with Mr. Passmore Edwards: "personally the handsomest adversary I ever met. A mass of wavy black hair and pleasant expression made him picturesque." He was the first person who mentioned to him the idea of a halfpenny newspaper, and he asked Mr. Holyoake if he thought it would pay. The chief difficulty Mr. Holyoake foresaw was, Would newsagents give it a chance? It afterwards cost the house of Cassell—the first to make the experiment—many thousands.

Of the Chartists Mr. Holyoake has much of interest to tell, and a chapter is devoted to "the 10th of April, 1848, when the Duke of Wellington filled London with soldiers, and a million of special constables were out staff in hand." The procession of actual Chartists able to leave their work could never have amounted to four thousand. There was not a single weapon among them, nor any intention of using it had they possessed it. The founder of the real Chartists was Francis Place, known as "the old Postillion," for he was "always ready to mount and drive the coach of the leaders of the people"; he laboured unceasingly for the enfranchisement of the working classes. Interesting reminiscences are given of Harriet Martineau; the three Newmans (of these "Francis William was the handsomest. He had classical features, a placid, clear, and confident voice, and an impressive smile which lighted up all his face"); Mazzini, whose list of works fills nearly ten pages of the catalogue of the British Museum; Kossuth, who "astonished us with his knowledge of English"; and John Stuart Mill, whose first speech at a public meeting was made at Mr. Holyoake's request before a gathering of co-operators at the Whittington Club.

There are also pleasant reminiscences of Lord Shaftesbury, of whom Mr. Holyoake writes, "There are saints of the Church and saints of humanity. Lord Shaftesbury was a saint of both churches"; Samuel Morley, "who excelled all lay Dissenters I have known in the manly sense of the dignity and independence of Nonconformity"; and Garibaldi, with "his square shoulders and tapering body," his "calmness and imperturbable modesty." Mr. Holyoake was the acting secretary for sending out the British Legion to Garibaldi, and he retains the flag which the "Thousand" carried when they made their celebrated invasion of Naples. Two interesting chapters are devoted to the Cowens. It was Joseph Cowen the younger who purchased The Newcastle Chronicle and made it the leading political power in Durham and Northumberland; but he had to sink forty thousand pounds before it began to pay; he never went into society, but occupied himself with his collieries, his ships, newspaper, and public meetings from early morning until late at night, without rest and without hurry. "He was never exhausted and never still. One evening he lay down on his sofa, fell asleep, and none around knew he was dead."

With a reference to Gladstone we must close our notice. Mr. Holyoake was walking through the passage which leads from Downing Street into the Park when he saw a pair of gleaming eyes approaching him. "The passage was so dark I saw nothing else. As the figure passed me I saw it was Mr. Gladstone." On returning to the House Mr. Holyoake mentioned it to Mr. Vargas, who had sat at the Treasury door for fifty years. "Yes," he answered; "there have been no eyes enter the House of Commons like Mr. Gladstone's since the days of Canning."

In closing his 'Bygones' Mr. Holyoake takes a view of the progress of the nation during the past sixty years. The material conditions of life are improved, food is purer, health is surer, life itself is safer, and lasts longer. Comfort has crept into a million houses where it never found its way before. The press is free, and a poor man can buy a better library for a few shillings than the middle-class man possessed fifty years ago. In all this progress the veteran agitator has taken his full share, and he has this message of hope to future workers:—

"Since so much has been accomplished in half a century, when there were few advantages to begin with, what may not be gained in the next fifty years, with the larger means now at command, and the confidence that the great success of the past should inspire?"

The Church in Madras. By the Rev. Frank Penny. (Smith, Elder & Co.)

In The Athenæum of September 22nd, 1900, we reviewed a work by Mrs. Frank Penny, entitled 'Fort St. George, Madras: a Short History of our First Possession in India.' We now have to notice a book from the pen of Mr. Frank Penny, who, having spent several years as a Government chaplain in Madras, has appropriately taken for his subject (to quote the sub-title of his work) "the history of the ecclesiastical and missionary action of the East India Company in the Presidency of Madras in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries." This book, says the author in his preface,

"is not intended to be a religious history of the period and the place with which it deals, nor a complete history of missionary effort in the south of India in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. It is a record of ecclesiastical events as they affected or were affected by the East India Company and its local government at Fort St. George."

Even with these limitations, the story that Mr. Penny has set himself to tell occupies nearly seven hundred pages, though, as a matter of fact, there is a good deal of repetition of details, owing to the manner in which the work is arranged. Perhaps this arrangement was unavoidable; but it tends to create confusion in the mind of the reader. For instance, after getting to the end of chap. vii., which brings him down to the surrender of Fort St. George in 1746, he is transported to earlier and later times and other subjects in the next six chapters; so that, when he reaches chap. xiv., he has lost the thread of the story of the events in Fort St. George, and is fain to refer back to chap. vii. to refresh his memory. It would have been better, perhaps, to divide the book into sections, each dealing with its special subject, such as 'The Church in Fort St. George,' 'The Company and the Schools,' 'The Company and the S.P.C.K. Mission,' 'The Company and the Roman Catholic Mission,' and so on, instead of, as here, splitting up the subjects, and dealing with the portions comprised under certain periods of time. However, in spite of this drawback, Mr. Penny has produced a work of considerable interest and not a little value, thanks chiefly to the fact that he has drawn largely on the original records preserved in Madras, and especially in the India Office in London. From these archives we have many quaint and curious extracts quoted in the pages of this book, the spelling being, for the most part, modernized, though here and there, for no apparent reason, an antiquated or erroneous form is retained.

In an introductory chapter Mr. Penny gives some account of the steps taken by the Directors of the East India Company, from its foundation to 1640, for the spiritual welfare of its servants in the East, especially in sending chaplains on the ships of most of the voyages, some of whom stayed at the agencies in India and elsewhere, not always to the benefit of those to whom they were supposed to set an example of holy living. Of most of these chaplains we are given some biographical details, especially of Patrick Copeland, who in 1614 brought home an Indian boy, on whom, when he was christened in London with great ceremony in 1616, the name of Peter Pope (chosen by the King) was bestowed. Regarding Copeland Mr. Penny makes the astonishing statement that he "is not mentioned in the 'Calendar of State Papers' (East Indies) before 1619." If he had referred to the indexes of the first two volumes of the 'Calendars' he would have found some half-dozen earlier references to Copeland, including summaries of the passages that he quotes on p. 14 from the 'Court Minutes.' He will also find from Notes and Queries, 9th S. iii. 285, that this worthy chaplain was with Capt. Best at Surat in 1612-13, and wrote from Swally to a brother minister in London an account of the famous naval battle in that port between the English and the Portuguese. In 1630-40 Fort St. George was founded, and in 1645 a petition from the English soldiers there was sent to the Directors, begging for the appointment of a minister, "for the maintenance of their souls' health." Accordingly, Master William Isaacson was sent thither in 1647, he being the first of a long succession of resident chaplains with whose doings the pages of this book are largely concerned, the last chapter containing a list of all these from 1647 to 1805, with a succinct biography of each. Of the greater number of these even the names have been forgotten by their fellow-countrymen; but one or two have gained for themselves niches in the temple of fame, such as Andrew Bell, the inventor of the "pupil teacher," or "Madras," system of education, in whose honour a tablet was placed in Westminster Abbey, and Robert Palk, who, beginning as a naval chaplain, was appointed by the Madras Government military paymaster, much to the annoyance of the Directors, and subsequently, when these same Directors had discovered his value, was sent out as Governor of Fort St. George. During his tenure of this office his name was, in token of gratitude, bestowed by James Rennell on the straits and bay between India and Ceylon, to prove a stumbling-block in after years to writers on the origin of place-names. Though the Directors were at pains to select as chaplains men whom they considered most suitable for the position, their choice was not always happy, and the pages of this book record many unseemly quarrels between the chaplains at Fort St. George and differences between them and the civil authorities. The Directors, as Mr. Penny justly says, were to blame in the policy they pursued for a number of years of listening to tales against their servants behind their backs; and this applies, of course, to other agencies besides Madras. Drunkenness and immorality were not worse at Fort St. George than at Surat; and these evils were not to be cured by the writing of well-meant letters, or by the dispatch of pious books. The greatest sin, however, in the eyes of the Directors, was for any of their servants, whether lay or cleric, to engage in trade on his own account; and we find the Rev. John Evans dismissed in 1690, after a warning, "having betaken himself so entirely to merchandizing."

The teaching of the young was one of the not least important duties that engaged the attention of the Madras Government and the chaplains, and many pages are devoted to schools founded chiefly for the instruction of native and Eurasian children, in one of which—the Male Asylum—the system we have spoken of above was first successfully carried out by Dr. Andrew Bell at the end of the eighteenth century.

Some of the most curious and interesting chapters in Mr. Penny's book are those describing the relationship of the East India Company to the Roman Catholic mission in its territory. São Thomé, within three miles of Fort St. George, was an old Portuguese settlement with a bishop exercising jurisdiction over the whole of the Coromandel coast, along which were to be found communities of Catholics, native and half-caste. These Catholics the Fort St. George Government found it necessary to employ in considerable numbers as soldiers, interpreters, clerks, &c., and provision had to be made for their spiritual welfare. When the English first came to the place where Fort St. George was built, they found two French Capuchin priests settled there, ministering to the fishers and other folk. (This fact, stated in a letter of 1661, quoted by Mr. William Foster in his 'Founding of Fort St. George, Madras,' Mr. Penny seems to have overlooked.) These priests soon proved a source of trouble, accusations of proselytizing being brought against them by Padre Isaacson, the first resident English chaplain; and in later years the Portuguese envoy to the Court of St. James complained to the Company of the presence of French clergymen in Madras who were outside the King of Portugal's patronage.

There are many pleasing references to the S.P.C.K. missionaries—Ziegenbalg, Schwartz, Gericke, and many others—men of simple lives and whole-hearted devotion to their work. It is true that there are records of one or two unpleasant incidents, such as the imprisonment for debt in 1787 of the aged and scholarly Fabricius, and the purchase by the same missionary a quarter of a century earlier of a pipe of the Company's madeira, for his own consumption, apparently, at a cost of 40%. But these are almost the only blemishes in the history of these excellent men of the Tranquebar mission as related by Mr. Penny.

In reviewing Mrs. Penny's work mentioned above, we said that the most interesting chapter in the book was that dealing with the building of St. Mary's Church and the vestry, because it showed that the writer had had access to original documents not utilized by Talboys Wheeler in his 'Madras in the Olden Time.' As might have been expected, in the present work those documents and additional ones are freely utilized and quoted from by Mr. Penny in the two chapters that he devotes to the building of the church and to the vestry respectively. Unfortunately, in the case of the latter, all the records prior to 1749 have been lost, or were destroyed by the French at the capture of Madras by La Bourdonnais. St. Mary's Church has been more fortunate; and we are here told how, owing to the falling-off in trade at Surat in 1676-8, and the transference of Streynsham Master from that factory to Fort St. George, the latter place, and not the former, had the first English church in the East Indies; how the work of excavating was begun on Lady Day, 1678; and how the edifice was solemnly dedicated and consecrated on October 28th, 1680, the documents connected with this service being quoted verbatim. "There is nothing in the records," says Mr. Penny,

"to show who the designer was; but it is possible to give more than a shrewd guess; for Edward Fowle, the master gunner, was present in the Fort at the time building the northern curtain of the Fort, and it is known how capable a builder and designer he was, and how he was afterwards chosen for this reason to design and build the fort at Bencoolen. Most probably the credit of designing and building the church belongs to him; and as it is both well proportioned and strongly built, the credit is considerable."

This is but faint praise: contemporary writers—and these not English—were more laudatory in their language. For instance, Dr. Daniel Havart, who saw the church within a few years of its completion, says of Fort St. George, in his 'Op- en Ondergang van Cormandel':—

"Inside the small fort is a little church, very neat, and prettily built of wood, and inside so beautiful, that it is a pleasure to peep into it: I do not know that I have anywhere in the whole of India seen a finer; and I must acknowledge, in respect of this fort, that it far surpasses the Dutch one at Palaeacatta, as also most of the English logies on the whole Cormandel coast are better than ours."

There is a curious error in this description: the church was built entirely of masonry, with a bomb-proof roof: "no wood was used," says Mr. Penny, "except for the doors and windows." Another medical man, the Belgian Dr. Ægidius Daalmans, who in 1689 was ordered to go from Pulicat to Madras on a professional visit to Governor Yale, who was ill, says:—

"The church of the English Protestants also stands in this town; it is not very large, but really handsome, with a tower pyramid-wise, on which stands a great cross."

St. Mary's Church is to-day substantially the same as when it was first built, the chief alterations being the addition of a vestry and the extension of the sanctuary for the formation of a choir. During the siege of Fort St. George in 1758-9 the church was used as a barrack, and in 1782 it was turned into a storehouse, the stone slabs inside the church and the memorial stones outside being carried off to the ramparts to form platforms for the guns. To this day the damage then done remains partly unrepaired; and we hardly think that all his readers will agree with Mr. Penny that "the loan of the consecrated building was patriotically necessary" for such a purpose.

In chap. xii. Mr. Penny gives an account of the churches erected before 1746 in the presidency of Madras, viz., those of St. Francis, Cochin; Zion Church, Tranquebar; Pulicat Church; and St. Peter's, Negapatam. Of these the first was built by the Portuguese, the second by the Danes, and the third and fourth by the Dutch: all are now Government trust property. In connexion with the second Mr. Penny gives a very erroneous account of the origin of the Danish settlement at Tranquebar (or "Trincombar," as he spells it): the actual facts are to be found in the Royal Asiatic Society's Journal for 1898, p. 625, et seq. The Danish inscriptions on the church plate, as given on pp. 255, 256, also contain several errors in spelling. With regard to the Pulicat church, Mr. Penny considers it probable that "the present plain but solidly built structure is coeval with the building of the fort itself." This is very doubtful, for, according to Havart (op. cit., i. 105), the church in the Dutch fort mentioned above, in the latter part of the seventeenth century was approached by flights of steps. (These are shown in the plan in Baldaus's 'Malabar en Choromandel.') In his history of the church at Negapatam Mr. Penny has mixed up in a most extraordinary fashion the visits paid by Baldaus to that town in 1658, and to Tuticorin in the same year and in 1660, the error being all the more inexplicable, seeing that on p. 580 he gives a correct account of this Dutch minister's first unsuccessful mission to Tuticorin. As regards this latter place, however, he is mistaken in stating that "being only a subordinate factory the Dutch did not have a Predicant there." A reference to the work of Baldaus would have shown him that the first of a succession of predikants at Tuticorin was the noted ex-Roman Catholic priest and subsequent translator of most of the Bible into Portuguese, João Ferreira d'Almeida. According to the Dutch surgeon Wouter Schouten, who visited Tuticorin a few years after its capture, the Dutch found there three large Portuguese churches, one of which they used as their factory, retaining the other two for the service of the Reformed Church.

As an example of the curious information culled by Mr. Penny from the archives of the East India Company, we may refer to the extracts printed on pp. 69-70 from the Metchlepatam (Masulipatam) Consultation Book, recording the visit of Abu-l-Hasan, the last King of Golconda, in 1678, to the English factory at that place, and his attendance, by his own desire, at divine service, the chief thing that seems to have struck him being the fact that the women were able to read, which he tested for himself. The extract ends as follows:—

"After his departure he went to the Dutch Factory (who had made preparation in like manner, and had been very busy to prevent us of the honour of the king's first coming hither) where after their prayers were ended they entertained him with music and dancing wenches, belonging to their chief's lady, in the very place where just before they had performed their devotions."

Havart (op. cit., i. 191, et seq.) gives a detailed account of the king's attendance at the Dutch service, when, in the absence of a predikant, the zielen-bezoeker, Joannes Koekebakker, read the Christmas sermon from the Huys-postil of Bulæus (it was December 25th with the Dutch, but the 15th with the English), pausing now and then for Havart to interpret into Persian. The king does not seem to have been a very attentive listener, smoking most of the time, and frequently conversing with his minister, Shah Raza. According to Havart's account, after the service, at the king's request, the Dutch partook of a meal in the church, when they drank his health, standing bare-headed. Havart says nothing of the dancing-girls, and the statement of the English writer might be regarded as a malicious invention were it not confirmed by a contemporary Dutch manuscript journal quoted by J. P. I. Du Bois in his 'Vies des Gouverneurs Généraux' (p. 207). According to this authority the Dutch acceded to the king's request to have the nautch in the church with great repugnance, but feared to offend his Majesty by refusing.

It is a pity that Mr. Penny did not get some one with a knowledge of Dutch to look over his proofs. He would then have avoided some bad errors that disfigure these pages. One of the funniest is on p. 582, where we read that "the Rev. G. U. Pope was probably the first English missionary to visit Tuticorin in the official capacity of a God's Dienst, as the Dutch would have called him."

The statement on p. 344, that "the Portuguese called the place [Mylapore] St. Thoma (a asin ar)," is utterly wrong. The Portuguese always called it "São Thomé." Nor was the place invariably "called St. Thoma by the English merchants up to the middle of the eighteenth century," as the Consultations prove.

In conclusion we must accord a word of praise to the illustrations, and wish we could speak as favourably of the index, which is capable of great improvement.

English Men of Letters.—Sydney Smith. By George W. E. Russell. (Macmillan & Co.)

THOSE responsible for the additional volumes in the "English Men of Letters" series made no mistake when they invited Mr. George Russell to undertake a study of Sydney Smith. He is familiar with the Whig tradition, a point of no small advantage in dealing with so vigorous a party advocate. He has also obtained some interesting information from Sydney Smith's descendants, chiefly, it would seem, out of family records. Those, however, who expect from him a collection of the Canon's jokes are doomed to disappointment. He illustrates Sydney Smith's use of the pun—a form of humour which he frequently adopted while professing to despise it—but otherwise he is content with referring his readers to the catalogues to be found in the previous memoirs and in Sir Wemyss Reid's 'Life of Lord Houghton.' The omission is intelligible enough in a volume which is professedly devoted to literary achievement. Still, we cannot help thinking that a little more concession might have been made to human weakness, since it was as a conversationalist rather than as a writer that Sydney Smith impressed himself on his generation. His jokes were kindly, and it was but seldom that he abused his position as an established jester. On one famous occasion, however, he more than met his match. At Holland House, in the presence of the Prince Regent, the conversation took the turn of discussing who was the wickedest man that had ever lived. "The Regent Orleans," said Sydney Smith, "and he was a prince." The Prince's reply was, "I should give the preference to his tutor, the Abbé Dubois, and he was a priest, Mr. Sydney." Much can be forgiven the Regent for that prompt and stinging retort.

If, however, Mr. Russell is chary of illustrating Sydney Smith as a humourist, he has much to say about him as a parish priest, a vocation which he filled admirably. His life, both at Foxton and Combe Florey, is described with appreciative insight, and it is a pleasure to be introduced once more to the horse Calamity, and "Bunch," the "little garden girl shaped like a milestone," and to follow the energetic clergyman as he builds his house, manages his farm, and doses his parishioners. There can be no doubt that Sydney Smith felt his banishment from London, and that he rejoiced to return to it as Canon of St. Paul's. But, as he bravely wrote to Lady Holland:—

"I am resolved, therefore, to like it, and to reconcile myself to it; which is more manly than to feign myself above it, and to send up complaints by the post, of being thrown away, and being desolate, and such-like trash."

He may not have magnified his office, but he certainly did not despise it. He put his mind into his sermons, and the critical Greville called him "very good; manner impressive, voice sonorous and agreeable; rather familiar, but not offensively so." His theology was that of Paley, but he had little concern with Biblical scholarship, and was content to be a practical preacher. Religions other than his own he treated with scorn. In the very passages in which he pleaded for the civil rights of the Romanists he poured contempt upon "Catholic nonsense." He would have nothing to do with "Puseyism," and actually sneered at the saintly missionary Carey.

Mr. Russell puts Sydney Smith's place as a man of letters very high. He contends that

"'Peter Plymley' and the 'Letters to Archdeacon Singleton,' the essays on America and on Persecuting Bishops, will probably be read as long as the 'Tale of a Tub' or Macaulay's review of 'Satan' Montgomery; while of detached and isolated jokes—pure freaks of fun clad in literary garb—an incredible number, current in daily converse, deduce their birth from this incomparable clergyman."

The comparison with Macaulay may stand, but the importation of Swift into the argument is not altogether felicitous. Even at his best—and his best is very good—the Canon of St. Paul's fails to touch the Dean of St. Patrick's. Banter with him takes the place of irony, and its form is not seldom trivial. Spencer Perceval may have invited legitimate ridicule, but the perpetual assumption that Canning was to be regarded as a mere mountebank is much less defensible. Sydney Smith probably caught the trick from Earl Grey, who hated the statesman, whom he professed to look upon as a political adventurer, with the cold, undeviating hatred of a Whig aristocrat. It says much, by the way, for the conciliatory atmosphere of Holland House that Sydney Smith should constantly have associated there with several of Canning's most devoted friends, Hookham Frere, George Ellis, and Lord Dudley among them. His host, who styled Canning "the first logician in Europe," would never have countenanced such a belittlement. Apart from their manner, the Canon's writings deal with controversies which have largely lost their meaning nowadays, or perhaps it would be more correct to say, have assumed shapes which he never anticipated. His girdings at the bishops fall dead upon an age in which the cry is for the exercise of ecclesiastical authority. We are disposed, therefore, to assign to Sydney Smith a smaller measure of vitality as an author than does Mr. George Russell. If he lives, it is less through his arguments than his illustrations, which are often most felicitous. Thus in 'Peter Plymley's Letters' he brings home the injustice of excluding the Roman Catholics from the highest posts in the learned professions by the simplest, most direct of means:—

"Look at human nature. Your boy Joel is to be brought up to the Bar: has Mrs. Plymley the slightest doubt of his being Chancellor? Do not his two shrivelled aunts live in the certainty of seeing him in that situation, and of cutting-out with their own hands his equity habiliments? And I could name a certain Minister of the Gospel who does not, in the bottom of his heart, much differ from these opinions. Do you think that the fathers and mothers of the holy Catholic church are not as absurd as Protestant papas and mamas? The probability I admit to be, in each case, that the sweet little blockhead will in fact never get a brief. But I venture to say that there is not a parent from the Giant's Causeway to Bantry Bay, who does not conceive that his child is the unfortunate victim of the exclusion, and that nothing short of positive law could prevent his own dear, pre-eminent Paddy from rising to the highest honours of the State. So with the army, and Parliament. In fact, few are excluded; but, in imagination, all. You keep twenty or thirty Catholics out, and lose the affections of four millions."

At the same time Mr. Russell has ample reason to count Sydney Smith as "a patriot of the noblest and purest type; a genuinely religious man according to his light and opportunity." He was a most consistent supporter of the Whigs, and they ought to have acknowledged his services more handsomely than they did. In the preface to his collected works he wrote, not without feeling, after relating the establishment of The Edinburgh Review:—

"To set on foot such a Journal in such times, to contribute towards it for many years, to bear patiently the reproach and poverty which it caused, and to look back and see that I have nothing to retract, and no intemperance and violence to reproach myself with, is a career of life which I must think to be extremely fortunate. Strange and ludicrous are the changes in human affairs. The Tories are now on the treadmill, and the well-paid Whigs are riding in chariots: with many faces, however, looking out of the windows (including that of our Prime Minister), which I never remember to have seen in the days of the poverty and depression of Whiggism. Liberalism is now a lucrative business."

The Prime Minister in question was Lord Melbourne, and he had the good grace to admit that the neglect to make Sydney Smith a bishop was an act of cowardice.

Cross River Natives: being some Notes on the Primitive Pagans of Obulura Hill District, Southern Nigeria. By Charles Partridge. With Maps, Appendices, and Seventy-four Reproductions of Photographs taken by the Writer. (Hutchinson & Co.)

EVEN more valuable than the actual information contained in the late Miss Mary Kingsley's eccentric and excellent books about West Africa is the encouragement, not to say the enlightenment, they have given to others in a position to carry on and, to some extent, to carry out her teaching. Her generous views had, it is true, been within limits anticipated by a few earlier students of negro savagery, notably by Mr. R. Austin Freeman, who in his 'Travels and Life in Ashanti and Jaman' states, as an official visiting and resident in 1888 in what is now part of our Gold Coast Protectorate, conclusions arrived at by him, but not generally acted upon by his Colonial Office superiors. "The contemptuous pity with which the white man tends to regard the 'benighted African,' he says, for instance,

"is apt to give place to something akin to admiration and respect when it is observed how perfect is the adaptation of the latter to his surroundings, and by what simple means he can continue to obtain a comfortable livelihood where a European would find it impossible to exist at all."

But Miss Kingsley was the founder of a new school, in which some officials, together with many others, are being educated, and Mr. Charles Partridge, in the book before us, shows himself to be one of its most promising scholars.

Perhaps the book is all the better for its apparent shortcomings. Mr. Partridge, who is Assistant District Commissioner in the north-easternmost section of Southern Nigeria, tells us that last summer he brought home a number of photographs he had taken in the previous twelve months, together with notebooks in which he had "jotted down a few descriptions of customs and ceremonies of anthropological interest," but that he had no thought of writing a book until this was suggested to him by the publisher to whom he had shown the photographs. His volume, therefore, "does not pretend to be otherwise than a very sketchy production," the text being written "to explain the illustrations, instead of vice versa"; and he apologizes for not having, when on the spot, "tried to accurately note down much that is here represented by generalization only." His work is certainly too scrappy to satisfy the requirements of ethnologists and other men of science whose curiosity has been aroused by earlier and less observant writers, or whose appetite Mr. Partridge's own gossip serves to whet, especially as regards the strangely sculptured stones that he came across while visiting the Aweyong River, yet more remote than his station at Obubura from such "civilization" as has its centre at Calabar, a hundred miles or so nearer to the sea. On this and kindred subjects, however, we may hope that Mr. Partridge will have opportunity for writing leisurely and learnedly before he is transferred to other parts. Meanwhile, the impromptu character of his remarks on the qualities and capacities of the natives with whom he has been in contact, making their truthfulness all the more manifest, enhances their importance. On these matters, also, we may hope for more precise and comprehensive information than we have here; but, as it stands, the volume is a welcome and notable contribution towards solution of the difficulties that empire-makers in this part of the world have brought on themselves and our nation.

Mr. Partridge does not forget that he is a West African official. Having obtained from the Colonial Office permission to write his book, he properly abstains from criticism of his superiors' action or exposure of anything he may disapprove of in their policy. He informs us that his late chief, Mr. Probyn, now Governor of Sierra Leone, at their first interview, "laid stress on the importance of our being patient and tactful in our dealings with the native chiefs," and he goes out of his way to quote a statement by Sir Ralph Moor, till recently the High Commissioner for Southern Nigeria, that "a study of the native, and effort to see and appreciate his point of view, practically ensures success in your work." Moreover, he leaves us to find for ourselves the evidence afforded by Blue-books and other publications as to the lamentable consequences of neglect of that sensible doctrine in the numerous "punitive expeditions" in the past few years for which Sir Ralph Moor is mainly responsible. But all that Mr. Partridge records about his own dealings with natives shows the truth of the doctrine and the commendable zeal with which he did his best to apply it. Of this a good illustration occurred in his voyage up the Cross River on his way to his new station:—

"In the height of the rainy season, when the currents of the river were very fierce and strong, the writer's canoe was wrecked off the Ikwe village of Ichoko. The little steam pinnace Parrot, to which the heavy steel canoe was attached, was saved from destruction by the promptness of the crew in cutting the connecting ropes. The Parrot having got among rocks and overhanging trees, there was some difficulty in getting her to the bank. The villagers—notorious for their raids on passing canoes and their general lawlessness—swarmed down from their huts and watched our every movement. My men were cutting down the branches that impeded progress, and were about to do execution upon those of a huge large-leaved tree, when I noticed a sudden excitement among the watching natives, and, guessing that this particular tree might be sacred in their eyes, ordered the crew not to touch it. On seeing my gestures and the result, the Ichoko people instantly came to our help, and, plunging into the water and pushing us clear of the rocks, brought the Parrot safely to the bank. I then learnt that this tree was their 'Life,' the most sacred thing in their community, and that anybody cutting it or breaking a twig would have been sold into slavery or have had to pay a fine. They had never before been visited by any white man, but my protection of their sacred tree had won their confidence, and so they came to our assistance, and eventually did excellent service in recovering the canoe and some of my kit."

If Mr. Partridge always treated the natives as discreetly and generously as in that instance—and we can well believe that he did—his year's work among them must have been indeed beneficial to them and helpful to the pacific spread of British rule over the district. As he reminds us, and as too few of our agents in the administration of savage communities we have overawed understand, "patience, tact, common sense, good temper, and a sense of humour—above all, much long-suffering patience, are very necessary" in dealing with "primitive people whose degree of culture is no greater than that to which the ancient Britons had attained when the Romans overcame them two thousand years ago."

He might have added that the Cross River and neighbouring tribes, whom some of us expect to be turned, if not into our equals, at any rate into ideal servants, at the first flashing of our civilization over them, are not even the "primitive people" their ancestors seem to have been four or five centuries ago. Through all but the latest of those centuries the Guinea Coast, which has the Cross River for its largest waterway, except the Niger, was the chief haunt of the slave-dealers, for whom the sturdier natives were bribed to convert the weaker into human chattels by doles of firearms and firewater, which greatly aggravated their original savagery. In the latest of the centuries, and especially in our own day, the slave trade having been abolished, they are coaxed or forced into supplying white men with palm oil and palm nuts instead of slaves, and the worst practices of the old "Oil River ruffians" are happily now little more than traditions. But evidence of the vitiating effects of some parts of our "civilization" appears in the empty gin bottles and demi-johns that are the principal adornments of most of the ju-ju shrines, and in the perversions of Christian notions that are mixed up with fetish creeds and practices.

The decivilizing concomitants of European "civilization" are less apparent among the inland natives of Mr. Partridge's district than in Calabar and the rest of the coast, and in the sculptured stones that he photographs and describes we probably have illustrations of the rude art as well as the rude customs and beliefs of those who were "really primitive people" in the Niger Delta. But as British rule is being rapidly established over them, with German rule to compete with it on the adjacent Cameroon territory, Mr. Partridge's notes on the subject are of substantial value, and would bear considerable amplification. The supersession, if not the extinction of the old customs and beliefs, in which social, political, and religious institutions form one strange tangle, will come all the sooner if for the reckless and futile efforts to stamp them out violently are substituted the kindlier and sympathetic methods Mr. Partridge advocates. There can be no doubt that many of the customs and institutions prevalent in the Niger Delta are exceptionally debased and debasing. Its paganism is perhaps the lowest to be found in Africa, and its squalid superstitions permeate and corrupt the whole life of the people. It may be difficult or impossible to raise them to our standard of civilization, but it ought to be easy to improve their condition by appealing to the common sense in which they are by no means deficient, however cramped it may be by their benighted traditions and their worse surroundings. It is clear from Mr. Partridge's experience that the doctor, or the layman with even elementary knowledge of sanitary rules and the arts of healing, can do much more good to them than the political administrator, the soldier, or the missionary, unless to the functions of any or all of these would-be pioneers are added as a controlling force those of a health-giver. Meanwhile Mr. Partridge insists on the duty of tolerance in dealing with all superstitions and also with all pernicious practices, including even human sacrifices and cannibalism, until those guilty of them can be convinced of their folly. These sentences show the boldness of his charity:—

"The pagan natives of Obubura Hill district all believe in a future life of some kind or another—that death is only the passing from one to another sphere of environment—Mors Janua Vitæ. The life and whereabouts of the soul after 'death' depends upon a variety of circumstances which they believe that they can more or less control. Sometimes the soul or spirit goes up to the sky to live with the Big God, sometimes it passes into the great tree that predominates over their central meeting-place, sometimes it is born again in the bodies of its own grandchildren and great-grandchildren, sometimes it goes into a wild beast and gives people a great deal of trouble, or it may wander about in the bush in some mysterious undefined form doing nothing in particular except scare those who come across it, and so on. In short, the negro has no more definite knowledge of what happens to the spirit of man after death than we ourselves have. The science and philosophy of modern Europe have as yet found no answer to this superlatively interesting question, and the negro of the West African bush cannot enlighten us.

Strange, is it not? that of the myriads who Before us pass'd the door of Darkness through
Not one returns to tell us of the Road,
Which to discover we must travel too."

Most of the photographs here reproduced are capital. They deserved printing on a larger scale, or, if that was too costly, they should at any rate have been so distributed as to be in near relation with the paragraphs they are intended to elucidate.

NEW NOVELS.

His Island Princess. By W. Clark Russell.
(Methuen & Co.)

UNTIL the publication of 'The Nigger of the Narcissus,' in 1897, Mr. Clark Russell's pre-eminence as a novelist of the sea was commonly unquestioned. His work is deficient in architectural merit, and though no living prose writer describes with more of a spectator's vividness the glory and mystery of the sea, he has not the psychologist's power of creating characters which are fascinating to observe for long under normal conditions or in the ordinary routine of a sailor's life. Lacking this, he is hardly unwise to be as fantastical as he dare. At any rate, 'His Island Princess' is very interesting, although it demands almost as much credulity as 'Sindbad.' It is the narrative in the first person of the second mate of a convict-ship in the fleet commanded by Commodore Phillip when he sailed to Australia to establish a new colony. He is impressed by an unscrupulous American, who first signals for water, and then locks his cabin-door on his reliever. Shipwreck and mutiny follow, and a terrible voyage, in which the appearance of the legendary phantom ship portends the death of all but the hero, who is finally rescued by the daughter of a soi-disant King of Great Britain, descended from the Duke of Monmouth. The princess is not so much a character as a beautiful ideal, dreamt of so loyally and perseveringly that the reader dreams of her too, and is touched as he was by Byron's Haidée when her idyll tragically ends. Her father's megalomania is never allowed to degrade him into a comic figure. Mr. Clark Russell has never imagined a more agonizing situation than that of the escaping sailors, who find they have been ladling their drinking water into the sea while striving to cope with an imaginary leak in their boat. The story is illustrated by Mr. H. Austin.

Lady Penelope, an Extravaganza. By Morley Roberts. (White & Co.)

AFTER a course of Mr. Percy White's elegant social satire, it would be a pleasant and not too uncompromising change to read 'Lady Penelope.' Titian, Correggio, and Reynolds together only furnish Mr. Roberts with parallels for three-fourths of his heroine's beauty, and we are, therefore, easily persuaded of her lack of humour and the devotion of her eight suitors. The secret of her choice is cleverly kept till near the end of the book, although we learn that she has not only chosen but also married one of her "horde" before we are half-way through. The comic element is supplied by Penelope's desire that the suitors should improve each other. At her command the French marquis fraternizes with the Hebrew speculator; the American hustler with the lazy English peer; the unæsthetic war correspondent with the A.R.A. The spectacle of such incongruous attachments is certainly droll, and when each of these men in turn—with the most creditable intention— informs a horrified duchess that he is the husband of Lady Penelope and the father of her child, the words of the situation are hardly necessary to win our laughter. The effect of motoring on the imagination of a bishop informs one of the best passages in the book.

Mr. Roberts writes with the raciness of a born journalist. Here and there, by reiteration, his comicality palls, but one prefers to remember a slight but real debt to its enlivening influence.

The Gate of the Desert. By John Oxenham. With a Frontispiece by Harold Copping. (Methuen & Co.)

MR. OXENHAM has made considerable strides in the art of novel-writing since he wrote 'Our Lady of Deliverance.' Fully a third of his latest story is good enough to excuse its air of prearrangement and artifice. His principal characters are shipwrecked and taken prisoner by Moorish bandits. Their sufferings in captivity are described with painful realism, and one has even the feeling—so rarely obtainable in modern English fiction—that the heroine's destiny is beyond the author's control, and will not be determined by the taste of the public. There is nothing quite so good in the latter part of the book as the passage of the captives from the coast of Barbary, over sand and flinty hills, to the suddenly-seen oasis below the desert. The tracking down of the Dutch swindler, to whom the heroine conditionally yields her place in the boat which leaves their sinking ship, provides emotional interest of a comparatively inferior kind. The heroine is sublime, but the most individual person in the story is a Jew, who survives the bastinado, and gets the better of a syndicate which he forms for the collection of his party's ransom.

Diane. By Katharine Holland Brown. (Heinemann.)

THIS is a tale with an atmosphere of its own. Here we are on the banks and on the tide of one of America's great rivers, in the days before the war, when Quakers and "Comeouters" were plying a regular trade, from philanthropic motives, in helping slaves to escape. But chiefly we are concerned with a Commune—a clan of French folk, who are regarded as a survival of the French Revolution, and who are banded together in the new country to prove the practicability of communistic principles. Mademoiselle Diane, of the title, is a bright and taking little lady, the ward of the Commune's President, and her love affairs form the thread upon which the beads of a picturesque and colourful story are strung. The writer has a distinct feeling for literary style, particularly in description; but she constantly strains the reader's patience by the iteration of catch phrases of preciosity, and elaborately bizarre expressions. These laboriously cut jewels are a blemish on the book, betraying as they do an unrestful striving after literary effect. But the wise reader will overlook the phrase-making in the enjoyment of the broad effects. Some of these, particularly certain river scenes, have distinct charm. The sentimental developments, too, are good, and Père Cabet is alive and realized. Petit Clef, the elfish child of the Commune, is an over-idealized picture, and the winsomeness of Diane herself is too much insisted upon for natural conviction. But the tale, though full of faults, is a creation, and not a mere echo. For this reason it is worth reading, and may lead to something better.

Helen of Troy, N.Y. By Wilfred S. Jackson. (Lane.)

MR. JACKSON'S latest piece of work has at least one redeeming feature, which is too seldom to be met with in latter-day fiction. Never for one moment does the author take himself seriously, or attach any oppressive importance to the adventures and accidents which befall his characters. The lightness of his manner does not, however, conceal the clearness of his vision with regard to his fellow-creatures. The idiosyncrasies and the merits of his countrymen are impartially portrayed, and he is equally convincing as to the manliness and honour under distressing circumstances of a German baron with an aggressive personality. A duel is fought in the Green Park on account of Helen of Troy, a New York heiress, who, however, only twice actually intrudes herself into the pages of this irresponsible story. The circumstances of the duel are exceedingly funny; so are the subsequent adventures of the three Englishmen, and especially of one of them, who is betrayed by his visiting card left upon the prostrate body of the German, and who, though he has only been called in from the street to arbitrate, is henceforth pursued as the culprit. The faithful baron meets ultimately with the due reward of devotion and honesty, whilst the two Englishmen, who have thought more of the lady's money bags than of her beaux yeux, are easily diverted from the quest. It is a pity that Mr. Jackson, whose style is otherwise good and virile, should help to mar the English language by certain small mannerisms.

The Religion of Evelyn Hastings. By Victoria Cross. (Walter Scott Publishing Company.)

THE reader must be left to decide for himself whether the religious views of Victoria Cross, as embodied in the character and experiences of Evelyn Hastings, will assist him in that belief for which he may be supposed to crave, and into which the author professes to have been forced against her desire. She goes so far as to admit that she will be "pleased and relieved if a materialist can be found who will help her to free herself from an undesired faith. The belief in question has its origin in the fact that Evelyn Hastings, as a small child playing on the beach, is called home by an inward insistent voice to see her cousin in her death agonies. After this Evelyn, or the author, believes in prayer, or at least that a God—who, however, is not omnipotent—will give her everything that she demands. When her husband, according to the newspapers, is killed in South Africa, she offends her worldly parent by refusing to believe it, and is waiting in the drawing-room to receive him at the exact hour at which she knows he will arrive. Yet Evelyn is no mystic, and there is little that is spiritual even in her communing with her absent husband on the veldt. Victoria Cross cannot as yet free her writing from a certain grossness, and in her heroine's career there are incidents of repulsive realism. The charitable materialist will probably not be anxious to deprive the author of a belief which does not demand too heavy a sacrifice and must at times prove decidedly convenient.

The War of the Sexes. By F. E. Young. (John Long.)

EVEN the sensationalism of Mr. H. G. Wells has not gone so far as to select parthenogenesis as the motive of a romance. It was reserved for Miss F. E. Young to imagine an England populated almost exclusively by women, as the result of propagation by "chemical aid." She takes the precaution, however, of making this state of things the nightmare of an overworked man of science, who awakes and marries at the end of the volume. Miss Young treats her subject in serio-comic fashion. The last Englishman is the victim of amorous persecution, though, strangely enough, the spirit of that old chaperon Mrs. Grundy is still abroad. Hence, in one of several ridiculous scenes, he impersonates a dress-stand, to save a lady's reputation. Vulgarly lies subtly in wait for the author who seeks farce in sexuality, and despite the impressive virtue of her hero, Miss Young pays the penalty of her irresponsible humour. Her vulgarity is of the same discreet sort as, say, Keene's etching of 'The Matrimonial Hurlingham' in a 'Punch's Pocket-Book' of the seventies. It would not be incidental to a large and free treatment of the sensational theme which she has inadequately developed. Dull, however, she is not, and she contrives in the course of a story of A.D. 2300 (or thereabouts) to draw a very lifelike portrait of a nineteenth-century housekeeper.

TWO AIDS TO THE STUDY OF JAPANESE.

Grammar of the Japanese Written Language. By W. G. Aston. Third Edition. (Luzac.) Uebungs- und Lesebuch zum Studium der Japanischen Schrift. Von Prof. Dr. Rudolf Lange. (Berlin, Reimer.)

BOTH these aids to the study of Japanese are worthy of high praise. Dr. Aston's grammar is by far the best that has yet appeared. It may be added to, indeed, in view of the rapid development (if such it be) of modern Japanese, but as a guide to the nobler tongue of Old Japan and its vast and, in many ways, interesting literature it is not likely to be superseded. It is a foundation, at least, upon which all future treatises on Japanese grammar must be based. And whatever the course of the modern speech may be, no true comprehension of it can be attained without such insight into the older forms as this unpretending volume of some two hundred and fifty pages affords. If we had a criticism to make, it would be that the texts in character might well have been omitted, and the room thus gained given to specimens in roman of modern prose taken from one of the leading periodicals as examples of the best descriptive and narrative style of the day, and accompanied by a full syntactical exposition of the structure of clause and sentence—the real difficulty of Japanese apart from its complicated scripts. In the extract from Bakin kono hi mo kureshikaba does not literally mean "when this sun too had set," but "as soon as the day had grown dark."

Prof. Lange's treatise on Japanese script is a necessary companion to the above as well as to his own grammar, the value of which students of Japanese have long recognized. The Chinese character as used in Japan by some unlucky chance of history has come to be the most awkward and complicated script the world has ever known. Well might the missionaries of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries call it a "conciliabulo de los demonios para enojar a los fideles." In Chinese each character has one form, one sound, and generally one meaning; in Japanese the forms vary almost indefinitely, the pronunciation may be after two or three systems, and the character may be read japonicè in a number of different ways, only to be determined by the context, as well as specially in proper names. The abbreviated and cursive forms are also used in Chinese, but to a very limited extent, whereas in old Japanese literature particularly they are almost the rule. To add to these sources of confusion and difficulty, the modern littérateur delights in novel and recondite combinations of characters which ingeniously hide whatever meaning he desired to attach to them. The fundamental clue in this labyrinth of forms and values is a thorough—a very thorough—command of a large number of ideographs under their standard forms, of the combinations of these, and of the methods in which modern Japanese makes use of both. This clue is precisely what Dr. Lange offers the means of attaining, and the student who will work carefully through the clearly printed and well-arranged volume before us, as well as through the author's 'Einführung' (the portion of which dealing with the syllabaries might well have been incorporated with the present work), will find himself fully provided with the absolutely necessary equipment for the study of written Japanese.

SHORT STORIES.

The Bell in the Fog. By Gertrude Atherton. (Macmillan & Co.)—Mrs. Atherton has chosen a curious title for the first of the ten short stories that have gone to make up this volume. It is that of the book, which is dedicated to "The Master, Henry James," and it tells of an American novelist who, having lived most of his life in England, and won a select kind of fame, becomes wealthy by means of an inheritance. He buys a beautiful and ancient country seat, and settles down to work and live out the rest of his life there. He is a bachelor and of retired habit. In the picture gallery of his mansion he finds portraits of a handsome boy and a beautiful girl, both of a long past generation. Gradually the painted figure of the girl becomes an obsession, and he weaves about it a tale which, when published, increases his fame tenfold by finding a much wider audience than any of his previous somewhat esoteric studies of character. Still the portrait possesses his mind. Presently, close to his own estate, he comes upon a little child, playing alone, and is beyond measure startled to find in this little stranger the living counterpart of the painted child of his waking dreams, of the picture gallery in his house. He makes inquiries, and ascertains that this child is actually the descendant of the portrait's original, and forthwith the living girl enters into and dominates his life. The end is vaguely sad. It is a well-written, fanciful tale, falling short of conviction, and altogether an odd comment on the author's dedication. Most of the other stories in the book have appeared in periodicals. Some of them are striking; one, 'The Greatest Good of the Greatest Number,' is horrible; and all are characterized by the sort of passionate virility, the picturesque materialism, with which Mrs. Atherton's previous books have made us familiar. It is a very far remove from the clarified, almost bloodless, subtlety of the novelist whom she calls "Master." The most poignant tragedy Mrs. Atherton sees would appear to be that of the men and women who never succeed in enjoying the fulness of life. It is a crude sort of youthful philosophy that she expounds. But fire and interest are evident in much of her work. Its faults are want of balance, judgment, and restraint.

Red Hunters and the Animal People, by Chas. A. Eastman (Harpers), is another addition to the considerable number of animal stories. It displays a good deal of knowledge, but less charm than some of its fellows. In view of the severely limited nature of the communion between men and beasts, it is perhaps inevitable that a certain sameness and monotony should characterize even the most thoughtful and ingeniously written studies of animals. When a man who knows sets out to depict the life of wild cat, lynx, or puma in narrative form, he necessarily confines his attention to certain highly typical illustrations and phases of cat-life—mating, nursing of the young, the hunt for food, resentment of man's proximity, and the like—all of which have already served other observant writers before him. Nevertheless, we are glad to have such books as this. Mr. Eastman seems to know the red man of America very well. It is odd, then, to find him enlarging upon the intimate relations existing between the Indians and the wild animals of their country, and overlooking the extreme cruelty which frequently characterizes those relations. He says the Sioux will sometimes refrain through life from killing animals of certain species, or will kill them only from necessity. But it is also true that he will sometimes torture animals cruelly for the edification of his children, or encourage the children to torture them, with a view to fostering pitilessness in the hearts of future braves. He may regard certain animals as his brothers, but he does not rate the lives of his human brothers very highly. Mr. Eastman has some picturesque and interesting tales to tell.

Progress. By R. B. Cunninghame Graham. (Duckworth & Co.)—The reader has upon this occasion to thank Mr. Cunninghame Graham for generous measure: a pleasingly discursive preface and no fewer than eighteen stories. Scotland to Fernando Po, Yorkshire to the South American Pampas, the dour north to the barbaric Meknas—Mr. Cunninghame Graham has them all pinned to the printed page by the magic of his perverse, inspired pen, and—really, we are beginning to feel his strange, outlandish backgrounds homely places, so vivid are the colours our author uses, so consistent his love of the outside edge of things. One could draw Mr. Cunninghame Graham's route in fiction on a chart, and, far-reaching though it is, embrace the whole of it without lifting pencil from canvas. He begins in the lowlands of Scotland, and journeys through England by way of the Black Country and Charing Cross. Thence, by tramp steamer for choice, to Buenos Ayres, then through the Argentine and Paraguay and back, maybe to the glorious first harbour of Brazil, for his ship to the Oil Rivers and the Gulf of Guinea (he more often avoids the sickly Bight), steering northward then to Bathurst, and round the finely lighted Cape (with possibly a call at Las Palmas or Tenerife) to the Picture City and the home of old-time pirates and famous carpets; and so past the storied Gardens of the Hesperides on the one hand, and gleaming Trafalgar on the other, to the city afflicted of Allah with dogs and Christians—no very secure resting-place for the moneyed Nazarene just now. Thence, by his Catholic Majesty's mail steamer, across to Cadiz, and northward still, through drowsy Andalusia, made gorgeous by the Moor, to Don Quixote's land, the railway, the crowded boulevards, the Channel, and, again, Charing Cross; where you charter a hansom drawn by a broncho from Mr. Cunninghame Graham's own pampas, and so to your home or your club, and the end of our author's romancing.

As a writer of prefaces Mr. Graham has few equals among modern story-tellers. He takes the art with charming sub-seriousness, and makes braggadocio delightful:—

"So that it has come to be believed that prefaces, when they exist, are written to explain or puff the book, whereas, if rightly comprehended, a mere book is but a peg on which to hang a preface, for in it alone a man is free to write that which he thinks, unfettered by the subject, which has confined your writers since the world began. Who does not love the rambling preface of the past, in which a man displayed his knowledge both of mankind and things, brought forth his erudition, and speculated on the movement of the spheres whilst quoting freely from the classics and telling you about himself, his tastes, dislikes, and why it was he wrote?"

The book is dedicated to another master of vivid prose in fiction, Mr. Conrad; and, except for a perverse inclination to use certain words we most of us agree to avoid in print and in general conversation, it makes very pleasing reading. There is more of real glamour in this writer's work when he handles the Arab than when he is portraying his South American half-breeds.

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

MR. JOHN MURRAY publishes The Balkan Question, edited by Luigi Villari, a book of great value and importance, but marred by a preface which is not worthy of the chapters. Some passages in the preface are, indeed, barely intelligible, and the first paragraph appears to contain a serious blunder, probably caused by typing without re-reading. The reason given in the preface for the inactivity of the revolutionary bands in 1904 is that usually mentioned by the friends of the Christian population; but it would be hypocrisy to pretend that it is the true one. In private conversation no one ever advances any reason except a very different one. The public reason is that the bands "held their hand" because they thought the Powers would take new and effective measures. The leaders of the bands asserted the exact opposite at the beginning of the year, and stated that they would not "hold their hand." That they did hold it, as expected, was undoubtedly caused by the fact that the embarrassments of Russia in the East and at home prevented the revolutionists from finding any counterpoise to the Austrian influence. The result of serious trouble in the Balkans would have been an Austrian armed intervention, for which Austria prepared. Among the writers of the chapters of the volume, which follow an introduction by Mr. Bryce, are Mr. Valentine Chirol, who is always interesting and well informed, and M. Victor Bérard, of whom the same may be said, with the caution that he has not been hitherto as we think on this side of the Channel specially friendly to us. On the principle of not looking a gift-horse in the mouth, it does not do to examine closely the attitude of France as described by M. Bérard in a chapter which is far more favourable to the present understanding with Great Britain than have been, to our view, some of M. Bérard's clever articles in La Revue de Paris. It is indeed a sign of the times to find "the joint action of the three Liberal Powers—France, Italy, and England"—once more to the front, as against "the three empires," and in pages written, not by Mr. Frederic Harrison or by some French Positivist, but by the most considerable of French writers on foreign affairs. When, however, we come to consider the prospect of active co-operation with Italy, the only one of the three Powers inclined to send troops to the Balkans, we feel some alarm. "The policy of Italy" in the matter is not described by a writer of the authority of Mr. Bryce, or Mr. Chirol, or M. Bérard, but by an anonymous "Italian deputy." This gentleman appears to contradict himself. He asserts, with truth, that the interest of Italy in the question is caused chiefly by the fact that "she cannot afford to see herself excluded from all hope of extension." In other words—Albania. Later in his article he declares it to be "of paramount importance for us that we should favour an equitable division between Albanians and Macedonians." But at the very end he alludes to "those Powers which have no desire to annex any part of the Ottoman Empire." He means to include Italy, as does M. Bérard; but then the inclusion is in the teeth of the previous part of the article. The difficulties of any solution are the same in nature as they have been all along, and are not diminished in quantity or force by the admirable essays collected in this volume.

MR. J. F. CUNNINGHAM'S Uganda and its Peoples (Hutchinson & Co.) is described on its title-page and in its preface as a collection of "notes on the Protectorate of Uganda, especially the anthropology and ethnology of its indigenous races," at first intended for incorporation into a second edition of Sir Harry Johnston's larger work on the same subject, but now published separately as being "too considerable and too important to constitute merely an additional chapter to another man's book." Perhaps it is a pity that the original plan was not carried out. Mr. Cunningham has brought together more than two hundred photographs, most of them well chosen and well reproduced; and much of the letterpress given in explanation of them, and filling about as much space, is interesting. As a picture-book for the growing number of superficial students of "the living races of mankind," and as material for lantern-slide lectures, the sumptuous volume is creditable; and we suspect that with some such object in view Mr. Cunningham, before photographing several of his ladies, induced them to put on rather more than their usual stock of clothing. But his statements are too scanty and scrappy to be of scientific value, and even when they supplement or throw fresh light on what has already been told by Sir Harry Johnston, by Mr. C. W. Hobley in his contributions to the Anthropological Institute's publications, and by earlier authorities, they do so in an unconvincing way.

The chief defect of the work is in its failure either to strengthen or to improve upon the views put forward, especially by Sir Harry Johnston, as to the origins and present differences of the various groups of people now scattered about and confusingly mixed up in and around the region known as the Uganda Protectorate. By taking in the Manyema, at present subjects of the Congo State; the Baziba and Basukuma, in German East Africa; and some of the so-called Sudanese, on the western side of the Nile, Mr. Cunningham makes out a list of nineteen tribes or communities, to each of which he devotes a chapter. But many of his chapters are very slight, and in the longest—that on the Baganda, filling nearly a third of the book—there is perhaps less attempt than in any other to add more than desultory gossip to such solid information as we already have. Since Uganda proper became the centre of British administration, of course, there has been and is an ever-increasing arrival in it, particularly in Kampala and Entebbe, of aliens, whose presence helps in the breaking up of old arrangements, inevitable in any case. But the disintegration that is going on renders it all the more important, not solely on scientific grounds, that such accurate observations should be made, and so much folk-lore and the like should be gathered, while there is yet time, as will clearly acquaint us with the diversified characteristics and requirements of these interesting specimens of the uncivilized races now under British rule in Africa. Some of them, with their fashionable garments and æsthetic furniture, their bicycles and typewriters, appear to be only too rapidly acquiring a sort of civilization. Others are still naked savages, with small capacity for shaking off their savagery. In telling us a good deal about these differences and the racial distinctions to which they are partly due, Sir Harry Johnston left much to be told by others, and it is disappointing that Mr. Cunningham has done so little towards supplying the need. The value of his book as a work of reference is further lessened by the fact that it has no index whatever and a very meagre table of contents.

Sociological Papers, 1904. (Macmillan & Co.)—The latest addition to the roll of learned societies is the Sociological Society, which was founded only last year by a band of enthusiasts, with Prof. Bryce as president. Its professed aim is to deal with all the known phenomena of society:—

"The origin and development, the decay and extinction of societies, their structure and classification, their internal functions and inter-action, have to be observed and compared; and all this with increasing precision and completeness. The many standpoints from which social phenomena may be considered have thus all to be utilized. In this way the Society affords the common ground on which workers from all fields and schools may profitably meet—geographer and naturalist, anthropologist and archaeologist, historian and philologist, psychologist and moralist, all contributing their results towards a fuller social philosophy."

It will be seen that this is a wide scope, and we agree with Prof. Bryce in his introductory lecture that there is room for such a society. That all do not think so is evident from the attitude of Dr. Karl Pearson, who, despite the fact that he presided at one of the meetings of the Society, declared himself "sceptical as to its power to do effective work." He does not consider that our present state is advanced enough to justify the establishment of a society, and he demands first a "great sociologist." That is to argue that we should establish no society at all without possessing a great name to take shelter under. So we might have had to wait for Darwin before a Zoological Society was founded, or for Harvey for the institution of a College of Physicians. Dr. Pearson presided at one of the most suggestive meetings, which discussed "eugenics," a term invented by Mr. Francis Galton to replace his former invention, "stirpiculture." This, one cannot doubt, will in due time take rank as a branch of science, but in the meantime its study is absolutely neglected. Mr. Galton has done admirable work in this direction, but its importance has never attracted many other workers into the field. Probably the difficulty of securing data lies in the way of its development. Mr. Galton recognizes this difficulty, and all he asks is that for the present eugenics shall be familiarized as an academic question, so that its importance may be established. Ultimately he looks forward to its being "introduced into the national conscience like a new religion," and he sees no impossibility of its becoming "a religious dogma among mankind." This is probably a sanguine view to take, although, as he points out, "the multitude of marriage restrictions that have proved prohibitive among uncivilized people" is a suggestive fact; and in civilized communities marriages are prevented the objections to which are based on purely dogmatic rules. Other contributors to this volume are Dr. Westermarck, Mr. P. Geddes, Mr. Victor Branford, and Dr. Durkheim; and the criticisms, oral and written, on the various papers are included. But the volume is not wholly composed of papers read before the Society. The most interesting article is one by Mr. H. H. Mann, dealing with the facts and statistics of an English agricultural village. There was no need to apologize for the inclusion of so valuable a contribution. A number of press notices and appreciations of the Society's aims are embodied in the volume, for which an apology might have been thought necessary. A learned society, once fairly established, ought to be able to dispense with unconsidered approbation. But the Sociological Society is young, and we cannot doubt that its next publication will not only be more valuable, but also characterized by better form and order.

The Thackeray Country. By Lewis Melville. (Black.)—The Dickens Country. By F. G. Kitton. (Same publishers.)—"Literary geography" is now in fashion, and we are glad to have Mr. Melville's skilful accounts of Thackeray's homes and haunts, into which he has managed to weave many reminiscences of the man and his works. Much of the subject is concerned with London, and here reminiscences of other famous figures will not be regretted. Thus we hear what Fielding has to say of Tyburn in 'Jonathan Wild.' But we do not believe that Fielding wrote "Suave mari magna," &c., and there are other signs that the book has been insufficiently revised. We do not think that Tennyson and Thackeray were friends at Cambridge, and certainly the comic 'Timbuctoo' of the one was not aimed at the prize poem of the other. It is time that this frequent error disappeared. Furnival's Inn is spoken of in the present tense (p. 86), which might send people on a vain quest for it. It was taken down in 1898. John Hollingshead is no longer a "living authority." The proof-reader has let the grammar go wrong on p. 67 and p. 103. The illustrations are excellent.—Kitton, of whose life and work Mr. Arthur Waugh writes an appreciative notice, was the most accomplished master of all details concerning Dickens's life and works that the present generation has known, and his exemplary zeal for research on the fact and fiction of the subject made him the very man to write the book before us. It is as well done as it could be, and a fitting conclusion to the main work of his life. The judicious lover of Dickens will add this book to his library, and turn to it with confidence when there is any dispute about Dickensian haunts. Such occurs pretty frequently, especially in cases where no single prototype has been copied entirely. But it is an odious practice among some writers of the present day to copy wholesale and direct, so that the public is losing hold of the idea that art and taste alike demand some imagination, even in fiction. The illustrations are good in this volume too, though we should have liked to see more of old inns.

THE latest edition of The Autobiography of Benjamin Franklin (Dent & Co.) deserves special regard, for it is "now first printed in England from the full and authentic text," the curious history of which is told in a spirited bibliographical preface by Mr. William Macdonald. The genuine form of the autobiography was discovered in France, and is far preferable to others which have altered Franklin's homely and effective English on account of its want of elegance. Mr. Bigelow, who wrote the 'Life of Franklin,' was the patriotic American who secured this treasure after suspecting and suggesting its existence in France, and it is his text that is here printed in a comely and attractive form such as befits the "Temple Autobiographies." What, however, gives this edition an unusual interest is 'An Historical Account of Franklin's Later Life,' also by Mr. Macdonald, added to complete the unfinished text of the printer and patriot. It is a condensed history of the period, of over 100 pages, exhibiting the multifarious energies of Franklin in two continents. It is evident that Mr. Macdonald has soaked himself, if the phrase be permissible, in his subject, and he has succeeded very well in the art of compression without obscurity. His vivid and personal style might suggest that he was prejudiced in his views of history; but though he is very severe on some people, such as Arthur Lee of Virginia, he holds the scales fairly, with a slight bias, perhaps, in favour of America; but that is right in a biographer of one of her great citizens, and at this distance of time there is no reason to condone the exasperating want of foresight and startling incompetence of English authorities and representatives. We are no enemies to the vernacular, but we are bound to say that Mr. Macdonald spoils a page of otherwise effective writing for us by the remark that "matters got no forarder." The passage is sufficiently animated without this descent into a phrase befitting an after-dinner speech.

The Poetical Works of Robert Fergusson have a distinct and honourable place in the long succession of Scottish vernacular poets, and it is well that his memory should be revived by a new edition such as Mr. Ford has given us under the auspices of Mr. A. Gardner, of Paisley. Without the versatility or occasional sublimity of Burns, he was possessed of the quintessence of Scottish humour and pathos, and the greater poet did not overvalue, in his generosity, the debt he owed Fergusson, both in form and matter. The general acceptability of this edition is a good deal marred by the glossary, which labours the obvious and too often avoids difficulties. We do not want to know at this time of day that wee is "small," or mony is "many"; but that such words as camscheuch, slaister, stammer (for stagger), pose, tift, and others should be omitted is rating knowledge of the vernacular too high. Where a difficult word is given it is sometimes wrongly explained: codroch, rustic, in the place cited connotes "weight" rather than rusticity (cf. the Gaelic cud-thromach). Weyr, interpreted "war," has, of course, no such meaning in connexion with knitting and weaving:—

I wyt they are as pretty hose
As come frae weyr or leem, says the Aberdonian chapman.

On the other hand, the biography and bibliography are adequate, and there is an interesting note on the few portraits extant of Fergusson. That in Dr. Grosart's edition is obviously a caricature. A comparison of the painting by Runciman with the sketch of 'Sir Precentor' at the club will give a just idea, we fancy, of this child of ill-starred genius.

The English poems of Fergusson are dull and conventional. As mountaineers often admire the soft beauties of the plain, Scotch poets have not seldom been attracted by the smoothness of English verse. But Shenstone's level was never attained by his Northern admirers.

MR. TEIGNMOUTH SHORE in his Dickens, one of Messrs. Bell's "Miniature Series of Great Writers," gives a fair but not particularly inspired account of the novelist and his works. There is not very much criticism, but 'David Copperfield' is selected for longer examination. Mr. Shore takes broadly the modern point of view, in which we agree, though he lacks subtlety in his judgments.—Mr. J. W. McSpadden has issued a neat little book of Synopses of Dickens's Novels (Chapman & Hall), which is well done; and the second number of The Dickensian testifies to the vigour and ability with which all that concerns Dickens is pursued.

Plays and Poems of Ben Jonson have appeared in Messrs. Newnes's attractive "Thin-Paper Classics." Accustomed as we are to see much in a little space in these editions, we did not think that one volume could contain all Jonson's work, and, in fact, much of it is omitted here, a fact which militates against the use of the volume. It would have been better, we think, to have two smaller ones which contained all that Jonson wrote.

MR. GEORGE MOORE'S Confessions of a Young Man invite combat and contradiction everywhere. But this book deals largely with conflicts that are stale, in which, we hasten to add, Mr. Moore was on the side of the angels, a word not ill-suited to the cloudy efflorescence of the Impressionists. The volume, in spite of its irritating quality, is both able and amusing, and as it has been out of print for some time, we are very glad to see this well-printed reissue, due to Mr. Werner Laurie. The author's new preface is happy and outrageous by turns.

HOLMES'S Professor at the Breakfast Table and The Autocrat of the Breakfast Table were bound to be added to the "Temple Classics" (Dent). Their gossiping philosophy and science, though rather of the scrappy order, may well be popular in this form, and may even lead a few Philistines to think—a process which adds a pleasure, if it were only known, to ordinary events.

To Ranke's History of the Reformation in Germany, translated by Sarah Austin (Routledge), the editor of this issue, Mr. R. A. Johnson, supplies a capable note of introduction, and additions concerning the further books which it is advisable to read on the subject. The present volume may be commended to the student as a firm basis on which to build, and he ought to be grateful for enjoying such facilities at a moderate price.

MR. FISHER UNWIN is reprinting some novels of more than ordinary interest at a shilling. We have before us Olive Schreiner's Trooper Peter Halket and Maxim Gorky's Three of Them. The first is too much of a tract to please us, but the second is a most vivid account of the sordid life of the small shopkeeper and his associates in Russia.

FITZGERALD'S Polonius has been published by the De La More Press in that attractive series "The King's Classics."

The Red-Letter Shakespeare (Blackie), edited by so excellent a scholar as Mr. E. K. Chambers and daintily produced, ought easily to hold its own among the numerous editions of the plays available. Volumes containing A Midsummer Night's Dream and Romeo and Juliet are before us.

IN the same publishers' "Red-Letter Library" Mrs. Meynell writes a graceful, but all too brief, introduction to Poems by Coleridge, and Mr. Tighe Hopkins adds to Carleton's Select Stories an appreciative notice of the Irishman's somewhat clouded career.

A SECOND Series of The Hundred Best Poems (Lyrical) in the English Language, selected by Adam L. Gowans (Glasgow, Gowans & Gray; London, Brimley Johnson), follows after the 'Pocket Anthology' of the same sort which we praised on its appearance, and which has since been highly successful. The new venture shows the wealth of our language in poetry almost as well as its predecessor, and Mr. Gowans is to be congratulated on the results of his taste and freedom to use various copyright texts. The little volume is sent to us in paper, but deserves a more permanent binding.

FROM Messrs. Dean & Son we have received a copy of Debrett's House of Commons and the Judicial Bench for 1905. We have tested this work at several places, and found no errors.

The Clergy List for 1905 (Kelly's Directories) is an admirably complete and accurate record. Proof of every entry is submitted to the person to whom it refers as far as possible, and though this process is laborious and costly, it is the only one which will secure exceptional accuracy. This 'List' may be used with confidence, and is well up to date, including preferences and obituaries up to January 27th. We congratulate Messrs. Kelly on the organization which enables them to make their various books of reference so complete and trustworthy.

LIST OF NEW BOOKS.

ENGLISH.

Theology.

- Bacon (B. W.), The Story of St. Paul, cr. 8vo, 6/
Chapman (E. M.), The Dynamic of Christianity, 6/ net.
Coptic Version of New Testament in Northern Dialect:
Epistles of St. Paul, &c., Vols. 3 and 4, 8vo, 42/ net.
Dawson (W. J.), The Evangelistic Note, cr. 8vo, 6/
Pioneer and Founder (A.), by A. E. M. Anderson-Morhead, cr. 8vo, 5/ net.
Thompson (W. H.), Prof. Huxley and Religion, 2/6 net.
Windross (H.), The Life Victorious, cr. 8vo, 3/6

Law.

- Stone's Justices' Manual, 8vo, 25/ net.

Fine Art and Archaeology.

- Clement (C. E.), Women in the Fine Arts from the Seventh Century B.C., cr. 8vo, 12/ net.

Poetry and the Drama.

- Carman (B.), Poems, 2 vols. imp. 8vo, leather, 42/ net.
Gough (E.), With Singing unto Zion, and Miscellaneous Poems, cr. 8vo, 5/ net.
Grey (B.), The Heart's Quest, 12mo, 5/ net.
Lange (M. R.), Yseult, cr. 8vo, 2/6 net.

Music.

- Matthay (T.), The First Principles of Pianoforte Playing, 2/6

Philosophy.

- Plato: Myths, translated by J. A. Stewart, 8vo, 14/ net.

History and Biography.

- Brockway (F. E.), Memoirs, by J. H. Brown, 3/6 net.
Hantos (E.), The Magna Carta of the English and of the Hungarian Constitution, 8vo, 7/6 net.

Geography and Travel.

- Hall (R. N.), Great Zimbabwe, Mashonaland, Rhodesia, 8vo, 21/ net.
Nordenskjöld (N. O. G.) and Andersson (J. G.), Antarctica, roy. 8vo, 18/ net.

Philology.

- Duncan (W. H.), Worcestershire Place-names, cr. 8vo, 6/ net.
Lucas (F.), Spanish-English Dictionary of Mining Terms, cr. 8vo, 5/ net.
Scott (E. H.) and Jones (F.), A Second Latin Course, 2/6
Sexti Properti Opera Omnia, with Commentary by H. E. Butler, cr. 8vo, 8/6 net.

Science.

- Ambulanco Work and Nursing, roy. 8vo, 6/
Farnsworth (A. W.), Constructional Steel Work, 10/6 net.
Geikie (Sir A.), Landscape in History, and other Essays, 8vo, 8/6 net.
Goldring (W.), The Book of the Lily, cr. 8vo, 2/6
Hiscox (G. D.), Mechanical Appliances, Mechanical Movements, and Novelties of Construction, roy. 8vo, 12/6 net.
Kempe (H. R.), The Engineer's Year-Book of Formulae, Rules, &c., 1905, cr. 8vo, leather, 8/
Manual of Electrical Undertakings and Directory of Officials, 1905, roy. 8vo, 15/ net.
Proceedings of the Incorporated Association of Municipal and County Engineers, 1903-4, ed. T. Cole, 21/ net.
Reed (B.), Lectures on Diseases of the Stomach and Intestines, roy. 8vo, 21/ net.
Schofield (A. T.), Nerves in Order, cr. 8vo, 3/6
Symonds (B.), Life Insurance Examinations, 12mo, 4/ net.
Thompson (A.), The Ancient Races of the Thebaid, 12/ net.
Ward (J. J.), Peeps into Nature's Ways, 8vo, 7/6

General Literature.

- Agnus (O.), The Root, cr. 8vo, 6/
Barnes (J.), The Unpardonable War, cr. 8vo, 6/
Barr (R.), The Tempestuous Petticoat, cr. 8vo, 6/
Briggs (Le Baron R.), Routine and Ideals, cr. 8vo, 4/6 net.
Bryant (M.), The Adventures of Louis Dural, cr. 8vo, 6/
Cock (Mrs. A.), A Country Diary, cr. 8vo, 6/
Cooper (E. H.), The Twentieth-Century Child, cr. 8vo, 6/
Cullemore (H.), The Garden of Francesca, 4to, bds., 3/6 net.
Export Merchant Shippers of Great Britain and Ireland, 1905, 8vo, 15/6 net.
Fison (L.), Tales from Old Fiji, imp. 8vo, 7/6 net.
Hamilton (M.), Cut Laurels, cr. 8vo, 6/
Healy (C.), Heirs of Reuben, cr. 8vo, 6/
Hill (Headon), The One who Saw, cr. 8vo, 6/
Irving (Hamilton), University Sketches, 4to, 5/ net.
Kenyon (E. C.), Sir Claude Mannerly, cr. 8vo, 3/6
Laughlin (C. E.), Stories of Authors' Loves, cr. 8vo, 6/
Lewis (A.), Days of Old Rome, 4to, 3/6 net.
Long (J. L.), Madame Butterfly, and other Stories, 3/6
Naish (W. P.), An Awful Legacy, His First Crime, and Frank Tollett's Double, cr. 8vo, 6/
Perry (B.), The Amateur Spirit, cr. 8vo, 6/ net.
Smith (O. J.), Balance: the Fundamental Verity, 6/ net.
Steedman (C. J.), Bucking the Sagebrush, 8vo, 7/6 net.
Thudicum (J. L. W.), Cookery, cr. 8vo, 3/6 net.
Vesey (A. H.), The Clock and the Key, cr. 8vo, 3/6
Wood (H. A. W.), Fancies, cr. 8vo, boards, 3/6 net.

FOREIGN.

Fine Art and Archaeology.

- Bernoulli (J. J.), Die erhaltenen Darstellungen Alexanders des Grossen, 9m.
Huysmans (J. K.), Trois Primitifs: Étude Critique, 5fr.
Les Unes et les Autres: Cent Dessins par A. Guillaume, 3fr. 50.

Poetry.

- Leconte (S. C.), Le Sang de Méduse, 3fr. 50.
Nervat (M. et J.), Les Rêves Unis, 3fr. 50.
Tournier (G.), Les Voix du Cœur, 3fr. 50.

History and Biography.

- Beauchamp (O.), Les Contemporains Célèbres, 30fr.
Breton (A. le), Balzac, l'Homme et l'Œuvre, 3fr. 50.
Florenz (K.), Geschichte der japanischen Litteratur, 3m. 75.
Laborie (L. de L. de), Paris sous Napoléon: Consulat Provisoire et Consulat à temps, 5fr.
Prod'homme (J. G.), Hector Berlioz, sa Vie et ses Œuvres, 5fr.
Sayous (A. E.), Le Marin Anglais, 3fr.
Wallier (R.), Le Vingtième Siècle Politique, 1904, 3fr. 50.
Winternitz (M.), Geschichte der indischen Litteratur: Part I, Der Veda, 3m. 75.

Geography and Travel.

- André (A.), Égypte et Palestine: Notes de Voyage, 5fr.

General Literature.

- Ghistelles (G. V. de), Marie Lantenin, 3fr. 50.
Hire (J. de la), Vengeances d'Amoureuses, 3fr. 50.
Huysmans (J. K.), Croquis Parisiens, 3fr. 50.
Liard-Courtois, Après le Baigne, 3fr. 50.
Margueritte (P. et V.), Le Prisme, 3fr. 50.
Montégut (M.), Dans la Paix des Campagnes, 3fr. 50.
Ville (L.), L'Hercule du Nord, 3fr. 50.

THE ORIGINAL BODLEIAN COPY OF THE FIRST FOLIO OF SHAKSPEARE.

By an agreement between Sir Thomas Bodley and the London Stationers' Company, made in 1611, the latter covenanted to present to the Bodleian one perfect copy of every book entered at Stationers' Hall, and the obligation is recorded to have been very well observed up to the Civil War. In accordance with this arrangement a copy of the First Folio of Shakspeare undoubtedly reached the library in sheets, and it was sent on February 17th, 1623/4, to be bound ("Deliured to William Wildgoose these bookes following to be bound 17 Feb<sup>re</sup> 1623.....6. William Shakspeares comedies histories &c."), and it is marked as duly returned. The volume was then referenced as "S. 2. 17 Art.," and appears in a 1635 printed appendix to the library catalogue. "But," as Mr. Macray writes in his 'Annals of the Bodleian,'

"in the catalogue of 1674 we find only the third edition, that of 1664, which doubtless had been thought to be sufficient as well as best; upon its arrival therefore, from Stationers' Hall, the precious volume of 1623 was probably regarded as little more than waste paper. Nor was it until 1821, when Malone's collection was received, that a copy was again possessed by the library."

There can be no doubt that soon after 1664, when the Third Folio was published, the unfortunate First Folio was sold or turned out as a supposed "double" or as a superseded edition. There is no trace of a Second Folio in the library before Malone's copy.

The importance of this particular exemplar over all the 160 enumerated by Mr. Sidney Lee in the 'Census' which accompanied the Clarendon Press Facsimile issue in 1902 was that it was the only one which had never been in private hands until at least forty years after publication. It passed from the officials of Stationers' Hall to the Keeper of the Bodleian Library, John Rous. It was bound in Oxford for the library, and catalogued and chained in its proper place on the shelves. It was, therefore, a standard copy in a sense in which no other copy could be.

Most fortunately this identical copy has been discovered in the possession of Mr. W. G. Turbutt, of Ogston Hall, in Derbyshire, whose family have owned it for at least a century and a half. Even Mr. Lee's widely-cast nets failed to enmesh this particular book; but it was brought up to be examined at the Bodleian by Mr. G. M. R. Turbutt, of Magdalen College, a son of the owner, on January 23rd last, and it is now temporarily deposited in its ancient home. Within ten minutes of its arrival, Mr. Strickland Gibson, the one authority on Oxford bindings, recognized that the book was in an Oxford cover, and comparison with other books sent to be bound by Wildgoose on the same day as the Shakspeare showed beyond all doubt that the Bodleian copy was before him. Consecutive fragments of the same early printed book occur in the binding both of the Shakspeare and of one of the other books; and the details of the binding, even to the marks of the iron chain staple, and of the pressure of the tape strings, are identical.

Inasmuch as this copy may well be the first sent out from the publishers' house (passing in sheets to Stationers' Hall when the rest of the first batch of copies went to be bound), it might be fondly expected that we should find all the quires or sheets throughout the volume in a "first state." But the circumstances of book production preclude the possibility of this. In the course of printing the five or six hundred copies of each quire and arranging them for the binder, there were several occasions when any original order of the sheets would be disturbed. To begin with, each sheet, according to Mr. Horace Hart ('Introduction to the Facsimile Edition,' 1902, p. xxiv), required four separate pulls, so that the whole five hundred copies of any sheet would pass four times under the platen and be as often (presumably) reversed in order. Again, the copies were hung up to dry in batches of not more than perhaps ten or twelve, and when taken down ready for use they would again break their order. And in the final process of stacking there is no likelihood that the five hundred sheets would be moved or stacked exactly as they lay before removal. Mr. Hart, who has kindly given information on this subject, is of opinion that no ordinary copy of a published work can be expected to exhibit a uniform series of "early states" or "late states" of the sheets which make it up. The importance of this consideration, which sets limits to exact bibliography in respect of "early copies," is, perhaps, not generally recognized, but it fully accounts for the mixed characteristics of exemplars which have been subjected to minute examination.

What may fairly be claimed for the present copy is that it is one of the two or three which remain in original binding; that it was the copy formally deposited at Stationers' Hall as a standard copy; that it was then bound for, and for many years preserved in, a public library; and that the body of the work has never been disturbed and is still almost complete.

It is a subject of congratulation, therefore, that this interesting volume has been brought to light, and, thanks to Mr. Gibson, identified. The facts were first publicly announced at the meeting of the Bibliographical Society on Monday last. The owner wishes that for the present any private communications on the subject may be addressed to Mr. F. Madan at the Bodleian Library. A description of the present condition of the volume is subjoined, the materials for which have been chiefly supplied by Mr. G. M. R. Turbutt.

It may be mentioned that subsequently to the publication of the 'Census,' Mr. Sidney Lee obtained information about the Turbutt copy; but the Bodleian connexion was then, of course, not known.

The Rev. W. D. Macray points out that an item in the Bodleian accounts for September, 1663-September, 1664 ("Received of Mr. Ri: Davis [an Oxford bookseller] for superfluous Library Bookes sold by Order of the Curators—[£]024-00-00"), probably explains the disappearance of the book.

DESCRIPTION OF THE VOLUME.

(The Chatsworth copy, reproduced in facsimile in 1902, forms a convenient standard of comparison.)

Collation.

Prefatory matter (P.): eight leaves, wanting the leaf of verses which should face the title: see below.

Comedies (C.): A—Z, Aa—Bb<sup>6</sup>, Cc<sup>2</sup>.

Histories (H.): a—g<sup>3</sup>, gg<sup>4</sup>, h—v<sup>9</sup>, x<sup>4</sup>.

Tragedies (T.): two unsigned leaves, containing the beginning of 'Troilus and Cressida,' 1, 11, 111, 1111, aa—ff<sup>6</sup>, gg<sup>2</sup>, gg—hh, kk—yy<sup>6</sup>, zz<sup>2</sup>.

This agrees with the Chatsworth copy, except that the latter has the prefatory leaf of verses.

Text.

The following are examples of differences from the Chatsworth copy:—

C. (i.e., Comedies), sign. V1 (p. 229). The signature is misprinted Vv. (earlier).

C., sign. X5<sup>v</sup> (252). "Actus Quintus": there is a space between u and i (earlier).

H., sign. b3 (17). w in the catchword has dropped down too low. So with d in the catchword of T., sign. x5.

H., sign. m3 (121). The signature is misprinted 13 (earlier).

H., sign. t6 (212). The upper and lower lines are bowed in the Chatsworth copy, but straight in this copy.

T., sign. ff5<sup>v</sup> (70). The O of the pagination is inverted, and so appears too high (earlier).

T., sign. qq5<sup>v</sup> (290). The catchword is "Gainst," and is interesting as showing the second of three stages:—

1. Catchword Gainst; p. 291 begins Gainst.

2. Catchword Gainst; p. 291 begins But.

3. Catchword But; p. 291 begins But.

The Chatsworth copy shows the third stage, this copy the second.

T., sign. ss3 (309). The stage direction is "Hedis," not, as the Chatsworth copy, "He dis," i.e., dies (earlier).

T., sign. vv3. The first line is

I have heard too much: and your words and not, as in the Chatsworth copy (by an explicable error),

And hell gnaw his bones.

These variations will serve to distinguish the present copy from others, but in all the other points mentioned in Mr. Lee's 'Introduction' and 'Census' it agrees closely with the Chatsworth Shakspeare, with the single exception that "Foredo" ('Introd.,' p. xxxii=T. p. 278, col. 2, l. 3) is not corrected to "For do," and there is reason to think that this particular correction is a mistake, as it is not found in the Chatsworth copy, which is supposed to be corrected.

Condition and Binding.

The Turbutt Shakspeare is a very large copy, measuring 13½ in. × 8½ in.; and many leaves have rough edges at top or bottom. It is in parts much worn from use, and in many places the leaves are damaged and in delicate condition; but, with the exception of the fly-leaf of verses, every leaf is there. It is a curious and interesting point that the comparative use made by Bodleian readers of each play between 1624 and 1664 can be estimated from the signs of wear and tear. The most worn are 'Romeo and Juliet' and 'Julius Caesar'; next to them come 'Macbeth' and '1 Henry IV.'; and the others which show clear marks of special perusal are 'The Merry Wives of Windsor,' 'Hamlet,' and 'The Tempest.' The histories were least read.

The Prefatory Leaves.—The fly-leaf of verses is entirely wanting. The title-page is badly damaged, the whole of the imprint having been cut away and the dimidiated title mounted on later paper. The portrait is perfect and in good condition. The order of the next seven leaves can be best shown by a diagram.

Chatsworth Copy.

1. Fly-leaf of Verses
2. Title ...
3. A2 Dedication ...
4. A3 To Readers ...
5. Digges and I.M. ...
6. Actors ...
7. Ben Jonson ...
8. Holland ...
9. Catalogue ...

Turbutt Copy.

- (Fly-leaf wanting) 1
- Title (mounted) ... 2
- A2 Dedication ... 3
- A3 To Readers ... 4
- Ben Jonson ... 7
- Digges and I.M. ... 5
- Actors ... 6
- Holland ... 8
- Catalogue ... 9

The importance of the Turbutt copy is that, being in original binding, the accuracy of the above lines (not dots) is certain, that is to say, leaves 3 and 8, 4 and 7, 5 and 6, are each one piece of paper. The Chatsworth order is the easy and natural one, requiring only one thread to hold the entire sheet together, and the order of leaves is practically the same as in the Second Folio, which was reprinted from the First. But if the order be right, why should the Oxford binder take the trouble to use an arrangement which gave him more trouble and required two threads, unless there were good reason? The point cannot be enlarged on here, but some of Mr. Lee's views of the history of the prefatory matter on pp. xxiv-xxv of his 'Introduction' may be modified in view of the testimony adduced above.

The binding is of dark brown leather, of a plain kind with a small amount of plain blind tooling on the sides and back, and is entirely unrepaid. The covers are damaged, but the sewing is still sound. The original first blank fly-leaf, which probably bore a Bodleian shelf-mark, has gone, and several leaves have been strengthened by the use of coarse blank paper, but except for a few blank margins and a very few cases where a letter or two of the text have been worn off, the text of the plays is entirely preserved.

COMPULSORY GREEK AND SCHOOL-MASTERS.

IN view of the importance to education of the question of compulsory Greek, upon which a vote will shortly be taken at Cambridge, the Executive Committee of the Assistant Masters' Association has thought it necessary to ascertain the opinions of assistant masters in public secondary schools. The following question was, therefore, sent to all members of the Association, and also to all assistant masters in "Conference schools" (i.e., schools connected with the Head Masters' Conference), whether members of the A.M.A. or not, viz.: "Do you approve of allowing candidates for the Little-Go to offer a sound knowledge of a modern language as a substitute for Greek?" The voting is as follows:—

| A. CONFERENCE SCHOOLS. |     |                       |
|------------------------|-----|-----------------------|
| Yes.                   | No. | Modified or Doubtful. |
| 542                    | 243 | 52                    |

| B. MEMBERS OF THE A.M.A. NOT IN CONFERENCE SCHOOLS. |     |                       |
|---|-----|-----------------------|
| Yes.  | No. | Modified or Doubtful. |
| 546   | 104 | 26                    |

Replies under the heading "Modified or Doubtful" are mainly conditional affirmatives. From the above figures it will be seen that 1,513 replies were received, of which 1,088 were affirmative, and only 347 negative, 78 being doubtful. There are few schools which do not show an affirmative majority. Eton, Harrow, and Winchester each give such a majority. The collective vote at these three schools is:—

| Yes. | No. | Modified. |
|------|-----|-----------|
| 59   | 23  | 2         |

The collective vote from the nine great public schools reported on by the Commission of 1862—namely, the three above mentioned and Westminster, Charterhouse, St. Paul's, Merchant Taylors', Rugby, and Shrewsbury—is as follows:—

| Yes. | No. | Modified. |
|------|-----|-----------|
| 110  | 59  | 7         |

THE ADVANCED HISTORICAL TEACHING FUND.

24, Bedford Square, Bloomsbury, Feb. 21st, 1905.

THE Committee of this body will, I feel sure, be very grateful for the full and kindly notice given in your last issue of their efforts during the past three years, and of the proceedings at the meeting held in behalf of the Fund on the 3rd inst. May I add that, though we have received assistance beyond what we dared to expect, the sum collected falls short by at least 150% of the minimum required in order to keep two lectureships going for three years more; that we are convinced that we could usefully employ a far larger sum; and that, until we can obtain a permanent endowment for at least two lectureships or a professorship in advanced history, the scheme must be regarded as on a precarious footing? Subscriptions or donations may be sent to the hon. treasurer, Mr. H. R. Tedder, the Athenæum Club, Pall Mall.

G. W. PROTHERO.

A FRAGMENT OF CAXTON.

Christ Church Library, Oxford, February 20th.

POSSIBLY some of your readers may care to learn that I have found in the Christ Church Library a fragment of Caxton, bound up into a copy of Petrus Crescentiensis "de omnibus agriculturæ partibus" (Basileæ, 1548). The book was rebound some time last century, and the binder inserted two leaves, which had obviously been used before that to line the covers or serve as fly-leaves. These two leaves belong to the 1489 issue of the 'Directorium Sacerdotum,' of which the Bodleian possesses the only recorded copy. They are by numbering k, i, ii, vi, viii. Mr. Gibson tells me that the binding in which they seem to have been used was possibly an Oxford binding, and probably dates from the early seventeenth century. It is curious that a London bookseller was lately offering another Caxton fragment, bound in a work published in 1668.

F. HAVERFIELD.

THE SPRING PUBLISHING SEASON.

MESSRS. BLACKWOOD are publishing: The Yellow War, by O.—Saints and Savages, by Robert Lamb, illustrated by J. R. Ashton.—The Development of Tactics from 1740 to the Present Day, by Lieut.-Col. W. H. James.—Military Operations and Maritime Preponderance, by Lieut.-Col. C. E. Caldwell.—The Licensing Act, 1904, by St. J. E. Micklethwait.—Sonnets and Songs, by A. T. Strong.—Dr. Momerie: his Life and Work, by his Wife.—The Letters of Warren Hastings to his Wife, edited by S. C. Grier.—Studies on Theological, Biblical, and other Subjects, by Robert Flint.—Browning, by Prof. Herford.—The Rake's Progress in Finance, by J. W. Cross.—The Perth Incident of 1396, from a Folk-lore point of View, by R. C. MacLagan.—The History of the Fife Pitcairns, by Constance Pitcairn.—The Story of the World, by M. B. Synge, 2 vols.; and The World's Childhood, 2 vols., by the same.—The Heart of China, by the Rev. W. H. Rankine.—A Woman and her Talent, by L. J. Miln.—Elizabeth Grey, by E. M. Green.—new editions of Hill Burton's History of Scotland; The Forester, by John Nisbet; and a number of popular volumes at sixpence.

MESSRS. CASSELL & CO.'S

new volumes include: King Leopold II.: his Rule in Belgium and the Congo, by J. de C. Macdonnell.—Russia, by Sir Donald M. Mackenzie, an enlarged edition.—Canada as It Is, by J. F. Fraser.—French Porcelain, by E. S. Auscher, translated and edited by W. Burton, a limited edition.—The Book of Photography, edited by P. N. Hasluck.—Reminiscences of a Radical Parson, by the Rev. W. Tuckwell.—History of the Russo-Japanese War, Vol. I.—Great Pictures in Private Galleries, Vol. I.—The Golden Pool, by R. A. Freeman.—The One who Saw, by Headon Hill.—The Adventures of an Equerry, by Morice Gerard.—Cassell's Popular Gardening, edited by W. P. Wright, 2 vols.—The British Isles, depicted by Pen and Camera, Vol. III.—The Blue Adventure-Book, edited by A. T. Quiller-Couch, and The Brown Adventure-Book, by the same.—new volumes of Cassell's Standard Library, and new editions of Nature's Riddles; The Dictionary of English History; The Adventures of Cock Robin and his Mate; The Church of England: a History, by the Rev. H. D. M. Spence; Ambulance Work and Nursing; and other volumes.

MR. T. FISHER UNWIN

announces:—in History and Biography: Bygones Worth Remembering, by G. J. Holyoake.—Cobden as a Citizen, with introduction and bibliography by W. E. A. Axon.—The Personal Story of the Upper House, by K. Wilkinson.—Jusserand's Literary History of the English People, Vol. II.—History of Scottish Seals from the Eleventh to the Seventeenth Century, by W. de G. Birch, Vol. I.—Lady Jean: the Romance of the Great Douglas Cause, by P. Fitzgerald.—Dames and Daughters of the French Court, by G. Brooks.—Essays in Puritanism, by A. Macphail.—The Youth of Washington, by S. Weir Mitchell.—The Coming of Parliament, 1350-1660, by L. C. Jane.—The Story of Greece from the Earliest Times to A.D. 14, by E. S. Shuckburgh.—Old Tales from Rome, by Alice Zimmern,—Wesley and his Preachers, by G. H. Pike,—and new editions of Jusserand's English Wayfaring Life in the Middle Ages and Villari's History of Florence (for the first two centuries). In Travel, Science, &c.: Travels of a Naturalist in Northern Europe, by J. A. Harvie-Brown, limited edition,—Siberia, a record of travel, by Samuel Turner,—Russia under the Great Shadow, by Luigi Villari,—Studies in General Physiology, by Prof. Loeb, 2 vols.—The Age of the Earth, and other Geological Studies, by Prof. W. J. Sollas,—Astronomy for Amateurs, by C. Flammarion,—British Bird Life, by W. P. Westell,—The Camera in the Fields, by F. C. Snell,—and Birds I have Known, by A. H. Beavan. In Fiction: A Pagan Love, by Constance Clyde,—The Flute of Pan, by John Oliver Hobbes,—The Yarn of Old Harbour Town, by W. Clark Russell,—By Beach and Bogland, by Jane Barlow,—The Siren's Net, by Florence Roosevelt,—Lucie and I, by H. Corkran,—Grand Relations, by J. S. Fletcher,—Tom Gerrard, by Louis Becke,—A Specimen Spinster, by K. W. Yeigh,—The Memoirs of Constantine Dix, by Barry Pain,—and several reprints of popular novels and children's books. In Politics, &c.: Labour Legislation, &c., by G. Howell, a new edition,—Party Organization and Machinery in the United States, by Prof. J. Macy,—International Law and the North Sea Crisis, by F. E. Smith and N. W. Sibley,—American Business Methods, edited by H. R. Hatfield, first series,—Religion and the Higher Life, by W. R. Harper,—Chats on Old Furniture, by A. Hayden,—In Peril of Change, by C. F. G. Masterman,—The Westminster Cathedral, a Criticism, by P. Fitzgerald,—and Gardening for the Million, by Alfred Pink.

Literary Gossip.

MR. F. M. NICHOLS is engaged upon a third volume of 'The Epistles of Erasmus,' which is to be published by Messrs. Longman. The volume last issued concludes with a letter of 1517. The new instalment will complete the correspondence of that date, and so include all the letters of the fifty-first year of Erasmus, with some sixty more belonging to the following months. Many readers will welcome the continuation of this admirable translation and commentary on the great humanist.

To The Cornhill Magazine for March Mr. Thomas Hardy contributes a narrative poem entitled 'The Noble Lady's Tale.' 'The Art of Conversation' is a lecture delivered by Ainger. In 'The Home-Coming of Vincent Brooke,' Mr. Hugh Clifford illustrates the feelings towards England of an Englishman who has lived in India forty years of unbroken exile. 'The Nile Fens' is a record of an almost unknown tract of Lower Egypt by Mr. D. G. Hogarth. In 'The Frankfort Fleet' the Rev. A. T. S. Goodrick describes the earliest effort of modern Germany to secure naval power. Mr. F. T. Bullen concludes his sketches from the West Indies with 'Barbados the Loyal'; while a pictorial study of the real causes of the rural exodus is given in 'The Deserted Village.'

THE March Blackwood will contain an article by Mr. Walter B. Harris on 'The Sultan of Morocco in Private Life.' Mr. Harris has lived on terms of intimacy with the Sultan as his guest on several occasions.

MESSRS. HUTCHINSON & Co. have in the press a book of travel pictures in two volumes, entitled 'Letters from Catalonia and other Parts of Spain.' Mr. Rowland Thirlmere, author of 'Idylls of Spain,' is responsible for the text; and the illustrations, which are in colour, half-tone, and line, are from original paintings and drawings by, amongst other English artists, Mr. Seymour Lucas, R.A., Mr. Frank Brangwyn, Mr. George Haité, Mr. Trevor Haddon, Mr.

T. R. Macquoid, Mr. Tom Browne, and Mr. Foweraker. In addition there are several reproductions from the works of well-known Spanish artists, and also from photographs.

MR. FISHER UNWIN will publish before long a work by Mr. Budgett Meakin on 'Model Factories and Villages.' Mr. Meakin, who has for some years made a personal study of the subject on both sides of the Atlantic, deals first with ideal conditions of labour, showing the provisions for the comfort and welfare of their employees which progressive manufacturers and others have found it worth while to make. Secondly, he describes the principal model industrial villages of the world, and points out the direction in which efforts to solve the housing problem are likely to converge. The volume will be illustrated with 140 photographs.

PROF. SANFORD TERRY has made another excursion into the byways of Scottish history, in the volume which Messrs. MacLehose & Sons will publish immediately. He has dealt exhaustively with the Pentland Rising of 1666, and the battle of Rullion Green between the Covenanting Whigs and the Royal forces.

LADY PAGET and Lieut.-General A. von Boguslawski, of the Prussian Army, will contribute papers to the March number of The Empire Review on the social relations of England and Germany. Lady Paget is the widow of Sir Augustus Paget, who was successively ambassador at the Courts of Saxony, Sweden and Norway, Denmark, Portugal, Rome, and Vienna.

'IMPERIALISM' is the title of a new work by Dr. Emil Reich, which Messrs. Hutchinson & Co. are bringing out immediately. It is a study of the penalties of Imperialism generally, and British Imperialism in particular, and it includes a discussion of Mr. Chamberlain's fiscal policy.

MR. A. C. FIFIELD has in the press for publication shortly a new book by Mr. Edward Carpenter, entitled 'Prisons, Police, and Punishment: an Enquiry into the Causes and Treatment of Crime and Criminals.' A series of articles by Mr. George Barlow which have recently been appearing in The Contemporary Review will also be issued by the same publisher in a week or two, under the title of 'The Higher Love: being Chapters on the Nobler Conception of Human Love and Passion.'

MR. AYLNER MAUDE sends us the following concerning Mr. Carpenter:—

"It may interest your readers to know what Tolstoy thinks of one of our contemporary English writers. In a letter I have just received from him he says: 'Yesterday and to-day I have been reading a book which has only now fallen into my hands; it is Edward Carpenter's "Civilization: its Cause and Cure," and I am charmed by it. The only part of it I knew before was the essay on "Modern Science." Please write me what you know about Carpenter himself. I consider him a worthy heir of Carlyle and of Ruskin.' It will, I think, please some who have long admired Edward Carpenter to know how highly Tolstoy appreciates one at least of that author's books."

WE are sorry to notice the death of the distinguished authority on Sanskrit and Pahlavi, Dr. E. W. West. With Dr. Martin Haug he translated and edited the 'Book of Arda Viraf' (1872), and produced a glossary and index of this and other Pahlavi texts (1874). Alone he translated and edited the 'Book of Mainyo-i-Khard,' Sanskrit and Pazand texts (1871), and from 1880 to 1882 published translations of Pahlavi texts for the series of "Sacred Books of the East."

MR. ANTHONY HOPE HAWKINS has promised to preside at the annual dinner of the Correctors of the Press, which will probably take place early in May.

At the monthly meeting of the Board of Directors of the Booksellers' Provident Institution held on Thursday week last the sum of 110% was voted to fifty-seven members and widows of members. Four members were elected, and two fresh applications for membership were received.

AMONG very many interesting publications of the Elizabethan period which will be included in Messrs. Sotheby, Wilkinson & Hodge's sale on March 21st and four following days, is a very fine perfect copy, believed to be unique, of the first edition of Sir Philip Sidney's 'The Countesse of Pembroke's Arcadia,' 1590. This belonged to James Crossley; the other recorded examples appear to be imperfect. The sale will also include a copy—apparently the only surviving one of the first edition—of E. H.'s (? Edward Hake's) 'David's Sling against great Goliath,' 1581, which is entered in the Stationers' Company Register under date January 4th, 1581, and was until recently only known from its mention in Maunsell's Catalogue of 1595. The British Museum possesses a copy of the 1598 edition. The example about to be sold is in a very pretty Elizabethan binding of calf, with richly gilt corners, centre-pieces, and other decorative ornaments.

THE London Library has received a handsome and useful present from Mr. H. Yates Thompson, in the form of a copy of Count Litta's 'Famiglie Celebri Italiane,' in eight volumes, published at Milan between 1819 and 1858. This valuable work of reference has the following inscription by the donor:—

"Presented to the London Library by H. Yates Thompson in appreciation of the energy and skill of Mr. C. T. Hagberg Wright, Secretary and Librarian, in the compilation of the catalogue of 1903—the best of the known catalogues."

This is a very practical form of appreciation.

ON the completion, this spring, of his Catalogue of the Coptic MSS. in the British Museum, Mr. W. E. Crum has undertaken to prepare a dictionary of that language, upon a scale considerably larger than any hitherto realized. In the seventy years which have passed since the appearance of Amedeo Peyron's 'Lexicon,' the material, both published and available in MS., has very greatly increased, as has, to a still higher degree, our knowledge of the foregoing periods of the Egyptian language. It should therefore be possible to-day to fill a want of which all Egyptian philologists are conscious, in a manner more adequate to their requirements than was attainable in Peyron's time. There is reason to hope that the Clarendon Press may undertake the publication of the work.

MR. EDWARD MARSTON includes in this week's Publishers' Circular some interesting reminiscences of Mr. F. R. Daldy, whose death has been recently announced. Mr. Marston became acquainted with his "ancient junior" more than fifty years ago, when he was an assistant with Messrs. Rivington. Daldy was afterwards associated with Mr. George Bell, and with the firm of Virtue. "His real hobby was copyright"; he was hon. secretary of the Copyright Association, and on December 9th, 1897, a presentation was made to him to commemorate his efforts in that direction. Mr. Marston adds "that Mr. Daldy used to pride himself on his descent from the Aldus family, the great Venetian printers."

LAST Wednesday the death was announced of Mrs. Caroline Bray, of Coventry, who was one of the early friends of George Eliot, and had reached the great age of ninety-eight. Mrs. Bray was the author of several school-books, and her husband, Charles Bray (1811-84), has a place in the 'Dictionary of National Biography,' being the author of 'The Education of the Feelings' (1838), 'The Philosophy of Necessity' (1841), and 'Phases of Opinion,' an autobiography (1884). The Brays play a large part in the Life of George Eliot as told from her letters and journals.

ALL members of the bookselling trade are invited to apply to the Secretary of the Booksellers' Provident Institution, Mr. G. Larnier, at 28, Paternoster Row, for a ticket of admission to the annual meeting and conversazione on March 9th. The promise of Lord Avebury is proving an attraction to many. This year lady booksellers and assistants are invited to attend.

SIR HENRY C. BURDETT will take the chair at the meeting of the Newsvendors' Benevolent Institution next Tuesday, to be held at the Institute of Journalists, when a pension will be proposed in memory of the late Thomas Miles, who became a member of the committee in 1858, and took an active part in the affairs of the Institution until 1901. Lord Glenesk has described him "as one of those earnest workers who, practically without fee or reward, have helped to build up the splendid system of friendly societies."

THE Committee of the Classical Association to consider the spelling and printing of Latin texts is circularizing teachers with a view to ascertaining opinions based not on theoretical grounds, but on actual experience. The main points on which information is asked are: the marking of long vowels in Latin texts intended for the use of beginners, and the writing of the consonants or semi-vowels i(j) and u(v). Without wishing to prejudice the answers of practical teachers, we have good reason for thinking that the tendency is towards the marking of long quantities in elementary Latin texts, and towards using consistently the symbols i and u for both vowels and semi-vowels. These two points to some extent are interdependent: thus in such words as uino and avidus the addition of the marks of long quantity decides the pronunciation, by showing that in the first case u is semi-consonantal, and in the second that u is a vowel.

WE have received a long letter from the author of 'The Life of Omar Al-Khayyami,' reviewed by us last week. We give all of it that seems to us pertinent:—

"My reasons for not mentioning any of the manuscripts referred to in my book are quite evident. Had I mentioned any manuscripts, would your reviewer or any of my readers have been in a position to verify them? As your reviewer says that 'by a strange oversight' I have not given any names or titles of manuscripts, I now take the opportunity of mentioning some of them, also some native authorities who have been of great use to me in writing this book—for instance, Sheikh Sadik, Mirza Tagi Manshadi, Mirza Mahmoud Shirazi, Hadji Mirza Ali Askar Uskuli, Mirza Jffar Kazwini, and many others. Among the more important manuscripts consulted by me and my friends are 'Tawarikh-i-Shuara,' in 4 vols., by a learned scholar, Muzaffari, written in the third century, and in the possession of my friend, which I hope to translate into English in course of time. I believe there are in existence only six copies of this work. I know the possessors of three of them. Then, again, Asad's 'Treatise on the History of Persian Literature,' now in the possession of the Mosque at Ardabil. There are only three known copies of this in existence in Persia."

The rest of the letter is occupied by a statement of disagreement from our critic or unwarrantable inferences from his review.

M. LÉOPOLD DELISLE has retired from the post of Administrateur-Général of the Bibliothèque Nationale, Paris, and M. Marcel, Director of the Beaux-Arts, has been appointed to the post. M. Delisle, who was born in 1826, and entered the Bibliothèque in 1852, had had the direction of the great establishment since 1874, so that he has justly earned his retirement and his pension. M. Delisle's work as a scholar and as an administrator is well known, and if his reforms were not so numerous and drastic as could have been desired, he has, at all events, left the working of the library in a far higher state of efficiency than he found it. He was hampered by "rules," written and unwritten, by ministers with little or no sympathies, and by the crises which are perpetually in "attendance" on every French Cabinet. Reference was made in The Athenæum on June 20th, 1903, to M. Delisle's extraordinary industry as an author, and to M. Lacombe's bibliography of his work. The jubilee of his fifty years' association with the Bibliothèque Nationale was celebrated on March 8th, 1903 (see The Athenæum, March 14th of that year). All literary workers will unite in wishing M. Delisle a long and happy period of repose after an unusually extended and busy working career.

BY-THE BY, the Keeper of Printed Books at the library just mentioned is correcting the proofs of the twenty-second volume of the general catalogue of that great institution. It is expected that it will be complete in about 130 volumes.

IN connexion with the centenary of the death of Schiller, the Edinburgh German Clubs are to have an address by Viscount Goschen.

THE death is announced, after a long illness, of Otto Erich Hartleben. Hartleben, who was in his forty-first year, was not among those to whom fame came quickly. Neither as lyrical poet nor as novelist did he attract much attention, and it was not till the appearance of his play 'Rosenmontag' that he took a prominent place among modern German dramatists. This tragedy was fully discussed in these columns at the time of its performance at the St. James's Theatre, where, under the title of 'Love's Carnival,' it proved so great a failure that Mr. Alexander promptly withdrew it. Whether Hartleben would have maintained his place is a question that must now remain unanswered. His last play, 'Im grünen Baum zur Nachtigall,' can only be characterized as a failure.

COUNT LUTZOW's Ilchester Lectures on the Historians of Bohemia are about to be published by Mr. Henry Frowde. It may be recalled that one of the chapters in Prof. Sigel's Lectures on Slavonic Law (the Ilchester Lectures for 1900) was devoted to the Bohemian kingdom.

IN consequence of the death of Arnold Glover, the publication of the first and second volumes of the edition of Beaumont and Fletcher, upon which he was at work for the Syndics of the Cambridge University Press, will be somewhat delayed. They will be issued as soon as possible, completed by Mr. A. R. Waller, who will be responsible for the remaining volumes of the edition.

MISS M. E. DURHAM, author of that excellent book 'Through the Lands of the Serb,' was recently chosen to act as relief agent in Macedonia for the Balkan Committee. She has written an account of her experiences on this her sixth visit to the Balkan Peninsula, which, taken in connexion with the historical survey which precedes it, should remove some very widespread illusions as to the chronic unrest prevailing in that part of Europe. The book, which is entitled 'The Burden of the Balkans,' will be published by Mr. Edward Arnold on March 2nd. It contains a number of interesting illustrations from sketches by the author.

RECENT Parliamentary Papers include a Report on the Wages, Earnings, and Conditions of Employment of Agricultural Labourers in the United Kingdom, with Statistical Tables and Charts (2s. 9d.); Report on the Educational Systems of the Chief Crown Colonies and Possessions of the British Empire, including Reports on the Training of Native Races: Part I. West Indies, St. Helena, Cyprus, &c. (2s.); and Appendix to the Report of Commissioners of National Education in Ireland, Section III., Examination Papers set 1903, and Summary of Answering (5d.).

SCIENCE

The Dynamical Theory of Gases. By J. H. Jeans. (Cambridge, University Press.)

THE dynamical or, as it is more often but less conveniently termed, the kinetic theory of gases occupies a unique place among the hypotheses of physical science. It is one of the widest generalizations that have been proposed; but though it cannot be directly proved, at least at present, it is, in its simpler forms, accepted by every competent investigator. Bold deductions have been drawn from it by mathematicians, which have received striking confirmation by experiment, and yet the fundamental principles upon which the calculations are based are still the subject of eagerly maintained controversy. The theory is really as old as the speculations of the Greek philosophers on the atomic constitution of matter, which Lucretius has expounded in his splendid poem; but the essential feature, which gives it importance for the modern world, was not developed till 1738, when Daniel Bernoulli showed that the pressure which a gas exerts on its containing walls could be more easily explained by the impacts of the swiftly moving particles of the gas than by the mutual repulsion between those particles to which it had previously been attributed. This suggestion afforded a basis for mathematical treatment, and Bernoulli was able to deduce Boyle's law and some other simple properties of gases from the supposition that the particles were rigid spheres moving with the same speed; he was also able to estimate this speed and to make it extremely probable that the particles were of a size almost infinitesimal compared with any portions of matter of which we have direct cognizance. More than a century elapsed before any further progress was made, but interest in the subject revived when, about 1860, Clausius extended Bernoulli's work and arrived at all the results we are now acquainted with which do not require the introduction of principles not included in the original hypothesis.

It soon became obvious that all the members of such a swarm of particles, continually in collision with each other and with the walls of the vessel, could not in general possess the same velocity. But the calculation of the distribution of the velocities, without which further progress was impossible, was delayed till Maxwell turned his attention to the subject. However, in the meantime, Waterston had presented to the Royal Society in 1827 a memoir, the result of years of labour, in which he had endeavoured to solve, and partially succeeded in solving, the problem. But his methods were so obscure and so inextricably mixed with inaccuracies and fallacies that his paper was rejected and lay unnoticed for sixty years. The disappointment is said to have broken his heart; he certainly never lived to see his ideas revived in the brilliant work of Maxwell; nor had he the satisfaction of seeing his paper brought to light and published by Lord Rayleigh in 1892.

It would be impossible to ascertain directly by the ordinary methods of dynamics the distribution of velocities in any such swarm of colliding particles as are supposed by the dynamical theory to constitute matter in the gaseous state. Maxwell's method of attacking the problem, though subsequently shown to be unsatisfactory, will always be remarkable as one of the most beautiful researches in the history of mathematical physics. He attempted to show that there was a certain distribution of velocities which, if it ever obtained in a gas, would be unaltered by any collisions or other mutual influence which might be exerted by the particles; the individual particles might alter their velocities to any extent, but the number at any moment moving with any given speed would be permanently unchanged. It was then a justifiable inference that when a gas had been left undisturbed until a "steady state" had been attained, the velocities of the constituent molecules would be distributed according to this particular law.

Though later criticism has tended to prove that the assumptions on which Maxwell's work was founded are illegitimate and his methods inadequate, all research has shown that the law which he enunciated does represent the state at which a gas tends to arrive. The discussion of the subject is not yet closed, for there is grave difficulty in determining not only what assumptions shall be made, but even what assumptions actually have been made unconsciously by various authors. A full and interesting account of the present state of the matter is to be found in the volume before us.

Another law of great importance and wide bearing announced by Maxwell was that of the equipartition of energy, according to which the energy of an isolated system is shared equally among the degrees of freedom possessed by that system. Doubts have recently been expressed in many quarters as to the validity of this law, but the question seems to be cleared up by Mr. Jeans, who devotes considerable space to its discussion. He draws attention to a principle so evident that it is often overlooked, that "deductions that have any relation to physical phenomena cannot be arrived at without definite physical assumptions, and any inconsistency between theoretical and experimental results must of necessity be traceable to imperfections in the physical assumptions on which the development of the theory is based."

When the interaction between matter and æther, hitherto ignored in this connexion, is considered, the inconsistencies which have thrown doubts on all but the simplest statements of the theory will be found to disappear.

The advance made in the subject since Maxwell's time has consisted chiefly in consolidating and extending the principles which he established. In this work the names of Kirchhoff, Boltzmann, Tait, and Rayleigh have been most prominent. The complications introduced by the finite size of the molecules and the mutual forces exerted by them when not in actual collision have been treated with some success by Van der Waals; but it soon becomes clear that the "size" of a molecule has no definite meaning, and that the original hard spheres which were supposed to represent the particles of the gas must be replaced by complicated centres of force. Further progress in the determination of the constitution of a gas seems more hopeful when the subject is treated in the light of the results obtained from the study of electrical properties. It seems impossible to derive much more from simple assumptions of the kinetic hypothesis.

A noticeable and altogether admirable feature of Mr. Jeans's treatise is the attention that is paid to experimental work. Of late there has been a tendency to view the kinetic theory as the preserve of mathematicians, and in consequence the physical aspects of the subject have suffered; but while the rigidity of Mr. Jeans's treatment will satisfy the most exacting, much of his book will be of interest to those whose mathematical attainments are of the slightest. His attempt to estimate the relation between the size of a molecule and its chemical constitution and his chapter on planetary atmospheres, suggested by the work of Johnstone Stoney, are remarkable examples of the diverse subjects which are illustrated by so simple a theory.

There are many text-books and treatises in English, and a still larger number in foreign languages, from which the student may derive a knowledge of this branch of physics; but none of them surpasses in clearness and accuracy, none of them equals in completeness, the volume which we now have the pleasure of recommending to all classes of physicists.

ANTHROPOLOGICAL NOTES.

WE are sorry to find recorded in L'Anthropologie the recent deaths of several eminent French anthropologists. M. Girard de Rialle died at Santiago in his sixty-fourth year, having been Minister Plenipotentiary to Chili since 1899. He was author of several linguistic works, as well as of memoirs on almost every other branch of anthropology. His popular volumes on the peoples of Africa and America, and on the peoples of Asia and of Europe, in the "Bibliothèque Utile," passed through several editions. He was looking forward to his retirement from the diplomatic service and to his return to France, with leisure to pursue his anthropological researches; and he was so much admired by his colleagues in the Society of Anthropology of Paris that they elected him a vice-president for the present year, in ignorance that he had already passed away.

M. André Lefèvre, who died in his seventy-first year, was one of the most sympathetic professors in the School of Anthropology. He was author of twenty-five volumes devoted to poetry, art, history, philosophy, linguistics, and the science of religions. Among his poetical works was a translation into French verse of Lucretius. It is worth notice that in dying he left his skull and brain to the School of Anthropology. His principal anthropological works are 'Religion and Mythology,' 'Races and Languages,' 'L'Homme à travers les Ages,' &c.

M. Adrien Arselin died suddenly near Mâcon in his sixty-sixth year. He wrote largely on the subject of the important discoveries at Solutré, and was one of the earliest to announce the discovery of worked flints in the valley of the Nile.

M. Anatole Roujou was formerly professor at the Faculty of Sciences at Clermont Ferrand. He was author of papers on the prehistoric remains in Paris and its environs, a thesis on human races, and several works on the natural history of Auvergne.

M. Ernest d'Acy died at Paris on January 1st, aged seventy-eight. Some years ago he gave his geological collections relating to Paris to the Museum of St. Germain; but he was never able to fulfil his intention of preparing a monograph upon them. He was author of numerous communications on prehistoric subjects.

To L'Anthropologie M. E. Cartailhac and L'Abbé H. Breuil contribute a remarkable paper on the paintings and mural engravings discovered by them in the cavern of Altamira, at Santander, in Spain. The length of the cavern is 280 metres. In a recess to the left, a short distance from the entrance, are large frescoes; further on, a narrow recess adorned with red figures; in the terminal gallery, shield-shaped devices in black, many figures of bison, deer, and other animals, two human figures, apparently with animal heads and uplifted hands, some polychrome representations of bison and deer, and other works of great artistic skill.

The publication which the Royal Society of Northern Antiquaries of Copenhagen has just issued to its foreign members, as for the year 1903, is a memoir by Dr. Sophus Müller on the roads and inhabited places of the Stone Age and of the Bronze Age. The author seeks, by the aid of tumuli, to reconstitute certain prehistoric roads. He applies the process to a portion of Jutland 30 by 94 kilometres, plotting on the Government maps the places where tumuli exist, and deducing therefrom the probable direction of the roads which, presumably, they skirted.

Man begins the new year's issue with a drawing and description, by Mr. C. H. Read, of a necklace of glass beads from West Africa, the first of a classical style that have been found there. The Rev. J. H. Holmes, a local correspondent of the Anthropological Institute for New Guinea, furnishes notes introductory to a study of the totemism of the Elema tribes of the Papuan Gulf. Mr. W. Bazley reports as to the flint implements and flakes found by him in exploring a bushman's cave or rock shelter, 120 feet by 20 feet, in Alfred County, Natal. Mr. Myres sends a very curious photograph of five Italian boys who reluctantly consented to stand against a wall while the photograph was taken. In dread of the evil eye, all but one wriggled, and their likenesses are confused. That one made the familiar protective gesture, and, considering himself sufficiently protected by that, stood still, so that his features come out clearly. Mr. Andrew Lang writes a characteristic paper on his misgivings as an anthropologist, enumerating ten points on which he doubts whether we have not been too hasty in forming conclusions on the vexed question of totemism.

SOCIETIES.

GEOLOGICAL.—Feb. 17.—Annual Meeting.—The officers were appointed as follows: President, Dr. J. E. Marr; Vice-Presidents, Prof. T. G. Bonney, Mr. R. S. Herries, Prof. C. Lapworth, and Mr. H. B. Woodward; Secretaries, Prof. E. J. Garwood and Prof. W. W. Watts; Foreign Secretary, Sir John Evans; Treasurer, Dr. W. T. Blanford.—The following awards of medals and funds were made: the Wollaston Medal to Dr. J. J. H. Teall; the Murchison Medal to Mr. E. J. Dunn, of Melbourne; the Lyell Medal to Dr. Hans Reusch, of Christiania; the Bigsby Medal to Prof. J. W. Gregory; the Wollaston Fund to Mr. H. H. Arnold-Beimrose; the Murchison Fund to Mr. H. L. Bowman; and the Lyell Fund to Mr. E. A. N. Arber and Mr. Walcot Gibson.—The President delivered his anniversary address, which dealt with the classification of the sedimentary rocks.

BRITISH ARCHÆOLOGICAL ASSOCIATION.—Feb. 15.—Dr. W. de Gray Birch, Treasurer, in the chair.—A lecture was given by Mr. Andrew Oliver on 'London, Monastic and Ecclesiastical,' which was illustrated by a large number of lantern views, many being reproductions of scarce engravings of churches and other buildings of old London now demolished. Maps and plans were also shown upon the screen. Mr. Oliver said that fifteen great monasteries, according to Sir Walter Besant, stood within and without the City before they were destroyed in the reign of Henry VIII. They belonged to different religious Orders, but the Austin Canons possessed the greatest number of establishments. All that remains now of these once great monastic buildings consists of the chancel of St. Bartholomew's in Smithfield, the church of St. Helen in Bishopsgate, the nave of the church of the Austin Friars, part of the Charterhouse, the gateway and the crypt of the nave of the Priory of St. John, Clerkenwell, the church of St. Mary Overie, Southwark, and the Temple Church. Of the parish churches by far the greatest number were situated near the river in the south-east. The saints to whom the churches were dedicated were many times repeated. Thus there were eight dedications to All Hallows, seven to St. Michael, five to St. Martin, four to St. Benet, and so on; while in many cases a second name was added, in order to distinguish one parish from another, as in St. Margaret Pattens (so named from the patten-makers who lived in the parish), St. Margaret Moses or Mosses, &c. The largest number of churches were, of course, dedicated to St. Mary or the Blessed Virgin. The particular dedication is sometimes indicated externally, as in St. Laurence, where the weather vane is in the form of a gridiron, or in the golden key of St. Peter's, Cornhill. St. Alphege's is known as St. Alphege-on-the-Wall, as it is built partly upon the old wall of London, which, in fact, forms the north wall of the church.—A short discussion followed, in which Mr. C. Lynam, Mr. Emanuel Green, Mr. C. J. Williams, Dr. Birch, and others participated.—Mr. Patrick, Hon. Secretary, announced that the Congress this year would be held at Reading in July. The date has been fixed for the 17th of that month.

ROYAL NUMISMATIC.—Feb. 16.—Sir Henry H. Howorth, V.P., in the chair.—Mr. F. A. Walters exhibited two London half-groats of Henry VI. of the rosette-masle coinage, described by Hawkins as being in the Longstaffe collection.—Mr. W. Webster showed a gold crown of Edward VI., with the name of his father, Henry VIII., but with the mint-mark E; and a pattern broad of Charles II., by Thomas Simon, without the artist's initial.—Mr. T. Bliss exhibited a half-crown of George I. of 1717, reading on the edge TIRTIO for TERTIO.—Mr. H. Fentiman showed a crown-size copper blank stamped with the obverse and reverse of the half-crown of 1816, and with the edge inscribed; another crown-size copper blank with the edge inscribed with the fifty-eighth year of the reign of George III.; a pattern for a sixpence (?) of George III., with the reverse type, the star of the Garter; and a United States dollar struck to show the contrast between the actual size of the coin in currency and what it would be if a silver standard was adopted.—Mr. H. H. Baldwin exhibited an unpublished half-crown token issued by R. Simpson, Suffolk Street, Pall Mall, having the Prince of Wales's plumes on the obverse, and the letters R. S. in script on the reverse.—Mr. Stewart A. McDowall communicated particulars of a small hoard of silver pennies of Henry I. recently found at Lowestoft. They are of Hawkins types Nos. 255 and 262, and were struck at Bristol, Canterbury, London, Northampton, Norwich, and Oxford.—Mr. R. L. Kenyon read a paper on a recent find of coins at Oswestry. The hoard consisted of 401 silver coins, ranging from Henry VIII. to Charles I.; and of four gold coins of James I. and Charles I. The silver coins were mostly of Elizabeth, James I. and Charles I., those of the last reign consisting of half-crowns, shillings, and sixpences, amongst which were a few new varieties of legend. Amongst the gold coins was a Britain crown of James I., with the mint-mark a coronet, which is new to the series. The hoard was buried in 1643, in the early part of which year there was considerable military activity in Shropshire.—Mr. H. A. Grueber gave an account of William Hole or Holle, who was appointed cuneator to the Royal Mint in the Tower in 1618, and of whom Ruding in his 'Annals of the Coinage of England' makes no mention. As considerable changes took place in the types of the gold coins issued in the following year, 1619, it is most probable that Hole made the new designs for them. He appears to have remained in office till 1633, when he was succeeded by Nicholas Briot.

LINNEAN.—Feb. 16.—Prof. S. H. Vines, V.P., in the chair.—Mrs. H. V. Scott and Mr. C. B. C. Storey were admitted.—Mr. T. V. Hodgson and Miss V. A. Latham, M.D., were elected Fellows.—Four vacancies in the list of Foreign Members were announced, due to the deaths of Dr. Michael Woronin, Dr. Rudolph Amandus Philippi, Prof. Eduard von Martens, and Dr. Bernard Renault.—The following resolution was adopted unanimously: "The Fellows of the Linnean Society in general meeting assembled, February 16th, 1905, express their profound sympathy with Mrs. Howes in her recent bereavement; their admiration for the distinguished career of her late husband, Prof. T. G. Bond Howes, F.R.S.; and their gratitude for the long and energetic service which he rendered to the Society as its Zoological Secretary."—Miss E. Willmott exhibited thirty water-colour drawings of roses by Mr. Alfred Parsons, drawn at Great Warley, for her forthcoming volume on the genus Rosa.—Messrs. H. J. Elwes, J. G. Baker, and H. Groves raised a discussion on some points suggested by the drawings.—The first paper was 'A Revised Classification of Roses,' by Mr. J. G. Baker. He divided the genus into three groups. In the first group primary species were enumerated; in the second, subspecies and varieties; in the third, the principal hybrids. The primary species, as estimated by the author, are 69 in number, and they are classified under 11 groups.—A discussion followed, in which Mr. H. Groves, Mr. H. J. Elwes, the Rev. T. R. R. Stebbing, Mr. W. C. Worsdell, and Miss Willmott joined.—The second paper was entitled 'The Botany of the Anglo-German Uganda Boundary Commission,' the authors being—Polypetalæ, Mr. E. G. Baker; Gamopetalæ excl. Convolvulaceæ, Mr. S. Moore; Convolvulaceæ, Apetalæ, and Monocotyledons, Dr. A. B. Rendle. The Commission commenced demarcating the boundary in the Uganda Protectorate in December, 1902, the Commissioner on the British side being Lieut.-Col. Delmé-Radcliffe. The collections which are the subject of this paper were made by Dr. A. G. Bagshawe, the medical officer. At the point where the Kagera river empties itself into the Victoria Nyanza a standing camp was made for three months. The second collecting centre was Mulema, about 60 miles from the Lake; then Barumba, where a few plants were collected, 15 miles further west. Mulema is in South Ankole, lat 1° S., long. 31° E. The next centre was the district of the high hills of Ruchigga, at an altitude of from 5,500 to 7,800 ft. Two visits were paid to an isolated hill, Irunga, altitude 7,160 ft., which lies at the intersection of the British, German, and Congo boundaries; a visit was paid to the River Rufúa, which drains Lake Karengé. The last important collecting centre was the island of Buruma, opposite the exit of the Nile from the Victoria Nyanza. The collection contains a considerable number (some 50) of novelties, as also of known plants not hitherto recorded from the Uganda Protectorate. For the Angolan plant previously known as Asystasia africana, C. B. Clarke, which also is in the collection, a new genus, Styasasia, is proposed. A considerable percentage of West African coast-plants is a feature of the Protectorate flora as now made known, and worthy of mention is the presence of a small South African element.—In the discussion which followed, Messrs. T. A. Sprague, J. G. Baker, and F. N. Williams engaged.

ZOOLOGICAL.—Feb. 7.—Mr. Howard Saunders, V.P., in the chair.—The Secretary exhibited, on behalf of the Hon. Walter Rothschild, a pair of mounted gorillas. The animals appeared to be nearly adult, and were probably from twelve to thirteen years old. The male was unusually red on the head, while the female displayed no trace of this colour. This difference of coloration confirmed Mr. Rothschild's opinion that Gorilla castaneiceps of Slack was an aberration, and not entitled to specific or subspecific rank.—Mr. F. Gillett exhibited some mounted heads of the Rocky-Mountain goat (Haploceros montanus), with the object of calling attention to a gland lying at the base of each horn, which he believed had not been previously described.—Mr. R. H. Burne exhibited some specimens made from the viscera of the Indian rhinoceros "Jim," that had lately died in the Society's gardens.—A communication from Mr. Nelson Annandale contained a description of two abnormal larvæ of the frog Rana alticola.—Mr. G. A. Boulenger gave an account of a second collection of fishes made by Mr. S. L. Hinde in the Kenya district of East Africa. Examples of five species were contained in the collection, three of which were new to science.—A paper was read from Dr. R. Broom, entitled 'On some Points in the Anatomy of a Theriodont Reptile.'—A communication from Mr. G. L. Bates contained field-notes on the mammals of Southern Cameroons and the Benito.—A communication from Mr. G. T. Bethune-Baker contained an account of a collection of Heterocera from the Fiji Islands. Of the species enumerated eleven were new to science.—Mr. F. E. Beddard read a paper entitled 'A Contribution to the Knowledge of the Arteries of the Brain in the Class Aves.'—Mr. Macleod Yearsley read a paper on 'The Function of the Antennæ in Insects.' After reviewing the literature on the subject, he pointed out that Lowne, in his work on the blowfly, suggested that the antennæ were probably balancing rather than auditory organs. Lord Avebury and Latreille were cited in favour of this view, and the work of Yves Delage on Crustacea and of Clemens upon a moth (Samia cecropia) as confirmatory experiments. The author then gave details of experiments upon thirty wasps (Vespa vulgaris) in which the antennæ had been removed. The results of this mutilation were:—1. Loss of power of flight; 2. Loss of sense of direction; 3. Noticeable slowness in all movements. The conclusion arrived at was that in wasps the antennæ were equilibrating in function. This supported Lowne's surmise, and corroborated the experiments of Clemens on Samia cecropia.

BRITISH NUMISMATIC.—Feb. 15.—Mr. P. Carlyon-Britton, President, in the chair.—It was announced that Queen Alexandra, the Princess of Wales, and the King of Spain had honoured the Society by becoming Royal Members. The Marquis de Soveral and Count de Lalaing were elected Honorary Members. Earl Egerton of Tatton, Sir Alfred Scott-Gatty, Miss M. F. Spindler, and Messrs. F. H. Appleby, J. H. Renton, R. C. Lockett, P. Berney Picklin, E. J. Kafka, L. W. Just, and H. Tansley Witt were elected ordinary Members; and five further applications for ordinary membership were received.—An address was given by Mr. F. Stroud, Recorder of Tewkesbury, on 'Idiotcy of England Numismatically Exemplified.' The speaker explained that the initial term was employed in the classic sense of "do-nothingness," and particularly related to the last few years of the eighteenth century and the early part of the nineteenth, when the Government were apparently unable to pay any attention to the national coinage of silver and copper, owing to their thoughts being entirely occupied by the foreign wars then in progress. The result was that silver and copper tokens arose from private enterprise. With this attitude he contrasted the action of Napoleon in striking coins immediately after his escape from Elba. He also drew attention to the want of artistic merit in the designs of most British coins since the time of Queen Anne.—A discussion followed, in which Messrs. J. B. Caldecott, W. H. Fox, H. A. Parsons, and J. Roskill took part.—Mr. Stroud and Mr. A. H. Baldwin exhibited silver and copper tokens of the period referred to.—Four ancient British gold coins recently found on the beach at Clacton-on-Sea were exhibited by Mr. Philip Laver; some unpublished pennies of William I. and II. by Miss Helen Farquhar and Lieut.-Col. Morrieson; and other exhibits of general numismatic interest were contributed by Messrs. Fitch, Hill, Ogden, Roth, and Taffs.—Presentations to the Society's library and collections were made by Messrs. Hamer, Needes, and Negreiros.

MEETINGS NEXT WEEK.

- MON. Royal Academy, 4.—Lecture by Prof. G. Althison.
 — Institute of Actuaries, 5.—'Changes in Pure Premium Policy. Values consequent upon Variations in the Rate of Interest or the Rate of Mortality, or upon the Introduction of the Rate of Discontinuance,' Mr. G. J. Lidstone.
 — Society of Arts, 8.—'Internal Combustion Engines,' Lecture III., Mr. Dugald Clerk. (Cantor Lecture.)
 — Surveyors' Institution, 8.—'Some Proposals for Improving the Law and Practice of Rating Property,' Mr. H. Griffin.
 — Geographical, 8½.—'The Scientific Results of the National Antarctic Expedition,' Capt. R. F. Scott.
 TUES. Society of Arts, 4½.—'The Manufactures of Greater Britain: I. Canada,' Mr. C. F. Just. (Colonial Section).
 — Royal Institution, 5.—'Some Recent Biometric Studies,' Lecture I., Prof. Karl Pearson.
 — Institution of Civil Engineers, 8.—'Surface-Condensing Plants, and the Value of the Vacuum Produced,' Mr. R. W. Allen.
 WED. Entomological, 8.—'New Species of Diurnal Lepidoptera from Northern Rhodesia,' Messrs. Herbert and Hamilton H. Druce; 'On Three Remarkable New Genera of Micro-Lepidoptera,' Sir G. F. Hampson.
 — Society of Arts, 8.—'The British Art Section of the St. Louis Exhibition,' Mr. Isidore Spielmann.
 — Dante, 8½.—'La Lupa Dantesca,' Rev. W. J. Payling Wright.
 THURS. Royal Academy, 4.—Lecture by Prof. G. Althison.
 — Royal, 4½.
 — Royal Institution, 5.—'Recent Astronomical Progress,' Lecture I., Prof. H. H. Turner.
 — Chemical, 8.—'The Latent Heat of Evaporation of Benzene and some other Compounds,' Mr. J. Campbell Brown; 'The Relation between Natural and Synthetic Glycerophosphoric Acids,' Messrs. F. B. Power and F. Tutin; 'The Reduction of Isophthalic Acid,' Messrs. W. H. Perkin, jun., and S. S. Pickles; 'The Transmutation of Geometrical Isomers,' Mr. A. W. Stewart.
 — Institution of Electrical Engineers, 8.—Discussion on 'Type-Setting by Telegraph,' Mr. Donald Murray.
 — Linnean, 8.—'Zoological Nomenclature, International Rules and Others,' Rev. F. R. H. Stebbing; 'Biscayan Plankton: Part III. The Chalcidæa,' Dr. G. H. Fowler.
 — Antiquaries, 8½.—Election of Fellows.
 FRI. Royal Academy, 4.—Lecture by Prof. C. Waldstein.
 — Philological, 8.—Paper by Prof. Gallancz; 'Notes on Middle-Irish Declension,' Prof. J. Strachan.
 — Royal Institution, 9.—'Recent Advances in Wireless Telegraphy,' Chev. G. Marconi.
 SAT. Royal Institution, 3.—'Archæology,' Lecture II., Mr. D. G. Hogarth.

Science Gossip.

ACCORDING to a Johannesburg newspaper, 200 or more members of the British Association are expected to visit that town when in South Africa for the autumn meeting. The Mayor of Johannesburg has estimated the consequent expenses at about 6,000*l.* The guests are due at Johannesburg on August 28th. Sir David Gill reports that the various South African Governments have responded in a generous way to the call for hospitality to the members, the Cape Government offering 3,000*l.*, the Transvaal and Orange River Colony 2,000*l.*, and Natal 1,000*l.* The railways are also granting special arrangements, and in some cases free fares. Some five or six men of science are said to be going out ahead of the main body to study their special subjects in South Africa before the meeting.

A DISTINGUISHED scholar has passed away at Tokio in Prof. Julius Scriba. Prof. Scriba, who had only attained his fifty-sixth year, was for many years surgeon at the University of Tokio, and was considered one of the foremost operators in Japan. He was engaged at the time of his death on a work dealing with the flora of Japan, and he wrote a number of important articles for the Deutsche Gesellschaft für Natur- und Völkerkunde Ostasiens. He was also an authority on Japanese numismatics, and possessed a very valuable collection of coins.

THE sun will be vertical over the equator about seven o'clock on the morning of the 21st prox. An annular eclipse of the sun will take place on the morning of the 6th, but the central line will be almost confined to the southern part of the Indian Ocean and to South-Eastern Australia; at Adelaide 0.82 of the sun's diameter will be obscured in the early afternoon, at Melbourne and Sydney 0.72 and 0.75 respectively, a little later. The planet Mercury will be at superior conjunction with the sun on the 10th. Venus will be at her greatest brilliancy as an evening star on the 21st, nearly to the east of  $\alpha$  Arietis. Mars rises about midnight in the constellation Libra. Jupiter, like Venus, is in Aries, and the two planets will be in conjunction on the 7th prox., Jupiter about five degrees to the south of Venus. Saturn is on the border of the constellations Capricornus and Aquarius, and does not rise until nearly six o'clock in the morning.

SOME interesting observations of the zodiacal light, obtained by M. Hansky from the summit of Mont Blanc on the nights of the 21st and 22nd of last September, seem to point to the solar origin of that phenomenon, and that it is, in fact, a prolongation of the corona seen to surround the sun during total eclipses. Further observations of the light in localities favourable for the extension of our knowledge are desirable.

WE have received the twelfth and last number of vol. xxxiii. of the Memorie della Società degli Spettroscopisti Italiani, which contains a mathematical paper by Prof. Abetti on the treatment of least squares in two special cases of equations of condition; a note relating to the international commission for the study of the relations between solar and terrestrial phenomena; and an obituary notice of the Neapolitan physicist Emilio Villari, who recently died in the sixty-ninth year of his age.

FINE ARTS

ALBERT DÜRER.

Albert Dürer. By T. Sturge Moore. (Duckworth & Co.)—Mr. Sturge Moore's work must be regarded in a somewhat different aspect from that of any of the other volumes in the "Library of Art," in which it appears, in that his aim has been to give an appreciation of the artist in relation to general ideas. As to matters of fact, he expressly states that the volume embodies no new research. He likewise disclaims the attempt to form any abstract of recent historical and critical researches on the subject, though this latter reservation has not been rigidly held to—indeed, some of the most interesting portions of the book fall under this category. The restriction of the space given to chronological detail has, however, allowed for the exercise of his chief intention. As a result, the book is certainly more readable than any concise summary could well have been. The style is vigorous and picturesque, and, on the whole, dignified, though we cannot but think that a few somewhat pronounced solecisms would have been better omitted. There seems, further, a lack of cohesion between the various parts of the book, and we find ourselves somewhat in the position which Melancthon, in a letter here inserted, describes as being that of the artist himself towards the works of certain theologians: "he used to say that after reading a whole book through he had to consider attentively what idea it was that the author intended to convey." Mr. Moore seems almost to anticipate this difficulty when remarking, as he does, that the lack of general ideas is the British characteristic most apparent to the foreigner. To meet this dearth he contributes liberally in the first part "concerning general ideas important to the comprehension of Dürer's life and art." The first section of this treats of what is implied by the idea of proportion and the use of the term in relation to art, and the second is devoted to a consideration of the influence of religion on the creative impulse. But the former leads by a devious though pleasant path to Whistler's 'Ten o'Clock,' and debates for two pages the fallacy of calling art "a whimsical goddess, and a capricious." In like manner we think the section on the influence of religion treats of Dean Colet with a fulness hardly relevant to the general issue. The opening words of this section may serve as a favourable specimen of the author's style:—

"There are some artists of whom one would naturally write in a lyrical strain, with praise of the flesh, and those things which add to its beauty, freshness, and mystery.....But, quite as naturally, when one has to speak of Dürer, the mind becomes filled with the exhilaration and the staidness that the desire to know and the desire to act rightly beget; with the dignity of conscious comprehension, the serenity of accomplished duty, with all the strenuousness and ardour of which the soul is capable; with science and religion."

This is, in fact, the root of the matter, for as the mind has been filled so has been the utterance, and it would seem that Mr. Moore's interest in the discussion of general questions has caused some temporary forgetfulness as to their relation to Dürer.

With the remaining sections of the work we find ourselves more in sympathy. In the biographical chapters, for which Sir Martin Conway's edition of the 'Writings' and the 'Life' by Prof. Thausing have served as the principal sources, Mr. Moore endeavours, by extracts from the diaries and letters, to tell the life as far as possible in the artist's own words. The comments on these are both apt and sympathetic, erring, if at all, on the side of brevity. We wish that more attempt had been made to trace the facts as to his relations with Jacopo de' Barbari, who, Dürer states, first showed him, when he was still young, the figures of a man and a woman drawn according to a canon of proportions. Dürer's letter to Pirkheimer of February 7th, 1506, seems to suggest that it was in Germany that he first came under the influence of the Venetian painter, who, according to Thausing, was at Nuremberg before 1500. Somewhat elusive, also, is the treatment of the question of Dürer's probable whereabouts during his Wanderjahre, and of that first visit to Venice, mysteriously but unmistakably referred to in the letter of February 7th, 1506, in the words, "The thing that pleased me so well eleven years ago pleases me now no more." These events had brought the pupil of Wolgemut in contact with fresh influences, and already, by 1504, had as their result such work as the 'Adoration of the Magi' in the Uffizi, and the engravings of 'Adam and Eve' and of 'The Nativity.' It is, we think, in his æsthetic judgments that Mr. Moore's work is most satisfactory. These are just and discriminating, and reveal very clearly the line of Dürer's peculiar excellence. In place of the wider claims of much German criticism, we read that "he was not a painter born, in the sense that Titian and Correggio or Rembrandt and Rubens are, or even in the sense that a Jan van Eyck or a Mantegna is.....and he is at best with difficulty able to avoid glaring discords."

In painting he was ever experimenting, swayed by successive influences, most active when in or fresh from Venice and the Netherlands; and as a colourist he was inferior to Italians whom he far excelled in creative power. But as a supreme master of line he has no superior in Western art, and in engraving, as Mr. Moore says, "he early found a style for himself which he continued to develop to the end of his life." Here it was that his genius found its truest and most natural expression. His art was essentially German in character, and the series of wood engravings of 'The Life of Mary' and of 'The Little Passion,' as well as the 'Melancholia,' the 'Death, the Knight, and the Devil,' and other works on metal, are typical, because they embody much of the Reformation spirit, and something of that of the Renaissance. He was the friend of the leading Reformers (and so has preserved for us their lineaments), and sympathized entirely with their views. His journal, written in the Netherlands, shows his intense indignation at the kidnapping of Luther. The piety of his upbringing is reflected in his references to his father and mother, and the impress was indelible. But he was never carried away by the vortex as were the artists who came under the influence of Savonarola. From the beginning to the end of his days he was first and foremost an artist. When Charles V., at his entry into Antwerp, bestowed a mere passing glance on the groups of maidens in mythological attire, Dürer remarks: "Being a painter, I looked about me a little more boldly." As Mr. Moore well says: "We touch the very pulse of the Renaissance in the phrase." Dürer's letters from Venice to Willibald Pirckheimer show that he looked not unkindly upon the philosophy which believes in cakes and ale.

In the letter of October 13th, 1506, he says that in ten days he means to go on horseback to Bologna to learn the secrets of perspective, which some one there was willing to teach him. The testimony of his fellow-townsmen Scheurl proves that this visit took place, and there is much to be said for the theory that Fra Luca Pacioli, the friend and companion of Leonardo, was the teacher to whom he referred. Mr. Moore suggests that on this occasion Dürer may, perhaps, have seen Leonardo himself; but this is hardly possible, because Leonardo went to Milan in May, 1506, and letters which passed between the French Governor and the Florentine Signoria shows that he remained there until the autumn of the following year. Fra Luca Pacioli was, however, a link between the two painters, for Dürer's work on the 'Art of Measurement' corresponds very closely in contents and arrangement with Pacioli's 'De Divina Proportione,' for which Leonardo is believed to have made the drawings. The suggestion, also, that by not remaining in Venice Dürer must have missed the opportunity of seeing the early masterpieces of Giorgione reads somewhat curiously, seeing that Giorgione was in his twenty-eighth year at the time of Dürer's visit. The work which Dürer did during the year at Venice, and soon after his return, shows the presence of various influences, notably those of Antonello da Messina and Giovanni Bellini; but the influence of Giorgione is, we think, clearly perceptible in the small picture of 'Christ on the Cross' at Dresden, and in the 'Portrait of a Lady seen against the Sea' at Berlin. This eclecticism prevents our sharing the author's regret that Dürer did not accept the offers made to him to remain at Venice. His refusal was perhaps due to the instinct of self-preservation; he returned in order to be himself.

The artist's subsequent relations with the Emperor Maximilian, and the naïve eccentricities of the latter, are well and effectively indicated; and emphasis is laid on the excellence of his work in portraiture, especially in the series of masterpieces painted at Antwerp and after his return, when he was fresh from the stimulus of Flemish models.

We may add that the book contains an account of Dürer's writings, selected passages, and an able examination of their teaching; that the illustrations are well selected, and that by permission of the Dürer Society they include four good engravings.

Drawings of Albrecht Dürer. (Newnes.)—This selection is made from two of the three great storehouses of Dürer drawings, the Albertina and the British Museum; there is nothing from the third, the Berlin Museum, nor from any of the minor collections. Though chosen on no apparent principle, and arranged at random as regards date, these forty-eight drawings represent Dürer very fairly, and the reproductions are good for a popular publication at a low price. The splendid 'Green Passion' of 1504, at Vienna, has never been reproduced completely in so handy a form, and that alone makes the volume a desirable possession. Both drawing and engraving of the 'Prodigal Son' are given, and one of the 'Tarocchi,' with Dürer's copy of it; but why a woodcut from the 'Great Passion' should be included it is hard to say, unless to afford Prof. Singer an excuse for abusing it. The introduction which he has written is instructive and interesting, though a little paradoxical, for Prof. Singer holds extreme views as to the decline of Dürer's powers from 1511 onwards, and the inferiority of his more elaborate to his slighter drawings. He suffers with reluctance, as a concession to popular taste, the publication of those marvels of patient finish the 'Hare' and 'Corner of a Meadow.' The 'Felix Hungersperg' and 'St. Paul' are given as fine specimens of pen-drawing, the one style of work in which Dürer is allowed by his critic to have excelled in later years.

Dürer's Dresdener Altar. Von Ludwig Justi. (Leipzig, Seemann.)—Students of Dürer were startled last summer, if not perturbed, by the publication in the leading Prussian art review of an attack on one of Dürer's most celebrated pictures by so distinguished a writer as Prof. Wölfflin, author of 'Die Klassische Kunst.' The authenticity of the Dresden triptych, so far as its pedigree is concerned, is unassailable; that it is an altarpiece commissioned by Frederick the Wise for Wittenberg is certain; and the only points in its history which documents fail to establish are two—certainly of prime importance—the exact date of its origin and the identity of its author. It has long been accepted as a Dürer, exceptional, certainly, in its tempera technique and in the scale of its figures, but explicable as the first-fruits in painting of that zealous study of Mantegna to which a group of drawings dated 1495 bears witness.

Prof. Wölfflin would strike it out of the list of Dürer's works, though he has no other attribution to propose. He bases his objections to it as a Dürer partly on æsthetic, partly on technical grounds, the most important of the latter being the accomplished perspective of the squared stones in the pillars on either side of the central picture and the tiles on the floor. Such accomplishment, he argues, was not within Dürer's grasp at so early a date. The æsthetic difficulties matter less; we do not all see things alike, nor look at Dürer with eyes accustomed to dwell on Italian triumphs and to exact the like perfection from artists of less favoured climes. Nay, more, we may admit some, at least, of the æsthetic difficulties—the faulty composition, the discrepancy in scale between the figures, the detachment of the foremost group from the great empty room behind it; and yet the historic sense may save us from thinking these faults impossible in Dürer, and a sense of justice from ignoring the beauties which redeem such obvious shortcomings.

Fearing lest the authority of the distinguished Berlin professor should lend undue weight to arguments which in themselves would convince no thinking man, the new Director of the Städel Institute, Prof. Ludwig Justi, has come forward as the champion of the Dresden altarpiece. His defence was intended for a magazine article, but it has appeared as a brochure of forty pages, written in the clear and lively style of which he is a master, and with a courtesy and good humour which do not always prevail in German controversy. After destructive criticism levelled at his opponent's arguments, he proceeds to the constructive part of his task, showing what place the picture occupies in Dürer's development, and concludes with an estimate of its historical and its purely artistic value. The vindication of the triptych as a certain and precious work of Dürer's youth is, in our opinion, triumphant, and Prof. Justi's pamphlet is by far the best account of the picture yet written. A minute examination of the canvas out of its frame, which it had not quitted for twenty years at least, enabled him to ascertain the exact amount of the repainting which mars our full enjoyment of the picture. It is satisfactory to know that the figures are hardly affected, but the most important point in its bearing on the present question is the discovery that the jointed pillars and the tiles with their accomplished perspective are wholly the work of the restorer. We cannot go into further details, but it is hardly misrepresenting Prof. Wölfflin to say that after this reply there is nothing left of his arguments against the picture except the fact that he does not like it.

We have spoken hitherto of the picture as a single unit; but one important feature of Prof. Justi's argument is the separation, in point of date, of the centre from the wings. He dates the former 1495–1500, the latter 1508–15. He finds in their addition a deliberate attempt to correct the defects of the central portion: "Wölfflin findet die Engel zu klein, Dürer auch, macht sie grösser.....Wölfflin findet die Bewegung starr, Dürer auch, gibt sie leicht und reich." It is, indeed, amazing that Prof. Wölfflin should appreciate so little the wealth of invention and exquisite workmanship which Dürer has lavished on SS. Sebastian and Antony and their attendant angels. His antagonist is at one with the most recent English critic of the picture, Mr. Sturge Moore, in his generous appreciation of its beauty. Mr. Moore calls it "perhaps the most beautiful of them all [i.e., of Dürer's pictures], at least, so far as the two wings are concerned," while Prof. Justi quotes the opinion of "an important painter of our time," expressed quite seriously, that it is the most beautiful picture in the Dresden Gallery. That is an opinion, of course, that the general public can never be expected to share. Dürer's triptych is essentially a painters' picture, and Prof. Justi appeals to the judgment "der fein empfindenden Menschen," just as Mr. Moore leaves questions of beauty to the decision of "finely touched and gifted men."

The "greater complication of motives" in the central work is well accounted for by the circumstances of Dürer's life. He got his first important commission at the moment when he had just met with Italian art and was going through the crisis which its revelation brought about. He could not deliver the regulation Nuremberg altarpiece, but strained every nerve to do something new and epoch-making, in composition, in technique, in colour. It was a "Sezession eines Einzelnen," the effort of a solitary explorer on a rough and uphill track. For the motive of the Virgin placed behind a ledge on which her sleeping child reposes he was indebted, Prof. Justi conjectures, to some early work of Bellini or his immediate circle. The fruit, the pose and costume of the diminutive angels, and the use of thin tempera combine to suggest the influence of the Paduan-Venetian School. Prof. Justi thinks that Dürer, in accordance with his early habit, drew the figures first and added the background to them, without considering the total effect from the first; he even thinks that he can reconstruct the order of procedure, from the figures to the wall, the background first to left and then to right, and finally the crown and flying angels. That is, perhaps, a little too clever, but our author rarely leaves the safe track of demonstration for the quagmires of surmise; he has a stock of common sense which many of his countrymen might envy.

FANTIN-LATOUR.

THE collection of paintings by Fantin-Latour at Messrs. Obach's gallery contains, for the most part, minor works. Two portraits alone tell something of his power on a larger scale, and the qualities of these are such that one sometimes wonders that he was so little ambitious of large efforts. The portrait of Lady Campbell (No. 10) is one of these larger works. At first sight it is not prepossessing. There is something rather common in the planning of the illumination, so that one feels it might almost have passed without remark on the walls of the Academy; but as one looks longer certain rare qualities of draughtsmanship assert themselves. The strictness of the contour, the mastery shown in the firm and simple curvature of the necklace and the lace collar, the easy pose of the hands really lying relaxed upon the lap, and, above all, the rare sympathy and refinement of the head, make a remarkable, even though it still remains a scarcely beautiful portrait.

Perhaps it was Fantin's lack of invention, together with the intimate and personal character of his perception of certain beauties in nature, that led him to devote himself so largely to small compositions and natures mortes. In such small compositions his imagination is all of one kind; it runs in a narrow channel, and is always closely connected with his feeling for music. These scenes are all in the nature of reminiscences of the opera; but they have always this distinguishing characteristic, that we hear the music even more clearly than we see the stage. The figures, emptily operative as they always are, and without definite character or intention, move in the vague light of a fairy-land which the music calls up. The outlines are mercifully blurred for us by the vague generalized emotion proper to musical expression. Only something of the musician's taste—the taste of the first tenor—finds its way into these fantasias, and the fact is curious, when we consider how scrupulously refined Fantin's attitude is before any actual object. In any case, in such pieces as La Danse (38) we cannot altogether forget the bonbonnière. Nevertheless, it is one of the most brilliant and complete examples of this aspect of Fantin's art that we have seen, and one which shows the great technical resources which he had at command for getting his peculiar effects of irradiating light, saturating even the shadows with its reflected brilliance, and breaking alike the form and the local colour into a tender voluptuous haze. La Baigneuse (2) is more elaborate in colour, but some of the others, such as Venus and Cupid (15), are too cold to carry out the idea satisfactorily.

Really more interesting and more masterly than these are the flower-pieces, among which the earlier examples are incomparably the best. We cannot remember ever to have seen a finer one than the Bunch of Autumn Flowers (25). Here the whites are toned to ivory, the scarlets to a deep burning red, the violets to a strange degraded mauve, and the intense note of the blue salvia becomes mellow and sonorous without losing its special timbre. It is altogether a superb harmony, in which the strangest, most unexpected notes find their perfect accord. In the later works the artist tries constantly to use his colours with greater vividness and frankness, but the medium of oil paint has never yet been found to answer perfectly to such an attempt, and even the brilliant rendering of Hollyhocks (33) is trite and obvious compared to the earlier work.

It is curious, too, how much Fantin's feeling for the quality of paint declined as he went on. The little early portrait of the artist's sister (3) is in this respect unsurpassed in the present exhibition; and by the time he did the Cup and Saucer (8) he no longer had a sufficient command of the material beauty of paint to justify the idea. The conception of colour is exquisite, but it is not expressed in sufficiently beautiful stuff to satisfy one's demands.

Nevertheless, the general impression left on one by this exhibition is that Fantin was always and intensely an artist, with no great gifts of creation, with a comparatively feeble sentiment for the characteristic, but with a delicacy of feeling, a refinement and tenderness which make him a curiously sympathetic personality.

PORCELAIN AT MESSRS. DUVEEN'S.

THE annual exhibition for the Artists' Benevolent Society is held this year at Messrs. Duveen's Gallery instead of at Messrs. Agnew's, and a magnificent display of porcelain is the result. The study of Chinese porcelain is so highly specialized, and has made such rapid advances of late, that the ordinary critic, who is only familiar with the rough classifications of famille verte and famille rose, must be content with a purely external and general appreciation of the beauties of this exhibition.

No one, however, can fail to be struck at once by the extraordinary beauty of the blue-and-white "hawthorn" ginger-jar in Case G, which is not only the most magnificent piece of blue-and-white here, but is even comparable with the celebrated Blenheim jar now in Mr. J. P. Morgan's collection. Unfortunately the lid is not of the same quality as the jar itself.

There are no very early pieces in the collection, which is entirely confined to the Kang Hsi and subsequent periods, when no doubt the manufacture reached its highest technical perfection, though the artist, as opposed to the connoisseur of porcelain, may often find more to delight him in the vigorous draughtsmanship and odd invention of the Ming pieces. It is true that the vast majority of what was once ascribed to the Ming period has, as a result of Dr. Bushell's researches, been transferred to the reign of Kang Hsi, and that many of the pieces here rightly ascribed to the seventeenth century would at one time have been placed at an earlier date.

There are some very fine black "hawthorn" jars in Cases A and B, of which the most striking is, perhaps, the large oviform jar, No. 13, which has, moreover, the very rare peculiarity that the prunus flowers are red instead of white. Another case that produces a splendid effect is that devoted to the powder-blue vases with panels decorated in the famille verte manner. To our thinking, however, those in which the famille verte is replaced by cobalt blue monochrome are decoratively superior—indeed, the panel is a somewhat dangerous device, and a finer effect is produced when, as in one example, there are no white reserves, and the brilliantly coloured figures tell directly against the powder-blue.

Among the examples belonging to the second period here illustrated, that of Yung Chêng, there are one or two beautiful canary-yellow grounds. One, a square-shaped tapering vase with outlines in under-glaze blue, seems to us both unusual and of singular beauty. In the same case is one of the rare wine-pots in the form of a Shou character (20), one of those quaint freaks which in any hands but the Chinese would have turned out disastrously.

To the last great period—that of Chien Lung—belong two enormous pear-shaped jars, Stand C, with very large figures, among which familiar types of Dutch art are apparent, though treated with a courtesy that the artists of their own country never accorded them. It is surprising what elegant curves they take on in the Chinese version without losing their typical characteristics.

On the whole, the famille rose of this last period, especially the eggshell plates with ruby backs, are, from an artistic point of view, disappointing. The potters had arrived at a point where technical elaboration and display had become an irresistible temptation, and the design is usually frittered away to show the artist's indisputable accomplishment. It would be unfair, however, to apply this criticism to some of the exquisite figure designs on the larger vases in Case N, though none of them reaches the level of the drawing on a great vase of the Kang Hsi period which stands on the mantelpiece.

ROMAN BRITAIN IN 1904.

THE year 1904 brought with it comparatively few discoveries of Romano-British remains. At Silchester the fifteenth successive season, and at Caerwent the fifth, were prosperously completed. But little was done on the Wall of Pius, nothing on the Wall of Hadrian; Brough (in Derbyshire), commenced in 1903, lay idle; no new enterprise was initiated; and chance finds, so far as known to me, were somewhat disappointing.

At Silchester the examination of the town baths was completed, and a frontage, entrance, and latrine added to the plan. One notable object emerged. This is a tile, found lying loose in the filling of a cesspit which served the latrine. It bears an abbreviated inscription made by a circular wooden stamp 2½ inches in diameter, which is, read in full: "Nero Claudius Cæsar Augustus Germanicus." Presumably it indicates that some sort of imperial estate existed in Nero's reign at or near to Silchester. But we need not suppose that the baths existed at so early a period. The tile differs widely in texture and form from the other tiles found at Silchester, and it has rather the appearance of a survival from an earlier age. It would, therefore, tend to suggest that the baths were not yet built in Nero's time.

At Caerwent, in Monmouthshire, Mr. Thos. Ashby has uncovered some more dwelling-houses, and also the missing south gate. This gate stands (or stood) just half way along the south wall of the town, 50 feet west from a modern lane which crosses that wall. The north gate, discovered earlier, stands some little distance west from the middle of the north wall. The two gates are, therefore, not vis-à-vis. But they agree in structural details. Each had a single archway of 9 ft. span, and comprised two arches, the one facing the town, and the other facing the country. The space between the arches was presumably roofed, and the battlement-walk of the walls may have crossed above. Each gate, too, was built up at some time when dangers grew many and defenders few. Such blocked-up gates are common enough among Roman remains. In the present case the blocking was the easier, since the north and south gates of Caerwent served no important traffic. The one great road which approached the town, the highway from England to Caerleon and South Wales, ran (as it runs to-day) through the east and west gates. But one wonders who beset Caerwent. Were they Saxons, sailing round like the later Danes, or Irishmen like the children of Dessi, or wandering bodies of marauders in a disorganized country?

Near the south gate Mr. Ashby found an interesting piece. When perfect it consisted of a sculptured group, and an inscribed oblong panel beneath. The sculpture has been destroyed, except the feet of a man and a bird. The panel, roughly a foot high by eighteen inches long, is better preserved, and bears the inscription:—

"deo] Marti Leno [si]lve Ocelo Vellaun. et num- (inibus) Aug(ustorum), M. Nonius Romanus ob immunitat(em) collign. d(onum) d(e) s(uo) d(at), Glabrio(e) et H[om]ulo cos. x kal. Sept(embres)."

"to Mars Lenus or Ocelus....and the Imperial deity, set up by M. Nonius Romanus, in return for exemption from the fees of the Collegium, — dated, the consulship of Glabrio and Homulius, A.D. 152, 23 September."

Mars Lenus, usually called Lenus Mars, was worshipped in the Mosel valley, whence Romanus may have sprung. Mars Ocelus is known only from an altar at Carlisle. The third name Vellaun is less clear. It indicates, I suppose, a Mars Vellaunus. The epithet is new, but the stem (apparently signifying "good") occurs compounded in various Celtic names. Curiously enough, there was a tribe Velauni in the Maritime Alps, and a town Ocelum in the Cottian Alps. The form collign also presents difficulties; but collignium occurs once for collegium, and possibly this may be a second instance. What the guild was which Romanus was allowed to join without fees, it would be idle to guess. The dedicator himself seems to have been in some doubt as to whom he should thank.

Of miscellaneous finds in the rest of England, only a few deserve notice. A Roman villa near Fullerton railway station in Hampshire, previously known, has been further examined, and a fine figured mosaic discovered, taken up, and relaid in a modern house. At Amberley, near Minchinhampton, in Gloucestershire, a hoard of imperial silver coins is stated to have contained an unusual proportion of Greek issues. At Cirencester (Victoria Road) part of a dwelling-house and some striking architectural fragments have been found in sewerage works. They add one more testimony to the prosperity of the place in Roman times. At Kettering, in Northamptonshire, previous finds of coins, &c., have been reinforced by indications of a village or villa on the north side of the town, close to Weekley. Near Hull a villa has been explored at East Harpham. The mosaics (one of which shows an excellent maze) and other finds are to be preserved in the Hull Museum.

On Hadrian's Wall the only discoveries are some centurial stones and an altar found at Benwell: "deo An[t]enocitico sacru[m], coh. i Va[n]gionum, or Vardullorum quib[us] p[rae]est....." ("to the god Antenociticus, erected by the First Cohort of Va.....commanded by....."). The god is named on two older Benwell altars, but nowhere else, and may be a local deity.

On the wall of Pius work has been carried further at Barhill and Rough Castle. At the former, the inner and earlier enclosure, which I conjectured to be the work of Agricola, has proved to be a very interesting little fort, with special defences, which fit in with the remarks of Tacitus ('Agr.' 21) about the strength of Agricola's forts. At Rough Castle, in the "prætorium," or rather "principia" (as an inscription calls it), a depression has been noticed, which may or may not correspond to the vaults in the "principia" of Chesters, High Rochester, and other forts. In general, these vaults have only been found in forts which were at any rate occupied after the end of the second century, and at Chesters there is some reason for assigning the vault to the age of Septimius Severus. Rough Castle was (pretty certainly) evacuated before that time, and the occurrence of a vault there, should it prove correct, would have its special value. F. HAVERFIELD.

SALES.

ON the 21st inst. Messrs. Christie sold the following engravings. After Hoppner: The Duchess of Bedford, by S. W. Reynolds, 162*l*. After Lawrence: Miss Croker, by S. Cousins, 31*l*.; The Countess of Blessington, by the same, 42*l*. After Reynolds: Lady Smyth and Children, by F. Bartolozzi, 27*l*.; Lady Caroline Price, by J. Jones (lot 67), 44*l*.; another copy (lot 113), 25*l*.; Master Crewe as Henry VIII., by the same, 33*l*.; Miss Theophila Palmer, by the same, 89*l*.; Lady Hamilton as a Bacchante, by the same, 34*l*.; Miss Mary Palmer (Lady Thomond), by W. Doughty, 38*l*.; Mrs. Payne Gallwey and Child, by J. R. Smith, 37*l*. After Morland: Paying the Hostler, by S. W. Reynolds, 31*l*.; Contemplating the Miniature, by W. Ward, 199*l*. After E. Dayes: An Airing in Hyde Park, and Promenade in St. James's Park, by Gauguin and Soiron, 38*l*. After Bigg: Lady relieving a Cottager, and Schoolboys giving Charity to a Blind Man, by J. R. Smith, 35*l*. After W. Ward: Lucy of Leinster, by the artist, 52*l*. After Ramberg: Public Amusement, and Private Amusement, by the same, 131*l*. After Romney: Mrs. Robinson, by J. R. Smith, 31*l*. After C. Read: Maria Gunning (Countess of Coventry), by J. Finlayson, 40*l*. After Cosway: Lords George and Charles Spencer, by W. Barney, 39*l*.

The same firm sold on the 18th inst. the following drawings:—H. Allingham, Cottages, Farringford, Isle of Wight, 57*l*. Birket Foster, A Roadside Shrine near Genoa, 120*l*.

Fine-Art Gossip.

TO-DAY is the private view at the Fine-Art Society's rooms of water-colours of Clovelly and other places by Mr. H. L. Norris.

MESSRS. SPINK & SON have opened an exhibition of marine paintings, in oil and water colour, by Mr. Gregory Robinson, the result of a voyage of over a year in a barque; also a collection of statuary.

MR. BAILLIE opens next Saturday a show of water-colours by Mr. James Paterson, and paintings and drawings of Russian Poland by Mr. R. P. Bevan.

YESTERDAY was the private view of a selection of engravings after Reynolds and other masters at Messrs. Colnaghi's Gallery.

To the March number of the Burlington Magazine Mr. Bernhard Sickert contributes an article on the Whistler Memorial Exhibition just open at the New Gallery. The frontispiece is a photogravure, and various pictures are reproduced. Mr. Francis M. Kelly's article on 'A Knight's Armour of the Early Fourteenth Century' includes a transcript of the inventory of Raoul de Nesle, with exhaustive explanatory notes, which are illustrated by a diagrammatic figure exhibiting the whole armour of the period in addition to plates of monumental effigies. Miss May Morris writes on the 'Ascoli Cope,' which Mr. Pierpont Morgan has recently restored to the Italian Government; and Mr. Herbert Cook and Mr. J. Kerr-Lawson respectively identify a well-known portrait by Titian at Dresden as that of Antonio Palma, and a portrait by Lorenzo Lotto at Vienna as that of himself. Mr. Lionel Cust and Mr. Herbert Horne contribute an article on an interesting panel by Gentile da Fabriano in the royal collections, which they prove to be the missing centre of the Quaratesi altarpiece, formerly in the Church of St. Nicholas at Florence. It has hitherto been supposed that the centre of this altarpiece was in the Jarves Collection at Yale; other portions are in the Uffizi at Florence, and the predella is still untraced. M. Philippe Auquier writes on an eighteenth-century painter, Françoise Duparc, and reproduces four of her pictures preserved in the museum at Marseilles, of which he is curator; he quotes a statement of Parrocel, apparently not well founded, that this painter spent a great part of her life in England. Mrs. Carlyle Graham discovers the author of the well-known frescoes at San Gimignano in Ventura of Siena, of whom no other works are known to exist. Among the plates is a reproduction of Fantin-Latour's portrait of Mr. and Mrs. Edwards, now in the National Gallery. The principal editorial article deals with the vacant Directorship of the National Gallery.

THE death, in his sixty-first year, is announced from Graz of the archaeologist Prof. Wilhelm Gurlitt, the Director of the Steyermark Museum. His most important works were 'De Tetrapoli Attica,' 'Alter und Bauzeit des sogenannten Theseion in Athen,' &c.

THE miniatures and snuffboxes of Mr. Albert Jaffé, or a selection from them of those most likely to interest English collectors, will be exhibited from next Wednesday until the close of the week at the Fine-Art Society's Gallery in Bond Street before the whole collection is sold and dispersed. The sale will eventually be conducted by Messrs. H. Lempertz Söhne at Cologne, and will take place at the end of March.

WE referred last week to the large number of purchases and "commandes" of the French Administration of Fine Arts. The Journal Officiel of the 17th inst. published a list of nine "commandes" which have been given to various artists. These are as follows: M. Albert Ardail, an engraved plate of 'Autumn,' by Jordaens; M. William Barbotin, a similar plate of the 'Homme au Gant' of Rembrandt; M. Jacques Beltrand, a drawing, "en vue de la gravure sur bois," of 'L'Après-Midi à Ornans,' by Gustave Courbet; M. Arthur Mayeur, a similar drawing of the 'Fileuses' of Velasquez; M. Abel Mignon, a similar drawing of the portrait of Van Heythuysen of Frans Hals; M. Laguillermie, a similar drawing of the 'Noces de Cana' of Paul Veronese; M. Dejean, the "traduction" in marble of his bas-relief 'Baigneuses'; M. Émile Derré, a similar "traduction" in stone of his statuette of 'Berger,' acquired at last year's Salon; and M. Alfred Lenoir, a model for a monument to the artist Prud'hon, to be carried out in marble and placed in the Jardin de l'Infante at Paris.

THE juries for the various sections of fine arts at the forthcoming Exhibition at Liège have been constituted as follows. Painting: President, M. Bonnat; Vice-Presidents, MM. Roll and Detaille. Sculpture: President, M. Henri Havard; Vice-President, M. de Saint-Marceaux. Architecture: President, M. Vaudremer; Vice-President, M. de Baudot. Engravings: President, M. Léopold Flameng; Vice-President, M. Lepère. Objects of Art: President, M. Roger Marx; Vice-President, M. Morand.

M. ALFRED BOUCHER, the well-known sculptor, has started a scheme which he has had in mind for a long time. He has established an artistic "ruche" at Vaugirard, consisting of a number of "ateliers," grouped round one common pavilion, where for an annual sum of 150 francs the art student will be furnished lodgings, light, and the necessary working tools. For those whose means are slender—and this is generally the case with young artists—M. Boucher's scheme is one deserving attention, and the students will have all the advantage of congenial comradeship, and know pretty nearly the exact cost of their apprenticeship.

BEFORE leaving America, M. André Saglio, the Commissioner of the French Fine-Arts Section of the St. Louis Exhibition, offered, on behalf of M. Rodin, to the Metropolitan Museum of New York a plaster épreuve of the 'Penseur.' He also presented, on behalf of the sculptor, to the St. Louis Museum M. Coutan's 'Porteuse de Pain.' The same museum benefits to the extent of one-half of the Louvre engravings exhibited by the State at the French Pavillon, the other half going to the Hôpital Français at New York.

THE little box called "the reliquary of St. Thomas à Becket," to which reference was made in The Athenæum of last week, was purchased by Mr. Harding, the well-known art-dealer of St. James's Square, for 25,000 francs. It had figured at the previous Germeau sale, held in 1868, when it was bought in by the family at 10,000 fr. At last week's sale the Musée des Arts Décoratifs acquired an exceedingly curious and interesting piece of tapestry, temp. Louis XII., representing 'Dame Rhétorique'; the price paid for it was 18,200 fr.

SOME fine jewels were disposed of on Friday week last at Messrs. Knight, Frank & Rutley's Galleries in Conduit Street. A collet necklace of old diamonds sold for 2,160*l*.; a tiara of white brilliants, 825*l*.; a diamond collarette, 295*l*.; a brilliant pendant, 290*l*.; a ruby and pearl bee-brooch, 102*l*. 10s.; a Maltese cross, 135*l*.; a pearl necklace, 500 gs.; and a small brilliant brooch of Indian stones, 94l. 10s. The sale also included a collection of antique silver, which attracted a crowded attendance.

By invitation of the Mayor of Reading the British Archaeological Association will hold its annual Congress in that town during the week beginning July 17th. Visits will be made to the Roman city of Silchester, Abingdon, Newbury, Wallingford, and many other places in the neighbourhood; and some important papers and descriptions have been promised.

MR. H. ST. GEORGE GRAY intends to publish, and asks for subscribers to, an 'Index to General Pitt-Rivers's Excavations in Cranborne Chase,' 4 vols., and 'King John's House, Tollard Royal,' also in Cranborne Chase. Mr. Gray, who may be addressed at Taunton Castle, Somerset, was assistant and secretary to the General, who had decided to print the index at his own expense, a proposal which his death prevented. The volume will contain (1) a memoir of General Pitt-Rivers, illustrated by two or three portraits; (2) a list of his published works and papers; (3) a short preface to the index; and (4) the index to the five volumes.

MUSIC

THE WEEK.

BECHSTEIN HALL.—Madame Carreño's Pianoforte Recital.
ÆOLIAN HALL.—Herr von Dohnányi's Pianoforte Recital.
QUEEN'S HALL.—Miss Marie Hall's Violin Recital.

MADAME CARREÑO gave a recital last Saturday at the Bechstein Hall, and once again displayed her great powers both as an executant and as an interpreter. But her programme contained nothing new.

The recital of Herr von Dohnányi on the previous afternoon at the Æolian Hall might be dismissed with equal brevity, for here again there was no novelty; but the Hungarian pianist is almost at the outset of his career, and, moreover, he appeared in the double capacity of performer and composer. He repeated his own Variations and Fugue on a Theme by E. G., which he played here five years ago. They are very clever and interesting, though not all equally inspired; the composer, doubtless, in course of time will express himself with more restraint; he is still in the period of storm and stress. His rendering of Brahms's Sonata in F minor, Op. 5, was intellectual, and at the same time strongly sympathetic. He showed not only feeling in his playing, but also fine gradations of tone; his gifts as a virtuoso are great, yet he uses them to high purpose. This he fully demonstrated at a recent Broadwood Concert in Schumann's Fantasia in c, Op. 17. He conquered the great technical difficulties of the work, but not after the manner of a mere pianist, however able. The greatest pianists the world has known, it may be noted, have also been composers. Rubinstein, to name only one, interpreted the great masters as if he were actually creating the music.

Miss Marie Hall, who had not been heard for some time in London, gave a violin recital at Queen's Hall on Tuesday afternoon. She had a magnificent-toned instrument, and was heard to great advantage in sonatas for violin and pianoforte by Bach and César Franck, in Wieniawski's D minor Concerto, and in various short solos. She played not only with skill, purity, and charm, but also with more life than usual. Mr. Egon Petri, the pianist, was heard in three solos, his rendering of a delicate piece by Alkan, entitled 'Cantique des Cantiques,' being much appreciated. Mr. Hamilton Harty accompanied the concerto admirably.

Musical Gossip.

THE first performance in England this afternoon of Richard Strauss's 'Symphonia Domestica' at Queen's Hall, under the direction of Mr. Henry J. Wood, is an event of no ordinary interest. The composer's technical skill is universally recognized, but his works have been variously judged. Wagner's operas and music-dramas were not performed in this country until very many years after their production in Germany, and many unfavourable reports long excited prejudice against them. Strauss, at any rate, has had a better chance. Two years ago we had the Strauss Festival at St. James's Hall, and now we are going to hear this afternoon his latest orchestral work within a year of its production at New York. An advance copy of the programme-book, containing an elaborate analysis by Messrs. Percy Pitt and A. Kalisch, has been forwarded to us, and, so far as we can at present make out, it is a clever satire on programme music. Strauss, it is stated, wishes his music to be judged from an abstract point of view, but considering certain indications in the score, and further details, which certainly seem to be made with the composer's approval, it will be indeed difficult to know how to listen to it. Musicians, however, are much indebted to Mr. Wood for the opportunity of hearing the symphony; also for the great pains which he has taken (seventeen rehearsals, sectional and full) to render all possible justice to the music.

MR. E. DANNREUTHER's manuscript for his volume, 'The Romantic Period,' in the Oxford History of Music, was completed shortly before his last illness, and it is not expected that there will be any difficulty in passing it rapidly through the press.

THE first prize in the Paris Opéra competition for a symphonic work has been awarded to M. Edmond Malherbe. The prize is 1,500 fr., and, moreover, the management undertakes to perform the work. The jury included MM. Reyer, Saint-Saëns, Massenet, Théodore Dubois, Ch. Lenepveu, and Ch. Widor.

FRAU MORAN-OLDEN, who has just died in the Schoeneberg asylum, near Berlin, at the early age of fifty, was a gifted dramatic singer. She was connected with the opera-houses of Frankfurt-on-Maine, Leipsic, and Munich, and also appeared at Bayreuth.

ALFRED DÖRFFEL, honorary librarian of the C. F. Peters Library at Leipsic, and author of a history of the Gewandhaus Concerts, died last month at the advanced age of eighty-four.

THE announcement of stage performances of 'Parsifal' by the Wagner Society at Amsterdam, on June 20th and 22nd, under the direction of Dr. Henri Viotta, has caused a vigorous protest to be issued, signed by Drs. Hans Richter, Richard Strauss, Wolftrum, and Volbach; by Fritz Steinbach, A. Nikisch, Felix Mottl, and many other distinguished music directors and capellmeisters. Dr. Otto Lessmann, however, in an article in the Allgemeine Musik-Zeitung of February 17th, by a quotation from a letter written by Wagner to Angelo Neumann in 1881, shows that even Wagner himself would not have raised objection to the performance of his Weihfestspiel by a Wagner Society which for many years has shown itself worthy of the name it bears.

DR. ROBERT EITNER, the founder in 1868 of the Gesellschaft für Musikforschung, and a valued contributor to the Monatshefte für Musikgeschichte, died at Templin, Uckermark, on January 22nd, aged seventy-two. The last and most important of his publications was the 'Quellen-Lexicon' in ten volumes. In referring to that work the writer of the article 'Eitner,' in the first volume issued of the new edition of the Grove 'Dictionary of Music and Musicians,' states, and justly, that "though not absolutely faultless, it marks a great advance, in trustworthiness of information, over anything else of the kind."

PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK.

SUN. Concert Club, 3.30, Bechstein Hall.
— Sunday Society Concert, 3.30, Queen's Hall.
— Sunday League, 7, Queen's Hall.
MON. The Grimston Quartet, 3, Bechstein Hall.
— Emil Sauer's Pianoforte Recital, 3, Queen's Hall.
— Subscription Concert, 8.30, Æolian Hall.
— Mr. Charles Williams's Orchestral Concert, 8.45, Queen's Hall.
TUES. Miss Sunderland and Mr. F. Thistleton's Concert, 4, Broadwood's.
— Miss Stella Maris's Vocal Recital, 8.15, Bechstein Hall.
WED. Ballad Concert, 3, St. George's Hall.
— M. Victor Maurel's Recital, 8.30, Bechstein Hall.
THURS. Miss Ada Barnett and Mr. E. Bloxam, Vocal and Violin, 8, Steinway Hall.
— Broadwood Concert, 8.30, Æolian Hall.
SAT. Señor and Madame Sobrino's Piano and Song Recital, Bechstein Hall.
— Chappell's Ballad Concert, 3, Queen's Hall.
— Albani Concert, 3½, Crystal Palace.

DRAMA

THE WEEK.

AVENUE.—'Mr. Hopkinson,' a Farce in Three Acts. By R. C. Carton.

R. C. CARTON does not aim high, but he rarely fails to hit his mark. Among his gifts may be accounted invention, one of the most infrequently accorded of dramatic possessions. This he can claim in no superabundant degree, but it is generally evident and useful. It is accompanied, moreover, by a neatness and appropriateness of speech that is better and rarer than mere verbal coruscations. His 'Mr. Hopkinson,' produced on Tuesday night at the Avenue, is a slight and unambitious piece, neither particularly shapely nor thoroughly convincing, but fresh in motive, well written, and distinctly mirthful in action. Though announced judiciously as a farce, its characters, with one exception, belong to comedy; and though its action is at times preposterous, it may always be swallowed with a wry face. In his 'Ruy Blas' Victor Hugo essayed to show over what disproportion of rank love can triumph, and presented the queen of the proudest and most conservative country in Europe yielding herself to a man who had worn a livery, and whose proper function it was to carry up the wood to her chamber. In a similar fashion, with not more than a touch of burlesque, we are shown how rank will not seldom stoop in order to regild its coronet. Not wholly conclusive is the experiment, since Lady Thyra, the daughter of an earl and the niece of a duchess, refuses in the end to carry out her vile bargain, and chooses to run away with and marry an early love, instead of eloping with him after her marriage with another, which is the course of procedure anticipated from her by her friends. In fact, however, a union between Lady Thyra Egglesby and Samuel Hopkinson would be more outrageous than that between Ruy Blas and his royal mistress. In this respect, then, R. C. Carton's piece justifies its designation of farce. What sort of man may inspire a woman with passion we will leave to be decided between Kings Schahriar and Schahzaman. In the present case there is no pretence of either passion or affection—nothing but repulsion too strong in the end to be surmounted. Cleverly as he is drawn, Samuel Hopkinson belongs entirely to farce. He is an inconceivable and preposterous cad. Characters such as he may, doubtless, be found in the world, may, perhaps, be common. He is none the less impossible in the situation in which he is placed. Not only could no duchess dream of admitting him to her intimacy, and no Lady Thyra regard him for an instant as a possible lord; the hungriest and most impecunious young sprig of nobility could not for one second accept him as an associate. It is, indeed, futile to urge the point further. A man whose get-up would scandalize an inebriate militia-man is admitted as bridegroom in a ducal residence. Satire so severe upon the manners and morals of the English aristocracy has rarely been given to the world. Accepted, as it must be, as frank and outrageous farce, the whole is clever and amusing. If we have been dealing too seriously with details, it is because the whole runs so near comedy that we are disposed to regret that we may not class it as such. The principal characters are excellently played, the piece affording fine opportunities to Mr. Kerr, Mr. Kemble, Miss O'Malley, Miss Hughes, and Miss Compton. If the part of Mr. Hopkinson, enacted by Mr. James Welch, is exaggerated and caricatured, the exigencies of the play demand that it shall be so.

Dramatic Gossip.

At the Coronet Theatre Mr. F. R. Benson began on Monday, with a presentation of 'Macbeth,' a series of "classic performances," which are to be spread over four weeks, and to involve an almost daily change of programme. Excess of modesty does not, as a rule, distinguish efforts at the revival of the legitimate drama. The present experiment might well cow a Garrick when he could boast a company including the best feminine talent of the day, and as many actors of mark as could stand his pretensions, and bow to his ascendancy—when he could within a few days replace Mrs. Cibber as Sigismunda or Ophelia with Mrs. Clive as Clarinda, or Mrs. Pritchard as Merope, and had half a dozen more competent actresses on whom in case of emergency to fall back. Not without interest is an experiment such as is essayed, though its value is limited by the fact that there has at no period been on the stage a couple of actors who could do precisely what is essayed by Mr. and Mrs. Benson in playing the principal parts in so many masterpieces. 'Macbeth,' in which Mr. Benson was the Thane and Mrs. Benson Lady Macbeth, was played in very equitable fashion all round, and was received with much favour. Other pieces that have been seen consist of 'Hamlet,' 'King Lear,' and 'The School for Scandal.'

'MASKERADE,' a four-act play of Herr Ludwig Fulda, given at the Great Queen Street Theatre, is the most uncompromising satire of modern days upon the Prussian bureaucracy. It is a work of much freshness and originality, the heroine of which, Gerda Hübner, is an emancipated woman of the same type as Magda in Sudermann's 'Heimat.' Some difficulty is experienced in accepting the pictures presented as in any full sense characteristic of social life in Germany; but it is not from England that protest about the matter should proceed. Little seductiveness or charm attaches to the illicit relationship which is exhibited, and this may perhaps be held to speak for the fidelity of the pictures and the serious nature of the revolt indicated. Fräulein Else Gademann acted with her customary force as the heroine, and the general interpretation was satisfactory.

THE season of German plays will conclude on March 18th. It has been more successful of late than it was at the outset; but the interest it inspires does not extend far beyond the German world in London. The reappearance of Frau Rosa Bertens is fixed for Monday next.

'HAMLET' will in April replace at the Adelphi 'The Taming of the Shrew,' Mr. Asche appearing as Hamlet, and Miss Lily Brayton as Ophelia. Another Shakspearean revival, which need not be expected till the close of the year, is 'As You Like It.' During the absence on tour of Mr. Asche and Miss Brayton, 'Dr. Wake's Patient,' a four-act drama by Messrs. W. Gayer Mackay and Robert Ord, given in September last at the Shakespeare Theatre, Liverpool, will be played at the Adelphi.

On the 17th inst. Sir Henry Irving unveiled in Pierpoint Street, Bath, with which city the actor was closely associated, a tablet erected by the local council to Quin.

'MRS. DERING'S DIVORCE' has been withdrawn from Terry's Theatre, and the house is now closed.

AN adaptation by Mr. Oswald Brand of 'Dombey and Son' is shortly to be expected at a West-End theatre.

MR. OTHO STUART has extended over the next three years his management of the Adelphi Theatre, which he has held since August.

LEWIS BALL, who died at Teignmouth on the 14th inst., had a long record as an actor. Born at Builth, in South Wales, in October, 1820, he acted in the North. At Sadler's Wells under Phelps he was Fluellen in 'King Henry V.' He was seen in London in parts such as Launcelot Gobbo, Lord Sands, Peter in 'Romeo and Juliet,' Grumio, Moses, Trinculo, First Grave-digger, and Costard. He also appeared as Sir Toby Belch, Sir Anthony Absolute, Lord Duberley, and Sir Peter Teazle. He had not for some years played in London, and in 1898 he retired from the stage.

MR. WILLARD has revived at the Knickerbocker Theatre, New York, 'The Optimist,' a rendering by Mr. L. N. Parker of 'La Châtelaine' of M. Alfred Capus. On this, which first saw the light at the Chestnut Street Opera-House, Philadelphia, on February 16th, 1903, has now been bestowed the title of 'The Brighter Side.'

MISS MAUDE ADAMS has obtained in New York a conspicuous success as the heroine of the 'Op o' me Thumb' of Messrs. F. Fenn and Price.

'LA RETRAITE,' a rendering by MM. Remon and Valentin of 'Zapfenstreich,' by Herr F. A. Beyerlein, has been given at the Paris Vaudeville. The dénoûment was held brutal, but the play was received with favour. Mlle. Mellot, as the heroine, and M. Lerand, as her father, by whom, after her loss of her honour, she is slain, were received with great favour. The original was seen in London at the Royalty on January 7th of last year.

ERRATA.—P. 214, col. 2, second quotation, in first line, for "town" read tower; in last line but one, insert never after "had."

TO CORRESPONDENTS.—W. H. S.—A. L.—C. S.—E. W.—received.

I. Z.—E. H. H.—Not suitable for us.
A. C. M.—We cannot carry this further.
No notice can be taken of anonymous communications.

THE ATHENÆUM

PRICE THREEPENCE.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION BY POST.

To all parts of the United Kingdom.

|                      |     |     |     |     |    |   |
|----------------------|-----|-----|-----|-----|----|---|
| For Twelve Months... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 15 | 3 |
| For Six Months...    | ... | ... | ... | ... | 7  | 8 |

For all Countries within the Postal Union.

|                      |     |     |     |     |    |   |
|----------------------|-----|-----|-----|-----|----|---|
| For Twelve Months... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 18 | 0 |
| For Six Months...    | ... | ... | ... | ... | 9  | 0 |

JOHN C. FRANCIS,

Athenæum Office, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

MESSRS. BELL'S NEW BOOKS.

COMPLETE CATALOGUE POST FREE
ON APPLICATION.

THIRD AND CHEAPER EDITION. 6s. net.

THE ART OF J. McNEILL WHISTLER. An Appreciation.

By T. R. WAY and G. RAVENSCROFT DENNIS.

With numerous Illustrations.

"If anything were needed to give the world a just view of one whom it so entirely misunderstood in life, it is supplied by the admirably complete, sympathetic, and richly illustrated study of Messrs. Way and Dennis."

Mr. A. G. GARDNER in the Daily News.

NEW EDITION, REVISED. Crown 8vo, 5s. net.

CITIES and SIGHTS of SPAIN. A Handbook for Travellers. By Mrs. A. LE BLOND (Mrs. Main). With numerous Illustrations and Maps. With a Note by Mr. G. F. CHAMBERS, F.R.A.S., on the coming Total Eclipse of the Sun.

CHEAPER REISSUE. Demy 8vo, 7s. 6d. net.

The WAR of the SUCCESSION in SPAIN during the Reign of Queen Anne, 1702-1711. Based on Original Manuscripts and Contemporary Records. By Col. the Hon. ARTHUR PARNELL, R.E.

SECOND EDITION, REVISED. Demy 8vo, 6s. net.

JAPANESE ILLUSTRATION. By EDWARD F. STRANGE, M.J.S. With 88 Illustrations and 8 Coloured Plates. "A book for the art-lover and collector. A detailed and fully illustrated study of Japanese wood-cutting and colour printing."—Bookman.

BELL'S MINIATURE SERIES OF GREAT WRITERS.

Pott 8vo, illustrated, cloth, 1s. net; or in limp leather, with Photogravure Frontispiece, 2s. net.

NEW VOLUME.

JOHNSON. By John Dennis.

BELL'S MINIATURE SERIES OF MUSICIANS.

Pott 8vo, illustrated, cloth, 1s. net; or in limp leather, with Photogravure Frontispiece, 2s. net each.

NEW VOLUME.

SCHUMANN. By E. J. Oldmeadow.

A CHEAPER EDITION OF WHEATLEY'S PEPYS.

The DIARY of SAMUEL PEPYS, M.A. F.R.S. Transcribed from the Shorthand MS. in the Pepysian Library, Magdalene College, Cambridge, by the Rev. MYNORS BRIGHT, M.A. With LORD BRAYBROOK'S Notes. Edited, with Additions, by HENRY B. WHEATLEY, F.S.A. In 8 vols. post 8vo, 5s. net each.

[Vols. I.-VII. now ready. Vol. VIII., March 1.

** This reprint contains the whole of the text of the Diary, and the Notes and Index, as given in the ten-volume edition, the volume entitled 'Pepysiana' only being omitted.

"Mr. Wheatley has easily distanced all previous editors, both in the completeness of his matter and his annotations, and there is little doubt that this new classic edition of a classic will be a great success."—Athenæum.

THE YORK LIBRARY.

A NEW SERIES OF REPRINTS ON THIN PAPER.
Small 8vo, 2s. net in cloth, and 3s. net in leather.

NEW VOLUMES.

CERVANTES' DON QUIXOTE. Motteux's Translation, Revised. With Lockhart's Life and Notes. 2 vols.

EMERSON'S WORKS. Edited and Collated by GEORGE SAMPSON. Vol. IV. Containing Miscellaneous Pieces.

COLERIDGE'S TABLE TALK and OMNIANA. Arranged and Edited by T. ASHE, B.A.

DRAPER'S HISTORY of the IN- TELLECTUAL DEVELOPMENT of EUROPE. 2 vols.

The THOUGHTS of MARCUS AURELIUS ANTONINUS. Translated by GEORGE LONG, M.A. With an Essay on Marcus Aurelius by MATTHEW ARNOLD. [Ready March 1.

Others to follow.

London: GEORGE BELL & SONS,
Portugal Street, Lincoln's Inn, W.C.

SWAN SONNENSCHN & CO.

THE PRINCIPLES OF PHYSIOLOGICAL PSYCHOLOGY.

By Prof. W. WUNDT.

A Translation of the Fifth and wholly Rewritten (1902-3) German Edition by Prof. E. B. TITCHENER, M.A.

In 3 vols. Vol. I. with 156 Illustrations, demy 8vo, 12s.

"Anything more finished and judicial than Wundt's description of the anatomy of the brain we have never met anywhere."—Academy.

"Prof. Titchener has done his part of the work with notable success."—Scotsman.

A PHILOSOPHICAL INTRODUCTION TO ETHICS.

By W. R. BOYCE GIBSON. Crown 8vo, 2s. 6d. net.

"An admirable book."—Education.

"Mr. Gibson's book ought to be read, weighed, and considered by all who are interested in the latest philosophical controversy."—Guardian.

THE GROWTH OF THE ENGLISH MANOR.

By Prof. P. VINOGRADOFF. Demy 8vo, 10s. 6d.

"Seems likely at once to take rank as a leading authority upon its subject."—Scotsman.

"Prof. Vinogradoff's method and the mastery of the details of his subject combine to produce a notable book."—Academy.

A NEW EDITION OF PREMATURE BURIAL.

By WALTER R. HADWEN, M.D.

Being a New and Revised Edition of Mr. William Tebb and Col. Ed. Terry Vollum's Book. Crown 8vo, 6s.

NEW EDITIONS OF

HANDBOOK OF SYSTEMATIC BOTANY.

By Dr. E. WARMING.

Edited by M. C. POTTER, M.A., Professor of Botany in the Durham College of Science.

610 Illustrations. Demy 8vo, 15s.

AN ELEMENTARY TEXT-BOOK OF BOTANY.

By Dr. SIDNEY H. VINER, M.A. D.Sc. F.R.S.,
Shendian Professor of Botany in the University of Oxford.

483 Illustrations. Demy 8vo, 9s.

THREE NEW VOLUMES OF THE "SOCIAL SCIENCE SERIES."

Each crown 8vo, 2s. 6d.

THE HISTORY OF THE ENGLISH CORN LAWS.

By J. S. NICHOLSON, M.A. D.Sc.

THE PHILOSOPHERS AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION.

By P. A. WADIA,

Professor of History and Political Economy, Gujarat College, Ahmedabad.

THE BIOLOGY OF BRITISH POLITICS.

By CHARLES H. HARVEY.

NINTH EDITION, ENTIRELY REWRITTEN.

SCHOOL HYGIENE.

By A. NEWSHOLME, M.D. F.R.C.P., and W. C. C. PAKES, D.P.H.

With a Chapter on 'Eyesight,' by JAMES KERR, M.D.

311 pages, with 43 Illustrations, 3s.

A NEW EDITION OF

FRANCES POWER COBBE'S AUTOBIOGRAPHY.

1 vol. crown 8vo, 7s. 6d.

THE FOURTH DIMENSION.

By C. H. HINTON, Author of 'Scientific Romances,' &c.

Illustrated. Crown 8vo, 4s. 6d.

"Prof. Hinton has done well to attempt a treatise of moderate size, which shall at once be clear in method and free from the technicalities of the schools."—Pall Mall Gazette.

SOME POPULAR PHILOSOPHY.

By GEORGE H. LONG. 2s. 6d.

"Many will be glad to have the opportunity of getting hold of a book which treats high topics in a way that can be appreciated without much previous training in mental gymnastics."—Notts Guardian.

A DICTIONARY OF BATTLES.

By T. B. HARBOTTLE,

Author of 'Dictionary of Quotations' (Classical), 'Dictionary of Historical Allusions,' &c. Small demy 8vo, 7s. 6d.

FAMOUS SAYINGS AND THEIR AUTHORS.

By E. LATHAM, Author of 'Idiomatic Phrases' (French), &c.

Small demy 8vo, 7s. 6d.

THE SOUND OF A VOICE THAT IS STILL.

Being Selections from the Writings of the late CLIFFORD HARRISON.

Selected and Arranged for daily use by A. G.

Pott 8vo, leather, 2s. net; cloth, 1s. 6d. net.

HINTS TO RECITERS.

By the late CLIFFORD HARRISON.

Pott 8vo, leather, 2s. 6d. net; cloth, 2s. net.

GOD AND THE AGNOSTICS:

Or, the End of the Age of Faith.

By AN ENGLISHMAN. 6s.

"A book of some originality. His work is largely critical."—Times.

THE SCIENTIFIC BASIS OF MORALITY.

By G. GORE, LL.D. F.R.S.

Author of 'The Scientific Basis of National Progress,' &c.

Pp. viii-600, 10s. 6d. net.

FROM ADAM'S PEAK TO ELEPHANTA

(Ceylon and India).

By EDWARD CARPENTER.

New and Cheaper Edition. In crown 8vo, with the Original Illustrations, 4s. 6d.

THE BIBLE FROM THE STANDPOINT OF THE HIGHER CRITICISM.

By RAMSDEN BALMFORTH, Author of 'The New Reformation,' &c. 3s. 6d.

THREE NEW SIX-SHILLING NOVELS.

WHEN THE WORLD WENT WRY.

By M. F. WILSON,

Author of 'When the Swallows Come Again,' 'How the Dreams Came True,' &c.

"Well written, and in many parts exceedingly graceful."—Glasgow Herald.

"A story that all through controls attention."—Dundee Advertiser.

B E N D I S H.

By WILLIAM ST. CLAIR, Author of 'Prince Baba and his Wives.'

A QUEEN OF UNREST.

By HARRY TIGHE, Author of 'Archie Wynward.'

READY SHORTLY, VOL. II. OF

THE STUDENT'S TEXT-BOOK OF ZOOLOGY.

By ADAM SEDGWICK, M.A.,

Fellow and Lecturer of Trinity College, Cambridge. Demy 8vo, 18s.

NOTES AND QUERIES.

GENERAL INDEXES.

THE FOLLOWING ARE STILL IN STOCK:—

|                    | £. | s. | d. |
|--------------------|----|----|----|
| GENERAL INDEX,     |    |    |    |
| FOURTH SERIES ...  | 3  | 3  | 0  |
| GENERAL INDEX,     |    |    |    |
| SIXTH SERIES ...   | 0  | 6  | 0  |
| GENERAL INDEX,     |    |    |    |
| SEVENTH SERIES ... | 0  | 6  | 0  |
| GENERAL INDEX,     |    |    |    |
| EIGHTH SERIES ...  | 0  | 6  | 0  |

For Copies by post an additional Three-pence is charged.

JOHN C. FRANCIS,
Notes and Queries Office,
11, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

W. C. BENNETT'S POEMS.

The GOLDEN LIBRARY.—Square 16mo, cloth, 2s.

SONGS FOR SAILORS.

Morning Post.—"Spirited, melodious, and vigorously graphic."
Daily News.—"Very spirited."
Pall Mall Gazette.—"Really admirable."
Morning Advertiser.—"Sure of a wide popularity."
John Bull.—"Very successful."
Metropolitan.—"Instinct with patriotic fire."
Illustrated London News.—"Right well done."
News of the World.—"There is real poetry in these songs."
Mirror.—"With admirable felicity he embodies national sentiments and emotions which stir the hearts of the people."
Echo.—"These songs are literally written for sailors, and they are precisely the kind of songs that sailors must enjoy."
Nonconformist.—"These songs bear a true literary mark, and give out the genuine ring."
Leeds Mercury.—"There is no one nowadays who can compete with Dr. Bennett as a popular song-writer. In his volume of sea songs we find the qualities which must secure its success."
Liverpool Mail.—"Dr. Bennett has devoted his lyrical powers to a noble object in this comprehensive yet inexpensive work. This gem deserves to be patronized not only by our entire Royal Navy, but by all our Sailors' Homes and all our Mercantile Marine Associations."
Examiner.—"Full of incident and strongly expressed sentiment, and having a simple, dashing, musical roll and movement that reminds us of some songs that are favourable with all sailors, and the touches of humour he introduces are precisely of the kind that they will relish."
Scotsman.—"Dr. Bennett's heart is thoroughly in his work....All spirited and vigorous. There is a healthy, manly, fresh-air dash about them which ought to make them popular with the class for whose use and pleasure they are designed."

Chatto & Windus, 111, St. Martin's Lane, W.C.

In 2 vols. crown 8vo, with 2 Portraits, 24s.

JOHN FRANCIS and the 'ATHENÆUM.'

A Literary Chronicle of Half a Century.

By JOHN C. FRANCIS.

Macmillan & Co., Limited, London.

"I'll note you in my book of memory."—SHAKESPEARE.

S E C C O T I N E

S E C C O T I N E

S E C C O T I N E

Sticks everything.

FREE SAMPLE

From the Sole Proprietors:

MC'AW, STEVENSON & ORR, LIMITED, Belfast and London.

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

The best remedy for
ACIDITY of the STOMACH, HEADACHE, HEARTBURN, GOUT,

And INDIGESTION.

And Safest Aperient for Delicate Constitutions,
Ladies, Children, and Infants.

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

NOW READY, price 10s. 6d. net.

THE NINTH SERIES
GENERAL INDEX

OF

NOTES AND QUERIES.

With Introduction by JOSEPH KNIGHT, F.S.A.

This Index is double the size of previous ones, as it contains, in addition to the usual Index of Subjects, the Names and Pseudonyms of Writers, with a list of their Contributions. The number of constant Contributors exceeds eleven hundred. The Publisher reserves the right of increasing the price of the volume at any time. The number printed is limited, and the type has been distributed.

Free by post, 10s. 11d.

JOHN C. FRANCIS, Notes and Queries Office, Bream's Buildings, E.C.

AUTHORIZED TO BE USED BY BRITISH SUBJECTS.

THE NATIONAL FLAG,

BEING

THE UNION JACK.

COPIES OF

NOTES AND QUERIES

FOR JUNE 30, 1900,

Can still be had, containing an account of the Flag, with Coloured Illustration according to scale.

JOHN C. FRANCIS, Notes and Queries Office, Bream's Buildings, E.C.

CLIFFORD'S INN.

For view of CLIFFORD'S INN, taken in 1892, see

NOTES AND QUERIES, April 2, 1892.

The same Number also contains Sketches of the ROLLS CHAPEL, OLD SERJEANTS' INN, the GATEWAY, LINCOLN'S INN, &c.

Price 4½d., free by post, of

JOHN C. FRANCIS, Notes and Queries Office, Bream's Buildings, E.C.

FROM DUCKWORTH &amp; CO.'S LIST.

THE CHILD.

By KARIN MICHAËLIS. A Psychological Study of the Child Mind.

Translated from the Swedish by JOHN NEILSON LAURVIK.

Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d.

GOSSIP.

By BENJAMIN SWIFT, Author of 'In Piccadilly.'

Crown 8vo, 6s.

DUCKWORTH &amp; CO. 3, Henrietta Street, W.C.

TENTH EDITION, price Two Shillings.

CELESTIAL MOTIONS:

A Handy Book of Astronomy.

Tenth Edition. With 3 Plates.

By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

"Well known as one of our best introductions to astronomy."—Guardian.

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON &amp; CO., LIMITED, St. Dunstan's House, Fetter Lane, E.C.

SEVENTH EDITION, fcap. 8vo, cloth, price Sixpence.

REMARKABLE ECLIPSES:

A Sketch of the most interesting Circumstances connected with the Observation of Solar and Lunar Eclipses, both in Ancient and Modern Times.

By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON &amp; CO., LIMITED, St. Dunstan's House, Fetter Lane, E.C.

TWELFTH EDITION JUST OUT, price Sixpence, cloth.

REMARKABLE COMETS:

A Brief Survey of the most interesting Facts in the History of Cometary Astronomy.

By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON &amp; CO., LIMITED, St. Dunstan's House, Fetter Lane, E.C.

SECOND EDITION, fcap. 8vo, price Fourpence.

NEW TESTAMENT CHRONOLOGY:

The Principal Events Recorded in the New Testament, Arranged under their Probable Respective Dates.

By WILLIAM THYNNE LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.,

Associate of King's College, London; Lay Reader in the Diocese of Rochester.

Author of 'Celestial Motions,' 'Remarkable Comets,' 'Remarkable Eclipses,' 'Astronomy for the Young,' &amp;c.

London: SAMUEL BAGSTER &amp; SONS, LIMITED, 15, Paternoster Row.

THE LIFE & LETTERS
OF R. S. HAWKER
(VICAR OF MORWENSTOW).By his Son-in-law, C. E. BYLES, with numerous Illustrations, including a Water-Colour Portrait by the EARL of CARLISLE, Lithographs by J. LEY PETHYBRIDGE, &c.
Demy 8vo, 21s. net.DAILY CHRONICLE.—"This admirable memoir..... the definitive life of Hawker..... We think of him not as a theologian, but as a poet, a writer, and, above all, as a man who lived—a burly, humorous, domineering, full-blooded, pugnacious, erratic, lovable personality, a child who never grew up, a character that an Elizabethan dramatist would have gloried in."DAILY NEWS.—"Here at length is the authentic life—the record, mainly in his own letters, of one of the most fascinating, wayward, independent personalities of the nineteenth century..... The comparison is, indeed, with Carlyle..... Each possessed a spiritual vision denied to the common crowd; each mingles passages of eloquence and lamentation with outbreaks of fury and a shaggy, boisterous humour."PALL MALL GAZETTE.—"There is scarcely a page of this book that does not tingle with the ruddy and exuberant vitality of one of the most living men of his day. .... In all his letters he shows that command of nervous, straightforward English which makes his prose such good reading. Those who want the portrait of Hawker the man must, in future, come to Mr. Byles's work. Hawker the poet..... will live long in the memory of Cornwall and of England."MORNING POST.—"Gratitude is distinctly due to Mr. Byles for his new life of his father-in-law..... (Hawker's Letters) are almost all quite admirable—humorous, sane, and couched in the directest of English..... There are many excellent illustrations..... Mr. J. Ley Pethybridge has the very spirit of the West Country."BIRMINGHAM POST.—"It is a fitting memoir of one of the most remarkable clerical figures of the nineteenth century."SCOTSMAN.—"Mr. Byles's book will at once take its place as the authoritative and standard life of Hawker."WITH THE PILGRIMS
TO MECCA.The Great Pilgrimage, A.H. 1318, A.D. 1902. By HADJI KHAN, M.R.A.S., and WILFRID SPARRO. With an Introduction by Prof. VAMBERY, and many Illustrations.
Demy 8vo, 12s. 6d. net.DAILY TELEGRAPH.—"One of the most enlightening and captivating books about the East ever written."THE POEMS OF WILLIAM WATSON.

Edited and Arranged, with an Introduction, by J. A. SPENDER. 2 vols. with Portrait and many New Poems, crown 8vo, 9s. net.

TIMES.—"William Watson is, above all things, an artist who is proud of his calling and conscientious in every syllable that he writes. To appreciate his work you must take it as a whole, for he is in a line with the high priests of poetry, reared, like Ion, in the shadow of Delphic presences and memories, and weighing every word of his utterance before it is given to the world."SPECTATOR.—"The two volumes before us..... will, we are sure, be joyfully welcomed by the poet's numerous admirers. There is a pleasure in the possession of a complete edition of a great writer's works..... We must apologize for quoting so copiously, but the book is so full of beautiful things that, in his pleasure of seeing them all together, the critic is irresistibly tempted to take them out and remind his readers of them separately."THE TWENTIETH CENTURY CHILD.

By EDWARD H. COOPER. Crown 8vo, 6s.

The COUNTESS OF WARWICK in the DAILY MAIL.—"This delightful book is written as few men, I imagine, can write of children, in love and tenderness, wisdom and understanding. I had no idea that a man could know all that there is to know about children, and treat his subject with the sympathetic insight found in Mr. E. H. Cooper's book."

BOOKS &amp; PERSONALITIES.

By H. W. NEVINSON. Crown 8vo, 5s. net.

6s. NEW SIX-SHILLING NOVELS. 6s.

HELEN OF TROY, N.Y. By W. S. JACKSON, Author of 'Nine Points of the Law.'

BEFORE THE CRISIS. By F. B. MOTT.

A NEW PAOLO AND FRANCESCA. By ANNIE E. HOLDSWORTH.

CONSTANCE WEST. By E. R. PUNSHON. [Ready Feb. 18.]

HELEN ALLISTON. By the Author of 'Elizabeth's Children.'

JOHN LANE, Publisher, London and New York.

T. FISHER UNWIN'S SPRING ANNOUNCEMENTS.

A LITERARY HISTORY of the ENGLISH PEOPLE. Vol. II. By J. J. JUSSERAND, French Ambassador to the United States. Demy 8vo, cloth, 12s. net.

TRAVELS of a NATURALIST in NORTHERN EUROPE. By J. A. HARVIE-BROWN, F.R.S.E. F.Z.S., Author of 'Fauna of the Moray Basin,' 'A Vertebrate Fauna of Orkney,' &c. With 4 Maps and many Illustrations. 2 vols. royal 8vo, cloth. LIMITED EDITION, uniform with 'Fauna of the Moray Basin.' Prices on application.

SIBERIA: a Record of Travel, Climbing, and Exploration. By SAMUEL TURNER. With 100 Illustrations and 2 Maps. Demy 8vo, cloth, 21s. net.

INTERNATIONAL LAW and the NORTH SEA CRISIS. By F. E. SMITH, B.C.L., Fellow of Merton College, Oxford, and Vinerian Scholar in the University of Oxford, and N. W. SIBLEY, LL.M., Trin.H.Cant., Barristers-at-Law. Royal 8vo, cloth, 21s. net.

The COMING of PARLIAMENT (1350-1660). By L. CECIL JANE. With a Map and 50 Illustrations. Large crown 8vo, 5s. [Story of the Nations.]

RUSSIA UNDER the GREAT SHADOW. By LUIGI VILLARI, Author of 'Giovanni Segantini,' 'Italian Life in Town and Country,' &c. With 60 Illustrations. Demy 8vo, cloth, 10s. 6d. net.

STUDIES in GENERAL PHYSIOLOGY. By JACQUES LOEB, Professor of Physiology in the University of California. With numerous Illustrations. 2 vols. royal 8vo, cloth, 31s. 6d. net.

The AGE of the EARTH, and other GEOLOGICAL STUDIES. By W. J. SOLLAS, LL.D. D.Sc. F.R.S., Professor of Geology in the University of Oxford. Illustrated. Demy 8vo, cloth, 10s. 6d.

RELIGION and the HIGHER LIFE. By WILLIAM RAINY HARPER, D.D. LL.D., President of the University of Chicago. Large crown 8vo, cloth, 6s. net.

AMERICAN BUSINESS METHODS. Lectures on Commerce, Delivered before the College of Commerce and Administration of the University of Chicago. Edited by HENRY RAND HATFIELD. First Series. Large crown 8vo, cloth, 6s. net.

IN PERIL of CHANGE. Essays Written in Time of Tranquillity. By C. F. G. MASTERMAN, Fellow of Christ's College, Cambridge, Author of 'From the Abyss,' &c. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

T. FISHER UNWIN.

READY FEBRUARY 27.

CHATS on OLD FURNITURE. By ARTHUR HAYDEN, Author of 'Chats on English China.' With over 100 Illustrations. 5s.

READY FEBRUARY 27.

BY BEACH and BOGLAND: Stories of Irish Peasant Life. By JANE BARLOW, Author of 'Irish Idylls.' With Frontispiece. 6s. [Green Cloth Library.]

READY IMMEDIATELY.

DAMES and DAUGHTERS of the French Court. By GERALDINE BROOKS. With Photogravure Frontispiece and 10 other Illustrations. 8s. 6d. net.

READY IMMEDIATELY.

ASTRONOMY for AMATEURS. By CAMILLE FLAMMARION, Author of 'Lumens,' &c. With 84 Illustrations. 6s.

READY IMMEDIATELY.

BRITISH BIRD LIFE. By W. PERCIVAL WESTALL. With an Introduction by Sir HERBERT MAXWELL, Bart. Over 50 Illustrations. 5s.

READY IMMEDIATELY.

The CAMERA in the FIELDS: a Practical Guide to Nature Photography. By F. C. SNELL. With 80 Illustrations. Crown 8vo, 5s.

READY IMMEDIATELY.

A PAGAN'S LOVE. A New Volume in "The First Novel Library." By CONSTANCE CLYDE. 6s.

T. FISHER UNWIN.

BY GONES WORTH REMEMBERING. By GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE. With a Photogravure Frontispiece, and 18 other Portraits. 2 vols. demy 8vo, cloth, 21s.

LADY JEAN: the Romance of the Great Douglas Cause. By PERCY FITZGERALD, F.S.A. With Photogravure Frontispiece and 12 other Illustrations. Demy 8vo, 12s. net.

The PERSONAL STORY of the UPPER HOUSE. By KOSMO WILKINSON. With Photogravure Frontispiece. Demy 8vo, cloth, 16s.

The WESTMINSTER CATHEDRAL: a Criticism. By PERCY FITZGERALD, F.S.A. With 3 Plates. Crown folio, 5s. net.

NEW 6s. FICTION.

The FLUTE of PAN. JOHN OLIVER HOBBS.

YARN of OLD HARBOUR TOWN. W. CLARK RUSSELL.

The SIREN'S NET. FLORENCE ROOSEVELT.

LUCIE and I. HENRIETTE CORKRAN.

The HOUSE by the RIVER. FLORENCE WARDEN.

GRAND RELATIONS. J. S. FLETCHER.

TOM GERRARD. LOUIS BECKE.

A SPECIMEN SPINSTER. KATE WESTLAKE YEIGH.

THREE DUKES. G. YSTRIDDE.

STOLEN WATERS. LUCAS CLEEVE.

AT 3s. 6d.

The MEMOIRS of CONSTANTINE DIX. BARRY PAIN.

SHILLING REPRINTS OF STANDARD NOVELS. Bound in cloth.

THREE of THEM. MAXIM GORKY.

MARK RUTHERFORD'S WORKS. 5 vols.

LOVE and the SOUL HUNTERS. JOHN OLIVER HOBBS.

Complete List of Volumes on application.

T. FISHER UNWIN.

THE ATHENÆUM

Journal of English and Foreign Literature, Science, the Fine Arts, Music and the Drama.

No. 4036.

SATURDAY, MARCH 4, 1905.

PRICE
THREEPENCE
REGISTERED AS A NEWSPAPER

ON THE FOUNDATION OF THE HIBBERT TRUST.

MR. L. R. FARNELL, M.A. D.Litt., Fellow of Exeter College, and University Lecturer in Classical Archaeology, will give a COURSE of PUBLIC LECTURES in the LARGE LECTURE ROOM of MANCHESTER COLLEGE, subject: 'ESSAYS in the ANTHROPOLOGICAL STUDY of RELIGION,' at 4.45 on each of the following dates:—
I. 'ANTHROPOLOGICAL METHOD as APPLIED to the COMPARATIVE STUDY of RELIGION.' Part I. THURSDAY, March 2; Part II. SATURDAY, March 4.
II. 'THE INFLUENCE of CERTAIN IDEAS CONCERNING PURITY on EARLY RELIGION, LAW, and MORALITY.' THURSDAY, March 9.
III. 'THE RITUAL of PRAYER in the LOWER and HIGHER RELIGIONS.' THURSDAY, March 16.
Hilary Term, 1905

ROYAL ACADEMY of ARTS.

THE EXHIBITION of WORKS by the late G. F. WATTS, R.A. O.M., will CLOSE on SATURDAY, March 11. Admission, from 9 A.M. to 6 P.M., 1s.; Catalogue 6d.
During the last week—MARCH 6 to MARCH 11—it will be OPEN in the EVENING from 6.30 to 8.30. Admission 6d.; Catalogue 6d.

ROYAL ACADEMY EXHIBITION, 1905.—

RECEIVING DAYS.—WATER COLOURS, MINIATURES, BLACK-AND-WHITE DRAWINGS, ENGRAVINGS, ETCHINGS, ARCHITECTURAL DRAWINGS, and all other Works under Glass, FRIDAY, March 24.
OIL PAINTINGS, SATURDAY, March 25, and MONDAY, March 27.
SCULPTURE, TUESDAY, March 28.
Not more than Three Works may be sent by any one Artist.
Works will only be received at the Burlington Gardens entrance.
Hours for the reception of Works, 7 A.M. to 10 P.M.
Forms and Labels can be obtained from the Academy during the month of MARCH, on receipt of a stamped and addressed envelope.

EXHIBITION of ENGRAVINGS in MEZZOTINT

and STIPPLE after REYNOLDS, ROMNEY, and other Masters. Messrs. P. & D. COLNAGHI & CO. have the honour to announce that they have NOW ON VIEW a choice COLLECTION, in the finest possible states, of ENGRAVINGS in MEZZOTINT and STIPPLE after REYNOLDS, ROMNEY, and other Masters.
Admission, including Catalogue, One Shilling.
13 and 14, Pall Mall East, S.W.

ETCHINGS by MAXIME LALANNE, 1827-86.

The late Artist's magnificent Collection.
Now on view at Mr. H. GUTENSTADT,
16, King Street, St. James's, S.W., 10 to 6 DAILY. Admission 1s.

ROYAL SOCIETY of PAINTER-ETCHERS and

ENGRAVERS, 5A, Pall Mall East, S.W.—23rd ANNUAL EXHIBITION, including ETCHINGS and ENGRAVINGS by Sir F. SEYMOUR HADEN, P.R.E. Open 10 to 6. Admission 1s. HAROLD CHILD, Sec.

OBACH & CO.

EXHIBITION of OIL PAINTINGS, DRAWINGS, and LITHOGRAPHS by FANTIN-LATOUR.
NOW OPEN. 168, NEW BOND STREET, W.

COUNTY OF LONDON.

EDUCATION ACTS, 1870 to 1903.

The LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL invites applications for the following appointments in the Education Department:—

FOUR DIVISIONAL INSPECTORS, who will have the general superintendence of large districts, and give special attention to the co-ordination of education within their areas. Their chief duties will be to inspect Pupil Teachers' Centres, Secondary Schools, Training Colleges, Science and Commercial Centres, Polytechnics, and all institutions for Higher Education aided by the Council.

Candidates will be required to possess special qualifications in one of the following subjects:—(1) English Language and Literature. (2) Modern Languages. (3) Mathematics and Science. (4) Technology, including Mechanical and Electrical Engineering. The Salary will be in each case 600l. a year, rising by annual increments of 25l. to a maximum Salary of 800l. a year.

ONE ART INSPECTOR, whose chief duties will be to inspect the Art Teaching in Elementary and Secondary Schools, Art Schools, and Polytechnics. The Salary will be 400l. a year, rising by annual increments of 20l. to a maximum Salary of 500l. a year.

ONE INSPECTOR of WOOD and METAL WORK, whose chief duties will be to inspect the Teaching in Wood and Metal Work in Manual Training Centres and Elementary and Secondary Schools. He will also be required to inspect certain classes at Polytechnics. The Salary will be 400l. a year, rising by annual increments of 20l. to a maximum Salary of 500l. a year.

ONE INSPECTOR of WOMEN'S TECHNICAL CLASSES, whose chief duties will be to inspect Technical Classes for Women (including Upholstery, Flowermaking, Needlework, Millinery, Dressmaking, and Dresscutting) in Evening Schools, Girls' Clubs, and Polytechnics. The Salary will be 300l. a year, rising by annual increments of 20l. to a maximum Salary of 400l. a year.

The persons appointed will be under the control of the Chief Inspector, and will be required to give their whole time to the duties of the Office, and will in other respects be subject to the usual conditions attached to the Council's service, particulars of which are given in the Form of Application.

In connexion with the appointments there is no restriction with regard to sex.

Applications should be made on the Official Form, to be obtained from the Clerk of the London County Council at the County Hall, Spring Gardens, S.W., or at the Education Offices, Victoria Embankment, W.C. The applications must be sent in not later than 10 A.M. on SATURDAY, April 1, 1905, addressed to the Education Offices as above, and accompanied by copies of not more than three recent Testimonials.

Canvassing, either directly or indirectly, will be held to be a disqualification for appointment.

G. L. GOMME, Clerk of the London County Council.

Spring Gardens, S.W., March 2, 1905.

EDUCATION.

Parents or Guardians desiring accurate information relative to the CHOICE of SCHOOLS for BOYS or GIRLS or

TUTORS in England or Abroad

are invited to call upon or send fully detailed particulars to

MESSRS. GABRIEL, THRING & CO.,

who for more than thirty years have been closely in touch with the leading Educational Establishments.

Advice, free of charge, is given by Mr. Thring, Nephew of the late Head Master of Uppingham, 36, Sackville Street, London, W.

THE BOOKSELLERS' PROVIDENT

INSTITUTION.

Founded 1837.

Patron—HER MAJESTY QUEEN ALEXANDRA.

Invested Capital 30,000l.

A UNIQUE INVESTMENT

Offered to London Booksellers and their Assistants.

A young man or woman of twenty-five can invest the sum of Twenty Guineas (or its equivalent by instalments), and obtain the right to participate in the following advantages:—

FIRST. Freedom from want in time of Adversity as long as need exists.

SECOND. Permanent Relief in Old Age.

THIRD. Medical advice by eminent Physicians and Surgeons.

FOURTH. A Cottage in the Country (Abbots Langley, Hertfordshire) for aged Members, with garden produce, coal, and medical attendance free, in addition to an annuity.

FIFTH. A furnished house in the same Retreat at Abbots Langley for the free use of Members and their families for holidays or during convalescence.

SIXTH. A contribution towards Funeral expenses when it is needed.

SEVENTH. All these are available not for Members only, but also for their wives or widows and young children.

EIGHTH. The payment of the subscriptions confers an absolute right to these benefits in all cases of need.

For further information apply to the Secretary, Mr. GEORGE LARNER, 23, Paternoster Row E.C.

ELTHAM COLLEGE, KENT.—The ROYAL

NAVAL SCHOOL.—EXAMINATION for ENTRANCE and other SCHOLARSHIPS, MARCH 27 and Following Days. Public School Life and Education, with Special Classes for all Navy and Army Examinations.—Apply to the Head Master, Rev. A. E. RUME, D.D.

THE DOWNS SCHOOL, SEAFORD, SUSSEX.

Head Mistress—Miss LUCY ROBINSON, M.A. (late Second Mistress St. Felix School, Southwold). References: The Principal of Bedford College, London; The Master of Peterhouse, Cambridge.

QUEEN'S COLLEGE, LONDON,

43 and 45, HARLEY STREET, W.

Appointments to the ARNOTT PROFESSORSHIP of NATURAL PHILOSOPHY and the PROFESSORSHIP of MATHEMATICS will be made for OCTOBER NEXT. Applications must be sent in by MARCH 25.

Should an Applicant be available, the Two Chairs might be combined. For all particulars apply to the ASSISTANT SECRETARY.

COUNTY of LONDON.

EDUCATION ACTS, 1870 to 1903.

The LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL invites applications for the post of a PRINCIPAL ASSISTANT in the EXECUTIVE OFFICER'S BRANCH of the EDUCATION DEPARTMENT. The Officer appointed will be required to assist the Executive Officer in the Work relating to Higher Education, especially in connexion with Secondary Education, Scholarships, and the Training of Teachers. Candidates must have had a University or other equivalent training, and must have had experience in connexion with Secondary Schools and in Educational Administration. The Salary attached to the position is 400l. per annum, rising by annual increments of 25l. to 600l. per annum.

The person appointed will be required to give his whole time to the duties of the Office, and will in other respects be subject to the usual conditions attaching to the Council's service, particulars of which are contained in the Form of Application.

Applications should be made on the official Form, to be obtained from the Clerk of the London County Council, at the County Hall, Spring Gardens, S.W., or at the Education Offices, Victoria Embankment, W.C. The applications must be sent in not later than 10 A.M. on SATURDAY, March 18, 1905, addressed to the Education Offices as above, and accompanied by copies of not more than three recent Testimonials.

Canvassing, either directly or indirectly, will be held to be a disqualification for appointment.

G. L. GOMME, Clerk of the London County Council.

The County Hall, Spring Gardens, S.W., February 23, 1905

BRIDLINGTON HIGH SCHOOL for GIRLS,

EAST YORKSHIRE.

TO BE OPENED in SEPTEMBER NEXT.

The GOVERNORS are prepared to receive applications for the post of HEAD MISTRESS.

Applicants should have a University Degree in Honours or its equivalent, and have had suitable experience in a good Secondary School.

The Salary offered is 300l. per annum, together with a Capitation Grant of 1l. per annum for each Pupil in excess of 100 in regular attendance.

Forms of Application, and copies of the Regulations and Standing Orders for the Management of the School, will be supplied to intending Applicants.

Applications must be received by the undersigned not later than MARCH 18.

Canvassing the Governors will be considered a disqualification.

GEO. G. O. SUTCLIFFE, Solicitor.

Bridlington, Yorkshire.

WALSALL EDUCATION COMMITTEE.

SCHOOL OF ART.

Applications are invited for the post of HEAD MASTER of the WALSALL SCHOOL of ART. Salary 250l. rising by 25l. per annum for meritorious service to 300l. Applications to be received not later than APRIL 7, 1905.—Further particulars and prescribed Form of Application can be obtained from the DIRECTOR of EDUCATION, Education Offices, Walsall.

EDITOR REQUIRED for high-class WEEKLY

ILLUSTRATED PAPER. Must invest about 1,500l. in Debentures. Salary, &c., to be arranged.—Apply to Mr. JAMES FINCH, Literary Agent, 1, Arundel Street, Strand, London

ASSISTANT EDITORSHIP WANTED, in

LONDON or the PROVINCES by a UNIVERSITY MAN. Has had great experience as Editor and Leader Writer. Special knowledge of Far East.—Address Box 963, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

ADVERTISER desires post as LITERARY

ADVISEE to PUBLISHING FIRM. University Classical Honours Man.—Address A. H. S. Box 962, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

Yearly Subscription, free by post, Inland, 15s. 3d.; Foreign, 18s. Entered at the New York Post Office as Second Class matter.

FRANCE.—The ATHENÆUM can be obtained at the following Railway Stations in France:—

AMIENS, ANTIBES, BEAULIEU-SUR-MER, BIARRITZ, BORDEAUX, BOULOGNE, CALAIS, CANNES, DIJON, DUNKIRK, GENEVA, GOLFE-JUAN, HAVRE, HYÈRES, JUAN-LES-PINS, LILLE, LYONS, MARSEILLES, MENTONE, MONACO, MONTE CARLO, NANTES, NICE, PARIS (Est, Nord, Lyon), PAU, ROUEN, SAINT RAPHAEL, TOULON, TOURS.

PARIS: W. H. SMITH & SON, 248, Rue de Rivoli; and at the ALIGNANI LIBRARY, 224, Rue de Rivoli.

THE DE LA MORE PRESS PUBLICATIONS

will be found advertised on p. 286.

HOLIDAY TUTORSHIP desired by OXFORD

CLASSICAL SCHOLAR. Has travelled Abroad. Good Testimonials.—Apply Box 987, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, E.C.

QUALIFIED MEDICAL MAN (Young), engaged

in Literary Work, desires post as READER, REVIEWER, or ADVISER. Highest references.—B., 80, Selwyn Avenue, Higham's Park.

CLERK, age 20, seeks ENGAGEMENT in

PUBLISHERS' OFFICE. Used to Invoicing and willing to make himself intelligently useful in any capacity.—Apply L. A. P., Box 990, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

MR. FREDERIC HARRISON recommends as

SECRETARY to an Author, Journalist, or Politician a LADY who has assisted him and has worked under his direction during the last two years. Typist, Stenographer, Essayist, Contributor to leading Periodicals and Reviews. Mr. Harrison would meet any Gentleman requiring such Assistant at the Athenæum Club. Mrs. Harrison would see any Lady at Rutland House, Cheniston Gardens, Kensington.

ADVERTISER, who has been in the service of a well-known Literary Man for nineteen years, is anxious to obtain a post as an ASSISTANT in a LIBRARY or BOOKSELLER'S SHOP. Can be highly recommended. Age 30.—Box 982, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

SPANISH and FRENCH.—SECRETARIAL

WORK or TRANSLATIONS undertaken by LADY, Young, of good Education. Shorthand, Typing, &c.—Write Box 991, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

TRANSLATION, REVISION, RESEARCH,

REVIEWING, INDEXING, and other LITERARY WORK, or non-resident Secretaryship. Classics, French, German, Italian. Special Subjects, Mythology and Literature. Varied experience.—Miss SELEY, 53, Talbot Road, W.

LITERARY RESEARCH undertaken at the British Museum and elsewhere on moderate terms. Excellent Testimonials.—A. R., Box 910, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

TRAINING for PRIVATE SECRETARIAL

WORK and INDEXING.—Apply Miss PETHERBRIDGE (Nat. Sci. Tripos), 52, Conduit Street, Bond Street, London, W.

PROPRIETARY INTEREST and SUB-

EDITORIAL POSITION OFFERED in connexion with Old-Established CITY PAPER. Suit well-educated Youth or University Graduate. Thoroughly trained in all Newspaper Work. Premium 100l. Salary after first three months.—Address INQUIRY, 2, Hanway Place, Oxford Street, W.

SHORT STORIES, Novels, Articles, &c., Placed

or Revised. Moderate terms; quick results; highest prices. (Fourteen Guineas just obtained for a short MS.) Hundreds of Testimonials.—CAMBRIDGE LITERARY AGENCY, 115, Strand, W.C.

TYPE-WRITER.—AUTHORS' PLAYS, MSS.,

&c., of every description. Carbon and other Copies. MS. from Dictation quickly and accurately.—Miss E. M. TICAN, 5, Maitland Park Road, Haverstock Hill, N.W. Established 1884.

TYPE-WRITING promptly and accurately done.

Ten years' experience. Excellent references. 10l. per 1,000 words. Reduction for quantity.—Miss MISSEN, The Orchard, Cotterill Road, Surbiton, S.W.

TYPE-WRITING undertaken by highly educated

Women (Classical Tripos; Cambridge Higher Local; Modern Languages). Research, Revision, Translation.—THE CAMBRIDGE TYPE-WRITING AGENCY, 10, Duke Street, Adelphi, W.C.

AUTHORS' MSS., SERMONS, PLAYS, ENVE-

LOPES, CIRCULARS, and all kinds. TYPED at home. Remington, 9d. per 1,000. Good paper. Orders promptly executed.—M. L., 7, Vernon Road, Clapham.

SHORTHAND and TYPE-WRITING.—

Authors' MSS., Plays, Sermons, Reports, &c., 2l. per 1,000. Legal and General Copying. Accuracy and Despatch guaranteed.—Miss N. E. ROBINSON, 8, Westover Road, Wandsworth Common, London, S.W.

TYPE-WRITING.—SERMONS, AUTHORS' MSS.,

&c., carefully and promptly executed. 8l. per 1,000 words, paper included.—Miss A. M., Strathclyde, New Barn Longfield, Kent.

TYPE-WRITING.—The WEST KENSINGTON

OFFICES. Authors MSS., Translations, &c. Legal and General Copying. Circulars, &c., duplicated. Usual terms. References. Established twelve years.—S. S. & S. 229, Hammersmith Road, W. Private Address: 13, Walserton Gardens, Hammersmith.)

THE AUTHOR'S AGENCY.—Established 1879. The interests of Authors capably represented. Agreements for Publishing arranged. MSS. placed with Publishers—Terms and Testimonials on application to Mr. A. M. BUCKINGHAM, 34, Paternoster Row.

MR. GEORGE LARNER, Accountant and Licensed Valuer to the Bookselling, Publishing, Newspaper, Printing, and Stationery Trades. Partnerships Arranged. Balance Sheets and Trading Accounts Prepared and Audited. All Business carried out under Mr. Lerner's personal supervision.—28, 29, and 30, Paternoster Row, E.C., Secretary to the Booksellers' Provident Institution.

NEWSPAPER PROPERTIES BOUGHT, SOLD, VALUED; and supplied with every requisite. Write for The COMPLETE JOURNALIST, sent post free. The Imperial News Agency, London: 2 and 4, Tudor Street, E.C. America: 700-706, Fourteenth Street, N.W., Washington, D.C.

C. MITCHELL & CO., Agents for the Sale and Purchase of Newspaper Properties, undertake Valuations for Probate or Purchase. Investigations, and Audit of Accounts, &c. Card of Terms on application. Mitchell House, 1 and 2, Snow Hill, Holborn Viaduct, E.O.

ATHENÆUM PRESS.—JOHN EDWARD FRANCIS, Printer of the Athenæum, Notes and Queries, &c., is prepared to SUBMIT ESTIMATES for all kinds of BOOK, NEWS, and PERIODICAL PRINTING.—13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.O.

Catalogues.

PICKERING & CHATTO'S CATALOGUES.

CATALOGUE of TRACTS and PAMPHLETS, chiefly Historical and Topographical, 238 pp. 8vo, with Descriptions and Selling Prices of 3,000 Rare Tracts and Pamphlets, including Items on Africa—America—Queen Anne—Astrology—Bedfordshire—Berkshire—Buckinghamshire—Cambridgeshire—Civil War—Charles I. and II.—Channel Islands—Cheshire—Commonwealth—Cornwall—Oliver Cromwell—Cumberland—Derbyshire—Devonshire—Dorsetshire—Durham—Economics and Trade—Queen Elizabeth—Essex—Flanders—France—George I. and II.—Germany—Gloucestershire—Hampshire—Herefordshire—Hertfordshire—Holland—Ireland—James I. and II.—Jesuits—Jews—Kent—Lancashire—Law—Leicestershire—Lincolnshire—London—Middlesex—Monmouthshire—Norfolk—Northamptonshire—Northumberland—Nottinghamshire—Oxfordshire—Poetry—Popish Plot—Pretender (the Young and Old)—Printing—Prynne—Quakers—Rutlandshire—Prince Rupert—Scotland—Shropshire—Somersetshire—Spain—Spanish Armada—Staffordshire—Suffolk—Surrey—Sweden—Wales—Warwickshire—Westmorland—William III.—Wiltshire—Worcestershire—Yorkshire. Paper cover, post free, 1s.

CATALOGUE of ENGLISH LITERATURE, noted Bibliographically and Biographically, including First or Early Editions of the Writings of practically every English Author from Chaucer to R. L. Stevenson. 504 pp. 8vo, with Descriptions and Selling Prices of nearly 4,000 Rare Books, half-cloth, post free, 3s. 6d. This Catalogue has been pronounced on all sides to be the most interesting Bookseller's Catalogue on the subject ever issued.

CATALOGUE of SPORTS, PASTIMES, ARTS, SCIENCES. 222 pp. 8vo, with Descriptions and Selling Prices of nearly 2,000 Old or Rare Books upon almost every Branch of Sport, Science, or Art, paper cover, post free, 1s.

CATALOGUE of MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS. 126 pp. 8vo, with Descriptions and Selling Prices of about 900 Old or Rare Books, including Works on Africa, America, Australasia—First Editions of Books Illustrated by Randolph Caldecott, George and Robert Cruikshank, Richard Doyle, Harry Furniss, James Gillray, Ernest Griset, John Leech, Hablot K. Browne (Phiz), Henry Alken, Thomas Rowlandson, and numerous Rare Works with Coloured Plates—an interesting Collection of Old Curiosa, Erotica, Facetiae, Old Romances, Chap Books, and Children's Books—numerous Topographical Works relating to most of the Counties of England, Ireland, Scotland, and Wales—fine Illuminated Manuscripts, with Miniatures—a valuable Assemblage of Early Typographical Specimens, including many Rare Editions Principles and Examples of the Early Printers. Paper cover, post free, 1s.

CATALOGUE of NEW PURCHASES. Books on all Subjects, including a fine Collection of Stamped and Elaborately Gilt-Tooled Old Bookbindings and several very beautiful Ancient Illuminated Manuscripts. 578 pp. 8vo, containing Descriptions, with Selling Prices, of 4,000 Valuable Books, Illustrated with 9 Coloured and 198 Reproductions of Manuscripts and Old Bindings, cloth, post free, 6s.

It has been found necessary to make the above charges for our Catalogues, to prevent an inundation of applications from irresponsible persons. The cost of the Catalogue will, however, be deducted from the first order of 11.

PICKERING & CHATTO, Antiquarian Booksellers, 66, HAYMARKET, LONDON, S.W.

LEIGHTON'S

ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE of EARLY PRINTED and other INTERESTING BOOKS, MANUSCRIPTS, and BINDINGS.

Part VIII. SHE—T, with 150 Illustrations, price 2s. NEARLY READY. Parts I.—VII. containing A—SHA, with 1050 Illustrations in Facsimile, price 17s. the 7 Parts.

J. & J. LEIGHTON, 40, Brewer Street, Golden Square, W.

FIRST EDITIONS of MODERN AUTHORS, including Dickens, Thackeray, Lever, Alnoworth; Books illustrated by G. and R. Cruikshank, Phiz, Rowlandson, Leech, &c. The largest and choicest Collection offered for Sale in the World. Catalogues issued and sent post free on application. Books Bought.—WALTER T. SPENCER, 27, New Oxford Street, London, W.C.

MESSRS. HENRY YOUNG & SONS possess one of the LARGEST STOCKS of OLD and NEW BOOKS in GREAT BRITAIN, and they will be glad to hear from any one in search of Books out of print, as they can in many cases supply them at once.

ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE MONTHLY. Price 6d. 12, South Castle Street, Liverpool.

H. H. PEACH, Antiquarian Bookseller, 37, Belvoir Street, Leicester, issues CATALOGUES of MSS. and OLD BOOKS post free to Book Collectors. No. 10 contains Manuscripts—Early Printing, &c.

THE INTERNATIONAL BOOK CIRCULAR, No. 139, containing a Special Article, entitled 'SOME CONTEMPORARY FOREIGN CHEMISTS,' by Dr. M. O. FORSTER, together with an exact Bibliography of their Publications, and a Double Plate of their Portraits. Specimen Copies gratis.—WILLIAMS & MORGATE, Book Importers, 14, Henrietta Street, Covent Garden, W.C.

CATALOGUE No. 42.—Drawings—Engravings—Turner's Liber Studiorum—Lucas's Mezzotints after Constable—Engravings, Hogarth, Orlin—Etchings, Palmer, Whistler—Japanese Colour-Prints—Illustrated Books—Works by Ruskin. Post free, Sixpence. W. WARD, 2, Church Terrace, Richmond, Surrey.

GLAISHER'S REMAINDER BOOK CATALOGUE.

FEBRUARY SUPPLEMENT NOW READY, Comprising all most Recent Purchases in PUBLISHERS' REMAINDER STOCK. Books in NEW condition, at REDUCED Prices.

WILLIAM GLAISHER,

Remainder and Discount Bookseller, 265, High Holborn, London.

TO BOOKBUYERS and LIBRARIANS of FREE LIBRARIES.—The MARCH CATALOGUE of valuable SECOND-HAND WORKS and NEW REMAINDERS, offered at prices greatly reduced, is now ready, and will be sent post free upon application to W. H. SMITH & SON, Library Department, 186, Strand, London, W.C.

READY NEXT WEEK.

CATALOGUE of the late Prof. YORK POWELL, comprising History and Biography—Antiquarian Works—European and Oriental Literature and Philology, &c.

R. H. BLACKWELL, 50 and 51, Broad Street, Oxford.

MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS.—Send for CATALOGUE (post free) of good SECOND-HAND WORKS, esteemed Editions of various Authors, some scarce, all in new extra leather bindings, full and half bound, at prices fixed.—W. ROSE & SON, Bookbinders, 29-30, Eagle Street, Red Lion Street, Holborn, W.C.

BOOKS.—All out-of-print and rare Books on any subject supplied. The most expert Bookbinder extant. Please state wants and ask for Catalogue. I make a special feature of exchanging any saleable Books for others selected from my various Lists. Special List of 2,000 Books I particularly want post free.—EDM. BAKER'S Great Bookshop, 11-16, John Bright Street, Birmingham.

PORTRAIT of GEORGE MEREDITH, after the celebrated Painting by G. F. WATTS, R.A., Engraved by W. BISCOMBE GARDNER. Limited to 600 Artist's Proofs at One Guinea each. Size, 12 in. by 8 1/2 in.—Address W. BISCOMBE GARDNER, Hoathly, Hind Head, Surrey.

MARLBOROUGH.—TO BE SOLD, WITH POSSESSION.—AXHOLME, on the London and Bath Road, within a mile of Marlborough College, with fine Views of the magnificently timbered Slopes of Savernake Forest, a DETACHED FREEHOLD RESIDENCE, with Six Bedrooms, Dressing Room, Three good Reception Rooms, and Domestic Offices. Stabling, Lodge, Gardener's Cottage, and other Out-buildings. Well-timbered Grounds, nearly Four Acres, bounded and intersected by the River Kennet.—Solicitors, Messrs. KAYS & JONES, 37, Norfolk Street, W.C. Particulars of Mr. MARK JEANS, Marlborough.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS.—WINTER APARTMENTS.—Comfortably Furnished Sitting-Room and One Bedroom. Pleasant and central. No others taken.—R. H., 66, Grove Hill Road, Tunbridge Wells.

Sales by Auction.

Rare and Valuable Books, including Portion of the Library of the late H. E. WATTS, Esq. (removed from 52, Bedford Gardens, Campden Hill, W.), and that of the late J. R. SCOTT, Esq. (by order of the Executors).

MESSRS. HODGSON & CO. will SELL by AUCTION, at their Rooms, 115, Chancery Lane, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, March 8, and Two Following Days, at 1 o'clock, RARE and VALUABLE BOOKS, including the above Libraries and other Properties, comprising Sir W. Armstrong's Sir Joshua Reynolds, Edition de Luxe, and J. M. W. Turner, Japanese Paper Edition—the Wallace Collection, by Emile Molinier—Foster's Miniature Painters, 2 vols., and the Stuarts, 2 vols., and other Modern Fine-Art Books—Lodge's Portraits, India Proofs, Large Paper, in the Original Parts—Nash's Worcestershire, 2 vols.—Books on Cornwall and Wales (the Property of a GENTLEMAN)—The Huth Library, 29 vols. Largest Paper—Complete Sets of the Surtees and Chetham Societies' Publications—Books in Old English Literature—a Collection of Editions of Don Quixote and others in Spanish and General Foreign Literature—Burton's Arabian Nights, Original Edition, 16 vols.—First Editions of Swift, Evelyn, Jane Austen, Lamb, Borrow, and others, and a few Presentation Copies—Sowerby's Botany, 13 vols.—Apperley's Life of a Sportsman, First Issue of the First Edition—The Kilmiscott Keats—Editions de Luxe of Thackeray and Dickens and other Handsome Library Editions of Fielding, Smollett, Wordsworth, Scott, Marryat, Stevenson, Ruskin, and Matthew Arnold—Autograph Letters from Oscar Wilde and others.

To be viewed and Catalogues had.

MESSRS. CHRISTIE, MANSON & WOODS respectfully give Notice that they will hold the following SALES by AUCTION at their Great Rooms, King Street, St. James's Square, the Sales commencing at 1 o'clock precisely:—

On MONDAY, March 6, OLD PICTURES of the late J. H. CROFTS, Esq., the late FREDERICK POTTS, Esq., and others.

On TUESDAY, March 7, OLD MEZZOTINT PORTRAITS and MODERN PROOF ETCHINGS and ENGRAVINGS.

On THURSDAY, March 9, SILVER PLATE and OBJECTS of VERTU of M. RUSSELL COTES, Esq., SILVER PLATE of the late General Sir WILLIAM PENN SYMONS, K.C.B., and others.

On FRIDAY, March 10, PORCELAIN, DECORATIVE OBJECTS, and FURNITURE of M. RUSSELL COTES, Esq.

On SATURDAY, March 11, MODERN PICTURES and DRAWINGS, the Property of M. RUSSELL COTES, Esq.

Lathe, Quantity of Tools, Chucks and Slide Rests—Fishing Tackle, &c.

FRIDAY, March 10, at half-past 12 o'clock.

MR. J. C. STEVENS will OFFER, at his Rooms, 38, King Street, Covent Garden, London, W.C., LATHE, with all Accessories Complete; also Quantity of Tools, Chucks, Slide Rests—valuable Wood for Turning—Rods, Lines, Reels, and other Fishing Tackle—Photographic Cameras, Lenses, &c.—Scientific Instruments and Apparatus—Electrical Apparatus—Wire and Fittings—and a large Quantity of valuable Miscellaneous Property.

On view day prior 2 to 5 and morning of Sale. Catalogues on application.

Important Collection of Lepidoptera.

TUESDAY, March 14, and WEDNESDAY, March 15, at 1 o'clock.

MR. J. C. STEVENS will OFFER, at his Rooms, 38, King Street, Covent Garden, London, W.C., the FIRST PORTION (unless previously disposed of by Private Treaty) of the unrivalled COLLECTION of BRITISH LEPIDOPTERA formed by the late PHILIP B. MASON, Esq., M.R.C.S. F.R.S. F.Z.S. F.E.S., &c., of Trent House, Burton-on-Trent, comprising Long and Superb Series of most of the Rare and Extinct Species—fine Varieties and Local Forms in the best state of Preservation; also many Valuable and Historic Specimens and Types from the Haysworth and other Collections, together with the first-rate Standish and other Cabinets in which they are contained.

On view the Monday prior and mornings of Sale. Catalogues, ready a week prior to Sale, post free on application.

Important Sale of Birds' Eggs.

MR. J. C. STEVENS has received instructions to OFFER for SALE on THURSDAY, March 16, the FOURTH and FINAL PORTION of the COLLECTION of BIRDS' EGGS formed by HEATLEY NOBLE, Esq. The Sale will include one of the finest Specimens of the GREAT AUK'S EGG ever offered, together with such rarities as White's, Siberian, and Black-throated Thrush—Waxwing—Scarlet and Pine Grosbeak—Nuthatch—Needle-tailed Swift—Honey Buzzard—Golden Eagle—Iceland and Jyr Falcon—Snow Goose—Pectoral and Marsh Sandpiper—Greenshank—Dusky Redshank—Pomarine Skua, &c.

Catalogues, in course of preparation, may be had on application to Mr. J. C. STEVENS, 38, King Street, Covent Garden, London, W.C.

Libraries of Dr. F. ARNOLD LEES, removed from Leeds, and of F. LEES, Esq., of Paris.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their Galleries, 47, Leicester Square, W.C., on MONDAY, March 20, and Following Days, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, the ABOVE PROPERTIES, comprising First Editions of Modern Authors and Works in General Literature.

Engravings, including a Series from the Liber Studiorum, many in the First and other Early States, the Property of the late ROBERT ROBERTS, Esq.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C., on MONDAY, March 6, at 1 o'clock precisely, ENGRAVINGS and ETCHINGS, including Mezzotint and other Portraits—Spotting Prints in Colours—and a Series of the Liber Studiorum Plates, many in First and other Early States, the Property of the late ROBERT ROBERTS, Esq., of Boston, Lincolnshire.

May be viewed. Catalogues may be had.

The valuable Library of the late WICKHAM FLOWER, Esq., F.S.A.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION (by order of the Executors), at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, March 8, and Three Following Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, the valuable LIBRARY of MANUSCRIPTS and PRINTED BOOKS of the late WICKHAM FLOWER, Esq., F.S.A., &c., of Great Tangle Manor, Guildford, comprising important Historical Manuscripts, many relating to France, from the Ashburnham, Philipps, and other Collections—rare Early Printed Books and First Specimens of Early Presses—Books of Prints and Fine-Art Publications, including a Series of the Burlington Fine-Arts Club—Modern Editions of English Classics—fine Natural History Works—Publications of the Kilmiscott and other Private Presses—Early English Chronicles—and Editions of the Writers of the Sixteenth, Seventeenth, and Eighteenth Centuries, &c.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

The valuable Collection of Engravings, chiefly by the Old Masters, the Property of MAJOR PARKER.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C., on THURSDAY, March 16, and Two Following Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, the valuable COLLECTION of ENGRAVINGS, chiefly by the Old Masters, the Property of MAJOR PARKER, Belmore, Ivy Bridge, Devon, comprising a valuable Series of Portraits by and after Van Dyck—Etchings in early states by Rembrandt—Engravings by Albert Dürer and other Old Masters.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

Valuable Books and Illuminated and other Manuscripts.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C., on TUESDAY, March 21, and Three Following Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, valuable BOOKS and MANUSCRIPTS, comprising a large number of Manuscripts, Illuminated, Devotional, Historical, and Theological—many important and interesting Autograph Manuscripts and Letters of eminent Ancient and Modern Writers—First Editions of Elizabethan Writers—Shakespeareans, including the Poems of 1640—Early Folios, and interesting Books relating thereto—Horse on Vellum—Incunabula—an unpublished French Translation of Basilikon Doron, by Louys Servin—Rare Bibles, including Coverdale's 1535, and other Early Editions.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

A Portion of the Library of the late ROBERT ROBERTS, Esq., of Boston, Lincolnshire, Part of the Library of the late G. H. BOUGHTON, R.A., and a nearly Complete Set of the Kilmiscott Press Books on Vellum.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C., on SATURDAY, March 25, at 1 o'clock precisely, a PORTION of the LIBRARY of the late ROBERT ROBERTS, Esq. (of Boston, Lincolnshire), including Allot's England's Parnassus, 1600—Herriek, Hesperides, 1645—Milton's Poems, 1645—Sir T. More's Utopia, 1551—Benlowe's Theophilus, 1652—Drayton's Poly-Olbion, 1622—Shakespeare Works, 1682 and 1685, &c.; a PART of the LIBRARY of the late GEORGE H. BOUGHTON, R.A., comprising an important Series of the Publications of the Grolier Club, New York—J. C. Smith, British Mezzotint Portraits, 4 vols. 1884—Burlington Fine-Arts Club, Illustrated Catalogues—Fine Books on Art, &c.; and the Greater Part of a Set of the Kilmiscott Press Books on Vellum, all Picked Copies in Perfect Condition, including the Chaucer.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

The valuable and extensive Library of the late JOHN SCOTT, Esq., C.B.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C., on MONDAY, March 27, and Ten Following Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, the valuable and extensive LIBRARY of the late JOHN SCOTT, Esq., C.B., Halkhill, Largs, Ayrshire.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had, price Half-a-crown each.

NOW READY.

THE MONTHLY REVIEW.

Edited by

CHARLES HANBURY-WILLIAMS.

No. 54. MARCH, 1905. 2s. 6d. net.

MAN. Maxim Gorki.

The MILITARY DEADLOCK. Stratiotes.

EDWARD BURNE-JONES. Julia Cartwright (Mrs. Ady).

AN EMPIRE in the MAKING. II. Sir Vincent Caillard.

SOME PROBLEMS in SALMON-FISHING. W. Earl Hodgson.

The EFFECT of the WAR on RUSSIAN PUBLIC FEELING. L. Villari.

The BLACK VENGEANCE. By the Author of 'The Greatness of Josiah Porlick.'

MUNICIPAL 'ASPECTS of the HOUSING PROBLEM. Benjamin Taylor.

BOND STREET. Arthur H. Adams.

ON the LINE.

BEAUJEU. Chapters 9-11. H. C. Bailey.

John Murray, Albemarle Street, W.

SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE

For MARCH

Beautifully illustrated, 1s. net.

MADAME WADDINGTON'S RECOLLECTIONS. Second Papers, profusely illustrated.

PORTRAITS OF INDIAN TYPES. Illustrated.

THE BACKWARD TRAIL OF THE SAXON.

THREE DAYS ON THE VOLGA.

THE HOUSE OF MIRTH. (Continued.) Edith Wharton.

GOVERNMENT EDUCATION. Illustrated.

At all Railway Bookstalls and Newsagents'.

London: Wm. Heinemann, 21, Bedford Street, W.C.

THE NINETEENTH CENTURY and AFTER

For MARCH.

DEMOCRACY and REACTION. By the Right Hon. John Morley, M.P.

The BREAKDOWN of RUSSIAN FINANCES. By Dr. E. J. Dillon.

ROME or the REFORMATION: a Rejoinder. By Lady Wimbome.

The MORALITY of NATURE. By Prince Kropotkin.

GEORGE FREDERICK WATTS—"FROM the UTMOST to the HIGHEST." By Sir William B. Richmond, K.C.B. R.A.

The EXPERIMENT of "IMPRESSIONISM." By Sir Philip Burne-Jones.

The ZODIACAL LIGHT. By the Rev. Edmund Ledger, Gresham Lecturer on Astronomy.

The STORY of the GOLDEN MIST. By William Schooling.

WAR DOGS. By Major E. Hantoville Richardson, F.Z.S.

PORTRAITS of SOME INDIAN WOMEN. By Cornelia Sorabji.

The GREEK MYSTERIES and the GOSPEL NARRATIVE. By Slade Butler.

The RENEWAL of the JAPANESE ALLIANCE. By O. Eltzbacher.

LAST MONTH:

1. By Sir Wemyss Reid.

2. By Walter Frewen Lord.

London: Spottiswoode & Co., Ltd., 5, New Street Square, and 54, Gracechurch Street, E.C.

THE INDEPENDENT REVIEW.

MARCH. Price 2s. 6d. net.

NOTES on CURRENT EVENTS.

POLITICAL OPPORTUNITIES:—

(a) The GENERAL ELECTION. I. L. Hammond.

(b) SCOTLAND. Hector Macpherson.

(c) LABOUR. Arnold Holt.

The LABOUR MOVEMENT in RUSSIA. K. Tar.

RECOLLECTIONS of MR. GLADSTONE. C. S. Roundall.

A LEVANTINE MESSIAH. II. N. Brailsford.

WATTS and NATIONAL ART. Laurence Binyon.

A FARM SCHOOL in the TRANSVAAL. An English Teacher.

The WORKING-CLASS INVENTOR. II. S. Flynt.

A TICINSE VILLAGE. James Sally.

CORRESPONDENCE:—

(a) ON RELIGIOUS CONFORMITY. G. M. Trevelyan.

(b) FINANCE and the DRINK TRADE. J. E. Allen.

REVIEWS of BOOKS.

T. Fisher Unwin, London.

ABSTRACTS of the WILLS in REGISTER

SOAME, 1620, in the PREROGATIVE COURT of CANTERBURY.

This Volume of over 600 Pages, now ready, contains concise but exhaustive Abstracts of every Will in the two volumes known as Register Soame, containing 1,366 Wills, with 40,000 References to Persons, and 10,000 to Places, all thoroughly Indexed. The volume will be delivered at 6dols., or 23s. (carriage extra). All correspondence relative to the work may be addressed to the Editor, J. HENRY LEE, 14, Clifford's Inn, London, E.C. Subscriptions should be sent to

N. C. NASH, Treasurer, New England Historic Genealogical Society, Somerset Street, Boston, Mass., U.S.A.

'BLACKWOOD'

FOR

MARCH

CONTAINS

The Sultan of Morocco in Private Life.

By WALTER B. HARRIS.

The Mystics.

By the AUTHOR of 'JOHN CHILCOTE, M.P.'

A Plea for the Abolition of all Learning.

By MERCATOR ANGLICANUS.

A STUDY OF THE RUSSO-JAPANESE WAR.

By CHASSEUR.

PEREUNT ET IMPUTANTUR.

At the University.

THE EXPEDITION TO TIBET.

With Map.

The Vrouw Grobelaar's Leading Cases.

Claverhouse in Literature.

Richard Hartley, Prospector.

By DOUGLAS BLACKBURN.

Tales of a Forest.

By GILFRID W. HARTLEY.

Musings Without Method.

WM. BLACKWOOD & SONS,
Edinburgh and London.

2s. 6d.

2s. 6d.

THE CONTEMPORARY REVIEW

For MARCH,

NOW READY, contains:—

1. The SITUATION in RUSSIA. By Dr. E. J. Dillon.

2. TWENTY MONTHS AFTER. By J. A. Spender.

3. The NEW FISCAL BARRIERS in EUROPE. By J. S. Mann.

4. SHALL WE PUT the CLOCK BACK in BIBLICAL CRITICISM? A Demonstration. By Canon Cheyne, D.Litt. F.B.A.

5. PARLIAMENTARY REPORTING. By A. Kinnear.

6. The COERCION of TURKEY. By W. A. Moore.

7. SCIENCE and EDUCATION. By Sir Edward Fry.

8. The HUMAN TELEPHONIC EXCHANGE. By Emma Marie Caillard.

9. CONSTITUTIONAL GOVERNMENT in MYSORE. By D. C. Boulger.

10. CIVIC EDUCATION and CITY DEVELOPMENT. By Prof. Patrick Geddes.

11. EARLY FRIENDS of ROBERT BROWNING. By W. Hall Griffin.

12. SOME RECENT BOOKS. By "A Reader."

London: Horace Marshall & Son.

THE BUILDING ACT AMENDMENT BILL

and its CRITICS; Dinner and Presentations to Mr. R. Phené Spiers; Country Houses and their Accessories (Architectural Association); British Standard Cement Specification; Types of Concrete-Steel Structures (Student's Column); Illustrations of the Temple of Jupiter, Baalbek—The Propylæa—The Columned Halls of Esneh and Karnak, from Drawings by R. Phené Spiers, &c.—See the BUILDER of March 4 (4d.; by post, 4½d.). Through any Newsagent or direct from the Publisher of the Builder, Catherine Street, London, W.C.

INDEXING.

MANUAL of PRACTICAL INDEXING.

By A. L. CLARKE.

Crown 8vo, cloth, 5s. net. 1905.

"It is as complete and thorough a treatise of indexing as any one could possibly desire"—Scottsman, February 20, 1905.

Library Supply Co. 181, Queen Victoria Street, E.C.

NOW READY, with Illustrations, 2s. 6d. net; by post, 2s. 9d.

X RAYS: their Employment in Cancer and other Diseases.

By RICHARD J. COWEN, L.R.C.S.I. L.R.C.P.I., &c.

London: H. J. Olschker, 57, Wigmore Street, W.

TEACHERS' SCRIPTURAL LIBRARY.

Price Sixpence each net.

By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

1. BIBLE CHRONOLOGY and DICTIONARY; or, the Principal Events recorded in the Holy Scriptures, arranged under their probable respective dates, with a Dictionary giving an account of the places named, an Appendix on English Translations of the Bible, and Six Maps.

Published by Stoneman, 29, Paternoster Square, E.C.

SMITH, ELDER & CO.'S

LIST.

MRS. HUMPHRY WARD'S

NEW NOVEL,

THE MARRIAGE OF

WILLIAM ASHE,

WILL BE READY AT

ALL BOOKSELLERS' AND

LIBRARIES ON THE

9th of MARCH.

With Illustrations by ALBERT STERNER.

Crown 8vo, 6s.

NOTICE.—A SECOND IMPRESSION of Mrs. HENRY DE LA PASTURE'S New Novel, PETER'S MOTHER, crown 8vo, 6s., is NOW READY at all Libraries and Booksellers'.

TIMES.—"A delightful book... There is a fragrance about it very like the fragrance of a Devon meadow."

THE CORNHILL MAGAZINE

For MARCH. Price ONE SHILLING.

Contents.

ROSE of the WORLD. Book II. Chaps. 19-21. By Agnes and Egerton Castle.

The NOBLE LADY'S TALE. By Thomas Hardy.

The ART of CONVERSATION. By the late Canon Ainger.

The HOME-COMING of VINCENT BROOKE. By Hugh Clifford, C.M.G.

The NILE FENS. By D. G. Hogarth.

The FRANKFORT FLEET. By the Rev. A. T. S. Goodrick.

The SOLDIER and the PLAGUE. By Walter Frith.

BARBADOS the LOYAL. By Frank T. Bullen.

The DESERTED VILLAGE. By Palamedes.

The KING'S REVOKE. Chaps. 6-7. By Mrs. Margaret L. Woods.

London:

SMITH, ELDER & CO. 15, Waterloo Place.

MR. EDWARD ARNOLD'S NEW BOOKS.

NOW READY AT ALL LIBRARIES AND BOOKSELLERS.

THE BURDEN OF THE BALKANS.

By M. EDITH DURHAM,

Author of 'Through the Lands of the Serb.'
With Illustrations and Map. Demy 8vo, 14s. net.

Mr. EDWARD ARNOLD has pleasure in announcing that an important Work,
THE EAST AFRICA PROTECTORATE,

BY

SIR CHARLES ELIOT

K.C.M.G.,

lately H.M. Commissioner for the Protectorate, will be published on WED-NESDAY NEXT, March 8, with a number of Illustrations and Maps. demy 8vo, 15s. net.

THIRD IMPRESSION.

THE UNVEILING OF LHASA.

By EDMUND CANDLER.

With a large number of Illustrations and a Map.
Demy 8vo, 15s. net.

WESTMINSTER GAZETTE.—"The everyday incidents and accidents make the real romance of the enterprise.
They are set forth in Mr. Candler's account with a vividness and charm which make the whole volume delightful reading."

ATHENÆUM.—"Mr. Candler's narrative seems so full of incident as to create some curiosity as to what his successors will find left to describe."

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'BALLADS OF THE BOER WAR.'
FISCAL BALLADS. By Capt. Harry
GRAHAM ("Col. D. Streamer"). Author of 'Ruthless
Rhymes for Heartless Homes.' Fcap. 8vo, 1s. net.

IMPORTANT MUSICAL WORK.

ALESSANDRO SCARLATTI: his Life and Works. By EDWARD J. DENT, Fellow of King's College, Cambridge. Royal 8vo, with 100 Musical Illustrations, 12s. 6d. net.

TIMES.—"Mr. Dent has done his work so thoroughly that English students may well be proud of the fact that their country has produced a book of this kind, which cannot fail to be generally accepted as the authority on Scarlatti.
The style of the book is strong and unaffected, concise and direct. It is worthy to stand beside any German or French work of the kind."

The EVOLUTION THEORY. By

AUGUST WEISMANN, Professor of Zoology in the University of Freiburg. Translated by Prof. J. ARTHUR
THOMSON. 2 vols. royal 8vo, with many Illustrations,
32s. net.

STANDARD.—"Whether 'The Evolution Theory' does or does not command our allegiance, we close the book with the sense that we have been listening not only to a man of exceptional learning, but also to one of great intellectual power. It is permeated by the same serene, judicial, and philosophic spirit as the writings of our own Darwin."

ASTRONOMICAL DISCOVERY. By

HERBERT HALL TURNER, D.Sc. F.R.S., Savilian
Professor of Astronomy in the University of Oxford.
Demy 8vo, with Diagrams, 10s. 6d. net.

ATHENÆUM.—"In this work astronomical discovery is treated of in such a way as to render it of great interest to general readers as well as to professed astronomers. The typography of this admirable work is excellent."

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'KNOWLEDGE IS POWER.'
FACTS and IDEAS. Short Studies of Life and Literature. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

WORLD.—"A really remarkable book, which should find a place in the library of every school, and be given as a prize to every boy who shows a desire to make the acquaintance of large subjects and big men."

NEW SIX-SHILLING NOVELS.

The SEETHING POT. By George
A. BIRMINGHAM.

MISS MONIRESOR'S NOVEL.

THIRD IMPRESSION NEARLY EXHAUSTED.

The CELESTIAL SURGEON. By
F. F. MONTRESOR, Author of 'Into the Highways and Hedges,' 'At the Cross Roads,' &c.

London:

EDWARD ARNOLD, 41 and 43, Maddox Street, W.

HARPER'S MAGAZINE.

For MARCH NOW READY. Contains, amongst other items:—

MONASTERY PRISONS IN RUSSIA.

Illustrated.

E. J. DILLON.

CHARLES AND MARY LAMB.

Unpublished Letters.

W. C. HAZLITT.

IN THE SEASON (LONDON).

Illustrated.

W. D. HOWELLS.

INTERNATIONAL ARBITRATION.

Illustrated.

J. B. MOORE, LL.D.

THE MARRIAGE OF WILLIAM ASHE.

Illustrated.

Mrs. HUMPHRY WARD.

THE LATER DAY OF ALCHEMY.

Illustrated.

Prof. W. C. MORGAN.

THE INCA CIVILIZATION.

Illustrated.

A. F. BANDÉLIER.

HARPER'S MAGAZINE.

PRICE ONE SHILLING.

NEW SIX-SHILLING FICTION.

THE CLUB OF QUEER TRADES.

Illustrated by the Author.

G. K. CHESTERTON.

Every member of this eccentric club must have invented the means by which he earns his living—it must be an entirely new trade. Upon this groundwork Mr. Chesterton shows us some extraordinary characters and scenes.

"Its humour is delicious, its ingenuity is marvellous—it is unique."—ROBERT BARR in the Idler.

THE FORTUNES OF FARTHINGS.

By the Author of 'Things Seen in Morocco,' &c.

A. J. DAWSON.

Whether dealing with the country side (Dorset) and Farthings Hall, or with Morocco and the Moors —whither the hero is kidnapped—Mr. Dawson is always convincing.

MY TURKISH BRIDE.

ARTHUR CRAWSHAY.

A remarkable novel, partly on account of its vivid presentation of the Russian secret police and their marvellous system of espionage.

LANGBARROW HALL.

By the Author of 'T'bacca Queen.'

THEODORA WILSON WILSON.

The story of an entangled estate in Cumberland. There are some strongly drawn characters and striking scenes, while the local colour is convincing and delightful.

THE SILENCE OF MRS. HARROLD.

By the Author of 'Lux Crucis.'

S. M. GARDENHIRE.

The central characters of this novel are a well-known actress and a prominent New York stockbroker.
It is a strikingly realistic picture of the many phases of New York life at the present day, Wall Street and the English and American Theatrical Trust figuring very prominently.

THE MARATHON MYSTERY.

By the Author of 'The Holladay Case.'

B. E. STEVENSON.

"The best detective story we have read for a long time. It has an originality of its own. Mr.
Stevenson is to be congratulated."—Athenæum.

RED HUNTERS AND THE ANIMAL PEOPLE.

5s.

By "OHYESA."

C. A. EASTMAN.

"The stories are charming, besides the hints they give of Indian folk-lore, poetry of the woods, and nature knowledge."—Scotsman.

SONGS OF THE VALIANT VOIVODE.

10s. 6d.

Roumanian Folk Songs.

HELENE VACARESCO.

"A quite delightful and refreshing volume.....Passionate, vivid, and wild as were those of the first collection ('The Bard of the Dimbovitza')."—World.

STRATEGY OF GREAT RAILROADS.

7s. 6d.

With Maps, &c.

FRANK H. SPEARMAN.

"A book of singular interest, apart altogether from the valuable insight it affords into railway enterprise and organization in America."—Scotsman.

A DOG'S TALE.

2s. net.

Illustrated. Cloth decorated. Uniform with 'Adam's Diary.'

MARK TWAIN.

HARPER & BROTHERS, 45, Albemarle Street, London, W.

CHAPMAN &amp; HALL'S LATEST LIST.

THE NOVEL THAT EVERY ONE IS DISCUSSING.

NOW READY.

FOURTH EDITION OF

The Most Successful Novel of the New Year.

THE APPLE OF EDEN.

BY

E. TEMPLE THURSTON.

Crown 8vo, 6s.

This is a strong book, dealing with the question of the Celibacy of the Priesthood, and has been highly praised by the critics.

Four Editions have been called for within four weeks, as the table below shows.

FIRST EDITION, 20 JANUARY.

SECOND EDITION, 26 JANUARY.

THIRD EDITION, 9 FEBRUARY.

FOURTH EDITION, 23 FEBRUARY.

The KING says:—"The book most widely discussed at the present moment is Mr. Thurston's daring work 'The Apple of Eden.' It is a book which grown men and women may read and admire for its courage and serious aim."

The ST. JAMES'S GAZETTE says:—"It is an able, outspoken, extremely human study. It is a book to read."

SPEAKER.—"The Apple of Eden' is a conscientious and searching piece of work."

GENTLEWOMAN.—"The novel undoubtedly forms a thoughtful and interesting study of a difficult subject."

STANDARD.—"It is not often that a first book is so well balanced or makes an impression of so much sureness and maturity as 'The Apple of Eden.'"

TO-DAY.—"Mr. Thurston has portrayed with a deal of power the conflict between the priest's religious idealism and his more human cravings; .....a strong and earnest study of a problem that will interest the world many centuries to come."

GLOBE.—"The Apple of Eden' is an intellectual study in temperaments.....Mr. Thurston deals delicately and thoughtfully with the situation, and is the more successful by the exercise of a refined restraint."

BOOKMAN.—"Mr. Thurston has treated a none too pleasing subject with great delicacy. He has grappled with it earnestly, courageously."

SCOTSMAN.—"It is powerful psychological study.....laying bare the soul of a not uncommon type of man in a singularly clear and fascinating manner."

THE APPLE OF EDEN.

BY

E. TEMPLE THURSTON.

FOURTH EDITION.

RUSSIA ON THE EVE OF REVOLUTION.

By G. H. PERRIS.

Illustrated. Demy 8vo, 10s. 6d. net.

This striking and impressive book, founded upon close personal observation of all sides of subterranean life in the country of the Tsar, appears at a peculiarly appropriate time. It sets forth in graphic language and with absolute fidelity to fact the causes that have led to the present reign of terror, gives vivid word-pictures of the leaders of the revolution, and lets the reader into many suppressed stories of tyranny and oppression. A number of pictures, from photographs taken on the spot, add to the convincing quality of the narrative. [Ready shortly.]

THE QUESTION OF ALIEN IMMIGRATION

is to be one of the first to engage the attention of Parliament. Prompt to the hour, Messrs. CHAPMAN & HALL have just published an important Pioneer Work on the subject.

THE PROBLEM OF THE IMMIGRANT.

By JAMES DAVENPORT WHELPLEY.

Demy 8vo, 10s. 6d. net.

Containing a Brief Discussion, with a Summary of Conditions, Laws, and Regulations governing the Movement of Population to and from the British Empire, United States, France, Belgium, Switzerland, Germany, Italy, Austria-Hungary, Spain, Portugal, Netherlands, Denmark, Scandinavia, and Russia.

THE PROBLEM OF THE IMMIGRANT.

By JAMES DAVENPORT WHELPLEY.

At all Booksellers' to-day.

BY THE IONIAN SEA.

By GEORGE GISSING.

A New Edition, uniform with 'The Fields of France.'

Illustrations and a Map. Crown 8vo, 5s. net.

It is felt that this book of Gissing's should appear not only in its large library form, but also in a handy shape for the ordinary bookshelf. At the time of Gissing's death it was generally said that this was one of the best of his books, and that it was a pity it was not more generally accessible.

ST. EALDHELM:

Founder of Sherborne.

By W. B. WILDMAN, MA.,

Author of 'A History of Sherborne,' &c.

With Illustrations. Crown 8vo, 2s 6d. net.

A Limited Large-Paper Edition, 10s. 6d. net.

This year is the 1,200th anniversary of the foundation of the Town and School of Sherborne, in 705 A.D., by St. Ealdhelm. The occasion is to be observed by a magnificent historical pageant in the ruins of the old castle, the book of which has been written by Mr. Louis N. Parker, Mr. James Rhoades, and Mr. Walter Raymond. Mr. Wildman's historical sketch of St. Ealdhelm is appropriate to the same occasion, and is based upon intimate first-hand research and careful analysis of authorities.

SYNOPSIS OF DICKENS'S NOVELS.

By J. WALKER McSPADDEN.

12mo, 2s. 6d. net.

This is a handy little desk-book, giving details of Dickens's stories.

NEW AND FORTHCOMING
SIX-SHILLING NOVELS.

A NEW NOVEL by the Authors of 'The SHULAMITE,' which will be remembered as one of the most successful stories published during 1904. The New Book is called

EVE — AND THE LAW.

By ALICE and CLAUDE ASKEW.

Crown 8vo, 6s.

"An interesting and exciting story.....an intricate but fascinating plot, full of tragic episodes, and excellent in the character delineation. The story compels attention." Birmingham Post.

"Full of tension and surprise.....treated in a strong emotional manner.....the romantic feeling is maintained throughout the novel's agreeably lengthy course." Dundee Advertiser.

"A powerful story, the interest of which centres round the emotional relations of certain men and women. The authors hold our interest; their characters bear the stamp of reality."—Glasgow Herald.

THE MIRROR OF KONG HO.

By ERNEST BRAMAH,

Author of 'The Wallet of Kai-Lung.'

"Those who read that novel and hilarious book, 'The Wallet of Kai-Lung,' will feel a thrill of joy at the appearance of another work by Mr. Ernest Bramah. Nor will their hopes be disappointed. 'The Mirror of Kong Ho' is one of the most gravity-removing (Kong Ho's own word) books which have appeared for a long time.....The broadest and most laughable farce." Morning Leader.

POVERTY BAY.

A Nondescript Novel.

By HARRY FURNISS.

Copiously illustrated with Drawings by the Author.

This is the first novel of the famous artist and caricaturist, and is bound to create no little interest and attention. It has for its central theme the sale of a Ghost, and presents throughout a series of characters and types original and distinctive.

The series of illustrations by Mr. Furniss are in his happiest vein, and add immeasurably to the vitality of the book.

THE DAY'S JOURNEY.

By NETTA SYRETT.

This is a novel of temperament, revealing the effect of disillusionment after marriage, and the gradual working towards reconciliation which ultimately is effected. The novel has a real human interest, and is admirably written.

THE SILVER KEY.

By NELLIE K. BLISSETT,

Author of 'Bindweed,' &c.

This is a romantic story in the time of Charles II. It is full of movement and adventure.

THE BROODING WILD.

A Mountain Tragedy.

By RIDGWELL CULLUM,

Author of 'The Devil's Keg,' 'The Hound from the North,' &c.

Mr. Cullum's new story will be found to be a distinct advance even on his two previous stories. In it he depicts, with rare realism, the solitary life and environment of the vast, desolate Rocky Mountains.

CHUN' KWANG.

A Tale of Chinese Love and Tragedy.

By OLIVER G. READY,

Author of 'Life and Sport in China.'

With 12 Illustrations by a Chinese Artist of repute.

This story is based on years of acquaintance with Chinese life and customs, and throws many quaint side-lights on the character and sentiment of the Far East.

MACMILLAN & CO.'S LIST.

NEW VOLUME OF ESSAYS
BY SIR ARCHIBALD GEIKIE
LANDSCAPE IN HISTORY,
And other Essays.
By Sir ARCHIBALD GEIKIE, D.C.L. F.R.S. 8vo, 8s. 6d. net.

CLASSICAL LIBRARY.—New Vol.
THE MYTHS OF PLATO.
Translated, with Introductory and other Observations, by J. A. STEWART, M.A., Student and Tutor of Christ Church and White's Professor of Moral Philosophy in the University of Oxford. 8vo, 14s. net.

TWELVE ENGLISH STATESMEN.
Crown 8vo, 2s. 6d. each.
CONCLUDING VOLUME.
CHATHAM.
By FREDERIC HARRISON.

[Tuesday.
PREVIOUSLY PUBLISHED.
WILLIAM the CONQUEROR. By Edward A. FREEMAN, D.C.L. LL.D.

HENRY II. By Mrs. J. R. Green.
EDWARD I. By T. F. Tout.
HENRY VII. By Dr. James Gairdner.
CARDINAL WOLSEY. By Bishop Creighton.
ELIZABETH. By Prof. E. S. Beesly.
OLIVER CROMWELL. By Frederic Harrison.
WILLIAM III. By H. D. Traill.
WALPOLE. By John Morley.
PITT. By Lord Rosebery.
PEEL. By J. R. Thursfield.

ENGLISH MEN OF LETTERS.—New Series.
Crown 8vo, gilt top, flat back, 2s. net.
SYDNEY SMITH.

By GEORGE W. E. RUSSELL.
DAILY TELEGRAPH.—"A warm-hearted, spirited, and remarkably attractive piece of biography, rich in excellent portraiture, and full of acute but indulgent criticism. In short, we have here one of the best-written volumes in all the distinguished series which it adorns."

MACMILLAN'S GUIDE-BOOKS.
ITALY AND SICILY.

With 19 Maps and 35 Plans. Fifth Edition. 10s. net.

THE EASTERN MEDITERRANEAN,
including GREECE and the GREEK ISLANDS, CONSTANTINOPLE, SMYRNA, EPHESUS, &c. Second Edition. With 27 Maps and Plans. 9s. net.

MACMILLAN'S NEW NOVELS.
Crown 8vo, gilt tops, 6s. each.
GERTRUDE ATHERTON.
THE BELL IN THE FOG,
And other Stories.
ALFRED TRESIDDER SHEPPARD.
THE RED CRAVAT.
JAMES BARNES.
THE UNPARDONABLE WAR.

A MANUAL OF QUATERNIONS.

By CHARLES JASPER JOLY, M.A. D.Sc. F.R.S. Sec.R.I.A. 8vo, 10s. net.

MACMILLAN & CO., LIMITED, London.

HURST & BLACKETT'S NEW LIST.

NOW IN GREAT DEMAND AT ALL
BOOKSELLERS' AND LIBRARIES.
MR. PERCEVAL LANDON'S GREAT WORK ON TIBET.

In 2 vols. royal 8vo, with over 250 beautiful
Illustrations, and 7 Maps, 2l. 2s. net.

L H A S A.

An Account of the Country and People of
Central Tibet, and of the Progress of the Mission sent there by the English Government in the Year 1903-4.

Written, with the help of all the principal persons
of the Mission,

By PERCEVAL LANDON,
Special Correspondent of the Times.

With an Introduction by
Col. Sir FRANCIS YOUNGHUSBAND,
K.C.I.E.

An Illustrated Prospectus sent free on application.

"Our correspondent has had such opportunities of studying the internal politics of Tibet as perhaps no European ever before obtained."—Times (leader).

"The climax of the narrative of course is the approach to Lhasa, and Mr. Landon does not miss his opportunity. In a few pages, now eloquent, now rhetorical, he describes his first sight of the city, which so few strangers had ever beheld, and which for centuries remained a place of dreams.
Of the illustrations it is impossible to speak too highly, and we know not where the art of photography has been carried to a loftier pitch of excellence."—Daily Mail.

DR. OTTO NORDENSKJOLD'S GREAT WORK on the SOUTH POLAR REGIONS.

In 1 vol., medium 8vo, illustrated by over 250 Reproductions of Photographs taken especially for this Work, 4 Coloured
Plates from Paintings, and 3 Maps, 18s. net.

ANTARCTICA.

Two Years amongst the Ice of the South Pole.

By Dr. OTTO NORDENSKJOLD.

"The story which is graphically told in this profusely illustrated volume adds an eloquent chapter to the long record of daring enterprise beyond the sea undertaken for a definite useful purpose."—Daily Chronicle.

A BOOK OF ANECDOTE ILLUSTRATING LITERARY LIFE IN LONDON.

In 1 vol. large crown 8vo, with 16 Portrait Sketches, 6s. net.

TWENTY YEARS AGO.

By EDMUND DOWNEY,
Author of 'Through Green Glasses.'

NEW NOVEL BY PHILIP L. STEVENSON.

In 1 vol. crown 8vo, 6s.

A GENDARME OF THE KING.

Being the Experiences of the Laird of Lindourie with the Great Frederick
in the Seven Years' War.

By PHILIP L. STEVENSON.

NEW EDITION, REVISED AND ENLARGED.

In 1 vol. demy 8vo, illustrated with numerous Reproductions from Photographs and Drawings, 12s. net.

ILLUSTRATED HORSEBREAK-

ING. By Capt. M. H. HAYES, Author of 'Points of the Horse,' 'Veterinary Notes,' &c.

NEXT WEEK, in 1 vol. large crown 8vo, with Illustrations, 6s.

The CHILD SLAVES of BRITAIN.

By ROBERT SHERRARD, Author of 'The White
Slaves of England,' &c.

London: HURST & BLACKETT, LIMITED,
182, High Holborn, W.C.

MESSRS. CONSTABLE'S LIST.

GENERAL LEE'S LETTERS and RECOLLECTIONS. By Capt. ROBERT E. LEE.
Illustrated. Demy 8vo, 12s. 6d. net.

A Sword without a Stain.
"Of all the heroes of the nations of the nineteenth century Robert E. Lee stands with Charles Gordon in the highest place.....The Fatherlands of Sydney and Bayard never produced a nobler soldier, Christian, and gentleman than General Robert E. Lee."—Daily News.

"Lord Wolseley, who was his visitor for some time during the Civil War, formed so high an estimate of his merits as a leader that he placed him on the same level of greatness as Napoleon."—Daily Chronicle.

The RUSSO-JAPANESE CON-FLICT. By R. ASAKAWA, Professor of Philosophy at Dartmouth College. Illustrated. Demy 8vo, 7s. 6d. net.

"This valuable book deserves to be purchased, read with attention, and kept at hand for reference by all those who take an intelligent interest in the origin and issues of the great campaign in the Far East.....The subject is treated with impartiality and a very agreeable spirit of moderation."
Times.

FAR and NEAR. By John Burroughs.

Crown 8vo, 5s. net.
"Since Richard Jefferies died there is nobody writes so well in English about fields and hillsides and the open air and the life of free birds and beasts as does Mr. John Burroughs."—Scotsman.

BITS of GOSSIP. By Rebecca

HARDING DAVIS. Reminiscences of the famous
"New England" School of Writers. Fcap. 8vo, 5s. net.
"This is most decidedly a book to be read."—Spectator.

The SUN and the SERPENT. A

Contribution to the History of Serpent Worship. By Brigade-Surgeon C. F. OLDHAM. Demy 8vo, with 33 Full-Page Illustrations, 10s. 6d. net.

The KING in EXILE (CHARLES II.).

By EVA SCOTT, Author of 'Rupert Prince Palatine.'
Demy 8vo, illustrated, 15s. net.

JOHN GRAHAM of CLAVERHOUSE,

VISCOUNT of DUNDEE, 1648-1689. By C. SANFORD
TERRY, M.A. Illustrated. Demy 8vo, 12s. 6d. net.

THE INGERSOLL LECTURES.

The CONCEPTION of IMMOR-

TALITY. By JOSIAH ROYCE, Professor of Philosophy at Harvard University. 16mo, 2s. 6d.

"Last year we had Prof. William James's masterly and inspiring little brochure; this year we have Prof. Royce's not less admirable treatment of the same subject.....His lecture is so stimulating and helpful that we have no hesitation in recommending it to the thoughtful reader."
Westminster Gazette.

UNIFORM WITH THE ABOVE.

SCIENCE and IMMORTALITY. By

WILLIAM OSLER, M.D. F.R.S., Regius Professor of Medicine at Oxford University. 2s. 6d.

HUMAN IMMORTALITY. Two

Supposed Objections to the Doctrine. By WILLIAM
JAMES, Professor of Philosophy at Harvard University.
Fourth Edition. 2s. 6d.

NEW SIX-SHILLING NOVELS.

IN SEARCH of the UNKNOWN.

ROBERT W. CHAMBERS, Author of 'The Maids of Paradise,' 'Cardigan,' &c.

CRITTENDEN. John Fox, Author of 'The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come.'

The WEDDING of the LADY of

LOVEL. UNA L. SILBERRAD, Author of 'Petronilla
Heroven,' &c.

JOHN FLETCHER'S MADONNA.

Mrs. COMYNS CARR, Author of 'Cottage Folk,' &c.

The DIVINE FIRE. May Sinclair.

"Judged by almost every standard to which a comedy like this should be referred, I find her book the most remarkable that I have read for many years."—Punch.

READY IMMEDIATELY.

STEAM TURBINES, with an

Appendix on Gas Turbines and the Future of Heat
Engines. By Dr. A. STODOLA. With over 1,240
Illustrations. Demy 8vo, 21s. net.

Please write for Complete Catalogue and Announcement List and Prospectuses of all New Books in above List, to

A. CONSTABLE & CO., LIMITED,
16, James Street, Haymarket, S.W.

SATURDAY, MARCH 4, 1905.

CONTENTS.

|  |          |
|--|----------|
| ADMIRAL FREMANTLE ON THE NAVY ... ..   | PAGE 263 |
| STUDIES IN VIRGIL ... ..   | 264      |
| THE CAMBRIDGE MODERN HISTORY ... ..  | 265      |
| THE LETTERS TO THE SEVEN CHURCHES OF ASIA ...  | 267      |
| THE NEWSPAPER PRESS DIRECTORY ... ..   | 268      |
| NEW NOVELS (Cut Laurels; Eve and the Law; Little Wife Hester; The Tempestuous Petticoat; The Fate of Felix; Before the Crisis; From the Clutch of the Sea) ... ..  | 263-269  |
| RECENT VERSE ... ..  | 269      |
| OUR LIBRARY TABLE (Modern Constitutions in Outline; Recollections of Irish Politics; Jeremy Taylor; Report of Social Conditions in Dundee; Army Organization; England's Ruin; The Faith of Church and Nation; Far and Near; Travancore Directory; The Mirror of Kong Ho; Reprints and New Editions; Vickers's Newspaper Gazetteer) ... | 270-272  |
| LIST OF NEW BOOKS ... ..   | 272      |
| SIR WENYSS REID; COMPULSORY GREEK AND SCHOOL-MASTERS; WHAT IS AN "8vo"? THE NEWSVENDORS' BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION; MARCEL SCHWOB; THE SPRING PUBLISHING SEASON ... ..  | 272-273  |
| LITERARY GOSSIP ... ..   | 274      |
| SCIENCE—BLONDIOT ON N RAYS; SIR STAMFORD RAFFLES AND THE FOUNDING OF THE ZOOLOGICAL SOCIETY; SOCIETIES; MEETINGS NEXT WEEK; GOSSIP ... ..  | 275-278  |
| FINE ARTS—THE TRUE PORTRAITURE OF MARY, QUEEN OF SCOTS; THE WHISTLER EXHIBITION; WATER-COLOURS AT AGNEW'S; THE BRITISH SCHOOL AT ROME; SALES; GOSSIP ... ..  | 278-281  |
| MUSIC—SYMPHONY CONCERT; MONDAY SUBSCRIPTION CONCERT; MISS SUNDERLAND AND MR. THISTLETON'S CHAMBER CONCERT; LE "CARINET" DU ST. SÉBASTIEN DE BROSSARD; GOSSIP; PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK ... ..  | 282-283  |
| DRAMA—THE POT OF BROTH; IN THE HOSPITAL; HOW HE LIED TO HER HUSBAND; DER STROM; GOSSIP ... ..  | 283-284  |

LITERATURE

The Navy as I have Known It, 1849-1899.
By Admiral the Hon. Sir E. R. Fremantle. (Cassell & Co.)

OF the many volumes of reminiscences which have been issued from the press during the last twenty years, there are few which can compare with this in interest and importance. It is not that the mere incidents of Sir Edmund Fremantle's life have been very exceptional, though he has served with distinction in many different parts of the world, and won a deservedly high reputation; it is that in the first place he is an excellent raconteur, and when he has a good story does not spoil it in the telling; but still more it is that the record of his experience is, to a very great extent, the record of the changes of which he has been a witness—changes from the line-of-battle ship, frigate, and corvette of fifty or sixty, or two hundred years ago, to the battleship, cruiser, and destroyer of our own time; changes of a magnitude and of a nature absolutely unprecedented. It is not too much to say that these changes of the last five decades are, in their result, greater than the changes which had been made in the previous five centuries; and that, vast as was the difference between the ships which crushed the sea power of France at Sluys in 1310 and those which checkmated French policy at Acre in 1840, it was not so great as that between the navy of the first and last decades of our late Queen's reign. And it will be noted that this wondrous change was almost exactly synchronous with the career of Sir Edmund Fremantle. He joined the navy in 1849; his service ended in 1899, though he did not actually retire till 1901. He went out to the Mediterranean and to China in sailing ships; he served in a transitional screw three-decker, and commanded a screw corvette and a screw frigate of the old design. He was commander-in-chief in China during the war between China and Japan ten or eleven years ago, and was afterwards port-admiral at Devonport, where all that was new, all that was progressive, was continually passing under his notice and official judgment. And it is not only the ships—their motive power, their armour, their armament—that have changed; everything relating to the navy has changed with them. Fifty years ago, as a hundred, the seamen were the roughest specimens of humanity, picked up at hap-hazard, and brought into a state of order and discipline by a free use of the cat; now their name is almost a synonym for cleanliness, obedience, and respectability. Other times, other manners, and if the old sailor was very commonly a noble-minded fellow, it was not unfrequently the severe discipline which made him so. Of course, in the present humanitarian age, flogging has ceased; but in pluming ourselves on being so much better than our forefathers, we ought at least to remember that the navy of to-day is able to dispense with it because the system of entering and paying the seamen has been so greatly improved. For many of the men, raised as ships' companies were during the first half of last century, flogging was the only punishment they could understand or care about; but Sir Edmund Fremantle is in agreement with every writer who has spoken from actual knowledge in saying that "its brutality has been much exaggerated"; and he continues:—

"There was some virtue in this summary punishment, which often, fifty years ago, settled a case of insubordination or desertion which now results in a court-martial and a long sentence of imprisonment or penal servitude. A flogging to a young sailor often made a good man of him; it was not looked upon as much disgrace, and his friends were not any the wiser. Now, even any minor punishment awarded must affect a man's pay, and consequently those dependent on him."

Sir Edmund's service as a midshipman took him to the China Station with Capt. Sir William Hoste, son of the man who won the brilliant action of Lissa in 1811. He was there during the Russian war, and his narrative calls up the painful memory of events which are perhaps not so widely known as they ought to be, which were not, indeed, much discussed at the time because they happened so far away. As there was no telegraph, the occurrences were already old before the news of them reached England, and as the state of things in the Crimea was absorbing public attention, they passed almost unheeded. But it was not so in China or in naval circles, where the inaction or neglect was very bitterly criticized, and where it was said that the C.B.s conferred on the two senior captains a few years later stood for Castries Bay and cowardly beggar. We believe that naval opinion was wrong, and that—though the C.B.s were certainly misplaced—the officers referred to were both capable and honourable men; but they, like the whole service—the army as well as the navy—were suffering from the canker of a long peace and neglected or starved establishments. Officers had been brought up to believe that if the paint was fresh, the ship clean, and the decks white, all was well; if the men could exercise smartly aloft, so much the better; and when war broke out they did not know what they had to do—they could not understand what was expected from them. It was not only in the China Seas that we had these bitter experiences; others in the Black Sea or the Baltic made a noise the echo of which still reverberates.

It seems wholly unnecessary, as indeed it is impossible, to accept a suggestion repeated by Sir Edmund Fremantle, that perhaps the admiral "had orders not to press the Russians in the Far East. It appeared to us then," he says, "and the more one thinks of it the more clear it seems, that unless he had some such orders, his conduct throughout showed lamentable weakness and indecision." We might believe in any amount of crass ignorance or ineptitude displayed by the Government or the Admiralty of the day, but we cannot believe that any high-minded officer would accept such instructions, or act on them in the way that was done at Castries Bay or at Petropavlovsk; and we do not doubt that Sir Edmund himself lays his finger on the true explanation of these disgraceful affairs when he quotes from Capt. Mahan's 'Types of Naval Officers':—

"The tendency of the want of experience followed by the long period not of peace only, but of professional depression resultant upon inactivity and national neglect, was to stagnation.....Self-improvement was not a note of the service.....The stimulus of occupation and the corrective of experience being removed, average men stuck where they were and grew old in a routine of service, or—what was perhaps worse—out of the service in all but name.....The men at the head of the navy, to whom the country naturally looked, either had no record, no proof of fitness, because but youths in the last war, or else, in simple consequence of having then had a chance to show themselves, were now superannuated."

The grandson of one of Nelson's "band of brothers," who had, too, died whilst actually commander-in-chief in the Mediterranean, the son of a political peer, and the nephew of two admirals, was not likely to remain long in the junior ranks of the service at a time when promotion depended mainly on interest. Young Fremantle came home from China an acting lieutenant, and was confirmed in that rank on passing his examination at Portsmouth. Three years later, having been flag-lieutenant to his uncle, Sir Charles Fremantle, then commanding the Channel fleet, he was advanced to the rank of commander, on a "hauling-down vacancy." The "hauling-down vacancy" is a thing of the past:—

"The custom was abolished many years ago, but it was long maintained, as it offered opportunities of early advancement for a certain number, so as to leaven the age of the flag officers. Frequently, no doubt, the young officer so promoted had no merit whatever, and his promotion was a gross injustice to older and better men; but many of our best admirals of recent years have owed their early advancement to 'hauling-down vacancies.'.....There is much force in the argument that an officer learns to take responsibility by being placed early in command, and not being kept too long in a subordinate position."

At present promotion comes only from the Admiralty as the reward of merit; interest, as a professional lever, is theoretically extinct; and if it is not so practically, at least it is unable to raise a lieutenant of two or three years' service to the rank of commander, over the heads of some nine or ten hundred less fortunate seniors.

For nearly three years the young commander was on shore on half-pay, the mention of which leads him to a consideration of what has always been a special naval grievance:—

"Even a few years ago, when junior captains were three to four years on half-pay, many married commanders felt obliged to refuse promotion, as they could not face having to live on half-pay of 227*l.* a year, when they had, as commanders, received constant full pay of about double that amount, and could go in the coast-guard for some years at 500*l.* a year, retiring at the age of fifty on 400*l.* a year. For this reason, solely because they were poor men, many good officers were lost to the service, as they could not afford to be 'ruined by promotion,' an old naval phrase of much significance some fifty years ago, when captains might be thirty to forty years in that rank, and yet be unable to serve the qualifying six years entitling them to promotion to active flag rank.....I should like to see half-pay abolished, all officers on the active list being on full pay without allowances when discharged from their ships, but all below flag rank should be attached to a ship in reserve, which it would be their duty to join on an emergency."

A step in this direction has recently been made in the new scheme of organization; and, according to appearances, further advance in the same direction is likely. Commander Fremantle, however, was not to pine away on half-pay. A commission on the Australian station won for him distinction in the Maori war of 1865, a bride, and promotion to post rank. From that time his service was almost continuous. As a captain, or later as an admiral, wherever anything was doing, he was there or thereabouts: on the West Coast of Africa in the Ashantee war; on the East Coast of Africa, where a punitive expedition against Vitu has suggested—if we do not mistake—one of the most delicious bits of burlesque any of our modern novelists can boast of; or in the China seas during the Japanese war—everything was taking place under his eyes, and his narrative is an outline of recent history by one who has largely helped in the making of it. And as we close the book, which we have read with interest and enjoyment, we may wish the gallant admiral many years of peaceful retirement, and that he may in due time see his son, now a captain in the navy, emulating his own distinguished career, and in due time flying his flag as an admiral of the fourth generation.

Studies in Virgil. By T. R. Glover. (Arnold.)

MR. GLOVER begins this most interesting book with that touch of despondency about the future of classical study which is becoming rather monotonous. "It is generally recognized," he says in the first page of his preface, "that at present there is a movement in education away from the classics." It would be wiser, and as true, to say that the increasing necessity of other subjects, such as science and modern languages, being cultivated at schools and universities, is laying upon both alike the paramount duty not only of widening their borders, but also of raising the intellectual standard. Not one public-school boy in fifty reaches the university with his working capacity fully developed; not one public-school master in twenty fully realizes this fact; that far too many parents "love to have it so," is exactly the evil to be striven against, not a written law of Fate demanding acquiescence. Mr. Glover, at all events (Pref., p. viii), strove against the stream in Canada for five years, lecturing "winter by winter on some three books of the 'Æneid' to a class of from forty to sixty students, and the following chapters are the indirect result"—a result, it may be added, for which students of Virgil should be grateful. It is good also to find him acknowledging the aid not only of British scholars dead and living—Conington and Sellar, Tyrrell and Mackail—but also of those of France: Boissier, Sainte-Beuve, and Patin. Sainte-Beuve, in this connexion, has boasted, with truth and felicity, that "the Gauls early found their way to the Capitol." Perhaps among these names room might have been found for that of the late F. Myers, whose single essay has done so much to popularize, in the best sense, the genius of Virgil. In any case, Mr. Glover need not fear (Pref., p. ix) that any intelligent reader can possibly think that he has laid rude or irreverent hands on "so great an ancient." It is possible to differ from some of his praise, or to dissent, e.g., from his estimate of Æneas; it is not possible to read his book without recognizing in him a loyal lover of Virgil.

The work consists of twelve chapters, of which the first, 'The Age and the Man,' is biographical in the strict sense of the term: the essential difference between the Greek and the Jew on the one hand, and the Roman on the other, is excellently marked, as is the effect upon the latter, and on Virgil in particular, of the blood-stained epoch of Marius and Sulla:—

"Greek and Jew were more conscious of race than of state: the one had too strong a sense of the individual, while the other tended to subordinate his state to his religion. With the Roman, race and state were one; he had certain clear conceptions as to its claims upon himself, his own part and responsibility in working out its history.....He had no speculative habit, but the root of the matter was in him. Consequently he was full of the sense of the state. It was the embodiment of the ideas of the race, their expression of themselves. But, unhappily, other ideals of life had made their appearance, and with them had come disorder, self-seeking, and the betrayal of the state. The sixty years of faction, of wrong done recklessly or in cold blood to the idea of the community, shocked every man who thought. ....Hence it is that Virgil's love of his country, one of the great notes of all his poetry, gives such an impression of depth and emotion; it is conscious love; it is sympathy and anxiety."

Of Rome, and of Virgil in particular, this is well said; the demur that suggests itself is this: Does not Mr. Glover underrate the amount of the same feeling of the state in the democracy of Athens and in the oligarchy of Lacedæmon? Just so, he tends, from love of Virgil, to depreciate Horace:—

"Horace, the prophet of common sense, the man who never transcended the sterling, but hardly inspiring, moralities of his most worthy father—is Horace really after all the interpreter of the life of the Augustan age?"

Possibly not; but is not Mr. Glover underrating Horace and his father alike, in his enthusiasm for Virgil? Not lightly did Horace write his noble praise of his father, or his ideal of constancy:—

Felices ter et amplius,
Quos irrupta tenet copula, nec malis
Divulsus querimoniis
Suprema citius solvet amor die.

That might have been written by Virgil, nay, by Shakspeare, as far as matter is concerned; if Horace had it from his father, why talk of his "hardly inspiring moralities," instead of seeing in it the best of reasons for the mutual love of Virgil and Horace? For his analysis of Virgil's personal character Mr. Glover deserves the thanks of all lovers of the poet; he is undoubtedly in the right in recognizing (p. 23) that "of all human relations in the 'Æneid,' that of father and son is dwelt on with most frequent and affectionate emphasis"; in the right, too, probably, in connecting this emphasis with the poet's own career as γηροβροχός to his blind and ejected father, when "the barbarian soldier pounced upon our corn-farm" (E. i. v. 72). But still more welcome, perhaps, are the words (pp. 34-5) about the brighter and happier side of the poet's mind. Most of us think of him as a musing and wistful person, saddened by events and by temperament, and unconsoled by, though grateful for, the sympathy and friendship of great and of good men. But this is a one-sided estimate—by no means the whole truth. The 'Georgics' are full of sympathetic and joyful humour, of delight in the ways of birds and animals—ants and bees, mice and coots and crows. Doubtless the land of the shadow was never far from his thought: he turns from the joyous country-side to the portents that accompanied the death of Cæsar; from the tiny ways and wars of the bees to his masterpiece of simple pathos, the double loss of Eurydice.

But neither 'The Myths of Æneas' (in 'Literature,' chap. iv. pp. 79-98) nor 'The Land and the Nation' (chaps. v.-vii.) is of such universal interest as the 'Interpretation of Life' (chaps. viii.-xii.), especially the part which deals with Dido, and with Æneas as man and as leader. To most readers the supreme triumph of Virgil is in the episode of Dido, and especially in book iv. of the 'Æneid.' To many it seems, not unjustly, like a great Greek tragedy put into Latin hexameters, with the chorus eliminated. It cannot, of course, be anything of the sort, though it does show that Virgil had pondered over the Greek drama, as he had over Homer and Theocritus. It is probable, though hardly proved (see p. 161), that the meeting of Dido and Æneas, and the passion of Dido, formed a part of Nævius's 'Punic War,' book i. If this be so, Virgil was simply following poetic tradition in repeating the legend. But in that adoption Virgil, by something like common consent, surpassed himself—unless the majestic vision of the Spirit Land in book vi. can dispute the award. Here, and here only, the greatest of ethical questions is dealt with—and decided, as many think, wrongly; and here, as might be expected, Mr. Glover hesitates in his judgment, yet rises, in more than one place, to real beauty of style. The problem is, Can the command of the gods be held as a sound justification for the desertion of Dido? or, in other words, Is Virgil justified of his own picture, the righteous and exemplary hero going on from strength to strength, after his base treachery and even baser pleas in defence? Here is Mr. Glover's summing-up:—

"As for the gods, it is hardly possible to justify their ways to men. They set the foundation of Rome before everything, so the poet assures us, but he knows quite well that they do nothing of the kind. He is too just a thinker and too great a poet not to know it.....He knows, too, how little names and places, in spite of all their appeal, really are, as opposed to the virtues and the character which are the foundations of all society. And yet in Dido's anguish it is written that the gods think more of seven hills beside a river than of human woe or of right and wrong. Here, then, our tragedy fails and is untrue. On the side of Dido it is true, vividly and transparently true. On this side, by everything involved and implied in it, it cries out against its creator. New thoughts upon character and righteousness gleam from the work, and by the light they shed we read the falsity of some of it. The falsity is where the poet surrenders to the feelings and the fancies of his day; the gleams of truth are eternal, and they are pre-eminently his own."

We find truth, as well as beauty, in this passage; but some considerations may be urged in modification of it. Is not Mr. Glover unconsciously ignoring the fact that a person may be the hero of an epic or a drama—even though its subject be no less than the origin of the Roman Empire—without being a hero in the abstract sense? He may be brave without being in all respects chivalrous or moral: he may believe he has a commission from deities in whom the poet himself has little or no belief, and may honestly think that, of two conflicting duties, he has chosen the higher, without our being forced either to condemn the poet or to absolve the hero. Virgil, whatever else he may be, is not an optimist; he is a dweller in the shadow, he views even the empire "with anxiety rather than admiration": he extols Augustus, yet holds himself away from him and his Court for the most part, and has perhaps more gratitude than enthusiasm in his heart towards his mighty prince. A poet of this temperament instinctively draws the hero of his epic in light and shade; as Mr. Glover sees (chap. ix.), between the Homeric and the Virgilian hero there is a great gulf fixed: Sophocles could have drawn Æneas, but Virgil could not have drawn Achilles; his temperament here limits his imagination. Unconsciously, perhaps, but with profound truth, Virgil draws Æneas, after the Carthaginian episode, as always care-worn, brave in action, but pensive in reflection; there stands between him and his past the shadow of a crime, a shadow which glares, but will not speak ('Æn.,' vi. 467-74), and turns away, as one who "does her true love know from another one," to rejoin Sychæus, who has forgiven her. That is the most Virgilian thing in all Virgil, and it is, in reality, his concise answer to all the casuistical questioning which his epical story has aroused.

Mr. Glover's estimate of Augustus is, on the whole, a little, though only a little, less than just: "a shrewd and successful adventurer" (p. 137); "like other political and intellectual middlemen.....owing his success at once to his practical adroitness and his intellectual inferiority" (ib.); "How should the poet of Dido and Evander and Pallas find a place [among the gods] for a figure so sordid and so prosaic?" (p. 139.) These are bitter words, and one of them, "sordid," much too bitter to be historical. Some amends for this may, indeed, be found on p. 144 and elsewhere; but there is a touch of prejudice in the attack, and, in the mind of a reader, nescit vox missa reverti. Augustus is not an heroic figure, but he was a cool, wise, and, on the whole, humane master of statecraft at an epoch in which none but a great man could have achieved all that Augustus did, or been loved by those whose affection Augustus won. Perhaps the most attractive passage in the whole book is the contrast (pp. 250-1) between the hopeful spirit of Plato and the wistful spirit of Virgil concerning the question of immortality. The passage from Plato is the familiar one from the 'Phædo,' and need hardly be reproduced here; the summary of Virgil's view may be quoted in part, as if from his own lips:

"If there is another life, it must be like this life in the main; it must be bound up with love and under the sway of moral law.....One thing is certain—that of all that men do, service of the state or humanity is the best worth doing. If there are rewards for anything, they must be for this—Cicero, you will remember, says the same in his myth. As to your personal immortality or mine being assured, we shall know better by-and-by. And, after all, what does it matter, if he is not to see his Tullia, and I—? Did you notice what Anchises said?—

Venisti tandem, tuaque expectata parenti
Vicit iter durum pietas?

Meanwhile there is our earth here."

One or two small "matters of question" may be mentioned. Is "simplicity" (p. 45) exactly the word to characterize Virgil's language? We do not like "pled" (pp. 46 and 100) as a substitute for "pleaded." On p. 97, l. 10, is not injustice done to Propertius, the poet of Cornelia? On pp. 145-6 is the version, in the text, of the Latin quoted from Macrobius in note 4, indubitable? May not "ad id opus" possibly=besides that work (the 'Æneid'), and the reference be to Virgil's avowed intention to struggle with philosophy, not poetry, as his final task? "Studia multo potiora" certainly suggests this meaning.

Mr. Glover has deserved well alike of his Canadian classes and of lovers of Virgil here at home, for this most enjoyable "indirect result" of his labours.

The Cambridge Modern History.—Vol. VIII.
The French Revolution. (Cambridge, University Press.)

THAT most of the thirteen elect sent forth by Cambridge should closely resemble each other by the adoption of a style which is both blameless and colourless is more remarkable than that they should sometimes differ in opinion. Is there no medium between the fervid but often incomprehensible rhapsodies of Mr. Belloc and the laboriously erudite compilation of men who, in the pride of their impartiality, scorn enthusiasm and abhor hero-worship? As for the differences in opinion, they are not, as we concluded in a previous notice of this 'History,' the result of editorial inadvertence, but were contemplated by the promoter of the scheme, the late Lord Acton, the most open-minded and independent of scholars, who thought it possible that a study of the same facts by two expert writers might lead to different conclusions, and therefore advisable to allow such latitude of view to each contributor attacking the matter from his special standpoint. We owe, therefore, an apology to the editors if we have suggested that they did not, through insufficient comparison of different portions of the 'History,' bring their various helpers into line with one another. But we think that such a unification of view in a single volume was naturally taken for granted.

By the definition of Voltaire as the mouth-piece of what most men were thinking, and of Rousseau as the voice of what others were feeling—moreover, by the remark that Jean Jacques's "impassioned rhetoric" was "the source of that romantic religious revival which paved the way for clerical reaction under the restored monarchy"—Mr. Willert reduces to its fit proportions the influence of the philosophers in the overthrow of the old régime. After all, did not Voltaire himself deride the fashion of political philandering? In the 'Dict. Phil.,' under the article 'Démocratie,' we may find his sneer:—

"On demande tous les jours si un gouvernement républicain est préférable à celui d'un roi. La dispute finit toujours par convenir qu'il est fort difficile de gouverner les hommes," a conclusion which would have been strengthened had he lived to experience what Mr. Willert seriously describes as "the sanctity of property" as observed under the Jacobins. For an emphatic refutation not only of such sanctity, but also of his opinion that the faction was untainted by communism, we have only to turn from this, the first chapter in the book, to the words with which Mr. Gooch ends the volume.

In the discussion by Mr. Higgs of "the ruined finances," and by Prof. Montague of "the fiscal oppression, the vacillations, the weakness and the incompetence of Government"—the true causes, says Mounier, of the subversive movement—we observe what we conceive to be defects in editing. Perhaps the plan adopted makes the overlapping of one monograph by another almost unavoidable, but was it necessary to cut in two Mr. Higgs's very valuable paper? The first half is brought down to 1789, and ends on p. 78; then, after his colleagues have completed their task with the date 1801, he harks back twelve years, and resumes his study on p. 689 with the opening of the States-General, &c., topics already dealt with by Prof. Montague. Besides, as soon as we have mastered Mr. Higgs's synopsis of revenue and expenditure from 1774 till the Compte Rendu of 1788, we are not prepared to digest another and not always consonant set of figures from the pen of Prof. Montague touching the Calonne Administration of 1783-7 and the growth of that national debt which, used as a lever for reform, was declared by Mirabeau "to have been the germ of our liberties."

"The Revolution arose from the fact that the French people had entirely outgrown its institutions, and must find new ones if its growth was not to cease."

So says Prof. Montague. In fact, the elaborate attention paid by him and Mr. Moreton Macdonald to the mechanism of the Government, both under the old régime and under the ever-changing exigencies of the Republic, invests their work with the value of a constitutional rather than a general history. Hence incidents so prejudicial to the prestige of the Crown as the affair of the Diamond Necklace are not noticed, whilst events like the fall of the Bastille are shorn of all dramatic adjuncts. More salient points are needed in the mass of constitution-making details. Yet on occasion the Professor epitomizes admirably; thus at the close of the National Assembly he remarks:—

"Public order depended on the concurrence of more than 40,000 independent bodies, and the head of the State, virtually imprisoned by the municipal authority, was an apt symbol of the condition of the whole Commonwealth."

The consequences of the flight to Varennes are, we think, inadequately defined; and surely it is a mistake to say that "all hope of help from foreign powers was extinguished" by that event, for king and queen continued those treasonable prayers to Austria for succour which were answered by Brunswick's manifesto.

"Comme tout change, comme tout se succède," wrote one of the deputies, and after Varennes there was no doubt a brief reaction among a portion of the Assembly in favour of the king; but when Mr. Macdonald states that during those days "nothing was further from the heart of France than the deposition of Louis," he seems to forget the anarchical condition of the provinces and the growing ascendancy of the populace over the bourgeoisie. Again, the massacre of the Champ de Mars should have been emphasized as the beginning of the class war in "a coup d'état of the bourgeoisie against the populace, against all democrats, whether republican or not" (Aulard, 'Hist. Pol. Rév.,' p. 153); the proof of that aspect—Danton's flight from Paris—is not even mentioned. However, Mr. Macdonald shows thorough mastery of the intricacies of the rival factions when dealing with the Convention and with that anarchy which, said Peltier, "a été constamment plus forte que les anarchistes." The anomalies of the Government have been summarized by M. Aulard: "On dut à la fois légiférer rationnellement pour l'avenir, pour la paix, et légiférer empiriquement pour le présent, pour la guerre"; but it is curious how few save Mallet du Pan note the cowardice which, soon infected the middle class, causing them to submit to fifteen months of terror, and thereby "convicting the nation of a moral turpitude which rendered them fit subjects for any kind of oppression" ('M. du Pan,' by B. Mallet, p. 178). Knowledge of this craven effeminacy inspired Robespierre's maxim:—

"If the strength of a Republican government in time of peace is virtue, in the time of Revolution it is both virtue and fear—for fear without virtue is deadly, virtue powerless without fear." The law of the 22 Prairial was the result of this theory.

In their treatment of foreign policy in two consecutive chapters Mr. Oscar Browning and Prof. Lodge weary us by needless repetitions. Each writer mentions our abject attempt to propitiate Russia by the offer of Minorca; each enlarges on the idiosyncrasies of Joseph II.; each propounds that monarch's pet project for annexing Bavaria and ceding Belgium, as well as Prussia's formation of the Fürstenbund to oppose the plan; each narrates the emperor's quarrel with the Dutch on the question of the Scheldt, his claim to Maestricht, and the settlement of the dispute by the treaty of Fontainebleau; the difficulties of the Stadholder, the insult to his wife and the intervention of her brother, the King of Prussia, the Convention of Reichenbach, &c. Moreover, in Mr. Browning's two summaries of the triumphs of Pitt's Triple Alliance (p. 289 and p. 295) he repeats himself. His treatment of the Courts of Austria and Russia, "the freebooters of Europe," and later of French diplomats in London in 1792, is interesting. "I cudgel my brains," said the Empress Catharine,

"to urge the Courts of Vienna and Berlin to busy themselves with the affairs of France. I wish it that I may have my own elbows free. I have many unfinished enterprises, and I wish these Courts to be fully occupied, so that they may not disturb me."

How, when that opportunity came, she accomplished the extinction of Poland is told by Prof. Lodge.

Mr. Wilson states that in 1793 "masses could not be utilized by France, for the simple reason that the ships into which to put them did not exist." Yet James under that date asserts that "at no previous period had she possessed so powerful a navy" ('Nav. Hist.,' vol. i. p. 51). Sir Robert Mann was an incompetent admiral; still his name need not always be curtailed of its last letter, nor need the loss of Corsica and the subsequent abandonment by our fleet of the Mediterranean for upwards of a year be attributed solely to his fiasco, October, 1796, for the British Government's order to evacuate the island—an order not mentioned by Mr. Wilson—was dated August 31st, and was received by Jervis September 25th. In his chapter on the general war Mr. Dunn-Pattison conscientiously performs a very arduous task. He gives a good description of the army under the old and new systems—the losses it sustained from emigration, the gradual development of the raw levies into highly trained soldiers. His judgments are not always consistent. Thus, after severely criticizing Dumouriez's tactics on several occasions, he finally declares that general as a strategist to have been the forerunner of Napoleon. The generals and staff officers were constantly changed, but so were also the Commissioners. Thus the latter could scarcely have supplied the "continuity of ideas and aims in the various armies" that Mr. Pattison imagines.

From the apathy engendered by the perusal of some of these monographs—whirlpools of facts in which scarce a vestige of the makers of those facts is discernible—the reader is suddenly aroused by the vivid description, the brilliant portrait-painting, and the incisive style with which Dr. Holland Rose discusses the earlier career of the Titanic genius who has long been the theme of his predilection and to one of whose characteristics—"a wide-sweeping vision with a passion for the mastery of details"—he himself might well lay claim. He recounts "the cycle of triumphs" by which between the spring of 1796 and that of 1797 the young and inexperienced general executed with such exactness the plan he had submitted to the Committee of Public Safety in 1795; how he proclaimed the subversion of time-worn Italian governments with the phrase, "We are going to have one or two republics here of our own sort; Monge will arrange that for us"; and how he fulfilled his threat, "I will be a second Attila to Venice," at the very moment when he was assuring that city of his desire to consolidate its liberty, and of his wish to see Italy free. Dr. Rose's opinion that Bonaparte, knowing the moral influence of the Papacy, had for the moment at least no wish to destroy the temporal power, might be strengthened by the Corsican's words to Cardinal Mattei on the eve of Tolentino: "If I were master we would have a concordat to-morrow" (Dufourey, 'Rég. Jacobin en Italie,' p. 49). We have no space to give to Dr. Rose's clear exposition of strategical details, as in the battle of Lodi and the siege of Acre; to his concise summaries of political situations; to his stirring description of the Egyptian expedition; nor yet to his record of that systematic plundering which, at the time of national bankruptcy, made Napoleon (to use Mr. Higgs's phrase) "one of the most valuable assets of the Revolutionary Government." In Mr. Fisher's 'Brumaire' we have another most excellent piece of work. The attitude of Sieyès is admirably rendered, but the description of Bonaparte's appearance at St. Cloud is slightly confused, the word "assembly" being indiscriminately applied to the Council of Anciens and that of the Five Hundred (p. 683). Such was the misery already caused by "the government of regicidal defence" that at Lyons 13,000 factories out of 15,000 were closed, and at Bordeaux the streets were left unlighted at night. Meanwhile our trade had increased by 65 per cent. between 1792 and 1800.

Mr. Gooch's critique on the advanced leaders of European thought opens with an interesting appreciation of Burke, but soon resolves itself into little more than a list of names. Some of his comments puzzle us, e.g.:—

"Numberless odes were evoked by the Revolution from writers of lesser calibre, such as Merry, Roscoe, James Montgomery, Anna Seward, and Miss Barbauld; but of such writings 'The Needy Knife-Grinder,' and a few other poems of The Anti-Jacobin, alone survive."

It is needless to say that none of those writers contributed to that collection of political squibs; that George Canning, author of the famous parody, is not generally classed among writers of lesser calibre; and that Anna Letitia Barbauld was a married woman.

M. Viollet throws much light on the anomalies produced by the amateur legislators of the Revolution. Thus the decrees of August 4th, which brought ruin on innumerable families, and a loss of 120,000,000 livres on the Republic, left the tribunals to decide whether a tenant paid cens or rente—the two dues might be identical, but the first was feudal, and to be annulled without indemnity to the proprietor; the second non-feudal, and to be maintained. "It is characteristic," we read, "of most of the durable laws framed during this period, that they were the outcome of centuries of exertion, and inversely of the ephemeral measures, that they had no root in the past."

For that very reason we think the decree of 1791, touching the penalty of death, should not be attributed to the contemporary Beccaria, for two centuries earlier Montaigne had proclaimed: "Tout ce qui est au delà de la mort simple me semble pure cruauté."

A work of such lasting value and solid scholarship must become a standard authority; but to fulfil this destiny it must have a proper index. Such will appear, we understand, later; but the one attached to the present volume is certainly inadequate. The sixty pages of 'General Bibliography' are useful.

The Letters to the Seven Churches of Asia. By W. M. Ramsay. (Hodder & Stoughton.)

PROF. RAMSAY has not shut himself in his study when dealing with these Letters, nor has he evolved a virtually new set of letters from his own consciousness; but he has gone to the East and visited the cities of the Churches, with the result that he has been able to throw a flood of light on part, at least, of the Book of Revelation. In the first chapters of this volume he discourses on letter-writing, on postal arrangements, and on Christian letters in the first century; and then he passes to such interesting subjects as the relation of the Christian books to contemporary thought and literature, the cities of Asia as meeting-places of the Greek and Asiatic spirit, and the Jews in the Asiatic cities. Each of the seven cities he marks with a special title. Thus Ephesus is the city of change, Smyrna the city of life, Sardis the city of death; and reasons for the names are found in the history of the places. The symbolism in the Letters is thus sketched:—

"There are seven groups of Churches in Asia: each group is represented by one outstanding and conspicuous member; these representatives are the seven Churches. These seven representative Churches stand for the Church of the Province, and the Church of the Province, in its turn, stands for the entire Church of Christ. Corresponding to this sevenfold division of the Church, the outward appearance and envisagement of the Divine Author of the Seven Letters is divided into seven groups of attributes; and one group of attributes is assumed by Him in addressing each of the seven Churches, so that the openings of the Seven Letters, put together, make up His whole outward and visible character."

Prof. Ramsay's treatment of each letter in detail is full of historic interest. He shows the significance of phrases by explaining the allusions contained in them; and it may safely be said that no one who wishes to have a clear understanding of the Book of Revelation will be able to do without this volume. The highest praise is due to Prof. Ramsay for the excellence of his work; and, without extravagance of laudation, it may be affirmed that no more valuable contribution has been made to the study of the Book of Revelation.

It is impossible, of course, for every intelligent reader to agree with Prof. Ramsay when he passes away from facts that have come under his own observation or have been obtained from credible authorities. One of his statements, which in itself is simple, is worthy of note. He asserts that the most striking feature of the Letters is their tone of unhesitating and unlimited authority; and he proceeds to show by contrast how authoritative that tone is. Letters such as that of Clement of Rome are examined in order to show the force of the contrast; but it is surely evident that in the Book of Revelation the style of speech must be authoritative, since the speaker is He who is described as "one like unto the Son of Man." Prof. Ramsay might have tried to interpret the mind of the writer who thought himself justified in speaking as the Son of Man, and might have compared him to, or contrasted him with, the authors of the prophetic books of the Old Testament. It might, of course, be urged that St. John at Patmos had a vision and that he heard the words set down in the seven Letters; but Prof. Ramsay has committed himself to the opinion that it seems probable that the Letters, "though placed near the beginning and fitted carefully into that position, were the last part of the work to be conceived." The opinion is nothing more than opinion; and the statement of it is intended to support a theory that it was St. John who wrote the Apocalypse and the Gospel, and that he was passing in these Letters from the style and thought of the Apocalypse to those of the Gospel, and was conscious of the transition during the composition of the earlier work.

The authorship of the Fourth Gospel is one of the vexed questions of historical criticism with which Prof. Ramsay is not called upon to deal in this volume, except in so far as the Letters help to an answer. He is satisfied that St. John wrote the Book of Revelation, and at a later period the Gospel. The former work, in his judgment, belongs to the last quarter of the first century, and he tells us that at the death of Domitian the Apostle was free to return to Asia, and that "he may have brought the Apocalypse with him," though "more probably an opportunity had been found of sending it already." He proceeds to say that "it reached the churches, and began to be effective among them in the latter part of Domitian's reign; and hence Irenæus says it was written at that time," and yet he has just admitted that it might have been brought by its author after the death of Domitian. The circumstances attending the composition of the Apocalypse, as set forth by Prof. Ramsay, are worthy of attention. "In that lonely time," he says,

"the thoughts and habits of his youth came back to him, while his recently acquired Hellenist habits were weakened in the want of the nourishment supplied by constant intercourse with Hellenes and Hellenists. His Hellenic development ceased for the time. The head of the Hellenic Churches of Asia was transformed into the Hebrew seer.....Nothing but a vision was possible for him; and the vision, full of Hebraic imagery and the traces of late Hebrew literature which all can see, yet also often penetrated with a Hellenist and Hellenic spirit so subtle and delicate that few can appreciate it, was slowly written down, and took form as the Revelation of St. John."

In spite of the arrested development St. John's "growing mind," as Prof. Ramsay states, "was on the point of bursting the last Jewish fetters that still contained it." We have seen that the development was arrested, that the Apostle's recently acquired Hellenist habits were weakened, but the actual facts of the banishment to Patmos which explain these mental changes may be noted. "It was," we are told,

"in its worst forms a terrible fate: like the death penalty, it was preceded by scourging, and it was marked by perpetual fetters, scanty clothing, insufficient food, sleep on the bare ground in a dark prison, and work under the lash of military overseers."

He who reads this description may ask how St. John found occasion to write the Apocalypse, and how he could get it forwarded to the churches in Asia. Prof. Ramsay proceeds with his description of St. John's "growing mind." Through the study of the Apocalypse, he says,

"we are able in a vague and dim way to understand how that long-drawn-out living death in Patmos was the necessary training through which he must pass who should write the Fourth Gospel. In no other way could man rise to that superhuman level on which the Fourth Gospel is pitched, and be able to gaze with steady unwavering eyes on the eternal and the divine and to remain so unconscious of the ephemeral world. And they who strive really to understand the education of Patmos will be able to understand the strangest and most apparently incredible fact about the New Testament, how the John who is set before us in the Synoptic Gospels could ever write the Fourth Gospel."

It may be pointed out that the St. John of the Synoptic Gospels suggests neither Hellenist nor Hellene, that the banishment to Patmos marks for Prof. Ramsay the ceasing for a time of the Apostle's Hellenic development, while the Fourth Gospel, contrasted with the others, displays certain more or less clearly Greek characteristics. How, then, does the education of Patmos help us to make the transition here suggested? And as St. John was, it may be conjectured, not more than ten years younger than Jesus, he was eighty-six years of age, at least, at the death of Domitian. Again, if Jesus was born a year or two before our date for the beginning of the Christian era, then the Apostle was more than eighty-six when the emperor died. Not for the first time, and not for the last, the objection can be stated that a man beyond the exceptional limit of four-score years is with the greatest difficulty to be thought of as the author of the Fourth Gospel; and it may be added that there will be some for whom the difficulty will be increased when they have learnt the treatment given to a prisoner on the island of Patmos. Prof. Ramsay, however, in words not above the suspicion of conveying a sneer, declares that "we lesser men, who have not the omniscient confidence of the critical pedant, do not presume to fix the limits beyond which St. John could not go."

Newspaper Press Directory. Diamond Jubilee Issue. (Mitchell & Co.)

ON March 16th, 1895, we reviewed the fiftieth issue of this valuable guide to the newspaper press, and we again offer our hearty congratulations to Mr. Wellsman, for when its publication was started by Mr. Mitchell in 1846 he was associated with him in the work. In 1857 he became sub-editor, and since Mr. Mitchell's death in 1859 he has been sole editor. The first issue in 1846 was 12mo in size, and opened with an article on the newspaper press, its origin and progress. The stamp duty, which commenced on August 1st, 1712, had the effect of reducing the sale of The Spectator one half, but did not prevent the gradual increase in the number of publications. In the early days of the press the provincial papers were often in a difficulty on account of shortness of matter, and the editor of The Leicester Journal, a paper printed in London and sent to Leicester for publication, had in 1750 recourse to the Bible to help him out. He began with Genesis and continued the extracts in every succeeding number, and got as far as the tenth chapter of Exodus. The first country paper to have a leading article was The Cambridge Journal. This was introduced by Mr. Flower during the French Revolution, and in 1801, when The Leeds Mercury became the property of Edward Baines, he at once published leading articles; but it was some time before the practice was generally followed.

'The History of the Railway Press' forms an interesting chapter. Such literature was originated by George Walker, resident director of the Greenwich Railway, who, in 1835, started The Railway Magazine. The number of papers in 1846 was 550. Of these 213 were Liberal, 195 Conservative, and 142 neutral and class papers. The number of London dailies was twelve. These included three devoted to commerce. Among the weekly papers were two with curious titles, The Surplice (High Church) and Mephystopheles, which advocated "satirical gibes, as the stimulants to moral and political regeneration." The Pictorial Times was apparently the first paper to hold out to its subscribers the inducement of a species of lottery, in which gifts were offered varying from one thousand pounds to fifty. Among many interesting statistics it is stated that 112,000 papers were forwarded daily by post.

The services rendered by the 'Directory' to newspaper proprietors had been so great that on March 21st, 1851, on the occasion of Mr. Mitchell's birthday, a presentation of a service of plate was made to him. The increase in the number of papers was still slow. The 'Directory' gives the total number issued in 1851 at 563, an addition of thirteen only since 1846. Mr. Mitchell, in the introduction, advocated the improvement of the social position of all connected with the public journals:—

"English editors, unlike those of their class in France, hold, at best, but a dubious position in society; in that country their political power is acknowledged. Their literary talents are highly appreciated.....and as Louis Philippe during his reign, so now the President of the Republic is gratified by their company at his table."

In connexion with this he recalled the fact that "the severest reproach ever made to Lord Brougham by his peers was that he wrote for a newspaper."

In 1854 the 'Directory' was enlarged to its present shape; but the number of pages still increases, as a considerable space has to be devoted to the colonial press. The early struggles of this we referred to in our former article. In this "Diamond Jubilee" issue it is stated that

"in this country hardly anything is known of the hard-won struggle for freedom which preceded the emancipation of the press in almost every British colony.....The censorship was one of the royal prerogatives which colonial governors parted with most reluctantly, and not until the privilege of freedom had been almost torn from their grasp."

The first newspaper published in Australia was The Sydney Gazette, on March 5th, 1803. Now there are nearly a thousand, and their annual circulation through the Post Office reaches the enormous total of 130,000,000. This gives a proportion of twenty-six newspapers per head of the population. "One of the giants of the Australian press" is The Sydney Herald, founded on April 18th, 1831, with the motto: "Sworn to no master, of no sect am I." The paper is "immensely wealthy and prosperous," and "is regarded with affectionate veneration as one of the institutions of Australia"; its present editor is Mr. Thomas Heney. As regards the South African press, we are told that,

"considering the limited population, and therefore the limited circulation of the journals, the principal newspapers can compare advantageously with any newspapers in the world."

Interesting portraits of colonial editors are given.

Dr. Fraser contributes an article on 'The Legal Year, in its Relation to the Press.' Sir Alfred Harmsworth, who writes on 'The Daily Newspaper of To-day,' is "profoundly convinced that it is no mere optimism to state that the future of the daily newspaper grows brighter every year. As a record of the world's history it is well on the road to perfection, while its educative influence is greater to-day than it has ever been in the past.....independence and disinterestedness on the part of the press have taken the place of servility to political parties, and of subserviency to fleeting phases of popular opinion."

As regards the multiple system, he does not regard it as one that will largely increase, and thus

"there need be no fear that local opinion—a very valuable asset in the making up of the national mind—will be suppressed by those giant newspaper trusts so much talked about by weaklings of the press and others whose incapacity has caused them to be hurt by the newcomers."

There is also an article by Sir Edward Russell 'On the Judgment of the Press,' in which he maintains that "the press should comment as well as chronicle. Its censures should be as much valued as its news."

Mr. Wellsman's statistics show that the press has more than quadrupled since the first issue of his 'Directory.' There are now 2,461 newspapers in the United Kingdom; of these 231 appear daily. It is difficult for the present generation to conceive how heavy were the past burdens on the press. Relief first came in 1853, when the advertisement tax was repealed; this was followed by the repeal of the stamp duty in 1855, and of the paper duty in 1861. Comparatively small as the press was in 1850, the three taxes yielded 1,440,252*l.* All papers had to be impressed with the compulsory stamp, whether sent by post or not, with a few exceptions, such as The Athenæum, Punch, and The Builder, which were considered as class papers, and not supposed to contain news. These were permitted to have two issues—stamped and unstamped. The Society for the Repeal of the Stamp Duty, wishing to show its hardship, did their best to bring about a prosecution of these papers. Paragraphs containing news were marked and sent to the authorities, with the result that John Francis was frequently ordered to attend at Somerset House, on behalf of The Athenæum, to receive a warning. The good effect of the repeal of the stamp duty was soon shown, for though the number of papers in 1854 was only 623, in 1856 they had increased to 789, while the daily papers numbered 35 instead of only 19.

In 1861 the number of papers was 1,102, as a result of the repeal of the paper duty; they in the following year amounted to 1,206, the dailies having increased from 61 to 72.

NEW NOVELS.

Cut Laurels. By M. Hamilton. (Heinemann.)

THIS is a remarkably sound and workman-like piece of fiction, though the main idea has been used before. In the beginning we are introduced to a wife and her seventeen-year-old daughter in Belfast, in a chapter headed:—

"The woman who has her husband with her (i.e., at her back) can turn the moon with her finger. The woman without her husband is like a bird with one wing."

The wife of this story has not her husband with her. She has not had him with her for eighteen years, since the year of her girlhood, in which they were married; and in the opinion of the public he had died long since. Now comes a telegram from the War Office, after the fall of Khartoum, saying that he is alive. For eighteen years this man has been a prisoner of the Khalifa, while the daughter he has never seen has grown almost to womanhood, and the wife he left a girl has, while fighting a plucky fight with the world, developed several grey hairs. Wife and daughter go to Cairo to meet the rescued prisoner. Eighteen years of a sort of animal's existence as the captive of an Eastern barbarian must needs leave their permanent mark upon a man. This man, like various other prisoners, had been forced by circumstances into taking a native wife. He has two half-breed sons. The censorious world says he never wished to escape, and served the Khalifa willingly. Now he meets his very loving and faithful English wife, and returns with her and his two half-caste boys to Belfast. The working out of the story it would be unfair to relate here.

It is excellently managed, and indicates both thoughtful care and real insight on the author's part. This is a novel that should be read.

Eve and the Law. By Alice and Claude Askew. (Chapman & Hall.)

A SERPENT coiled about the trunk of a toy apple-tree faces one upon the cover of this volume. Eve is its heroine; the law is that of marriage, as affecting English girls who marry foreigners without first ascertaining, or allowing their relatives to ascertain, that the marriage is in order. The law has obvious disadvantages, for it enables a French scoundrel to make a legally dishonest woman of an English fool. On the other hand, this same law is pretty generally known and understood, and the girl who chooses to deceive indulgent relatives, run away from home, and forsake her native land at the bidding of a foreigner of whom she knows next to nothing, must be aware that, apart from the legal question, she is giving somewhat reckless hostages to fortune. If at the same time, as in the case of the heroine of this melodramatic tale, she deceives a good and honest English lover, first by pretending that she goes to Paris merely to study music, and, secondly, by marrying him when her false French lover has forsaken her; then, and more certainly if she is the kind of girl here portrayed, it is not easy to accord to her the sort of sympathy her creators seem to expect. The French lover, Felix Deschamps (presently, in accordance with the stage tradition, a count), is not so much a character as a staringly labelled peg, upon which various stereotyped attributes of masculine villainy are hung. The same criticism comes painfully near to fitting every other figure in the book. But the incidents succeed one another swiftly, and doubtless there are readers who will like the broad effects of the narrative.

Little Wife Hester. By L. T. Meade. (John Long.)

THE heroine, far from belonging to the doormat order of wife traditionally associated with such a title, is a lady endowed with considerable force of character, and at least an equal degree of wrong-headedness. Having married, much against his will, the high-souled but rather invertebrate young doctor entrusted with the rôle of hero, she energetically proceeds to introduce still further complications, domestic and professional, into an existence already rendered sufficiently complex by such trifles as a ci-devant sweetheart, a father in hiding on a false charge of murder, and a hypnotic gift exploited for evil objects by a villain of a partner. All, however, comes right, or approximately so, in the end: the hunted father dies, like Oedipus, in peace, the murderer is brought to justice, and even Hester appears on the way to develop into something approaching a reasonable being. The story is far from probable, but has the quality of unexpectedness.

The Tempestuous Petticoat. By Robert Barr. (Methuen & Co.)

MR. BARR is a capable literary craftsman, who in his time has played many parts, and is likely to play many more. A few of these have been important parts, from the fiction-writing point of view. Others, again, while wordy enough and to spare, have been scarcely speaking parts at all, but mechanical performances. 'The Tempestuous Petticoat' does not show its author at his best. Indeed, it is an unashamed and rather shoddy piece of book manufacture. A well-born Englishman reaches his last penny in Nagasaki, and boldly boards an American millionaire's yacht in search of employment. The American, who, naturally, chews unlighted cigars all day, engages the rather fatuous Englishman on the spot to act as his secretary. The millionaire has a beautiful, spoiled darling of a daughter, with the temper of an incarnate fiend and the manners of an inferior fishwife. This pleasing creature is bent upon entertaining royalty. The new secretary is engaged to gratify this whim, and he arranges a farcical audience with the Emperor of Corea. Much extravagant absurdity, some dull love-making and mechanically arranged adventure follow. Here and there in the opening pages we had hopes of better things, but they proved vain. In short, the author is not playing a speaking part at all, but one of mere stereotyped gesticulation.

The Fate of Felix. By Mrs. Coulson Kernahan. (John Long.)

MRS. COULSON KERNAHAN'S story is woven round two popular themes—one long favoured of novelists, the other more recently imported into fiction—bigamy, namely, and hypnotism. As might perhaps be anticipated from this choice of subjects, she appears to aim rather at startling than convincing her readers. That a delicate girl habitually subjected to experiments in clairvoyance may in consequence drift into lunacy is doubtless well within the range of possibility; but we find it difficult to imagine that the poor creature could, while in this condition, be concealed for over a year in a corner of her own dwelling, the world meanwhile believing her dead. Almost equally improbable is the episode of her marriage, solemnized under most unlikely conditions, and ultimately dissolved by an expedient which, while not original, is artistically prepared. Yet the characters, though their behaviour is unusual, have at least a superficial vitality, and the story is well put together and not lacking in charm.

Before the Crisis. By F. B. Mott. (Lane.)

HERE we are concerned with affairs in Missouri and Kansas in the days which immediately preceded the abolition of slavery. The author writes with a very strong bias. Indeed, the tale is robbed of most of the power or virtue it might have possessed by the evident belief of the writer that no good thing can come out of the South, and no bad thing from the North. The story is full of incident, and so may interest a certain number of people. But it is not for the fastidious, for its writing is amateurish, and its sentiment is almost hysterical. It has all the sentimentality of 'Uncle Tom's Cabin,' with very little of the dramatic strength of that great tract. Here is a specimen of the author's style:—

"'Lor' bless Marse, 'taint Toffy's eyes; ther's hands on her nose a pullin' of her over.'

"'What!' Oliver cried, for a moment thinking that after all he might be in a trap. 'Hands on the boat?'

"'Heav'nly hands, Marse, de pore slave's guidin' angels, they takes me many times through de black ob de night. Mighty God He send 'em to Toffy, cos He hears de big prayer in de pore little nigger's heart, cos He knows great heap ob faith down in there.'"

At this time of day such stuff can serve no useful purpose, and certainly it is not entertaining, any more than are the almost gleeful pictures of Southern cruelty in this book.

From the Clutch of the Sea. By J. E. Muddock. (John Long.)

THOSE who like their fiction strongly flavoured with melodrama will find this story very much to their taste. It begins with a shipwreck in which (exactly) 243 people are drowned; nine only—six sailors and three passengers (two men and a girl)—are brought to shore alive. The sailors at once pass out of the story. The passengers remain, one to commit suicide, the other to be "bowie-knifed, buried like a dog, and forgotten," but here remembered for our delectation; the girl, after a violent brain fever, dies—apparently of consumption. For the rest the story turns principally on cases of incest, fratricide, and dipsomania; there is a good deal of maudlin love-making; but a promising case of bigamy is frustrated by the timely appearance of the first wife, who is promptly removed by the administration—accidentally, as it afterwards appears—of a shovelful of arsenic. There can be no doubt about the strength of the sensations; higher praise we are unable to give.

RECENT VERSE.

IN editing Miss Dickinson's Poems (Methuen), Mr. T. W. Higginson claims for them "a quality more suggestive of the poetry of William Blake than of anything to be elsewhere found." This faith is justified to a point, but one might add that the influence of Browning is very marked, as witness the poem entitled 'The Lonely House.' Where else does this echo come from?

Day rattles, too,
Stealth's slow;
The sun has got as far
As the third sycamore.
Screams chanticleer,
"Who's there?"
And echoes, trains away,
Sneer—"Where?"
While the old couple, just astir,
Fancy the sunrise left the door ajar!

Mr. Higginson very justly describes these verses as "poetry of the portfolio"; they were, he tells us, produced absolutely without thought of publication, and the author was only induced to publish a few in her lifetime. The result is, as the editor remarks, that though the verses gain sometimes "through the habit of freedom and the unconventional utterance of daring thoughts," they lose "whatever advantage lies in the discipline of public criticism and the enforced conformity to accepted ways."

Miss Dickinson was born in 1830, and died in 1886, and this book has found considerable favour in America since her death. It is not likely to secure a great vogue in this country, but certainly those who are genuinely interested in poetry will like to possess this specimen of the genuine thing. Miss Dickinson was absolutely indifferent to form and rule.

She used rhyme when it came handy, and she ruthlessly abandoned it when it did not. She fell back on assonance, and often very in-different assonance. Blake had far more form than she; yet is not this like Blake?

Apparently with no surprise
To any happy flower,
The frost beheads it at its play
In accidental power.
The bland assassin passes on,
The sun proceeds unmoved
To measure off another day
For an approving God.

Indeed, one feels at times disposed to echo Miss Dickinson's verses:—

Much madness is divinest sense
To a discerning eye;
Much sense the starkest madness.

Does divine sense, then, lie in such madness as this?—

I asked no other thing,
No other was denied.
I offered Being for it;
The mighty merchant smiled.
Brazil? He twirled a button,
Without a glance my way:
"But, madam, is there nothing else
That we can show to-day?"

Yet while one is being brought up by these inexplicable eccentricities one comes upon such a lyrical gem as

New feet within my garden go,
New fingers stir the sod;
A troubadour upon the elm
Betrays the solitude.

New children play upon the green,
New weary sleep below;
And still the pensive spring returns,
And still the punctual snow!

Miss Dickinson rushed at her meanings blindly and recklessly. Very often she reached them, and expressed them often in her uncouth mannerisms, and sometimes with sweetness and dignity. But, as often as not, her wild career merely issues in vagueness, in helplessness, in a mist in which she gropes hopelessly after a lost and intangible significance. How simple and how real she can be is seen in such verses as 'The First Lesson'; how bizarre and how much divorced from equable emotion is visible in a poem which, nevertheless, clings to the reluctant memory:

I died for beauty, but was scarce
Adjusted in the tomb,
When one who died for truth was lain
In an adjoining room.

He questioned softly why I failed?
"For beauty," I replied.
"And I for truth,—the two are one;
We brethren are," he said.

And so, as kinsmen met a night,
We talked between the rooms,
Until the moss had reached our lips,
And covered up our names.

Musa Verticordia. By Francis Coutts. (Lane.)—Mr. Coutts has succeeded in interesting the present reviewer more than any recent writer of verse on whose work he has chanced. His questionings represent the difficulties of the modern mind seeking after happiness, insecurely poised between vague yet passionate longing for belief and ironical indifference. In occasional verse—for instance, the piece recording Hawker's Morwenstow—he excels, writing with taste and insight. And generally though he has by no means perfected his means of expression, his vocabulary shows real distinction. Some of his verbal ventures seem to us unfortunate, but we would far sooner have such boldness with a distinct voice than cold and flawless echoes of the best models among the greater Victorians. The haunting sense of certain moments and pleasures is well conveyed by Mr. Coutts. He is indubitably sincere: he has suffered as well as written. In short measures he pleases us best, but he has altogether a very high average of notable lines, and we think he should be secure of a place in future English anthologies. The 'Spanish Folk-Rhymes' strengthen his position as an epigrammatist of unusual merit.

Egyptian and other Verses. By George Cookson. (Macmillan.)—Mr. Cookson would have been well advised to publish his Egyptian verses by themselves. These have a note of their own, are unpretentious, and satisfy the ear, except that the last foot of the blank verse frequently halts with most displeasing effect, e.g.:—

Thou canst not reach it with thy cry—nay, though.....

Mr. Cookson is most successful in what the hymn-books call "common measure." 'An Egyptian Pastoral' and 'The Land where All Things always seem the Same' have the artless charm appropriate to that measure, and do indeed convey something of the vivid magic of the unchanging East. We give the former in full:—

Deep in the glass of the canal,
Which no winds move or mar,
With drooping fans and pillars tall
The palm-trees imaged are.

Close to the water's waveless edge
Brown goats and asses stand,
Cropping the scanty herbs that fledge
The banks on either hand.

Outstretched beneath a tamarisk shade
Two Bedouin boys recline;
One plays a pipe that shepherds played
When Pan was still divine.

The other sings a plaintive song,
Broken with quavers soft,
While hornets sound in golden throng
A bourdon note aloft.

Ah! would Theocritus were here
To catch the pastoral scene,
The boys, the pipe, the flock, how dear
To him they all had been!

'The Kite above the City' is rather too objective. Of the sonnets, 'The Bedouin's Greeting' and 'In Ramadan' seem to us the most effective.

The other verses are the poetaster's ordinary stock-in-trade. The great majority are sonnets, more than half of which are in a lax form. Now and then, as in the sestet of the sonnet on Carlyle, an original idea is met with; but, broadly speaking, we find this section of the volume, which is, unfortunately, far the larger, uninspired. Here also the most successful piece, 'Memories,' is in "common measure." The punctuation is often at fault.

Miss Mary Scott shows in A Robin's Song (Constable) a pretty feeling for nature, and a tuneful ear. But she deviates rarely into what is real poetry. There are many writers who are poetic without being poets; and how many are there also who can write like this!—

O lovely scene when the forgiving Sun
Kisses the tearful Earth to smiles again,
And she at his warm touch forgets her pain
And all her grievances, now past and done.

On the other hand, Miss Scott rises occasionally considerably above this average level. There is an idea in the following lines, and it is rendered suitably:—

Lovely is good news told;
But good news guessed
Hath yet more zest—
Then, flower, do not unfold.
Happy is love expressed;
But love untold
Is purer gold—
Lock fast the treasure-chest.

The best work in the volume is the sequence of poems in 'A Love Tale,' many of which are characterized by real feeling, and expressed with dignity and emotion. It is clear that Miss Scott's talent lies not in pastorals, but in more thoughtful verse. Here she has a distinct note, of which this is representative:—

If the blind could suddenly see,
And the deaf man hear;
If the watching mother could be
Rid of her fear;
If the cripple who never moved
Could spring up and run;
If those who never were loved
Could feel love's sun—
What happiness might there be!
Then sorrows should rise and flee
Away through the warm, glad air,
For the earth, the earth is fair!

The Book of the Rose. By Charles G. D. Roberts. (Brimley Johnson.)—The title-poem is a curious medley of disconnected lyrics, prefaced by a duologue in blank verse. The rose as a symbol in poetry has lately been appropriated by the Celtic school, of which Mr. W. B. Yeats is the head; but here it seems to possess no occult significance, and the actual title is that of a classic of rose culture recently reissued. The concluding lyric, in which this rather wearisome figure is at length laid aside, is certainly the most successful. We quote one out of the four stanzas:—

O little wild feet, too softly white
To roam the world's tempestuous night,
The years like sleet on my windows beat—
Come in and be cherished, O little white feet.
My heart is a house, deep-walled and warm,
To cover you from the night of storm.

Here the triteness of the idea need not blind us to the freshness and grace with which it is expressed. Elsewhere, in such pieces as 'The First Ploughing' and 'Coal,' Mr. Roberts says what he has to say simply and not unmusically. In his more ambitious flights he sacrifices these qualities without any compensating gains.

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

MESSRS. LONGMAN publish Modern Constitutions in Outline, by Mr. Leonard Alston, a small volume which is no doubt slight in its construction, but which, given the limited intentions of the author, is, for a slight book, excellent. The author declares the party system in France to be a failure; but since the Monarchy of July, which worked parliamentary institutions on a small electorate, the party system has hardly been tried in France. Under the Empire the real opposition was Republican; and under the Republic the only real opposition has been either nominally or actually opposed to the constitution. The party system cannot be said to be applied in countries where one party supports the constitution, and the other party supports some pretender or outside influence. Even the Socialists in France are working in Parliament as members of the Republican majority. The author shows, perhaps, a slightly unscientific amount of spirit when he declares that the decisions of the judges in recent trade-union disputes should "be counted unconstitutional." There can be no doubt that the decisions of the judges in cases of workmen's conspiracy and responsibility of funds of unions have reversed the intention of Parliament as declared by the leaders of both parties in the State, and have altered what was supposed to be the law. There can also be no doubt that in the case of the law of truck the judges have for many years prevented the intention of Parliament being carried out. But in the former case the language of the law was far from clear, and some of the best authorities on judicial language have always expected the interpretation which in recent years has been given. In the other case, that of truck, the inherent difficulty of the subject is so great that it would have been almost impossible for Parliament to declare its intention in such a way as to avoid the risk of that intention being upset, even if Parliament ever really faced the question and can be said to have known what its intentions were. Parliament intended all wage to be paid in current coin, but had not foreseen the necessity of making certain exceptions, the need for which is now pretty generally admitted.

MR. T. D. SULLIVAN, who has many friends in all parties, publishes through Messrs. Sealy, Bryers & Walker and Messrs. Gill & Son, of Dublin, Recollections of Troubled Times in Irish Politics. Like his even better-known brother, Mr. T. D. Sullivan was a popular member of the House of Commons, and he was also Lord Mayor of Dublin. The early part of his book is simple and pleasant.

The middle part contains a great deal of information on the affairs of the Fenians and extreme Irish agitators, which should be compared with the account lately given in Mr. Michael Davitt's book. The last pages of the work before us are less pleasant, but they are not at all in the line of The Athenæum. Mr. Sullivan was mixed up by his relationships in the feuds of the Nationalists, and has espoused the fierce feelings of one side. From a Nationalist point of view we imagine that it will be said that he is not fair to Mr. John Redmond. From the historical point of view there can be no doubt that the whole of his argument against Mr. Redmond's treatment of the last Home Rule Bill is vitiated by the obvious desire to make Mr. Redmond responsible for the loss of that measure. But, then, the measure never had a chance, at all events in the House of Lords. Mr. Redmond is even charged in these pages with having harmed Gladstone's measure in that assembly.

Jeremy Taylor: a Sketch of his Life and Times. By George Worley. (Longmans.)—A biography of Jeremy Taylor appearing so soon after Mr. Gosse's recent 'Life' must in some measure suffer by the circumstance. Mr. Worley, however, urges truly that Mr. Gosse was specially occupied with the literary aspect of Taylor, and that his book, being mainly concerned with Taylor the divine, has still a certain ground left to it. That is true, so far as regards the discussion of the bishop's writings and character; where, indeed, Mr. Worley is more absorbed in the ecclesiastical side of his subject. But as regards the biography proper, he remains at a plain disadvantage, having nothing to add to Mr. Gosse, while Mr. Gosse considerably supplements him. We are almost disposed to think, in fact, that the advent of Mr. Gosse's 'Life' has caused Mr. Worley in parts to dwell slightly on the biographical element as being a task of supererogation. In one case at least he seems disposed to rely overmuch on the Jones MSS., the untrustworthiness of which has been shown by Mr. Gosse. As the book progresses, biography more and more takes the wall. Of the events connected with his Welsh exile there is scarcely any account; and finally, the Irish bishopric is passed over in a breath—a breath from which one would imagine it was mainly a mild and quiet episcopacy. Mr. Gosse's account throws a very different light on it and on those circumstances which, as Mr. Worley says, were gradually wearing Taylor out, but of which he gives no real hint. The book, in truth, becomes chiefly a disquisition on Taylor and Taylor's writings, principally from the theological standpoint, with some connecting thread of biography, rather capriciously arranged.

It is certainly well that Mr. Worley keeps mostly to the religious aspects of Taylor. Without being incompetent, he betrays signs that he is incompletely equipped for the purely literary discussion. He says that in Shakespeare and Milton we have a combination of Scriptural and pagan allusions which could scarcely have been brought together at any former period without exciting the sense of incongruity. The intent is to show the influence of the Renaissance. But Dante alone is sufficient to overthrow the assertion—Dante, in whom such encounters are perhaps more striking and startling than in any other poet. Mr. Worley seems of opinion that Taylor, like Coleridge, exhibited the harmony of the metaphysical intellect with the poetic imagination, and that his scholastic régime at Oxford and Cambridge furnished a useful backbone and corrective to his imaginative temperament. But in fact it only produced tracts of aridity in his work—the two elements never amalgamate—and the severe logical discipline hopelessly failed to make him a logician. He was a weak controversialist to the last; and scholasticism begot a dry parade of logical forms divorced from the logical mind and cogency which alone could have justified them.

Among the strongest impressions the book leaves on us with regard to Taylor the divine is his strong Catholic strain. Not insignificantly did both Donne and Taylor at one time come under Roman Catholic influences; and both the great preachers remained to the end what we should now call strong Ritualists or High Churchmen. One begins to see that the Puritan Rebellion was much more than a mere political movement; that it was also caused by religious panic no less than the revolt against James II. George Herbert, Crashaw, Donne, Taylor, Laud, were all tokens of a movement towards the Catholic spirit, more significant to us than any doctrinal points they may or may not have held; nor is it without meaning that Tractarianism revived these men, as its spiritual ancestors. Nowadays protest takes a violent shape, and is regulated by the police-court. But when the movement was led by the chief bishop of the English Church, when behind him was the king, behind the king a Papist queen from the land of the St. Bartholomew—suggestive of Philip and Mary with the sexes reversed—it is small wonder if people feared that the Church rooted by the boy Edward, plucked up by Philip and Mary, rooted again by Elizabeth, might be plucked up again by Charles and Henrietta. Mary was no far-off memory, Guido Faux was of yesterday; and the Puritan protest took the stern form of armed resistance, as it had already done across the Border. After the death of Laud the political aspect of the protest drew so much to the front that it has absorbed all attention; but we doubt whether such was the case at the time, and among the zealots who were the heart of the rebellion. For it poor Taylor was not to blame; he was as little provocative as Keble in the last century, and when ironic Fate set him to dragoon the Irish Presbyterians, he died of the duty. But upon that Mr. Worley (as we have said) is silent in this theological study, rather than biography, of Taylor. It is written with moderation, with no pretensions to style, and has a certain modest place and merit. But Mr. Gosse, we fancy, has somewhat disconcerted it.

For some time past it has been known that an unofficial group of inhabitants of Dundee, brought together under the name of the Dundee Social Union, had set on foot serious inquiry into problems such as those which were faced in London by Mr. Charles Booth, and in York by Mr. Rowntree. Part I. of the Report of Investigation into Social Conditions in Dundee is now published by Messrs. John Leng & Co. of that town, and deals with the 'Medical Inspection of School Children.' The well-known name of Miss Mona Wilson appears on the title-page as superintending the inquiry, and the general report which stands first is signed by Miss Walker and Miss Wilson. In our reviews of the various volumes of Mr. Charles Booth and of that by Mr. Rowntree we found difficulty in making extracts from such investigations or analyzing their results. Those who are interested will read the original, and the general public will not take note of either the inquiry itself or reports based upon it. The present part, which appears to be as well executed as the names attached to it would lead us to anticipate, has some special interest on account of its bearing on the question of feeding school children. The authors of the report state what is being done in this direction by charitable effort in Dundee, and call for "a more systematic remedy." The figures of the tables of the medical examination at Dundee show that a large number of children receive insufficient nourishment.

LORD HALIBURTON publishes through Mr. Stanford, under the title Army Organization: The Arnold Forster Scheme, his attack upon the latest War Office proposals. Its general nature can be gathered from the writer's recent letters in The Times.

AFTER first reading Mr. Methuen's England's Ruin, discussed in Sixteen Letters to the Right Honourable Joseph Chamberlain, M.P. (Methuen & Co.), we came to the conclusion that it was not sufficiently in our line for notice. But on looking at it once again we feel bound to state that we recognize in this pamphlet the merits—not, of course, of opinion, but of form—which caused the extraordinary success of the author's attack on the South African war. Mr. Methuen undoubtedly possesses the power of clearness of statement, and, in this degree, the gift of style.

The Faith of Church and Nation. By the Right Rev. A. F. Winnington-Ingram. (Wells Gardner & Co.)—The Bishop of London is not, like his predecessor, a man of original power, or even of highly intellectual habit. To some readers these sermons will mainly be a reminder of the old lines:—

Of all sad words of tongue or pen,
The saddest are these, "It might have been."

Yet these discourses have their value. Transparently sincere, plain and unadorned in language, brief, and to the point, they will meet the needs and resolve the difficulties of many hearers and readers outside the class—daily more limited in proportion to the masses, either rich or poor—of intellectuals. We have seldom seen a better popular statement of the grounds for the orthodox doctrine of the Virgin Birth, or a better defence of the Resurrection for popular audiences than that given by the bishop. He shows himself fully alive to the currents of criticism and the practical difficulties which would be felt by the majority of his hearers. The sermons are never dull, and ought to produce good results.

Far and Near. By John Burroughs. (Constable.)—

"In the preface to 'Riverby' I told my readers that that was probably my last outdoor book. But my life has gone on, my love of nature has continued, my habit of observation has been kept up, and the combined result is another collection of papers dealing with the old, inexhaustible open-air themes. There may even be another volume."

The foregoing passage is quoted here not because it makes particularly cheerful reading, but because it is a specimen of the author's humdrum, undistinguished style, and indicates the general scope of his work. Almost the whole of the volume has appeared before in one form or another. The author was one of forty guests of Mr. E. H. Harriman, of New York, on a trip to Alaska. A chapter not hitherto published is given to Jamaica. The rest consists of jottings produced by Mr. Burroughs's "habit of observation." The author's friends will doubtless enjoy the fruits of his study, and some others may also, for it is kindly, wholesome stuff. 'Wild Life round my Cabin' is perhaps the most pleasing section of the book.

THE Government of Travancore has published an Almanac and Directory for the Year 1905, which in its way furnishes strong evidence of the remarkable progress effected in that principality of Southern India under its purely Hindu dynasty. The reader is proudly reminded that Travancore is the one Indian State that never submitted to the Mohammedan domination, and a list is given of thirty-five rulers back to the year 1335. In addition to copious details about the administration, laws, trade, and agriculture of Travancore, a full report is given of the inauguration ceremony of the Popular Legislative Assembly instituted by the present Maharajah towards the end of last year. This is the second assembly of this kind created in India, the other being in Mysore, where it has existed for twenty-four years. The administration of Travancore is being carefully re-organized and brought up to date by the new Dewan, Mr. V. Madhava Rao, C.I.E., who was Senior Member of Council in Mysore before he accepted the office of Chief Minister in Travancore twelve months ago. There are some distinctive features about Travancore that are worth noting. In size a trifle smaller than Wales, it has nearly three millions of people, and while the mass of the people are Hindus, the Christian element is far more numerous than the Mohammedan. In fact, there are far more Christians in Travancore and its closely allied neighbour Cochin than in any other part of India. Perhaps this explains why education in Travancore is further advanced than in British India and other native states. The proportion of literates in Travancore is 124 in 1,000, whereas in Madras it is only 63, and in such a progressive state as Baroda it is no more than 88. There is much of interest to be learnt from the four hundred and fifty odd pages of this official almanac.

ERNEST BRAMAH, the author of 'The Wallet of Kai Lung,' has repeated the success of that book by a similar study, The Mirror of Kong Ho (Chapman & Hall). A Chinaman writes to his father, with the flowery metaphor and paraphrase associated with Oriental self-depreciation, an account of his adventures in England among motor-cars and London lodging-houses, men of sport and business, and various nymphs of the Western world. The result is very diverting, and the author has made full use of the contrasts between Chinese customs and our own which are likely to cause misunderstanding. Many of the explanations suggested are delightful. Our only comment is that the flowery style becomes wearisome if much of it is read straight off. The author makes Kong Ho speak in the first person; otherwise he might have introduced more effective relief in the shape of ordinary speech. But the ingenuity and felicity of the record are notable.

WE have before us Carlyle's French Revolution, 3 vols., in "Bohn's Historical Library" (Bell), introduced and annotated by Dr. J. H. Rose. Elsewhere to-day we refer to his admirable work on this period of history, and we need only add that his present duties have been performed in a model fashion. The results of recent research are added by way of comment at the bottom of the page, with excellent brevity and self-restraint. The illustrations provided, as Dr. Rose points out, really illustrate the text, and the introduction forms an interesting discussion of Carlyle's aims and merits as historian. In fact, this is an excellent edition which ought to be in great demand.

Two important new editions are due to Messrs. Longman. Sir G. O. Trevelyan has revised with scrupulous care his book on The American Revolution, the three volumes of which, in a cheaper form, are likely to attain to classic rank. The book has been applauded on both sides of the Atlantic, and we need not repeat our own praise. A new edition is also out of England in the Age of Wycliffe, the book which justified to the general world the opinion long entertained of the ability of Mr. G. M. Trevelyan. The success of father and son in the same field ought to attract Mr. Galton's attention, while something may in each case be due to the Alma Mater who fostered Macaulay and his distinguished successors.

NOTHING can be more encouraging to the cause of learning than the publication of a masterly book like Prof. Villari's History of Florence at half-a-crown. This third impression, which Mr. Fisher Unwin sends us, contains several excellent illustrations too. The reprint reflects great credit on all concerned.

Literary Blunders, by H. B. Wheatley, reappears in the "popular edition" of "The Book-Lover's Library" (Stock). It is an entertaining volume in a series which well deserves its name, and gives the modern reader, not too well-informed a person usually, a pleasant means of adding to his lore.

WE are very glad to see that a second edition has already been required of Mr. Bullen's Creatures of the Sea (Religious Tract Society). The book is an admirable piece of descriptive writing, as we said before, and the price is most moderate, good print and striking illustrations by Mr. Carreras being among its recommendations.

MESSRS. VICKERS'S Newspaper Gazetteer for 1905 maintains its reputation for accuracy, having been carefully revised and brought up to date. The figures denoting the population are in most cases given in accordance with the census of 1901. There is a Colonial, Indian, and Foreign section. The editor has evidently had long experience of the press.

LIST OF NEW BOOKS.

ENGLISH.

Theology.

- Dods (M.), The Bible, its Origin and Nature, cr. 8vo, 5/ net.
 Drawbridge (C. L.), The Training of the Twig, 3/ net.
 Harris (W.), Thoughts concerning Omnipotence, 3/6 net.
 McCabe (J.), The Religion of Woman, cr. 8vo, 2/6 net.
 Pullan (L.), The Church of the Fathers, cr. 8vo, 5/ net.
 Reynolds (B.), Church Work, cr. 8vo, 5/ net.
 Sanday (W.), Outlines of the Life of Christ, 8vo, 5/ net.

Law.

- Seoane (C. A.), Syllabus of Davis's International Law, 16mo, 3/6 net.

Fine Art and Archaeology.

- Destree (O. G.), The Renaissance of Sculpture in Belgium, imp. 8vo, boards, 3/6 net.
 Dress and Decoration, folio, boards, 7/6
 Florence and some Tuscan Cities, painted by Col. R. C. Goff, described by C. Goff, 8vo, 20/ net.
 Hayden (A.), Chats on Old Furniture, ex. cr. 8vo, 5/ net.
 Isle of Wight, by C. J. Cornish, imp. 8vo, boards, 3/6 net.
 Sharp (W.), Fair Women in Painting and Poetry, 3/6 net.
 Tebbs (L. A.), The New Lace Embroidery, 4to, 2/6 net.
 Through India with a Camera, oblong 4to, 10/6 net.

Poetry and the Drama.

- Chaucer (Geoffrey) and others, Works, a Reproduction in Facsimile, with an Introduction by W. W. Skeat, folio, 105/ net.
 Songs of the Valiant Voivode, and other Strange Folk-lore, collected by H. Vacaresco, 8vo, 10/6

Bibliography.

- Clarke (A. L.), Manual of Practical Indexing, cr. 8vo, 5/ net.
 Grimaldi (A. B.), A Catalogue of Zodiacs and Planispheres, Ancient and Modern, cr. 8vo, limp, 2/ net.
 Nevins (H. W.), Books and Personalities, cr. 8vo, 5/ net.

History and Biography.

- Bentham (Jeremy), his Life and Work, by C. M. Atkinson, 8vo, 5/ net.
 Canning (Life of), by H. W. V. Temperley, 8vo, 7/6 net.
 Constantine the Great, by J. B. Firth, cr. 8vo, 5/ net.
 Downey (E.), Twenty Years Ago, 8vo, 6/ net.
 Graham of Claverhouse (John), Viscount of Dundee, by C. S. Terry, 8vo, 12/6 net.
 Hawker (R. S.), Life and Letters of, by C. E. Byles, 21/ net.
 McKechie (W. S.), Magna Carta, 8vo, 14/ net.
 Matilda, Countess of Tuscan, by Mrs. M. E. Huddy, 12/ net.
 Sergeant (P. W.), The Courtships of Catherine the Great, 8vo, 10/6 net.
 Venice (The Story of), by T. Okey, illustrated by N. Erichsen, 12mo, 4/6 net.

Geography and Travel.

- Fairbanks (H. W.), The Western Wonderland, cr. 8vo, 5/ net.
 Oakley (E. S.), Holy Himalaya, 8vo, 5/ net.

Sports and Pastimes.

- Motoring Annual and Motorist's Year-Book, 1905, 5/ net.

Folk-lore.

- Oldham (C. F.), The Sun and the Serpent, 8vo, 10/6 net.

Philology.

- Anecdota Oxoniensia: Part 12, Cain Adamnain, edited by K. Meyer, 4to, sewed, 5/ net.
 Gautier (T.), Voyage en Espagne, edited by G. Goodridge, cr. 8vo, 2/6 net.
 Gospel of St. John, in West Saxon, edited by J. W. Bright, 18mo, boards, 2/6 net.
 Hartog (W. G.), Anecdotes et Récits, cr. 8vo, 2/6 net.

Science.

- Bennett (Sir W.), Recurrent Effusion into the Knee-Joint after Injury, 8vo, 3/6 net.
 Black (F. A.), Terrestrial Magnetism and its Causes, 6/ net.
 Booth (W. H.), Steam Pipes: their Design and Construction, 8vo, 5/ net.

- Chamberlain (T. C.) and Salisbury (R. D.), Geology Processes and their Results, 8vo, 21/ net.
 Galvayne (S.), The XXth Century Book on the Horse, 4to, 31/6 net.
 Perkin (F. M.), Practical Methods of Electro-Chemistry, 8vo, 6/ net.
 Vallack (A. S.), The Principles and Practice of Asepsis, 12mo, leather, 2/6 net.
 Vries (H. de), Species and Varieties, their Origin, &c., 8vo, 21/ net.

General Literature.

- Bacon (R.), Opera Hactenus Inedita: Fasc. I, Metaphysica, edited by R. Steele, 8vo, sewed, 4/6 net.
 Boothby (G.), A Crime of the Under-Seas, cr. 8vo, 5/ net.
 Bramah (E.), The Mirror of Kong Ho, cr. 8vo, 6/ net.
 Burgin (G. B.), The Marble City, cr. 8vo, 6/ net.
 Canfield (H. S.), Fergy the Guide, and his Moral and Instructive Lies about Beasts, Birds, and Fishes, 6/ net.
 Carr (Mrs. C.), John Fletcher's Madonna, cr. 8vo, 6/ net.
 Chambers (R. W.), In Search of the Unknown, cr. 8vo, 6/ net.
 Dixon (T.), Jun., The Clansman, cr. 8vo, 6/ net.
 Hansbrow (T. W.), The Great Ruby, cr. 8vo, 3/6 net.
 Jones (C. E.), Caprice, cr. 8vo, 6/ net.
 Juliana, edited by W. Strunk, 18mo, boards, 2/6 net.
 Keays (H. A. M.), It was a Boy, cr. 8vo, 3/6 net.
 Lee (A.), A Gentleman's Wife, cr. 8vo, 6/ net.
 Marshall (A.), The House of Merrilees, cr. 8vo, 6/ net.
 Methley (A.), The Identity of Jane, cr. 8vo, 6/ net.
 Mitchell (Sir A.), About Dreaming, Laughing, and Blushing, 8vo, 5/ net.
 Nisbet (H.), A Colonial King, cr. 8vo, 6/ net.
 Norris (H. L.), Rice Papers, cr. 8vo, 6/ net.
 Rabalais, selected by C. H. Page, 8vo, 7/6 net.
 Ridge (W. P.), Mrs. Galer's Business, cr. 8vo, 6/ net.
 Rowland (H. C.), To Windward, cr. 8vo, 6/ net.
 St. Aubyn (A.), A Coronation Necklace, cr. 8vo, 6/ net.
 Silberrad (U. L.), The Wedding of the Lady of Lovell, and other Matches of Tobiah's Making, cr. 8vo, 6/ net.
 Stevenson (P. L.), A Gendarme of the King, cr. 8vo, 6/ net.
 Swift (B.), Gossip, cr. 8vo, 6/ net.
 Tytler (S.), His Reverence the Rector, cr. 8vo, 6/ net.
 Whelpley (J. D.), The Problem of the Immigrant, 10/6 net.
 Wilde (O.), De Profundis, cr. 8vo, 5/ net.
 Williamson (Mrs. C. N.), The Castle of the Shadows, 6/ net.

FOREIGN.

Theology.

- Kerler (H.), Die Patronate der Heiligen, 6m. 50.

Fine Art and Archaeology.

- Grasset (E.), Méthode Théorique de Composition Ornementale, 50fr.
 Intérieurs d'Architecture Moderne, 30fr.
 Zangemeister (C.), Inscriptiones Germaniæ Superioris, 60m.

Music.

- Schweitzer (A.), J. S. Bach, le Musicien-Poète, 10fr.

History and Biography.

- Barine (A.), Louis XIV. et la Grande Mademoiselle, 1652-93, 3fr. 50.
 Fleury (Comte), Les Dames de l'Histoire, 3fr. 50.
 Houssaye (H.), 1815, Part 3, 7fr. 50.
 Picard (E.), Bonaparte et Moreau, 7fr. 50.

Philology.

- Brunot (F.), Histoire de la Langue Française des Origines à 1900, Vol. 1, 15fr.
 Sommer (F.), Griechische Lautstudien, 5m.

General Literature.

- Adam (P.), Le Serpent Noir, 3fr. 50.
 Duruskam (J.), Mœurs de Magistrats, 3fr. 50.
 Lavedan (H.), Baignoire 9, 3fr. 50.
 Maisonneuve (H.), Éprouvé, 3fr. 50.
 Vaucaire (M.), Maison de Poupées, 3fr. 50.

SIR WEMYSS REID.

THE death of Sir Wemyss Reid, which occurred on Sunday last, removes an accomplished figure in literature and journalism. He was working till the end, and in the course of his long and active career attained by his unusually varied experience a position which few, if any, of his contemporaries can boast. Born at Newcastle in 1842, the elder brother of Mr. Stuart Reid, who has followed much the same career with success, he began writing for the press when he was fifteen, and had considerable experience of Northern journalism on The Newcastle Journal, The Preston Guardian, which he edited, and The Leeds Mercury, of which he was first London correspondent, and later editor from 1870 to 1887. At Leeds he raised his paper to a leading position among the Yorkshire press, establishing a friendship with W. E. Forster and the first Lord Houghton, both of whose lives he wrote with ability and discernment, the first in 1888, the second in 1891. On giving up The Leeds Mercury he became general manager to Messrs. Cassell & Co., and his energy and talents as a man of business did much to promote the success of that firm, which he served till the end. Other biographies of his dealt with Charlotte Brontë (1877), Lord Playfair (1899), and William Black (1902), his particular friend. He executed a popular 'Life of Gladstone' (1899); and a story of his, 'Mauleverer's Millions' (1885), had, and deserved, a considerable success among those who like sensational fiction. He also produced 'Cabinet Portraits' and 'Politicians of To-day.'

In 1890 he founded The Speaker as a weekly journal of Liberal thought and literature, and continued to control its fortunes till 1899, writing a good deal himself, and developing in its columns some other distinguished talents which have now made established reputations. He was knighted in 1894 "for services to letters and politics." With the political side of his energy we are not concerned here, but it may be noted that latterly he had published a general survey of each month in The Nineteenth Century, which was widely appreciated by readers of all sorts and opinions. He had the essential qualities of lightness and humour. He was a leading member of the Reform Club, being, indeed, a most clubbable man, and free from the conceit which places the eminent at a disadvantage.

Hard workers often have no time or talent for geniality, but it was otherwise with him. In the midst of all his business he retained his freshness of outlook and readiness to help others. His books were full of good stories, and so was his conversation. He will be deeply regretted by many friends, and those who only knew him casually cannot fail to have received a pleasant impression of him.

COMPULSORY GREEK AND SCHOOL-MASTERS.

THE statistics which you give under this heading would be more cogent if one could suppose that assistant masters as a class include more experts in education than any other body of equal numbers that could be collected from university graduates—a claim which no one who has any acquaintance with those excellent and hardworking gentlemen would, I imagine, make on their behalf. I will venture to say that nine-tenths of them have adopted the profession not from any special interest in or capacity for the instruction of their juniors by ten or a dozen years, but simply as the readiest method of obtaining some return for the capital sunk in the achievement of a degree. To count their votes, therefore, in approval or otherwise of the Syndicate's proposals, seems as otiose as it would be to poll, say, the engine-drivers of the country as a guide to the decision of some problem in thermodynamics.

I note that while the proportion of approvals to disapprovals in the so-called "Conference" schools, and the nine great schools, is about as 5 to 2, in the schools not connected with the Head Masters' Conference it is as high as 5 to '8. I do not know which schools attract the higher stamp of assistant master, but I conjecture it is not the latter.

A. J. B.

WHAT IS AN "8vo"?

At the Westminster County Court, on Thursday, February 23rd, Mr. H. S. Newland, of the Public Library, Harlesden, was sued by Messrs. W. Wesley & Son, of Essex Street, Strand, booksellers and publishers, for the sum of 6s. for goods supplied. The facts of the case were as follows. Mr. Newland advertised in The Publishers' Circular for Johnson's 'British Poisonous Plants,' and among others received a report from the plaintiffs offering an "8vo" edition for 6s. The defendant ordered the book as reported, and on receipt found it not an "8vo" as universally accepted among book-buyers and booksellers, but a "crown 8vo," measuring 7½ in. by 5 in. The book was refused as being wrongly described, and in the end a summons was issued. On the case being heard before the Registrar, the plaintiff swore the book was the size described in the trade as "8vo"; and although the defendant produced the printed opinion of the Editor of The Publishers' Circular, and also specimens from booksellers and publishers, to the contrary, the Registrar refused to accept the evidence, and gave judgment for the plaintiff.

Mr. Newland, in forwarding the above report, states that in ordering the book he expected to get an "8vo" edition of the book as described. This not being so, he returned it, and ordered from another bookseller, who had reported a "crown 8vo" at half the price. The book being exactly the same as the one supplied by Messrs. Wesley, and described as "8vo."

THE NEWSVENDORS' BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION.

SIR HENRY BURDETT, who presided at the annual meeting last Tuesday, called attention to the fact that the recipients of pensions were elected without recourse to the voting system, and each of the members who conformed to the rules became eligible in a stated time. During the last twenty-five years they had only on one occasion been compelled to involve candidates in the trouble and expense incidental to election by ballot. The report shows that the invested funds now amount to 25,000l., but there has been a falling-off in contributions, largely due to the prevailing depression in trade. The annuitants now number thirty-three, the men receiving 25l. and the women 20l. per annum each. The income from investments is about 800l.; the expenditure on pensions exceeds 700l., and in addition 237l. was distributed in temporary assistance. It is pleasing to find that every needy and deserving news vendor who has appealed for aid has been assisted. When Charles Dickens was president in 1865 he described the Institution as being "plain and practical." These terms clearly apply to the present satisfactory and economical management of this deserving Institution.

MARCEL SCHWOB.

WE sincerely regret to have to announce the death of M. Marcel Schwob, a man of many accomplishments, a scholar of great gifts, and an author who achieved distinction at an age at which the intellect has rarely reached maturity. Schwob was only thirty-nine years of age; and if his literary output is small in bulk, it is none the less exceptionally high in quality. He has been described as perhaps the most learned man of his generation. The learned man is often very dull outside his own special line of study, but Schwob was brilliant, whether as a conteur, as a critic, as a dramatist, and in more than one other direction of literary activity. The age of Villon, on the slang of which he wrote more than once, and the age of Shakespeare were alike familiar to him, whilst his 'Mœurs des Diurnales' proved his knowledge of certain phases of modern journalism to be equally profound, and his powers, it may be added, as a caustic critic.

Schwob was the son of an able Republican journalist, the founder of the Phare de la Loire, and was educated at the École des Chartes. His literary career covers a period of rather more than ten years, and some of his best work was done for the Écho de Paris, in the pages of which appeared 'Vies Imaginaires,' 'Monelles,' and 'Le Roi au Masque d'Or.' He was, like Anatole France, to whom he inscribed the last book, one of the most perfect stylists of modern times, although none of his works attained the popularity many of his contemporaries could boast. He had, indeed, a morbid horror of "popularity," and it was for this reason that he ceased some time ago to write for the daily papers—"la peur de la renommée retentissante le hantant." His methods were in striking contrast to those of the ordinary advertising novelist. He had few intimate friends, whom he received once a week at his house far from the noise and strife of Paris life.

His knowledge of English was unusually profound, and his translation of 'Hamlet,' produced by Madame Sarah Bernhardt, will probably rank as the most successful accomplishment in French of an uncommonly difficult task. His translation of 'Macbeth' is believed to have been finished at the time of his death; and his 'Croisade des Enfants' was produced quite recently, on which he wrote a letter to us last December. A writer in L'Aurore, in attempting to pass a verdict on the literary work of M. Schwob, says:—

"La grâce aimable, une émotion légère, un sens discret du pittoresque et surtout une aptitude à trouver des matières très diverses, le ton approprié: telles furent les qualités principales de Marcel Schwob."

His untimely and unexpected death is a serious loss to French literature.

THE SPRING PUBLISHING SEASON.

MESSRS. METHUEN

announce reproductions of the Second and Third Folios of Shakespeare,—Royal and Historic Gloves and Ancient Shoes, by W. B. Redfern, a limited edition,—Social Caricatures of the Eighteenth Century, by George Paston,—Ivories, by A. Maskell,—Miniatures, by Dudley Heath,—The Life of Charles Lamb, by E. V. Lucas; and the Letters of the same, supervised by the same editor, 2 vols.,—Great Zimbabwe, by R. N. Hall,—William Bodham Donne and his Friends, edited by Mrs. Barham Johnson,—Home Life in France, by M. E. Betham Edwards,—Mr. Asquith, by J. P. Alderson,—In a Syrian Saddle, by A. G. Freer,—Archæology and False Antiquities, by R. Munro,—Shrines of British Saints, by J. C. Wall,—The Earl of Elgin, by G. M. Wrong,—The Poems of Keats, edited by E. de Selincourt,—The Norfolk Broads, by W. A. Dutt,—A Book of South Wales, by S. Baring-Gould,—Sicily, by D. Sladen,—Southey's English Seamen, Vol. II.,—The Far Eastern War, by D. Fraser,—A History of Egypt, by W. M. F. Petrie, Vol. III.,—Jeremy Bentham, by C. M. Atkinson,—De Profundis, by Oscar Wilde,—Poems by Emily Dickinson, First Series,—in the "Illustrated Pocket Library," The Old English Squire; The Adventures of a Post Captain; Gamonia; and An Academy for Grown Horsemen,—The Hebrew Prophet, by the Rev. L. W. Batten,—Life's Questionings, by W. R. Paterson, a limited edition,—Anecdotes of British Soldiers, edited by J. H. Settle,—Metal Work (Repoussé), by A. C. Horth,—additions to the "Arden Shakespeare," the "Little Guides," and the "Half-Crown Library,"—Raphael, by A. R. Dryhurst,—Hoppner, by H. P. K. Skipton,—Millet, by Miss N. Peacock,—Illuminated MSS., by J. W. Bradley,—An English Church History for Children, by Mary E. Shipley, Part I.,—"Books on Business": The Business of Advertising, by C. G. Moran; Trade Unions, by G. Drage; Civil Engineering, by T. C. Fidler; The Coal Industry, by E. Aves; and The Brewing Industry, by J. L. Baker,—The Vault of Heaven, by R. A. Gregory,—What do We Know concerning Electricity? by A. Zimmern,—and new editions of The Acts of the Apostles, by the Rev. R. B. Rackham; Oman's History of the Art of War, Vol. II.; Hobhouse's The Theory of Knowledge; Burnet's Ethics of Aristotle; Baring-Gould's Tragedy of the Cæsars; Hosie's Manchuria; Firth's Cromwell's Army; Lord Durham's Report on Canada; Capt. Lee's History of the Police in England; George's Battles of English History; Naples, by A. H. Norway; Dickinson's The Greek View of Life; A History of English Political Economy, by L. L. Price; and other volumes. Educational Books: A Junior Magnetism and Electricity, by W. T. Clough,—Elementary Experimental Chemistry, by A. E. Dunstan,—Junior French Prose, by R. R. N. Baron,—St. Luke's Gospel, edited by W. Williamson,—Easy French Rhymes, by H. Blouet,—and Easy Stories from English History, by E. M. Willmot-Buxton, in the "Universal Library": Marcus Aurelius; Gibbon's Decline and Fall, edited by Prof. Bury; Milton's Prose and Poetry; the Works of Ben Jonson, Fielding, Sir Thomas Browne, and Sir Thomas More; The English Works of Bacon; the Poems of Keats, Shelley, Chatterton, &c., and other classics. In Fiction: The Golden Bowl, by Henry James,—The Castle of the Shadows, by Mrs. C. N. Williamson,—Brendle, by M. Pickthall,—The Dryad, by J. H. McCarthy,—a volume of stories by B. M. Croker,—Barham of Beltana, by W. E. Norris,—Mrs. Galer's Business, by W. P. Ridge,—The Taming of the Brute, by F. F. Robertson,—The Valley of the Shadow, by W. Le Queux,—The Virgin and the Scales, by C. Cotterell,—Madame Butterfly, by J. L. Long,—and continuation of the "Shilling Novels," "The Novelist," and the Novels of Dumas.

MR. H. R. ALLENSON

announces: Tauler's Life and Sermons, translated by Miss Winkworth, a new edition,—The Religion of a Gentleman, by C. F. Dole,—The Quest of the Infinite, by B. A. Millard,—Professor Huxley and Religion (the Gresham Lectures, 1904), by W. H. Thompson,—A Daily Message from Many Minds: Thoughts from Fénelon, Jeremy Taylor, Wordsworth, Phillips Brooks, &c.,—Jesus Saith: Studies in some "New Sayings" of Christ, by J. Warschauer,—The Cure of Care, by W. J. Humberstone,—Bright and Brief Talks to Men: Twenty-one Addresses, by F. W. Atkin,—and Immortality, by A. W. Momerie, a new edition. In the "Heart and Life Series": The Loneliness of Christ, by F. W. Robertson; An Easter Sermon, and The Purpose and Use of Comfort, by Phillips Brooks; and a Selection from Faber's Hymns,—and additions to the "Sixpenny Series."

Literary Gossip.

MR. FISHER UNWIN has arranged to publish a volume by Mr. Alexander Macdonald, entitled 'In Search of El Dorado: a Wanderer's Experiences.' In the course of various mineralogical expeditions the author has had much adventure in out-of-the-way corners of the globe. This book deals with his experience in the Klondyke region, in various districts of Australia, in New Guinea, and in New Zealand.

MESSRS. HUTCHINSON & Co. announce for publication this month a book entitled 'The Real New York,' which is said to give an accurate and intimate description of that city in all its aspects. The author is Mr. Rupert Hughes, and there are over a hundred coloured and other illustrations, mostly of a humorous nature, by Mr. H. Mayer.

THE two volumes containing the 'Life and Letters and Literary Remains of J. H. Shorthouse' will be issued by Messrs. Macmillan & Co. about Easter. The memoir has been written by his widow, and includes a variety of correspondence with Matthew Arnold, Ainger, and others. The second volume contains a selection from a number of essays written by Mr. Shorthouse, when a comparatively young man, for an essay society in Birmingham. These early essays are followed by his contributions to various magazines, three short unpublished stories, chiefly of his earlier period, and a few poems.

THE same firm have in the press two volumes of 'Lectures and Essays' by Ainger. The lectures include some given at the Royal Institution upon the great writers of English literature, and others read before private societies. Many of the essays are reprinted from Macmillan's Magazine, to which Ainger was a contributor from the first number in December, 1859. The volumes are edited by Canon Beeching.

MR. HENRY FROWDE is about to publish 'Memorials of a Warwickshire Family,' by the Rev. Bridgeman Boughton-Leigh, with a prefatory note by Sir Hugh Gilzean-Reid.

SIR CHARLES ELIOT, who is now known to be the "Odysseus" who wrote 'Turkey in Europe,' has produced in 'The East Africa Protectorate,' which Mr. Edward Arnold will publish on Wednesday next, an account of the country of which he recently resigned the Commissionership. The book includes a number of photographs and two maps.

MR. NUTT will publish immediately 'Fergy the Guide, and his Moral and Instructive Lies about Beasts, Birds, and Fishes'; and, in the course of the spring, 'James Macpherson, an Episode in Literary History,' by Mr. J. S. Smart. This work constitutes the first thorough examination of the entire Ossian question in the light of modern research.

JENNETT HUMPHREYS writes:—

"In connexion with the disappearance of the First Folio from Bodley's shelves, it is good to recall some of his own words written as instructions to his librarian. They are: 'I can see no Good Reason to alter my Opinion for excluding such Books as Almanacks, Plays, and an infinite Number that are daily Printed of very unworthy Matters.....Haply some Plays may be worthy the Keeping, but hardly one in forty.' Bodley wrote this from 'London, June 15' (all the date he vouchsafes), and he had been dead ten years when the Oxford book-binder, Wildgoose, had this particular sample of 'very unworthy Matters daily Printed' sent to him to be put into brown leather for subsequent chaining, instead of getting exclusion. 'Haply,' then, these Folio sheets from Stationers' Hall were seen by the Librarian of 1623 to be of the forty 'worthy the Keeping,' and he kept. This, although a successor, reverting to Bodley's own 'Opinion,' could not think 'Plays' need occupy space, and so let this volume go."

WE notice the death of Mr. Guy Boothby, who came from Australia as a young man, and had already achieved a great vogue for his sensational fiction. 'Dr. Nikola' was the favourite of the public, but a host of other stories were also widely sold. It was very seldom that any of these could be credited with literary interest. Mr. Boothby did not attempt, or, at any rate, did not give the impression of, characterization in his heroes and heroines. He was said to dictate his later stories through a phonograph, and they had an air of being machine-made. His earlier studies of Australian life represented better work.

ST. ANDREWS UNIVERSITY proposes to bestow the degree of D.D. upon Prof. Franz C. Overbeck, of the University of Basle, and of LL.D. upon Prof. S. Alexander, Dr. George A. Gibson, Prof. Josef Kral, of the University of Prague, and Prof. C. S. Loch.

WE are glad to notice that the Senate of Aberdeen University is to confer the degree of LL.D. on Mr. Thomas Hardy and on Mr. J. T. Merz, whose comprehensive work on 'European Thought' was the subject of two articles in our columns last year.

MANY improvements have been introduced in the issue for 1905 of 'The Statesman's Year-Book,' which will be ready this month. The section on Turkey has been largely rewritten, that on the Chinese army has undergone thorough revision, while the Chinese dependencies, especially Tibet, are given separately and more fully than formerly. Much alteration has been necessary regarding French West African possessions. Germany, Australia, Roumania, and the Philippine Islands are among other subjects that have received special attention. Mr. F. T. Jane has thoroughly revised the Navy sections of the annual, and has added two interesting tables, one showing the losses sustained by Russia and Japan in the present war, the other the penetrative power of the missiles used.

DR. R. P. SCOTT, for many years the energetic secretary of the Incorporated Association of Head Masters, is to be presented with a testimonial in recognition of his services to secondary education. A purse of 100*l.* and a silver salver suitably inscribed will be presented to him at the College of Preceptors on March 18th.

SOME of the prices paid for books at the sale of the Knapp collection in Boston a fortnight ago will interest readers in this country. The largest price hitherto recorded was paid for a first edition of FitzGerald's 'Omar Khayyam,' 1859, with some manuscript corrections, possibly by FitzGerald himself; this realized 317 dollars, as against the English record of 63*l.* Another high price was secured for one of the finest known copies of Hawthorne's 'Fanshawe,' first edition, this bringing 621 dols. An uncut copy of the earliest issue of George Eliot's 'Agatha,' 1869, sold for 34 dols. A tall and choice copy of the Kilmarnock Burns, in rich binding by Pratt, went for 625 dols. A number of the publications of the Grolier Club came up for sale, and varied from 12 dols. to 37 dols., the latter price being paid for 'Washington Portraits,' 1904.

MR. J. W. MACKAIL is going to deliver a lecture on Homer next Wednesday evening in the Kensington Town Hall. The proceeds will be devoted to helping the labour movement in London.

PROF. BARRETT WENDELL, after completing his English lectures in the Sorbonne, will also lecture, says The Book-Buyer of New York, in the Universities of Bordeaux, Caen, Dijon, Grenoble, and elsewhere in France.

A COPY of that exceedingly interesting and scarce Lamb item, The Philanthropist, 1813, figured in one of the recent sales at Messrs. Anderson's rooms in New York, although we have not yet heard of the price it realized. It will be remembered that Lamb's one and only connexion with The Philanthropist—'The Confessions of a Drunkard'—was freely and exhaustively dealt with in The Athenæum of August 12th, 1902, by Mr. T. Hutchinson. So far, apparently, no copy of the third volume, in which the famous essay in its original form first appeared, has yet come into the English salerooms.

A NEW monthly magazine, presenting some interesting features, began its career at Bombay last month. It is specially devoted to the interests of the flourishing Parsi community in that city, and is called The Parsi. The first number contains sketches of the late Mr. J. N. Tata and other leading Parsis. The most striking contribution, however, is one from Mr. Sandow, warning the Parsis concerning their physical deterioration.

MR. FRANK PACY, librarian of the public libraries of St. George, Hanover Square, has been appointed by the Westminster City Council to be chief librarian of the whole of the public libraries in that city. Mr. Pacy is an Hon. Fellow of the Library Association, and was for some time hon. secretary of that body.

THERE are at present 39,719 matriculated students at the German universities, of whom 3,097 are foreigners. Of these 974 are Russian, 295 American, 155 English, 96 Bulgarian, 78 Roumanian, 67 French, 32 Italian, 26 Turkish, and 26 Spanish. The university most frequented by foreigners is Berlin, where there are 1,154, and medicine is the favourite study. The proportion of foreign students at the technical colleges is so high—2,346 out of a total of 12,614—that the regulations for their admission have been made much more stringent. At the new technical college at Dantzic foreign students, even if they have attained the requisite standard, will only be admitted by the special permission of the Prussian Minister, each case being considered on its own merits. At the Electrotechnical College at Darmstadt there are, according to the recently issued lists, 246 foreign students as compared with 149 Germans.

THE London Topographical Society are holding a conversazione at Drapers' Hall on Thursday, March 16th, at which the President of the Society, Lord Rosebery, will be present.

WE congratulate our enterprising and interesting contemporary Les Annales Politiques et Littéraires on having reached since the beginning of the year its hundred thousand subscribers. Such an event must be unique in the history of French literary weekly journals. The management has decided to celebrate the occasion by a fête on the evening of April 2nd. As it is not possible for all its "cousins" and "cousines" to assist at this function, it has been decided to take a ballot of those who wish to be present, and 500 invitations will be issued.

RECENT Parliamentary Papers include Minute of the Committee of Council on Education in Scotland providing for the Establishment of Committees for the Training of Teachers (1½d.), and Minute providing for the Distribution of the General Aid Grant (½d.); Royal University of Ireland Accounts (1d.); and Appendix to the Seventieth Report of the Commissioners of National Education in Ireland (6d.).

SCIENCE

N Rays. A Collection of Papers contributed to the Academy of Sciences by R. Blondlot. Translated by J. Garcin. (Longmans & Co.)

M. GARCIN, who seems from his title-page to be a French electrical engineer, has missed his opportunity. Had he collected into one volume the communications to the Académie des Sciences not only of M. Blondlot, but also of Macé de Lepinay, M. Bichat, M. Gutton, M. Édouard Meyer, Dr. Charpentier, M. Jean Becquerel, and all the other scholars who have been experimenting with the N rays during the last two years; had he added thereto some account of the accusations of hallucination and unconscious deceit brought against M. Blondlot and the whole of the Nancy School by his adversaries, and the facts in defence adduced by his friends, he might have produced a book convenient to those versed in the subject and interesting to the general public. Instead of this, he has preferred to give us a bare translation into English of the papers which M. Blondlot republished through the well-known Parisian firm of Gauthier Villars in June, 1904. That the translation is good, and faithfully reproduces as near as may be the very words of M. Blondlot, together with his preface, his few illustrations, and his specimen phosphorescent screen, may be admitted. But it can only appeal to the very few who are at once learned in such matters and unable to read M. Blondlot's clear and clean-cut French for themselves. And even for them it is misleading. In the 'Avertissement' to the Gauthier Villars collection we read: "Le présent volume est formé de l'ensemble des Mémoires concernant les rayons N, communiqués à l'Académie des Sciences par M. R. Blondlot," which is translated by M. Garcin: "The present volume contains the memoirs on the subject of N rays communicated to the Academy of Sciences by Prof. R. Blondlot." But the case is altered since the original 'Avertissement' was written. Between May and December of last year M. Blondlot made four communications to the Académie, giving details of further experiments demonstrating the existence of his N rays, and answering certain points raised by his critics. Of these further communications M. Garcin, apparently, takes no heed.

Under the heading 'Research Notes,' readers of The Athenæum have been from time to time informed of the progress of M. Blondlot's discoveries, and of the doubts that have been cast upon them in certain quarters. There is, therefore, no need to go through the contents of the present volume in detail. But it may be said, by way of summary, that M. Blondlot, while attempting to find out the reason of the apparent non-polarization of the Röntgen or X rays, became aware that the Crookes tube generally used for their production emitted other rays differing from them in several particulars. Pushing his experiments further, he found that these new rays, which he called "N" after the town of Nancy, at whose university he is a professor, were emitted by Nernst lamps, by incandescent gas-burners, by strips of platinum heated to a red heat, and by tempered steel, Prince Rupert's drops, and all other substances in a state of strain or compression; while his colleagues, pupils, and followers—though the reader will find no hint of this in the present volume—think that the same may be said of the nerves and muscles of the human body, of growing vegetables, and certain chemical reactions. These N rays are said to penetrate unchecked through all substances but pure water, plates of lead, platinum, or rock-salt of considerable thickness, and, perhaps, unpolished mica. Their wave-length, which M. Blondlot claims to have measured, is shorter than the shortest ultra-violet rays yet known, and they would probably for ever have escaped detection were it not for their property of increasing the light of a phosphorescent screen feebly excited beforehand by exposure to the sun or some other source of light. Yet M. Blondlot seems very early to have become aware of the danger of trusting to a single mode of proof. As early as February in last year he announced to the Académie that if a feeble source of light possessing high actinic power—such as, for instance, the electric spark produced by the secondary terminals of a small induction coil—is exposed to a source of N rays, its light becomes thereby increased, and that this increase can be registered by photography. In the present volume two photographs of such a spark taken by its own light are shown, the spark being reinforced by N rays proceeding in the one case from a Nernst lamp, and in the other from two large steel files, while each has by the side of it a duplicate photograph of the unassisted spark. In each case the reinforced photograph is much blacker and more distinct than its fellow, and the "objective" proof of the N rays' existence would therefore seem unassailable. When this experiment was first announced, most people, including the present writer, thought that the N rays had gained their citizenship in the scientific world, and would henceforth take their recognized place among scientifically observed phenomena.

Here, however, we reckoned without the reaction which in these latter days seems to set in sooner or later against each new discovery. Prof. Lummer, of Berlin, was the first to sound the note of scepticism in a communication stating that he had been unable to reproduce the experiments of M. Blondlot with phosphorescent screens, and that therefore the presumably "subjective" effects observed by the last-named could be dismissed as brought about by that liability to "suggestion" which enables hyper-sensitive people to see or hear anything they are expecting. Then his colleague, Prof. Rubens, whether moved thereto or not by the German Emperor's alleged order to him to produce the N rays for Imperial inspection within twenty-four hours, took advantage of the Cambridge meeting of the British Association to re-echo his colleague's suggestion, and to call for a poll of the audience, when one member of the section he was addressing declared that he had succeeded in obtaining ocular evidence of the increase of light reported by M. Blondlot, and fifteen others that they had not. Later, Mr. R. W. Wood, Professor of Experimental Physics of Baltimore, wrote to a London paper that he had visited M. Blondlot's laboratory at Nancy, and, after witnessing some experiments and a short conversation in German, left with a feeling of depression and the conviction that all the proofs of the existence of the N rays were purely imaginary. And in the meantime an attack was preparing from a quarter from which M. Blondlot can least have expected it. M. Piéron, one of the new editors of the excellent Revue Scientifique, seems always to have had doubts as to the genuineness of the new phenomena, and sent letters last autumn to most of the leading men of science in France asking for their opinions and experiences. The published replies showed a much greater diversity of opinion upon the subject in France itself than any foreigner would have expected. Outside M. Blondlot's immediate entourage at Nancy, but one physicist of the first rank could be found to say, without qualification, that he had repeated M. Blondlot's experiments point by point, and had found the result in every way satisfactory. Others averred their belief in the existence of the N rays, but on evidence that would here be rejected as hearsay. One or two provincial professors of physics roundly declared their disbelief, while the great majority of the fifty-five correspondents who took part in our contemporary's "inquest" evidently shrank from warranting the existence of phenomena which they felt to be but ill-established.

Thus stands the case at present, and it cannot be said to be in any way satisfactory. That international and even professional jealousies have played no inconsiderable part in the attack on M. Blondlot's discoveries can hardly be doubted. The Berlin professors have openly avowed that they would not have taken the attitude they have done had not the Académie des Sciences awarded a prize of 50,000 francs to M. Blondlot for, among other things, his researches on the N rays, and at a recent Congress they took the unusual course of leaving the room in a body when the subject was brought up. The spiritualists, too, have attempted to make capital out of the affair, and by their assertion that they had long been aware of the existence of the N rays—why they should be so anxious to prove that yet another set of phenomena is material remains a mystery—seem to have provoked M. Piéron's action. M. Blondlot's reputation, both as a physicist of the first rank and as an experimenter of great skill, is above attack, and even his most bitter adversaries do not venture to attribute to him the suspicion of bad faith; while men of science so distinguished as M. Berthelot, M. Mascart, and M. Henri Poincaré—to take three names at random—evidently cannot bring themselves to doubt the existence of anything vouched for by him. If one were to disregard all theoretical rules of evidence, and decide, as Parliamentary Committees are sometimes said to do, by the number and eminence of the witnesses called on both sides, one could hardly fail to admit that the truth and exactness of M. Blondlot's conclusions are amply endorsed.

Beyond this, however, there remains the nature of the processes by which these conclusions were arrived at. No one who has followed the controversy can have failed to perceive that photometry, as one of the witnesses has said, is not yet an exact science, and that eyes specially trained for the purpose, and possibly possessing peculiar characteristics, are required to detect the increase of light on the phosphorescent screen. If, too, it be true, as has been asserted, that this light is itself subject to variation from slight changes of temperature and other causes which are with difficulty eliminated, it would seem to follow that this instrument must be abandoned as a crucial test of the objectivity of the N rays, although it may still be useful as a means of research. But the photography of the electric spark when exposed to the supposed rays stands on a different footing, and here it seems that the soundness of M. Blondlot's reasoning is, in effect, unimpeached. Mr. Wood's allegation that the assistant employed to move the sparking apparatus out of the range of the N rays may have unconsciously been slower in so doing when the rays were there than when they were not, is disposed of by M. Blondlot's subsequent declaration that, even when the photographic plate is exposed for a shorter time with the N rays than without, the image is darker. As for the German professors, they have, after their manner, given no details of their experiments, but have contented themselves with declaring that they detected no difference in the tone of plates taken with and without the influence of the supposed rays. But this is a question of fact which bodies like the French Académie des Sciences or our own Royal Society seem admirably fitted to decide. Before a commission appointed by either—or, what would be better, by the two bodies jointly—M. Blondlot might without loss of dignity appear, and repeat his experiments with such mechanical safeguards as would reduce the personal equation to a minimum. By so doing he would not only silence his adversaries, but would also put an end to a situation which is not too creditable to science.

SIR STAMFORD RAFFLES AND THE FOUNDING OF THE ZOOLOGICAL SOCIETY.

I.

IN the prospectus of the Zoological Society dated June, 1904, it is stated, and for the first time, that "this Society was founded in 1826 by Sir Stamford Raffles, Mr. J. Sabine, Mr. N. A. Vigors, and other eminent naturalists." That is in the main the historical truth, but the Society was long in recognizing and recording it, for in all its previous notices since 1829 the palm of merit in its foundation was assigned to Sir Humphry Davy, who, as a matter of fact, had little or nothing to do with it. In 1829, however, the list of members was headed by a prefatory notice that "this Society was instituted in 1826 under the auspices of Sir T. Stamford Raffles, Sir Humphry Davy, Bart., and other eminent individuals." After that year the names of Raffles and Davy were transposed, and the major credit in founding the Zoological Society was added to the other achievements of the inventor of the safety lamp. It is due to the untiring efforts and patient zeal of the Rev. R. Blanchard Raffles in collecting contemporary evidence and in bringing forward the conclusive documents that the right of his distinguished kinsman to be called, as he was in 1826, "the Founder of the Zoological Society" has been established in a manner that places the claim beyond the possibility of refutation. My friend—whose death, after a long illness, while this article was passing through the press, I have to deplore—placed the results of his painstaking research in my hands, and the following narrative is based on the papers with which he supplied me.

It was one of the distinctive characteristics of Sir Stamford Raffles that in the midst of his arduous labours of administration, and of his pressing political anxieties as a statesman, he never lost sight of the interests of science. It seemed to afford him not less gratification to send a new plant or a rare animal to England than to beat the Dutch in a diplomatic tussle, or to fix the Union Jack on a coign of vantage along the world's highway. He had conceived the idea of a Zoological Society long before there was any talk of such a project in the Linnean Society. Lady Raffles tells us in her memoir of her husband that in 1817 "he meditated the establishment of a society on the principle of the Jardin des Plantes at Paris." He broached the subject in that year to Sir Joseph Banks, who expressed his warm approval of the proposal, and after his return to the East he sent that gentleman a collection in duplicate of the quadrupeds and birds of Sumatra. On leaving that island on his return to England in February, 1824, he took with him a still more complete natural history collection, but on the very night the ship—the Fame—sailed from Bencoolen a fire broke out on board, and the ship with all she contained was destroyed. In describing his loss, the money value of which he estimated at 30,000*l.*, Sir Stamford specifically referred to

"all my collections in natural history.....There was scarce an unknown animal—bird, beast, or fish—or an interesting plant which we had not on board; a living tapir, a new species of tiger, splendid pheasants, &c., domesticated for the voyage; we were, in short, in this respect a perfect Noah's Ark."

The passengers and crew escaped, and on his return to Bencoolen, where he had to wait three months for a fresh ship, Sir Stamford threw himself with all his accustomed energy into the task of making a second collection. Dr. Horsfield gave a very interesting account of this undertaking in a paper on 'The Rimau-Dahan, a New Species of Felis discovered in the Forests of Bencoolen by Sir Stamford Raffles,' which was published in vol. i. of The Zoological Journal for January, 1825. He begins by stating that "this animal was brought alive to England in August last by Sir Stamford Raffles," and goes on to say:—

"There is, however, a peculiar interest connected with the history of the Rimau-Dahan far exceeding that which arises from its importance in a scientific point of view. The destruction of the ship Fame on the coast of Sumatra has been a subject of universal regret as well as of universal notoriety, but it is less generally known that after returning to Bencoolen, stripped of the result of the labours of seven years by an instantaneous and appalling calamity, Sir Stamford Raffles resumed his labours with unabated energy and ardour. During the short period of a few weeks he succeeded in accumulating such a number of materials of an interesting nature as alone entitle him to the rank of an eminent benefactor of science.....On the Rimau-Dahan I am enabled to add various interesting remarks kindly communicated to me by Sir Stamford Raffles. 'A small Rimau-Dahan,' writes Sir Stamford, 'lost in the Fame, which had been living in my possession about ten months, and might have been four months old when he first came into my possession, attained a size of about one-third larger than the specimen which was brought to England last August' (the subject described in the present essay). 'The colours and marks were nearly the same, but more defined, and nothing yellow or red about it, the black having a striking velvety appearance. The tail was longer and more bushy than in the latter specimen. This was obtained a few days before I last left Bencoolen in April. It was then smaller than the common Tiger cat, and only distinguishable from that animal by the length of the tail, breadth of the paw, and colours. The natives assert that they do not attain a much larger size than the first specimen, and perhaps the full size of the wild and full-grown animal may be fairly taken as half as large again as the present specimen.'"

Dr. Horsfield in the same paper enumerates other objects of natural history brought back by Sir Stamford: (1) fetus in utero and other parts of Tapirus malayanus preserved in spirits; (2) the subject of the present memoir, the Rimau-Dahan, or Felis macrocelis, the first distinct notice of which was given by Sir Stamford Raffles in vol. xiii. of the Transactions of the Linnean Society (see p. 250); (3) Felis sumatrana, living; (4) specimens and skeletons of quadrupeds; (5) prepared skins of birds; (6) various Sumatran corals very perfectly preserved; (7) herbarium of Sumatran plants of considerable extent; (8) materials for further illustration of the genus Rafflesia in every state of fructification, consisting of numerous specimens carefully preserved in spirits and salt water; (9) a very extensive collection of living plants, among which may be enumerated a new species of Nepenthes and the Rafflesia-Arnoldi (these were brought in a thriving state to St. Helena, where they were deposited provisionally in the H.E.I.C.'s Botanic Garden); and (10) drawings of quadrupeds, birds, and plants.

Having given Dr. Horsfield's list, I may recall the interesting fact that on first reaching Sumatra Sir Stamford engaged two French naturalists—MM. Diard and Duvancel—to prepare a descriptive catalogue of his collection, into which he had "used all his influence to bring whatever was interesting in zoology." But they did not carry out his instructions, or advanced pretensions that he considered incompatible with the terms of their engagement, so he took the task into his own hands. In describing his own work he wrote :—

"The catalogue now submitted has been drawn up by myself from actual examination of the subjects, combined with the result of extensive personal inquiries among the best-informed natives of the country. It has no pretensions beyond accuracy and the simple statement of facts."

The result of his personal inquiries was seen in the fact that the Malay name of all his specimens was given, and that several of the native chiefs interested themselves in his researches and provided him with specimens. The Sultan of Singapore, for instance, sent him a Halicora dugong; and the King of Acheen, with whom he was on such friendly terms that he received a titular dignity at his hands, assured him that "there is an animal called Jumbung, nearly the size and make of a horse, with two unequal horns, to be found in the eastern part of his dominions."

So far as I know, the efforts of the Dutch have availed as little to capture this curious quadruped as to put an end to Achinese resistance. With regard to the dugong just referred to, Sir Stamford gave an interesting description in the following letter to Sir Everard Home, who received it in May, 1820 :—

"I have now the pleasure of communicating to you the desired information concerning the dugong. At Singapore in June last I had the good fortune to meet with one of these animals.....I was present at the dissection, and the following observations, as far as they go, may be depended upon. I have read them over to Dr. Wallick and General Hardwicke, and they concur in opinion as to the correctness of the description. I have the pleasure to acquaint you that General Hardwicke has just now got a small dugong, 4 feet 6 inches long, which I have succeeded in persuading him to send home to you for dissection, and you will receive it by the next ship. The dugong which we examined measured 8½ ft. in length, and afforded no less interest under the knife than satisfaction on the table, as the flesh proved to be most excellent beef. Our entertainment was truly marine, for we had on the same day discovered those Neptunian sponges which General Hardwicke has since described, and which served us as goblets.....The young have a short sharp cry, which they frequently repeat, and it is said they shed tears. These tears are carefully collected by the common people as a charm, the possession of which is supposed to secure the affections of those to whom they are attached in the same manner as they attract the mother to her young. This idea is at least as poetic, and certainly more natural than the fable of the Syren's song."

This letter was published in the Transactions of the Royal Society (1820, part i.). To complete these preliminary details it is only necessary now to refer briefly to Sir Stamford's great affection for animals, which was shown from his early youth. References to the deaths of his animal pets are frequent throughout his correspondence, and his wife wrote that he used "to spend hours in fondling and domesticating those objects of his care and attention." He had a pet bear, and when it was ill he physicked it with champagne, which was a rarer luxury in those days than now. He was especially fond of monkeys, and one fine siamang, which he called Mr. Silvio, was in the habit of sitting at table dressed in a red coat and trousers. It was with regard to this animal that Sir Stamford wrote: "I am often accused of paying more attention to the monkey than the children." Better proof could not be provided of his zeal in the cause of natural history than the fact that the Directors of the East India Company once censured him—mildly on this occasion—for paying so much attention to the subject, and for thinking that they could be interested in it. Before turning to other persons and a different chapter of incidents, what has been narrated may thus be summed up. Sir Stamford Raffles returned to England in the summer of 1824 (August), bringing with him a very valuable collection, having done much to advance the knowledge of natural history during seven years in Sumatra, and full of ardour to give practical effect to the scheme he had suggested in 1817. He brought to the realization of his design an energy and enthusiasm that were essential to success, and that were conspicuously lacking in those who had been philandering with the idea for some short time prior to his arrival in 1824.

On November 27th, 1822, a meeting of certain Fellows of the Linnean Society was held at the Society's rooms for the purpose of "promoting the study of zoology." The Rev. William Kirby took the chair, and there were present Messrs. W. Sharpe MacLeay, N. A. Vigors, George Milne, James Francis Stephens, Adrian Hardy Haworth, and Edward Turner Bennett. Besides these seven gentlemen, whose names I give in full because they formed the first committee, there were present Messrs. Hatchett and Gray. The first resolution passed at the meeting was to form a Zoological Club, and the committee named were "to prepare a set of regulations for the government of such club." All the publications of the Club were to be submitted to the Linnean Society before publication, and that Society was to have a prior claim over them for its own Transactions. After these regulations for the Club had been drawn up, the Linnean Society passed a resolution to this effect :—

"The bye-laws of the Zoological Club to be approved provided that the title of it be altered to 'The Zoological Club of the Linnean Society of London.'"

The Zoological Club was granted permission to meet in the Society's rooms, but the Society declared that "no expense or interference was to be incurred by it." At the same time the Club meetings were to be open to all members of the Society, and "the Club was to be subject to the general control of the Linnean Society."

The regulations of the Club, dated May 23rd, 1823, read as follows :—

"The object of the Club is the study of zoology and comparative anatomy in all their branches, and more especially as they relate to the animals indigenous to Great Britain and Ireland."

"The right of membership in the Zoological Club is confined exclusively to Fellows and Associates of the Linnean Society."

"A chairman of the Zoological Club may not hold office for two successive years."

"The 29th of November, being the birthday of the celebrated Ray, shall be the anniversary of the Club."

On that day in the year 1823 the Rev. William Kirby, being the chairman, delivered an address explanatory of the views of the Club. The meeting passed a motion of "thanks for his excellent and appropriate address," and then proceeded to elect by ballot its new committee. The proceedings could not have been very difficult, for there were only fourteen members present, and nine posts had to be filled. Mr. Joseph Sabine was the new chairman, Mr. J. F. Stephens the treasurer, and Mr. Nicholas Aylward Vigors the secretary. There were some changes in the committee. Messrs. Bennett, Haworth, Milne, and Kirby retained their seats, but in the place of Mr. MacLeay appear the new names of Thomas Horsfield, M.D., and Thomas Bell.

The minutes of the meeting in 1824 show that the Rev. W. Kirby became chairman for the second time; that Messrs. Bell, Haworth, and Milne retired in due course; and that two new members, J. E. Bicheno and J. G. Children, were elected to the committee, to which Mr. W. S.

MacLeay returned. The minutes for 1825 are of the same character, and it will suffice to say that Mr. J. E. Bicheno was then elected chairman, and that two new names, Joshua Brookes and William John Broderip, were added to the committee. It is stated that fifteen members were present. In 1826 it is recorded that on four occasions there were not sufficient people present to form a meeting. For the annual meeting in 1826 only ten members and four visitors were present. In 1827 there were eighteen members and eight visitors, but "the funds of the Club were considerably in arrear."

Although the Zoological Society had been founded before this date, it will be as well to finish the brief history of the Zoological Club of the Linnean Society. In 1828 Mr. N. A. Vigors retired from the secretaryship. The committee passed a resolution expressing "their gratification that the sole cause of his retirement was removal to a larger circle." He was the first Secretary of the Zoological Society, and held that post until 1833. In 1828 also the treasurer reported that there was a deficiency due to him of 3*l.* 1*s.* 9*d.* In November of that year Mr. Vigors was elected chairman, and he summoned a meeting in May, 1829, to consider a plan for meeting the present exigencies of the Club. The treasurer's deficit had risen to 15*l.* 4*s.* 9*d.* There was also a debt of 30*l.* for printing addresses of the late chairman. It was resolved that "efforts should be made by subscription to continue meetings and prevent future debts."

Notwithstanding these efforts, the attendance gradually diminished, until the average number present at the meetings was six or seven. At the annual meeting in November, 1829, when eight members were present, the committee proposed, "in consequence of the diminished attendance of the members," and the meeting resolved unanimously, that "the meetings of the Club be discontinued." The Council of the Linnean Society was "requested to accept of the books of the Club, and preserve them with the original papers of the Society." Such was the end of the Zoological Club, after an existence of seven years. It had two defects that precluded lasting or popular success. It was exclusive, being confined to members of the Linnean Society. It was narrowly scientific, and its members never dreamt of popularizing the study, or even the subject, of zoology.

On February 15th, 1825, Sir Stamford Raffles, having taken up his residence in London, was elected a Fellow of the Linnean Society, and evidence of the fresh life and spirit that he infused into a moribund project was speedily forthcoming. DEMETRIUS C. BOULGER.

SOCIETIES.

SOCIETY OF ANTIQUARIES.—Feb. 16.—Sir Edward M. Thompson, V.P., in the chair.—Mr. Cyril Davenport read some notes on Samuel Mearns, book-binder to King Charles II., and his bindings.—Mr. F. G. Hilton Price, Director, exhibited a number of antiquities lately found in Thames Street, noteworthy for being almost all of the Tudor period.

Feb. 23.—Lord Avebury, President, in the chair.—The Marquis of Dufferin and Ava was elected a Fellow.—Mr. T. F. Kirby read some notes on fourteenth-century conveyancing, as illustrated by documents in the muniment-room of Winchester College. Mr. Kirby also exhibited a leaf of a manuscript service-book of the fifteenth century, found as a wrapper to some old papers.—Mr. Micklethwaite exhibited a small latten seal with the device of a key, and the legend S' NETLAIVE ELLISIS, found in Cambridgeshire.

MICROSCOPICAL.—Feb. 15.—Dr. Dukinfield H. Scott, President, in the chair.—The Secretary read Mr. Finlayson's paper describing the Ashe-Finlayson "Comparascope." The author had long felt the want of some means of examining two slides simultaneously, and in conjunction with Mr. Ashe he had succeeded in producing the arrangement exhibited. The invention, which has been patented, consists of the attachment to any ordinary microscope of a second objective, stage, and illuminating apparatus, placed on one side at right angles to the optical axis of the microscope. On the nosepiece of the microscope is screwed a short piece of tube having a circular aperture at one side, and containing a reflector extending half-way across and placed at an angle of 45° to the axis of the tube. The subsidiary apparatus is applied at this aperture, the reflector transmitting the image of the second slide to the eyepiece. The reflector blocks up one half the area of the tube, the other half being left free for the passage of light from the primary objective direct to the eyepiece. A diaphragm, or division plate, extends up the tube from the reflector almost to the eyepiece to prevent overlapping of the images, which appear together as two semi-circles, equally distinct.—Mr. C. Beck exhibited and described an optical bench for microscope illumination, micro-photography, micro-projection, lantern projection, &c., and a large photo-micrographic and enlarging camera, both bench and camera being on rigid iron tables provided with castors and fixing pedestals. He also exhibited a metallurgical microscope with improved focussing arrangement, by which the stage was also raised and lowered, and another model for the same purpose, which was designed for the use of a large number of appliances enabling specimens of considerable size to be examined. A complete set of vertical illuminators was also exhibited.—Mr. J. E. Stead delivered a lecture on 'Practical Micro-Metallurgy.' He said that Dr. Sorby was the first to read a paper on the subject before the Society, and the first known photograph was one taken by him of some sections he had made forty years ago. Dr. Sorby's method was extremely simple. He took a small piece of metal and ground it down to a flat surface, then rubbed it down on various grades of emery paper, commencing with the coarsest, and finally polished it on parchment. Later workers had virtually followed the same method, but had used machinery to expedite the process, by means of which the cutting off and polishing of a specimen, instead of taking two or three hours as formerly, could, with the machinery exhibited in the room, be done perfectly in five minutes. Mr. Stead then described the machinery exhibited, and explained the various operations of cutting, grinding, and polishing. The different methods of preparing the polished surface so as to render the structure visible, mounting the specimens, and their suitable illumination for examination under the microscope were next described. A series of slides were shown on the screen, illustrating the different kinds of apparatus used in the preparation of the specimens, and the different forms of microscopes specially designed for their examination. These were followed by a large number of actual specimens, shown on the screen by means of the epidiascope, the details of the surface, and especially the coloration, being exhibited in a perfectly novel manner. The extremely beautiful colours produced by the heating process, by which some portions became oxidized more quickly than others, were very striking, especially in the case of a specimen of a polished section of a meteorite, which almost equalled in brilliancy and colour that well-known microscopic object the wing of Morpho menelaus. The lateness of the hour caused Mr. Stead to postpone the second part of his lecture.

INSTITUTION OF CIVIL ENGINEERS.—Feb. 28.—Sir Guilford L. Molesworth, President, in the chair.—The paper read was 'Surface-Condensing Plants, and the Value of the Vacuum Produced,' by Mr. R. W. Allen.

ANTHROPOLOGICAL INSTITUTE.—Feb. 28.—Prof. W. Gowland, President, in the chair.—Mr. N. W. Thomas read a paper on 'Group Marriage, with Especial Reference to Australia.' Mr. Thomas pointed out that the theories of Lewis Morgan were without sufficient basis. He postulated fifteen stages in the evolution of marriage; but it was impossible to see how or why the transition took place from one stage to another. Instead of Lewis Morgan's stages, later theorists had postulated first a period of promiscuity, and following on that group marriage, so called, which in Australia is only now being transformed into individual marriage. But here, too, no sufficient account had been given of the causes which led to the abolition of promiscuity. The grounds on which it was assumed that promiscuity and group marriage were stages in human development were first philological, and secondly sociological. The philological grounds were shown in the paper to be wholly insufficient, and the facts of present-day Australian life to be susceptible of other explanations.

HISTORICAL.—Feb. 16.—Annual Meeting.—Dr. G. W. Prothero, President, in the chair.—The Rev. W. Hunt, D.Lit., was elected President for the ensuing term of office. Mr. James Bryce was elected an Honorary Vice-President. Dr. G. W. Prothero and Mr. Frederic Harrison were elected Vice-Presidents. Messrs. C. R. Beazley, W. H. Stevenson, and Stanley Leathes, and Dr. Sidney Lee were elected Councillors.—Mr. V. B. Redstone was elected a Fellow.—The Council presented their Annual Report, and the President delivered an address in which he referred to the present position of the Society in relation to historical study.

PHYSICAL.—Feb. 24.—Prof. J. H. Poynting, President, in the chair.—A paper 'On the Curvature Method of teaching Geometrical Optics' was read by Dr. C. V. Drysdale.—Mr. R. J. Sowter exhibited and described 'Dr. Meisling's Colour-Patch Apparatus.'—Mr. J. Schofield read a paper on 'A Method of illustrating the Laws of the Simple Pendulum.' Mr. Schofield also exhibited a set of string models of optical systems, the lenses and prisms being made of celluloid, so that the paths of rays through them can be shown.

MEETINGS NEXT WEEK.

- MON. Royal Academy, 4.—Lecture by Prof. C. Waldstein.
— Royal Institution, 5.—General Monthly.
— Engineers, 7½.—'The Transport Possibilities of our Inland Navigable Waterways,' Mr. Benjamin H. Thwaite.
— Aristotelian, 8.—'Value Feelings and Value Judgments,' Mr. J. L. McIntyre.
— Society of Arts, 8.—'Internal Combustion Engines,' Lecture IV., Mr. Dugald Clerk. (Cantor Lecture.)
TUES. Royal Institution, 5.—'Some Recent Biometric Studies,' Lecture II., Prof. Karl Pearson.
— Institution of Civil Engineers, 8.—Discussion on 'Surface-Condensing Plants and the Value of the Vacuum Produced.'
WED. Geological, 8.—'Observations on some of the Loxonematidae, with Descriptions of Two New Species,' and 'On some Gasteropoda from the Silurian Rocks of Llangadock,' Miss Jane Donald, communicated by Prof. Theodore Groom.
— Society of Arts, 8.—'Ethics of Japanese Society,' Baron Suyematsu.
THURS. Royal, 4½.
— Royal Institution, 5.—'Recent Astronomical Progress,' Lecture II., Prof. H. Turner.
— Institution of Electrical Engineers, 8.—'On the Effect of Heat on the Electrical and Mechanical Properties of Dielectrics,' and 'On the Temperature Distribution in the Interior of Field Coils,' Dr. R. T. Glazebrook; 'On Temperature Curves and the Rating of Electrical Machinery,' Mr. R. Goldschmidt.
— Antiquaries, 8½.—'On some Crucibles from Rhodesia exhibited by the Bishop of Chichester,' Mr. W. Gowland; 'Notes on a Bas-relief found near Linares, Spain,' Mr. Horace Sanders.
FRI. Royal Astronomical, 5.
— Institution of Civil Engineers, 8.—'The Purification of Sewage,' Mr. F. G. Helsby; 'The Purification of Sewage by Hydrolysis and Oxidation,' Mr. F. O. Kirby. (Students' Meeting.)
— Physical, 8.—'On the Stresses in the Earth's Crust before and after the Sinking of a Bore-hole,' Dr. C. Chree; 'On the Lateral Vibration of Bars of Uniform and Varying Sectional Area,' Mr. J. Morrow; 'On Direct-Reading Resistance Thermometers, with an Appendix on Composite Thermocouples,' Mr. A. Campbell.
— Royal Institution, 9.—'The Structure of the Atom,' Prof. J. J. Thomson.
SAT. Royal Institution, 3.—'Electrical Properties of Radio-active Substances,' Lecture I., Prof. J. J. Thomson.

Science Gossip.

THE death, in his eightieth year, is announced from Port of Spain, Trinidad, of Prof. Adolf Bastian, Director of the Berlin Museum für Völkerkunde. Dr. Bastian, who had studied medicine, law, and natural science, began life as a ship's surgeon. He was an indefatigable traveller in the interest of science, had visited remote portions of the globe, and at the time of his death, in spite of his advanced age, was actually engaged on a scientific journey. He was the author of numerous valuable works, among them 'Der Mensch in der Geschichte,' 'Die Völker des östlichen Asiens,' 'Die Kulturländer des alten Amerika,' &c.

MESSRS. C. GRIFFIN & Co. announce: The Synthetic Dyestuffs, by J. C. Cain and J. F. Thorpe.—The Spinning and Twisting of Long Vegetable Fibres, by H. R. Carter.—The Investigation of Mine Air, translations by Sir C. Le Neve Foster of foreign papers, with a monograph by J. S. Haldane.—Constructional Steel Work, by A. W. Farnsworth.—An Introduction to the Design of Beams, Girders, and Columns, by W. H. Atherton.—and Smoke Abatement, by W. Nicholson.—new editions of Calcareous Cements, by G. R. Redgrave and C. Spackman; A Treatise on Mine Surveying, by B. H. Brough; Electrical Practice in Collieries, by D. Burns; The Principles and Construction of Pumping Machinery, by H. Davey; The Metallurgy of Steel, by F. W. Harbord; Gas, Oil, and Air Engines, by B. Donkin; A Text-Book of Applied Mechanics and Mechanical Engineering, by A. Jamieson, Vol. II.; A Text-Book of Engineering Drawing and Design, 2 vols., by S. H. Wells; Valves and Valve-Gearing, by C. Hurst; A Pocket-Book of Electrical Rules and Tables, by J. Munro and Prof. Jamieson; A Pocket-Book of Marine Engineering Rules and Tables, by A. E. Seaton and H. M. Rounthwaite; Know Your Own Ship, by T. Walton; and Properties of Matter, by J. H. Poynting and J. J. Thomson.

SOME of the arrangements have been provisionally announced for the observation of the total eclipse on the 30th of August next. The Astronomer Royal and Mr. Dyson propose to go to Sfax, on the east coast of the Regency of Tunis; Prof. Turner to Egypt; Sir J. Norman and Dr. Lockyer to Philippeville in Algeria; others to different stations in Spain.

THE question of adopting a standard time for India, after long discussion, seems at last on the eve of settlement. The Government of India has received replies from the local governments to its proposals, and nearly all have expressed their unqualified approval of them. There seems no doubt that the two following regulations will be put in force without delay. The first is the fixing of an "Indian standard time," for use on all railways and at all telegraph offices, which shall be exactly five and a half hours in advance of Greenwich. The second is the fixing of a "Burma standard time" for similar purposes, which shall be exactly six and a half hours in advance of Greenwich.

THE 'Nautical Almanac for 1908,' together with separate copies of Part I., containing such portions as are essential for navigation, has been recently issued. The data and arrangement are the same generally as those of the preceding year. There will be three eclipses of the sun: one total (on the 3rd of January), the central line of which will be confined to the Pacific Ocean; and two annular, on the 28th of June (visible as a small partial eclipse in this country) and on the 23rd of December, which will not be visible in any part of Europe or Asia. An eclipse of the moon will take place on the night of the 7th of December, but it will be only penumbral.

FOUR new small planets are announced as having been registered on photographic plates by Prof. Max Wolf at the Königstuhl Observatory, Heidelberg, on the 9th ult., but one of these, of which it is remarked that a previous registration on January 14th had been overlooked, turns out to be identical with No. 427, discovered by M. Charlois at Nice on August 27th, 1897; another is probably identical with No. 517, discovered by Herr Dugan on September 22nd, 1903; and a third may be identical with Garumna, No. 150, discovered by Perrotin at Toulouse so long ago as 1878. No. 496, which was detected by Prof. Wolf on October 25th, 1902, has been named Gryphia.

PROF. PERRINE, of the Lick Observatory, California, who discovered a sixth (distant) satellite of Jupiter in January, now announces a seventh. The orbits of these bodies are not yet established, but it is considered that they are from six to eight millions of miles distant from the planet, and that the inclinations of their orbits to the plane of his are large.

FINE ARTS

The True Portraiture of Mary Stuart, Queen of Scots. By J. J. Foster. (Dickinsons.)

THE magnificent folio of Mr. Foster, with Mr. Lionel Cust's 'Authentic Portraits of Mary, Queen of Scots' (Murray, 1903), enables us, we think, to establish the probable genuineness of the two most fascinating likenesses of "the queen of many wooers." The artists to whom she sat could not render her charm, except in two instances. By some odd mischance neither Mr. Cust nor Mr. Foster has seen the point at which we aim: Mr. Cust, because he does not appear to be acquainted with the portrait in the possession of the Earl of Leven and Melville; Mr. Foster, who, reproduces that piece (opposite p. 38), because he has not drawn what we think the obvious inference from a comparison between the Leven and Melville portrait and the portrait in the Earl of Morton's collection. The Morton portrait shows us, in middle age and in captivity, the face of the queen which, in youth and happy spirits, faintly smiles from the Leven and Melville portrait. That work, as we hope to prove beyond cavil, represents, in all the charm of her youth, the famous Queen of Scots. The Leven and Melville portrait (20 in. by 23 in.), oval, and showing the figure above the waistband, was exhibited in 1866, at the National Portrait Exhibition, by the ninth Earl. Of its history Mr. Foster says that "nothing is known," and he has met with no criticism of the work. The queen wears a great tour, or thouret, covering the back of the head, and standing out in wings round the shoulders. Across the breast of her red dress, richly studded with pearls, is a carcan of large jewels, while the tour is set and hung with enormous pearls. As Mary's collection of pearls is famous (the best were sold by the Regent Moray to Elizabeth in April-May, 1568), we naturally ask, Do her inventories catalogue the pearls which she wears in this portrait?

Mr. Foster, who justly esteems this beautiful work, evidently did not think of consulting 'Les Inventaires de la Roynie d'Escosse,' edited by Dr. Joseph Robertson for the Bannatyne Club (1863). We have taken that step, and find that the great tour is catalogued thrice—in 1561, 1561-2, and in June, 1566. The jewelled band appears in the inventories of the same three dates. As to the tour, we quote the entry of June, 1566: "Ung toure garny de xxxiii grosses perles, neuf perles pendantes en poire, et xxxiii perles qui font l'entredoux"; that is, which alternate with the greater pearls in the setting of the tour. In the portrait we find the xxxiii grosses perles, of remarkable beauty, and four out of the nine pendantes en poire above the queen's brow; the other five may have been disposed at the back of the tour. But the xxxiii perles qui font l'entredoux are not here, nor are they in the description of 1561. The ornament appears to have been modified at various dates, for there are vacant spaces where several of the entredoux have been attached, and les entredoux which do occur are twenty-two clusters of three round pearls each. The notes in the inventories show that Mary was wont to redistribute her jewels, attaching them to fresh ornaments. With xxxiii grosses perles we necessarily expect xxxiii entredoux; but there are eleven spaces vacant of entredoux, yet showing the points of attachment.

If any critic thinks that we have not made out the identity of this jewel, we meet him in the case of the jewelled carcan or band. It is described thrice: in 1561-2 as "Ung carcan ou il y a une grosse pointe de diamant taille a faces; huict grandes tables de diamens garnies de huict entredoux, et a chacun entredoux y a deux grosses perles." The "pointe de diamant taille a faces" hangs from the centre of the band in the Leven and Melville portrait; three of the jewels with table-cut stones are seen, and four of the entredoux, each set with two huge round pearls. It appears that this much of the band is sewn on to the dress. Any one who wants to see more of the carcan may turn to the much reduced photograph of a portrait in the collection of Mr. Howard of Greystoke (p. xv). Here the carcanet is worn round the neck and shoulders, above the red pearl-studded dress. Four of the table-cut stones are seen, and five of the pearl-set entredoux. Mr. Cust thinks that this portrait of a very young girl is more like Isabella of Valois than Mary. In that case the jewel may have been given by her to Mary; or Mary lent it to her young sister-in-law to be painted in.

It might be inferred that Mary is the person represented, for, attached to the carcanet, she apparently wears the great diamond cross, a crown jewel of France, which she restored to the commissioners of Charles IX. on February 26th, 1560-1 ('Inventaires,' p. 197).

The jewels, we think, settle the question of the authenticity of the Leven and Melville portrait. The Greystoke, Mr. Foster says, is attributed to Jehan de Court, who was Mary's Court painter in 1566-7. The Leven and Melville is ascribed to Clouet. Probably, to judge by all that can be guessed of the manner from photographs, both works are from the same hand. A list of Mary's household in 1560 is not at present accessible to us. It may contain the name of Jehan de Court, as does her État of 1566-7, in Teulet's collection of documents (vol. ii. p. 273). Our next point is the wonderful resemblance of the faintly smiling young Mary of the Leven and Melville portrait, which has the mysterious witchery of Leonardo's women, to the pale, stately, and melancholy Mary of the Morton portrait. This can best be studied, apart from the original, in the reproduction by Mr. Law in his 'Scottish Portraits' (also in the "Edinburgh" 'Waverley' and in 'The Mystery of Mary Stuart').

The new mystery is, How does the Morton portrait come to resemble so closely the Leven and Melville, with allowance for the changes caused by years, passion, and sorrow?

As to the origin of the Morton, of course the legend that it was a gift to George Douglas, and painted at Loch Leven Castle, is impossible. The queen was strictly guarded; no visitors need apply; and the costume resembles that of the Sheffield portrait of 1577-8. In reviewing Mr. Cust's book we pointed out that in 1577, Morton, through Ogilvy, was trying to enter into friendly (if not affectionate) relations with the captive queen. The absence of any Catholic symbols in the Morton piece may be explained by Morton's "godliness"; nothing "idolatrous" would suit that murderer and adulterer. As Mr. Cust rightly remarks, the portrait which, according to a letter of Claude Nau, was being executed in August, 1577, at Sheffield, for Archbishop Beaton in Paris, was probably "of miniature size"; while the large portraits of the Sheffield group "are all expanded versions of the miniature painting," "hard and unpleasing," as verily they are! Not so the Morton portrait, which is so like the Leven and Melville portrait. Beaton, in Paris, may have had the miniature copied by a good painter—why not by Jehan de Court, then painter to Henri III.?—and may have sent the piece to Morton to encourage that penitent sinner against the queen. From Morton, who had no legitimate sons, it would come to the Douglasses of Loch Leven, and so to the present Earl of Morton. But as Mary was endlessly grateful to George Douglas, and was in relations with him to the last, it is also possible that he received from her this admirable work when on her service about 1585 with Beaton in Paris. Of these alternatives one is probably right. Of Lord Leven and Melville's piece, Mr. Foster says that the history is unknown. His lordship descends from a brother of Robert Melville of Murdocairney, by far the most honest and constant friend whom the queen had in her misfortunes. With Lethington and Kirkcaldy of Grange he held the Castle of Edinburgh for her till it "ran like sand" under the fire of the English guns. He, with the Master of Gray, faced Elizabeth boldly in their final embassy. His reply to the angry Elizabeth is well known. No family better deserved than his to have a portrait of Mary.

It is well known that the Duke of Devonshire, at Hardwick, possesses a full-length portrait of Mary, dated 1578, and signed "P. Oudry." Oudry was, as M. Dimier says, "a mechanical copyist"; nothing can be so hard and dry as his manner. But the Morton portrait is akin to that by Oudry, and we understand Mr. Cust to hold that the Morton is an embellished rendering of the original of the Oudry, the artist being aided, perhaps, by the reminiscences of friends of the queen. The Oudry Mr. Cust thinks more "convincing" as a likeness. But the Morton, set beside the Leven and Melville, is absolutely convincing. Who was P. Oudry? In 1561-7 Pierre Oudry was Mary's brodeur—her embroiderer. He is recorded in Teulet's État and thrice in accounts by Servais de Condé (Robertson). His salary was one hundred pounds; the salary of "Jehan de Court, peintre," was two hundred and forty pounds—forty more than the stipend of the secretaries Raulet and Joseph Riccio. We suggest that Oudry, like many of Mary's suite, remained in her service in England, and that, in 1578, he painted the Hardwick-Sheffield portrait. But in the conditions of Mary's captivity in 1577, when she was "your charge and your love," as Lady Shrewsbury wrote to her husband, when her French Chancellor was allowed to stay for months with her, and when Andrew Beaton freely went and came to and from France for her, a French artist also may have come over with Andrew Beaton or Du Verger, Mary's Chancellor, and may have executed a miniature or a small portrait for Archbishop Beaton. He may even have made this work, in France, the basis of the Morton portrait, while Pierre Oudry was doing his dreary best in England.

If we are right, we have, in addition to the Janet drawings, authentic portraits of Mary in her young prime (Leven and Melville) and in her captivity (Morton). These results are due to Mr. Foster's beautiful book and to Robertson's 'Inventaires.'

The coloured reproductions of early

French studies in chalk of the queen which Mr. Foster has included are rendered with remarkable success; nothing could be more satisfactory. The coins and medals are worn and faint, modis pallentia miris. One can purchase at Paris "re-strikes" of the bridal medal of 1558, which are very distinct and clear cut, the die or stamp being in excellent condition. Apparently the photograph is taken from a worn old example. The head on Achesoun's testoon of 1553, the head of "his Majesty's dearest mother, with the nakkit craig," appears to us to be a thing designed from fancy. No girl of eleven could possess the graceful neck, bust, and shoulders; later, the same head looks very handsome on a gold ryal. We see little use in reproducing portraits which, as Mr. Cust bluntly says, are "impostors." Among these are the interesting Fraser Tytler portrait, with blue eyes! the pretty Devonshire girlish dandy, unknown; the "Carleton" portrait, which, with its cousin the "Ailsa" portrait, populates Scottish country houses, a centre of family fables; and the countless variants on a miniature which a Duke of Hamilton had doctored to suit his taste in the eighteenth century. Many of this class of things are pleasant and pretty, but no more represent Mary than Elizabeth. Mr. Foster's arrangement of his materials is not so good as the historical method of Mr. Cust. He does not, like Mr. Cust, give exact references. When he says that Achesoun, the designer of coins, was in France in 1553, "we are told," we ask, "Who tells us?" Mr. Cust supplies the reference.

These are the chief defects in a really beautiful book, which contains many portraits in addition to those of the queen. The 'Bothwell' has no pedigree, apparently, and should be compared with the 'Bothwell' of Sir Archibald Buchan-Hepburn, which we have not seen. There are, we believe, portraits of Mary, with good pedigrees, in Scotland, which have escaped Mr. Foster. One is a tiny miniature in a jewel; another appears to be of the family of the miniature in the Uffizi. This work is said to have documentary evidence of the age of James VI. in its favour.

By the way, the sceptic may insist that the Leven and Melville is a late copy. If so, it is from an authentic original.

THE WHISTLER EXHIBITION.

THE memorial exhibition of Whistler's works at the New Gallery is, in spite of many obvious gaps, a most remarkable declaration of the artist's achievement. It forms the most curious contrast to the life-work of Watts, with which at the present moment one almost inevitably compares it; and the difference is determined by the diverse attitudes of the two towards the god of the nineteenth century, Dagon. In Whistler we have Promethean defiance, in Watts the appeal to a larger faith. Watts, supported by his faith and, let us admit, unhampered by that piercing intellect which made Whistler always see too clearly for his own good—Watts could afford scarcely to notice the tyranny of Philistia. But to Whistler it was a constant menace, an outrage, an insult to his self-respect. He fortified himself only by the sense of his unaided individual power and by the scrupulous artistic conscience which his greater works declare so evidently. Even this, alas!

deserted him for a time, and the man whose nocturnes—sublimely original, patient, scientific, almost laborious though they were—had been held up to public scorn and the ridicule of those who surely might have known better, did in his lithographs and not a few of his etchings actually do all that he could to give the lie to his own genius, and justify the charge of charlatanism.

Whistler had not in him the moral grandeur to sustain his Promethean rôle—the failure is the more pathetic, the gesture more heroic, perhaps, for that very fact—but the face he presented was too febrile, too nervous and irritable, to take the affronts he received in a great spirit. He lacked the humanity which might have taught him humility, and the influence of this defect makes itself evident in his art. In one of the earliest works here, The Piano, we find a sympathy and depth of feeling, a tender respect towards human life, which we look for in vain in the period of his contemptuous strife with Philistinism.

The result is, one must confess, that Whistler was not a great portrait painter. He did some portraits which are among the world's masterpieces, but they are great not as portraits, but as supremely beautiful natures mortes. The indifference is always more or less discernible; even the Mother becomes no intense creation of an individual character, but rather a type of passive and uncomplaining old age—dignified and discreet, formally respectful, but without evidence of any deep or passionate sympathy. Indifference is the note of his portraits, even arrogance, as of one who would say to Carlyle, "Step down from your infinities, and become a pattern upon my dado." Surely, if Carlyle had not been secretly the most convinced of æsthetes, he would have preferred Watts's "flayed horse."

The worst of the portraits, from this point of view, is the Sarasate, not so much from its indifference as for its perverse sympathy with the least noble aspect of the subject. Whistler, as a man, may often have shocked our sense of the becoming; as an artist he had generally irreproachable, even exquisite manners. But for once in the 'Sarasate' the master of the 'Gentle Art' leaves the tip of his pointed tail in sight. The 'Sarasate' is the work of the exasperating wit, not of the great artist.

The M. Duret is larger and more frank, but it does not altogether escape the suspicion of a false note in taste, though at the same time one must grant the marvellous decorative instinct which has enabled the artist to solve the most exacting problems of design. One portrait alone of those shown here seems to us to penetrate deeper, and it is his latest. When he came to paint Miss Kinsella, in the last unhappy years of his disappointed life, he seems to have been really touched. The bitterness of failure—for, though the real success was his, he had a foolish longing for success on the big, impressive scale—had, one may suppose, prepared him to feel less entirely self-sufficient; so that for one who treated him with delicate courtesy and generous enthusiasm he put forth once more his utmost power, and even in one direction went beyond his past accomplishments. This strangely lonely and pathetic figure is no mere arrangement in violet and gold; it is, at last, indefinite and half-completed though it is, a positive creation, a completely imagined reality; it is a person and a poem. To have inspired this, to have made Whistler do more than he ever intended, more than his perverse theories allowed, is an achievement for which posterity will have cause to be grateful.

It would be absurd to pretend that this portrait shows the same mastery of his craft that distinguishes the earlier pictures, that makes the Miss Alexander, terribly impersonal though it is, eternally delightful; but we have been discussing Whistler's attitude to life, his obstinate disregard of its real emotions, not his technique or his feeling for pure beauty.

As a portrait painter, then, he gives us something less than the highest; but judged on their own plane, as pattern and colour harmony, how perfect are the three great portraits in the large room, the 'Mother,' the 'Carlyle,' and the 'Miss Alexander'! No one since Moroni or Vermeer has been able to paint the uniform grey tone of a wall so as to give such a thrill of pleasure through mere appeal to the senses. After all, beauty so perfect as this must always justify itself, though the imagination be hardly called on to heighten it. And in the landscapes, above all in the nocturnes, the imagination refuses to be kept out—the associated ideas so jealously excluded, as Whistler pretended, force themselves in. The very restrictions upon his work give the imagination a freer scope. He painted the Thames by moonlight as though he were kept to the conventions of a Chinese vase-painting or a Japanese print, and nature's moods are always more vividly recalled by such half statements than when the artist hammers out the complete fact. Such nocturnes as the Hon. Percy Wyndham's, or Mr. Alexander's, or the famous Battersea Bridge give to the full the meaning of what they interpret. They have not only moonlit water and the ripple of wavelets on the shelving beach; they also give at once all that these can bring of mystery and consolation to the spirit. Still more surprising and more intense in their significance are two of the Cremorne Gardens by night—one the Symphony of Green and Gold (62), the other the Cremorne, No. 1 (21). In both of these Whistler transcends not only his own idea of mere pattern, but also the associated ideas of the things represented. These, in themselves banal enough, give place to pure and abstract ideas aroused by the impact and vague diffusion of light, the mystery of transparent gloom, and the intuitions of space. He is playing here with the elemental facts of vision, and surely with a result as impressive and stimulating as it is entrancingly beautiful.

A few words must suffice to discuss the earliest landscapes shown here, the two Courbet-like sea pieces, firm and decided in form and magnificent in colour, and the Old Westminster Bridge, painted in 1862, when he was still more or less under the influence of Courbet, but with something entirely personal in the spacing and the certainty and freedom of his decorative sense. This picture has a solid impasto, a dry richness and body of colour which almost make one regret the change in Whistler's technique which led him later on to paint so thinly and elusively.

One other landscape of a somewhat later date, Mr. Davis's Battersea Bridge (17), seems to us in its way almost as beautiful as anything here. Though it is still based on the severer chords of brown and grey, these are yet adjusted with such impeccable sensitiveness and such surprising invention that the picture gives one as intense a delight as the later more luscious harmonies. There is something, too, in the placidity of the tone, in the rhythm of the forms slowly moving across the bridge, which transfigures the plain, unmitigated reality of the scene.

WATER-COLOURS AT AGNEW'S.

THE annual exhibition of water-colours at Messrs. Agnew's Gallery is now open. It has the usual characteristics of these shows, with perhaps a rather larger share than usual of mid-nineteenth-century work. Confronted with the work of this period, with Copley Fielding's sugary tone and false accents, with the woolly formlessness of the later Coxes, with the theatrical absurdities of Cattermole, the feeble elaboration of the later De Wints, even with the pseudo-classical charm of Barret's set pieces, one cannot but feel amazed at the rapid decline which set in after the glorious beginnings of the English school of water-colour drawing. Even Turner did little to check the decline—his temperament was too accommodating—except that at the very end of his life he executed those marvellous impressions which had no counterpart in the art of their day, and only bore fruit when the Impressionists discovered their intention.

The one man whose artistic conscience might have had the temper to withstand this curious, and as yet hardly explained attack of the vulgar, trivial, and sentimental on the art of England—the one man who might, by keeping Turner alive to his responsibilities, have kept up the great tradition for a few decades at least—Girtin, like Keats, by his early death left an irreparable void in the history of English landscape art. The two or three pieces by him in this gallery stand out from the rest by their extraordinary bigness of design, and the sober reticence with which they make their effect, as well as by the depth and imaginative splendour of their conception. One, On the Wharfe near Farnley (No. 19), has been seen here before, but every time one sees it one is more struck by the greatness and originality of the idea. The way in which the winding curves of the river lead off in the distance to the spiral of white smoke from a heath fire, and away into the lowering cloud masses, is masterly; and this motive, which in Turner's hands would almost inevitably have led to some almost melodramatic overstatement, here makes its appeal directly, without any emphasis, with a classical severity and reserve in the harmonies of tone. It is, indeed, almost a monochrome, and may have lost something of its original indigos; but, like all great conceptions, it survives decay, or rather its decay is only a progress from one beauty to another, and there is something in its dun-coloured reddish-greys which almost seems like the appropriate expression of the idea.

Another Girtin, the Easby Abbey (81), is not so impressive at first; but again one finds in the disposition of the few broad tones of greenish-blue and neutral greys which compose the whole the same masterly sense of design, the same unerring eye for the elemental qualities of things, the same direct appeal to the highest imaginative faculties which landscape-art can touch. It has supremely the grandiose and eternal aspect of great inventions, and it has, too, the simplicity which makes it seem the most obvious, the easiest thing to do. And yet on what subtle perceptions, what delicate adjustments of tone, on what scrupulous rejections of the obtrusively insignificant, is such a creation based!

To these two works—the little Basle, wonderful in its way, is hardly in the same category—the rest of the exhibition has nothing that is quite comparable. The early De Wint, The Stone Quarry (70), has still something of this grandiose simplicity left; the earliest of the Turners, the Warkworth Castle (36), is, in conception, of the same kindred, but already we note an intricacy in the silhouette, a passion for exploring the details of actual form which brings in subordinate interests. This passion finds fuller expression in the Weathercote Cove (189), a marvellous study of tangled growths and fibrous tree anatomy; it fitted him to accomplish later such miracles of illustration as the Folkestone (195). But illustration, however glorified—and Turner is responsible for its supreme apotheosis—remains the most insidious, and to us as a nation the most dangerous, enemy of art. The Black Dwarf (192) shows to what abysses it could entice even so great a genius as Turner's. But there are triumphant signs here that Turner recovered in his old age a fine indifference to its claims. Of this such pieces as the Bellinona (185) are sufficient proof. Speaking of Turner, we must not omit to mention the delightful drawings on the first screen of his earliest period, the Landscape with Cottage (140), with its purely eighteenth-century convention, and the splendid Harbour (146), in which one may fancy that Canaletto, who exercised such a decisive influence on Girtin, had already begun to appeal to Turner. On the same screen is a delightful J. Varley, Black Lion Lane, Bayswater (131).

There are two fine De Wints, Kneeton-on-the-Hill (103) and In the Fen District (105); a Cotman (4), which can hardly claim to be by J. S. Cotman himself; and a Sir John Gilbert (68), which comes within an ace of being great, and only just suggests that theatrical unreality which was usually the bane of his accomplished art.

A gouache of Theodosia, Lady Monson (183), is by a little-known artist, D. Gardner, whose work is, we believe, sometimes confused with that of Russell, whom, however, he surpasses in vigour and richness of colour. It is a striking and attractive design in the style of Sir Joshua.

THE BRITISH SCHOOL AT ROME.

THE second open meeting of the British School at Rome for the present session was held on February 21st in the library of the School, and was well attended by archaeologists and residents in Rome. The Director (Mr. H. Stuart Jones) read a paper on the eight circular reliefs which were appropriated by Constantine, together with other sculptures of earlier date, for the decoration of his triumphal arch near the Colosseum, in which, as Prof. Petersen, First Secretary of the German Institute, recognized some years ago, they are not arranged in their original order. They fall into four pairs, in each of which one relief represents an emperor occupied in the chase, while its fellow shows an emperor making an offering at the shrine of a deity.

The most important question is with regard to the emperor (or rather emperors) represented in them. All of them certainly in their original state had the same central figure; but while those on the south side are much damaged, so that the features are not recognizable with certainty (though Mr. Stuart Jones maintains that there is no proof that Trajan is represented, which has been the view generally held hitherto, and still less Hadrian, as a more recent theory would have it, and inclines to believe that those characteristics which can be recognized belong rather to one of the Flavian emperors), the heads on the north were restored in antiquity. In two cases a new head has been fitted on, and here Constantine may be recognized with certainty; but in the other two the original head has been retained and carefully worked over to represent a bearded emperor, who, from the style, cannot be earlier than Alexander Severus, and may be considerably later. Now it is known that, immediately after the death of Maximianus, in 310, Constantine proclaimed himself the grandson of the deified Claudius Gothicus; and it is also to be noted that one of a pair of reliefs in the Villa Medici, representing a procession in front of the temple of the Magna Mater (the companion relief represents a procession before the temple of Mars Ultor), shows an imperial head worked over to represent the same person, and that Claudius Gothicus is again an appropriate identification, inasmuch as (a) he was proclaimed emperor in the temple of the Magna Mater; (b) these reliefs, in Mr. Stuart Jones's opinion, belong to the Flavian period.

Flavian characteristics are also to be recognized in the companions of the emperor in the circular reliefs of the Arch of Constantine; and if we ask with what building the name of Claudius Gothicus can be associated, we find that it is only known that he restored the mausoleum of the Flavian gens—from which, therefore, it may, with considerable probability, be inferred that these reliefs came.

Prof. Petersen briefly stated at the conclusion of the paper that he had not as yet been able to examine the arguments in full detail, but that for the moment he was not prepared to abandon his former attribution of the reliefs (in their original state) to Trajan.

Mr. A. J. B. Wace, student of the School, then called attention to certain reliefs in the Vatican and the Lateran museums, which appear to fill a gap in the development of Roman monumental sculpture. Between the date of the erection of the Arch of Titus and that of the Arch of Trajan at Beneventum, we have a period of over thirty years to which we cannot assign with certainty any works of this character, and yet in the meantime an important development took place—the reliefs became more crowded with figures, and the procession was abandoned for the group. Mr. Wace was able to demonstrate that the change can be traced, and that the reliefs which he mentioned must have belonged to important, though not certainly identifiable monuments.

SALES.

MESSRS. CHRISTIE sold on the 25th ult. the following:—Drawings: J. Downman, Portrait of a Lady, in white dress trimmed with black lace and white cap, 131*l.* C. Fielding, A Coast Scene, with fishing-smack in a squall, 99*l.* P. De Wint, A River Scene, with ruined abbey, 65*l.* Pictures: J. W. Oakes, An Old Watermill, with children angling, 136*l.* L. Cranach, Portrait of a Gentleman, in black dress trimmed with fur and black headdress, 525*l.* Lucas de Heere, Lady Jane Grey, in dark dress trimmed with pearls, and wearing a rope of black-and-white pearls, 651*l.* H. Holbein, Charles Brandon, Duke of Suffolk, in dark dress trimmed with fur, crimson sleeves, holding a dagger in his left hand, 173*l.* Rubens, Decius haranguing his Soldiers previous to the Battle, 210*l.* After Romney: Lady Egremont and her Children, by W. Dudman, 178*l.* J. van Goyen, A River Scene, with a château, boats, and fishermen, 105*l.*; A River Scene, with windmill, boats, and figures, 162*l.* Reynolds, Constantine John, second Baron Mulgrave, 567*l.* P. de Hooghe, A Cavalier and a Lady, seated, playing on the guitar and oboe, 141*l.* A. Cuyp, A Falconer and his Wife, 120*l.* Lawrence, Miss Brooke, afterwards married to Capt. Carisbrook, 96*l.*; Robert Brooke, Esq., 199*l.* Hoppner, Portrait of a Young Boy playing with a Dog, 44*l.* Romney, Lady Hamilton as Ariadne, 1,207*l.*; Miss Leonora Maxtone, of Cultoquhey, 152*l.*; Master James Maxtone, 105*l.* Velasquez, A Woman and a Boy at the Entrance to a Palace, 105*l.* Jan Steen, The Music Lesson, 499*l.* T. de Keyser, Portrait of a Gentleman, his Wife, and Young Daughter, 178*l.*

The same firm sold on the 28th ult. the following engravings: A. H. Haig, The Interior of Burgos Cathedral, 45*l.* After Meissonier: Partie Perdue, by F. Bracquemond, 43*l.*; Les Renseignements, by A. Jacquet, 33*l.*; 1806, by J. Jacquet, 42*l.*; 1897, by the same, 73*l.*

First-Prize Gossip.

MR. ALFRED W. RICH will hold an exhibition of his water-colour drawings of English landscape at the hall of the Alpine Club, Mill Street, Conduit Street, from March 8th till the 25th inclusive.

THE Twelve Club invite us to view their pictures and sketches at the Modern Gallery in New Bond Street. The show is open till March 11th.

MRS. MAUD CRUTTWELL is preparing a work on Antonio Pollaiuolo, continuing the study of the "Naturalist" School of Florentine artists begun in her volume on Verrocchio, which was published the other day. It will be issued by Messrs. Duckworth & Co. in their "Red Series," and will probably be ready by the autumn.

THE death is announced on Wednesday last of Eugène Guillaume, a member of the Académie Française since 1898, when he succeeded the Duc d'Aumale. Born in 1822, he won the prize for sculpture at the École des Beaux-Arts in 1845, and went to the French Academy of Art at Rome, where he executed several fine busts. On his return to France he established a wide reputation, among his best-known works in statuary being 'The Gracchi,' two busts in bronze, 'Mariage Romain,' a series of Napoleonic studies, 'Orpheus,' 'Monsignor Darboy,' 'Colbert,' and 'Claude Bernard.' Guillaume was appointed Professor (1863) and next year Director of the École des Beaux-Arts, and in 1882 became Professor of Æsthetics in the Collège de France. In 1891 he returned to the Villa Médici as Director of the French Academy at Rome. He was also a distinguished writer; his 'Études d'Art Antique et Moderne' is a notable book.

THE Société des Amis du Luxembourg recently discussed and adopted two important propositions concerning art matters. The first is the establishment of an office "d'authenticité des œuvres d'art," which is a good deal simpler in theory than in practice. Curiously enough, a few days after this theory was discussed the artist Willette was complaining of the sale of drawings in imitation of his, and with forged copies of his signature. The second proposal discussed was that artists (inferentially those living) shall receive "tant pour cent" on all their works which appear at public sales. A good many artists, both in France and in England, might find this source of income very desirable in their old age, although auctioneers, dealers, and collectors will hardly receive the proposal (which is shortly to be discussed in the French Parliament) without protest.

It has been decided by the French Minister of Instruction Publique that there shall be an annual exhibition of the works of art purchased or commissioned by the State. This is an excellent idea, its object being not only to show each year's purchases together, but also to refute a possible charge of favouring any one school. The Government intends, so far as possible, to extend purchases and commissions, so that, within reasonable limits, all branches of the fine arts may benefit.

M. DUJARDIN-BEAUMETZ, the recently appointed French Under-Secretary of State for the Fine Arts, has decided to reserve three rooms in the Grand Palais for retrospective exhibitions; the first of these will be devoted to the drawings of Daniel Vierge, an exhibition which would certainly be of very great interest. M. Dujardin-Beaumetz has given permission for the erection of a monument to Gérôme in the Jardins de l'Enfante, at the Louvre. The monument will be the work of M. Aimé Morot, Gérôme's son-in-law, and member of the Institute.

PART III. of the 'Selected Drawings from Old Masters in the University Galleries and in the Library at Christ Church, Oxford,' chosen and described by Mr. Colvin, is about to be issued from the Oxford University Press. It contains drawings by Verrocchio, Leonardo, Filippino Lippi, Michelangelo and an imitator, by and after Raphael, Giulio Campagnola, Domenico Campagnola, Tintoretto, Dürer, Altdorfer, Rubens, Rembrandt, Claude, and Watteau.

OUR review of December 24th last of 'The Life of Michelagnolo Buonarrotti,' by Ascanio Condivi, done into English by Herbert P. Horne, has caused inquiries to be made as to where copies may be had in London. Mr. Updike, the printer, has arranged for the sale of the book in England with Mr. Elkin Mathews.

WE are sorry to hear of the death of Mr. R. Willett, a well-known art collector, of Brighton. Mr. Willett, who, on the death of a relative from whom he inherited a large fortune, changed his name from Cat to that of Willett, was in his eighty-second year. He presented some years ago to the Brighton Museum a fine collection of Staffordshire ware and Oriental porcelain, as well as a number of pictures by old masters. In private life Mr. Willett was a man of great personal charm.

THE Papal palace at Avignon, which has been used as barracks for over fifty years, is now to be turned into a museum for religious art. The chapel, the council hall, and the private apartments are to be restored, as far as possible, to their state in the time of Gregory XI.

AT Dunfermline Abbey, says The Dunfermline Journal, workmen have opened out "the recently discovered Norman doorway in the south wall of the old portion of the Abbey. On the vault side the sculptured masonry has been revealed in a splendid state of preservation. The only flaw apparent is that two of the stones on the right side of one of the four arches have been blemished. Indeed, one of them has been almost entirely displaced."

MUSIC

THE WEEK.

QUEEN'S HALL.—Symphony Concert.
ÆOLIAN HALL.—Monday Subscription Concert.
BROADWOOD'S.—Miss Sunderland and Mr. Thistleton's Chamber Concert.

STRAUSS'S 'Sinfonia Domestica,' performed at Queen's Hall last Saturday afternoon, is a work which provokes discussion. There are some very fine pages, but now and again the composer sets his whole orchestra going, so that the din and the discord become irritating. It is as if some fiend tempted him to spoil what otherwise would be a truly great creation. The opening, or what may be termed the exposition section, has breadth and character, while in the treatment of the themes rare skill, touched with strong emotion, is displayed. Why, then, those furious, those disturbing paroxysms? They seem to imply some dramatic effect; and, indeed, Strauss is representative of programme music akin to that of Berlioz. For a composer to write to a poem or picture in his mind is reasonable; without some such source of inspiration he is little more than a music-maker. That poem or picture in many cases does not require to be revealed; as a rule, it is best not revealed. Sometimes, however, the composer is tempted to details in which realism plays a part, and the larger that part the more necessary does verbal explanation become. Bach and Beethoven, to name only two prominent men, did not hesitate on occasion to use realistic effects, but it was with restraint, and in a subordinate manner. In the 'Pastoral' Symphony Berlioz thought he saw a new path opened, and pursued it eagerly. He declared that his 'Fantastic' Symphony could be judged as abstract music, yet to the score he prefixed a detailed programme, and in so doing he was wise; to the understanding of that fantastic music the programme was necessary. History repeats itself, and though the analysis, to which reference was made last week, states that Strauss wishes his work to be judged as abstract music, yet full titles and sub-titles of the various sections are added, and these are certainly represented as emanating from the composer himself. The analysts evidently felt that a picture in tones of "a day in the composer's family life" was not a sufficiently noble theme, and they suggest that Strauss regards his family picture merely as a type of life in the great human family. But if that is really so, why did not the composer state it himself? It would have prevented any misunderstandings to which the morning and the evening bell, the two silly sentences actually printed in the score, and other things, naturally give rise. A tone-poem dealing with a vast subject might justify the exceptionally large orchestra, which, for a "domestic" scene, certainly seems incongruous. Wagner has given us a "family scene" in his 'Siegfried Idyll,' but with, for him, a very modest orchestra. Mr. Wood and his orchestra deserve all praise for the courage and perseverance they have shown in rehearsing this symphony. In view of the technical difficulties, it was a wonderful performance, and yet, when the music has become familiar to them, it may be that many passages now sounding rough will become less so, also that, with proper balance of tone, certain polyphonic passages will be clearer. A second performance is announced for Saturday afternoon, April 1st, at Queen's Hall, under the composer's direction.

Programme music of a very different kind was heard at the last Monday Subscription Concert. This was a quartet for strings in G minor by M. C. A. Debussy, of whose music we have recently had an interesting specimen in his prélude symphonique, 'L'Après-midi d'un Faune.' In the quartet, as in this short work, the composer must have had reasons for his changing moods and his often peculiar harmonies; and yet there seems no need of an explanatory programme; the music in itself is sufficient. It is modern in character and form, and very original. The two middle movements are delightful, and at once make a strong appeal. The opening movement needs knowing; the finale is, perhaps, the weakest section. This Debussy quartet is music of a kind which would surely please poets and painters who, while loving music, are ignorant of its technique; it creates a poetical atmosphere, which would help them to give utterance and shape to their thoughts and feelings. The work was admirably rendered by the Kruse Quartet.

On Tuesday afternoon some interesting old music was performed at Miss Grace Sunderland and Mr. Frank Thistleton's chamber concert at Broadwood's, viz., short quaint movements, in two or three sections, bearing titles, by Anthony Holborne. Those selected had merely fanciful titles, but some in the collection, 'Pavans, Galliards, Almains, and other short Æirs, both graue and light,' from which they are taken, such as 'Lullabie' and 'The Image of Melancholy,' or 'The Funerals,' evidently determine the character or mood of the music. There are other titles which are very curious: 'Infernum,' 'Last Will and Testament,' and 'Myselfe'; the last, indeed, might serve as a heading to the first theme of Strauss's 'Domestic Symphony.' This work, in five parts, for "Viols, Violins, or other Musically Wind Instruments," is supposed to be the earliest printed book (1599) of dance music in England. John Dowland, by the way, dedicates a song to "the most famous Anthony Holborne."

LE "CABINET" DU ST. SÉBASTIEN DE BROSSARD.

THE name of Brossard is specially known in connexion with his 'Dictionnaire de Musique,' published in 1703, which, with exception of the 'Terminorum Musicæ Diffinitorum' of Jean Tinctore (1474), and the 'Clavis ad Thesaurum Magnæ Artis Musicæ' of Janowka (1701), is the oldest work of the kind, although, as explained in the article 'Dictionaries of Music' in the new volume of Grove's 'Dictionary,' "musical terms and explanations useful to historians" are to be found in Ménage's 'Dictionnaire Étymologique de la Langue Française' (1652) and Furetière's 'Dictionnaire Universel' (1690). Brossard died at Meaux, August 10th, 1730, and was buried in the cathedral, of which he was grand chaplain and music director. Six years before his death he presented his valuable library to Louis XIV. The title-page of the elaborate catalogue (642 folio pages), entirely in his handwriting, runs thus:—

"Catalogue | Des livres de Musique | Théorique et Pratique | Vocale et instrumentale, tant | imprimée que manuscrite | qui sont dans | le cabinet du Sr | Sébastien de Brossard | chanoine de Meaux | et dont il supplie humblement | Sa Majesté | d'accepter le Don, | pour être mis et conservé | dans sa | Bibliothèque | Fait et écrit en l'année 1724."

The cession of his library (or "cabinet," as he terms it) was disguised "sous la forme d'un don respectueux," says M. Michel Brenet in a monograph on Brossard, for the latter received in return a pension for himself, also a small one for his niece. The negotiations were carried on through l'Abbé Bignon, whose secretary Jourdain has signed the following, written below the title mentioned above: "Livre déposé à la Bibliothèque, May 22, 1726."

Many volumes of this valuable library have unfortunately been lost, some apparently before the books were placed in the Bibliothèque du Roi, or Nationale as it is now called. M. Brenet tells us that F. J. M. Fayolle (1774-1852) acknowledged that he had Brossard's translation of Printz; that in 1847 T. Nisard, in the appendix to his 'La Science et la Pratique du Plain-Chant,' states that all Brossard's books are in the Bibliothèque "moins ceux que l'on a volés"; also that in 1866 Ernest Thoinan accused a well-known music collector of possessing De Cousu's 'La Musique Universelle,' to which accusation no reply was made.

The Brossard books and catalogue are in the Réserve of the Bibliothèque Nationale; and as the catalogue is not accessible to the public, a few extracts from it may be of interest. Of the De Cousu volume, just mentioned, we read that the author was having it printed at his own cost, but, owing to his death, the work stopped at the 208th page. "C'est bien dommage," remarks Brossard, "car ce qui en reste est du plus excellent." One day he called on Ballard, and found him throwing away certain papers which appeared to him useless, this manuscript among the number; but Brossard rescued it. It may be interesting to add that, though formerly lost, as mentioned, it has been found, and is now in the Paris Arsenal Library. The Ballard mentioned was Christophe Ballard. De Cousu was a canon of St. Quentin cathedral.

In mentioning twelve sonatas of Bassani, Brossard gives us his idea of Italian music in his day:—

"Il y a ici 12 Sonates que j'ai (Seb. de Brossard) copiées moy même en partition et fort exactement. Elles sont toutes charmantes et excellentes et pas trop difficiles à exécuter. Contre l'ordinaire des Italiens qui croient n'avoir pas fait une belle Sonate s'ils ne l'avaient farcie de vitesses très souvent extravagantes et sans aucune raison que leur fantaisie, et de chicoties perpétuelles plus propres à écorcher l'oreille qu'à la flatter."

Of Italian music generally he, however, entertained a high opinion, as will be seen from our next quotation; for him, indeed, the musical millennium seemed to have already come:—

"Ce que j'appelle l'âge d'or de la musique commençoit à paraître en l'année 1651.....On commençoit à secouer vigoureusement le joug des régles trop rigoureuses de l'ancien contre-point..... La musique depuis ce tems-là, s'est peu à peu tellement perfectionnée, tant en Italie que dans le reste de l'Europe, qu'on peut bien assurer (en 1725 que j'écris ceci) qu'on ne la peut guères pousser plus loin."

The opinion that music had reached its zenith during the first quarter of the eighteenth century sounds strange to us of the twentieth century; yet there are not a few musicians who would accept it as true of the present state of the art, since each century is apt to think itself the greatest.

Only a few months before the death of Alessandro Scarlatti in 1725, in entering the names of some cantatas and arias by that composer, Brossard speaks of him as

"le musicien le plus accompli qui ait fleuri sur la fin du dernier siècle et au commencement de celui cy dont nous avons déjà passé près du quart au mois de may, 1725."

Brossard could be facetious. The name of J. J. Kerl is sometimes spelt Gherl. In his index Brossard writes it both ways with cross-references. Under Gherl he makes this comment:—

"Je crois que c'est là une faute d'écriture qui vient de la prononciation des Allemands."

There are a few blank pages in the catalogue, and the reason is given in the following quaint language:—

"On trouerra quelques pages en blanc, surtout pour les livres en Anglois, Hollandois, &c., parceque je n'en ay aucun dans mon cabinet, ces Langues ne m'étant pas connües; mais je sçais qu'il y en a, et je trouerrois bien le moyen de les avoir."

Musical Gossip.

AN opera entitled 'The Knights of the Road,' libretto by Sir A. Mackenzie, music by Henry A. Lytton, was produced, under the direction of the composer, at the Palace Theatre on Monday evening. Occupying under half an hour in performance, it is simple in plot, and the ballads, madrigal, and final song with chorus are melodious and refined, while the light, effective orchestration shows a master hand. This operetta may not add to the reputation of a composer who has distinguished himself in various branches of his art; but Mr. Alfred Butt, in securing a work from a musician of high reputation, is doing something to raise the standard of musical taste at his theatre, and this well deserves recognition. In an interview Sir A. Mackenzie has expressed the hope that other composers will follow his example, and thus help to introduce music of a higher, more refined order into music-halls. Passing from this question to that of national lyric art, he remarked that "we must sooner or later have an establishment in which to foster it." Let us hope that it will be soon.

M. VICTOR MAUREL gave the second of his two vocal recitals on Wednesday evening at the Bechstein Hall, and though not in the best voice, he proved himself a master of the art of singing and of declamation. The hall was crowded.

MESSRS. GLENDINING sold recently the following valuable violins: a fine old Cremonese example attributed to Antonio Stradivari, 60*l.*; a violin by Joseph Guarnerius, 1740, 150*l.*; and a third by Petrus Guarnerius, 1700, 100*l.*

THIS afternoon will be sold at Sotheby's the autograph of Bach's grand Prelude and Fugue in E minor for organ, a treasure which belonged to the late Sir Herbert Oakeley.

HUMPERDINCK's new comic opera, 'Die Heirat wider Willen,' which is to be produced this month at the Berlin Opera-House, has already been accepted by the theatres at Wiesbaden and Stuttgart.

THE cost of Van Dyck's scheme of a "Théâtre Lyrique International Léopold II.," to be built at Ostend, is already guaranteed. The building will be similar to the one at Bayreuth, except that there will be two galleries.

MAX VON ERDMANNSDÖRFER, the able Munich conductor, a zealous partisan of the new German school, died last month at the comparatively early age of fifty-seven.

A NEW building has been erected on the site of the former Schwarzspanierhaus, in which Beethoven lived and died. A tablet recording the fact has been placed on the new building, which, like the former one, is devoted to religious purposes.

THE first performance of Alfred Bruneau's new opera, 'L'Enfant-Roi,' was announced to take place at the Paris Opéra-Comique last night.

PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK.

SUN. Concert Club, 3.30, Bechstein Hall.
— Sunday Society Concert, 3.30, Queen's Hall.
— Sunday League, 7, Queen's Hall.
MON. Chamber Concert, 5, Leighton House.
— M. Aldo Antonietti's Violin Recital, 8, Elion Hall.
— Mr. Alfred Moyle's Cello Recital, 8.30, Steinway Hall.
TUES. Miss Fanny Davies's Orchestral Concert, 8, Queen's Hall.
— Miss Julia Higgins's Pianoforte Recital, 8.30, Eolian Hall.
WED. London Symphony Concert, 3, Queen's Hall.
— Grand Sacred Concert, 8, Queen's Hall.
— Royal Choral Society, 'The Apostles,' 8, Albert Hall.
— Wessely String Quartet, 8.30, Bechstein Hall.
THURS. Patron's Fund Orchestral Concert, 8, Royal College of Music.
SAT. Symphony Concert, 3, Queen's Hall.
— Barns-Phillips Chamber Concert, 3, Bechstein Hall.

DRAMA

THE WEEK.

COURT.—Afternoon Performances: 'The Pot of Broth.' By W. B. Yeats.—'In the Hospital.' Translated from Arthur Schnitzler by Christopher Horne.—'How He Lied to her Husband.' By George Bernard Shaw.
GREAT QUEEN STREET.—'Der Strom.' By Max Halbe.

MUCH interest attends what are called the Vedrenne - Barker matinées at the Court Theatre, the world that flocks to them being very much of the kind which supported the opening experiments in the production of Ibsen. The programme supplied on Tuesday afternoon was at least sufficiently varied. 'The Pot of Broth,' with which it opened, is a short and farcical sketch of Irish character, included in the second volume of the 'Plays for an Irish Theatre' of Mr. W. B. Yeats. It shows the greed and gullibility of the Irish peasant, all whose native shrewdness is at fault when he sees the chance of becoming possessed of a fairy gift. The character of the tramp by whose astuteness the trick is carried out is cleverly drawn, and is played with much spirit by Mr. R. Pateman. The other personages we must take on trust, nothing quite corresponding to them having been previously seen upon the English stage.

Like some recent works of German origin, 'In the Hospital' depresses by the bitterness of its satire as well as the gloom of its surroundings. It is not without dramatic grip, and it inculcates a fairly acceptable moral—that death reveals to us the futility, among other things, of human resentments. This commonplace lesson might have been taught us in simpler and less sordid fashion. We have, all of us, a certain amount of imagination, and it is not necessary to take us to the bottom of a mine in order to prove to us that it is dark where the sun does not penetrate. A journalist dying in hospital prays earnestly to be allowed to see a successful man, his associate in early days. His purpose in so doing is to insult and outrage one who has left him behind in the race of life. The expected visitor arrives, with all the signs of prosperity, and all the airs of good-natured patronage. A sense of the Virgillian tears in things then invades the dying man, who not only spares the visitor the carefully prepared insults, but even takes his hand and pleads, as an excuse for summoning one with many calls on his time, his desire to see once more an old friend. Trite enough is all this. We should, however, accept it without protest were it not that everything, including the environment, is squalid. Man is base enough without doubt, but he is not all base. He is human, not inhuman. A collection of unworthy traits, each one of which may be individually accurate, does not make a true picture. Gustave Doré's views of life or death in a mediæval town are heroic caricature. They have points in common with 'In the Hospital.'

A thoroughly characteristic piece of absurdity is Mr. Shaw's 'How He Lied to her Husband.' It is humorous, witty, extravagant, and infinitely diverting. That it is assertive and vainglorious may also be conceded. These things, however, militate nowise against its success, and some of the situations touch the very height of whimsicality. In a work of this class it is useless to seek cogency, significance, or sequence. All the spectator has to do is to lean back, laugh, and enjoy himself, and an easier task may not be undertaken. Miss Gertrude Kingston, Mr. Granville Barker, and Mr. Poulton played with much brightness. In the piece before named Mr. Beveridge as the moribund journalist stood above his fellows. He is a capable actor, of whom too little is seen.

'Der Strom,' in which Frau Rosa Bertens made on Monday her appearance at the Great Queen Street Theatre, is a three-act piece of Herr Max Halbe, first given in Vienna, and transferred on December 19th, 1903, to the Neues Theater, Berlin. It is powerfully conceived and melodramatic, and seems to be to some extent a reshaping of an earlier and not very successful work of the same author. To English tastes its story, which shows the love of three brothers for a woman who is the wife of the eldest, is as uncomfortable and unpleasing as it can well be. Peter Doorn, the husband, has, by suppressing his father's will, cheated his brethren of their property. He receives his death at the hands of Jacob, his youngest brother, who, animated by revenge and jealousy, seeks to open the dykes of the Vistula, of which Peter is custodian, and is interrupted in the attempt. Jacob also dies in the struggle, and the too-fascinating Renate is left to console herself with Heinrich, the third and most estimable of her suitors. Frau Bertens created a powerful effect as the wife to whose revelation of her husband's crime the fatal termination is due. In Berlin this character was played by Frau Sorma.

Dramatic Gossip.

MR. BOURCHIER's complaint before the Actors' Association of the injurious influence upon the stage of the speculator or middleman is not exaggerated. It is not the only menace to which theatres are subject, though in the present state of the law of libel something more than chivalry is required to indicate the sources of danger.

'THE LONELY MILLIONAIRES' is the title of a three-act play by Mrs. Henry de la Pasture, which was given on the afternoon of Saturday last at the Court Theatre, with a company consisting principally, though not wholly, of amateurs. The author appeared in her own piece.

ON Tuesday afternoon an entertainment was given at His Majesty's Theatre by students belonging to Mr. Tree's Dramatic Academy. Scenes from 'The Winter's Tale,' the first act of 'The Schoolmistress,' and the first act of 'Caste' were included in the entertainment.

THIS week's presentations at the Coronet Theatre by the Benson Company have included 'As You Like It,' 'The Comedy of Errors,' 'Macbeth,' and 'She Stoops to Conquer.' This day, at afternoon and evening performances, is presented the Orestean trilogy.

THIS evening witnesses the revival at the Haymarket, in front of 'Beauty and the Barge,' of 'The Monkey's Paw,' the Balzac-like study of Messrs. W. W. Jacobs and Louis N. Parker. The principal parts will be taken by Messrs. Cyril Maude, Edmund Maurice, and Wilfrid Forster, and Miss Bella Pateman. The first production at the same house of 'Everybody's Secret' is fixed for the 14th inst.

THE indisposition with which Sir Henry Irving was seized last week at Wolverhampton has proved sufficiently serious to abridge his farewell tour. Reports are now more cheering, and it is to be hoped that it will not interfere with his promised appearance in May at Drury Lane.

MR. TREE is said to purpose producing in the autumn, in a prologue and three acts, a drama by Mr. Stephen Phillips on the subject of the death of Nero. As was to be expected, a white-washing will be attempted of the emperor, whose crimes—or shall we say peculiarities?—are to be regarded as æsthetical.

THE performance at the Great Queen Street Theatre by the Andresen-Behrend Company of 'Die Wildente' ('The Wild Duck') of Ibsen was postponed from the 2nd to the 3rd inst.

'BELLAMY THE MAGNIFICENT' is the title of a piece by Mr. Roy Horniman which Sir Charles Wyndham will bring with him on his return from America.

AS at present arranged, the first performance of 'Du Barri,' by M. Jean Richepin, in a rendering by Mr. Christopher St. John, will take place at the Savoy Theatre on Saturday next. As the heroine Mrs. Brown-Potter will be supported by Mr. Gilbert Hare.

'DER KAISERJAEGER,' a three-act piece of Herren H. Brenner and H. Ostwald, produced at the Berliner Theater, is an amusing piece, owing apparently a portion of its motive to 'Le Chemineau.' Herr Wehrlin obtained a success as its vagabond hero.

'LES AVARIÉS' of M. Brioux, a three-act piece, the performance of which was forbidden two years ago by the Paris Censor, has been seen at the Théâtre Antoine, with M. Antoine as Le Directeur. Plot and idea seem sufficiently repellent.

ERRATUM.—P. 235, col. 1, l. 36, for "Foxton" read Foston.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.—L. C. W.—A. K.—C. J.—A. C. M.—J. M. M.—J. N. F.—received.

J. K. M. S.—We cannot pursue the matter further.

No notice can be taken of anonymous communications.

THE ATHENÆUM,
PRICE THREEPENCE.

Is published every FRIDAY in time for the Afternoon Mails. Terms of Subscription, free by post to all parts of the United Kingdom: For Six Months, 7s. 8d.; for Twelve Months, 15s. 3d. For the Continent and all places within the Postal Union: For Six Months, 9s.; for Twelve Months, 18s., commencing from any date, payable in advance to

JOHN C. FRANCIS,
Athenæum Office, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

MESSRS. BELL'S NEW BOOKS.

MINIATURE ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE
POST FREE ON APPLICATION.

NOW READY, COMPLETE.

A CHEAPER EDITION OF WHEATLEY'S PEPYS.

The DIARY of SAMUEL PEPYS,
M.A. F.R.S. Transcribed from the Shorthand MS. in the Pepysian Library, Magdalene College, Cambridge, by the Rev. MYNORS BRIGHT, M.A. With LORD BRAYBROOKE'S Notes. Edited, with Additions, by HENRY B. WHEATLEY, F.S.A. In 8 vols. post 8vo, 5s. net each.

* * * This reprint contains the whole of the text of the Diary, and the Notes and Index, as given in the ten-volume edition, the volume entitled 'Pepysiana' only being omitted.

"Mr. Wheatley has easily distanced all previous editors, both in the completeness of his matter and his annotations, and there is little doubt that this new classic edition of a classic will be a great success."—Athenæum.

BOHN'S STANDARD LIBRARY.
NEW VOLUME.

Post 8vo, 2s. 6d.

LAMB'S TALES from SHAKESPEARE. With 24 Illustrations by BYAM SHAW.
[Ready March 8.]

BELL'S MINIATURE SERIES OF MUSICIANS.

Pott 8vo, illustrated, cloth, 1s. net; or in limp leather, with Photogravure Frontispiece, 2s. net each.

NEW VOLUME.

CHOPIN. By E. J. Oldmeadow.

[Ready March 8.]

NEW EDITION, REVISED. Crown 8vo, 5s. net.

CITIES and SIGHTS of SPAIN. A

Handbook for Travellers. By Mrs. A. LE BLOND (Mrs. Main). With numerous Illustrations and Maps. With a Note by Mr. G. F. CHAMBERS, F.R.A.S., on the coming Total Eclipse of the Sun.

THE ART GALLERIES OF EUROPE.

With numerous Illustrations. Crown 8vo, 6s. net each.

NEW VOLUME.

THE ART of the LOUVRE. By MARY KNIGHT POTTER.

Previously published: The ART of the VATICAN.—The ART of the PITTI PALACE.

FOURTH EDITION. Post 8vo, 5s. net.

HOW to LOOK at PICTURES. By
ROBERT CLAREMONT WITT, M.A. With 35 Illustrations.

"This book, which we have read with great pleasure, shows that the author has both wide sympathy and knowledge, and it cannot but be largely helpful to those who wish to increase their interest in pictures. A better gift for people who are dimly 'fond of pictures,' but who regret that they 'know nothing about them,' could not be found." Spectator.

THE YORK LIBRARY.

A NEW SERIES OF REPRINTS ON THIN PAPER.
Small 8vo, 2s. net in cloth, and 3s. net in leather.

NEW VOLUMES.

CERVANTES' DON QUIXOTE.
Motteux's Translation, Revised. With Lockhart's Life and Notes. 2 vols.

EMERSON'S WORKS. Edited and
Collated by GEORGE SAMPSON. Vol. IV. Containing Miscellaneous Pieces.

COLERIDGE'S TABLE TALK and
OMNIANA. Arranged and Edited by T. ASHE, B.A.

DRAPER'S HISTORY of the INTELLECTUAL DEVELOPMENT of EUROPE. 2 vols.

The THOUGHTS of MARCUS AURELIUS ANTONINUS. Translated by GEORGE LONG, M.A. With an Essay on Marcus Aurelius by MATTHEW ARNOLD.

Others to follow.

London: GEORGE BELL & SONS,
Portugal Street, Lincoln's Inn, W.C.

FROM DUCKWORTH & CO.'S LIST.

AUGUSTE RODIN.

By CAMILLE MAUCLAIR, Author of 'The Great French Painters,' 'French Impressionists.' With 40 Illustrations. Photogravure Frontispiece. Crown 4to, 10s. 6d. net. [Just out.]

Messrs. Duckworth announce the publication of a volume dealing with the life, ideas, and work of M. Auguste Rodin, the great French sculptor, who has succeeded Whistler as President of the International Society. The author, M. Camille Maclair, knows Rodin intimately, and he has dealt with his personality as well as his work, with the psychological as well as the artistic side.

"The most complete and authoritative account. M. Maclair has the advantage of being an intimate friend.....Many photographs of unusual excellence."—Daily Chronicle.

"M. Rodin is now on one of his visits to London, and the public interest in the Michael Angelo of our time is more than ordinarily acute. We could have no better guide than M. Maclair.....Giving us this illuminating study of a genius."—Daily News.

"What M. Rodin really is, his aims, and his theories, have been admirably explained."—Daily Mail.

ALBERT DÜRER.

By T. STURGE MOORE. 4 Copperplates and 50 Half-tone Engravings. Pott 4to, 7s. 6d. net.

VERROCCHIO.

By MAUD CRUTTWELL. 48 Illustrations. Pott 4to, 7s. 6d. net.

MEDIÆVAL ART,

From the Peace of the Church to the Eve of the Renaissance, 312-1350. By W. R. LETHABY. With 66 Full-Page Illustrations and upwards of 120 Diagrams, Plans, and Drawings. 8s. 6d. net.

The book illustrates the art and architecture of Damascus, Constantinople, Rome, Ravenna, Florence, Paris, Rouen, Chartres, Amiens, Reims, Strasbourg, Bruges, &c. The diagrams, plans, and drawings help the reader to follow the main currents of Mediæval Art from the time of Constantine to the eve of the Italian Renaissance.

GIOTTO.

By BASIL DE SELINCOURT. 45 Illustrations. Pott 4to, 7s. 6d. net. [Immediately.]

PISANELLO.

By G. F. HILL. 50 Illustrations. Pott 4to, 7s. 6d. net. [In the press.]

ITALIAN MEDALS.

By C. VON FABRICZY. Translated by Mrs. GUSTAVUS W. HAMILTON. With Notes by G. F. HILL, of the British Museum. Small 4to, 42 Plates, 10s. 6d. net.

CRITICAL ESSAYS AND FRAGMENTS.

By the late S. ARTHUR STRONG. With Memoir by LORD BALCARRES. Royal 8vo, with 22 Illustrations, 16s. net. [Ready shortly.]

METAPSYCHICAL PHENOMENA.

By Dr. JOSEPH MAXWELL. Translated by Mrs. FINCH. With Prefaces by Sir OLIVER LODGE and Prof. CH. RICHTER. Large crown 8vo, 10s. net. [In the press.]

This book is probably the most important contribution of recent years in the way of a scientific and methodical examination of the phenomena variously known as "spiritistic," "occult," or, to use the term now suggested by M. Richet, "metapsychical."

IDEALS AND REALITIES IN RUSSIAN LITERATURE.

By PRINCE KROPOTKIN. With Portrait. Demy 8vo, 7s. 6d. net. [Ready middle of March.]

READY TO-DAY EVERYWHERE.

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'THE VISITS OF ELIZABETH.'

THE VICISSITUDES OF EVANGELINE.

By ELINOR GLYN.

With Coloured Frontispiece. Crown 8vo, 6s.

THE PURPLE LAND.

By W. H. HUDSON, Author of 'Green Mansions.' Crown 8vo, 6s. [Second impression now ready.]

"This enchanting romance. Extraordinary charm. A more romantic recital of adventure it would be difficult to imagine."

"Has no competitors and need fear no rivals."—Spectator.

REVOLUTIONARY TYPES.

By I. A. TAYLOR. With an Introduction by R. B. CUNNINGHAME GRAHAM. Demy 8vo, 7s. 6d. net.

"Miss Taylor has made living, breathing figures of all the dead she has touched, and in a manner enthusiastic yet grave has reminded us that in all lives of hope and endeavour there is a triumph more profound than can be measured by success."—Outlook.

A LIFE OF WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE.

By Dr. W. J. ROLFE. Demy 8vo, 8 Illustrations, 10s. 6d. net.

A BOOK OF THE SEASON. FULL OF GOOD STORIES.

THE REMINISCENCES OF AN IRISH LAND AGENT.

Being those of SAMUEL H. HUSSEY.

Compiled by HOME GORDON. Royal 8vo, with 2 Photogravure Portraits, 12s. 6d. net.

"A more vivacious, candid, or indiscreet recital we have seldom encountered. A human document, a storehouse of anecdote and of shrewd obiter dicta. Very entertaining book."—Spectator.

THE GREY BRETHREN.

By MICHAEL FAIRLESS, Author of 'The Roadmender.' Uniform with 'The Roadmender.' Cloth 2s. 6d. net; leather, 3s. 6d. net. [Just out.]

"A MAGNIFICENT BOOK," says the World.

PROGRESS. PROGRESS.

By R. B. CUNNINGHAME GRAHAM. Crown 8vo, 6s.

"Rich in observation. Everywhere he is in search of the true.....To unmask those who succeed and to mask with his fierce and eloquent compassion those who fail. Briefly, he is in this volume a master of the sublime, the showy, the pathetic, the picturesque."—See the World.

BOOKS AND THINGS.

A Volume of Essays. By G. S. STREET. Crown 8vo, 6s.

"Of all light essayists there are few more consistently engaging. Mr. Street never writes a foolish thing—seldom, indeed, anything that is not remarkably clever."—Daily Chronicle.

VELAZQUEZ.

By AUGUSTE BREAL, Author of 'Rembrandt.' With 45 Illustrations. Cloth, 2s. net; leather, 2s. 6d. net. (In the "Popular Library of Art.") [Immediately.]

Ask your Bookseller to show you all the Volumes issued in

DUCKWORTH'S POPULAR LIBRARY OF ART.

|            |                |
|------------|----------------|
| REMBRANDT. | GAINSBOROUGH.  |
| DÜRER.     | FRED WALKER.   |
| ROSSETTI.  | BOTTICELLI.    |
| WATTS.     | FRENCH IMPRES- |
| LEONARDO.  | SIONISTS.      |
| MILLET.    |                |

DUCKWORTH & CO. 3, Henrietta Street, Covent Garden, W.C.

FROM THE
DE LA MORE PRESS LIST.

THE KING'S CLASSICS.

NEW VOLUMES.

The FALSTAFF LETTERS.

By JAMES WHITE. With Frontispiece.
1s. 6d. net. Quarter-bound vellum, 2s. 6d. net.

POLONIUS; or, Wise Saws and Modern Instances. By EDWARD FITZ-GERALD (Translator of 'Omār Khayyām'). With a Portrait and Introduction. 1s. net in grey boards or red cloth; quarter-bound vellum, 2s. 6d. net.

* * A full List of Volumes in the KING'S CLASSICS will be sent on application.

JUST PUBLISHED.

TALES from OLD FIJI. By

LORIMER FISON. These tales were collected a generation ago, and are told in Mr. Fison's graphic and interesting style. With many Photographs and a Map. Royal 8vo, cloth, 7s. 6d. net.

THE UNPUBLISHED WORKS OF ROGER BACON.

Edited by ROBERT STEELE.

Part I. METAPHYSICA

FRATRIS ROGERI, ORDINIS FRATRUM MINORUM. "De Viciis Contractis in Studio Theologie." 4s. 6d. net. [Ready.]

LIBRARY OF LITURGIOLOGY AND ECCLESIOLOGY.

ORDO ROMANUS PRIMUS.

Translated and Edited by E. G. CUTHBERT ATCHLEY. With Introduction, Appendices, and many Illustrations. 7s. 6d. net. [Shortly.]

HIERURGIA ANGLICANA.

Documents and Extracts illustrative of the Ceremonial of the Anglican Church since the Reformation. Newly Edited and much Enlarged by VERNON STALEY, Provost of Inverness Cathedral. 3 vols. Now complete, 17. 2s. 6d. net.

"THE MOST IMPORTANT ART WORK OF THE SEASON."—Athenæum.

JACOB MARIS. By Th. de

BOCK. With 90 Plates illustrating his Work in Photogravure, and a Portrait by Mr. VAN DER MAAREL. The Text for this Edition has been carefully Translated from the Original. Edition for England limited to 25 Copies on Hand-made Japanese Vellum, specially made for this Work, at 30 Guineas net; and 100 on Dutch Hand-made Paper at 15 Guineas net.

[Ready.]

The book has been carefully prepared with the view of illustrating the life-work of JACOB MARIS by selected specimens of his art, in such a way as to show the gradual development of his genius. No expense has been spared in the preparation and printing of the plates, in the selection of the paper, or in the production of the letterpress. For the Édition de luxe, a Japanese hand-made vellum has been expressly manufactured, and will be found to possess a beauty of surface and softness of texture which causes it to yield excellent results when printed from the delicate photogravure plates.

A complete Prospectus, with Specimen Type-Page and Plate, will be sent upon application.

ALEXANDER MORING, LIMITED,
32, George Street, Hanover Square, London, W.

NOW READY, price 10s. 6d. net.

THE NINTH SERIES
GENERAL INDEX

OF

NOTES AND QUERIES.

With Introduction by JOSEPH KNIGHT, F.S.A.

This Index is double the size of previous ones, as it contains, in addition to the usual Index of Subjects, the Names and Pseudonyms of Writers, with a list of their Contributions. The number of constant Contributors exceeds eleven hundred. The Publisher reserves the right of increasing the price of the volume at any time. The number printed is limited, and the type has been distributed.

Free by post, 10s. 11d.

JOHN C. FRANCIS, Notes and Queries Office, Bream's Buildings, E.C.

AUTHORIZED TO BE USED BY BRITISH SUBJECTS.

THE NATIONAL FLAG,

BEING

THE UNION JACK.

COPIES OF

NOTES AND QUERIES

FOR JUNE 30, 1900,

Can still be had, containing an account of the Flag, with Coloured Illustration according to scale.

JOHN C. FRANCIS, Notes and Queries Office, Bream's Buildings, E.C.

NATIONAL PROVIDENT
INSTITUTION

Estab.]

FOR MUTUAL LIFE ASSURANCE.

[1835.]

Accumulated Fund over ... .. £26,000,000
Paid in Claims more than ... .. £12,400,000

PROFITS.

These are divided every five years solely amongst the Assured. At the 1902 Division a Cash Profit of £761,602 was apportioned amongst the members, being considerably more than one-third of the amount paid in premiums during the previous five years.

ENDOWMENT-ASSURANCE

Policies are issued, combining Life Assurance at minimum cost with provision for old age, and are singularly advantageous.

L. F. HOVIL,

Actuary and Secretary.

48, Gracechurch Street, London, E.C.

Applications for Agencies invited.

ACCIDENTS OF ALL KINDS,
EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY,

ACCIDENT AND DISEASE
(SMALL POX, SCARLET FEVER, TYPHOID, DIPHTHERIA, APPENDICITIS, &c.)

BURGLARY AND FIDELITY INSURANCE.

RAILWAY PASSENGERS' ASSURANCE CO.

Established 1849.

CLAIMS PAID £4,000,000.

64, CORNHILL, LONDON.

A. VIAN, Secretary.

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

The best remedy for
ACIDITY of the STOMACH, HEARTBURN,
HEADACHE, GOUT,

And INDIGESTION.
And Safest Aperient for Delicate Constitutions,
Ladies, Children, and Infants.

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

TENTH EDITION, price Two Shillings.

CELESTIAL MOTIONS:

A Handy Book of Astronomy.

Tenth Edition. With 3 Plates.

By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

"Well known as one of our best introductions to astronomy."—Guardian.

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON &amp; CO., LIMITED, St. Dunstan's House, Fetter Lane, E.C.

SEVENTH EDITION, fcap. 8vo, cloth, price Sixpence.

REMARKABLE ECLIPSES:

A Sketch of the most interesting Circumstances connected with the Observation of Solar and Lunar Eclipses, both in Ancient and Modern Times.

By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON &amp; CO., LIMITED, St. Dunstan's House, Fetter Lane, E.C.

TWELFTH EDITION JUST OUT, price Sixpence, cloth.

REMARKABLE COMETS:

A Brief Survey of the most interesting Facts in the History of Cometary Astronomy.

By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON &amp; CO., LIMITED, St. Dunstan's House, Fetter Lane, E.C.

THIRD EDITION, Revised to 1904, fcap. 8vo, cloth, price Sixpence.

ASTRONOMY FOR THE YOUNG.

By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON &amp; CO., LIMITED, St. Dunstan's House, Fetter Lane, E.C.

THIRD EDITION, REVISED AND ENLARGED.

THE PENNY CHRONOLOGY:

A Series of Important Dates in the History of the World from the Reign of David to the Present Time.

By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON &amp; CO., LIMITED, St. Dunstan's House, Fetter Lane, E.C.

SECOND EDITION, fcap. 8vo, price Fourpence.

NEW TESTAMENT CHRONOLOGY:

The Principal Events Recorded in the New Testament, Arranged under their Probable Respective Dates.

By WILLIAM THYNNE LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.,

Associate of King's College, London; Lay Reader in the Diocese of Rochester.

Author of 'Celestial Motions,' 'Remarkable Comets,' 'Remarkable Eclipses,' 'Astronomy for the Young,' &amp;c.

London: SAMUEL BAGSTER &amp; SONS, LIMITED, 15, Paternoster Row.

DAVID NUTT,

57-59, LONG ACRE, W.C.

*READY MONDAY, MARCH 6, AT ALL BOOKSELLERS' AND LIBRARIES.BLOOMSBURY. A Story of Modern

London. By C. F. KEARY, Author of 'The Two Lancrofts,' 'Herbert Vanlennert,' 'Un Mariage de Convenance,' &amp;c. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

* * The scene is laid almost exclusively in the quarter of London indicated by the title. But for contrast this microcosm is peopled with a great variety of intellectual types, suggestive of the sects and "isms" among which almost all societies are nowadays partitioned.

"MUNCHAUSEN REINCARNATED IN THOMPSON SETON."

FERGY the GUIDE and his Moral and Instructive Lies about Beasts, Birds, and Fishes. By H. S. CRANFIELD. With Illustrations by A. J. BLASHFIELD. Square 8vo, 242 pp. cloth, 6s. net.

* * A most amusing collection of backwoodsman's yarns of the fullest description about his hunting and fishing exploits. An American critic has wittily and truthfully described Fergy, the "veracious" guide, as "Munchausen reincarnated in Ernest Thompson Seton."

Second Revised and Enlarged Edition of the Standard Work for the Study of Modern Arabic.

The SPOKEN ARABIC of EGYPT:

Grammar, Exercises, and Vocabularies (English-Arabic and Arabic-English). By J. SELDEN WILLMORE, M.A., one of the Judges of the Native Court of Appeal, Cairo. Demy 8vo, xxxviii-458 pp. limp roan, 10s. 6d. net.

KEY to the Exercises in above, 3s. 6d. net.

* * The SPOKEN ARABIC and KEY may be had bound together at 14s. net.

*RECENT PUBLICATIONS.DIVORCE. By Paul Bourget, Member of the French Academy. Translated by E. L. CHARLWOOD. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.REVIEW of REVIEWS.—"There is no more powerful and illuminating presentation of the French Catholic view of marriage than that given in M. Paul Bourget's latest and strongest novel. It has now been translated into English, and will doubtless find many readers. It is a novel of very unusual power and dignity, and it does not contain a passage that would justify the most prudish in applying to it the epithet 'unclean.'"TO WINDWARD. The Story of a Stormy Course. A Novel of Modern New York. By H. C. ROWLAND, Author of 'Sea Scamps.' Frontispiece in Colour by CHARLOTTE WEBER. Crown 8vo, 359 pp. cloth, 6s.

* * A remarkably strong and dramatic novel, in part a story of the sea, in part the story of a man's battle in New York.

The HOUSE in the WOODS. By

ARTHUR HENRY. Crown 8vo, 323 pp. and numerous Full-Page Illustrations. Art linen, 4s. net.

* * The story of a real experiment—of a young couple, disciples of Thoreau and Ruskin, who turned their backs on city life, and built their own house in a mountain woodland with the sole aid of their village neighbours.

The MABINOGION: Mediæval

Welsh Romances. Translated by Lady CHARLOTTE GUEST. With Historical and Literary Notes by ALFRED NUTT. 16mo ("Temple Classics" format). Second Revised and Enlarged Edition, 384 pp. cloth, top gilt, marker, 2s. 6d.

OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS.

HYPERION. A Facsimile of Keats's Autograph MS. With a Transliteration of the MS. of

The FALL of HYPERION, a DREAM. With Introduction and Notes by ERNEST DE SÉLINCOURT. Limited Edition, printed on Pure Linen Paper. Subscription prices: 2l. 12s. 6d. in boards, and 3l. 13s. 6d. in leather.
SPEAKER.—"The manuscript is of extreme interest, as revealing to us the working of Keats's mind in the very process of composition. We are present, not indeed at the first birth of his ideas, but at the final labour over their perfect expression.....All the changes made are vast and obvious improvements, and the reasons why Keats made them and why they are improvements are admirably analyzed by Mr. de Sélincourt."

SHAKESPEARE.—FACSIMILE REPRODUCTIONS of the PORTIONS of SHAKESPEARE not

INCLUDED in the FIRST FOLIO, viz., PERICLES, VENUS and ADONIS, LUCRECE, The SONNETS, and The PASSIONATE PILGRIM. A Supplement to the Facsimile First Folio Shakespeare, published in 1902. With Introductions by Mr. SIDNEY LEE. Limited Edition, in various styles. As 5 separate volumes, in real vellum, 6l. 5s. net the set; in paper boards, 3l. 10s. net the set. As a single volume, in rough calf, 4l. 4s. net; in paper boards, 3l. 3s. net.

IRISH MANUSCRIPTS in the BODLEIAN LIBRARY. The Delegates of the Clarendon Press

propose to issue, by subscription, a Series of Reproductions of the most important Irish Manuscripts now in the Bodleian Library. The Texts will be Edited by Dr. KUNO MEYER, with the co-operation of other distinguished Celtic Scholars. A beginning will be made, if Two Hundred Subscribers can be found ready to take up Copies, with the Manuscript known as RAWLINSON B. 502, a folio volume containing eighty-three leaves of vellum, with which twenty leaves of paper are bound up. This Manuscript will be reproduced in the exact size of the original. The price of the volume to Subscribers will be 4l. 4s. net. Prospectus on application.

The COMPLETE POETICAL WORKS of SHELLEY, including Materials never before printed in any Edition of the Poems. Edited, with Textual Notes and Bibliographical List of Editions, by THOMAS HUTCHINSON, M.A. With the Bodleian Portrait and 2 Collotype Facsimiles of Handwriting. Demy 8vo, cloth boards, uncut, paper label or gilt lettered, 7s. 6d. net; vellum back, cloth sides, gilt top, medallion on side, 10s. 6d. net.

ACADEMY (FRANCIS THOMPSON).—"This is the best and completest edition of Shelley's poems in a single volume yet produced.....Mr. Hutchinson has given us a very full, accurate, and complete edition of the poet, which should commend itself preferentially to every student."

CONCORDANCE to the ITALIAN PROSE WORKS and CANZONIERE of DANTE. Prepared by Members of the Dante Society, Cambridge, Massachusetts, and Edited by E. S. SHELDON and A. C. WHITE. Ready in April. Royal 8vo, cloth, Subscription price, 28s. net; after publication, 36s. net.

DANTE'S DIVINA COMMEDIA. Translated into English Prose by H. F. Tozer, M.A. Extra

feap. 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d. net.

JOWETT'S TRANSLATION of ARISTOTLE'S POLITICS. With Introduction, Analysis, and

Full Index added by H. W. C. DAVIS, M.A. Extra feap. 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d. net.

[Immediately.]

The MASAI: their Language and Folklore. By A. S. Hollis. With Introduction by Sir Charles

ELIOT, many Illustrations, and a Map. 8vo, cloth.

[Immediately.]

The ANCIENT RACES of the THEBAID. Being an Anthropometrical Study of the Inhabitants of Upper Egypt from the Earliest Prehistoric Times to the Mohammedan Conquest, based upon the Examination of over 1,500 Crania. By ARTHUR THOMSON, M.A. Oxon. M.B. Edin., Professor of Human Anatomy in the University of Oxford, and D. RANDALL-MACIVER, M.A. Imperial 4to, boards, with buckram back, with 6 Collotypes, 6 Lithographic Charts, and other Illustrations, 2l. 2s. net.

ANECDOTA OXONIENSIA.—Crown 4to, paper covers.

CAIN ADAMNAIN. An Old Irish Treatise on the Law of Adamnan. Edited and Translated by

KUNO MEYER, Ph.D. ("Mediaeval and Modern Series," Part XII.) 5s.

The VETUS CLUNIACENSIS of POGGIO: being a Contribution to the Textual Criticism of Cicero

pro Sex. Roscio, Pro Cluentio, Pro Murena, Pro Caelio, and Pro Milone. By ALBERT C. CLARK, M.A. ("Classical Series," Part X.) With 2 Facsimiles. 8s. 6d.

The CHURCH'S TASK UNDER the ROMAN EMPIRE. By the Rev. C. Bigg, D.D. 8vo, cloth, 5s. net.

[Immediately.]

The COPTIC VERSION of the NEW TESTAMENT, in the Northern Dialect, otherwise called

Memphitic and Bohairic. With Introduction, Critical Apparatus, and Literal English Translation. Vols. III. and IV. (completing the Work). 8vo, cloth, 2l. 2s. net.

CANTONESE LOVE-SONGS. In 2 vols. Vol. I. Chinese Text, with a Glossary. Vol. II. Translation, by CECIL CLEMENTI, M.A. Imperial 8vo, cloth, 10s. 6d. net each.

A HANDBOOK of the ORDINARY DIALECT of the TAMIL LANGUAGE. By the Rev. G. U.

POPE, M.A. D.D. Part II. Key to the Exercises, with Notes on Analysis. Seventh Edition. 8vo, cloth, 5s. net.

SELECT DOCUMENTS ILLUSTRATIVE of the HISTORY of the FRENCH REVOLUTION

(May, 1789—September, 1791). Edited by L. G. WICKHAM LEGG, M.A. 2 vols. crown 8vo, cloth.

[Immediately.]

OXFORD MODERN FRENCH SERIES. Edited by Leon Delbos. Crown 8vo, cloth. Three

NEW VOLUMES.

Les NORMANDS en ANGLETERRE et en FRANCE. From 'La Conquete de l'Angleterre par les Normands.'

By AUGUSTIN THIERRY. Edited by A. H. SMITH, M.A. Pp. 162, 2s. 6d.

Le SERMENT. By Jules David. Edited by Cecil Hugon. Pp. 94, 1s. 6d.

VOYAGE en ESPAGNE. By Gautier. Edited by Gerald Goodridge. Pp. 215, 2s. 6d.

The ELEMENTS of RAILWAY ECONOMICS. By W. M. Acworth, M.A. Crown 8vo, cloth, 2s. net.

ALSO PUBLISHED BY HENRY FROWDE.

WORCESTERSHIRE PLACE NAMES. By W. H. Duignan. Crown 8vo, cloth, bevelled boards,

6s. net.

London: HENRY FROWDE, Oxford University Press Warehouse, Amen Corner, E.C.

THE ATHENÆUM

LIBRARY

MAR 27 1905

UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO

Journal of English and Foreign Literature, Science, the Fine Arts, Music and the Drama.

No. 4037.

SATURDAY, MARCH 11, 1905.

PRICE
THREEPENCE
REGISTERED AS A NEWSPAPER

ROYAL INSTITUTION of GREAT BRITAIN, ALBEMARLE STREET, PICCADILLY, W.

THIS DAY (SATURDAY), March 11, at 3 o'clock, Prof. J. J. THOMSON, LL.D. D.Sc. F.R.S. FIRST of THREE LECTURES on 'Electrical Properties of Radioactive Substances.'
Half-a-Guinea the Course. Subscription to all Courses in the Season, Two Guineas.

BRITISH ARCHÆOLOGICAL ASSOCIATION.

32, Sackville Street, Piccadilly. — EVENING MEETING, March 15, 8 o'clock. The following Paper will be read:—'Villa Faustina,' by C. H. COMPTON, Esq., V.P.

GEO. PATRICK, Hon. Sec.

THE FOLK-LORE SOCIETY. — The NEXT

MEETING of the SOCIETY will be held at 22, ALBEMARLE STREET, PICCADILLY, on WEDNESDAY, March 15, at 8 P.M., when Mrs. WHERRY will read some Notes on 'Processions of the Dancing Towns in Italy'; and Mr. R. T. GUNTHER a Paper entitled 'The Cimarruta.'
F. A. MILNE, Secretary.

11, Old Square, Lincoln's Inn, W.C., March 3, 1905

EXHIBITION of WATER-COLOUR DRAWINGS

by ALFRED W. RICH, at the HALL of the ALPINE CLUB, Mill Street (off Conduit Street), Bond Street, W. OPEN DAILY till MARCH 25, from 10 till 6. Admission 1s.

EXHIBITION of ENGRAVINGS in MEZZOTINT

and STIPPLE after REYNOLDS, ROMNEY, and other Masters. Messrs. P. & D. COLNAGHI & CO. have the honour to announce that they have NOW ON VIEW a choice COLLECTION, in the finest possible states, of ENGRAVINGS in MEZZOTINT and STIPPLE after REYNOLDS, ROMNEY, and other Masters.
Admission, including Catalogue, One Shilling.
13 and 14, Pall Mall East, S.W.

ROYAL SOCIETY of PAINTER-ETCHERS and

ENGRAVERS, 54, Pall Mall East, S.W.—23rd ANNUAL EXHIBITION, including ETCHINGS and ENGRAVINGS by Sir F. SEYMOUR HADEN, P.R.E. Open 10 to 6. Admission 1s. HAROLD CHILD, Sec.

OBACH & CO.

EXHIBITION of OIL PAINTINGS, DRAWINGS, and LITHOGRAPHS by FANTIN-LATOURE.
NOW OPEN. 168, NEW BOND STREET, W.

THE BOOKSELLERS' PROVIDENT INSTITUTION.

Founded 1837.

Patron—HER MAJESTY QUEEN ALEXANDRA.

Invested Capital 30,000l.

A UNIQUE INVESTMENT

Offered to London Booksellers and their Assistants.

A young man or woman of twenty-five can invest the sum of Twenty Guineas (or its equivalent by instalments), and obtain the right to participate in the following advantages:—

FIRST. Freedom from want in time of Adversity as long as need exists.

SECOND. Permanent Relief to Old Age.

THIRD. Medical advice by eminent Physicians and Surgeons.

FOURTH. A Cottage in the Country (Abbots Langley, Hertfordshire) for aged Members, with garden produce, coal, and medical attendance free, in addition to an annuity.

FIFTH. A furnished house in the same Retreat at Abbots Langley for the free use of Members and their families for holidays or during convalescence.

SIXTH. A contribution towards Funeral expenses when it is needed.

SEVENTH. All these are available not for Members only, but also for their wives or widows and young children.

EIGHTH. The payment of the subscriptions confers an absolute right to these benefits in all cases of need.

For further information apply to the Secretary, Mr. GEORGE LARNER, 23, Paternoster Row E.C.

ELTHAM COLLEGE, KENT.—The ROYAL

NAVAL SCHOOL.—EXAMINATION for ENTRANCE and other SCHOLARSHIPS, MARCH 27 and Following Days. Public School Life and Education, with Special Classes for all Navy and Army Examinations.—Apply to the Head Master, Rev. A. E. RUIE, D.D.

CITY of LONDON SCHOOL, VICTORIA EMBANKMENT, E.C.

SIX ENTRANCE SCHOLARSHIPS (Classical and Modern) OPEN for COMPETITION in APRIL NEXT.—Full particulars and Entrance Forms may be obtained from A. J. AUSTIN, Secretary.

EDUCATION.

Parents or Guardians desiring accurate information relative to the CHOICE of SCHOOLS for BOYS or GIRLS or TUTOR in England or Abroad are invited to call upon or send fully detailed particulars to MESSRS. GABBITAS, THRING & CO.,

who for more than thirty years have been closely in touch with the leading Educational Establishments.

Advice, free of charge, is given by Mr. Thring, Nephew of the late Head Master of Uppingham, 36, Sackville Street, London, W.

QUEEN'S COLLEGE, LONDON, 43 and 45, HARLEY STREET, W.

Appointments to the ARNOTT PROFESSORSHIP of NATURAL PHILOSOPHY and the PROFESSORSHIP of MATHEMATICS will be made for OCTOBER NEXT. Applications must be sent in by MARCH 25.

Should an Applicant be suitable, the Two Chairs might be combined. For all particulars apply to the ASSISTANT SECRETARY.

WALSALL EDUCATION COMMITTEE.

SCHOOL OF ART.

Applications are invited for the post of HEAD MASTER of the WALSALL SCHOOL of ART. Salary 2500l., rising by 25l. per annum for meritorious service to 3000l. Applications to be received not later than APRIL 7, 1905.—Further particulars and prescribed Form of Application can be obtained from the DIRECTOR of EDUCATION, Education Office, Walsall.

COUNTY OF LONDON.

EDUCATION ACTS, 1870 to 1903.

The LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL invites applications for the following appointments in the Education Department:—

FOUR DIVISIONAL INSPECTORS, who will have the general superintendence of large districts, and give special attention to the co-ordination of education within their areas. Their chief duties will be to inspect Pupil Teachers' Centres, Secondary Schools, Training Colleges, Science and Commercial Centres, Polytechnics, and all Institutions for Higher Education aided by the Council.

Candidates will be required to possess special qualifications in one of the following subjects:—(1) English Language and Literature. (2) Modern Languages. (3) Mathematics and Science. (4) Technology, including Mechanical and Electrical Engineering. The Salary will be in each case 6000l. a year, rising by annual increments of 25l. to a maximum Salary of 8000l. a year.

ONE ART INSPECTOR, whose chief duties will be to inspect the Art Teaching in Elementary and Secondary Schools, Art Schools, and Polytechnics. The Salary will be 4000l. a year, rising by annual increments of 200l. to a maximum Salary of 5000l. a year.

ONE INSPECTOR of WOOD and METAL WORK, whose chief duties will be to inspect the Teaching in Wood and Metal Work in Manual Training Centres and Elementary and Secondary Schools. He will also be required to inspect certain classes at Polytechnics. The Salary will be 4000l. a year, rising by annual increments of 200l. to a maximum Salary of 5000l. a year.

ONE INSPECTOR of WOMEN'S TECHNICAL CLASSES, whose chief duties will be to inspect Technical Classes for Women (including Upholstery, Flowermaking, Needlework, Millinery, Dressmaking, and Dresscutting) in Evening Schools, Girls' Clubs, and Polytechnics. The Salary will be 3000l. a year, rising by annual increments of 200l. to a maximum Salary of 4000l. a year.

The persons appointed will be under the control of the Chief Inspector, and will be required to give their whole time to the duties of the Office, and will in other respects be subject to the usual conditions attaching to the Council's service, particulars of which are given in the Form of Application.

In connexion with the appointments there is no restriction with regard to sex.

Applications should be made on the Official Form, to be obtained from the Clerk of the London County Council at the County Hall, Spring Gardens, S.W., or at the Education Offices, Victoria Embankment, W.C. The applications must be sent in not later than 10 A.M. on SATURDAY, April 1, 1905, addressed to the Education Offices as above, and accompanied by copies of not more than three recent Testimonials.

Canvassing either directly or indirectly, will be held to be a disqualification for appointment.

G. L. GOMME, Clerk of the London County Council.
Spring Gardens, S.W., March 2, 1905.

COUNTY of LONDON.

EDUCATION ACTS, 1870 to 1903.

The LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL invites applications for the post of a PRINCIPAL ASSISTANT in the EXECUTIVE OFFICER'S BRANCH of the EDUCATION DEPARTMENT. The Officer appointed will be required to assist the Executive Officer in the work relating to Higher Education, especially in connexion with Secondary Education, Scholarships, and the Training of Teachers. Candidates must have had a University or other equivalent training, and must have had experience in connexion with Secondary Schools and in Educational Administration. The Salary attached to the position is 4000l. per annum, rising by annual increments of 250l. to 6000l. per annum.

The person appointed will be required to give his whole time to the duties of the Office, and will in other respects be subject to the usual conditions attaching to the Council's service, particulars of which are contained in the Form of Application.

Applications should be made on the official Form, to be obtained from the Clerk of the London County Council, at the County Hall, Spring Gardens, S.W., or at the Education Offices, Victoria Embankment, W.C. The applications must be sent in not later than 10 A.M. on SATURDAY, March 18, 1905, addressed to the Education Offices as above, and accompanied by copies of not more than three recent Testimonials.

Canvassing either directly or indirectly, will be held to be a disqualification for appointment.

G. L. GOMME, Clerk of the London County Council.
The County Hall, Spring Gardens, S.W., February 23, 1905

GRAMMAR SCHOOL of KING EDWARD VI. at STOURBRIDGE.

HEAD MASTER.

There will be a VACANCY in the HEAD MASTERSHIP of this SCHOOL after JULY 31, 1905. The Gentleman appointed must be a Graduate of one of the principal Universities of the United Kingdom. A knowledge of Modern Languages, Chemistry, and Natural Science is considered desirable.

The remuneration, by Stipend, Capitation Fees, &c., amounts at present to about 6000l. per annum, with House.

There are six Assistant Masters, paid by the Governors.

Personal canvassing of the Governors will be considered a disqualification.

Applications, in writing, with Twelve Copies of Testimonials, to be sent to W. P. THOMAS, Esq., Solicitor, Clerk to the Governors, on or before MAY 20, 1905.

MUNICIPAL SCHOOL of ART, BRIGHTON.

The COMMITTEE invite applications for the post of ASSISTANT ART MASTER. Applicant must hold an Art Master's Certificate, and be strong in Advanced Design and Ornament, and competent to take Modelling Classes. He will be required to enter on his duties in APRIL NEXT. Salary 1200l. per annum (part time).—Forms of Application, to be obtained of the undersigned, with copies of four Testimonials and References, must be sent in not later than MONDAY, March 20, 1905, to JOHN GARDEN, Clerk to the Education Committee.

Offices of the Committee, 54 Old Steine, Brighton,
March 6, 1905.

YORK PUBLIC LIBRARY.

AN ASSISTANT WANTED. Previous experience in a Free Library and a knowledge of Cataloguing necessary. Salary 650l.—Applications, stating age, experience, and qualifications, accompanied by copies of not more than three Testimonials, must be delivered not later than the morning of SATURDAY, March 18, to ARTHUR H. FURNISH, City Librarian.

Clifford Street, York, March 1, 1905.

CASSELL & COMPANY, LIMITED. — The

DIRECTORS of CASSELL & COMPANY, Limited, invite applications for the position of GENERAL MANAGER, rendered vacant by the death of Sir Wemyss Reid.

Letters to be addressed to the CHAIRMAN, Cassell & Company, Limited, La Belle Sauvage Yard, London, E.C.

Yearly Subscription, free by post, Inland, 15s. 3d.; Foreign, 18s. Entered at the New York Post Office as Second Class matter.

FRANCE.—The ATHENÆUM can be obtained at the following Railway Stations in France:—

AMIENS, ANTIBES, BEAULIEU-SUR-MER, BIARRITZ, BORDEAUX, BOULOGNE, CALAIS, CANNES, DIJON, DUNKIRK, GENEVA, GOLFE-JUAN, HAVRE, HYÈRES, JUAN-LES-PINS, LILLE, LYONS, MARSEILLES, MENTONE, MONACO, MONTE CARLO, NANTES, NICE, PARIS (Est, Nord, Lyon), PAU, ROUEN, SAINT RAPHAEL, TOULON, TOURS.

PARIS: W. H. SMITH & SON, 248, Rue de Rivoli; and at the ALIGNANI LIBRARY, 224, Rue de Rivoli.

SOME FRUITS of SOLITUDE.

INFRINGEMENT OF COPYRIGHT.

Messrs. DEAN & SON, LIMITED, regret that through inadvertence the Introduction by Mr. Edmund Gosse to Penn's 'Some Fruits of Solitude,' the Copyright of Messrs. Constable & Co., Limited, was included in the edition of that work recently imported by Messrs. Dean from the United States. Messrs. Dean have (at Messrs. Constable's suggestion) sent a donation of 50l. to the Booksellers' Provident Institution in recognition of the error.

SARUM MISSAL in ENGLISH, published by the Church Press Company, 1868—Will the present OWNER of the COPYRIGHT communicate with Box 995, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.?

WANTED, by a WEST-END PUBLISHER, an ADVERTISING CLERK. One with previous experience preferred.—Write, stating age, experience, Salary required, &c., to X. Box 994, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

WELL-EDUCATED TYPIST WANTED, as first-hand, with Copying Office experience, for University Town. Well read, and able to mark Corrections.—Full particulars and Salary expected to Tyro, 50, Queen Victoria Street, E.C.

A GRADUATE of CAMBRIDGE and DUBLIN, with wide Literary and Scientific attainments, together with experience as Writer of Special Articles, desires a PERMANENT POST as a LEADER-WRITER to a first-class Journal.—Box 992, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

ASSISTANT EDITORSHIP WANTED, in LONDON or the PROVINCES by a UNIVERSITY MAN. Has had great experience as Editor and Leader Writer. Special knowledge of Far East.—Address Box 993, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

ADVERTISER desires post as LITERARY ADVISER to PUBLISHING FIRM. University Classical Honours Man.—Address A. H. S. Box 992, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

GENTLEMAN (22), of Literary tastes, and with five years' business experience, seeks POSITION in first-class PUBLISHING HOUSE. Willing to commence on General Staff.—Write Box 993, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, E.C.

HOLIDAY TUTORSHIP desired by OXFORD CLASSICAL SCHOLAR. Has travelled Abroad. Good Testimonials.—Apply Box 987, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, E.C.

ADVERTISER, who has been in the service of a well-known Literary Man for nineteen years, is anxious to obtain a post as an ASSISTANT in a LIBRARY or BOOKSELLER'S SHOP. Can be highly recommended. Age 30.—Box 982, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

LADY PROOF READER, of some experience, wants SITUATION. In London preferred.—Apply, personally or by letter, J. E. F., Athenæum Press, Bream's Buildings, E.C.

TRANSLATION, REVISION, RESEARCH, REVIEWING, INDEXING, and other LITERARY WORK, or non-resident Secretaryship. Classics, French, German, Italian. Special Subjects, Mythology and Literature. Varied experience.—Miss SELBY, 53, Talbot Road, W.

LITERARY RESEARCH undertaken at the British Museum and elsewhere on moderate terms. Excellent Testimonials.—A. R., Box 910, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

TRAINING for PRIVATE SECRETARIAL WORK and INDEXING.—Apply Miss PRITCHARD (Nat. Sch. Tripos), 52a, Conduit Street, Bond Street, London, W.

TYPE-WRITING undertaken by highly educated Women (Classical Tripos; Cambridge Higher Local; Modern Languages). Research, Revision, Translation.—THE CAMBRIDGE TYPE-WRITING AGENCY, 10, Duke Street, Adelphi, W.C.

AUTHORS' MSS., SERMONS, PLAYS, ENVELOPES, CIRCULARS, and all kinds. TYPED at home (Remington), 9d. per 1,000. Good paper. Orders promptly executed.—M. L., 7, Vernon Road, Clapham.

SHORTHAND and TYPE-WRITING.—Authors' MSS., Plays, Sermons, Reports, &c., 9d. per 1,000. Legal and General Copying. Accuracy and Despatch guaranteed.—Miss N. E. ROBINSON, 8, Westover Road, Wandsworth Common, London, S.W.

TYPE-WRITING.—MSS., SCIENTIFIC, and of all Descriptions, COPIED. Special attention to work requiring care. Dictation Rooms (Shorthand or Type-writing) Usual Terms.—Misses E. B. and I. PARAN, Donington House, 30, Norfolk Street, Strand, London.

TYPE-WRITING promptly and accurately done. Ten years' experience. Excellent references. 10d. per 1,000 words. Reduction for quantity.—Miss MESSIA, The Orchard, Cotterill Road, Surbiton, S.W.

AUTHORS' MSS., NOVELS, SERMONS, PLAYS, REVIEWS TYPE-WRITTEN accurately and promptly, 9d. per 1,000 words. References to well-known Writers.—M. STUART, Thirbank, Roxborough Road, Harrow.

THE AUTHOR'S AGENCY.—Established 1879. The interests of Authors capably represented. Agreements for Publishing arranged. MSS. placed with Publishers—Terms and Testimonials on application to Mr. A. M. BURNES, 34, Paternoster Row.

MR. GEORGE LARNER, Accountant and Licensed Valuer to the Bookselling, Publishing, Newspaper, Printing, and Stationery Trades. Partnerships Arranged. Balance Sheets and Trading Accounts Prepared and Audited. All Business carried out under Mr. Larner's personal supervision.—28, 29, and 30, Paternoster Row, E.C., Secretary to the Booksellers' Provident Institution.

C. MITCHELL & CO., Agents for the Sale and Purchase of Newspaper Properties, undertake Valuations for Probate or Purchase, Investigations, and Audit of Accounts, &c. Card of Terms on application. Mitchell House, 1 and 2, Snow Hill, Holborn Viaduct, E.C.

ATHENÆUM PRESS.—JOHN EDWARD FRANCIS, Printer of the Athenæum, Notes and Queries, &c., is prepared to SUBMIT ESTIMATES for all kinds of BOOK, NEWS, and PERIODICAL PRINTING.—13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

Catalogues.

PICKERING & CHATTO'S CATALOGUES.

CATALOGUE of TRACTS and PAMPHLETS, chiefly Historical and Topographical, 238 pp. 8vo, with Descriptions and Selling Prices of 3,000 Rare Tracts and Pamphlets, including Items on Africa—America—Queen Anne—Astrology—Bedfordshire—Berkshire—Buckinghamshire—Cambridgeshire—Civil War—Charles I. and II.—Channel Islands—Cheshire—Commonwealth—Cornwall—Oliver Cromwell—Cumberland—Derbyshire—Devonshire—Dorsetshire—Durham—Economics and Trade—Queen Elizabeth—Essex—Flanders—France—George I. and II.—Germany—Gloucestershire—Hampshire—Herefordshire—Hertfordshire—Holland—Ireland—James I. and II.—Jesuits—Jews—Kent—Lancashire—Law—Leicestershire—Lincolnshire—London—Middlesex—Monmouthshire—Norfolk—Northamptonshire—Northumberland—Nottinghamshire—Oxfordshire—Popery—Popish Plot—Pretender (the Young and Old)—Printing—Prynne—Quakers—Rutlandshire—Prince Rupert—Scotland—Shropshire—Somersetshire—Spain—Spanish Armada—Staffordshire—Suffolk—Surrey—Sweden—Wales—Warwickshire—Westmorland—William III.—Wiltshire—Worcestershire—Yorkshire. Paper cover, post free, 1s.

CATALOGUE of ENGLISH LITERATURE, noted Bibliographically and Biographically, including First or Early Editions of the Writings of practically every English Author from Chaucer to R. L. Stevenson. 504 pp. 8vo, with Descriptions and Selling Prices of nearly 4,000 Rare Books, half-cloth, post free, 3s. 6d. This Catalogue has been pronounced on all sides to be the most interesting Bookseller's Catalogue of the subject ever issued.

CATALOGUE of SPORTS, PASTIMES, ARTS, SCIENCES. 223 pp. 8vo, with Descriptions and Selling Prices of nearly 2,000 Old or Rare Books upon almost every Branch of Sport, Science, or Art, paper cover, post free, 1s.

CATALOGUE of MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS. 126 pp. 8vo, with Descriptions and Selling Prices of about 900 Old or Rare Books, including Works on Africa, America, Australasia—First Editions of Books Illustrated by Randolph Caldecott, George and Robert Cruikshank, Richard Doyle, Harry Furniss, James Gillray, Ernest Griset, John Leech, Hablot K. Browne (Phiz), Henry Alken, Thomas Rowlandson, and numerous Rare Works with Coloured Plates—an interesting Collection of Old Curiosa, Erotica, Facetiae, Old Romances, Chap Books, and Children's Books—numerous Topographical Works relating to most of the Counties of England, Ireland, Scotland, and Wales—fine illuminated Manuscripts, with Miniatures—a valuable Assemblage of Early Typographical Specimens, including many Rare Editions Principles and Examples of the Early Printers. Paper cover, post free, 1s.

CATALOGUE of NEW PURCHASES. Books on all Subjects, including a fine Collection of Stamped and Elaborately Gilt-Tooled Old Bookbindings and several very beautiful Ancient illuminated Manuscripts. 578 pp. 8vo, containing Descriptions, with Selling Prices, of 4,000 Valuable Books, illustrated with 9 Coloured and 198 Reproductions of Manuscripts and Old Bindings, cloth, post free, 6s.

It has been found necessary to make the above charges for our Catalogues, to prevent an inundation of applications from irresponsible persons. The cost of the Catalogue will, however, be deducted from the first order of 11.

PICKERING & CHATTO, Antiquarian Booksellers, 66, HAYMARKET, LONDON, S.W.

GLAISHER'S REMAINDER BOOK CATALOGUE.

FEBRUARY SUPPLEMENT NOW READY, Comprising all most Recent Purchases in PUBLISHERS' REMAINDER STOCK. Books in NEW condition, at REDUCED Prices.

WILLIAM GLAISHER,

Remainder and Discount Bookseller, 265, High Holborn, London.

MESSRS. HENRY YOUNG & SONS possess one of the LARGEST STOCKS of OLD and NEW BOOKS in GREAT BRITAIN, and they will be glad to hear from any one in search of Books out of print, as they can in many cases supply them at once.

ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE MONTHLY. Price 6d. 12, South Castle Street, Liverpool.

H. H. PEACH, Antiquarian Bookseller, 37, Bel- voir Street, Leicester, issues CATALOGUES of MSS. and OLD BOOKS post free to Book Collectors. No. 10 contains Selections of Bibliography—Miscellaneous Autographs, &c.

THE INTERNATIONAL BOOK CIRCULAR, No. 139, containing a Special Article, entitled 'SOME CONTEMPORARY FOREIGN CHEMISTS,' by Dr. M. O. FORSTER, together with an exact Bibliography of their Publications, and a Double Plate of their Portraits. Specimen Copies gratis.—WILLIAMS & NORGATE, Book Importers, 14, Henrietta Street, Covent Garden, W.C.

CATALOGUE No. 42.—Drawings—Engravings—Turner's Liber Studiorum—Lucas's Mezzotints after Constable—Engravings, Hogarth, Ortis—Etchings, Palmer, Whistler—Japanese Colour-Prints—Illustrated Books—Works by Ruskin. Post free, Sixpence. Wm. WARD, 2, Church Terrace, Richmond, Surrey.

NOW READY.

CATALOGUE of the SECOND PORTION of the LIBRARY of the late Prof. YORK POWELL, comprising History and Biography—Antiquarian Works—European and Oriental Literature and Philology, &c.

B. H. BLACKWELL, 50 and 51, Broad Street, Oxford.

MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS.—Send for CATALOGUE (post free) of good SECOND-HAND WORKS, esteemed Editions of various Authors, some scarce, all in new extra leather bindings, full and half bound, at prices affixed.—W. ROSE & SON, Bookbinders, 29-30, Eagle Street, Red Lion Street, Holborn, W.C.

BOOKS.—All out-of-print and rare Books on any subject supplied. The most expert Bookfinder extant. Please state wants and ask for Catalogue. I make a special feature of exchanging any saleable Books for others selected from my various Lists. Special List of 2,000 Books I particularly want post free.—EDW. BAKER'S Great Bookshop, 14-16, John Bright Street, Birmingham.

BERTRAM DOBELL, SECOND-HAND BOOKSELLER, and PUBLISHER, 77, Charing Cross Road, London, W.C.

A large Stock of Old and Rare Books in English Literature, including Poetry and the Drama—Shakespeareans—First Editions of Famous Authors—Manuscripts—Illustrated Books, &c. CATALOGUES free on application.

LEIGHTON'S

ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE of EARLY PRINTED and other INTERESTING BOOKS, MANUSCRIPTS, and BINDINGS.

Part VIII. SHE—T, with 150 Illustrations, price 2s. NEARLY READY. Parts I.—VII. containing A—SHA, with 1050 Illustrations in Facsimile, price 17s. the 7 Parts.

J. & J. LEIGHTON, 40, Brewer Street, Golden Square, W.

SYDNEY V. GALLOWAY, New Street, Aberystwyth.—SECOND-HAND CATALOGUE just issued, containing Cheap Books on all Subjects. Post free on request.

ARUNDEL CHROMOS.

Large number in Stock; many rare ones. Send stamp for this Month's Printed List. SAINT JUDE'S DEPOT, BIRMINGHAM.

PORTRAIT of GEORGE MEREDITH, after the celebrated Painting by G. F. WATTS, R.A., Engraved by W. BISCOMBE GARDNER. Limited to 600 Artist's Proofs at One Guinea each. Size, 12 in. by 8½ in.—Address W. BISCOMBE GARDNER, Horshly, Hind Head, Surrey.

MARLBOROUGH.—TO BE SOLD, WITH POSSESSION.—ANHOLME, on the London and Bath Road, within a mile of Marlborough College, with fine Views of the magnificently timbered Slopes of Savernake Forest, a DETACHED FREEHOLD RESIDENCE, with Six Bedrooms, Dressing Room, Three good Reception Rooms, and Domestic Offices. Stabling, Lodge, Gardener's Cottage, and other Out-buildings. Well-timbered Grounds, nearly Four Acres, bounded and intersected by the River Kennet.—Solicitors, Messrs KAYS & JONES, 37, Norfolk Street, W.C. Particulars of Mr. MARK JEANS, Marlborough.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS.—WINTER APART-MENTS—Comfortably furnished Sitting-Room and One Bedroom. Pleasant and central. No others taken.—R. H., 66, Grove Hill Road, Tunbridge Wells.

SUPERIOR modern, well-appointed HOUSE, best position in TUNBRIDGE WELLS, TO BE LET FURNISHED, or APARTMENTS.—Mrs. KIDNER, Deanside, Roynce Park, Mount Ephraim.

Sales by Auction.

Library of Dr. F. A. LEES, removed from Leeds, and other Properties.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their Galleries, 47, Leicester Square, W.C., on MONDAY, March 20, and Following Day, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, Valuable BOOKS, including First Editions of Swinburne, Tennyson, Morris, Browning, Lang, Stevenson, &c.—Powell's Dance of Death and Dance of Life—Lamb's John Woodvill, First Edition—Proceedings and Transactions of various Learned and Scientific Societies—Swift's Works, 19 vols.—Styree's Works, 27 vols.—Harleian Miscellany, 12 vols.—Marguerite de Navarre Les Nouvelles, 1792—First Editions of Smollett—Morgan's Cock-Fighting Coloured Frontispiece—an interesting Relic of W. M. Thackeray—Seventy Illustrations to the Arabian Nights, by Leitchford—Van Norten's Flowers and Fruits of Java 1863—Works on Architecture and Ornament—Malory's King Arthur, 1893 and other Works illustrated by Feardley—Early Printed Books—Shakespeare's Works, Colotype Facsimile of the First Folio—Chaucer's Works, by Skeat—Standard Works on Theology, Science, Philosophy, Travel, &c.

Important Collection of Lepidoptera.

TUESDAY, March 14, and WEDNESDAY, March 15, at 1 o'clock.

MR. J. C. STEVENS will OFFER, at his Rooms, 38, King Street, Covent Garden, London, W.C., the FIRST PORTION (unless previously disposed of by Private Treaty) of the unrivalled COLLECTION of BRITISH LEPIDOPTERA formed by the late PHILIP B. MASON, Esq., M.R.C.S., F.C.S., F.Z.S., F.E.S., &c., of Trent House, Burton-on-Trent, comprising long and Superb Series of most of the Rare and Extinct Species—fine Varieties and Local Forms in the best state of Preservation; also many Valuable and Historic Specimens and Types from the Hayworth and other Collections, together with the first-rate Standish and other Cabinets in which they are contained.

On view the Monday prior and mornings of Sale. Catalogues, ready a week prior to Sale, post free on application.

Important Sale of Birds' Eggs.

MR. J. C. STEVENS has received instructions to OFFER for SALE on THURSDAY, March 16, the FOURTH and FINAL PORTION of the COLLECTION of BIRDS' EGGS formed by HEATLEY NOBLE, Esq. The Sale will include one of the finest Specimens of the GREAT AUK'S EGG ever offered, together with such rarities as White's, Siberian, and Black-throated Thrush—Waxwing—Scarlet and Pine Grosbeak—Nutteracker—Needle-tailed Swift—Honey Buzzard—Golden Eagle—Iceland and Jyr Falcon—Snow Goose—Pectoral and Marsh Sandpiper—Greenshank—Dusky Redshank—Pomarine Skua, &c.

Catalogues, in course of preparation, may be had on application to Mr. J. C. STEVENS, 38, King Street, Covent Garden, London, W.C.

A fine Holtzapffel Lathe complete, Scientific Apparatus, &c. FRIDAY, March 17, at half-past 12 o'clock.

MR. J. C. STEVENS will SELL by AUCTION, at his Rooms, 38, King Street, Covent Garden, London, W.C., a HOLTZAPFFEL LATHE, with a fine lot of Chucks and other Accessories, complete—Tools—Mechanical Models—Photographic Apparatus and Sundries—Optical Lanterns and Slides—Scientific and Electrical Instruments and Apparatus—Books—Engraving—Plated Goods—and a quantity of Miscellaneous Property.

On view day prior 2 to 5 and morning of Sale. Catalogues on application.

Curiosities.

MR. J. C. STEVENS will SELL by AUCTION, on TUESDAY, March 21, at half past 12 o'clock, CHINESE and JAPANESE PORCELAIN, LAQUEL WARE, BRONZES, &c.—Carved Ivory Boxes—Figures—Satsuma Bowls—Cloisonné and Art Metal Ware; also Old English China—Wood Carvings—Native Weapons, &c.

Catalogues on application. 38, King Street, Covent Garden, W.C.

Books.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C., on MONDAY, March 13, at 1 o'clock precisely, a COLLECTION of BOOKS, comprising Works in various Branches of Literature—a Series of Essex House Press Publications—First Editions of Modern Authors—Illustrated French and English Books—Fine Art Publications—Costumes—Books illustrated by George Cruikshank—rare Seventeenth and Eighteenth Century Works, &c.

May be viewed. Catalogues may be had.

The valuable Collection of Engravings, chiefly by the Old Masters, the Property of MAJOR PARKER.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C., on THURSDAY, March 16, and Two Following Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, the valuable COLLECTION of ENGRAVINGS, chiefly by the Old Masters, the Property of MAJOR PARKER, Delamore, Ivy Bridge, Devon, comprising a valuable Series of Portraits by and after Van Dyck—Etchings in early states by Rembrandt—Engravings by Albert Dürer and other Old Masters.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

Valuable Books and Illuminated and other Manuscripts.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C., on TUESDAY, March 21, and Three Following Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, valuable BOOKS and MANUSCRIPTS, comprising a large number of Manuscripts, illuminated, Devotional, Historical, and Theological—many important and interesting Autograph Manuscripts and Letters of eminent Ancient and Modern Writers—First Editions of Elizabethan Writers—Shakespeareans, including the Poems of 1640—Early Folios, and interesting Books relating thereto—Horræ on Vellum—Incunabula—an unpublished French Translation of Basilikon Doron, by Louys Servin—Rare Bibles, including Coverdale's 1535, and other Early Editions.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

A Portion of the Library of the late ROBERT ROBERTS, Esq., of Boston, Lincolnshire, Part of the Library of the late G. H. BOUGHTON, R.A., and a nearly Complete Set of the Kelmescott Press Books on Vellum.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C., on SATURDAY, March 25, at 1 o'clock precisely, a PORTION of the LIBRARY of the late ROBERT ROBERTS, Esq. (of Boston, Lincolnshire), including Allot's England's Parnassus, 1600—Herriek, Hesperides, 1648—Milton's Poems, 1645—Sir T. More's Utopia, 1551—Benlowe's Theophilus, 1652—Drayton's Poly-Olbion, 1622—Shakespeare Works, 1622 and 1633, &c.; a PART of the LIBRARY of the late GEORGE H. BOUGHTON, R.A., comprising an important Series of the Publications of the Grolier Club, New York—J. C. Smith British Mezzotint Portraits, 4 vols. 1884—Burlington Fine-Arts Club, Illustrated Catalogues—Fine Books on Art, &c.; and the Greater Part of a Set of the Kelmescott Press Books on Vellum, all Picked Copies in Perfect Condition, including the Chaucer.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

The valuable and extensive Library of the late JOHN SCOTT, Esq., C.B.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C., on MONDAY, March 27, and Ten Following Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, the valuable and extensive LIBRARY of the late JOHN SCOTT, Esq., C.B., Halkhill, Large, Ayrshire.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had, price Half-a-crown each.

MESSRS. CHRISTIE, MANSON & WOODS respectfully give Notice that they will hold the Following SALES by AUCTION at their Great Rooms, King Street, St. James's Square, the Sales commencing at 1 o'clock precisely:—

On MONDAY, March 13, PICTURES by OLD MASTERS.

On TUESDAY, March 14, MINIATURES, SILVER PLATE, and DECORATIVE FURNITURE of F. CLIFFORD, Esq., K.C. (deceased).

On WEDNESDAY, March 15, ENGRAVINGS of the EARLY ENGLISH SCHOOL.

On THURSDAY, March 16, an important COLLECTION of EARLY ENGLISH SPOONS, the Property of a GENTLEMAN, and OLD ENGLISH SILVER PLATE from Private Sources.

On FRIDAY, March 17, OLD ENGLISH FURNITURE of the Hon. Sir ROBERT SAMUEL WRIGHT (deceased) and others.

On SATURDAY, March 18, MODERN PICTURES and DRAWINGS of the late JAMES WARREN, Esq., and others.

Valuable Miscellaneous Books, including the Library of a Clergyman (removed from the North of England).

MESSRS. HODGSON & CO. will SELL by AUCTION, at their Rooms, 115, Chancery Lane, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, March 22, and Two Following Days, at 10 o'clock, MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS, including the above LIBRARY, and other Properties, comprising a Collection of Early Printed Books from the German and Dutch Presses—a fine Coloured Copy of De Wit's Atlas—Schomburgk's Views in Guiana, and other Books with Coloured Plates—Dibdin's Bibliotheca Spenceriana, &c., 7 vols.—Topographical and Antiquarian Works—Locke on the Human Understanding, First Edition—French illustrated Books—The Italian Novelists, 7 vols.—First Editions of Dickens, Lever, and other esteemed Authors—Standard Works in History, Travel, and Divinity. Catalogues on application.

Valuable Law Books—handsome Oak and Mahogany Bookcases—Engravings—Book-Plates, &c.

MESSRS. HODGSON & CO. will SELL by AUCTION, at their Rooms, 115, Chancery Lane, W.C., DURING MARCH, valuable LAW BOOKS—handsome Modern Oak and Mahogany Bookcases—Engravings, &c.; also a COLLECTION of BOOK-PLATES (Ex-Libris), comprising specimens of the Early Armorial, Jacobean, and Chippendale Styles, and a few scarce American Plates. Catalogues are preparing.

THE GEOGRAPHICAL JOURNAL. Price 2s. Contents.—MARCH.

FROM SRINAGAR to the SOURCES of the CHOGO LUNOMA GLACIER. By William Hunter Workman, M.A. M.D. F.R.G.S. With 6 Plates and Map.

BATHYMETRICAL SURVEY of the FRESH-WATER LOCHS of SCOTLAND. Under the Direction of Sir John Murray, K.C.B. F.R.S., and Laurence Pullar, F.R.S.E. With 3 Illustrations, Index Map, and 5 Plates.

A JOURNEY to LAKE SAN MARTIN, PATAGONIA. By Capt. H. L. Crosthwait, R.E. With 8 Plates and Diagrams.

MR. C. W. HORLEY'S RECENT JOURNEY in EAST AFRICA. With Sketch Map.

THE EXPEDITION to WESTERN TIBET.

CAPT. OWEN'S MAP of UNYORO. With Sketch-Map.

NOTES on the UPPER LIAO, MANCHURIA. By Robert T. Turley. With Sketch-Map.

THE MAJOR NATURAL REGIONS: an Essay in Systematic Geography. By A. J. Herbertson, M.A. Ph.D. With 4 Maps.

REVIEWS.

MEETINGS of the ROYAL GEOGRAPHICAL SOCIETY, SESSION 1904-1905.

GEOGRAPHICAL LITERATURE of the MONTH.

NEW MAPS and ILLUSTRATIONS.

Edward Stanford, Long Acre, London.

THE BEGINNINGS of HEBREW ARCHITECTURE: Notes and Sketches in Southern Italy—VII.; Letter from Paris; Dr. Waldstein on Greek Sculpture (Royal Academy Lectures); The St. Louis Exhibition (Institute of Architects); Low Side Windows (Archæological Institute); Types of Concrete-Steel Structures (Student's Column); Ceiling, Palazzo Imperiale, Genoa—Measured Drawings, &c.—See the BUILDER of March 11 (4d.); by post, 11d.).—Through any Newsagent; or direct from the Publisher of the Builder, Catherine Street, London, W.C.

S A N D S & C O.

THE ANGEL OF SYON.

The Life and Martyrdom of Blessed Richard Reynolds, Bridgettine Monk of Syon, Martyred at Tyburn, May 4, 1535.

BY

DOM ADAM HAMILTON, O.S.B.

TO WHICH IS ADDED

A Sketch of the History of the Bridgettines of Syon, written by Father ROBERT PARSONS, S.J., about the Year 1595. Edited from a MS. Copy at Syon Abbey, Chudleigh.

With 14 Illustrations.

Crown 8vo, price 3s. 6d. net.

Edinburgh: 13, Bank Street. London: 23, Bedford Street, Strand.

G E O R G E C A N N I N G. By H. W. V. TEMPERLEY, Lecturer in History at Leeds University. Price 7s. 6d. net.

N E L S O N and R U F F O. By F. P. BADHAM. Price 1s. 6d. net. James Finch & Co., Limited, 23, Paternoster Row, E.C.

INDEXING.

MANUAL of PRACTICAL INDEXING. By A. L. CLARKE. Crown 8vo, cloth, 5s. net. 1905.

"It is as complete and thorough a treatise of indexing as any one could possibly desire"—Scotsman, February 20, 1905.

Library Supply Co. 181, Queen Victoria Street, E.C.

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS.

RECENT CLASSICAL BOOKS.

NOW READY, with 141 Illustrations and 5 Maps, demy 8vo, 18s. net.

A COMPANION to GREEK STUDIES. Edited by Leonard WHIBLEY, M.A., Fellow of Pembroke College, and University Lecturer in Ancient History.

The Contents include Chapters on Geography, Fauna and Flora; History; Literature, Philosophy, and Science; Art, Mythology, and Religion; Public Antiquities; Private Antiquities; Criticism and Interpretation; contributed by H. F. Tozer, Canon Tristram, R. D. Hicks, Sir R. Jebb, Dr. Henry Jackson, Dr. Gow, Dr. F. C. Penrose, Prof. E. A. Gardner, Dr. Waldstein, F. R. Earp, A. H. Smith, Prof. Ridgeway, Dr. Archer-Hind, L. Whibley, W. Wyse, R. J. G. Mayor, H. J. Edwards, Prof. Oman, A. B. Cook, Miss Harrison, Dr. Wilkins, Dr. M. R. James, F. Warre Cornish, Lady Evans, Prof. Allbutt, R. A. Neil, P. Giles, E. S. Roberts, J. Rendel Harris, Dr. Verrall, and Dr. Sandys.

A Prospectus will be sent on application.

GLASGOW HERALD.—"It is practically an extremely convenient encyclopædia of what readers of Greek books want, presenting as it does in a handy and concise form what would otherwise require to be sought in many volumes.....The book cannot fail to be serviceable as a book of reference in classical schools."

EDUCATIONAL TIMES.—"The Syndics of the Cambridge University Press are to be warmly congratulated on the conspicuously successful accomplishment of their project of presenting in a single volume such information as is likely to be most useful to the student of Greek literature, apart from the ordinary matters available in histories and grammars."

A HISTORY of CLASSICAL SCHOLARSHIP. From the Sixth

Century B.C. to the End of the Middle Ages. By JOHN EDWIN SANDYS, Litt.D., Fellow and Lecturer of St. John's College, and Public Orator in the University of Cambridge. With Chronological Tables, Facsimiles from Manuscripts, and other Illustrations. Crown 8vo, xxiv-672 pp., 10s. 6d. net.

SPECTATOR.—"As a work of reference his book is of the highest value. The fact that there is no book of a similar character in English, together with the exactitude and extent of the information it contains, make it indispensable to all interested in scholarship."

PROLEGOMENA to the STUDY of GREEK RELIGION. By JANE ELLEN HARRISON, Fellow and Lecturer of Newnham College, Hon. LL.D. Aberdeen Hon. Litt.D. Durham. With 179 Figures. Demy 8vo, 15s. net.

SPECTATOR.—"Miss Harrison's 'Prolegomena' deals with some aspects of Greek religion in a manner worthy of her reputation as one of the foremost scholars who are working in this field."

The TRAGEDIES of SOPHOCLES. Translated into English

Prose by Sir RICHARD C. JEBB, Litt.D., Regius Professor of Greek, and Fellow of Trinity College in the University of Cambridge. Crown 8vo, 5s. net.

GUARDIAN.—"It is a book to be read by all who care to read the best books, and it is in the best sense readable."

The SPEECHES of ISAEUS. With Critical and Explanatory

NOTES. By WILLIAM WYSE, M.A., late Fellow and Lecturer of Trinity College, Cambridge sometime Professor of Greek in the University College, London. Demy 8vo, 18s. net.

PLATO.—The REPUBLIC. Edited, with Critical Notes,

Commentary, and Appendices, by J. ADAM, Litt.D. Demy 8vo, 2 vols. Vol. I. Books I.-V. 15s. net. Vol. II. Books VI.-X. and Indexes, 18s. net.

ATHENÆUM.—"It is not too much to say of Mr. Adam's edition of 'The Republic,' of which the first two volumes lie before us, that it is a notable achievement, worthy of the best traditions of Cambridge scholarship."

The PLATONIC CONCEPTION of IMMORTALITY and its

CONNECTION with the THEORY of IDEAS. An Essay which obtained the Hare Prize, 1903. By R. K. GAYE, M.A., Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge. Crown 8vo, 5s. net.

CAMBRIDGE COMPOSITIONS, GREEK and LATIN. Edited by R. D. ARCHER-HIND, M.A., and R. D. HICKS, M.A., Fellows of Trinity College, Cambridge. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, gilt top, 10s.

GREEK and LATIN COMPOSITIONS. By Richard Shilleto,

M.A. Crown 8vo, 7s. 6d. net.

The POEMS of GAIUS VALERIUS CATULLUS. With an English Translation by FRANCIS WARRE CORNISH, M.A., late Fellow of King's College, Cambridge. Fcap. 4to, white buckram, 7s. 6d. net.

SPECTATOR.—"Mr. Cornish deserves our gratitude for a version which is simple, trustworthy, and scholarly. His small volume sets before us in delightful form an excellent text, faced by a rendering which fully elucidates it."

The WESTERN MANUSCRIPTS in the LIBRARY of

TRINITY COLLEGE, CAMBRIDGE. A Descriptive Catalogue. By M. R. JAMES, Litt.D., F.B.A., Fellow of King's College, Cambridge, Director of the Fitzwilliam Museum. Now ready, Vol. IV., containing Plates, Addenda, Corrigenda, and Index. Royal 8vo, 5s. net.

The WESTERN MANUSCRIPTS in the LIBRARY of

EMMANUEL COLLEGE, CAMBRIDGE. A Descriptive Catalogue. By M. R. JAMES, Litt.D., F.B.A. Royal 8vo, 5s. net.

London: Cambridge University Press Warehouse, Ave Maria Lane. C. F. CLAY, Manager.

MESSRS. LONGMANS &amp; CO.'S LIST.

THE CRISIS OF THE CONFEDERACY:

A History of Gettysburg and the Wilderness.

By CECIL BATTINE,
Captain 15th King's Hussars.With Coloured Frontispiece (Battle Flags of the Confederacy) and 6 Maps. 8vo, 16s. net.

SOUTH AFRICA.

A Glance at Current Conditions and Politics.

By J. H. BALFOUR BROWNE, K.C.

8vo, 7s. 6d. net.

* * This book contains some descriptions of the voyage from England to Cape Town, and notes of the Author's journey from Cape Town to Johannesburg and Pretoria. It deals, too, with some of the social and political questions which are before the public of South Africa at the present time, and in a guarded way refers to some aspects of Johannesburg society. It touches such matters as Chinese Labour, the future form of government, and land settlement.

ADVENTURES AMONG BOOKS.

By ANDREW LANG.

With Photogravure Portrait after Sir W. B.
Richmond, R.A.

Crown 8vo, 6s. 6d. net.

[In a few days.

Contents:—Adventures among Books—Recollections of Robert Louis Stevenson—Rab's Friend—Oliver Wendell Holmes—Mr. Morris's Poems—Mrs. Radcliffe's Novels—A Scottish Romanticist of 1830—The Confessions of Saint Augustine—Smollett—Nathaniel Hawthorne—The Paradise of Poets—Paris and Helen—Enchanted Cigarettes—Stories and Story-telling—The Supernatural in Fiction—An Old Scotch Psychical Researcher—The Boy.

WORKS BY WALTER BAGEHOT.
BIOGRAPHICAL STUDIES. Crown
8vo, 3s. 6d.

LITERARY STUDIES. 3 vols. crown
8vo, 3s. 6d. each.

ECONOMIC STUDIES. Crown 8vo,
3s. 6d.

MORAL DISCIPLINE in the CHRISTIAN CHURCH. Being Lectures delivered during Lent, 1901, in Westminster Abbey. By H.
HENSLEY HENSON, B.D., Canon of Westminster.
Crown 8vo, 5s. net.

RICE PAPERS: Stories and Sketches of Life in China. By H. L. NORRIS. Crown 8vo, 6s.

Prefatory Note.—"These stories possess the merit of not being true, nor are they necessarily founded on fact; they were written during three years' service in China, and their conception served to more or less pleasantly while away many hours. If they afford the reader as many minutes, they will have well fulfilled their purpose. To those whose ideas of a Chinaman are gathered from the good-natured, doddering idiot as he is so often represented on the stage, he is here shown in a different form, however inadequate the portrayal may be."

The BIRTH of PARSIVAL: a
Drama. By R. C. TREVELYAN. Fcap. 8vo, 3s. 6d. net.

"A noble and effective dramatic poem. Mr. Trevelyan has aspired boldly; his theme is an exacting and ambitious one, yet has he happily succeeded."—Daily Chronicle.

MISS BADSWORTH, M.F.H.
A Novel.

By EYRE HUSSEY.

With 6 Illustrations by G. D. ARMOUR.
Crown 8vo, 6s.

* * This work sets forth the troubles of an advanced and philanthropic lady who finds herself confronted by the management of an estate, farm, and pack of foxhounds. There are peculiar conditions which attach to the latter, and these, with the methods adopted to carry out the provisions of her brother's will, form the story.

LONGMANS, GREEN & CO. 39, Paternoster Row,
London, E.C.; New York and Bombay.

J. M. DENT &amp; CO.'S LIST.

DENT'S COMPLETE TOLSTOY.

SPECIAL NOTE.—Not only will Dent's "TOLSTOY" be completed in 12 months, but it will contain everything written by the great Russian Author up to 1905, including a Thought-Index to all the important thoughts and ideas in the Works, together with a Biography, Bibliography and Critical Analysis.

Edited and Translated by Prof. LEO WIENER,

Professor of Slavic Languages and Literature at Harvard University, and Author of 'An Anthology of Russian Literature,' 'Yiddish Literature in the Nineteenth Century,' &c.

FIRST EIGHT VOLUMES NOW READY.

WAR AND PEACE. 1864-1869.

In FOUR VOLUMES. Vols. V., VI., VII., and VIII. of this Edition of Tolstoy.

Vol. I. CHILDHOOD, BOYHOOD, YOUTH.
1852-1857.Vol. III. A MOSCOW ACQUAINTANCE,
The SNOWSTORM, DOMESTIC HAPPINESS, &c.
1856-1859.Vol. II. The COSSACKS, SEVASTOPOL.
&c. 1852-1856.Vol. IV. PEDAGOGICAL ARTICLES, The LINEN MEASURER. 1861-1862.

Large crown 8vo, illustrated, 3s. 6d. per vol. (sold separately).

Also LARGE-PAPER EDITION. Sold in Sets only, 10s. 6d. net per vol.

PRESS NOTICES.

The MORNING POST says:—"An excellent edition, well bound and clearly printed.....Prof. Wiener is an accomplished Russian scholar, and we are grateful for his clear and unpretentiously worded translations of Tolstoy's life-work."

The MANCHESTER COURIER says:—"In their new venture, Messrs. Dent not only pay a deserved tribute to Russia's greatest name; they place the public under a debt of gratitude for so complete, faithful, and artistic a presentation of Tolstoy's works."

The ACADEMY says:—"We are extremely glad to welcome the first two volumes of a new translation of Tolstoy's works.....The volumes at 2s. 6d. net each are extremely cheap and well printed."

The ST. JAMES'S GAZETTE says:—"The translator appears to have produced a good, serviceable translation, devoid of affectation and the obtrusion of Russian words—the latter a rock on which certain of his predecessors have split—and faithful, as he claims, to the author's rugged strength."

PLEASE WRITE FOR A PROSPECTUS.

MEDIÆVAL TOWNS.

NOW READY, NEW VOLUME.

VENICE.

VENICE.†

By THOMAS OKEY. Illustrated by NELLIE ERICHSEN.

PUNCH says:—"The letterpress is contributed by Mr. Thomas Okey, and the illustrations by Miss Nellie Erichsen. Both are admirable.....Indispensable to those about to visit Venice."

The SPECTATOR says:—"He has had no easy task in compressing into the limits of even the larger volumes of this series so great a mass of material, and he has performed it with skill and success."

ASSISI.* By LINA DUFF GORDON.
BRUGES.† By ERNEST GILLIATT-SMITH.
CAIRO.† By STANLEY LANE-POOLE.
CHARTRES.† By CECIL HEADLAM.
CONSTANTINOPLE.* By W. H. HUTTON.
FERRARA.† By ELLA NOYES.
FLORENCE.† By EDMUND G. GARDNER.
LONDON.† By H. B. WHEATLEY.
MOSCOW.* By WIRT GERRARE.
NUREMBERG.* By CECIL HEADLAM.

PERUGIA.* By MARGARET SYMONDS and LINA DUFF GORDON.
PRAGUE.* By Count LUTZOW.
ROME.† By NORWOOD YOUNG.
ROUEN.† By THEODORE A. COOK.
SEVILLE.† By WALTER M. GALLICAN.
SIENA.† By EDMUND G. GARDNER.
TOLEDO.* By HANNAH LYNCH.
VERONA.† By ALETHEA WELLS.

Pocketable, * cloth, 3s. 6d. net; roan, 4s. 6d. net. † Cloth, 4s. 6d. net; roan, 5s. 6d. net.

PROSPECTUSES AND LISTS POST FREE ON APPLICATION.

THE TEMPLE AUTOBIOGRAPHIES.
NEW VOLUME.THE AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF BENJAMIN FRANKLIN.

Edited, with a Sketch of his Later Life, by W. MACDONALD.
Illustrated. Long fcap. 8vo, 3s. 6d. net.

The ATHENÆUM says:—"The latest edition of Benjamin Franklin's Autobiography deserves special regard, for it is now first printed in England from the full and authentic text, the curious history of which is told in a spirited bibliographical preface.....What, however, gives this edition an unusual interest is 'An Historical Account of Franklin's Later Life.'.....It is a condensed history of the period, of over 100 pages, exhibiting the multifarious energies of Franklin in two continents. It is evident that Mr. Macdonald has soaked himself, if the phrase be permissible, in his subject."

THE TEMPLE BIOGRAPHIES.
NEW VOLUME.MAJOR-GENERAL
HARRISON.

By the Rev. C. H. SIMPKINSON.

Illustrated. Crown 8vo, 4s. 6d. net.

The PALL MALL GAZETTE says:—"A useful and vividly interesting volume."

The DAILY NEWS says:—"The book as a whole is a welcome record of high aims and purposes."

The SCOTSMAN says:—"The book itself gives a well-studied and interesting biographical portrait of a revolutionary leader second in importance only to Cromwell."

The WESTMINSTER GAZETTE says:—"A biographical volume of value and importance."

THE PROMETHEUS BOUND OF ÆSCHYLUS.

Greek Text with Translation on opposite Pages.

Edited and Translated by JANET CASE.

Cloth, 1s. net; paste grain, 1s. 6d. net.

THIS IS THE FIRST VOLUME IN THE CLASSICAL SECTION OF "THE TEMPLE DRAMATISTS."

Write for Specimen Copy of the TEMPLE CLASSICS MAGAZINE, and List of the TEMPLE CLASSICS.

London: J. M. DENT &amp; CO. 29 and 30, Bedford Street, W.C.

METHUEN'S STANDARD LIBRARY.

MESSRS. METHUEN will commence on MARCH 16 the publication of the most interesting Series which they have yet attempted. On that day the First Six Volumes of METHUEN'S STANDARD LIBRARY will be issued. This Series is an attempt to place the best books of all nations, and particularly of the Anglo-Saxon race, within the reach of every reader. All the great masters will be represented. Mr. Sidney Lee is the General Editor, and he contributes a Note to each book. The price of an ordinary Volume of this remarkable Series is SIXPENCE net in paper. Thus you may obtain SENSE and SENSIBILITY, The PILGRIM'S PROGRESS, FIVE PLAYS of SHAKESPEARE, PARADISE LOST, or The MEDITATIONS OF MARCUS AURELIUS for Sixpence each. Very long books are issued in Double Volumes at One Shilling net each. Thus the great work of Edward Gibbon will be issued in Seven Double Volumes, at One Shilling net each, and it is the finest Edition in existence, containing all the extra Notes by Prof. Bury. Kindly ask your Bookseller or Newsagent to obtain for you the First Six Volumes of METHUEN'S STANDARD LIBRARY, and you will have for 3s. 6d. the beginnings of a magnificent library. The books are beautifully printed on good paper. They are also issued in a handsome cloth binding at One Shilling net. Please ask for a Prospectus.

NOTE.—The Title of this Series has been changed from Methuen's Universal Library to METHUEN'S STANDARD LIBRARY.

MINIATURES. By DUDLEY HEATH. With 9 Plates in Colour, 15 in Collotype, and 15 in Photogravure. Wide royal 8vo, 25s. net. [The Connoisseur's Library.]

This book is a history of the Art of Miniature Painting from its earliest origin and development in the Illuminated Manuscript under Byzantine, Carolingian, Celtic, and Saxon influences, and in the French, Flemish, and Italian Schools of the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries, showing the growth of realistic expression in the Miniature, and tracing its history as an independent art of portraiture "in little" down to the present day.

GREAT ZIMBABWE. By R. N. HALL, part Author of 'The Ancient Ruins of Rhodesia.' With numerous Plans and Illustrations. Royal 8vo, 21s. net.

ENGLAND UNDER the STUARTS. By G. M. TREVELYAN, Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge, Author of 'The Age of Wyclif.' With Maps and Plans. Demy 8vo, 10s. 6d. net.

This is the Fifth Volume, though the first published, of the Six Volumes of a New HISTORY of ENGLAND (Edited by Prof. C. W. C. OMAN), from the earliest times down to the year 1815.

WILLIAM BODHAM DONNE and his FRIENDS.

Edited by Mrs. BARHAM JOHNSON. With Illustrations. Demy 8vo, 10s. 6d. net. W. B. Donne, cousin of the poet Cowper, was a man of letters; successively Librarian at the London Library, and Licensor of Plays; better known as the friend of Edward Fitzgerald, Mrs. Kemble, John Mitchell Kemble, &c., letters from whom are included in this correspondence; besides others written to Archbishop Trench, Dean Blakesley, &c.

The TRAGEDIES of the CÆSARS. By S. BARING-GOULD. With numerous Illustrations from Busts, Gems, Cameos, &c. Fifth and Cheaper Edition. Royal 8vo, 10s. 6d. net.

MANCHURIA. By ALEXANDER HOSIE. With Illustrations and a Map. A Cheaper Edition. Demy 8vo, 7s. 6d. net.

The POEMS of JOHN KEATS. With an Introduction and Notes by E. De SELINCOURT, M.A. With a Portrait in Photogravure. Demy 8vo, 7s. 6d. net.

A SHORT HISTORY of the BRITISH in INDIA. By A. D. INNES, M.A. With Maps and Plans. A Cheaper Edition. Crown 8vo, 6s.

SHRINES of BRITISH SAINTS. By J. C. WALL. With numerous Illustrations and Plans. Demy 8vo, 7s. 6d. net. [The Antiquary's Books.]

OLD GORGON GRAHAM. Second Edition. Crown 8vo, 6s. This is a pendant to Mr. Lorimer's 'Letters from a Self-made Merchant,' a book which has had, both here and in America, an almost unprecedented success. In this book the father tells the story of his own rise with the same inimitable wit and racy wisdom.

A MODERN CAMPAIGN; or, War and Wireless Telegraphy in the Far East. By DAVID FRASER, the Times Special Correspondent. Illustrated. Crown 8vo, 6s.

JEREMY BENTHAM. By C. M. ATKINSON. Demy 8vo, 5s. net.

SICILY. By DOUGLAS SLADEN. With 334 Illustrations. Crown 8vo, 5s. net.

DE PROFUNDIS. By OSCAR WILDE. Third Edition. Crown 8vo, 5s. net.

LIFE'S QUESTIONINGS. By W. R. PATTERSON (Benjamin Swift). Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d. net. This Edition is limited to 750 Copies, and will not be Reprinted.

The form of the book is unusual, at least in English literature. It is a criticism of Life done in the manner of the French epigrammatists.

A HISTORY of RUSSIA from PETER the GREAT to ALEXANDER II. By W. R. MORFILL, Oriel College, Oxford. With Maps and Plans. A Cheaper Edition, crown 8vo, 3s. 6d.

The MAN in the PULPIT. By JAMES DOUGLAS. Crown 8vo, 2s. 6d. net.

The GOLDEN POMP. A Procession of English Lyrics. Arranged by A. T. QUILLER COUCH. Second and Cheaper Edition. Crown 8vo, 2s. 6d. net. [Half-Crown Library.]

MILLET. By NETTA PEACOCK. With 30 Illustrations. Demy 16mo, 2s. 6d. net. [Little Books on Art.]

The BREWING INDUSTRY. By JULIAN L. BAKER, F.I.C. F.C.S. Illustrated. Crown 8vo, 2s. 6d. [Books on Business.]

TIMON of ATHENS. — TROILUS and CRESSIDA. By WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE. Edited, with Introduction and Notes, by W. J. CRAIG. Pott 16mo, leather, 1s. net each. [Little Quarto Shakespeare.]

ENGLAND'S RUIN. Discussed in Sixteen Letters to the Right Honourable Joseph Chamberlain, M.P. By A. M. S. METHUEN. Third Edition. Crown 8vo, 3d. net.

Kindly write to Messrs. METHUEN for particulars of their Two New Series, "METHUEN'S HALF-CROWN LIBRARY" and

"METHUEN'S SHILLING NOVELS."

METHUEN & CO. 36, Essex Street, Strand, W.C.

NEW NOVELS.

THE GOLDEN BOWL. By HENRY JAMES. Second Edition. Crown 8vo, 6s.

"Nothing more exquisitely and pathetically beautiful than the character of Maggie, the heroically patient, persistent, developed little wife and daughter, is to be found in the gallery of modern fiction."—Standard.

"It is impressively clever. The mind out of which this work is spun is of astonishing capacity and insight."—Daily Mail.

"To give any idea of the infinite subtlety and delicacy with which the author narrates his story is beyond the strength of mortal reviewer."—Daily Chronicle.

"The novel is masterly. The three leading women are differentiated with the nicest skill; each is living and persuasive."—Academy.

The SECRET WOMAN. By EDEN PHILLPOTTS. Fourth Edition. Crown 8vo, 6s.

"Never before has he attempted so great and impressive a tragedy. There is something simple and elemental in its construction; it is in its way as merciless as 'King Lear.' The people concerned are few in number, which makes the tragedy all the more vivid."—Daily Telegraph.

"Unquestionably a work of exalted imagination. The author has never risen so high."—Daily Chronicle.

"'The Secret Woman' is the author's best story.....a fine and powerful piece of work."—Daily News.

The DRYAD. By JUSTIN HUNTLY M'CARTHY, Author of 'If I were King.' Illustrated. Crown 8vo, 6s.

MRS. GALER'S BUSINESS. By W. PETT RIDGE. Crown 8vo, 6s.

"The story is told with charming geniality and unfailing humour, and the author's sympathy is large and sincere."—Morning Leader.

The CASTLE of the SHADOWS. By Mrs. C. N. WILLIAMSON, co-Author of 'The Lightning Conductor.' Illustrated. Crown 8vo, 6s.

"The story is narrated with all Mrs. Williamson's picturesqueness and skill."—Times.

"The author gives a picturesque and vivid description of life on a convict settlement, and the horrors associated with it. A strong love element underlies the whole story. It is as romantic as it is quaint and remarkable."—Scotsman.

BARHAM of BELTANA. By W. E. NORRIS. Crown 8vo, 6s.

The VALLEY of the SHADOW. By WILLIAM LE QUEUX. With 2 Illustrations by A. H. BUCKLAND. Crown 8vo, 6s.

"The tale is straightforward and absorbing. Mr. Le Queux is the best living author of exciting novels."—Morning Leader.

The SYSTEM. By PERCY WHITE, Author of 'The West End,' &c. Third Edition. Crown 8vo, 6s.

"Very life-like and intensely readable."—Daily Mail.

"Mr. White's good things are not only excellently said, but also, it seems to us, tolerably true. He has never been happier in his exposure of the taste of the age in which we live."—Athenæum.

"The System' is in Mr. White's best manner and contains both thought and pleasures admirably mixed."—Morning Leader.

"Mr. White is not less interesting than usual, and his firm touch, his quiet humour and criticism, his assured methods are all here."—Standard.

"The novel is deeply interesting and excessively clever."—Academy.

"A clever and interesting book. It is well written; its sketches of character are vivid and ably contrasted."—Scotsman.

The GATE of the DESERT. By JOHN OXENHAM, Author of 'Barbe de Grand Bayou.' With a Frontispiece. Second Edition. Crown 8vo, 6s.

"The heroine is sublime, but the most individual person is the Jew."—Athenæum.

"Full of incident, adventure, humour, and human interest."—St. James's Gazette.

"There is not a dull page in the book. The accounts of the shipwreck and the storm in the desert are in the author's best style."—Daily News.

HIS ISLAND PRINCESS. By W. CLARK RUSSELL. Illustrated. Crown 8vo, 6s.

"Devised with unusual invention."—Daily Mail.

"Interesting, surprising, and exciting."—Morning Leader.

"There is abundant life and colour and movement, sympathy and tragedy, and plenty of incident."—St. James's Gazette.

The TEMPESTUOUS PETTICOAT. By ROBERT BARR, Author of 'The Countess Tekla,' &c. Illustrated. Second Edition. Crown 8vo, 6s.

"A bright and amusing story and engrossing."—Daily Mail.

"Entertaining and amusing to a high degree."—Scotsman.

HEART of MY HEART. By ELLIS MEREDITH. Crown 8vo, 6s.

"Curious, unique, informing, and obviously the outcome of experience."—Standard.

"Delicate fancy, descriptive vigour, and uplifting moral."—Glasgow Herald.

"A book of unusual merit, written with genuine literary charm and distinction."—Daily Mail.

MADAME BUTTERFLY. By J. LUTHER LONG, co-Author of 'The Darling of the Gods.' Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d.

"All the stories are rendered with sympathy and grace and knowledge."—Daily Mail.

"A work of singular finish and distinction."—Morning Leader.

SMITH, ELDER & CO.'S
LIST.

MRS. HUMPHRY WARD'S
NEW NOVEL.

NOTICE.—The FIRST IM-PRESSION of

THE MARRIAGE OF WILLIAM ASHE,

by Mrs. HUMPHRY WARD, was sold out before publication. A SECOND IMPRESSION will be ready immediately. With Illustrations by ALBERT STERNER.
Crown 8vo, 6s.

DAILY TELEGRAPH.—“What is the main quality in ‘The Marriage of William Ashe’ which arrests and retains throughout our attention? It is the extraordinarily vivid portraiture which is given us of the heroine Lady Kitty. She is the most sparkling bit of wilful, wayward womanhood in all Mrs. Ward’s portrait gallery.”

DAILY NEWS.—“This is probably the best book which Mrs. Humphry Ward has yet produced.
.....Lady Kitty is a real human being, and leaves a distinct impression of her character.”

PETER'S MOTHER.

By Mrs. HENRY DE LA PASTURE,
Author of ‘Deborah of Tod’s,’ &c.
THIRD IMPRESSION READY IMMEDIATELY.
Crown 8vo, 6s.

PUNCH.—“Much is expected from the author of ‘Deborah of Tod’s.’ My Baronite finds it here amply forthcoming. Whilst the tale is interesting, the pages are alive with human character.”

MANCHESTER GUARDIAN.—“The success of the story—and of its success there can be no doubt—is due to the writer’s knowledge of the human heart, to her imaginative sympathy, to her sense of the tears and laughter that lie in human things.”

On MARCH 22, with 20 Full-Page Illustrations,
demy 8vo, 12s. 6d. net.

THE STORY OF AN INDIAN UPLAND.

By F. B. BRADLEY-BIRT, F.R.G.S. I.C.S.
With an Introduction
by the Hon. H. H. RISLEY, C.S.I. C.I.E.,
Home Secretary to the Government of India.

A VAGRANT ENGLISHWOMAN.

By CATHERINE I. DODD.
Crown 8vo, 6s. [On March 22.

London:
SMITH, ELDER & CO. 15, Waterloo Place.

MR. HEINEMANN'S NEW BOOKS.

THROUGH ISLE AND EMPIRE.

By the Vicomte R. D'HUMIÈRES. With a Prefatory Letter by RUDYARD KIPLING. 6s.
The observations and reflections of a witty and travelled Frenchman, who records his impressions of many visits to England, Gibraltar, Egypt, and India.

“A deeply interesting book of travel, concerned with an empire at home and abroad.....
The book itself is compact of vivid observation, keen reasoning, graphic description, and live interest.....It should be read and considered by all thinking subjects of the empire it describes.”—Standard.

SECOND IMPRESSION.

FRENCH PROFILES.

Studies in the Literature of France.

By EDMUND GOSSE. Buckram, 7s. 6d.

“Every page of this book may be read with interest and profit. The opening essay on Vigny is the best appreciation of his genius which has yet appeared in English.”

Morning Post.

THE POETICAL WORKS OF HEINE.

Vol. III. GERMANY—ROMANCERO (Books I. and II.). 5s.

Translated by MARGARET ARMOUR.

ALREADY PUBLISHED, 5s. each.

Vol. I. The BOOK of SONGS. Vol. II. NEW POEMS, and ATTA TROLL.

A BELLE OF THE FIFTIES.

Memoirs of Mrs. Clay, of Alabama, covering Social and Political Life in Washington and the South, 1853–66. Edited by ADA STERLING. With Portraits. 10s. 6d. net.

THE COUNTRY DAY BY DAY.

By E. KAY ROBINSON, Author of ‘To-Day with Nature.’ With 24 Illustrations. 6s.

“The best of writers on nature.”—Athenæum.

“An exquisite calendar of nature.”—Daily Mail.

NEW SIX-SHILLING NOVELS.

THE PRODIGAL SON.

By HALL CAINE.

“In truth a notable novel, and a work that may certainly rank with the best of recent fiction.”—Westminster Gazette.

AN ACT IN A BACKWATER.

By E. F. BENSON.

[Eighth Thousand.

The author tells of love and courtship in a quiet cathedral town. Readers of ‘The Challoners’ will not be disappointed in this witty and amusing book.

AMANDA OF THE MILL.

By MARIE VAN VORST.

This story deals with the conditions under which mill girls work, and will be sure to create discussion. The author knows her subject well, and has written a most interesting and powerful book.

CUT LAURELS.

By M. HAMILTON.

“‘Cut Laurels’ will take a place among the best novels of the past twelve months. It is not often that readers get a novel nowadays on such original lines.”—Daily Telegraph.

NANCY STAIR.

By ELINOR M. LANE.

A novel after Stevenson’s own heart, told with much of his grace and charm.
“The portrait” (of Nancy), says the Academy, “is one that Stevenson might have been proud to draw.”

London: WM. HEINEMANN, 21, Bedford Street, W.C.

HODDER & STOUGHTON'S PUBLICATIONS.

A NEW VOLUME OF "LITERARY LIVES."

Edited by W. ROBERTSON NICOLL.

With Photogravure Frontispiece and numerous Illustrations. 3s. 6d.

COVENTRY PATMORE.

By EDMUND GOSSE.

"This is an excellent volume of an excellent series. Mr. Gosse has something to say of real interest, and he says it with grace and charm of style. It forms a study of a personality of singular fascination."—Daily News.

Volumes previously published.

1. JOHN BUNYAN. By the Author of 'Mark Rutherford.'
2. MATTHEW ARNOLD. By G. W. E. Russell. Second Edition.
3. NEWMAN. By William Barry. Second Edition. Illustrated, 3s. 6d. each.

NEW NOVEL BY "Q."

FIRST EDITION EXHAUSTED BEFORE PUBLICATION.

SECOND EDITION NEARLY READY. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

SHINING FERRY.

By "Q" (A. T. QUILLER COUCH).

"It is a delightful book, as all Mr. Couch's books are—fragrant with the breath of the sea, bright with the sunshine of his own fine temper."—Daily News.

GEORGE BARR McCUTCHEON'S NEW NOVEL.

With Illustrations, crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

BEVERLY OF GRAUSTARK.

By GEORGE BARR McCUTCHEON, Author of 'Graustark,' &c.

THE MOST POPULAR BOOK IN AMERICA.

The Critics say it is "Fascinating, engrossing, and picturesque," "Charming," "Thoroughly enjoyable," "Admirable."

STEWART EDWARD WHITE'S NEW BOOK.

With Illustrations, crown 8vo, cloth, 7s. 6d.

THE MOUNTAINS.

By STEWART EDWARD WHITE, Author of 'The Silent Places,' &c.

"This readable and delightful book."—Scotsman.

"Is interesting and racy from cover to cover."—King.

"Will be read with joy by every true lover of the mountains."—Outlook.

FOURTH EDITION. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

THE DOWNFALL OF RUSSIA.

By HUGO GANZ.

"This is an excellent volume, greatly to be commended to the general reader. The author has produced a series of most vivid pictures, and the result is more like Russia than anything we have seen."—Athenæum.

READY SHORTLY. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

THE WHITE TERROR AND THE RED.

A NOVEL OF REVOLUTIONARY RUSSIA.

By ABRAHAM CAHAN.

Mr. Cahan's inside knowledge of the Nihilist conspiracies, his acquaintance at first hand with the scenes and the victims of the riots, and his literary grasp on character, all are evident in 'The White Terror and the Red.' It is a novel of the most sensational episodes treated with absolute realism, and gives an accurate picture of Russia in the throes of two terrorisms, the above-ground as well as the underground Russia, the Russian official, the Russian political dreamer, the moujik, the soldier, the Jew, all exactly as they are.

THE FIRST ILLUSTRATED HISTORY OF WOMEN PAINTERS OF THE WORLD.

'WOMEN PAINTERS OF THE WORLD,' the New Volume in the now famous "ART AND LIFE LIBRARY," Edited by WALTER SHAW SPARROW. Dedicated by Gracious Permission to Her Majesty Queen Alexandra, is even more luxurious than its predecessors, 'The British Home of To-Day' and 'The Gospels in Art.' It is published in four different styles of binding, at respectively 5s. net, 7s. 6d. net, 10s. 6d. net, 21s. net, and contains, in addition to the text, 6 Rembrandt Photogravures, 7 Pictures in Colour Facsimile, 34 Plates in Monochrome, 4 Duplex Plates, and more than 280 Illustrations in Half-Tone, representing the work of over 200 Lady Artists.

Complete Prospectus on application.

PROF. W. M. RAMSAY.

With Plates and Illustrations. 8vo, cloth, 12s.

THE LETTERS TO THE SEVEN CHURCHES OF ASIA,

And their Place in the Plan of the Apocalypse.

By W. M. RAMSAY, D.C.L. Litt.D. LL.D.,

Professor of Humanity in the University of Aberdeen, Author of 'The Church in the Roman Empire,' &c.

"It presents in a connected and permanent form the mature convictions of our first living authority upon the affairs of Asia Minor at the time when the Apocalypse was written. Whatever can be done by expert knowledge to throw light upon the conditions under which Christianity began its course in the Asian cities has been done here with a lavish hand."—Guardian.

REV. PROF. GEORGE ADAM SMITH.

Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

THE FORGIVENESS OF SINS,

And other Sermons.

By the Rev. Prof. GEORGE ADAM SMITH, D.D. LL.D.,
Author of 'The Historical Geography of the Holy Land,' &c.

"To a beauty of diction Dr. Smith adds a keen, subtle analysis of human nature, a profound acquaintance with Holy Scripture, and a vivid apprehension of the pressure of modern social and religious problems."—Daily News.

REV. W. J. DAWSON.

Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

THE EVANGELISTIC NOTE.

By the Rev. W. J. DAWSON, Author of 'The Threshold of Manhood,' &c.

"It bears on its every line the stamp of reality. They are stirring discourses.....The entire volume is deeply interesting, full of the note of a new and great time opening for both Church and world."—Christian World.

FIFTH THOUSAND, 384 pp. crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

DO WE BELIEVE?

A Record of the great Correspondence in the 'Daily Telegraph.'

Edited by W. L. COURTNEY, M.A. LL.D.

Among the Contributors to the Discussion are the ARCHBISHOP of CANTERBURY, the BISHOP of LONDON, the DEAN of WESTMINSTER, and many leading Divines of all Creeds and Denominations.

REV. HERBERT WINDROSS.

Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

THE LIFE VICTORIOUS;

Or, Christian Character and Conduct.

By the Rev. HERBERT WINDROSS.

THE LIFE OF MARTIN J. HALL.

Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

"IN FULL AND GLAD SURRENDER."

The Life and Work of Martin J. Hall, C.M.S. Missionary in Uganda.

By HIS SISTER.

With a Preface by the Lord Bishop of Durham. With Illustrations.

DR. E. C. DARGAN.

Crown 8vo, cloth, 7s. 6d.

A HISTORY OF PREACHING.

From the Apostolic Fathers to the Great Reformers, A.D. 70-1572.

By EDWIN C. DARGAN, D.D. LL.D.

REV. JOSEPH NEWTON.

Crown 8vo, cloth, 5s.

THE PROBLEM OF PERSONALITY.

By the Rev. JOSEPH NEWTON.

SECOND EDITION, WITH A NEW INTRODUCTORY CHAPTER AND A BIBLIOGRAPHY.

8vo, cloth, with Maps, 12s.

A SHORT HISTORY OF ANCIENT PEOPLES.

By ROBINSON SOUTTAR, M.A. D.C.L.

With an Introduction by the Rev. A. H. SAYCE, M.A. D.D., Professor of Assyriology at Oxford.

DR. A. T. SCHOFIELD'S NEW BOOK.

Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

NERVES IN ORDER;

Or, the Maintenance of Health.

By A. T. SCHOFIELD, M.D.

Uniform with 'Nerves in Disorder.'

MACMILLAN & CO.'S LIST.

VOL. IV. READY NEXT TUESDAY. DIARY & LETTERS OF MADAME D'ARBLAY

(1778-1840). As Edited by her Niece, CHARLOTTE BARRETT. With Preface and Notes by AUSTIN DOBSON. With Photogravure Portraits and other Sketches. In 6 vols. Vol. I., 1778 to June, 1781. Vol. II., 1781-86. Vol. III., August, 1786, to June, 1788. Vol. IV., July, 1788, to July, 1791. 8vo, 10s. 6d. net each.

TWELVE ENGLISH STATESMEN. CONCLUDING VOLUME.

CHATHAM.

By FREDERIC HARRISON. Crown 8vo, 2s. 6d.

DAILY CHRONICLE.—"Mr. Harrison's brilliant powers of political interpretation have never been more effectively employed than in this, the latest of the series of 'Twelve English Statesmen.'"

ENGLISH MEN OF LETTERS.—New Series.

SYDNEY SMITH.

By GEORGE W. E. RUSSELL. Crown 8vo, gilt top, flat back, 2s. net.

BY SIR ARCHIBALD GEIKIE. LANDSCAPE IN HISTORY, And other Essays.

By Sir ARCHIBALD GEIKIE, D.C.L. F.R.S. 8vo, 8s. 6d. net.

ACADEMY and LITERATURE.—"There are few subjects of more speculative interest than the connexion which exists between man and his physical surroundings. .... Sir Archibald Geikie in these thoughtful essays has done something towards elucidating the dependence of man's intellectual achievement on his physical environment."

THE BRITISH ARMY (1783-1802).

Four Lectures delivered at the Staff College and Cavalry School. By the Hon. J. W. FORTESCUE, Author of 'A History of the British Army.' With Maps. 8vo, 4s. 6d. net. [Tuesday.]

CLASSICAL LIBRARY.—New Vol.

THE MYTHS OF PLATO.

Translated, with Introductory and other Observations, by J. A. STEWART, M.A., Student and Tutor of Christ Church and White's Professor of Moral Philosophy in the University of Oxford. 8vo, 14s. net.

SECOND EDITION JUST PUBLISHED.

ROMAN SOCIETY,

From Nero to Marcus Aurelius.

By Prof. SAMUEL DILL, M.A. Litt.D. LL.D. 8vo, 15s. net. MORNING POST.—"The book is one of the best we have read for a long time."

MACMILLAN'S GUIDE-BOOKS. THE EASTERN MEDITERRANEAN,

including GREECE and the GREEK ISLANDS, CONSTANTINOPLE, SMYRNA, EPHESUS, &c. Second Edition. With 27 Maps and Plans. 9s. net.

ITALY AND SICILY.

With 19 Maps and 36 Plans. Fifth Edition. 10s. net.

MACMILLAN'S NEW NOVELS.

Crown 8vo, 6s. each.

GERTRUDE ATHERTON.

THE BELL IN THE FOG,
And other Stories.

ARTHUR TRESIDDER SHEPPARD THE RED CRAVAT.

CYRUS T. BRADY.

THE TWO CAPTAINS.

A Romance of Bonaparte and Nelson.

L. H. HAMMOND.

THE MASTER-WORD.

A Story of the South of To-day.

MACMILLAN & CO., LIMITED, London.

HURST & BLACKETT'S NEW LIST.

In 2 vols. royal 8vo, with over 250 beautiful Illustrations and 7 Maps, 2l. 2s. net.

L H A S A.

An Account of the Country and People of Central Tibet, and of the Progress of the Mission sent there by the English Government in the Year 1903-4.

Written, with the help of all the Principal Persons of the Mission,

By PERCEVAL LANDON,
Special Correspondent of the Times.

With an Introduction by

Col. Sir FRANCIS YOUNGHUSBAND,
K.C.I.E.

An Illustrated Prospectus sent free on application.

"Our correspondent has had such opportunities of studying the internal politics of Tibet as perhaps no European ever before obtained."—Times (leader).

"The climax of the narrative of course is the approach to Lhasa, and Mr. Landon does not miss his opportunity. In a few pages, now eloquent, now rhetorical, he describes his first sight of the city, which so few strangers had ever beheld, and which for centuries remained a place of dreams. Of the illustrations it is impossible to speak too highly, and we know not where the art of photography has been carried to a loftier pitch of excellence."—Daily Mail.

In 1 vol., medium 8vo, illustrated by over 250 Reproductions of Photographs taken especially for this Work, 4 Coloured Plates from Paintings, and 3 Maps, 18s. net.

ANTARCTICA.

Two Years amongst the Ice of the South Pole.

By Dr. OTTO NORDENSKJOLD.

"The authors have as good a story to tell as any polar explorer since Nansen, and they have told it with spirit and enthusiasm."—Times.

"The story which is graphically told in this profusely illustrated volume adds an eloquent chapter to the long record of daring enterprise beyond the sea undertaken for a definite useful purpose."—Daily Chronicle.

A BOOK OF ANECDOTE ILLUSTRATING LITERARY LIFE IN LONDON.

In 1 vol. large crown 8vo, with 16 Portrait Sketches, 6s. net.

TWENTY YEARS AGO.

By EDMUND DOWNEY,

Author of 'Through Green Glasses.'

"The anecdotes are all fresh goods, and in the humour of them there is an unmistakable taste of reality which adds immensely to the flavour."—St. James's Gazette.

"Mr. Downey has an ample collection of good stories, and knows how to tell them well."—World.

In 1 vol. crown 8vo, 6s.

A GENDARME OF THE KING.

Being the Experiences of the Laird of Lindourie with the Great Frederick in the Seven Years' War.

By PHILIP L. STEVENSON.

"Narrated with plenty of movement and with a graphic picture of Frederick himself."—Times.

"Major Stevenson has managed to conjure up the real spirit of life in Frederick's Courts and camps."—Pall Mall Gazette.

NEW EDITION, REVISED AND ENLARGED.

In 1 vol. demy 8vo, illustrated with numerous Reproductions from Photographs and Drawings, 12s. net.

ILLUSTRATED HORSEBREAK- ING. By Capt. M. H. HAYES, Author of 'Points of the Horse,' 'Veterinary Notes,' &c.

In 1 vol. large crown 8vo, with Illustrations, 6s.

The CHILD SLAVES of BRITAIN.

By ROBERT SHERRARD, Author of 'The White Slaves of England,' &c.

London: HURST & BLACKETT, LIMITED,
182, High Holborn, W.C.

WELLS GARDNER, DARTON & CO.'S LIST.

THE CREED OF THE CHRISTIAN.

By the Right Rev. CHARLES GORE, D.D.,
Bishop of Birmingham.
8vo, paper, 6d. net.

In consequence of several requests for a cheap edition of this popular work, the Publishers have decided to issue a Limited Edition of 50,000 copies.

THE OLD TESTAMENT AND ITS MESSAGES.

By the Rev. EDGAR C. F. GIBSON, D.D.,
Bishop Designate of Gloucester.
Crown 8vo, cloth boards, 3s. 6d.

"Dr. Gibson has studied the Old Testament, and his thoughts are new as well as true. If the publisher will give us more of this we shall be thankful."—Expository Times.

WHY CHRISTIANITY IS REASONABLE.

By the Rev. WALTER J. CAREY, M.A.

With Introduction by Canon SCOTT HOLLAND.

Cloth, 1s. net; paper, 6d. net. [Second Edition.]
"The frank output of a living man of his own vital creed."—Guardian. "Very valuable."—School Guardian.

WAS JESUS CHRIST DIVINE?

An Enquiry into the Credibility of the Incarnation.

By the Rev. J. HOWARD B. MASTERMAN, M.A.

Professor of History in the University of Birmingham.

Cloth, 1s. 3d. net; paper, 9d. net. [Second Edition.]
"One of the best answers."—Expository Times.
"A masterly handling of the subject.....eminently lucid and clear."—Western Morning News.

THE STORY OF THE BEGINNING.

Genesis in the Light of recent Research.

By Mrs. FREDERICK GREEN.

With Introduction by the Right Rev. H. E. RYLE, D.D., Bishop of Winchester.

Cloth, 1s. 3d. net; paper, 9d. net. [Nearly ready.]
This will be found a most valuable help to parents and teachers at the present time.

FAITH OF CHURCH AND NATION.

By the Right Rev. A. F. WINNINGTON INGRAM,
D.D., Bishop of London.

Cloth, 3s. 6d. [Just published.]

SOME BIBLE CHARACTERS AND OTHER ADDRESSES.

By the late Canon TWELLS.

Cloth, 3s. 6d. [In a few days.]

The first series, 'Sermons on Hymns and other Subjects,' now in its Third Edition, was so well received that we have ventured to publish another volume by this thoughtful preacher.

THE DESTINY OF MAN.

By the Rev. J. H. LESTER, M.A.,

Prebendary and Canon non-residentary of Lichfield.

Cloth, 3s. net.

"Lucid, reasonable, and well written."—Pall Mall Gazette.

HOW TO PREACH.

A Manual for Students.

By the Rev. E. TYRRELL GREEN, M.A.,
Lecturer in Theology and Hebrew, St. David's College, Lampeter.

Cloth boards, 2s. net. [Just out.]

London:

WELLS GARDNER, DARTON & CO., LIMITED.

SATURDAY, MARCH 11, 1905.

CONTENTS.

|  | PAGE    |
|--|---------|
| RECENT KEATS LITERATURE ... ..   | 297     |
| WITH THE RUSSIANS IN PEACE AND WAR ... ..  | 298     |
| THE CRISIS OF THE CONFEDERACY ... ..   | 299     |
| THE EASTERN ROMAN EMPIRE ... ..  | 301     |
| A SYSTEM OF METAPHYSICS ... ..   | 302     |
| NEW NOVELS (Peter's Mother; Fata Morgana; TheClausman; The Marble City; Esclave) ... ..  | 303-304 |
| BIBLIOGRAPHY ... ..  | 304     |
| OUR LIBRARY TABLE (South Africa; The Burden ofthe Balkans; The Story of Venice; Oscar Wilde inFrench; Through Isle and Empire; The Wisdomof the Desert; General History of the World;Nature and Sport in Britain; The Life and Timesof St. Boniface; Kolonialpolitik; Two Reprints;Report of the Booksellers' Provident Institution) | 305-307 |
| LIST OF NEW BOOKS ... ..   | 307     |
| LADY FERGUSON; MISTAKES IN PEERAGES; THESPRING PUBLISHING SEASON ... ..  | 308-309 |
| LITERARY GOSSIP ... ..   | 309     |
| SCIENCE—MEDICAL BOOKS; THE N RAYS; THEPHILIPPINE ISLANDS; SOCIETIES; MEETINGS NEXTWEEK; GOSSIP ... ..  | 310-312 |
| FINE ARTS—CIMA DA CONEGLIANO; PORTRAITS OFMARY, QUEEN OF SCOTS; SALES; GOSSIP ... ..   | 312-313 |
| MUSIC—LONDON SYMPHONY CONCERT; MISS FANNYDAVIES'S ORCHESTRAL CONCERT; GOSSIP; PER-FORMANCES NEXT WEEK ... ..   | 314-315 |
| DRAMA—THE ORESTEAN TRILOGY OF ÆSCHYLUS;DIE WILDENTHE; AGATHA; THE CLOUDS ATOXFORD; GOSSIP ... ..   | 315-316 |

LITERATURE

RECENT KEATS LITERATURE.

The Poems of John Keats. 2 vols. (Bell & Sons.)

Hyperion. A Facsimile of Keats's Autograph Manuscript, with a Transliteration of the Manuscript of 'The Fall of Hyperion, a Dream.' With Introduction and Notes by Ernest de Sélincourt. (Oxford, Clarendon Press.)

Recently Discovered Keats MSS. Note by the same in Notes and Queries, February 4th.

THE two quarto volumes named at the head of this notice do not make a wide appeal. They belong to an elaborate series called the "Chiswick Quartos," a series of reprints distinguished for the costliness of their material production. A certificate sets forth that 350 copies "have been printed for sale in Great Britain, and twenty copies for presentation," so that no Irish need apply, unless indeed the small demand in the Green Isle is to be met out of the presentation copies or supplied via the United States. A preliminary "note" gives the information that the volumes have been "edited by Mr. George Sampson"; that 'Otho the Great' and 'The Cap and Bells' have been "deliberately omitted," the one as a "futile drama," the other as "extremely feeble"; and that "as most reprints give the order of Keats's own three volumes with Lord Houghton's posthumous appended, some interest may be found in the grouping of pieces adopted in the present issue."

So far as the grouping is concerned, we cannot say that the book commends itself to us. In vol. i. first come fifty-nine of Keats's sixty-one extant sonnets; then a group of "Odes &c."; then 'Endymion.' Vol. ii. contains "Early, Fugitive, and Posthumous Poems," of each of which sorts there are some among the sonnets and odes; then 'Songs and Ballads,' then 'Lamia,' 'Isa-bella,' 'The Eve of St. Agnes,' 'The Eve of St. Mark,' 'Hyperion,' and 'Hyperion, a Vision.' Each group is unchronological. For those who do not care about textual niceties, and are not annoyed with an editor who, for example, represents Keats as writing in 'Hyperion' the line—

And diamond-paved lustrous long arcades, and altering it in the "vision" to

And diamond-paned lustrous long arcades;

for those who only want Keats's best things printed very legibly on hand-made paper with red shoulder-notes instead of black headlines, and the paging at the bottom instead of the top, these two sumptuous volumes will be precious both for their beauty and for their scarcity; and the book has also this to recommend it, that Hilton's life size oil picture in the National Portrait Gallery is so admirably reproduced as a frontispiece that it really has a certain fascination, and probably represents an aspect of Keats's appearance, though not a characteristic one.

The 'Hyperion' book issued from the Clarendon Press is full of novel interest. It is, of course, a weariness to the flesh to handle and heave, to get out, turn over, and put away again, a volume bound in leather looking like chocolate and smelling like new boots, measuring as it lies open some 475 square inches; but if the book was to exist at all, it had to measure at least 280 of those inches in order to include a facsimile of Keats's manuscript. That it ought to exist we have no doubt; nor do we think there is any question that in this evidence of his qualifications for dealing with Keats's work Mr. de Sélincourt has won his spurs and put within the reach of fellow-students to whom the manuscripts dealt with are not accessible a truly valuable contribution to the material forming the basis of the text of Keats's works.

Till now the text of 'Hyperion' had to be approached without the aid of the poet's holograph manuscript. The lack was not of the first consequence, because there was not only his printed edition of 1820 in 'Lamia, Isabella, The Eve of St. Agnes, &c.,' but also the transcript of the holograph made for Woodhouse and revised by Keats himself. Still, a manuscript in the poet's writing always affords points of high critical interest; and the absence of this one was unfortunate, though not to be called calamitous. In the course of last autumn its discovery was announced in the newspapers, and it soon became known to those interested in such matters that it had after all survived in the hands of Leigh Hunt, whose son Thornton gave it to the sister of the late Dr. George Bird. The Trustees of the British Museum having purchased it from Miss Bird, the Delegates of the Clarendon Press got leave to produce a facsimile of it. Before the facsimile was ready the Earl of Crewe found the long-lost manuscript from which his father, the late Lord Houghton, had published 'Another Version of Hyperion,' at present generally known as 'The Fall of Hyperion, a Dream.' This is not in Keats's handwriting, but is none the less of great critical value, as Lord Houghton had employed that liberal allowance of freedom which was not unusual half a century ago, and which he had employed in dealing with the text of many of the letters of Keats published under his editorship. It is fortunate that both versions now appear together, edited and annotated with sympathy and acumen. It is, of course, not a facsimile of the later form of the poem, which accompanies the reproduction of the holograph earlier version; but what Mr. de Sélincourt calls a "transliteration," that is to say, in plain English, a printed letterpress copy. The whole body of notes and introductions to both versions must be consulted by any one hereafter editing Keats critically; but this is not the place to deal exhaustively with them.

Mr. de Sélincourt comments admirably on a great many points, as, for example, upon the growth of the beautiful passage forming lines 74 to 78 of the first book of 'Hyperion' from its original sketchy state, namely:—

The oaks stand charmed by the earnest stars
And through all night without a stir they rest,
Save from one sudden momentary gust
Which comes upon the silence and dies off,
As if the sea of air had but one wave.

In the absence of the manuscript it was not easy to imagine that so small an acorn could have been at the root of the Tall oaks, branch-charmed by the earnest stars of which the final version tells us that they

Dream, and so dream all night without a stir,
Save from one gradual solitary gust
Which comes upon the silence, and dies off,
As if the ebbing air had but one wave; and Mr. de Sélincourt, with the corrected manuscript before him, traces with unerring instinct the mental process reflected in the successive changes. In a foot-note he suggests the operation of a "half-conscious reminiscence of a passage in the letters of Gray." The passage referred to, set out with faults of punctuation, which we need not reproduce from Mr. de Sélincourt's note, is as follows:—

"venerable beeches,.....that, like most other ancient people, are always dreaming out their old stories to the winds,

And as they bow their hoary tops relate,
In murmuring sounds, the dark decrees of fate;
While visions, as poetic eyes avow,
Cling to each leaf and swarm on every bough."

The same poetic frame of mind is reflected again in 'The Fall of Hyperion,' when Moneta says to the poet:—

Or thou might'st better listen to the wind,
Whose language is to thee a barren noise,
Though it blows legend-laden through the trees.

It is, of course, possible that Gray suggested Keats's anthropomorphic treatment of the oak trees; but it seems to us more likely that the frame of mind was directly Virgilian without the intervention of Gray; the atmosphere is Virgilian in each case, though Gray is playful and quasi-bucolic, and Keats in deadly artistic earnest. Gray, indeed, goes on to tell Horace Walpole of the very beech trees in question, that he habitually sits under one of them and reads Virgil; and when he wrote those couplets he was—well, not translating, but toying, however delicately, with the Sixth Æneid (282-4)—transferring to his uncle's beech-trees a thought of Virgil's about a certain mythic elm-tree:—

In medio ramos annosaque brachia pandit
Ulmus opaca ingens quam sedem Somnia volgo
Vana tenere ferunt, folisque sub omnibus hærent.

But in general terms it may be said all this tree poetry depending on anthropomorphism is traceable to that majestic book the 'Georgics'; and without a single verbal parallelism, we should feel it safer to leap over Gray "squatting," as he says, sub tegmine fagi, and go straight to the lovely passage about the grafted tree marvelling at its changeling fruit and unfamiliar leaves:—

nec longum tempus, et ingens
Exiit ad cælum ramis felicibus arbos,
Miraturque novas frondes et non sua poma.

Keats when still a lad had gone so deep in Virgil as to translate a considerable portion of the 'Æneid,' and it is inconceivable that he did not know the 'Georgics.'

Mr. de Sélincourt does not always bring out with clearness and exactness his own acute and luminous criticisms of this text in its various stages; for instance, when he records that the words about Thea in the holograph—

Placed by her side the tallest Amazon
Had stood a little child—ultimately became

By her in stature the tall Amazon
Had stood a pigmy's height—

he says:—

"The idea of comparing Thea's height with the stature of the Pigmy was doubtless suggested by 'Paradise Lost,' i. 780, where the devils are represented as now less than smallest dwarfs.....like that Pigeon race, &c."

But, in truth, Keats does not compare Thea with the Pigmy: he does a sort of proportion sum, in which it is the Amazon that he compares to a Pigmy. Stated fully, the sum is—As an ordinary person is to a Pigmy, so was Thea to a tall Amazon. Nevertheless, the point which Mr. de Sélincourt makes is excellent—that Keats got the illustration from Milton, and that "the Miltonic touch" was "a correction to the MS.," by which he means that it was actually made by Keats on the manuscript, and not on the proof-sheets of the printed poem.

We notice that the editor has supplied brackets to the word do in l. 167 of 'The Fall of Hyperion,' thus:—

What benefit canst thou [do], or all thy Tribe,
To the great World?

He says "the brackets are in ink, by Woodhouse." This would really appear to be a reason for omitting the word, which interferes with the measure, removes the accent from the emphatic thou, and is not truly necessary to the sense. The only question is whether Woodhouse used the brackets in the ordinary sense, to imply that he had inserted the word. This is a point that wants clearing up, as does also the question where Mr. de Sélincourt got the reading of the same line in his introduction:—

What benefit could thou do or all thy tribe
To the great world?

Are we rash in hazarding the thought that his exactness in transcription is not on a level with his insight and intuition? Exactness seldom reigns in any editor possessing the last-named higher qualities.

On the authority of the Woodhouse transcript of 'The Fall of Hyperion'—and Woodhouse was extraordinarily exact—Mr. de Sélincourt is able to dismiss readings, or misreadings, for which Lord Houghton is responsible; and here again his notes are of excellent critical quality; indeed, he seems to be a born textual critic. A recovered passage of this unhappy attempt to reconstruct 'Hyperion' has great interest as connecting the argument of the fragment, though it contains some petulant lines wholly opposed to the nobility of Keats's character at his healthiest. Up till now Canto I. of this poem has consisted of 444 lines; as issued in the volume before us the canto has 468. The omitted passage comes after that in which the dreamer exclaims to Moneta:—

That I am favor'd for unworthiness,
By such propitious parley medicin'd
In sickness not ignoble, I rejoice,
Aye, and could weep for love of such award.

As hitherto printed, this is immediately followed by the inquiry where he is, whose altar he is standing beside, by whose image, and to whom he is addressing himself; but now we read first:—

So answer'd I, continuing, "If it please,
"Majestic shadow, tell me: sure not all
"Those melodies sung into the World's ear
"Are useless: sure a poet is a sage;
"A humanist, Physician to all Men.
"That I am none I feel, as Vultures feel
"They are no birds when Eagles are abroad.
"What am I then: Thou spakest of my Tribe:
"What Tribe?" The tall shade veil'd in drooping white

Then spake, so much more earnest, that the breath
Moved the thin linen folds that drooping hung
About a golden censer from the hand
Pendent—"Art thou not of the dreamer Tribe?
The Poet and the dreamer are distinct,
Diverse, sheer opposite, antipodes.
The one pours out a balm upon the World,
The other vexes it." Then shouted I
Spite of myself, and with a Pythia's spleen
Apollo! faded! O far flown Apollo!
Where is thy misty pestilence to creep
Into the dwellings, through the door crannies
Of all mock lyrists, large self worshippers
And careless Hectorers in proud bad verse.
Though I breathe death with them it will be life
To see them sprawl before me into graves.
Majestic shadow, tell me where I am, &c.

This is all new, except the first line and the last. It is easy enough to forgive Lord Houghton for omitting the whole twenty-four lines: Keats's fame was yet to be made, and the latter part of them, inseparable from the former and far better part, is quite unworthy of him. Now his fame is settled for ever; and we can accept thankfully all that elucidates the processes of his mind, in sickness as in sanity. We can even receive with equanimity the additions made to the bulk of Keats's 'Juvenilia' by a further draft on the Houghton manuscripts. In a communication to Notes and Queries (February 4th) Mr. de Sélincourt gives a set of verses, dated "Aug. 1814," beginning with the couplets:—

Fill for me a brimming bowl
And let me in it drown my soul:
But put therein some drug, designed
To banish women from my mind:

and this, though poor verse, is not only a good counterblast to the naughty lines "Give me women, wine, and snuff," but a worthy and Virgilian aspiration enough, even if it was not derived from the third Georgic:—

Sed non ulla magis viris industria firmat,
Quam venerem et cæci stimulos avertere amoris.

A sonnet 'On Peace' adds one to the number of Keats's sonnets, but nothing to their interest; while Mr. de Sélincourt's consultation of a transcript, made for Woodhouse, of the sonnet beginning

O that a week could be an age!

adds considerably to the interest of that sonnet, which is headed in the copy "To J. R." This heading has the effect of indicating James Rice as the person addressed, and not John Hamilton Reynolds, who has usually been supposed to be the person. Reynolds was already quite enough in evidence in Keats's poetry, and it is pleasant to have the witty and lovable Rice brought there. In other respects Mr. de Sélincourt's handling of these newly found papers is skilful and judicious; and the edition of Keats's poetry which he is known to have in preparation may be awaited with confidence that it will be worthy of attentive examination.

With the Russians in Peace and War. By Col. the Hon. F. A. Wellesley. (Nash.)

THIS work appears at a most opportune moment. At a time when the eyes of the world are turned towards Russia struggling in the throes of internal and external difficulties it is well that we should be reminded that the events now passing are not the outcome of the day, but are the products of those popular characteristics which are deeply ingrained in the life of the nation. The Russians in the seventies were identical in every respect with the people of to-day, and the history of the entrance into, and general conduct of, the Turkish war might well serve, mutatis mutandis, as a record of the present campaign in the Far East. The same unpreparedness was observable then as now, and the same exaggeration of power and numbers was practised to deceive the enemy and the world in general.

The latter half of Col. Wellesley's deeply interesting volume is devoted to the Turkish war, which he followed through-out. As military attaché at St. Petersburg it was his duty to keep his Government informed of the military aspect of affairs, and, with shrewd impartiality, he reported to Lord Derby that the mobilization of the army, preparatory to the campaign, was being carried out with great difficulty. In fact, it was but an earlier example of the present state of things in Russia. By some indiscretion, which does not appear, the substance of the report leaked out, and the result was that Col. Wellesley was left in the cool shade of opposition, which was made evident to him by many palpable signs. For instance:—

"It was the Emperor's custom, on entering the Riding School for the usual Sunday guard-mounting parade, to walk down the line of foreign officers, shaking hands with them and addressing a few words to each. On one occasion, however, at the time of which I am speaking, his Majesty, though greeting my colleagues, simply returned my salute and passed on."

A subsequent scene at the French Embassy was followed by a paragraph in a local paper, and the snub diplomatic culminated in the omission of any invitation to Col. Wellesley to accompany the Emperor to the front.

This act of discourtesy was smoothed over, however, and a halting invitation came at last. But Col. Wellesley's troubles were not over yet. When he paid his respects to the Grand Duke Nicholas, who was in command of the Russian army, that officer broke out into a loud tirade at his visitor's supposed shortcomings, and finished a long and fierce attack by saying:—

"I warn you, however, that I shall have you strictly watched, and if you say, or do, or write anything of which I do not approve, I will turn you out of my army" ('Je vous chasserai de mon armée'), and as he uttered these words the Grand Duke snapped his fingers in the air."

No wonder that Col. Wellesley respectfully declined the offered Grand Ducal hand at the close of the interview.

Col. Wellesley's description of the campaign is very interesting. He saw everything, including the battle of Plevna, of which he has a most graphic account, and was finally so far readmitted into the Tsar's confidence that he was entrusted with a mission to London to carry a statement of terms on which the Tsar would be willing to conclude peace.

A perusal of the history of this campaign must have a disturbing effect on the friends of Russia. The incompetence of the officers, from the Grand Dukes downward, was obvious, and the weapons of war were neither so numerous nor so effective as they professed to be. On one occasion a native of Moscow brought to the front specimens of an iron shield which he had invented, and of which he invited a trial. At the Tsar's command Russian rifles were fired at them with little result, upon which Col. Wellesley suggested that a Turkish rifle should be tried, when it was found that the projectile easily pierced the shields. After this, it is needless to say, a discreet silence was maintained about them.

How deeply the poison of corruption has permeated the several branches of the official world is exemplified by the story Col. Wellesley tells of the line-of-battle ship Peter the Great. This ship, after having been on the stocks for years, was launched by imperial command on the Admiralty report that she was fit for sea. Far from this being the case, however, her armour was unfitted and her turrets were made of canvas. At a naval review shortly afterwards, at which the Duke of Edinburgh was present, the Duke, at Col. Wellesley's suggestion, made a trial of the turrets. "After the review," writes Col. Wellesley,

"the Duke of Edinburgh told me I was wrong about the turrets being made of wood, as he had placed his hand on one of them, and it was made of canvas and yielded to the pressure of his fingers."

Col. Wellesley fills two chapters with instances of corruption both in high places and low. One of the most typical is that of an engineer who wished to supply the Government with small floating light-houses for harbour purposes. Having failed to get an order, he was talking the matter over with a friend, and named the official to whom he had submitted his plans:—

"Oh," said the friend, 'you applied to the wrong person—he is the man to give the order, but you should have approached him through Mademoiselle —, and she would have arranged it for you. It is not too late now.' The engineer, acting on his friend's advice, made the acquaintance of the demoiselle, who named her price, and in due course he received an order for the company he represented."

But though Col. Wellesley has much to say on the "seamy" side of Russian life, he is able to show compensating features in the social existence of the great cities. No people are more pleasant to meet in society than the Russians, and though they are no great respecters of truth—Col. Wellesley tells an amusing story of how he convicted Count Ignatieff of a falsehood—there is a charm about them which covers a multitude of sins. Of St. Petersburg itself he has not much to say that is laudatory, but of Moscow he writes in glowing terms:—

"Moscow is national in every sense of the term—it is more Russian than London is English; more Russian even than Paris is French. All the first traditions of the nation are closely connected with this splendid city, the quaint grandeur of which makes it an object of veneration to all these Russians, and a fitting home for the historical treasures of the country."

He visited the great fair at Nijni Novgorod, voyaged down the Volga, made a sojourn at Orenburg and in other Asiatic cities, and enjoyed the sport which the country was able to afford. One particularly interesting hunting episode he describes at length. In the company of Prince Dmitri Golitzin he engaged in bear-shooting at night, a dangerous proceeding which ended in a thrilling incident—so thrilling as to draw from the Tsar the remark at a subsequent supper at St. Petersburg:—

"I hear what you and Golitzin have been about. It is the first time that a bear has been killed in my country by night, and it shall be the last. Your enterprise was foolhardy in the extreme. However, I congratulate you. It must indeed have been exciting."

We put down this fascinating work with regret. It is full of episode, and Col. Wellesley admits us so frankly into his confidence, that in reading his narrative we almost seem to realize the presence of the grand dukes, princes, and generals. But, we must add, before closing this notice, our surprise that those in authority have not demurred to the publication of it, and used the powers which the Official Secrets Acts allow them. Not that The Athenæum approves of such Acts, which obscure the truth of history; but it is notorious that men who have retired from the public service have got into trouble for saying much less in print.

The Crisis of the Confederacy: a History of Gettysburg and the Wilderness. By Capt. Cecil Battine. (Longmans & Co.)

THERE are many points at which the British army fails to shine among the armies of the world. Military literature and history form one, although it is universally recognized that Henderson's 'Life of Stonewall Jackson' is a brilliant exception. The object of Capt. Battine in the work before us seems to have been to carry on the story after General Jackson's death, with sufficient explanation of what had preceded to make his book something different from a mere continuation.

All works upon the Civil War, except those which follow only the fortunes of one great man, are of necessity exposed to the charge of confusion, to which indeed the greatest of English military books, Napier's 'Peninsula War,' is also open. In 1866, in 1870, and in Manchuria, although several armies were engaged, and operations sometimes took place in widely separated districts, yet matters were comparatively simple as compared with those in the Peninsula, in South Africa, or in that war portions of which Capt. Battine has surveyed. Our author has facilitated his own task by having main regard to what seems to many, and certainly seemed at the time to both the Union and rebel Governments, the principal operations. But we shall have to show that this resolve on Capt. Battine's part is not fair to General Grant, who had a complete view of the whole war, who was as much in command of Sherman in Georgia as he was of Meade in the next tent, and who never for one moment forgot the sole object—the destruction of the Confederacy—in a too close regard to the fighting which was taking place under his own eye.

If we appear to damp the ardour of a soldier, evidently thoughtful and well informed, who ought to be petted by us on his entry into a field in which all British military talent should be welcome, we shall make amends by our recognition that the volume contains reflections of the highest value, and, in spite of a certain obvious hastiness of execution, pages of great literary merit.

History has, on the whole, been unduly favourable to the Southern generals, and has failed to recognize in sufficient degree the powers of General Grant. The Confederacy, on account of its comparatively limited resources, enormous though these were, and shrinking as they did to a smaller place only when set against the immense wealth and population of the North, was supposed to be a David fighting against a Goliath. It was thought to be a chivalrous small State, with the lesser but more gallant army, struggling to free itself from uninteresting hordes, doomed to failure until at last they obtained the services of what soldiers call "a butcher" to command them. That the facts were very different, of course, Capt. Battine, like all clear-sighted observers in the present day—like the Southern soldiers who still survive—admits. But none of us perhaps makes the admission in sufficiently ample terms. In the most critical fighting of the earlier stages of the struggle the troops of the Confederacy were present on those fields of battle which most struck the eye in forces generally equal, and always at least nearly equal, to those of their Northern opponents. Grant first, taking Sherman with him, formed a true view of the nature of the struggle; but Grant's operations in Virginia were never considered by him as specially important in themselves, and the march across the Southern States to the sea, cutting the Confederacy in two and paralyzing its resistance, was planned by him, and would have been executed by him, instead of by Sherman, had he remained Commander-in-Chief in the West instead of becoming the first and last Commander-in-Chief of all the Union forces in the field. The armies engaged in the Gettysburg and Wilderness campaigns were only about a fifth of the forces of the belligerents.

Capt. Battine in his preface shows indeed that he feels that the sympathy given to the vanquished has caused less than justice to be done to the equally praiseworthy courage "which succeeded in preserving intact the heritage of the American nation, and which triumphed over foes so formidable." But in this fine passage he alludes to "the dazzling genius of some of the Confederate generals," and although in a list of the great masters of the military art he afterward groups Grant and Sherman with Lee and Jackson, the effect of his book as a whole is to give additional sanction to the view which places Lee far above Grant. We ought incidentally to state that in this volume, as in most of those which come before us, the index is imperfect and misleading. When we tried, after reading the book, to find once more the most important passage about Lee, we discovered that it was missing among those attached to his name in the index. It is on p. 114, where Lee is compared with the Duke of Marlborough and, in some points, with Napoleon. Capt. Battine, moreover, claims, we think, too much credit for Lee as a master of offensive movements. We are inclined, on the contrary, to agree with those who think that after Lee found that he had met a great general in Grant, he showed undue timidity in offence. No doubt the condition of the South was perilous in the extreme, and caution was enjoined upon Lee by his Government; but the defensive policy which he adopted played Grant's game, and the only chance of success which in 1864 was presented to the South lay in the offensive. To wait for attack in the neighbourhood of Richmond, behind earthworks, and to avoid opportunities of counter-stroke against troops whose discipline had been shaken by the repulse of their gallant assaults, was to render the fate of the Confederacy certain.

A great deal of space is given in this volume to the preliminary view of the state of things which preceded Lee's invasion of the North after Jackson's death, and to the Gettysburg campaign; while the circumstances in which Grant was called to the supreme command, and the views held by him at the time when he undertook it, and ultimately carried to full success, are summarized in a more brief fashion. Yet it is in this later portion of Capt. Battine's book, which commences only at p. 345, that he begins to draw the lessons which are most valuable. On his own plan of his book we should have preferred a fuller treatment of the later part.

When we come to detail, we note the same tendency slightly to exaggerate the virtues of Lee and slightly to undervalue the services of Grant. We do not know, for example, from which of the many authorities Capt. Battine draws his list of the losses of the Federal army in the Wilderness in two days of May. The wounded and prisoners appear to us to come from one of the many accounts more or less official, and the number of the killed from another. Capt. Battine says "four thousand mortally hurt," which is an unusual form of words, and he then gives the wounded as 9,000. There was, no doubt, an extraordinary discrepancy between the Adjutant-General, the Surgeon-General, and General Meade in their account of the losses. But those who have compared all the official documents, which are very full, have shown the stupendous mistakes of Meade, and how he made them. The killed in the two days' fighting were, according to the Adjutant-General, 2,200; according to the Surgeon-General, 2,000; and according to General Meade, whose blunder has been made evident, 3,200. There is, we think, little ground for Capt. Battine's statement, "By far the greatest material damage befell the Federal army"; and we are not disposed to think with him that the battle was "among Lee's best performances."

In the account of the fighting of the 12th of May, and generally of the engagements known as Spottsylvania, Capt. Battine's language is such as to suggest that the Federals had considerable superiority of force over Lee. But the authority which he prefers—namely, that of General Humphreys, Chief of the Staff, who wrote 'The Campaign in Virginia, 1864'—can hardly be quoted for this view. It is impossible to arrive at certainty upon the subject, but all the figures and all the dispatches which bear upon it can be found in the second and third volumes of General Badeau's 'Military History of Grant.' The only importance of the details is that they illustrate the military reputation of Lee and Grant, and that the facts now known appear to us to support the view that Grant cannot be said to have been defeated in the fighting of May, 1864, and that he had every reason to be satisfied with the success of the Virginian, as with that of the Western, portion of his schemes.

In his writing on these engagements of May Capt. Battine, as in one other important passage, decries the use of cavalry on the plan which was generally adopted by both the American armies, and says of Spottsylvania:—

"Grant had yielded to the temptation of detaching his cavalry against the enemy's communication, an evil course which is always attractive when sounder methods fail."

We do not agree that Sheridan's great ride constituted an inferior use of the mounted troops compared with anything which could have been done with them in the field at Spottsylvania, considering the nature of the country—thick everywhere, and generally, also, swampy. Neither is Capt. Battine, perhaps, entirely consistent upon this subject, for he appears to praise an earlier raid by Stuart, the famous cavalry general, who was, indeed, fatally wounded during the struggle with Sheridan at the time of Spottsylvania. At p. 14 the account of "Stuart's first great raid" looks, we think, a little inconsistent with the doctrine on this subject of other portions of the book. On the whole, however, we are with Capt. Battine in regard to cavalry, and think that he draws, with great ability, the right deductions from the facts bearing on the use of cavalry which the history of war affords.

In his account of Cold Harbor Capt. Battine again exaggerates the success of Lee. He says, indeed, of the North, "The army was beaten, and with appalling loss of life"; and he goes on,

"the enormous proportion of the dead being due to the fact that after the action neither side would propose an armistice to collect the sufferers between the lines."

We think that less than justice is done to the Federal side in both these statements. The loss at Cold Harbor was nothing like so great as in the two days known as Wilderness or in the engagements known as Spottsylvania; and the sufferings of the wounded were, we think, rather the fault of Lee than of both sides. Lee was behind his lines; Grant was upon his own ground; and the wounded lay between them under fire. Grant at once proposed what is now the practice under the Geneva Convention, or offered any other method of picking up the wounded of both sides. Lee held out for a formal application for an armistice; and it is difficult to see why he did so, except from a desire to show that a victory had been won. Again, the failure of June 17th at Petersburg is set down as "a stinging defeat" "to Grant." It was undoubtedly a check, in the repulse of an assault—one of many in the war—to forces which were under Grant's supreme command; but Grant was not himself present at the attack; and if there was any fight in the whole war which was Meade's own, the attempted rush on Petersburg on the evening of June 17th was Meade's. Grant meanwhile had his eyes more firmly fixed upon the Western forces under his command than upon the fighting in Virginia, and never for a moment believed that the certainty of complete success was affected by fighting in which he engaged, in pursuance of his policy of wearing out the resistance of the South. Grant commanded half a million men, of whom but one hundred thousand were with him and Meade in the Wilderness campaign.

For this and other reasons, we think it an over-statement to describe the whole effect of the Wilderness campaign in Capt. Battine's words:—

"Lee had emerged triumphant from a campaign which is surpassed by no other in..... skilful direction. Even the glories of the campaign of France in 1814, and Frederic's wonderful defiance of his enemies in the Seven Years' War, pale before Lee's astonishing performance."

Capt. Battine, however, goes on to base what we think too strong a claim for Lee upon the fact, as to which we agree with him, that "neither Napoleon, till he met Wellington, nor Frederic at any time, was opposed to such a dangerous enemy as Grant."

In Mr. Spenser Wilkinson's essay on the American Civil War, which stands first in his 'War and Policy,' he points out that Grant's plan was to absorb Lee's energies while "the decisive blows were struck by Sherman," and, as we think, rightly adds, "the object was completely attained." Here is our main difference with Capt. Battine, but it is a difference which extends beyond him, and in which he has on his side nearly all writers on the Civil War.

One of the finest of many admirable passages in Capt. Battine's book is that in which he draws the moral from the career of Jackson:—

"The possession of such a leader is of priceless value to any state.....In most armies of long-established tradition every circumstance usually militates against the rise of a great leader.....His superiors will become jealous and suspicious when they note his rising talent and impatience of stupid control. But having regard to the preciousness of the possession it is wise not to render its existence impossible. While a certain dead level of reliable mediocrity may be required for the higher ranks of any army, it is not therefore necessary to stamp out of the ranks all critical faculty, all original talent. The richer and more civilised a nation becomes the more desirable are the prizes to be won by courage, energy and ambition, and the more attractive will peaceful pursuits become in comparison with the monotonous and poverty-stricken career of a soldier in times of peace. Yet for many years to come heredity will provide a certain number of capable men ready to endure poverty in order to follow the military professions by land and sea. If some scope is given to rising ability it will never be impossible to find a leader to whom the 'good ordinary general'.....is a mere plaything."

The general observations upon cavalry, which we think excellent, begin on p. 392. They soon lead up to a well-deserved criticism upon our own use of cavalry in the South African war, and to an explanation of the plan followed with regard to our mounted infantry, which is contrasted with the better system which was, we agree with Capt. Battine, open to, and even easy of, adoption. Our author then passes on to the question of shock tactics. As a cavalry officer he naturally takes the cavalry view, and there can be no doubt that, whatever may be the opinion in this country, the best military opinion of the world is upon his side. At the beginning of the volume Capt. Battine has some remarks on cavalry and artillery considered together, which are perhaps rather true in their depreciation of the artillery fire of the British army than of the military art in general. The experience of the war in Manchuria has, we think, been different, and there can be no doubt that the French attach increased importance in their calculations to field artillery as compared to that attached to it a few years ago, and believe all experience in the field up to the present time to be useless, owing to its inapplicability to artillery fire as now developed in the armies of France.

One of the most useful lessons drawn by Capt. Battine from his studies is alluded to in the proper place at the very end of his work, but is better expressed in a chance passage somewhat thrown away on p. 112. All soldiers resent interference by politicians with forces in the field, as illustrated by the control exercised over Lee by Jefferson Davis. It is difficult to blame Lincoln for interfering with men like Pope. The fault lay in the selection. But in the following passage, based on the mistakes of Jefferson Davis, Capt. Battine is thinking of ourselves:—

"A democratic State whose politicians pride themselves on ignorance of war, which they leave to its professors, is in an evil case; but it is hardly less mischievous when the leading men of a country, however able, are not aware of the limit of their knowledge and seek to direct matters without the best professional advice—a state of things generally brought about by the incompetence of the military chiefs at the time, who, having forfeited the confidence of their political colleagues, have induced the latter to think they could manage the whole business far better themselves."

We feel sure that our author has hit the mark. The politicians are not anxious to act in military "matters without the best professional advice." When they do interfere, it is because they have discovered that the list of field-m Marshals, generals, and lieutenants-general, contains hardly any names in which they can place full confidence, and that the two or three great officers who are competent to advise them and worthy to be trusted are wanted in six or seven different places at the same time.

In dealing with the lists of the Federal forces, and with the preparations to resist Lee's invasions of the North, it is interesting to note the command of "the Middle Department," comprising Maryland and part of Virginia, by Major-General Lewis Wallace, whose administrative services and careful dispositions are continually referred to by all authorities. What is fame? "Lew Wallace" is known to millions of people as "the popular author of 'Ben Hur.'" His really great historical novel, 'The Fair God,' is so little remembered that one of the most literary and most accurate of French newspapers, in his obituary a few weeks ago, translated the title not 'Le Dieu Blond,' but 'Le Dieu Juste.'

We heartily commend the volume of Capt. Battine, both for its own merits, and because of the wisdom of encouraging among British soldiers studies such as those to which his attention has been turned.

L'Épopée Byzantine à la fin du Dixième Siècle.
Troisième Partie, 1025-57. Par Gustave Schlumberger, Membre de l'Institut.
(Paris, Hachette.)

WE are glad to welcome the fourth of the series of magnificent volumes in which M. Schlumberger has related the history of a hundred years of the Eastern Roman Empire. The first, on Nicephorus Phocas, we reviewed in The Athenæum fifteen years ago; the present book brings us down to the accession of the Comnenian dynasty, and we regret that it is to be the last. M. Schlumberger tells us in his preface that he regards M. Chalandon, author of an excellent monograph on Alexius Comnenus, as his Elisha. But we must felicitate him on having completed triumphantly his original programme. Not our least obligation is for the wealth of illustrations which he has spared no pains in gathering from all sources, and which may, perhaps, be said to form the distinctive feature of his work. They are strictly contemporary illustrations: "c'est comme une illustration des faits par l'art et l'archéologie." We may again, as in reviewing a previous volume, call special attention to the historical scenes taken from the precious Madrid manuscript of the history of Scylitzes. It is most interesting to see how an eleventh-century artist represented the marriage of the Empress Zoe with Romanus Argyros, or Zoe and her sister tranquillizing a mob, or Constantine IX. sailing up the Bosphorus to fight with the Russians, or Michael V. and his uncle dragged across the market-place and blinded. M. Schlumberger is able to show us, from his own valuable collection, a leaden seal belonging to the historian Michael Attaleiates, and another—perhaps the most precious in existence—which is inscribed with the name of the Northman Hervé, the "Francopulos." Readers who have not technical knowledge will perhaps wish that the author had transcribed and translated the inscriptions on the monuments and objects which he reproduces.

In the period of thirty years which elapsed between the death of Constantine VIII., the last emperor of the Basilian dynasty, and the revolution which placed Isaac Comnenus on the throne, there is no great sovereign or commanding figure. At no time, even in Byzantine palaces, was a Court more enmeshed in intrigues than when the legitimacy of the Imperial succession was determined by the two old ladies Zoe and Theodora, the sisters of Basil II. In the invaluable history of Psellus, which was unknown to Finlay, we find portraits of the emperors and empresses, which lend human interest to a chronicle which would otherwise seem merely sordid and dull. Psellus was not altogether an admirable character; but he played a part in affairs, and he knew his world. He has enabled us to revise the older views of the emperors of this period. M. Schlumberger recognizes that there is much to be said for Michael IV. as well as for Constantine IX.—that there is something even to be said for Michael V.

The reader of this volume will be deeply impressed with the inadequacy of Finlay's chapters on this period. There is not a word in Finlay of the notable embassy which the Emperor Conrad sent to the Court of Constantine VIII. to seek a Greek princess in marriage for the boy-prince Henry. In the English historian's notice of the annexation of Armenia by Constantine IX. the name of Gregory Magistros, the erudite Armenian baron who played a considerable rôle in the affairs of his country, does not appear. The remarkable revival of higher education, for his interest in which the same emperor deserves full credit—the movement in which Psellus, Xiphilin, Likhudes, and John Mauropos were conspicuous figures—is passed over without notice by Finlay. In forming a conception of the best Byzantine society it should never be forgotten that a training in classical Greek literature was always considered an essential part of higher education. It was for contemporary readers, not for posterity, that ancient texts were transcribed in books which preserve for us the works of Homer and Æschylus, Plato and Thucydides. Psellus lectured at Constantinople on Aristophanes and Menander, on Lysias and Demosthenes. Everybody knows how towards the end of the Middle Ages Greek manuscripts were brought to Western libraries. But it is too often ignored that the existence of these manuscripts was due to the fact that in the Byzantine world, which Western writers have so generally despised and decried, the Greek classics formed a part of education. There were declines and revivals of learning, but the tradition was never broken.

The most famous event in the reign of Constantine IX. was the final breach between the Greek and Latin Churches. M. Schlumberger gives a full account of the circumstances, taking advantage of the investigations of M. Bréhier. Finlay devoted about a page to the subject, but it is to be noted that he rightly placed the responsibility upon the Patriarch, not upon the Pope. In the rupture of 1054 the Emperor Constantine was on the side of the Pope, but he was unable to impose his will on the powerful and wilful Patriarch, Michael Kerularios. It was a rupture, but we may call attention to the important point made by M. Bréhier that the rupture was not at that time considered by either party as a definite schism.

M. Schlumberger has used, besides the works of Psellus, another source unknown to Finlay, the 'Strategikon' of Kekaumenos, published by Vasilievski from a unique manuscript preserved at Moscow. In it we get some welcome light on the career of Harald Hardrada, the Norwegian warrior who was slain on English soil in 1066. It was known from Scandinavian sources that he had entered the service of the emperors, and fought in Mediterranean lands; but no mention of his name had been found in Greek sources until the 'Strategikon' was discovered. M. Schlumberger, however, is mistaken in supposing that the passage relating to Harald occurs in the 'Strategikon' itself. It occurs in a distinct and later document, a λόγος του θρηνητικός, addressed, perhaps, to Alexius Comnenus, which was, through an error, joined on to the 'Strategikon.' The two works are rightly separated in the edition of 1896. This passage both confirms the chief statements of the Northern sagas and adds new information. Harald entered the service of Michael IV. with a band of 500 Varangian followers. For his services against the Saracens in Sicily he was made a manglabites, and for his assistance in a Bulgarian expedition a spatharocandidates. On the death of Michael V. he wished to return to Norway, but Constantine IX. refused him permission, and he was obliged to make his escape secretly. This notice is of great interest in itself, and further important for the light which it reflects on the historical credibility of the 'Heimskringla' and Scandinavian sagas.

M. Schlumberger's works have already borne fruit in England. His 'Nicéphore Phocas' inspired Mr. Frederic Harrison's recent romance 'Theophano,' which has disclosed a new world to many to whom Nicephorus and Tzimitzes were not so much as names.

A System of Metaphysics. By G. S. Fullerton. (New York, the Macmillan Company.)

WHEN the necessities of life had become plentiful, then, according to Aristotle, did the men of old take to philosophizing, by way of diversion, and the better to occupy their new-found leisure. And now in America the same thing, evidently, has come about. Here, at any rate, we have some quarter of a million words about metaphysics—not exactly the kind of "lightning lunch" on which the life of "hustle" is sustained. Prof. Fullerton has indeed, at times, an inkling that, relatively to the needs of publishers and readers, space and time are by no means infinite. "But I must not loiter," he writes on his five hundred and eighty-third page. Alas! Pegasus has the bit between his teeth. "I have been betrayed," we read some way further on, "into criticising Prof. Royce's argument at much greater length than I had intended." It must be allowed, however, that, from out of his armchair, the professor discourses right pleasantly. Hic est pura oratio. Written as the book is round the classical discussions of the British philosophers, page on page of whose works is transcribed entire, it manages to reproduce in its tone and manner something of that "large utterance of the early gods," whereto a Germanizing generation is nowadays for the most part impotent to fit its crabbed dialectics.

Turning to the matter, we commit ourselves, not without misgiving, to a general characterization of its tendency. Prof. Fullerton in his title promises a "system." But surely never was a system set forth less systematically. For one thing, criticism decidedly outruns construction. For another thing, signposts are few; the leading positions are not precisely formulated; there is a total want of retrospective summary; the order of treatment takes itself for granted. Still we shall not, probably, go far wrong in describing Prof. Fullerton as a realist. Now a realist is, at the philosophical level at least, a rarity. The defence by an expert of so unpopular a position thus furnishes philosophers with an opportunity of demonstrating on the living subject the efficacy of those thrusts before which the man of straw never fails to go down, to the languid "Habet" of the class. It may be a case of one man against a host. But at all events Prof. Fullerton shows plenty of fight and plenty of resource. And in metaphysics, as there are no lost causes, so neither are there machine-made arms of precision to nullify the native quality of the warrior.

Prof. Fullerton clears the ground for his own construction by critical demolition wholesale. As in the tale, it is a case of "heads off all round save mine." There is a disease which proves to be endemic in British philosophy, and that is the theory of representative perception:—

"The plain man distinguishes, in his loose fashion, between a man's ideas of things and the things themselves, and he admits that if the ideas are not true representatives, their possessor will not truly know the things. The psychologist makes more distinct the line of separation, and conceives the man's whole experience of an outer world to be a mere copy of what is external, describing in detail the elements of which it is built up and the process of its formation. Both hold, explicitly or implicitly, that we perceive directly the outer world, and that we do not so perceive it, but only infer it. The contradiction is there. It is embedded in the very structure of the psychological position, the standpoint of common thought and of natural science."

Now Prof. Fullerton is with those who hold that psychology, in so far as it undertakes to be a special science and nothing more, is justified by the logic of practical success in working from presuppositions of contradictory appearance. But metaphysics is denied this privilege. Its business is with the ultimate, and a self-contradictory ultimate is not to be dreamt of. Turn, however, to Locke, Berkeley, Hume, Hamilton, Mill—even Reid—and what do we find? That the trail of the psychological method is over them all. One and all tend to put symbol and thing symbolized into different worlds, presuming the while that we, confined to the world of symbols, can know it to be such.

As the foundation of his system, then, Prof. Fullerton propounds a doctrine of the true nature of thinking by means of a symbol or representative:—

"We can only know through a representative those things which this representative can truly represent—that is to say, those things which contain identical elements with it, and in so far as they contain identical elements with it. A representative can never stand for something else in so far as that other thing differs from it. A sound, as sound, cannot represent a color as color, nor can it make in any way comprehensible to a man who has never seen a color what the nature of the latter may be. Thus, if we know immediately only elements in consciousness, it is inconceivable that we should, by means of these, represent to ourselves elements of a different kind in so far as they are different."

No justification is offered of this reduction of the symbol to the specimen, and that though the notion of the identical is by no means self-explaining in a philosophy that tries to do without a knower, and makes external reality consist in a mere manifold thinly disguised as a "complex" of "sensational elements." The principle, in fact, seems to be one of those which cover no more than the application awaiting authorization. So we pass on to consider the application on its own merits.

Starting, as for the purposes of metaphysical analysis we needs must do, from the given, we find, it is argued, that givenness in nothing apart from reference, and that reference is always two-faced, always implies the two "orders," the objective and the subjective, together and at once. So far so good. We have heard something like this before. But what of the common point from which this divagation of references proceeds? Here Prof. Fullerton becomes original. For no common point is provided by a system which treats the notion of a knower as superfluous. We are vaguely informed, indeed, that the differentiation of aspects falls within "the limits of experience," or "consciousness." But this is no absolute idealism. The two sides of experience are not exhibited as necessary to one another, as mutually interpenetrative, even in the dead-alive fashion of the functions of a thinking apotheosized as a thoughtness. Prof. Fullerton's "experience" is not even a titular king, a mummified Pharaoh; it is simply nobody and nothing at all. The split in the trousers runs right up to the top. But surely it is not a pair of breeches in any sense, when one leg is being worn in Timbuctoo and the other in Tonga. Prof. Fullerton is ready to confess to a "dualism," regardless of the copybook maxim that "dualism is philosophic death," or, in other words, that, to be a consistent dualist, you must cease to be able to count two. He prefers, however, to describe his theory as a "parallelism." He then, as is his wont, proceeds to elucidate the term by explaining what it does not mean:—

"We must not conceive of a man's mind as lying beside his brain in space, as we do conceive of parallel lines as lying beside each other. We must not think of it as fitted to his brain as a gilt halo is fitted to the head of a saint in a picture by Fra Angelico. The warning is by no means superfluous, for the error appears to be a very easy one to fall into. We are all apt to talk as though the relation of mind and brain were more or less analogous to this; and when, before our classes, we attempt to make clear certain psychological facts by the aid of diagrams upon a blackboard, we place brains and ideas side by side, as though they really occurred side by side in nature. The endeavor to point out to the student that this diagrammatic representation is faulty is met by the triumphant query: 'When a man goes to Europe, may we not assume that he takes his mind with him?'"

It does not seem exactly a wise step, on the part at least of one who, as we have seen, sets forth to wipe away from metaphysics the trail of the psychological method, thus to appropriate to an unfamiliar metaphysical use an expression currently employed by psychology, in its capacity of special science, to denote a standpoint admittedly provisional. But, apart from the question of words, can any valid conception at all be formed of the alleged relation between the objective and subjective spheres? There are difficulties enough, no doubt, however you seek to relate them. Make knowledge the unifier, and our trying to know becomes illusion. Make our trying the real bond, and a highly precarious "we" is left confronted by a no less precariously plastic "not ourselves." But such attempts, at any rate, set the ultimate problem, if they do not solve it. Prof. Fullerton's system ignores the very problem of the possibility of system. He attacks two universes with a characterless medium warranted "for external application only." Result: not one dualism, but two universes and a characterless medium as before.

In thus laying the axe to the very root of the tree we appear to absolve ourselves of the need to deal in detail with the branches. There is one ramification of the system, however, that starts almost from the base of the trunk, namely, the doctrine of "ejects," that is, other minds. Prof. Fullerton's position in this regard is instructive, if only because it is thereby crucially shown how, with all his apparent concern to start on equal terms with the objective and the subjective, he is, nevertheless, the width of heaven away from the starting-point of the critical philosophy—a starting-point which at a first glance he might be thought to have adopted. To this question of "ejects" his attention may well have been drawn by a recent work of his colleague, Prof. Strong, in which a view essentially resembling Clifford's identification of other minds with things-in-themselves is plausibly maintained. It is to the credit of Columbia University to have thus twice, in close succession, got to grips with a difficulty which heretofore philosophy had but touched with the tips of its fingers. Perhaps the vagueness of previous utterances on the subject is answerable for the following historical misstatement:—

"It is a commonplace of literature that we arrive at a knowledge of the existence of other minds by a process of inference. That we are not conscious of the contents of other minds as we are conscious of the contents of our own, every one is ready to admit. The only question seems to be as to the precise nature of the inference, and as to its justification."

Every one is ready to admit nothing of the kind. Let us quote from a recent work of Hegelian tendency (Prof. J. H. Muirhead, 'Philosophy and Life,' p. 227):—

"No argument can be brought in support of the view that the existence of other minds is hypothetical, which would not apply equally mutatis mutandis to the existence of our own. Here, as in the case of subject and object in general, it is better to say that 'others' consciousness' is one of two factors which the analysis of self-consciousness yields to the psychologist, 'own-consciousness' being the other. They thus stand on the same level of immediacy, for neither is really immediate at all."

Now had Prof. Fullerton been acquainted with such a view as is here enunciated, he might have been constrained by its consistency (for it has, at all events, that merit) to reflect on the inconsistency of his own position. For with him, whilst subject and object are immediate, the eject is not immediate. Thus his is a solipsism that cannot even plead subjectivism as its excuse. This is a triumph for that psychological method which metaphysics sought to hustle from the field. Immovable and unabashed, it revengefully proclaims that metaphysics is only somebody's metaphysics after all.

NEW NOVELS.

Peter's Mother. By Mrs. Henry De la Pasture. (Smith, Elder & Co.)

MRS. DE LA PASTURE concerns herself in her new story with that great and eternal conflict—the conflict of temperaments. Without it where would be the art of fiction and the conduct of life? The result of her use of the theme is a story of some charm and insight painted in soft and quiet hues. In the conflict the gentle imaginative woman who calls Peter son goes to the wall, and the personalities of the stolid, self-satisfied family she has married into stand their ground only too well by force of sheer inertia. For twenty years, since her early orphaned girlhood, the well-meaning but tedious guardian (who becomes her husband) and his small-minded, old-fashioned ancient sisters have almost unconsciously repressed and depressed her at every turn of their joint lives. Her natural gaiety of heart and exquisite beauty have gradually failed and paled under the process. At the early age of thirty-five, when Peter, aged eighteen, shows fair promise of becoming in many ways a replica of his father, she and most of the people round her think of her as already old. But the whirligig of time brings changes and revenges. Sir Timothy (a well-conceived portrait of a stout old conservative country gentleman), who has for many years made her a captive to his bow and spear, dies under a surgical operation early in the book. Peter, her dour, wilful, but cherished boy, has just before decamped for South Africa and the front without leave or farewell. His father and aunts have (still without being actually unkind) managed to imbue the youth with the idea that his beautiful well-born mother is really a person of no importance. Charm of character and quick and kindly impulses are hers, but not strength to withstand the constant pressure laid upon her. Her husband's cousin arrives on the scene—a legal celebrity about ten years her senior, appointed to the management of the property and, to some extent, of the rebellious Peter. He has only seen the mother once on her wedding day, but the impression of her grace and radiance has never been effaced. He falls into a deep love and longing to restore to her what she has lost in the years of the locust. Soon his devotion and chivalry begin to win her back to life and joy, and love for him. But they have reckoned without their Peter! He is the obstacle to the union of hearts and the hopes of an aftermath of happiness. Here the story may be said to begin, with its interesting difficulties. How is Peter to be made aware of the position of affairs when he arrives, minus an arm, with remorse for his past harshness to his mother, and a stubborn resolve to live for her?—which may be interpreted (in spite of his good points) as a resolve that she is to live for him as she has done for his father before him. She finds how impossible it is to explain things to a son who cannot imagine in a woman of "her age" any longing after personal happiness. The poor lady is ready to give up the fight and settle down. Not so her lover. His persistence and tact and the daring conduct of a young person called Sarah vanquish Peter's celibacy very rapidly. The situation is uncommon, and it is prettily and effectively presented. Knowledge of the world and of human nature is evident in many places, also a feeling for scenery as it shows itself in Devonshire.

Fata Morgana. By André Castaigne. (Hutchinson & Co.)

THERE are almost five hundred pages of this romance of art student life in Paris, which is the work of a somewhat Americanized Frenchman, who himself supplies scores of spirited illustrations. Admirers of such works as Du Maurier's 'Trilby' should find pleasure in this long story. Its principal fault is that it is utterly lacking in shape and cohesion. A more striking example of bad architecture in fiction we have rarely seen. It is like a building which has been erected haphazard by a band of workmen who not merely were without plans and specifications, but had not even a foreman to direct their labours. Thus we have all sorts of florid ornamentation here, and an essential wall lacking there; soaring pinnacles in one part, and an entire lack of proper foundation in another. This want of cohesion robs the book of importance, but leaves it a lively, picturesque tale, full of good scenes, high spirits, vivid pieces of description, and Gallic dash and enthusiasm. The latter part of it is curiously theatrical, and there is entertainment to be found in most of its chapters.

The Clansman. By Thomas Dixon, jun. (Heinemann.)

THIS is the second book of a series planned by the author to illustrate what he calls the race conflict in America. He refers to the reactionary régime which made life in the South hideous for white men for some time after the conclusion of the war of secession. The tale is dedicated to an uncle of the author's who was a member of the "Ku Klux Klan," a secret society of men sworn to protect white interests after the negro enfranchisement, when the whites, "poor" and otherwise, were pitifully in need of protection. Mr. Dixon takes his purpose very seriously, for he holds that

"the chaos of blind passion that followed Lincoln's assassination is inconceivable to-day."

The revolution it produced in our Government and the bold attempt of Thaddeus Stevens to Africanize ten great States of the American Union read now like tales from 'The Arabian Nights.'.....How the young South, led by the reincarnated souls of the clansmen of old Scotland, went forth under this cover and against overwhelming odds, daring exile, imprisonment, and a felon's death, and saved the life of a people, forms one of the most dramatic chapters in the history of the Aryan race."

We may not all of us share that view but we may all, or most of us, be interested by Mr. Dixon's romantic handling of the theme as he conceives it. Two continuous love stories, and adventures innumerable, have gone to the making of a lively, glowing story, full of American zest and American colloquialism, but full, also, of genuine feeling and the swing of good narrative.

The Marble City. By G. B. Burgin. (Hutchinson & Co.)

FROM his dedication of this book to the Bishop of Ripon one learns that its author looks forward with calmness to that doubtless distant day "when the inevitable happens, and in the hurry and rush of modern life it is forgotten." The reference is to 'The Marble City' itself, a naïve tale of Canadian life, full of mild comicality, obvious pathos, and the sort of "direct appeal" which fascinated Mr. Bent Pitman in 'The Wrong Box.' Mr. Burgin occupies a well-established position in the new kailyard of fiction, which handles interests that are parochial, but not Scotch—which inclines to pettiness, yet deals with open spaces and the fringes of the Empire. The books of this school have very little to do with literature, yet they are stories that give innocent pleasure to a large class of kindly people, and, as such, by no means merit severe handling. Further, in the case of some of them, they add to the common knowledge of the Empire, and so may be welcomed.

Esclave. By Gérard d'Houville. (Paris, Calmann Lévy.)

'ESCLAVE' is a naughty tale, and is slight in construction, but well written. The scene is laid among the descendants of the French in New Orleans, with much local character and colour.

BIBLIOGRAPHY.

A List of Books printed in Scotland before 1700, including those printed forth of the Realm for Scottish Booksellers. With Brief Notes on the Printers and Stationers. By Harry G. Aldis. (Edinburgh Bibliographical Society.)—The history of Scottish printing has not, up to the present, attracted much attention, and, with the exception of Mr. Edmond's 'Aberdeen Printers' and his 'Annals of Scottish Printing,' written in conjunction with Mr. Dickson, nothing of importance has been published. Early Scottish printing has no merit to attract the amateur, except that of excessive rarity, while it is too late to fall into any general scheme of bibliography likely to be contemplated for many years. Recently, too, another obstacle to research has presented itself in the deliberate policy of suppressing information inaugurated by the Edinburgh Bibliographical Society—a policy abandoned, it is true, after printing two volumes of papers, at present unattainable in the great copyright libraries of the kingdom, or the national libraries of America, France, Italy, or Germany. A policy of this kind is unjust alike to the contributors of papers (who may see the credit of their work transferred to others publishing similar results) and to students of the subject with two mysterious volumes closed before them, which may contain any number of unsuspected facts. References such as that given for No. 61 of this book, "E.B.S. 1. 17. 7," are, to speak plainly, worthless; they cannot be considered by scientific bibliographers for a moment. We are pleased to see that the Society, through its secretary, offers bibliographical students an opportunity of purchasing the invaluable volume before us.

A list of Scottish printed books in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries should be of the greatest interest, not only to bibliographers, but still more to those for whom they work, the students of history and culture. It is true that, as Mr. Aldis points out, one cannot generalize as to the state of Scottish literature and culture without taking into account the books printed abroad by Scots authors and the importation of English books; but too much weight may easily be given to these considerations. The historian may study in Scotland the working of the censorship in a way possible in no other country. The Stuart theory proclaimed by Charles I. in 1639 was that "the Print is the King's in all countries," and unlicensed printing of any kind a breach of royal prerogative. This theory did not obtain in England during the Tudor reigns, and Henry VIII. expressly guarded against printers putting on their work, "Cum privilegio regali," &c., unless they added "ad imprimendum solum"—copyright, in fact. The ordinary unlicensed printer in England was dealt with by his craft-guild; if he came before the public authorities it was for sedition or heresy. The whole history of English printing under the Stuarts is that of an attempt to apply the theory of royal prerogative so as to limit the number of presses as much as possible, and keep under the strictest supervision those suffered to exist. In Scotland the theory was accepted implicitly, and those who rejected the king's authority themselves proceeded without hesitation to exercise his prerogatives; the mechanism of the censorship was as strong in the hands of his enemies as it had been in his own. Milton's 'Areopagitica' was written against Presbyterians trained in the Stuart school. We have, then, before us the official theory of Scottish culture and religion, politics, economics, and education, in all its varying aspects, and every now and then the anonymous utterance of revolt. It is to be regretted that Mr. Aldis did not print as an appendix a list of the "doubtful" pamphlets of 1638 and of 1638-90. In view of the long-expected Thomason catalogue it would have been invaluable.

What proportion this list of 3,919 titles bears to the actual output of the Scottish press is very doubtful. Probably the destruction has been great. Some examples will illustrate this. During the reign of Mary, Queen of Scots, ninety-three proclamations are known to have been issued; three of them only are in existence. They were probably all printed, for the proportion for James VI. in Scotland is nearly the same; of 528 proclamations issued, only sixteen are known to exist. The four earliest of these, by the way, though in the British Museum, as Mr. Aldis's list shows, are not referred to in the Reading-Room Catalogue. We find thus a possible loss of 96 per cent. in the first century of Scottish printing. A fortunate chance has preserved a printer's bill for 104 official documents printed (and not paid for) between 1643 and 1647. Of these 104 only twenty-three are known to exist—a loss of nearly 80 per cent. To judge by Mr. Edmond's bibliography of Aberdeen printers, the loss of books, as distinguished from official documents, is not nearly so great; but, on the other hand, he took cognizance only of books of whose existence some record had been preserved, and nearly all the official documents mentioned no longer exist.

A cursory glance at the titles of the works preserved is enough to show the interest of the book. One would hardly have expected to find more editions of Sir David Lindsay than of 'The Confession of Faith' or the Bible, yet so it is. Sir William Wallace, as sung by Henry the Minstrel, has twenty editions preserved, and others come near him in popularity. There is a very full list of almanacs with prognostications, from 1619 onward, and a great many theses, the larger number of them from Aberdeen. The number of school-books preserved is naturally very small. But the literary interest of Scottish printing is subordinated to the political, which is very prominent and mainly exhibited from official sources. Religious writing was kept strictly in hand, as was to be expected where the public appealed to was of a doctrinal rather than a devotional turn of mind.

The list of printers, booksellers, and stationers, with its accompanying biographical details, is a very useful and important feature. It shows how little Scotland owes to foreign influence in the matter of printing. What little there was was French first, and afterwards English, and, indeed, when one comes on a piece of clean Scottish printing, the inference is that the printer is of English origin. The biography of Tyler is perhaps too liberal in admitting Watson's statement that "Tyler, having printed for the usurper against the king, was justly forfeited at Scoon," for he printed, on the contrary, Charles II.'s proclamation as king in 1649. He was in London, however, as a jobbing printer from 1655 to 1658. This document illustrates, too, the difficulty of making absolute statements in bibliography. Mr. Aldis says:—

"I do not remember a single instance of a block used by a Scottish printer in which the arms were quartered otherwise than Scotland first and fourth."

To do so was indeed treason, but the copy of the proclamation in the British Museum (No. 1378) has England first. Nos. 1684 and 1711 have also English Union arms. On the other hand, No. 950, printed by Young (which Mr. Aldis thinks probably of London origin), has the Scotch Union arms.

Perhaps the most interesting and the least defensible entry in the list is No. 1840, Bible, Lithuanian (Chylinski's) [1661-8, Edin. Tyler]. This interesting fragment in the British Museum it is now generally agreed by Lithuanian bibliographers is not connected in any way with Chylinski. An additional disturbing element in the controversy has just been brought to light in the shape of the Letters Patent of Charles II., dated July 12th, 1661, for a collection in aid of the Lithuanian Churches, and for translating and printing the Bible in Lithuanian. It expressly states that about one-half of the Bible had been translated and printed, and orders any amount over that necessary to translate and print the Bible in London to be sent by exchange to Lithuania. It seems that the part printed in Lithuania was totally destroyed by the printer, who could not get his money. Chylinski came over before the Restoration unofficially to raise money, but could only collect enough to keep himself, and then John de Kraino, who obtained the patent, was sent to England by the National Synod of Protestant Churches in Lithuania. We may assume, till further evidence appears, that treasurers appointed to pay out the money collected for printing a Bible in London would not pay for having it done in Edinburgh.

It is a pity that Mr. Aldis has not grappled with the difficulty of describing proclamations and other documents printed on one side of the paper, but has adopted the rather misleading term "single sheet." A proclamation, which may consist of from two to twelve sheets, cannot be described as a single sheet; "broad-side" would be better, but has been somewhat restricted in meaning. We suppose that he would defend himself for the non-inclusion of the two 1587 editions of 'The Book of Common Order,' printed by Vautrollier in London, by saying that he did not print for a Scotch bookseller (which is very doubtful); but part of one of them was almost certainly printed in Scotland, perhaps after Vautrollier's death. A number of slight suggestions may be noted. No. 274 should be given on Herbert's authority and be dated November 27th—it refers to February, 1596; No. 983 is No. 1124, and so probably is 1062; of 1378, 3488, and 3774, two editions are known; 1799 is dated 1666; 2026 is dated 1674; 2517, 2598, 2601, and 2655 are London reprints of Scotch prints; and 3374 is after July, 1695. We offer our congratulations to the Edinburgh Bibliographical Society and to Mr. Aldis on so successful a completion of the first portion of their scheme, and hope that its publication will lead to a revival of interest in Scottish typography which will bring to light many books now entirely forgotten. To students of the history of the seventeenth century and bibliographers alike the work will be indispensable.

The Western Manuscripts in the Library of Emmanuel College: a Descriptive Catalogue. By M. R. James. (Cambridge, University Press.)—This is another of Dr. James's excellent catalogues of Cambridge college libraries, the method and merits of which are by this time so well known that it is almost needless to call attention to them. The library of Emmanuel has no such special features as those of Corpus or Trinity, but it contains some noteworthy MSS. Its copy of the Greek 'Hippiatrica' (No. 251) is valuable, but its other classical MSS. are late and not of much note. It has a well-written copy of the Pauline Epistles (No. 110), and a Greek Psalter (No. 253), which, in Dr. James's opinion, was written in England in the twelfth century. It possesses a unique Wycliffite tract (No. 85) and three Wycliffite Bibles (Nos. 21, 34, 108); with regard to the last two of these, Dr. James omits to state which of the Wycliffite versions is represented by them, or what is their number in the edition of Forshall and Madden. The library is strong in well-written examples of somewhat ordinary MSS., such as thirteenth-century Latin Bibles; and it also possesses a few really fine illuminated volumes, notably the English Horæ of the early fifteenth century (No. 92), and Gregory's 'Moralia,' a beautiful example of the East Anglian school of the fourteenth century. The total number of volumes is 264, but a few printed books are included among them. No facsimiles are given.

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

MR. BALFOUR BROWNE, K.C., publishes, through Messrs. Longman, South Africa, a volume in which he records a hurried trip. Most of his opinions touch current politics, and are beyond our view. We share his opinion of our military conduct of the war, but cannot follow him upon racial discussions as between Briton and Boer. He is a little sweeping in his opinions, and summarily puts down the native as "a liar. But here he is not superior to the Boer." Mr. Balfour Browne does not strike us as well equipped for the task which he has undertaken. When he begins to write about the future government of the new colonies, he has, for example, these words, "a question between responsible and representative government. Now the two words, as opposed, sound foreign to English ears." The official description of two of the best-known forms of government in the British Empire, invariably given in Parliament and in Government offices, as well as in the books upon the subject, is in the terms which seemed strange to Mr. Balfour Browne when he wrote the main part of his book. There is a foot-note which shows that he came to understand them later. The self-governing colonies possess government "representative and responsible"; the "responsible" meaning the full power of Cabinet government. "The eleven self-governing colonies," of which the First Ministers were made Privy Councillors on the advice of Mr. Chamberlain, were those possessing government officially described by terms which our author thinks "foreign to English ears." On the subject of forced labour Mr. Browne appears to hold the views of the South African whites rather than those generally entertained at home. But he shows a well-grounded suspicion of the "mean whites," sometimes called by him "low whites," who are one of the greatest dangers of South Africa. The black man, he thinks, must be made to work; and this doctrine is expanded at much length, while a chapter is also given to a post mortem on the "dead doctrine" of the liberty of the subject. He goes to the root of the whole labour question in South Africa when he explains what has been truly told him, no doubt by Australians, namely, that the gold in South Africa is so "poor" that it "cannot pay for white labour," while it is the case that all the gold mines of Australia are so worked. We may add the fact, which he does not mention, that Australia still produces as much gold as South Africa. He states that the moral tone of the Rand "is not high," and that

"the gold lords are prepared to revert to the practices of corruption that existed before the war.... And if the mine-owners lost the power, they would, I fear, bribe."

Our author is mistaken in thinking that white labour in sugar plantations was forced on Queensland from outside. There was an overwhelming majority in Queensland in favour of white labour, and if we remember rightly, the labour party of that colony "made a clean sweep" of its representation on the Federal Senate—that is, carried every seat. The subjects with which the book deals are mostly gloomy; but here and there is a good bit of chaff, though sometimes upon the saddest subjects. Shortly after Mr. Chamberlain's descent into a mine, the rope broke, and the falling cage killed forty-three natives "on the spot. Of course, if this had been forty-three Chinese there would have been a general election in England." It is, perhaps, fair to say that Lord Milner's resignation deprives "the Liberal party of their only policy in South Africa, which is 'the recall of Lord Milner.'" Mr. Browne is weak on wills and shalls and woulds and shoulds, but he is modest, except about his politics, and does not set up a claim to possess a style.

MISS DURHAM is one of the most entertaining of all travellers, but her new book The Burden of the Balkans (Arnold) deals with circumstances too grave for her to tell stories as excellent as those to which she has accustomed us. Miss Durham has been working for a relief fund in that part of Macedonia which forms the district of the most complicated rivalry between the various fighting races. At the back of Albania, to the south of Serbia, there lie territories which are coveted by Greek, Albanian, Italian, Austrian, Serb of Serbia, and Bulgar, and which are also inhabited by many of the Wallach race. Miss Durham has no preconceived opinion, and she reports facts which tell in all directions. On the whole, the view which is to be gathered from her book is that in the district where she had to relieve distress occasioned by the ferocity with which the Turks put down a hopeless insurrection, the Austrians are the masters who would be least unwelcome. Miss Durham has no illusions. The horrible state of the country she ascribes originally to Turkish rule. The dreadful ignorance and stupidity of the people she traces to that rule, as observers trace the supposed vices of the Jews to their treatment through long centuries by the Christians. The risings she shows to have been instigated by Russian Consuls armed with Russian money, and she finds universal testimony to the wholly artificial character of the so-called Macedonian, but really Bulgarian movement. She does not wonder at the action of the Turks, even when they defile churches, and explains philosophically the reasons for the defilement, and the provocation given by the similar treatment of mosques. In her proofs against the Bulgarians she adopts the arguments of the Greeks, but she evidently has no belief in the Greeks, and thinks their clients partly Albanian and partly Wallach. Miss Durham has the adventurous traveller's liking for fighting races, and, on the whole, her sympathies appear to be with the Christian Montenegrins and the Mohammedan Albanians; but her book is an armoury of facts for the use of all the races against one another. It is clear that the great rising which had been carefully prepared for 1904 was prevented by Japanese success; and it is also clear that the arrangement between Austria and Russia is only temporary, and that it has not prevented the struggle between the two influences on the spot. The hypocrisy of our pretended belief that all will be well if we support joint action by Russia and Austria in setting up a reformed Turkish Government is clearly brought out. Miss Durham had much experience of the new Christian police, and one of the lightest anecdotes which she allows herself in the present book concerns the relations of these gentlemen with their Mohammedan colleagues and with herself. A Christian Turkish policeman and a Mohammedan comrade explain to her their views. The Albanian says that the Christians would kill every Moslem "in the land if they could. It is our land. We must defend ourselves." There comes the reply: "He does not understand. The land is really ours. Naturally it is we that must kill them." In the meantime the local population explain that they had won some little victories in their rising, and, notably, had surprised a small body of soldiers, killed them, "poured petroleum on the bodies and burnt them." "I hope they were all dead when you burnt them," I said. "Who knows?" they replied, oracularly. Miss Durham found in one place that no one would receive the two Turkish policemen, one Christian and the other Mohammedan, by whom she was accompanied, so she shared her room with them. They were very kind, but made coffee every few minutes throughout the night, and patted her till she "partook." Our author, having been entertained by the Jews on "salep," adds "a popular drink in England before the days of tea and coffee." Surely the saloop-stalls of a few years ago are not yet wholly extinct. But why was saloop never drunk except between 2 and 5 A.M.? We like Miss Durham's style, but she confuses us when she describes the Turkish soldiers as "Tommies," a term of endearment which ought to be confined, we think, to Mr. Atkins and his friends.

It is difficult to know how The Story of Venice ought to be dealt with in the "Mediaeval Towns Series" (Dent & Co.). Mr. Thomas Okey, who has undertaken it, has solved the question in a manner which we do not criticize, as there are obvious objections to any possible plan. Mr. Okey begins with an excellent preface containing some useful notes as to routes better than the usual railway line. He then gives a long historical account of the Republic, which is "breathless," but which could hardly be anything else when it is remembered how great a number of important events have to be brought together. After the history come the art and town, treated together with full regard to Ruskin. The little volume is not, we think, exactly what the traveller wants, as it contains too much history and too little guide-book. On the other hand, the reader who wants history will probably look for it elsewhere. Still, the book is sure to have a sale, as the traveller will add it to his guide-books, and he will not be disappointed or displeased. There is a statement in the first page which is too confident as to the view of "historians and antiquarians" as to the original Venetians. Another story, not here named, makes them Slavs, and their name Wends, like the Slavs of Wendish Prussia. There is a good deal of authority to support this view. Mr. Okey's style yields here and there a terrible new verb, but is, on the whole, to be commended, and he is occasionally epigrammatic, as in his statement that the master passions of Venice were those for live commerce and dead saints. 'The Story of Venice,' like the other volumes of the "Mediaeval Towns Series," is illustrated, and the cuts are worthy of commendation.

Intentions, a good translation of Oscar Wilde's essays under the same title, has been executed by M. J. Joseph-Renaud, and published by M. Stock of Paris. It is curious that the translation should be so good as it is, given the absence of correction of proofs revealed on almost every page of the volume, and a certain carelessness which goes beyond this, and is discoverable in many of the foot-notes. The Parliamentary Blue-book, for example, is confused with the Blue-book form of our street directory, and both of them with the peerages. Dickens is described as one of the English authors most liked in France, and there follows a list of his works which contains only, with one of the best known, three others which are not among the chosen volumes of the faithful. Cockney is misspelt "Cokney." Boswell is spelt two ways in two contiguous lines. Millais is misspelt. Oscar Wilde himself figures frequently as "Wilde" and frequently as "Vilde." The appearance of "our Henry Arthur" as "Sir Jones" is startling to an Englishman, but will pass muster in Paris, where such treatment of our names is not unusual. We do not understand how Lancret can be described as "Le Watteau anglais." Great numbers of such mistakes could be picked out, as they occur on almost every page, but, after naming them, we shall confine ourselves to those which have a special literary interest. In the translation "the Master of Balliol" is treated both in text and foot-note as though he were an abstraction, whereas, of course, to Oscar Wilde, as to all of us, he was as real a person as "Lord Tennyson and Mr. Gladstone," who are bracketed with him in a sentence. 'Endymion' is ascribed to Shelley in a passage in which even the context ought to have made it clear that Keats was meant, the mistake being revealed by a foot-note. The translator's Biblical knowledge is displayed by the explanation in a note that "Shibboleth" is a word of Freemasonry. Many difficulties are successfully faced in the foot-notes; even some which generally puzzle Frenchmen. There is explained, for example, the identity of each of the various Lyttons and Bulwers, and we hardly complain that in one place Bulwer is called Lord Bulwer. We repeat that, though the inaccuracies of the book are startling, it constitutes on the whole, in spite of them, a good piece of work, and the charm of the criticism and paradoxes of the original is far less lost in the translation than was to have been expected.

THE Vicomte Robert d'Humières is a Frenchman who knows England well, and the translation by Mr. A. T. de Mattos of a volume published by Mr. Heinemann, under the title Through Isle and Empire, is welcome. M. d'Humières is a friend of England and of the English, and in his present book is complimentary to us, except so far as our military proceedings in South Africa are concerned:—

"Those commanders of whom they speak, generals no longer able to count their reverses or the human lives uselessly sacrificed to obtain new reverses, those army-leaders who, in the opinion of my own country, would be for all time discredited, despised, ruined, done for, are named by their soldiers in tones of respect, admiration, and confidence..... You must be proud of something when you're an Englishman; they are proud, first, because they do not understand and, next, because they understand that they must not understand."

Our author visits Aldershot, and draws a sharp contrast between the life of French officers in "squalid pensions," and our

"messes, with their supplies of rare wines and gold and silver plate. From the picturesque point of view, this army is admirable; one of these days, no doubt, the decorative mission will be the only one left for armies to fulfil. They make an eloquent appeal to the nigger that is in each of us..... Certain regiments have symbolic animals—the Seaforth Highlanders a deer, others a goat—which march at their head on parade, a sort of fetiches, of living, petted and august standards."

Some may find the translation of the last sentence awkward; but we have nothing but praise for the translator, who, in these words, had indeed a difficult task. The French writer, who is, we think, not without military experience, returns frequently to "that campaign whose leaders, laden with ovations, grants and honours, enjoy the fruits of their reverses with calm, but dignified modesty, amid the homage of their fellow-citizens and the enthusiasm of their victims!"

M. d'Humières is entertaining on the drama and on literature. He is civil to our theatres, as a way of being disagreeable to his own, in the points in which we are strong and they are weak—not acting. Our literary public is treated with polite contempt: "In England, Jules Verne would have become a popular novelist for readers of every age." We like M. d'Humières best when he is with us here at home, and regret his escape to India in the second half of his book. The visits to England which are related were not all paid at the same time, and some are a little stale. They are dated by the events referred to; for example, a Henley visit by a contest between "a Protestant missionary and paterfamilias who measures himself against the son of a brewer and peer of the realm."

The return from Japan of the great heavy-weight of Cambridge University crews is not forgotten. A good story about Sir Reginald Talbot follows. Our author affects to leave out all the names; but he indicates so clearly who are the subjects of his stories that they rise to every mind. It appears that our then military attaché in Paris had some trouble in obtaining his election to "Le Jockey,"

"because of his ancestor's differences with Joan of Arc. It was Baron Alphonse who started this hare: the others had forgotten all about it."

The member of the well-informed race naturally knew French history, and the non-Jew French members of the fashionable club naturally did not. 'Through Isle and Empire' will have a success in India, as Simla society is dealt with. We have few faults to find with the amusing book. We do not credit the statement that the Maharajah of Jeypore, when he came to England for the Coronation, was allowed to spend three-quarters of a million sterling, "of which at least one-half goes in presents to the King." Such statements should not be so rashly made. Indian finance is the subject of sufficient supervision, even when it is that of a protected prince; and great Englishmen are not given to receiving presents. The mistake which some hold to have been made is that the rajahs have been either encouraged or allowed to subscribe largely to institutions which some think not of a useful kind: the Imperial Institute, Memorials, and the like. But it is a very different thing from "presents." It is not the case, as M. d'Humières has been told and thinks, that Holland House possesses "uninterrupted tradition." Our author writes as though the books and pictures had been there for two hundred years. It is, of course, a well-known fact that there was a gap in the fashionable life of Holland House, in which it fell into squalor, and rooms were let. We note that he declares that Loti is a very "good officer from the professional point of view": an opinion which we do not ourselves question as it concerns his country, but which differs from the judgment pronounced in other well-known books. We have found only one misprint, a misspelling of the name of M. Robert de la Sizeranne.

The Wisdom of the Desert. By James O. Hannay. (Methuen & Co.)—The modern mind finds it very difficult to realize the life led by the early Christian hermits in parts of the Libyan desert and other desolate districts of the Nile valley. A more than ordinary mental effort is required to understand the "rationale" of multitudes of men voluntarily banishing themselves from the great centres of human activity and trying to combat all kinds of spiritual ills in the grim and uninviting tracts of the remote wilderness. Such a condition of things is so strange to us that certain continental critics felt themselves called upon to deny almost in toto the authenticity of the narratives in which the exploits of these solitaries are recorded. Even St. Anthony was declared by Dr. Weingarten, in a work published in 1876, to be mythical rather than real, and the corollary, of course, was that the life of the saint, attributed to St. Athanasius, must be regarded as a mere romance, written with the object of holding up an ideal to readers of a later age. More recently, however, a sounder view of things has taken the field. Dom Cuthbert Butler has in his 'Lausiac History' made a fresh and reassuring study of the whole problem, and a number of continental scholars now find themselves in substantial agreement with his results. Apart from the critical sifting of the documents, it ought also to be recognized that the human mind is capable of developing tendencies in one age which are almost entirely dormant in another. One of the gravest mistakes which the historian of humanity can make is to impose the limitations of one particular period on the entire mental experience of the race. The early monks were, in fact, merely trying to realize a peculiar kind of ideal, which to them seemed the all-in-all of the entire higher life of man. That their special kind of striving, and their self-imposed solitary mode of existence, should have produced a strange and, to us, almost unintelligible kind of psychology, is nothing more than might, in the circumstances, be expected. The whole subject thus assumes an aspect which must be intensely interesting to a student of the human mind and its manifold possibilities. The scholar and the theologian have, of course, their own ways of regarding the problem. Mr. Hannay treats the theme from the devotional point of view. With this object before him he has translated a number of sayings and short stories, collected mainly from the texts published by Rosweyde in 1615, and later on by Migne in his famous 'Patrologia.' The result is admirable. Mr. Hannay has in a manner even more than succeeded in his aim. For apart from everything else, many of the little pieces are in their way witty, and sometimes even piquant. The early monks surely had a sense of humour of their own, and many of them well knew how to give a turn to their conversation which might pass for pretty fine satire if their object were not so unmistakably lofty. Was this a reminiscence, conscious or unconscious, of the literary training which many of them had received in their earlier years? Be that as it may, Mr. Hannay's book is one which can be read with both pleasure and profit, and we believe that it will be so read by a large number of persons. It is prettily got up, the design on the title-page being effective. The vignette preceding the first chapter will seem to many needlessly hideous, but the design at the end is pleasant to look at.

MR. EDWIN A. GROSVENOR, Professor of Modern Governments and their Administration in Amherst College, Massachusetts, has accomplished a useful piece of work in his translation and revision of Victor Duruy's General History of the World (Dean & Son). The Minister of Public Instruction under Napoleon III. was an orderly writer, who, though he by no means ranks with Martin, Michelet, or Taine, did much to introduce system into the field in which he was an indefatigable labourer. But his survey inevitably contained inequalities, and it cannot be said that they have disappeared under Mr. Grosvenor's editing. The mediæval sections are especially weak, and the few sentences which dispose of Edward I. are a ludicrous underestimate of his importance in English history. The translation, too, is sometimes unfortunate, as in a passage where the Greek gods are condemned, on the score that they were "not always respectable." True, but nobody ever thinks of associating Zeus or Aphrodite with the bourgeois virtues. On the other hand, the Roman Empire is treated in a spirit of sympathetic philosophy, and—to come to another period—the narrative of the Napoleonic age is, in its present form at any rate, most creditably free from bias. Mr. Grosvenor has carried on the story from the Revolution of 1848, the point at which it was dropped by Victor Duruy, down to the year 1901. His supplement is much to his credit, since it compresses a good deal of information into a small space, yet avoids the fault of piling fact upon fact to the bewilderment of the student.

MR. H. A. BRYDEN is a prolific writer on sport of almost every sort, his name being perhaps best known in connexion with Africa. His new volume, however, as its title, Nature and Sport in Britain (Grant Richards), implies, is confined to the United Kingdom. It consists of thirty-one chapters or short articles on a wide variety of subjects, many of them being reprinted from magazines and papers such as The Field and Country Life, and all being of the class to be expected from the places of their birth. They are brightly written, and if occasionally there is repetition, the book has the advantage that, each story being in itself complete, it may be opened at any chapter and read without detriment to what has gone before or what follows. It is fully illustrated, partly from photographs and partly from old prints; there is an index, and the volume is well turned out.

The Life and Times of St. Boniface. By James W. Williamson, M.D. (Frowde).—It is sometimes pleasant to meet with an author who has the courage to put forth a work without a word of either preface or introduction; but in this case the omission of all explanation as to the raison d'être of another book on St. Boniface is not a little remarkable. No particular or special object can be served by putting forth some hundred and forty pages, however attractively issued, on the great English-born apostle of Germany if they are of a commonplace character, and present no novel point nor any scholarly investigation. The authorities cited are of an elementary character and easily accessible to every one. A good English life of St. Boniface yet remains to be written. Had Dr. Williamson taken the trouble to investigate the early spellings of Hampshire place-names, he would not have found it necessary to express any doubt as to the old monastery of Nutselle, where Boniface spent so much of the early part of his life, having been situated at Nutshalling (corrupted of recent years into Nursling), a pretty little Hampshire village a few miles south of Romsey. Dr. Williamson bewails English indifference to the memory of St. Boniface. Had he visited Nursling, he would have found a marble slab in the porch of the old church thus inscribed:—

"This church is dedicated to St. Boniface (Winfrid), the Apostle of the Germans, who was born at Crediton, A.D. 680, and for twenty years lived at a monastery in this parish. He then preached the Gospel in Germany for nearly forty years. He was the first Archbishop of Mayence, A.D. 746, and was martyred at Dokkum in Friesland, June 5, A.D. 755."

The question of the dedication of this and four or five other old English churches to St. Boniface might with advantage have been discussed. Dr. Williamson rightly gives an account of the tomb and relics of St. Boniface in Fulda Cathedral, but is apparently unaware that a small relic of this saint is still preserved in the ancient Northamptonshire church of Brixworth, where there used to be an important local guild that bore his name.

DR. ZIMMERMANN, formerly attached to the German Embassy in London, has written a useful volume, Kolonialpolitik, which is published by Hirschfeld, of Leipsic. The book is stuffed with facts, and is enormously full for its length. The subjects treated are indeed more numerous than those dealt with in any other volume of colonial history or bibliography. There is more in it than in the much longer French books on the same subject. On the other hand, Dr. Zimmermann omits what to many is the most interesting part of colonial history—that dealt with by Mr. Hugh Egerton in his well-known volume—the attempt in our Elizabethan times to establish new kingdoms across the sea connected with the Crown of England by only a personal union. Dr. Zimmermann deals with grants and charters, but not to any considerable extent with the growth of free Parliaments and with the principles which have now led to the creation of the Commonwealth, the Dominion, and the ordinary self-governing colonies, such as New Zealand. The Indian Empire is also somewhat outside Dr. Zimmermann's sphere. The British part of his volume is chiefly that which bears on German enterprise of the present day—the Crown colonies, the spheres of chartered companies, and the protectorates. Our author is highly competent for the task which he has undertaken, and is, indeed, one of the best living authorities upon it. The only criticism which we venture to offer is that he has not made enough of the case of the North Borneo charter, which has special importance on account of its having been the forerunner of all the grants of the same kind. It is doubtful whether any further charters will be granted, and it is possible that the chapter of history which was opened by the negotiations for the North Borneo charter in 1879 was closed by the breakdown of the suggestions for dealing with the northern territory of Australia. Some of the recent proceedings of the Foreign Office in connexion with British East Africa have, however, been of somewhat the same description.

MESSRS. CONSTABLE send us reprints of two books which we are glad to see again—Mr. G. W. Forrest's vivid and interesting Cities of India, and Travels round our Village, by Miss E. G. Hayden, which gives a capital account of rustic life in the Midlands. We think that the publishers would do well to state distinctly that these volumes are not new books. The few reviews who are taken in, and supply fresh and ignorant notices, are surely negligible.

WE have received an early copy of the Auditors' Report of the Booksellers' Provident Institution for the year ending December last. The invested funds amounted to 32,588l. 7s. 10d., as against 31,460l. 12s. 3d. in 1903. The great economy with which the work of the Institution is conducted is shown by the fact that the entire expenses only amounted to 227l. 16s. This sum included the secretary and collector's salary, printing, stationery, postages, &c. There was paid in permanent assistance 682l. 18s. 4d., and in temporary assistance 487l. 7s. 6d. From the Newman Trust for unmarried daughters of retail booksellers three grants were made, amounting to 53l.

WE have on our table Siepmann's Primary French Course, Part II., by Otto Siepmann (Macmillan),—Oxford Modern French Series, edited by Léon Delbos: Voyage en Espagne, by T. Gautier, edited by G. Goodridge (Oxford, Clarendon Press),—The Children's Book of Moral Lessons, by F. J. Gould (Watts),—The Antiquary, Vol. XL. (Stock),—Saint Bartholomew's Hospital Reports, edited by A. E. Garrod and W. McAdam Eccles, Vol. XL. (Smith & Elder),—Proving our Case, by W. N. Edwards (Partridge),—Nerves in Order; or, the Maintenance of Health, by A. T. Schofield, M.D. (Hodder & Stoughton),—Lessons on Living, by H. R. Wakefield (Blackie),—A New Morality, by A. T. Turner (Grant Richards),—The Poets Laureate from the Earliest Times to the Present, by J. C. Wright (Jarrold),—The Old English 'Squire, by J. Careless (Methuen),—Little Miss Dee, by R. Field (Revell),—The Complete Idler, by H. W. Tompkins (Dent),—To Nancy, by F. Wedmore (Isbister),—The Unpardonable War, by J. Barnes (Macmillan),—The Adventures of Louis Dural, by M. Bryant (Brown & Langham),—Dream of Provence, by F. Wedmore (Isbister),—Songs from a Georgia Garden and Echoes from the Gates of Silence, by R. Loveman (Lippincott),—An Inaugural Ode, by A. B. Thaw (The Monadnock Press, Nelson, N.H.),—Fancies, by H. A. W. Wood (Elkin Mathews),—The Three Greatest Forces in the World, by W. E. Peyton: Part I. The Incarnation (Black),—The Voice of the Fathers, by S. F. A. Caulfeild (Brown & Langham),—The Religion of Woman: an Historical Study, by J. McCabe (Watts),—and The Story of St. Paul, by B. W. Bacon, D.D. (Hodder & Stoughton). Among New Editions we have Tables of the Present Value of Annuities, by T. K. Stubbins (C. & E. Layton),—and Barnaby Rudge, by C. Dickens (Macmillan).

LIST OF NEW BOOKS.

ENGLISH.

Theology.

- Adamson (R. M.), The Christian Doctrine of the Lord's Supper, cr. 8vo, 4s. 6d. net.
 Balch (A. E.), An Introduction to the Study of Christian Ethics, 12mo, 2s. 6d.
 Butler (D.), Eternal Elements in the Christian Faith, cr. 8vo, 2s. 6d. net.
 Caulfeild (S. F. A.), The Voice of the Fathers, cr. 8vo, 2s. 6d. net.
 Dargan (E. C.), A History of Preaching, extra cr. 8vo, 7s. 6d.
 Dods (M.), The Bible, its Origin and Nature, cr. 8vo, 4s. 6d. net.
 Green (R. T.), How to Preach, 16mo, 2s. net.
 Holmes (E. K.), In Watchings Often, cr. 8vo, 3s. 6d.
 "In Full and Glad Surrender": the Life and Work of Martin J. Hall, by his Sister, extra cr. 8vo, 6s.
 Little Flowers of St. Francis of Assisi, cr. 8vo, 5s. net.
 Pileiderer (O.), The Early Christian Conception of Christ, cr. 8vo, 3s. 6d.
 Smyth (N.), Through Science to Faith, 8vo, 6s.
 Wilson (S. L.), Helpful Words for Daily Life, cr. 8vo, 3s. 6d. net.

Fine Art and Archaeology.

- Holmes (J.), Cotton Cloth Designing, 8vo, 4/6 net.
 Rodin (Auguste), the Man—his Ideas—his Works, by C. Maclair, translated by C. Black, 4to, 10/6 net.
 Spiers (R. P.), Architecture, East and West, 8vo, 12/6 net.
 Women Painters of the World, edited by W. S. Sparrow, 4to, sewed, 5/ net; Édition de Luxe, 21/ net.

Poetry and the Drama.

- Anthology of Italian Lyric Poetry of the Mediæval Period, cr. 8vo, sewed, 12/ net.
 Cantonese Love Songs, with Introduction by C. Clementi: Vol. 1, Chinese Text; Vol. 2, Translation, each 10/6 net.
 Fairless (Michael), The Grey Brethren, and other Fragments in Prose and Verse, 12mo, 2/6 net.
 Milton (J.), Paradise Lost, illustrated by W. Strang, 8vo, 3/6 net.
 Pinero (A. W.), A Wife without a Smile, 12mo, sewed, 1/6 net.
 Trojan Women of Euripides, translated into Verse by G. Murray, cr. 8vo, 2/ net.

Music.

- Henley (W.), The Violin: Solo Playing, Soloists, and Solos, cr. 8vo, 2/6.

Philosophy.

- Newton (J.), The Problem of Personality, extra cr. 8vo, 5/

History and Biography.

- Davies (W. C.) and Jones (W. L.), The University of Wales and its Constituent Colleges, cr. 8vo, 5/ net.
 Donne (W. Bodham) and his Friends, by C. B. Johnson, 8vo, 10/6 net.
 Macphail (A.), Essays in Puritanism, cr. 8vo, 6/ net.
 Patmore (Coventry), by E. Gosse, cr. 8vo, 3/6 net.
 Trémouille (Charlotte de la), Countess of Derby, The Life Story of, by M. C. Rowsell, 8vo, 6/ net.

Geography and Travel.

- Browne (J. H. B.), South Africa, 8vo, 7/6 net.
 D'Humières (Vicomte R.), Through Isle and Empire, translated by A. T. de Mattos, cr. 8vo, 6/ net.
 Durham (M. E.), The Burden of the Balkans, 8vo, 14/ net.
 Knox (G. W.), Imperial Japan, 8vo, 7/6 net.
 Steuart (M. E.), Every-Day Life on a Ceylon Cocoa Estate, 6/ net.

Sports and Pastimes.

- Auden (J. E.), A Short History of the Albrighton Hunt, cr. 8vo, 10/6 net.
 Complete Bridge Player, by Cut-Cavendish, 2/6 net.
 Hopwood (A.), The Old English Sheep Dog from Puppyhood to Championship, cr. 8vo, 5/ net.
 Illustrated Guide to the Shootings of Scotland, 8vo, 3/6 net.

Education.

- Chancellor (W. E.), American Schools, cr. 8vo, 7/6

Philology.

- Stapleton (W. H.), Comparative Handbook of Congo Languages, 8vo, 6/ net.

Science.

- Flammarion (C.), Astronomy for Amateurs, translated by F. A. Welby, cr. 8vo, 6/ net.
 Joly (C. J.), A Manual of Quaternions, 8vo, 10/ net.
 McCleary (G. F.), Infantile Mortality and Infants' Milk Depôts, cr. 8vo, 6/ net.
 Medical Annual, 1905, cr. 8vo, 7/6 net.
 Turner (H. W.) and Hobart (H. M.), The Insulation of Electric Machines, 8vo, 10/6 net.

General Literature.

- Abbot (Mrs. C. L.), The Wanderer, cr. 8vo, 3/6 net.
 Altshuler (J. A.), Guthrie of the Times, cr. 8vo, 6/ net.
 Barlow (J.), By Beach and Bog Land, cr. 8vo, 6/ net.
 Birmingham (G. A.), The Seething Pot, cr. 8vo, 6/ net.
 Blissett (N. K.), The Silver Key, cr. 8vo, 6/ net.
 De Crespigny (Mrs. P. C.), The Rose Brocade, cr. 8vo, 6/ net.
 Doyle (A. C.), The Return of Sherlock Holmes, cr. 8vo, 6/ net.
 Drummond (H.), The King's Scapegoat, cr. 8vo, 6/ net.
 Gallon (T.), Aunt Phipps, cr. 8vo, 6/ net.
 Gardenhire (S. M.), The Silence of Mrs. Harrold, cr. 8vo, 6/ net.
 Gerard (Morice), The Adventures of an Equerry, cr. 8vo, 6/ net.
 Gillie (E. A.), Jehanne, cr. 8vo, 6/ net.
 Gladys (E.), Thoughts of a Fool, cr. 8vo, 6/ net.
 Glyn (E.), The Vicissitudes of Evangeline, cr. 8vo, 6/ net.
 Golding (H.), The Money-Hunger, cr. 8vo, 3/6 net.
 Gwen, by Anteros, cr. 8vo, 3/6 net.
 Keary (C. F.), Bloomshury, cr. 8vo, 6/ net.
 Le Queux (W.), The Valley of the Shadow, cr. 8vo, 6/ net.
 Norris (W. E.), Barham of Beltana, cr. 8vo, 6/ net.
 Punshon (E. R.), Constance West, cr. 8vo, 6/ net.
 Shining Ferry, by Q., cr. 8vo, 6/ net.
 Tompkins (H. W.), The Complete Idler, 16mo, 2/6 net.
 Vorst (M. van), Amanda of the Mill, cr. 8vo, 6/ net.
 Wilson (T. W.), Langbarrow Hall, cr. 8vo, 6/ net.

FOREIGN.Law.

- Dictionnaire Dalloz, Part 1, 9fr. 50.

Fine Art and Archaeology.

- Die Altertümer unserer heidnischen Vorzeit, Vol. 5, Part 4, 8m.
 Lapauze (H.), Mélanges sur l'Art Français, 3fr. 50.

Poetry and the Drama.

- Braz (A. le), Le Théâtre Celtique, 3fr. 50.
 Joannidès (A.), La Comédie-Française, 1904, 7fr. 50.

Philosophy.

- Triaudière (E.), La Réponse du Sphinx, 2fr. 50.

Bibliography.

- Lachèvre (F.), Bibliographie des Recueils Collectifs de Poésies, 1597-1700, Vol. 3, 20fr.

History and Biography.

- Auriol (C.), La France, l'Angleterre, et Naples de 1803 à 1805, 2 vols. 20fr.
 Bossert (A.), Essais sur la Littérature Allemande, 3fr. 50.
 Harniss (H.), Le Président de Thou et ses Descendants, 15fr.
 Lefranc (A.) et Boulenger (J.), Comptes de Louise de Savoie et de Marguerite d'Angoulême, 5fr.
 Rocca (F. de), Les Zemskié Sobors, 4fr.

Science.

- Hermite (C.), Poincaré (H.), et Rouché (E.), Œuvres de Laguerre, 2 vols. 37fr.
 Leunay (L. de), La Science Géologique, 20fr.

General Literature.

- Compain (L. M.), L'Opprobre, 3fr. 50.
 Joliclerc (E.), Demi-Maitresse, 3fr. 50.
 Pravioux (J.), Séparons-nous, 3fr. 50.
 Reepmaker (M.), Septime César, 3fr. 50.
 Vontade (J.), La Lueur sur la Cime, 3fr. 50.

LADY FERGUSON.

ON Sunday morning, the 5th inst., this eminent Irishwoman passed away quietly at the age of eighty-one. Two years ago a stroke of paralysis had severed her from the world, in which her only remaining interest was her radiant sympathy for her many friends, which even the clouding of her intellect could not quench. An Irishwoman indeed she was, in the highest and best sense, and yet not a typical one, for she bore throughout her long life indelible traces of those non-Irish virtues which her Guinness ancestors brought with them from England in the eighteenth century. Along with her noble sense of duty, her unfailing kindness, her full appreciation of merit in others, was a Stoic temper, frugal, and somewhat stern to Irish failings, though she loved Ireland from her inmost heart. She had, too, that strange lack of humour by which the English strain is so evident for generations in Irish life. Her husband, an eminent scholar, poet, and lawyer, had that quality in abundance, as his famous article 'Father Tom [Maguire] and the Pope' amply exhibited. But it must be confessed that his loving wife did not appreciate this wonderful sally. During his life their residence in North Great George's Street, Dublin, was ever open, with a modest but large hospitality. There were also musical receptions, Shakspeare readings, even dances in earlier years, where her great circle of relations as well as all the remainder of good society in the Irish capital were ever to be found. Having no children of her own, she more than once adopted and educated those of her husband's kin. She gave addresses on Shakspeare, on Irish and other history, in the Alexandra College; she worked on charitable committees—there were no bounds to her activity and her public usefulness. Yet withal she found time to be a learned woman. She wrote a 'History of Ireland.' She produced a fine memoir of her husband's literary life and work. Standing aloof from politics, she shared his broad and moderate views, loving honesty and hating dishonesty both in Unionist and in Nationalist. For higher and nobler than all her many good works was the moral atmosphere which she spread around her, the effluence of a conscience pure and clear as crystal, which made every one in her company feel that "virtue was coming out of her." Nothing mean or small could find a place in her conversation, and though she was most tolerant of human weakness, her censure of bad men and women was always prompt and trenchant. Thus she lived and took her part in the world, the very opposite of Cicero's picture of the Epicurean life, "omne magnificum, omne generosum sapiit."

MISTAKES IN PEERAGES.

February 23th, 1905.

It will interest genealogists to learn that mistakes in peerages, touching to some extent the family connexions of the Plantagenets and King Robert Bruce, have recently been discovered. As the matter is naturally of considerable interest to those engaged in genealogical research, you will, I trust, kindly give a place in your columns to the result of my investigations.

For a considerable time I have had doubts as to the accuracy of certain statements in 'Lodge' (Archdall, 1789) and 'Burke' (1883) relative to the pedigrees of some of those who claim descent from Richard de Burgo, Earl of Ulster, styled the "Red Earl," who was ancestor of the three kings of England of the House of York, and who, by the marriage of his daughter Ellen with King Robert Bruce, was grandfather of King David II. of Scotland, and of the line of kings of the House of Stewart.

Consequent on a correspondence which I have had on this subject with Sir Arthur Vicars, Ulster King of Arms, and with Mr. Cokayne, Clarenceux King of Arms, to whom I am indebted for kind suggestions and valuable information, I have pursued a particular line of research, the result of which is that I have discovered, by referring to the original Pipe Rolls of King Edward III., and to Papal letters of the fourteenth century, that the statements of Lodge and Burke to the effect that John de Bermingham, Earl of Louth, married "Catherine," daughter of Richard de Burgo, Earl of Ulster; that he (John de Bermingham) had three daughters, coheirresses, viz., Matilda, Bartholomea, and Catherine; and that Matilda married Sir Eustace le Poer, ancestor of the Earls of Tyrone, are all incorrect.

It is clearly stated in one of the Papal letters (preserved in the Vatican Library) that Avelina (not Catherine), daughter of Richard de Burgo, Earl of Ulster, was wife of John de Bermingham, Earl of Louth, the wording of which letter also settles the identity of the father of the said Earl of Louth, of which genealogists have been so long in doubt.

The letter in question states that a contract had been entered into between Richard de Burgo, Earl of Ulster, and Peter, father of John de Bermingham, Earl of Louth, that Matilda (then six years old), daughter of the said Richard, should marry the said John; but that (some years later) Gilbert, Earl of Gloucester, wishing to marry one of the daughters of Richard de Burgo, Earl of Ulster, sent envoys, who chose Matilda as the fairest, and he married her. Whereupon John de Bermingham married her sister Avelina. Consequent on this breach of contract a Papal dispensation was necessary and was given.

And the statements in the Pipe Rolls of Edward III. make it perfectly clear that there were only two De Bermingham daughters, coheirresses, viz., Matilda and Katherine, whose mother was Avelina (not Catherine), wife of John de Bermingham, Earl of Louth, and daughter of Richard de Burgo, Earl of Ulster, and that Matilda, the elder daughter, was wife of Sir William Teeling, Lord of the Manor of Syddan (not wife of Sir Eustace le Poer).

The abridged result of my investigations and researches (a detailed account of which I hope to give in one of the genealogical publications) is as follows:—

Richard de Burgo, Earl of Ulster, "the Red Earl."

John (son of Richard de Burgo) married Elizabeth de Clare, granddaughter of King Edward I., and through the marriage of their son William with Maud, sister of Henry Plantagenet, and their granddaughter Elizabeth, heiress of Ulster, with Lionel Plantagenet, son of King Edward III., Richard de Burgo became ancestor of the three kings of England of the House of York, viz., Edward IV., Edward V., and Richard III.

Ellen (daughter of Richard de Burgo) married King Robert Bruce. Their son was King David II. of Scotland, and by the marriage of their daughter Margaret with Walter Stewart, father of King Robert II., Richard de Burgo became ancestor of the Stewart line of kings.

Matilda (daughter of Richard de Burgo) married Gilbert de Clare, Earl of Gloucester, who was grandson of King Edward I., his mother being Joane of Acre. He was killed at the battle of Bannockburn, leaving no descendants.

Avelina (daughter of Richard de Burgo) married John de Bermingham, Earl of Louth. Their daughter Matilda, who was niece of Queen Ellen of Scotland, married Sir William Teeling, Lord of the Manor of Syddan, who was fifth in descent from Hay Theling, "The White" Lord of Syddan, whose descendants figured so prominently in Irish history: Bartholomew Teeling, to whose memory a monument has recently been erected in Ireland, being nineteenth in descent from the said Hay Theling "Albi," and sixteenth from Richard de Burgo.

Joan (daughter of Richard de Burgo) married the second Earl of Kildare, an ancestor of the Dukes of Leinster and of Lord Edward Fitzgerald, great-grandfather of Mr. George Wyndham, Chief Secretary for Ireland. It is a curious coincidence that Lord Edward Fitzgerald and Bartholomew Teeling, who lost their lives in the same year in the same cause, were both descended from the same ancestor (Richard de Burgo), and that some 260 years before their deaths another of the Teelings, and another of the Geraldines ("Silken Thomas," tenth Earl of Kildare), had been executed for their mutual participation in the "ill-starred rebellion of 1534," and that both Bartholomew Teeling and "Silken Thomas" were exactly the same age (twenty-four years) when executed.

It is unnecessary here to enumerate the other sons and daughters of Richard de Burgo, Earl of Ulster, as no such mistakes, so far as I am at present aware, have been made with respect to them or their descendants as have been made in the case of his daughter Avelina and her descendants.

BARTLE TEELING.

THE SPRING PUBLISHING SEASON.

MR. FISHER UNWIN will publish the following works during the spring :—In History and Biography : A History of Scottish Seals from the Eleventh to the Sixteenth Century, by Dr. Walter de Gray Birch, illustrated.—The Manors of Suffolk, Notes on their History and Devolution and their Several Lords, by Dr. W. A. Copinger, illustrated.—Cobden as a Citizen, a Chapter in Manchester History, being a reprint of Cobden's pamphlet 'Incorporate your Borough!' with an introduction and bibliography by W. E. A. Axon.—The Personal Story of the Upper House, by Kosmo Wilkinson, with frontispiece.—The Progress of Hellenism in Alexander's Empire, by Dr. J. P. Mahaffy.—The Story of Greece, from the Earliest Times to A.D. 14, by Dr. E. S. Shuckburgh, illustrated ("The Story of the Nations").—A Short History of Wales, by Prof. Owen M. Edwards ("The Welsh Library").—Dames and Daughters of the French Court, by Geraldine Brooks, illustrated.—and cheap editions of English Wayfaring Life, by M. J. J. Jusserand, and of Lord Beaconsfield, by T. P. O'Connor. In Travel and Description : Siberia, a Record of Travel, Climbing, and Exploration, by Samuel Turner, illustrated.—Travels of a Naturalist in Northern Europe, by Dr. J. A. Harvie-Brown, illustrated.—Russia under the Great Shadow, by Luigi Villari, illustrated.—In Search of El Dorado : a Wanderer's Experiences, by Alexander Macdonald, illustrated.—My Life among the Chinese, by the Rev. E. J. Hardy. In Science and Natural History : Studies in General Physiology, by Prof. Jacques Loeb.—The Age of the Earth, and other Geological Studies, by Prof. W. J. Sollas, illustrated.—Astronomy for Amateurs, by Camille Flammarion, illustrated.—What I have Seen while Fishing, and How I have Caught my Fish, by Philip Geen, illustrated.—The Mental Traits of Sex, by Dr. Helen Bradford Thompson.—British Bird Life, by W. Percival Westell, illustrated.—The Camera in the Fields, a Practical Guide to Nature Photography, by F. C. Snell, illustrated.—Animals I have Known, by Arthur H. Beavan, illustrated. In Fiction : A Pagan's Love, by Constance Clyde ("First Novel Library").—Stars of Destiny, by L. Parry Truscott.—The Interpreters, by Margaretta Byrde.—The Progress of Priscilla, by Lucas Cleeve.—The Yarn of Old Harbour Town, a Sea Romance, by W. Clark Russell.—The Siren's Net, by Florence Roosevelt.—Lucie and I, by Henriette Corkran.—The House by the River, by Florence Warden.—Grand Relations, by J. S. Fletcher.—Tom Gerrard, by Louis Becke.—A Specimen Spinster, by Kate Westlake Yeigh.—The Memoirs of Constantine Dix, by Barry Pain.—and popular shilling editions of Love and the Soul Hunters; Some Emotions and a Moral, and The Sinner's Comedy; A Study in Temptations, and A Bundle of Life, by John Oliver Hobbes; of Dreams, by Olive Schreiner; of Mademoiselle Ixe and the Hôtel d'Angleterre, by Lanoe Falconer; and of The Outcasts, and other stories, by Maxim Gorky. Miscellaneous : International Law as interpreted during the Russo-Japanese War, by F. E. Smith and N. W. Sibley.—American Commerce and Finance, Lectures delivered before the College of Commerce and Administration of the University of Chicago, edited by Henry Raud Hatfield.—Religion and the Higher Life, by President William Rainey Harper.—In Peril of Change, Essays written in Time of Tranquillity, by C. F. G. Masterman.—How to Judge Architecture, by Russell Sturgis, and The Appreciation of Sculpture, by the same, illustrated.—Pictorial Composition and the Critical Judgment of Pictures, by H. R. Poore, illustrated.—Model Factories and Villages, by Budgett Meakin, illustrated.—The Westminster Cathedral : a Criticism, by Percy Fitzgerald, illustrated.—L'Avocat Patelin, a translation, by S. F. G. Whitaker, of the famous fifteenth-century farce.—The Best Plays of George Farquhar, edited, with an introduction, by William Archer ("Mermaid Series").—Christian Belief interpreted by Christian Experience, by the Rev. Charles Cuthbert Hall.—Protection and Employment, by Harold Cox.—a cheaper edition of Dr. Campbell Oman's The Mystics, Ascetics, and Saints of India.—and sixpenny editions of The Hungry Forties and The Life of Richard Cobden.

MESSRS. HODDER & STOUGHTON'S

spring list includes :—In Fiction : May Margaret, by S. R. Crockett.—Shining Ferry, by Q.—Sandy, by Alice Hegan Rice.—Beverly of Graustark, by G. B. McCutcheon.—Mid the Thick Arrows, by Max Pemberton.—Who Giveth this Woman? by W. Le Queux.—The Country House-Party, by Dora S. Shorter.—Christian's Cross, by Annie S. Swan.—Trixy, by Elisabeth S. P. Ward.—Tillie, a Mennonite Maid, by Helen R. Martin.—Little Citizens, by Myra Kelly.—Duncan Polite, by Marian Keith.—The White Terror and the Red, by A. Cahan.—The Fugitive Blacksmith, by C. D. Stewart.—The Second Mrs. Jim, by S. Conrad. In Belles-Lettres, Travel, &c. : Coventry Patmore, by E. Gosse.—Charlotte Brontë, by C. K. Shorter.—Renan, by W. Barry.—The Mountains, by S. E. White.—The New Knowledge, by Prof. R. K. Duncan.—Nerves in Order, by A. T. Schofield.—Modern Electricity, by J. Henry and K. J. Hora.—Woodmyth and Fable, by E. Thompson Seton.—Critical Times in Turkey and England's Responsibility, by Mrs. G. K. Lewis.—The Lure of the Labrador Wild, by D. Wallace. In Theology : Expositions of Holy Scripture, by Dr. A. Maclaren. First Series : The Book of Genesis; The Prophecies of Isaiah; The Prophecies of Jeremiah; The Gospel of St. Matthew.—William Ross of Cowcaddens, Glasgow, a Memoir by the Rev. J. M. E. Ross.—Do We Believe? from The Daily Telegraph, edited by W. L. Courtney.—The Evangelistic Note, by the Rev. W. J. Dawson.—The Story of St. Paul, by Prof. Benjamin W. Bacon.—Sermons to Young Men, by H. Van Dyke.—The Treasury of David, by C. H. Spurgeon, 7 vols.—The Spirit of God in Biblical Literature, by Prof. I. Wood.—"In Full and Glad Surrender," the Story of M. J. Hall, by his Sister.—The Life Victorious, by the Rev. H. Windross.—The Ministry and Modern Missions, by John R. Mott.—What did our Lord Jesus Christ think of the Old Testament? by Prebendary H. E. Fox.—A History of Preaching, A.D. 70 to 1572.—The Problem of Personality, by the Rev. J. Newton.—Dr. Grenfell's Parish, by N. Duncan.—English Apologetic Theology, by the Rev. F. W. Macran.—Women Painters of the World, edited by W. S. Sparrow.—Rembrandt Photographures.—Etchings by Van Dyck.—Ingres, Master of Pure Draughtsmanship.—The Spirit of the Present Day, the work of Frank Brangwyn, A.R.A.—In the Open Country, the work of Lucy E. Kemp-Welch, twenty studies of animals and birds.

MESSRS. J. M. DENT & CO.

have in hand Garden Colour, by Mrs. Earle, E. V. B., Miss Rose Kingsley, the Hon. Vicary Gibbs, and others.—The Evolution of a Town : being a History of Pickering, Yorks, written and illustrated in colour by Gordon Home.—The Fitzwilliam Virginal Book, by E. W. Naylor.—The Complete Idler, by H. W. Tompkins.—Schubert, by E. Duncan.—Venice, by T. Okey, illustrated by N. Erichsen; and Brussels, by E. Gilliat-Smith, illustrated by K. Kimball, in the "Mediaeval Towns."—The Brontë Novels, in 10 vols., with new illustrations in colour by M. Edmund Dulac.—Major-General Harrison, by the Rev. C. H. Simpkinson.—Homes of the First Franciscans, by B. de Selincourt.—Selborne, by H. W. Tompkins, illustrated by E. H. New.—in the "Temple Classics" : Hazlitt's Shakespeare's Characters, edited by A. R. Waller; and Hymns of Prudentius, edited and translated by the Rev. R. M. Pope.—Pre-Exilic Prophets, by the Rev. W. Fairweather.—in "The Temple Primers" : Physiological Psychology, by Prof. W. McDougall; Government of Greater Britain, by W. F. Trotter; and The English Constitution, by L. Courtney.—and a continuation of The Complete Works of Tolstoy, edited and translated by Prof. Leo Wiener.

Messrs. Dent now also publish the following, lately issued by Messrs. Sampson Low : nine volumes of The Queen's Prime Ministers,—Honour Morten's Complete System of Nursing, and How to Treat Accidents and Illnesses,—Sir Reginald Pargrave's The Chairman's Handbook,—Brisse's 366 Menus and 1,200 Recipes in French and English.—and Mary Harrison's The Skilful Cook, and Guide to Modern Cookery.

Literary Gossip.

MESSRS. LONGMAN propose to publish a History of England, from the Conquest of Britain to the end of the reign of Queen Victoria, in 12 vols. This is intended to set forth in a readable form and a single work the results attained by modern research. In its scope the new work will primarily be political, though religious matters will necessarily at certain periods have a prominent place, and important social phenomena will be noted. The foot-notes will, so far as is possible, be confined to references, and references will not be given for matters of common knowledge. The chief authorities used in each volume, their characters, values, &c., will be discussed in an appendix to the volume. Each of the twelve volumes is to be written by a separate author, but unity of design and treatment is promised. In order to secure this Messrs. Longman have entrusted the editorship of the work to the Rev. William Hunt and Mr. R. L. Poole. It is hoped that vol. x. (1760-1801), by the former, will be published this month, and that it will be followed in May by vol. ii. (1066-1216), by Prof. G. B. Adams. Vol. i. (to 1066), by Dr. Thomas Hodgkin, is also in the press. Prof. Tout, Prof. Oman, Mr. H. A. L. Fisher, and Mr. Sidney Low are writing other volumes.

MISS CATHERINE DODD, whose educational interests have led her to a knowledge of German life from within, is publishing with Messrs. Smith, Elder & Co. on the 22nd inst. a work entitled 'A Vagrant Englishwoman,' in which she depicts with clear but sympathetic touch many scenes of life, whether in a German university town or further afield, as it appears to a cultivated Englishwoman living in close intimacy with the professional and student classes.

THE Rev. W. S. Crockett, author of 'The Scott Country,' is writing a volume on Abbotsford for Messrs. Black's new colour series. The Hon. Mrs. Maxwell Scott some years ago published 'The Making of Abbotsford.'

MESSRS. T. & A. CONSTABLE, of Edinburgh, are the printers as well as publishers of a volume about the Edinburgh University Speculative Society, which has been edited, from the old minute-books, by the Hon. William Watson, and which will be ready shortly. It is well illustrated, and has a good index. Amongst the members of the "Spec" have been Sir Walter Scott, Jeffrey, Brougham, and R. L. Stevenson. Scott and Jeffrey both appear to have written papers for the Society on the Ossianic poems; Scott's other subjects were the origin of the feudal system, and Scandinavian mythology. Jeffrey wrote on the discovery of America, metrical harmony, and the character of commercial nations.

MR. UNWIN is about to publish a translation, by Mr. S. F. G. Whitaker, of the famous fifteenth-century farce 'L'Avocat Patelin.' The version translated by Mr. Whitaker is the one prepared by the Abbé Brueys for the Comédie Française in 1706.

MESSRS. HUTCHINSON & Co. are publishing shortly a new novel by Mr. Frankfort Moore called 'The White Causeway.' Among novelists whose names appear on the same firm's list of forthcoming books are Mr. Stanley Weyman, Mrs. Katherine Cecil Thurston, "Lucas Malet," Miss Mary Cholmondeley, "Allen Raine," Mr. Jerome K. Jerome, Mr. Rider Haggard, Mrs. Felkin (Ellen Thorneycroft Fowler), M. E. Braddon, Dorothea Gerard, and "Iota."

THE letters of Henrik Ibsen written between 1849 and 1898 will be published in two volumes by Messrs. Fox, Duffield & Co., of New York, next Wednesday. The collection has been made by the dramatist's son, and the translator is Mr. John Nilsen Laurvik. A few of the letters have appeared separately in French and American periodicals.

THE March number of The Dickensian, to be published on the 15th, will contain an article on 'The Social Influence of Dickens,' by Mr. Henry F. Dickens, K.C. The cover design will be that of the wrappers of the original parts of 'Sketches by Boz.' There are several other items of interest in the issue, including four illustrations.

DR. SANDYS, Public Orator of Cambridge, has been invited to deliver a course of lectures on the Lane Foundation at Harvard. He has accepted the invitation, and is leaving England for the United States to-day on board the Lucania. The subject of his course is 'The Revival of Learning in Italy.'

WE have received various retorts to A. J. B.'s letter last week concerning 'Compulsory Greek and Schoolmasters.' But the occasion of the letter being past, we cannot enter into a controversy on the competence of the teaching profession. Those who object know as well as we do that there are schoolmasters and schoolmasters, to adapt a homely old adage.

As for modern public-school education, we notice a letter in The Standard of Wednesday last, 'The Value of Eton,' from a young man who has had two years at Oxford to his credit, and more, we presume, at Eton. He is going, he says, to Canada, after failing to get work in this country. Eton, he says at the end of his letter, teaches fellows "to play the game," as is right.

"But why should not a gentleman be taught as much of the other things—the useful things—as they teach at the private schools? It is not so very much. I have learned something this year, and if it means anything, it means that, in addition to those other things—fine things, I know—Eton and every other public school ought to teach a boy enough to enable him to hold his own in book knowledge with fellows from board schools. And I maintain.....that that is what Eton does not do."

We have always supposed that there was a decent tradition of industry at all our public schools; there certainly ought to be. If there is not, masters are incompetent or the system is a farce.

It will be interesting to notice whether the general and serious "drop" in the Kelmescott Press books extends to the vellum Chaucer, of which Messrs. Sotheby, Wilkinson & Hodge will offer a copy for sale on Saturday, March 25th. So far only two copies on vellum have appeared in the market: Mr. F. S. Ellis's copy brought 510*l.* in November, 1901, and another example, in June, 1902, went for 520*l.* As is well known, only thirteen copies were printed upon vellum, and of these only eight were offered to subscribers, the price being 126*l.*

THE Religious Tract Society has now completed the reorganization of its secretarial work, necessitated by the death of the Rev. Richard Lovett. The Rev. C. H. Irwin becomes assistant secretary of the Society, whilst still retaining the editorship of The Sunday at Home. Mr. Irwin's secretarial duties will mainly be occupied with the continental work of the R.T.S.

PROF. J. K. LAUGHTON writes:—

"The reviewer of vol. viii. of 'The Cambridge History,' in your issue of March 4th, in censuring Mr. Wilson for spelling Admiral Man's name correctly, falls into the double error of spelling it incorrectly and of conferring on the admiral a title which he never had. He can see a facsimile of the admiral's signature at p. 52 of my 'Nelson Memorial.'"

THE National Book Trade Provident Society propose to hold their annual meeting in Oxford this year on Friday, May 19th.

MR. BLACKWELL'S catalogue of the second portion of York Powell's extensive library fully bears out the apt quotation from Charles Lamb printed on the cover: "I have no repugnances. Shaftesbury is not too genteel for me, nor Jonathan Wild too low. I can read anything which I call a book." This portion varies from philology to French facetiæ, and from Italian literature to navy records. The cataloguing is very well done, the entries severely brief, and the prices quite reasonable. A third catalogue will be necessary, and this will cover the Greek and Latin classics, philosophy, law, and antiquarian literature. There appears to have been a great demand for York Powell's books, for Mr. Blackwell states that three-quarters of the items in the first part of the catalogue have been sold.

MR. PIERPONT MORGAN'S handsome catalogue of the library formed by the late James Toovey is an important piece of bibliography. It extends to 192 pages, and is illustrated with sixty-seven facsimiles of the bindings. The collection of Aldines extends to 529 works, most of which have previously figured in such famous libraries as those of Renouard, Hanrott, Bishop Butler, Heber, Hibbert, and Sykes. Many were secured privately in 1878 from the Gosford Library. One of the greatest rarities in the collection consists of the four volumes of music printed by Aldus in 1521, and believed to be unique. Another unique volume is made up of thirty-six bills of Roger Payne for bookbinding; and yet another is a set of nine volumes of Gray's manuscripts, including his own catalogue of his library. A perfect copy of the 'Boke of St. Albans,' a presentation copy of the first edition of Walton's 'Compleat Angler,' and one of the finest known copies of the First Folio Shakspeare are also included.

WE note the appearance of the following Parliamentary Papers: Statistical Abstract for the British Empire, 1889 to 1903, first number (6*d.*); and Intermediate Education, Ireland, Accounts for the Year ended December 31st, 1903 (1*d.*).

SCIENCE

MEDICAL BOOKS.

The Edinburgh Stereoscopic Atlas of Anatomy. Edited by David Waterston. Section I. Fifty Plates. (T. C. & E. C. Jack.)—We have before us the first part of a work which is to be complete in five. Anatomy requires every structure to be known both by itself and in relation to those parts which surround it, and to gain this knowledge various methods have been adopted from time to time for the delineation of anatomical subjects. The earliest and only right way of learning anatomy is by personal dissection with the help of a good guide. When opportunities for dissection were scanty whole classes used to be taught by a lecturer who had the various parts pointed out as they were mentioned by his demonstrator and prosector. In 1543 Vesalius first employed faithful and artistic woodcuts to illustrate his great work on anatomy, and throughout the rest of the sixteenth century similar cuts were used to embellish such works. Woodcuts, however, soon yielded to copper-plates, which in turn gave place to steel engravings and various kinds of process blocks. But the disadvantages of plates for teaching anatomy were obvious from the beginning, and at least as early as 1613 an atlas was issued in which the various structures of the body were displayed by means of overlapping segments of paper, each bearing the outlines of a portion of the surface or of an organ or set of organs, and so attached that it might be reflected in the natural order of superposition of the parts represented. The Catoptrum Microcosmicum and the Pinax Microcosmographicus are instances of such plates, and the plan has ever remained a favourite one with French anatomists. The method has even greater disadvantages than that of ordinary illustrations, and has never come into extensive use. Dr. Waterston now gives us an opportunity of observing the merits and defects of a series of stereoscopic reproductions of photographs from actual dissections. The present series deals with the thorax and the brain, fifteen plates being devoted to the thorax, three to the lungs, twelve to the heart and pericardium, six to the pleura, and fourteen to the brain. The plates are admirable, and the dissections are excellent, as might be expected in a work issued from the Department of Anatomy of the University of Edinburgh. Each drawing is accompanied by a short description written by Dr. Waterston, the identification of structures being carried out by small flag labels. Especial attention has been paid to topographical anatomy, and with great success, if the plate illustrating the relation of the interior of the heart to the chest wall may be taken as a fair sample. Anatomy cannot, of course, be learnt from such plates, but they will prove useful to those who wish to recall what they have once known, and they give the idea of depth, which has been wholly absent from all previous illustrations of the kind.

Pathologie Mentale des Rois de France: Louis XI. et ses Ascendants Une Vie Humaine étudiée à travers six Siècles d'Hérédité, 852-1483. Par Auguste Brachet. (Paris, Hachette.)—This work first appeared in 1896, and

M. Brachet was engaged on this, the second and enlarged edition, at the time of his death. By the devoted labours of Madame Brachet it has been completed from the papers left by her husband. The scheme of the work, as at first sketched by M. Brachet, was one of great magnitude. The original idea, which we gather was suggested by Littré, was to undertake an investigation of the pathological history of the chief European dynasties. This colossal task has not been completed, as after twenty-three years' labour only one section has been dealt with, that of the royal house of France.

Put into few words, the object of the work is to ascertain what influence is exerted on an individual by heredity, particularly with regard to pathological conditions which may have existed in his ancestors.

The history of the individual is largely bound up with that of his forefathers, and the most suitable case for an inquiry of this kind is, therefore, one in which the greatest number of antecedents can be obtained. The influence of heredity in persons of sporadic genius—such as Joan of Arc, for example—cannot be adequately studied by historical methods, as in nearly all such cases little or nothing is known about either ancestors or descendants. For an investigation of the influence of pathological conditions working through a long line of ancestors on an individual, it is difficult to see how a more promising line of inquiry could be made than by selecting for this purpose a royal dynasty, the minute records of which have been most carefully preserved. With this object the author has undertaken an inquiry into the part played by disease transmitted through the line of the kings of France ending with Louis XI., a period of more than 600 years.

Other writers have endeavoured to trace the hereditary transmission of artistic or scientific talent, such as Dr. Galton in his work on hereditary genius; but the weak point in such investigations has always been the scanty information obtainable. Royal archives, on the other hand, furnish a wealth of material, even to the minutest details, for a research of this sort. The author has thoroughly ransacked these vast lumber-rooms of records, and has accumulated a mass of evidence of great value, in many cases from such sources as old apothecary and haberdashery accounts. Contemporaneous writers, monastic archives, and ambassadors' letters to their royal masters have been most carefully studied, and are extensively quoted. The number of references given is remarkable, and the patience and labour required for the task have indeed been great.

In an introduction of more than two hundred pages the author unfolds the scheme of the work and his method of research. Most of this is devoted to the study of Louis XI., whose life-history he analyzes, according to the evidence obtained, under three heads, namely, therapy, pathology, and psychology. The evidence brought forward is often extremely quaint, and is very ably criticized. M. Brachet, we consider, establishes the fact that the king was subject to epilepsy, and in his later years might be classed as a degenerate zoophilist. A point worth quoting is brought out by a letter written by the king in 1481 to the Prior of Notre Dame de Salles at Bourges, asking for prayers that he might be sent a quartan fever, without which his physicians had told him that he could not be cured of the malady with which he was afflicted. Voltaire, in his 'Essais sur les Mœurs,' scoffingly refers to this letter as an example of the imbecility of the king and of the charlatanism of his doctors, though there can be little doubt that in the fifteenth century it was generally believed by leading physicians that epilepsy might be cured by the incidence of quartan fever.

Much attention is paid in this work to the part played by consanguinity, one of the most important factors in heredity. In the case of healthy consanguineous progenitors no ill result may follow; if, on the other hand, morbid conditions of like nature are present, these will be intensified in the descendants. This factor of consanguinity has played a striking part in the dynasty under investigation, and is subjected to a minute analysis by the author. The dynasty chosen for investigation is that founded by Robert the Strong, and includes thirty-one generations.

In a review of this sort it is impossible to give more than a brief sketch of the scheme and extent of the work. It abounds in technical details, which, so far as we are able to judge, are accurate. It should prove of great interest both to physicians and historians, and is a notable addition to works on the history of medicine.

THE N RAYS.

Cavendish Laboratory, Cambridge, March 6th, 1905.

REFERRING to your interesting article on the N rays in the current number of The Athenæum, it is, I think, right to point out, whilst admitting that the best method of proving the objective existence of Blondlot's rays is by obtaining photographs with the rays themselves, that others who have devoted their time and attention to the matter find as great a difficulty in satisfying themselves that there is any photographic effect as they do that there is any visual effect or variations in the brightness of a phosphorescent screen when exposed to these mysterious rays. According to M. Blondlot himself, the eye observations are more sensitive than the photographic records, and I have pleaded more than once that the question would admit of being decided without much difficulty, if a few competent judges, uninfluenced by the surroundings where these observations have been made, were to test the vision of the various workers who assert that they have seen these things. This in truth is, as I understand from your article, what Prof. R. W. Wood has done, with the result that the observations were hopelessly haphazard.

Nevertheless, it seems to me still possible that the experiments may have been made hurriedly, or that M. Blondlot himself may not have been at that particular time, through fatigue or otherwise, in the proper condition to make the observations, and negative results, under conditions of nervous irritability, should not alone be recorded. It is, therefore, I venture to think, only fair—although from my own experiments on the subject I have found no evidence of the existence of these rays—that the observations of those who do assert that they are satisfied with these new facts should be tested under the most favourable conditions. Consequently he who visits M. Blondlot's laboratory should be prepared to spend some time in waiting for the suitable conditions, if such there be, which I very much doubt.

JOHN BUTLER BURKE.

"THE PHILIPPINE ISLANDS."

February 21st, 1905.

ON p. 148 of your edition of February 4th of this current year, I note the following in regard to our series "The Philippine Islands, 1493-1898":—

"After an account of Magelhães's voyage, as given by Maximilian Transylvanus, and not according to an unpublished manuscript by Pigafetta in the Bibliothèque Nationale, as promised in the prospectus, the editors present," &c.

In our vol. i. p. 93, we state our reason for not publishing the Pigafetta manuscript in its chronological order. As our prospectus states, it was our intention to publish the longer Pigafetta MS. in the Bibliothèque Nationale; but after having that MS. copied at great expense, we discovered evidence that led us to conclude that the Italian MS. in the Ambrosian Library in Milan is older than the French MS. Accordingly a transcript was obtained of that MS., and it will appear in both original and English (page-for-page translation) in our vol. xxxi. and possibly a portion of vol. xxxii. This MS. was purported to have been published in 1800 by Amoretti, but his publication was what the Italians call a rifacimento, in which the order is entirely changed at times, to say nothing of the meaning. There is, by the way, a fourth MS. (also French) of Pigafetta's voyage, which is in the library of Sir Thomas Phillipps, and which is known as the Nancy MS., and there is great probability that it is even older than the two in Paris. I have recently written to England in regard to this last-named MS.

We are publishing this document in the midst of our series for the reason that we have now reached the point where the work must in a sense change in nature. Hitherto we have given a close survey of the islands, presenting them from all sides and from every point of view in many different documents that cover the same period of time. Now the ground floor for the history of the islands is well laid, for we have already presented all, or nearly all, the elements of growth, decadence, or discord that they were to know during their three centuries of Spanish rule. Hence, in the future we shall, for that reason, as well as our limited space, find it very necessary to cull our documents with great care. The Pigafetta MS., with a few other important documents that we were unable to include in regular chronological order, will thus not be out of place as addenda at this point in our series.

I trust that you will call attention to our purpose of publishing this manuscript, and the reason why we publish the Italian instead of the French (and I may say that we shall use the French MS. throughout for our annotations).

JAS. A. ROBERTSON,
Co-Editor "The Philippine Islands,
1493-1898."

P.S.—I should have called your attention to the fact that the Stanley translation, published by the Hakluyt Society, is in part a translation of the Paris MS. and in part a translation of the Amoretti publication, and is most unsatisfactory.

SOCIETIES.

GEOLOGICAL.—Feb. 22.—Dr. J. E. Marr, President, in the chair.—Messrs. E. Andrewes, M. Kellow, G. A. Longden, and J. Dunlop Millen were elected Fellows.—Dr. F. A. Bather exhibited a series of Danish rocks illustrating: (1) the share that echinoderms may take in rock-building; (2) the transition from the Secondary to the Tertiary era in the Baltic basin near Denmark; (3) the special conditions at the close of the Glacial Period, in the limited area where alone these rocks are now found as erratic blocks.—The following communications were read: 'On the Order of Succession of the Manx Slates in their Northern Half, and its Bearing on the Origin of the Schistose Breccia associated Therewith,' by the Rev. J. F. Blake,—and 'On the Wash-outs in the Middle Coal-Measures of South Yorkshire,' by Mr. F. E. Middleton.

ZOOLOGICAL.—Feb. 21.—Mr. Howard Saunders, V.P., in the chair.—The Secretary read a report on the additions to the menagerie during January, and called special attention to a red teetee (Callithrix cuprea) from Brazil, representatives of two unknown species of lemur from Madagascar, a pair of mouflon (Ovis musimon) from Corsica, a prongbuck (Antilocapra americana) from North America, an Ethiopian wart-hog (Phacochoerus aethiopicus), and two black-and-white geese (Anseranas semipalmata) from Australia. The total number of additions during the month was seventy.—Mr. H. Scherren exhibited, on behalf of Mr. Rowland Ward, a mounted specimen of the blackbuck (Antelope cervicapra). The animal was remarkable for the extent and depth of the dark coloration which covered the whole of the face, obliterating the white eye-patches.—Mr. R. L. Pocock exhibited some specimens of the South African millipede (Spirostreptus pyrocephalus), presented by Mr. Guthrie, of Port Elizabeth, to the Society's gardens. These millipedes had bred in the gardens.—Mr. G. A. Boulenger read a paper entitled 'A Contribution to our Knowledge of the Varieties of Lacerta muralis in Western Europe and North Africa.'—A communication was read from Mr. R. Lydekker on the Nigerian giraffe (Giraffa camelopardalis peralta) and the Kilimanjaro giraffe (G. camelopardalis tippelskirchi), based on specimens recently received at the Natural History Museum. A second communication from Mr. Lydekker, on dolphins from Travancore, was also read. The author made special reference to two specimens of the genus Tursiops, drawings and particulars of which had been supplied to him from the Trevandrum Museum.—A paper by Messrs. Oldfield Thomas and Harold Schwann, giving an account of a second collection of mammals made by Mr. C. H. B. Grant for Mr. C. D. Rudd's exploration of South Africa, was read. The collection, which had been presented to the National Museum by Mr. Rudd, was made in the Wakkerstroom district of the South-Eastern Transvaal, and includes examples of twenty-six species. Several local sub-species were described, besides Myosorex sclateri, a new shrew from Zululand.—Mr. R. I. Pocock read a paper on the greater kudu of Somaliland, and pointed out that the northern form of Strepsiceros strepsiceros differed from the southern in having only about five white stripes instead of nine or ten on each side of the body. The northern form should thus rank as a distinct sub-species, for which the name chora was available. The difference in coloration seemed to be correlated with a difference of habitat, the northern form frequenting more mountainous and less thickly wooded country than the southern, which was frequently found in the thick jungle along river-banks as well as in the hills.

INSTITUTION OF CIVIL ENGINEERS.—March 7.—Sir Guilford L. Molesworth, President, in the chair.—It was announced that twelve Associate Members had been transferred to the class of Members, and that nine candidates had been admitted as Students. The monthly ballot resulted in the election of five Members, thirteen Associate Members, and one Associate.

ROYAL INSTITUTION.—March 6.—The Duke of Northumberland, President, in the chair.—Mr. W. K. Appleton, Dr. G. H. Burford, Mr. W. S. Burns, Mrs. Close, Miss Donaldson, Dr. G. E. Haslip, Lady Hodgson, Mrs. Laye, Mr. J. B. Tapling, Lieut.-Col. Vincent Wing, Mr. P. von Fleischl, and Mr. J. E. Wolfe were elected Members.

SOCIETY OF BIBLICAL ARCHAEOLOGY.—March 8.—Mr. F. Legge read a paper, illustrated by lantern-slides, on 'Some Egyptian Magic Ivories.' The objects treated of were the boomerang-shaped wands to be found in most Egyptian museums, of which nearly a score were thrown on the screen. The author held that these were in effect phylacteries, intended to protect the wearer against different ills, and especially against the bites of poisonous serpents and scorpions. He further said that all those hitherto discovered seemed to be of the time of the twelfth dynasty, and those whose provenance could be traced came from the neighbourhood of Thebes. He also said that the fantastic animals carved on these ivories were not purely imaginary, but were either symbolical, as with the two-headed sphinx and the two-headed bull, which represented regions through which the sun had to pass in the underworld, or were distorted representations of extinct animals, such as the snake-headed panther, which represented the traditional recollection of the giraffe.

SOCIETY OF ENGINEERS.—March 6.—Mr. N. J. West, President, in the chair.—A paper was read on 'The Transport Possibilities of our Inland Navigable Waterways,' by Mr. B. H. Thwaite.

HELLENIC.—Feb. 28.—Prof. S. H. Butcher, V.P., in the chair.—Mr. W. W. Tarn read a paper on 'The Greek Warship,' with lantern-slides of the principal monuments and some Venetian ships, his object being to show that there was no foundation for the view that triremes, quinqueremes, &c., had superposed banks of oars, the conclusion reached being that triremes and the Athenian quadriremes and quinqueremes of the fourth century were analogous to the Venetian galleys a zenzile, while the quinqueremes and larger vessels of the third and subsequent centuries were galleys of several men to an oar. It was argued that the terms "thranite," "zugite," and "thalamite" referred not to rows of oarsmen, but to divisions, of which the thranites sat astern, the zugites amidships, the thalamites in the bows; for this there was historical support, and the supposed evidence to the contrary, all very late, depended simply on the meaning of kárw and árw, which could be proved from Arrian to have meant fore and aft. After it had been stated that there was no evidence for the view that among Greeks and Romans an oar was never rowed by more than one man, the prow of Samothrace was compared with Diodorus's account of Demetrius's victory at Salamis, the conclusion being that it could not well represent anything but Demetrius's hepteres. Weber's proof of several men to an oar in Octavian's time was referred to; and after it had been shown that nearly every monument has been called a bireme, while history knows nothing of biremes till the first century B.C., the deduction was drawn that in early times two arrangements of oars must have been in use, the portholes or tholes forming a straight line in the one, a zigzag line in the other, and that the latter arrangement, which had nothing to do with size, was revived, perhaps with modifications, for the great ships of Hellenistic and Roman times. Finally, it was contended that the "trireme" of the Acropolis Museum shows one row of oars only.—A prolonged discussion followed, in which, among others, the following took part: Mr. W. C. F. Anderson, Mr. H. Awdry, Prof. Ernest Gardner, and Messrs. G. F. Hill, H. Stannus, and H. H. Statham.

MEETINGS NEXT WEEK.

- MON. Society of Arts, 8.—'Telephony,' Mr. H. Laws Webb. (Cantor Lecture.)
— Surveyors' Institution, 8.—'Surveyors' Reports and Certificates,' Mr. E. Morten.
— Geographical, 8½.—'The Anglo-German Boundary Expedition in Nigeria,' Col. Louis Jackson.
TUES. Asiatic, 1.—'The Passage of Buddhism from a System of Ethical Culture to the Developed Doctrine of the Great Vehicle,' Rev. J. Estlin Carpenter.
— Royal Institution, 5.—'Some Recent Biometric Studies,' Lecture III., Prof. Karl Pearson.
— Colonial Institute, 8.—'The Crown Colonies,' Sir C. Bruce.
— Institution of Civil Engineers, 8.—'Shipbuilding for the Navy,' Lord Brassey.
WED. Chemical, 5½.—'The Velocity of Oxime Formation in Certain Ketones,' Mr. A. W. Stewart; 'Catechin and Acacatechin, Supplementary Note,' Mr. A. G. Perkin; 'The Action of Ethyl Dibromopropanetetracarboxylate on the Disodium Compound of Ethyl Propanetetracarboxylate (a Correction),' Mr. W. H. Perkin, jun., and seven other Papers.
— Meteorological, 7½.—'On the Growth of Instrumental Meteorology,' Mr. R. Bentley.
— Entomological, 8.
— Folk-lore, 8.—'Processions of the Dancing Towns in Italy,' Mrs. Wherry; 'The Cimarruta,' Mr. R. T. Günther.
— Microscopical, 8.—'A Review of the Work done by Metallographers,' Mr. J. E. Stead.
— Society of Arts, 8.—'Methods of Design in Mohammedan Art,' Mr. E. H. Hankin.
THURS. Royal, 4½.
— Society of Arts, 4½.—'Manipur and its Tribes,' Mr. T. C. Hodson. (Indian Section.)
— Royal Institution, 5.—'Recent Astronomical Progress,' Lecture III., Prof. H. H. Turner.
— Linnean, 8.—'Contributions to the Flora of Liberia,' Dr. Otto Stapf.
— Antiquaries, 8½.
FRI. Institution of Mechanical Engineers, 8.—'First Report to the Steam-Engine Research Committee,' Prof. D. S. Capper.
— Royal Institution, 9.—'Dramatic Thoughts: Retrospective, Anticipative,' Sir Squire Bancroft.
SAT. Royal Institution, 3.—'Electrical Properties of Radio-active Substances,' Lecture II., Prof. J. J. Thomson.

Science Gossip.

DR. F. J. P. FOLIE, who was for some years Professor of Astronomy and Director of the Royal Observatory at Brussels, and the author of a large number of papers on mathematical astronomy, died at Liège on January 29th, in the seventy-second year of his age.

THE Royal Meteorological Society has arranged for an exhibition of meteorological apparatus at its rooms from the 14th to the 17th inst.

THE subject for the Adams Prize at Cambridge for next year will be 'The Inequalities in the Moon's Motion due to the Direct Action of the Planets.'

THE thirteenth James Forrest Lecture will be delivered by Col. R. E. B. Crompton, C.B., on April 10th, the subject being 'Unsolved Problems in Electrical Engineering.'

Two conspicuous groups of spots have been passing over the sun's disc during the present week, visible to the naked eye. One of these, in the southern hemisphere, is the third appearance of the remarkable group first seen on January 28th, and at its greatest size in the early days of February. Although considerably reduced in dimensions at this return, it has still covered a large area of the solar surface. It has just passed off the western limb, but will probably appear again on the eastern about the 24th inst. The other group is in the northern hemisphere of the sun, larger than the other has been at this return, but not equal in extent to what that was at the beginning of February.

It was first noticed on the 1st inst., crossed the sun's central meridian on the 8th, and may be expected to pass off the western limb on the 14th.

PROF. T. J. J. SEE has recently published, in No. 3992 of the Astronomische Nachrichten, the results of some interesting researches he has been making on the internal densities, pressures, and moments of inertia of the principal bodies of the solar system. Amongst other matters he has arrived at conclusions with regard to the probable oblateness and periods of rotation of the two exterior planets. On the latter point observation has not hitherto yielded any satisfactory result, it being merely thought probable that the rotation of Uranus was nearly as rapid as that of Jupiter. Prof. See's result, from physical considerations, is that it amounts to about 10h. 7m., and that of Neptune to 12h. 51m., which is longer than that of any of the great ultra-Martian planets, and exceeds that of Saturn by more than two hours.

PROF. BAUSCHINGER has now given (Ast. Nach., No. 4000) definitive numbers to the remainder of the small planets discovered in 1904, the last of which will be reckoned as No. 553.

WE have received the first number of vol. xxxiv. of the Memorie della Società degli Spettroscopisti Italiani, the principal contents of which are a paper by Prof. Mascari on the statistics of solar spots and other phenomena observed at Catania during the second half of 1904, and a preliminary note on the proposed observation by Italian astronomers of the total eclipse of the sun next August, on the eastern coast of Spain, where the duration will be longest.

MADAME CERASKI, continuing her examination of the photographic plates obtained by M. Blajko at the Moscow Observatory, has detected two new variable stars, which will be reckoned as var. 39, 1905, Draconis, and var. 40, 1905, Camelopardalis. The first varies between the magnitudes 9½ and 11½; the second between 9½ and 10½.

FINE ARTS

Cima da Conegliano. By Dr. Rudolf Burckhardt. (Leipzig, Karl W. Hiersemann.)

THIS is the first work of a young writer who is, we believe, a relation of the famous author of the 'Cicerone.' He promises to add new glory to the name he bears, for in this careful and unobtrusive study we find the same note of genuine devotion to beauty, the same penetrating understanding of the artistic idea, that distinguished the writing and dominated the life of Daniel Burckhardt.

Cima is not an artist that every one admires; we might even say that he is not an artist that every one need admire. He makes no overwhelming appeal to the emotions; he does not dominate the imagination. Intensely individual though he was in his work, his nature was so evenly balanced, his qualities so well matched, that we have to define his personality by negatives. We get no very incisive image of the man behind the work, or rather the image that we get is of one so suavely joyful, so calm, so lucid, so reasonable, that he never obtrudes himself on our notice. We can commune with him whenever we will, but he never begins the conversation. But to those who, like the author of the present work, have pondered his paintings deeply, he becomes a singularly lovable and companionable being, one who, if he never stirs the deeps of the imagination, never fails to communicate a serene and reasonable delight. Cima is never carried away by passion, he is never really dramatic, his understanding of character is sufficient for the creation of fine, but not intensely stimulating types; but his sense of the simple beauty of colour is unfailing, his sense of form is always pure and distinguished, while, above all, he has a feeling for the lyrical beauty of landscape, and a gift of mild and tender pathos, which make him remarkable, even among the Venetian artists of the opening sixteenth century.

Don Botteon and Dr. Aliprandi's book, published in 1893, gave a considerable amount of fresh documentary information about Cima's life and work; but from the point of view of strict style their criticism scarcely advanced our knowledge. Dr. Burckhardt has for the first time attempted a complete and ordered account of Cima's work, arranging the more important pieces in chronological order; while on several points he is able to bring forward new and positive results. Among these we may mention his identification of the large Madonna with six saints, in the Accademia at Venice, with an altarpiece painted for Giorgio Dragan, about 1498, for the church of Santa Maria della Carità. The question is complicated by a passage in Sansovino which describes in this chapel a "palla di San Giorgio di marmo," a statement which contradicts all the other documentary evidence. Dr. Burckhardt gets over the difficulty by the ingenious suggestion that "palla" is corrupted from capella, in which case the description "di marmo" would refer to the architectural setting, not to the altarpiece itself.

With regard to the Madonna with six saints at Parma, perhaps the noblest and most perfect of all Cima's works, our author has made a lucky discovery. The picture is known to have come from a chapel belonging to the Montini family, and may therefore be assigned, both on internal evidence and from an inscription in the chapel, to the year 1507. The figures of the saints, with one exception, are peculiarly individual, and lead naturally to the idea that they are portraits. The author has discovered a contemporary account of the family, which enables him to give the names of two of the originals—names which explain, moreover, the choice of the saints. This is not without interest in view of the peculiarly intimate and domestic character of this altarpiece, especially as expressed in the saints Cosmo and Damian.

A manuscript communicated by Signor Paoletti enables Dr. Burckhardt to publish for the first time the name of Benedetto Carloni, the patron who commissioned the glorification of Peter Martyr in the Brera, and the date (1506) of its completion.

With regard to the question of Cima's artistic origins, many theories have been put forward. Mr. Berenson would have him the pupil of Alvise Vivarini; in our criticisms of his books we have once or twice called attention to the inadequacy of this as a complete explanation of Cima, and have insisted, as Dr. Burckhardt does at length, on the dominating influence of Montagna. But Montagna alone will not explain all.

Moreover, we have yet to find precisely where Montagna learnt his art. For us Antonello da Messina appears to be an important influence in the growth of that curious and fascinating Vicenza school where Cima makes his début. Yet we think Dr. Burckhardt goes too far in his denial of Alvise's influence, still more in denying all Venetian influence before 1490. To us even the early altarpiece of 1489 has Venetian, even definitely Alvisesque traits, notably in the shape of the throne and the pose of the Child. The picture at Berlin of the 'Madonna and Donor,' to which our author might, perhaps, have given a fuller treatment, shows decided Venetian characteristics, although one may almost suspect from its inchoate composition that it is among his very earliest works.

Another question which we have always wished to see discussed is also left untouched, namely, Cima's predilection for Eastern costume, and on occasion his circumstantial knowledge thereof. In former times, when Morelli could suppose Carpaccio to have been Cima's master, it was conjectured that the former actually went to the East; but now that we know the extreme lateness of Carpaccio's birth, how much he owed to Montagna, and still more to Cima himself, one might be tempted to reverse the hypothesis and suppose that it was Cima who travelled. In any case, the influence of Cima's 'Presentation of Mary' at Munich upon Carpaccio's treatment of the same theme in the Scuola degli Albanesi series of 1504 is undeniable. But both in his draperies and in the peculiar type of straggling tree with sparse foliage which he constantly adopts, Carpaccio shows that from his earliest period he was familiar with Cima's work, and probably even frequented his atelier.

We wish, too, that Dr. Burckhardt had discussed fully the marvellously beautiful little idylls of Endymion and Marsyas at Parma. He assigns them in his catalogue to the artist's second period, 1496–1504, without, it would seem, feeling how much such a date implies, for now that we know that all Bellini's poesies were on mediæval and Christian themes, such compositions as these by Cima must be regarded as significant of the changed attitude of the next generation, and not without some possible influence on Giorgione himself. They are equally remarkable as renderings of a less formal aspect of landscape than any that had preceded them.

In his discussion of Cima's drawings we are glad to find that our author includes the interesting sheet of landscape studies acquired about two years ago by the British Museum. We wish he had at least discussed the drawing in the Ambrosiana of Daniel in the lions' den, there attributed to Mantegna, but if not by Cima, at any rate very near to him.

Dr. Burckhardt has done so much for our understanding of Cima—we ought, by-the-by, to have alluded to his useful reconstructions of dispersed altarpieces—that we may hope some day for a larger and more detailed work from him. Cima's influence on the later Bellineschi, on such artists as the pseudo-Basaiti, and the author of the National Gallery 'Death of Peter Martyr,' would be well worth investigation.

PORTRAITS OF MARY, QUEEN OF SCOTS.

Offa House, Upper Tooting, S.W., March 8th.

THE able review of my book on this subject which appeared in your last issue seems to identify the jewels worn by the Queen of Scots in Lord Leven and Melville's picture with those described in the 'Inventories.' If this be established, it is not only a gratifying confirmation of the claims I ventured to make on behalf of the portrait, but is of great interest as giving good grounds for adding one more to the very limited number of the authentic portraits. Your reviewer, however, speaks of "a new mystery" (p. 279), viz., a close resemblance between the Leven and Melville piece and the Morton picture. An examination of the renderings given in the books he names hardly convinces me of this. Dare I suggest that, as an obvious admirer of "the Queen of many wooers," he has bracketed the two pictures in his mind, as it were, and sees the true Mary in what are undoubtedly the most attractive of all the portraits of the Queen of Scots known to me? J. J. FOSTER.

IN noticing Mr. Foster's 'True Portraiture of Mary, Queen of Scots' (Athenæum, March 4th), I was misled by the lack of colour inevitable in a photograph. In the Leven and Melville portrait, of which I have now seen a copy in water colour, Mary is not wearing the carcan of alternate table diamonds and double pearls, but one of double pearls alternating with table rubies, a table diamond in the centre. This carcan was sent to her in France, in 1556, among other Scottish royal jewels, by the Duke of Chatelherault: "Ung ecarquant ou il y a vi rubis, une table de diemant, et viii coupletz de perles" (Robertson, 'Inventaires de la Roynne d'Escoce,' p. 5).

The diamond cross in the Greystoke portrait, I learn, differs at the foot from the description of the French Crown jewel, having a triangle of diamond, not three diamonds, as in the description. Of course, it may have been modified.

The Leven and Melville portrait, if an heirloom descended from Mary's friends of that house, would, apparently, be with the other heirlooms of her period at Monymail (Melville House, Fifeshire). THE REVIEWER.

SALES.

MESSRS. CHRISTIE sold on the 4th inst. the following:—Pictures: Vicat Cole, Showery Weather, a View of Bury Village, 357*l.*; A Cornfield in Surrey, 173*l.*; T. S. Cooper, Cattle and Sheep in a Meadow, 147*l.*; Evening, Sheep on a Hillside, 126*l.*; A Group of Cattle on the Bank of a River, 110*l.*; J. Docharty, Mist rising after Rain, Loch Etive, 252*l.*; J. Holland, The Colleoni Monument, Venice, 945*l.*; J. Stark, The Valley of the Yare, 126*l.*; Colin Hunter, A Fishing Haven, 147*l.*; Sir E. Burne-Jones, Pygmalion and the Image (the set of four), 997*l.*; W. Bouguereau, Head of a Girl, 105*l.*; H. W. B. Davis, On the Wye, 220*l.*; Drawing: L. L'Hermitte, Corn-Ricks, Peasant-Girl, and Geese, 68*l.*

The same firm sold on the 7th inst. the following engravings:—After Reynolds: Lady Caroline Price, by J. Jones (lot 37), 26*l.*; another copy (lot 99), 102*l.*; Mrs. Beresford, with Mrs. Gardiner and Viscountess Townshend, by T. Watson, 37*l.*; Master Crewe as Henry VIII., by J. R. Smith, 36*l.*; After Romney: The Hon. Mrs. North, by J. R. Smith, 70*l.*; After Hoppner: The Countess of Mexborough, by W. Ward, 31*l.*

Art-Gossip.

TO-DAY, at the Leicester Galleries, Mr. Herbert Marshall's drawings of London are open to private view, as well as Mr. Arthur Rackham's water-colour drawings illustrating 'Rip van Winkle,' and other fantasies.

MESSRS. HENRY GRAVES & Co. are showing water-colour drawings of 'Gardens, Orchards, and Vineyards in Italy and England,' by Miss Rosa Wallis.

WATER COLOURS of 'Old-World Gardens in England, Scotland, and Italy,' by Mr. E. A. Rowe, are also on view at the Dowdeswell Galleries.

IN the Victoria and Albert Museum at South Kensington an exhibition of process engravings is noteworthy.

MR. F. A. VERNER has on view at the Doré Gallery English and Canadian pictures.

THE spring picture exhibition at the White-chapel Art Gallery, which will be open from March 23rd to May 3rd, is to illustrate 'British Art Fifty Years Ago,' the year 1855 being taken as a central date, and a period of about fifteen years before and after that date being included. Many fine works are to be shown, amongst others a representative group of paintings by the Pre-Raphaelites and by the members of the Liverpool School.

THE Aberdeen Sculpture Gallery of Casts is to be opened by Sir George Reid on April 8th. For some years a small museum and art gallery has been in existence. This has now been entirely remodelled, enlarged, and fitted with the last improvements.

MESSRS. AGNEW will send to Christie's for an early sale a picture which has been in the possession of the family of Sir Lewis Morris at Penbryn since the early part of the last century. The subject and the painter were both unknown until the publication of the 'Creevey Papers,' with an almost identical engraving of Sheridan, attributed to Sir Joshua Reynolds, and its likeness to the portrait by the same master in the late Mr. Fraser Rae's 'Life of Sheridan' seemed to leave no doubt as to the subject. The tradition in the family of the owner was that Opie was the painter, but it is also attributed to Russell and to Hoppner in the 'Creevey Papers.' It is an animated portrait of a young man, with powdered hair, looking out of the picture, and holding a portfolio, possibly of music belonging to Miss Linley, afterwards his wife.

SOME of the daily papers came out on Monday with the periodical paragraph about another Romney having been found. This time it was "one of the missing paintings of Lady Hamilton," who is said to be "reclining on a couch, with her left arm, which is bare to the shoulder, resting on a support," whilst her "beautiful figure is veiled with light drapery." If the description is accurate, we may venture to say at once, and without seeing the picture, that it is not a Romney portrait of Lady Hamilton. It is "believed to be one of the missing paintings" of Romney's famous sitter; on this we may remark that scores of such "missing" portraits have been discovered from time to time, and all, or nearly all, bear the most convincing evidence that Romney never saw them.

A CORRESPONDENT writes:—

"May I point out, with regard to the notice of Mr. Willett's death on p. 282 of The Athenæum, that his Christian name was Henry, consequently his initial was H, not R., and that his original surname was Catt, not Cat? As my father knew both families well, I can guarantee the above."

MR. WHITMAN, of the British Museum, opens up in the new number of The Connoisseur a point of very much interest. He claims to prove that the fine portrait by Hoppner of Mrs. Michael Angelo Taylor as 'Miranda' was engraved not by William Ward, to whom it has hitherto been assigned, but by his brother, James Ward, R.A. The engraving is only known in the proof state, but from the late Lord Cheylesmore's impression, now in the Print-Room, Mr. Whitman makes out a very good case. From some indistinct and imperfect lettering scratched on the plate, Mr. Whitman shows, with some reasonableness, that the engraver scratched "J. Ward," but only a portion of what looks like the letter "J" and the initial "W" are seen, and even these do not appear in any other proof which Mr. Whitman has examined. The mezzotint was presumably never published; but, now that the point has been raised, it is possible that some more information may be forthcoming. One fact which tells strongly against his arguments is discreetly obscured by Mr. Whitman. James Ward presented his collection of working proofs of his mezzotints to the British Museum in 1817, and among these there is not a single proof of any sort of the 'Miranda.' It was much too important and beautiful an engraving to be overlooked when he was making up such a gift. Then, again, Mr. Whitman has not traced to its origin the attribution to William Ward. This ought not to be a very difficult matter. Chaloner Smith does not describe it in his 'British Mezzotinto Portraits.' Both James and William Ward engraved portraits by Hoppner. The portrait of Mrs. Michael Angelo Taylor was exhibited at the Royal Academy of 1796, No. 87, as a 'Portrait of a Lady.'

MUSIC

THE WEEK.

QUEEN'S HALL.—London Symphony Concert. Miss Fanny Davies's Orchestral Concert.

ON Wednesday afternoon the London Symphony Concert was conducted by Sir Edward Elgar, and, moreover, the whole of the programme was devoted to his music. The composer is one of the prominent men of the day, and he has written some very remarkable works, yet we doubt whether an "Elgar" programme is altogether the best thing for him or for the public; and by the latter term we mean that section of the public which listens attentively the whole time. The concert began with the 'Alassio' Overture, and notwithstanding fine material and skilful workmanship, we still find the work, as a whole, unsatisfactory. It seems long, not because the music is uninteresting, but because the various sections do not strike one as parts of an organic whole. The incidental music to the drama 'Diarmid and Grania'—produced at Dublin not "last October," as stated in the programme, but October, 1901—is dignified, but the very qualities which render it so impressive in connexion with the stage militate against its due effect in the concert-room. Next came four of the 'Sea Pictures'—small tone-pictures, it is true, in comparison with such a work as 'The Dream' or 'The Apostles,' and yet gems of the first water. They were sung with admirable feeling and restraint by Miss Ada Crossley. The first part of the programme ended with a first performance of the 'Pomp and Circumstance' March, No. 3, and in c minor. It is effectively scored, but it does not strike us as being so original as the first two.

The second part opened with the 'Cockaigne' Overture, after which followed the second novelty, viz., an Introduction and Allegro in g minor and major for strings (orchestra and quartet). The music is extremely fresh and clever. The form is perfectly clear, and there is nothing forced or diffuse in it. A prominent theme, like the canto popolare in 'Alassio,' is of great beauty and simplicity. The employment of a solo quartet in addition to the orchestral strings results in some very effective contrasts. It seems, from some remarks of the composer respecting his work quoted in the programme book, as if some "Welsh" romance formed the poetic basis of the music; the latter, however, is perfectly satisfactory in itself. Sir Edward must have been in a happy frame of mind when he wrote it. This work will, we believe, become a great favourite with the public. When, by the way, will the composer present to the world a symphony? The concert ended with the well-known Orchestral Variations, Op. 36.

Miss Fanny Davies gave a concert with the London Symphony orchestra at Queen's Hall on Tuesday evening, and played three pianoforte concertos. The first was one in g (Köchel, 453) written by Mozart only a few years before his death. The Andante is full of deep feeling, while the final movement, on the other hand, represents the composer in one of his merriest moods. Miss Davies may be thanked for reminding musicians of Mozart's concertos, most of which are unduly neglected. As regards technique they may not be attractive to latter-day pianists—we could mention one or two exceptions—but the music is pure and lovely, and more enjoyable than many a modern work in which the pianist is perhaps able to exhibit wonderful digital dexterity. Miss Davies was also heard in Brahms's First Concerto, in d minor, and Saint-Saëns's No. 2, in g minor. There was a large audience, and her intelligent playing procured for her a cordial reception.

M. Colonne, the conductor, gave most refined renderings of Bizet's delightful 'L'Arlésienne' Suite—in which the saxophone part was admirably played by M. Émile Derigny, of the Colonne Orchestra at Paris—and Saint-Saëns's symphonic poem 'Le Rouet d'Omphale.'

Musical Gossip.

MR. ANTONIETTI's performance of the Mendelssohn Violin Concerto at the Æolian Hall on Monday evening deserves note. He has a fine rich tone and excellent technique, and interprets with rare intelligence and without any sensational effects. In Locatelli's c minor Sonata and in Bach's 'Aria' he gave further proofs of skill and feeling. Mr. Antonietti is a sound and accomplished artist.

THE Taneiev Quartet in d minor, recently produced by the Nora Clench Quartet, was again played, and admirably, by the same ladies at the ninth Broadwood Concert at the Æolian Hall last Thursday week. The clever music improves on acquaintance, although one cannot but feel that the variations which form the greater part of the work show skill rather than inspiration. A Concertstück for clarinet, horn, pianoforte, and strings, by Mr. York Bowen, proved interesting. The introductory movement is much more poetical than the Allegro.

'THE APOSTLES' was given for the second time at the Albert Hall under the direction of Sir Frederick Bridge on Wednesday, and the rendering of the work was better than on the first occasion.

M. ALFRED BRUNEAU's 'L'Enfant Roi' was produced, as announced, at the Paris Opéra-Comique last week, and, with one or two exceptions, the opera has been most favourably received. It may be noted that the unfavourable criticisms are by men out of sympathy, in great measure, with modern musico-dramatic art.

THE death is announced of Arrey von Dommer, born at Danzig in 1828, author of an excellent 'Handbuch der Musikgeschichte' (1868; second edition, 1878). He also published (1865) an enlarged edition of H. C. Koch's 'Musikalisches Lexicon' of 1802. From 1873 to 1889 he held the post of secretary to the Hamburg Library.

THE Allgemeine Musik-Zeitung of March 3rd states that the autograph of Chopin's Third Ballade in A flat has been discovered by an autograph dealer, and purchased by the collector J. V. Ostrowski.

THE Tonkünstlerfest of the Allgemeiner Deutscher Musikverein will be held at Graz, May 22nd to 26th. Operatic performances will be given of Strauss's 'Feuersnot' and Kienzl's 'Don Quixote.' Among the works announced is 'Appalachia,' symphonic poem for orchestra and male chorus, by the English composer F. Delius.

PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK.

|        |  |
|--------|--|
| SUN.   | Concert Club, 3, Bechstein Hall.   |
| —      | Sunday Society Concert, 3.30, Queen's Hall.  |
| —      | Sunday League, 7, Queen's Hall.  |
| MON.   | Chaplin Trio (Children's Concert), 5, Steinway Hall.   |
| —      | Miss Iona Robertson's Concert, 8, Bechstein Hall.  |
| —      | Subscription Concert, 8.30, Æolian Hall.   |
| TUES.  | Miss L. Hasche and Miss Marie Hall's Pianoforte and Violin Recital, 3, Queen's Hall.         |
| —      | Alma Mater Male Choir, 8.30, Bechstein Hall.   |
| WED.   | Miss Maud MacCarthy's Violin Recital, 3, Bechstein Hall.                                     |
| —      | Philharmonic Concert, 8, Queen's Hall.   |
| THURS. | Broadwood Concert, 8.30, Æolian Hall.  |
| —      | Madame H. Ansbacher and Miss M. Poole's Pianoforte and Violin Recital, 8.30, Bechstein Hall. |
| FRI.   | Irish Ballad Concert, 7.30, Crystal Palace.  |
| SAT.   | Benson's Pianoforte Recital, 3, Bechstein Hall.  |
| —      | Ballad Concert, 3, Queen's Hall.   |
| —      | Mozart Society, 3, Portman Rooms.  |

DRAMA

THE WEEK.

CORONET.—'The Orestean Trilogy of Æschylus.'
GREAT QUEEN STREET.—'Die Wildente,' by Henrik Ibsen.
HIS MAJESTY'S.—'Agatha,' a Play in Three Acts. By Mrs. Humphry Ward and Louis N. Parker.

By those prepared to accept what the French would call a "vulgarization" of the great Orestean Trilogy, the performance of this matchless work given at the Coronet Theatre might have been seen with a certain amount of pleasure. Grave defects were apparent, if the whole was judged from any standpoint of exact scholarship. The performance, however, was calculated to give a popular idea of works which are virtually unknown to the average English playgoer, and are not likely to reach him in any more accurate shape. The chief defect was that the musical accessories, though striking in themselves and calculated to be popular, gave the whole an atmosphere of opera, which is precisely the last thing to be desired. Nothing can be less fitting than to express in well-executed song the emotions of the chorus. In the case of the 'Agamemnon' it is impossible to say that the chorus are impassive spectators of the horrors they contemplate, since their language rises to menace, and Ægisthus has to threaten them with the vengeance of his guards. Their action became, however, in the latest presentation too assertive, and the effect of the song substituted for chant was that the words were unheard. This we are disposed to regard as the worst of conceivable imperfections. In order to bring the whole within the limits of a solitary performance, it was presented in a shape so abridged as to convey a sense of irreverence. That the three dramas composing the trilogy were given in a single day is known: in the present case, if we subtract the period necessary for changes of scene, the representation occupied little more than a couple of hours. On the other hand, some of the performances were impressive, and the general effect was inspiring. Miss Gertrude Scott as Cassandra had a physiognomy truly tragic, and, though her method was naturally uncertain, rose fully to the height of the situation when, with a shudder at the smell of the charnel house, she followed Agamemnon through the fateful doors. As Electra Miss Mabel Moore was pleasing, though not great, and Mrs. Benson, as Clytemnestra, had impassioned moments. Mr. Benson's voice as Orestes was monotonous and rather grating. Many of the chorus of Argive elders and women were good, and the whole conveyed an idea more favourable than we had previously conceived of the possibilities of the company.

In the performance at the Great Queen Street Theatre of the 'Wild Duck' of Ibsen, the Andresen-Behrend Company was not seen at its best. Frau Bertens rose to the display of intensity as Gina, and Fräulein Grawz was pleasing as Hedvig. The former, however, is too matronly to be the wife of Hjalmar, and the latter was almost too artistically conscientious in make-up. Hedvig is, of course, a green girl, but there is no need why she should be wholly unattractive. None of the masculine parts was in any way remarkable, and the representation as a whole was deficient in subtlety and significance.

'Agatha,' which was produced at His Majesty's Theatre on Tuesday afternoon for a charity, and is to be repeated the day after to-morrow as the first of a series of Monday evening representations undertaken by Mr. Tree, is the work of a novelist, not of a dramatist. It rises in the second act to something approaching intensity, but its authors have neither the requisite courage nor the requisite art. When the heroine, told by her supposed father that she is a bastard, seeks for her true father, and finds him in a man to whom she has been accustomed to look with veneration and respect, she shrinks from and repels him by a splendidly spontaneous sense of his unworthiness. A moment later, however, instead of keeping up the honouring attitude, she accepts him calmly, as if nothing had happened. We are asked to accord a measure of sympathy to a wife and mother who for twenty years has lived undetected in the house of the husband she has dishonoured, and seeks only further to hoodwink him. Her criminal associate is still a visitor in her house, and speaks to her of their child. It may be truly urged that the objection is ethical. It is artistic also, since we decline to accept as credible a story that rests on such unworthy assumptions, and are not sufficiently near to Stuart times to look upon adultery as the inevitable and pardonable concomitant of married life. Though possessing a good second act and some fine situations, 'Agatha' is weak as a whole, and passably repulsive, the information conveyed to a young girl by her supposed father that she is the offspring of an adulterous intrigue being inexpressibly shocking. Its chief merit consists in the conception of the heroine, a character to which Miss Tree does justice, and in so doing strengthens her claims to consideration.

'THE CLOUDS' AT OXFORD.

THE Oxford University Dramatic Society, aided by a representative body of Greek scholars, has, by happy accident or express intention, chosen the very month of the greater Dionysia for the performance of 'The Clouds,' thus recalling its first production in 423 B.C. We cannot forget that the play secured only a third prize on that occasion; nor can we neglect the tradition that Aristophanes afterwards altered his play, so that the version we have may represent an attempted revision. It certainly seems a version lacking in cohesion, if not of inferior quality. The Just and Unjust Argument are crudely introduced, and do not seem woven into the plot with the skill of a leading dramatist. Aristophanes, like other leading and minor dramatists, may have thought the public verdict unfair. But we see little reason to believe that his play at any time deserved the first honours. He chose what would now be called a "topical" subject, the teaching of the Sophists; he went in for broad, unmistakable effects, but he missed his mark, perhaps because he failed to be as poetic as he generally was, or to create character out of mere fantasy, as a great dramatist does almost unconsciously. The Athenian public, incomparably more intelligent than our own, may have been looking sans le savoir for the Aristophanic grace and poetry. They may have resented the rather unrelieved buffoonery of the play. The strange parody of Socrates, applying to him the methods of the Sophists from whom he expressly differed, is not what one expects from Aristophanes, whose most bitter attacks elsewhere on prominent persons are full of discernment. The frequent introduction of the joke about fleas must have been vieux jeu, one thinks, even in 423 B.C. The fleas were Corinthians; so of late the British public was entertained with jokes about the dirt of the Boer. But jests of this sort do not survive in popular favour as a thing to pay obols for, even when endorsed by political associations. 'The Clouds' is, in fact, not a first-class play.

It is all the more creditable that the Oxford actors did make a first-class show of it, a show which deserves to be remembered with the Oxford 'Frogs' and the Cambridge 'Wasps.' A superadded touch of modern and local caricature is almost inevitable in such cases, perhaps, and Sir Hubert Parry's music revealed itself from the outset as up to date. It was a wonderfully skilful caricature of innumerable popular songs, interspersed with motives from Wagner, Tschaiikowsky, and Strauss. The hoot of the motor-horn was heard early and often, a suggestion not out of place, since we remark that Phidippides, the fast young man of the day, runs his father into debt to the extent of Twelve pounds for car and wheels to Amyntas.

Modern young men are no doubt doing the same, though their motor "car and wheels" are a good deal more expensive.

It is not, however, on Phidippides, somewhat colourlessly presented by Mr. E. M. Compton-Mackenzie, that the burden of the play falls. His father Strepsiades and Socrates are the chief figures. Mr. C. W. Mercer and Mr. E. L. Scott distinguished themselves in these parts, and made the play go. Socrates was strongest in gesture, and might have been played with more mock dignity and less obvious farce. But we cannot cavil at an excellent performance, backed by skilful dress and make-up. The sage, with a new ἰμάτιον in view, to be stolen from a disciple, showed the glee which Mrs. Norris, we presume, indulged in private after securing the baize curtain of the intending actors in 'Mansfield Park.' His gestures and management of descent from his basket were most diverting. Strepsiades kept up unflagging vivacity throughout the play, and said every line as if he meant it. This was a great gain in the duller passages. His face and manner were too highly coloured not to suggest that he was in the habit of immoderate drinking, but we forgive him exaggerations and a few textual lapses for his human conception of the old Athenian rustic. Here is, we think, the one piece of character in the play, a figure to the life, which could not be, or, at any rate, was not, produced in the case of Socrates. Such a rustic citizen as Strepsiades—shrewd, passionate, kindly, and abusive by turns—must have been well known to Aristophanes, and is allied to many in our own drama; indeed, we think that Aristophanes is particularly suited, with his conservative views, his admiration of safe lines, of old education, to please a cultivated English audience. If Greek was invented, as a Frenchman said, that schoolmasters might make a living, Aristophanes was clearly invented to tickle a modern audience at our ancient universities. Pasion and Amynias, the two money-lenders who pester Strepsiades, were admirably presented and differentiated; we mention them as an example of the great care in detail which the play showed. The scenery, including a delightful view of the Acropolis, was simple, but effective; and a reminiscence of the 'Meno' of Plato introduced in the teaching lesson reminded the "pass man" of his difficulties. The teaching in rhythm would be salutary for most minor poets of to-day. It is likely that Socrates dimly suggested some features of modern Oxford philosophy, but he was too obviously a generalized caricature to be resented. His enormous protuberance of person was a concession to the mob to which we should affix a query; but, as we have hinted, there is nothing to respect in Socrates anyhow. Aristophanes needed some sort of a lift into popularity in this special play, and that two actors of exceptional ability, Strepsiades and Socrates, afforded.

We have left to the last the notice of the chorus of female clouds, though their services were very considerable. Their grouping and the extent of their mingling with the other actors seemed unconventional, as did floating hair on the Greek stage. But their success was sufficiently marked to justify departures from the normal. Their noses were too big, an accomplished lady and critic remarked, but otherwise their appearance was singularly handsome and effective. They were admirably trained, and their evolutions—backed by singing, of course, of an obviously male order—made a great impression. The stage seemed a little wanting in depth, so as to force them forward ὑπὲρ μέτρον, but that may have been a fancy due to our own position in the audience. The first hint of their cloud-like appearance, faint lights flitting across a gauze veil, raised our hopes high. We were not, however, entirely satisfied with the group as a whole. The leader (Mr. T. C. Gibson) was dressed in a strong purple, contrasted with orange red, which seemed to us heavy and somewhat distressing to the general scheme of colour. There was abundance of softer shades, which gave a desirable and liquid effect. This hard figure in the middle did not please us; it seemed a menace to the grace and beauty never far off from Greek dress. But generally the dresses were well conceived, both for individual effect and special contrast. Mr. Cyril Bailey—who was, we understand, chiefly responsible for the management—is to be warmly congratulated. He was half author, too, of a metrical version in English. A very clever illustrated programme, a contamination of Greece and Aubrey Beardsley, due to Mr. Mavrogordato, of Exeter College, also deserves notice, though it was too widely appreciated to be easily procurable on the later days of the play.

Dramatic Gossip.

On Saturday 'The Monkey's Paw' of Messrs. W. W. Jacobs and Louis N. Parker, first produced for a benefit at the Haymarket on the 6th of October, 1903, was revived at the same house, and was played in front of 'Beauty and the Barge.' Mr. Cyril Maude reappeared in his powerful presentation of Mr. White. Miss Bella Pateman replaced Miss Lena Ashwell as Mrs. White, and Mr. Edmund Maurice, Mr. Sydney Valentine as the Sergeant-Major. 'A Case of Arson' is to be the first piece next Tuesday, when 'Beauty and the Barge' is replaced by 'Everybody's Secret,' a rendering by Capt. Marshall and Mr. Parker of 'Le Secret de Polichinelle' of M. Wolff.

On Thursday, at the Great Queen Street Theatre, 'Es Lebe das Leben' was revived, with Frau Rosa Bertens as the heroine, in which she was seen at the same house on February 23rd, 1903.

'TWO MEN AND A MAID,' a four-act play of Mr. Malcolm Watson, has been given for copyright purposes at the Northampton Opera-House.

THE pantomime was withdrawn from Drury Lane on Saturday last. Its career has apparently been shortened by an attack upon it in a daily newspaper.

IN the new piece of Mr. J. M. Barrie, in which she will appear with Miss Irene Vanbrugh at the Duke of York's Theatre, Miss Ellen Terry will play the mother of a grown-up daughter involved in troubles, the nature of which is not stated.

MR. CYRIL MAUDE proposes to open his new theatre, the designs for which are in the hands of the County Council, with a play by Mr. W. W. Jacobs.

'LADY BEN,' a four-act comedy of Mr. George P. Bancroft, is before long to be produced in the West-End with a cast comprising Mr. J. D. Beveridge, Mr. Charles Fulton, Mr. Frank Cooper, Miss Dorothy Grimston, and Miss Darragh.

On Tuesday and Wednesday the Stage Society will give 'The Three Daughters of M. Dupont,' a rendering of 'Les Trois Filles de M. Dupont,' a four-act comedy of M. Brieux produced at the Gymnase on October 8th, 1897.

'MR. HOPKINSON' will on Monday be transferred from the Avenue to Wyndham's Theatre.

GENERAL LEWIS WALLACE, author of 'Ben Hur,' has, says The Era, left a novel entitled 'The Prince of India,' an adaptation of which is to be produced in America by Messrs. Klaw and Erlanger. Its story deals with the love of a Greek princess for a Moslem prince, and the characters include the Wandering Jew.

A CURIOUS "restitution" of a French masterpiece—if the term is applicable—is contemplated by Madame Bernhardt, who is preparing a representation of the 'Esther' of Racine, as that piece was given at the College of Saint-Cyr in 1680 by the demoiselles of that institution. Among the spectators in his customary place on the stage will be le Roi Soleil. We shall be curious to know if James II. of England, who was taken by Louis to the first performance, will also appear. As in the representation organized at the desire of Madame de Maintenon, the exponents will all be women, and it is to be wondered whether any adequate remplacante will be found for Mlle. de Veillenne, a pensionnaire, who made a very favourable impression as Esther.

'ELGA,' a drama by Gerhart Hauptmann, was given successfully at the Lessing-Theater, Berlin, on Saturday. Its action, which passes in the time of Jean Sobieski, King of Poland, consists principally of adventures befalling in a dream a knight on his way to the Court, and is partly romantic, partly melodramatic. A short story of Grillparzer is said to have suggested the theme.

'SCHÜSSELCHEN' is the title of a four-act play by Herr Georg Reicke, produced at Berlin, in which Fräulein Marietta Olley won recognition as the heroine.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.—W. C.—V. V. R.—J. M.—R. F. C.—E. C. K.—received.

H. M. B.—Often suggested, but no two people think alike on the matter.

MESSRS. BELL'S NEW BOOKS.

MINIATURE ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE
POST FREE ON APPLICATION.

In 5 vols. 21s. net each; or in half-morocco, 31s. 6d. net each.

BRYAN'S DICTIONARY of

PAINTERS and ENGRAVERS. A New Edition, Revised and Enlarged under the supervision of G. C. WILLIAMSON, Litt. D., assisted by a Staff of Specialists. With about 450 Illustrations. Illustrated Prospectus on application. [Vols. I.-IV. now ready; Vol. V. March 15.]

"The new Bryan reflects the greatest credit on the editor and publishers. The book, long since recognized as a classic, will be more than ever indispensable."—Magazine of Art.

BELL'S MINIATURE SERIES OF GREAT WRITERS.

Pott 8vo, illustrated, cloth, 1s. net; or in limp leather, with Photogravure Frontispiece, 2s. net.

NEW VOLUME.

BROWNING. By Sir F. T. Marzials, C.B. [Ready March 15.]

BOHN'S STANDARD LIBRARY.

NEW VOLUME.

Post 8vo, 2s. 6d.

LAMB'S TALES from SHAKESPEARE. With 24 Illustrations by BYAM SHAW.

BELL'S MINIATURE SERIES OF MUSICIANS.

Pott 8vo, illustrated, cloth, 1s. net; or in limp leather, with Photogravure Frontispiece, 2s. net each.

NEW VOLUME.

CHOPIN. By E. J. Oldmeadow.

NOW READY, COMPLETE.

A CHEAPER EDITION OF WHEATLEY'S PEPYS.

The DIARY of SAMUEL PEPYS,

M.A. F.R.S. Transcribed from the Shorthand MS. in the Pepysian Library, Magdalene College, Cambridge, by the Rev. MYNORS BRIGHT, M.A. With LORD BRAYBROOKE'S Notes. Edited, with Additions, by HENRY B. WHEATLEY, F.S.A. In 8 vols. post 8vo, 5s. net each.

* * * This reprint contains the whole of the text of the Diary, and the Notes and Index, as given in the ten-volume edition, the volume entitled 'Pepysiana' only being omitted.

"Mr. Wheatley has easily distanced all previous editors, both in the completeness of his matter and his annotations, and there is little doubt that this new classic edition of a classic will be a great success."—Athenæum.

FOURTH EDITION. Post 8vo, 5s. net.

HOW to LOOK at PICTURES. By

ROBERT CLAREMONT WITT, M.A. With 35 Illustrations.

"This book, which we have read with great pleasure, shows that the author has both wide sympathy and knowledge, and it cannot but be largely helpful to those who wish to increase their interest in pictures. A better gift for people who are dimly 'fond of pictures,' but who regret that they 'know nothing about them,' could not be found."—Spectator.

THE YORK LIBRARY.

A NEW SERIES OF REPRINTS ON THIN PAPER.

Small 8vo, 2s. net in cloth, and 3s. net in leather.

NEW VOLUMES.

CERVANTES' DON QUIXOTE.

Motteux's Translation, Revised. With Lockhart's Life and Notes. 2 vols.

EMERSON'S WORKS. Edited and

Collated by GEORGE SAMPSON. Vol. IV. Containing Miscellaneous Pieces.

COLERIDGE'S TABLE TALK and OMNIANA.

Arranged and Edited by T. ASHE, B.A.

DRAPER'S HISTORY of the INTELLECTUAL DEVELOPMENT of EUROPE. 2 vols.

The THOUGHTS of MARCUS AURELIUS ANTONINUS.

Translated by GEORGE LONG, M.A. With an Essay on Marcus Aurelius by MATTHEW ARNOLD.

Others to follow.

London: GEORGE BELL & SONS, Portugal Street, Lincoln's Inn, W.C.

CHATTO & WINDUS, PUBLISHERS.

NEW SIX-SHILLING NOVELS.

A SPOILER of MEN. By Richard Marsh, Author of 'The Beetle.' [March 23.]

HEIRS of REUBEN. By Chris Healy, Author of 'Confessions of a Journalist.'

"Mr. Chris Healy has shown before now that he possesses an unusual insight into the workings of men's minds, and the grim and bitter stories of human failure here grouped together carry with them a conviction that they are pitilessly truthful. They are told with a full sense of their dramatic value, and with a simple power which is very striking. Nor is the supreme touch wanting, for the author possesses that gift of sympathetic comprehension of human limitations without which no appeal can be made to the human heart."—World.

TALES of the FIVE TOWNS. By Arnold BENNETT, Author of 'The Grand Babylon Hotel.'

"Stories of the Potteries, full of rough humour, rugged beauty, and grim realism, that could only have been written by a genuine literary artist." Rapid Review.

FLEUR-DE-CAMP. By A. Godric Campbell.

"A very exciting and well-told tale of the First Empire.....somewhat in the style of Lever's military romances."—Ladies' Field.

The YOUNGEST MISS BROWN. By Florence WARDEN, Author of 'The House on the Marsh.' [April 3.]

SOME RECENT SIX-SHILLING NOVELS.

MORGANATIC. By Max Nordau. Translated by Elizabeth Lee.

The ENDLESS HERITAGE. By Chris Healy.

TOM DAWSON. By Florence Warden.

TERESA of WATLING STREET. By Arnold Bennett.

The COMMUNE. By Paul and Victor Margueritte.

The SANYASI. By F. E. Penny.

HADRIAN the SEVENTH. By Fr. Rolfe. [Second Edition.]

HUMOURS of CYCLING. By Jerome K. Jerome, H. G. Wells, Barry PAIN, CLARENCE ROOK, W. PETT RIDGE, J. F. SULLIVAN, and others. With Illustrations. A NEW EDITION. Crown 8vo, cloth, 1s. net.

MR. SWINBURNE'S POETICAL WORKS. The Collected Library EDITION in SIX VOLUMES is NOW COMPLETE. Price 36s. net for the Six Volumes.

The ISLAND of TRANQUIL DELIGHTS. By C. Warren Stoddard, Author of 'Summer Cruising in the South Seas.' With Illustrations. Crown 8vo, cloth, gilt top, 6s. net.

A DICTIONARY of the DRAMA. A Guide to the Plays, Playwrights, Players, and Playhouses of the United Kingdom and America, from the Earliest Times to the Present. By W. DAVENPORT ADAMS. Vol. I. (A to G). Demy 8vo, cloth, 10s. 6d. net.

POPULAR ASTRONOMY: a General Description of the Heavens. By CAMILLE FLAMMARION. Translated by J. ELLARD GORE, F.R.A.S. With 3 Plates and 288 Illustrations. Medium 8vo, cloth, 10s. 6d.

STUDIES in ASTRONOMY. By J. Ellard Gore, F.R.A.S. With 8 Illustrations. Crown 8vo, cloth, gilt top, 6s.

The STELLAR HEAVENS. By J. Ellard Gore, F.R.A.S. Crown 8vo, cloth, 2s. 6d. net.

WORKS BY RICHARD A. PROCTOR.

CHEAPER ISSUE. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d. each.

EASY STAR LESSONS. With Star Maps for Every Night in the Year.

FLOWERS of the SKY. With 55 Illustrations.

FAMILIAR SCIENCE STUDIES.

MYSTERIES of TIME and SPACE. With 24 Illustrations.

The UNIVERSE of SUNS. With 11 Illustrations.

SATURN and its SYSTEM. With 13 Plates. Demy 8vo, cloth, 6s.

The WILD MARQUIS: Life and Adventures of ARMAND GUERRY DE MAUBREUIL. By ERNEST A. VIZETELLY, Author of 'With Zola in England.' Crown 8vo, cloth, gilt top, 6s. [Shortly.]

The LIFE of CHARLES DICKENS as REVEALED in his WRITINGS. By PERCY FITZGERALD, F.S.A. 2 vols. demy 8vo, cloth, 21s. net. [Shortly.]

GEORGE R. SIMS'S NEW BOOK.

LI TING of LONDON. By George R. Sims ("Dagonet"). Fcap. 8vo, picture cover, 1s.; cloth, 1s. 6d. [Shortly.]

The MAN-HUNTER. By Dick Donovan. A New Edition. Crown 8vo, picture cloth, flat back, 2s.

NEW THREE-AND-SIXPENNY BOOKS.

AS LUCK WOULD HAVE IT. By William Westall.

A PRINCE of GOOD FELLOWS. By Robert Barr. Illustrated by J. F. SULLIVAN.

HAVILAND'S CHUM. By Bertram Mitford. [April.]

The MASSARENES. By Ouida.

The LADY of LYNN. By Sir Walter Besant. With 12 Illustrations by G. DEMAIN HAMMOND.

POPULAR BOOKS.—Fcap. 8vo, 1s. each; cloth, 1s. 6d. each.

The FOOLISH VIRGINS. By Alfred Sutro.

ELIZA'S HUSBAND. By Barry Pain.

HARRY FLUDYER at CAMBRIDGE, &c. By R. C. Lehmann.

YOUNG MRS. CAUDLE. By George R. Sims.

The LIFE WE LIVE. By George R. Sims.

THE ST. MARTIN'S LIBRARY.

Printed in clear type, on fine paper; full size of page, 6½ by 4 1-16 inches. Pott 8vo, cloth, gilt top, 2s. net each; leather, gilt edges, 3s. net each.

IMPORTANT SERIES OF ELEVEN NEW VOLUMES IN THE PRESS.

MACAULAY'S

HISTORY of ENGLAND. In 5 vols.; and

JUSTIN MCCARTHY'S

The REIGN of QUEEN ANNE. In 1 vol.

A HISTORY of the FOUR GEORGES and of WILLIAM IV. In 2 vols.; and

A HISTORY of OUR OWN TIMES, from the Accession of Queen Victoria to 1897. In 3 vols.

The other Volumes of the Series are as follows:—

BY SIR WALTER BESANT.

LONDON.

ALL SORTS and CONDITIONS.

BY BOCCACCIO.

The DECAMERON.

BY HALL CAINE.

The DEEMSTER.

BY WILKIE COLLINS.

The WOMAN in WHITE.

BY DANIEL DEFOE.

ROBINSON CRUSOE. With 37 Illustrations by George Cruikshank.

BY THOMAS HARDY.

UNDER the GREENWOOD TREE.

BY BRET HARTE.

CONDENSED NOVELS.

BY OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES.

The AUTOCRAT of the BREAKFAST

TABLE. With Illustrations by J. G.

Thomson.

Fcap. 8vo, cloth, 1s. net each; leather, gilt top, 1s. 6d. net each.

TWO LITTLE WOODEN SHOES. By Ouida.

The WANDERING HEIR. By Charles Reade.

BY RICHARD JEFFERIES.

The LIFE of the FIELDS.

The OPEN AIR.

NATURE NEAR LONDON.

BY CHARLES LAMB.

The ESSAYS of ELIA.

BY CHARLES READE.

The CLOISTER and the HEARTH.

"NEVER TOO LATE TO MEND."

BY ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON.

MEMORIES and PORTRAITS.

VIRGINIBUS PUERISQUE.

MEN and BOOKS. | ACROSS the PLAINS.

NEW ARABIAN NIGHTS.

The MERRY MEN.

The POCKET R.L.S.: Favourite Passages from Stevenson's Works. [Shortly.]

BY MARK TWAIN.

SKETCHES.

BY WALTON AND COTTON.

The COMPLETE ANGLER.

POPULAR SIXPENNY COPYRIGHT NOVELS.

BY GRANT ALLEN.

The TENTS of SHEM.

BY WALTER BESANT.

CHILDREN of GIBION.

The ORANGE GIRL.

ALL SORTS and CONDITIONS of MEN.

For FAITH and FREEDOM.

BY BESANT and RICE.

The GOLDEN BUTTERFLY.

READY-MONEY MORTIBOY.

The CHAPLAIN of the FLEET.

BY ROBERT BUCHANAN.

The SHADOW of the SWORD.

BY HALL CAINE.

A SON of HAGAR. | The DEEMSTER.

SHADOW of a CRIME.

BY WILKIE COLLINS.

ARMADA.

ANTONINA. | MAN and WIFE.

WOMAN in WHITE. | The MOONSTONE.

The DEAD SECRET.

The NEW MAGDALEN. | NO NAME.

BY B. M. CROKER.

DIANA BARRINGTON.

PRETTY MISS NEVILLE.

BY D. CHRISTIE MURRAY.

JOSEPH'S COAT.

BY OUIDA.

PUCK. | MOTHS. | STRATHMORE.

HELD in BONDAGE.

UNDER TWO FLAGS. | TRICOTIN.

The MASSARENES.

BY JAMES PAYN.

WALTER'S WORD.

BY CHARLES READE.

GRIFFITH GAUNT. | HARD CASH.

PEG WOFFINGTON; and CHRISTIE

JOHNSTONE.

The CLOISTER and the HEARTH.

"IT IS NEVER TOO LATE TO MEND."

PUT YOURSELF in HIS PLACE.

FOUL PLAY.

BY W. CLARK RUSSELL.

The CONVICT SHIP.

BY ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON.

NEW ARABIAN NIGHTS.

BY WILLIAM WESTALL.

The OLD FACTORY.

BY EMILE ZOLA.

The DOWNFALL. | DRAM-SHOP.

ROME.

BY JUSTIN MCCARTHY.

A SHORT HISTORY of OUR OWN

TIMES.

The following are NEW in this form, and the First Four are now ready:—

DOROTHY FORSTER. By Sir Walter Besant.

LOST SIR MASSINGBERD. By James.

GOD and the MAN. By Robert Buchanan.

CHANDOS. By Ouida.

RED SPIDER. By S. Baring-Gould.

A BIRD of PASSAGE. By B. M. Croker.

PARIS. By Emile Zola.

A TERRIBLE TEMPTATION. By Charles Reade.

MR. MURRAY'S NEW BOOKS.

NOW READY.

TWO VOLUMES OF ESSAYS BY THE LATE LORD SALISBURY.

ESSAYS ON FOREIGN POLITICS.

Large crown 8vo, fs. net.

BIOGRAPHICAL ESSAYS.

Large crown 8vo, with Portrait, 6s. net.

THE FRIENDS OF ENGLAND.

An Enquiry into the Cause which has Produced the Empire and Regulates its Cohesion, together with an Estimate of the Dangers which Threaten it in the Future. By the Hon. GEORGE PERL, Author of 'The Enemies of England.' Demy 8vo, 12s. net.

NOTES FROM A DIARY.

1894-January 23, 1901. By the Right Hon. Sir MOUNT-STUART E. GRANT DUFF, G.C.S.I. F.R.S. Seventh Series. 2 vols. crown 8vo, 18s. [Ready next week.]

A CHEAP EDITION, 6s. net.

SIXTEEN YEARS IN SIBERIA.

By LEO DEUTSCH. Translated and Edited by HELEN CHISHOLM. With a New Preface and the Correspondence of Prince Bismarck and Count von Bülow on the Extradition of the Author and others. With Portraits and other Illustrations. Demy 8vo. [Ready next week.]

BIRD LIFE AND BIRD LORE.

By R. BOSWORTH SMITH, Author of 'The Life of Lord Lawrence,' &c. Square demy 8vo, with Illustrations, 10s. 6d. net. [Ready next week.]

JOHN MURRAY, Albemarle Street, W.

THE METAPHYSIC OF EXPERIENCE.

BY

SHADWORTH H. HODGSON.

IN FOUR BOOKS.

Book I. General Analysis of Experience.

Book II. Positive Science.

Book III. Analysis of Conscious Action.

Book IV. The Real Universe.

In 4 vols. 8vo, buckram (the vols. not to be had separately), 36s.

ALSO BY THE SAME.

TIME and SPACE: a Metaphysical Essay. 8vo, 16s. 1865.

The THEORY of PRACTICE: an Ethical Enquiry 2 vols. 8vo, 24s. 1870.

The PHILOSOPHY of REFLECTION. 2 vols. 8vo, 21s. 1878.

OUTCAST ESSAYS AND VERSE TRANSLATIONS.

Essays.—The Genins of De Quincey, and De Quincey as Political Economist—The Supernatural in English Poetry, with Note on the True Symbol of Christian Union—English Verse.

Verse Translations.—Nineteen Short Passages, mostly familiar, from Greek and Latin Classic Poets.

Crown 8vo, 8s. 6d. 1881.

LONGMANS, GREEN & CO.
39, Paternoster Row, London, E.C.;
New York and Bombay.

DIGBY, LONG & CO'S NEW LIST. THE ADVENTURES OF A NAVAL OFFICER.

By Capt. CHARLES HUNTER, R.N.
Edited by Sir SPENSER ST. JOHN, G.C.M.G.

In crown 8vo, cloth gilt, price 6s.

Morning Post.—"The story of Capt. Hunter's experiences is one of the most thrilling we have ever read. It is vivid in the extreme.... It is delightfully readable from beginning to end."
Athenæum.—"The book is thoroughly enjoyable."

NEW SIX-SHILLING NOVELS.

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'THE CHAMELEON.'

The DOLL'S DANCE.

By CLARENCE FORESTIER WALKER.
Pall Mall Gazette.—"A well-told and exciting story."

A FOE in the FAMILY. By Nowell

CAY, Author of 'The Presumption of Stanley Hay, M.P.'
Sheffield Telegraph.—"For an exciting story this is hard to beat. Interest, aroused in the opening chapter, is stimulated as the plot thickens."

The LUCK of BELLA BARTON. By

G. W. APPLETON, Author of 'François the Valet.' With 6 Full-Page Illustrations by C. KEMP TERRY.
Scotsman.—"An exciting bit of fiction."

CELIA'S FORTUNE.

Times.—"A well-told story." By ADELINE SERGEANT.
Outlook.—"The novel shows Miss Sergeant's power at its ripest."

The MANDARIN'S FAN.

Scotsman.—"A story of absorbing interest." By FERGUS HUME.

FAVOURS from FRANCE.

World.—"A charming story." By SARAH TYTLER.
Daily News.—"The book is well worth reading."

VIRGINIA. By L. T. Meade. With

4 Full-Page Illustrations.

NEW BOOK ON PRISON LIFE.

BOLTS and BARS. By F. C. Vernon

HARCOURT. In demy 8vo, with 14 Full-Page Illustrations, 3s. 6d.
Daily Telegraph.—"No better pictures of prison life have ever been written in this country."

In crown 8vo, cloth gilt, 7s. 6d. net.

The DIVINA COMMEDIA of DANTE.

Translated into English Verse by C. POTTER.
Aberdeen Press.—"This translation has led us to read again the great poem of Dante. It is a translation to be read with pleasure and profit. The verse in English has music and rhythm, it glides easily along, and it bears with it the meaning of the poet in such a measure that the English reader may readily grasp it."

London: DIGBY, LONG &amp; CO. 18, Bouverie St., E.C.

"THE PHENE SPIERS TESTIMONIAL."

JUST PUBLISHED, large 8vo, 270 pp., with 38 Full-Page and 76 other Illustrations, bound in blue linen gilt, price 12s. 6d. net.

ARCHITECTURE EAST AND WEST.

A Collection of Essays Written at Various Times during the last Sixteen Years.

By R. PHENE SPIERS, F.S.A., F.R.I.B.A.

Now first brought together and issued with further Illustrations as part of a Testimonial to the Author.

"The essays on some phases of the architecture of the past here gathered together have been arranged by Mr Spiers in answer to a request that he would allow them to be reprinted. It was felt that, scattered as they were, these valuable contributions to the history of the Building Art were not readily accessible, and did not take the place they should do amongst works of reference."

"Mr. Spiers has made the whole course of Architectural History the object of his survey, and the studies which this volume contains may perhaps be considered as supplementary to his own edition of Fergusson's 'History of Architecture.'"—W. R. L.

Large 8vo, bound in art linen, gilt, price 18s. net.

THE ARCHITECTURE OF GREECE AND ROME.

A Sketch of its Historic Development.

By the late WILLIAM J. ANDERSON, A.R.I.B.A.,
Author of 'The Architecture of the Renaissance in Italy.'

And R. PHENE SPIERS, F.S.A.

Containing 300 pages of Text, with 185 Illustrations from Photographs and Drawings, including 43 Full-Page Plates, of which 27 are finely Reproduced in Collotype.

"As a comprehensive resume of the history and characteristics of Greek and Roman architecture, this must certainly be considered to be the best one-volume work of its kind that has yet appeared in our language, and one which should be interesting to educated readers generally, as well as to those who are in a special sense students of architecture."—Builder.

"It is such a work as many students of architecture and the classics have vainly yearned for, and lost precious years in supplying its place."—Architect.

B. T. BATSFORD, 94, High Holborn, London.

NOW READY.

Price 10s. 6d. net.

THE

NINTH SERIES

GENERAL INDEX

OF

NOTES AND QUERIES.

With Introduction by

JOSEPH KNIGHT, F.S.A.

This Index is double the size of previous ones, as it contains, in addition to the usual Index of Subjects, the Names and Pseudonyms of Writers, with a list of their Contributions. The number of constant Contributors exceeds eleven hundred. The Publisher reserves the right of increasing the price of the volume at any time. The number printed is limited, and the type has been distributed.

Free by post, 10s. 11d.

JOHN C. FRANCIS, Notes and Queries Office,
Bream's Buildings, E.C.

"I'll note you in my book of memory."—SHAKESPEARE.

S E C C O T I N E

S E C C O T I N E Regd. Trade Mark.

S E C C O T I N E

Sticks everything.

FREE SAMPLE

From the Sole Proprietors:

M'CAW, STEVENSON &amp; ORR, LIMITED, Belfast and London.

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

The best remedy for
ACIDITY of the STOMACH, HEADACHE, HEARTBURN, GOUT,

And INDIGESTION.

And Safest Aperient for Delicate Constitutions,

Ladies, Children, and Infants.

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

JUST PUBLISHED. BY J. J. FOSTER, F.S.A.

CONCERNING THE TRUE PORTRAITURE OF MARY, QUEEN OF SCOTS.

Sumptuously Illustrated by Large Plates, some in Colour, from ORIGINALS in the Collection of HIS MAJESTY THE KING,

MARQUIS OF AILSA, EARL CATHCART, DUKE OF DEVONSHIRE, EARL OF LEVEN AND MELVILLE, EARL OF DENBIGH, EARL OF MORTON, DUKE OF PORTLAND, &c.

The entire Edition is EXTREMELY LIMITED, namely:—

45 Copies only of an EDITION ROYALE, at 25 Guineas net, and 175 Copies only of an EDITION DE LUXE, at 10 Guineas net.

In the EDITION ROYALE, 20 of the Pictures and Drawings are Coloured by Hand from the Originals, and the Plates printed upon Japanese Vellum; in the EDITION DE LUXE, 6 of the Drawings are Coloured in Facsimile of the Originals.

"This magnificent folio of Mr. Foster.....A really beautiful book."—Athenæum.

"Mr. Foster's sumptuous and remarkable volume.....A most exhaustive, well-weighed, well-balanced study."—Standard.

"This is a magnificent book. Itself a work of art, it will interest and fascinate students of art and history, all who take a profound interest in the Queen of Scots."—Scotsman.

"The author is as careful and exhaustive as he is critical."—Glasgow Herald.

DICKINSONS, 114, New Bond Street, London.

THE SURGICAL AID SOCIETY.

Chief Offices—SALISBURY SQUARE, FLEET STREET, E.C.

Telephone No.: 12282 CENTRAL.

Patron—HIS MAJESTY THE KING.

This Society was established in 1862 to supply Leg Instruments, Spinal Supports, Trusses, Elastic Stockings, Artificial Limbs, &c., and every other description of Mechanical Support, to the Poor.

OVER 400 PATIENTS ARE RELIEVED EVERY WEEK.

CONTRIBUTIONS EARNESTLY SOLICITED.

Annual Subscription of £0 10 6 Entitles to Two Recommendations

Life Subscription of £5 5 0 per Annum.

Bankers—Messrs. BARCLAY & Co., Ltd., 54, Lombard Street.

RICHARD C. TRESIDDER, Secretary.

TENTH EDITION, price Two Shillings.

CELESTIAL MOTIONS:

A Handy Book of Astronomy.

Tenth Edition. With 3 Plates.

By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

"Well known as one of our best introductions to astronomy."—Guardian.

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & CO., LIMITED, St. Dunstan's House, Fetter Lane, E.C.

SEVENTH EDITION, fcap. 8vo, cloth, price Sixpence.

REMARKABLE ECLIPSES:

A Sketch of the most interesting Circumstances connected with the Observation of Solar and Lunar Eclipses, both in Ancient and Modern Times.

By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & CO., LIMITED, St. Dunstan's House, Fetter Lane, E.C.

THIRD EDITION, Revised to 1904, fcap. 8vo, cloth, price Sixpence.

ASTRONOMY FOR THE YOUNG.

By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & CO., LIMITED, St. Dunstan's House, Fetter Lane, E.C.

ELLIOT STOCK'S NEW BOOKS.

In crown 4to, cloth, fully illustrated with Portraits, &c., price 21s. net.

The GARRICK CLUB. By PERCY FITZGERALD, F.S.A., Author of 'The Life of Garrick,' 'Lives of the Kembles,' &c.
"Full of good stories, well illustrated, and especially rich in reminiscences of Thackeray."—Weekly Times.

"A volume full of delightful chat about notable people, while the numerous illustrations have an historical value."—Graphic.

In demy 8vo, cloth, gilt lettered, price 7s. 6d. net.

The COLLECTOR'S ANNUAL for 1904. Edited by GEORGE E. EAST.
'The Collector's Annual' is a Guide and Book of Reference for Connoisseurs, Collectors, and others, of the Prices which Pictures (Oil and Water-colour), Engravings (Mezzotint and Colour Prints), Old China (English and Foreign), Antique Furniture, Antique Silver and Plate, Medals and Decorations, Miniatures, and Objects of Art have realized at Auction during the Season of 1903-4. Full details are given of each Item, with the Catalogue Numbers, Date of Sale, and from whose Collection the Object is taken.

NEW VOLUME OF
THE CHEAP EDITION OF

THE BOOKLOVER'S LIBRARY

In fcap. 8vo, printed on antique paper, and tastefully bound, price 1s. 6d. net.

LITERARY BLUNDERS. A Chapter in the "History of Human Error." By HENRY B. WHEATLEY, F.S.A.

Volumes already published uniform with the above.
WHEATLEY'S HOW to FORM A LIBRARY.
HAZLITT'S OLD COOKERY BOOKS and ANCIENT CUISINE.

BLADES'S ENEMIES of BOOKS.
DITCHFIELD'S BOOKS FATAL to their AUTHORS.

HAZLITT'S STUDIES in JOCLAR LITERATURE.

FARRER'S BOOKS CONDEMNED to be BURNT.

CLOUSTON'S BOOK of NOODLES.
MARSTON'S WALTON and some EARLIER WRITERS on FISH and FISHING.

HAZLITT'S GLEANINGS in OLD GARDEN LITERATURE.

* * * Complete Lists of the Series for distribution can be had on application.

NEW NOVELS.

In crown 8vo, cloth, price 6s.

The SCHOOL of LIFE. A Study in the Discipline of Circumstance. By SYBIL M. ILES.

"The story is an excellent piece of work; the interest is sustained from the first page to the last, and when the end is reached the reader feels the better for having read it."—Leicester Mercury.

In crown 8vo, cloth, gilt lettered, price 6s.

The PAINS of HAPPINESS. A Novel. By RASAC TORRIANI.

In crown 8vo, cloth, gilt lettered, price 6s.

LIFE'S PHASES. A Domestic Study. By MARY ADAMS COLLINGS.

"Vividly written and full of human interest."—Record.

"There is some excellent character; the incidents are well described, and the interest is maintained to the conclusion."—Leicester Mercury.

ELLIOT STOCK, 62, Paternoster Row, London, E.C.

WARD, LOCK & CO.'S NEW FICTION.

NOW READY.

THE ROOT.

6s.

By ORME AGNUS, Author of 'Sarah Tuldon,' 'Zike Mouldom,' 'Jan Oxber,' 'Love in Our Village,' &amp;c.

TO-DAY says:—"Mr. Orme Agnus writes with a very genius of insight of the people of the West Country.....The inimitable humour of the chapters is as sly and sure almost as anything in Mr. W. W. Jacobs's 'Light Carriages.'"

The MORNING LEADER says:—"Mr. Orme Agnus dares to tread in Mr. Hardy's footsteps, but with this difference, that his work is lighter, more laughable, less subjective. There is nothing derogatory to Mr. Agnus in the comparison. His work is good enough to stand alone, for he has individuality. The story is never wearisome, the dialect is fascinating, the humour unflinching."

THE KING'S SCAPEGOAT.

6s.

By HAMILTON DRUMMOND, Author of 'For the Religion,' 'The Seven Houses,' &amp;c.

Of Mr. Drummond's previous Works the Press says:—

The SPEAKER says:—"It would be hard to find a story that conformed more nearly to the ideal.....It is an almost perfect specimen of the historical novel."

The ACADEMY says:—"We have no hesitation in awarding this book a place in the first rank of the historical novels of the day. Altogether a very excellent book."

THE MASTER MUMMER.

6s.

By E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM, Author of 'Mysterious Mr. Sabin,' 'The Betrayal,' &amp;c.

[Ready March 31.]

A romance of fine quality. A Princess of the kingdom of Bartenia is kept out of the way so that her position may be filled by her cousin. Her temporary guardian is killed, and knowing nothing of her parentage, and while without friends, she finds one in an English gentleman who makes a place for her in his house. Then a thousand intrigues are set afoot to get her out of his hands. The most romantic and entertaining novel which Mr. Oppenheim has yet written.

STRANGE PARTNERS.

6s. THE SHERRODS.

6s.

By GILBERT WINTLE.

By GEORGE BARR McCUTCHEON,
Author of 'Graustark,' 'Castle Cranecrow,' &c.

A daring, convention-defying, dashing, and thoroughly original novel. A story of crime from the criminals' standpoint, showing exactly how they justified their crimes to themselves. One of the most magnificent pieces of rascality ever put on paper.

The DUNDEE COURIER says:—"The author has treated his subject in masterly style. The principal characters are sketched with a vigour almost worthy of George Eliot, and the meeting between the two wives of Dudley Sherrod is written with real dramatic power."

THE STROLLERS.

6s.

DOCTOR SILEX.

6s.

By FREDERIC S. ISHAM, Author of 'Under the Rose,' &amp;c.

By HARRIS BURLAND, Author of 'Dacobra.'

The FINANCIAL TIMES says:—"In this well-written story the interest is sustained throughout: there is a large gallery of characters, and there is no lack of exciting incidents. The tale bears evidence of painstaking workmanship.....Mr. Isham's book is worth reading."

A highly imaginative romance of the frozen North, containing a vivid account of the remarkable experiences of the Silex Expedition.

THE LATE GUY BOOTHBY'S SENSATIONAL NOVEL. A CRIME OF THE UNDER SEAS.

5s.

BY THE SAME AUTHOR, 5s. each.

DR. NIKOLA.
THE FASCINATION OF THE KING.
BUSHIGRAMS.
THE LUST OF HATE.
ACROSS THE WORLD FOR A WIFE.
SHEILAH McLEOD.
FAREWELL, NIKOLA.
MY STRANGEST CASE.
THE KIDNAPPED PRESIDENT.
CONNIE BURT.
A TWOFOLD INHERITANCE.
A BID FOR FREEDOM.

IN STRANGE COMPANY.
THE MARRIAGE OF ESTHER.
A BID FOR FORTUNE.
THE BEAUTIFUL WHITE DEVIL.
PHAROS, THE EGYPTIAN.
LOVE MADE MANIFEST.
THE RED RAT'S DAUGHTER.
A MAKER OF NATIONS.
A PRINCE OF SWINDLERS.
A SAILOR'S BRIDE.
LONG LIVE THE KING.
MY INDIAN QUEEN.

THE BEST REFERENCE BOOK IN THE WORLD.

AN ENTIRELY NEW EDITION.

21s.

HAYDN'S DICTIONARY OF DATES.

21s.

A COMPLETE RECORD OF ALL EVENTS, ANCIENT, MEDIÆVAL, AND MODERN, which have taken place in the world from the earliest times right up to the beginning of the year 1904.

TWENTY-THIRD EDITION. BROUGHT DOWN TO THE BEGINNING OF THE YEAR 1904.

IT IS ACCURATE, COMPREHENSIVE, and EXHAUSTIVE, and so clearly arranged, Alphabetically and Chronologically, that any information can be found at a Moment's Notice.

The TIMES says:—"Haydn's Dictionary of Dates' is the most Universal Book of Reference in a moderate compass that we know of in the English language."

The DAILY EXPRESS says in regard to 'HAYDN'S DATES':—

|         |     |     |     |     |     |     |     |     |            |
|---------|-----|-----|-----|-----|-----|-----|-----|-----|------------|
| WORDS   | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 15,000,000 |
| COLUMNS | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 2,972      |
| PAGES   | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 1,486      |
| WEIGHT  | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 5 lbs.     |

"Without any useless waste of words, the figures given above sufficiently indicate the enormous scope and magnitude of the TWENTY-THIRD EDITION of 'HAYDN'S DICTIONARY OF DATES.' It is, in fact, one of the marvels of modern compilation."

London: WARD, LOCK & CO., LIMITED, Salisbury Square, E.C.

Editorial Communications should be addressed to "The Editor"—Advertisements and Business Letters to "The Publisher"—at the Office, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

Published Weekly by JOHN O. FRANCIS at Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C., and Printed by JOHN EDWARD FRANCIS, Athenæum Press, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

Agents for Scotland, Messrs. Bell & Bradburn and Mr. John Menzies, Edinburgh.—Saturday, March 11, 1905.

THE ATHENÆUM

Journal of English and Foreign Literature, Science, the Fine Arts, Music and the Drama.

No. 4038.

SATURDAY, MARCH 18, 1905.

PRICE
THREEPENCE
REGISTERED AS A NEWSPAPER

ROYAL INSTITUTION of GREAT BRITAIN, ALBEMARLE STREET, PICCADILLY, W.

TUESDAY NEXT, March 21, at 5 o'clock, Prof. W. E. DALBY, M.A. B.Sc. M Inst.C.E., FIRST of TWO LECTURES on 'Engineering Problems.' Half-a-Guinea the Course.

THURSDAY, March 23, at 5 o'clock, THOMAS G. JACKSON, Esq., R.A. M.A. F.S.A., FIRST of TWO LECTURES on 'The Reasonableness of Architecture' Half-a-Guinea.
Subscription to all Courses in the Season, Two Guineas.

ROYAL SOCIETY of PAINTER-ETCHERS and ENGRAVERS, 5A, Pall Mall East, S.W.—23rd ANNUAL EXHIBITION, including ETCHINGS and ENGRAVINGS by Sir F. SEYMOUR HADEN, P.R.E. Open 10 to 6. Admission 1s. HAROLD CHILD, Sec.

OBACH & CO.

EXHIBITION of OIL PAINTINGS, DRAWINGS, and LITHOGRAPHS by FANTIN-LA TOUR.
NOW OPEN. 168, NEW BOND STREET, W.

NEWSVENDORS' BENEVOLENT and PROVIDENT INSTITUTION.

Founded 1839.

Funds exceed 4,000l.

Office: Memorial Hall Buildings, 16, Farringdon Street, London, E.C.

Patron:
The Right Hon. the EARL of ROSEBURY, K.G.

President:
The LORD GLENESK.

Treasurer:

The LONDON and WESTMINSTER BANK, LIMITED.

A Donation of Ten Guineas constitutes a Vice-President and gives three votes for life at all elections. Each Donation of Three Guineas gives a vote at all elections for life. Every Annual Subscriber is entitled to one vote at all elections in respect of each Five Shillings so paid.

MEMBERSHIP.—Every Man and Woman throughout the United Kingdom, whether Publisher, Wholesaler, Retailer, Employer, or Employed, is entitled to become a Member of this Institution, and enjoy its benefits upon payment of Five Shillings annually, or Three Guineas for life, provided that he or she is engaged in the sale of Newspapers, and such members who thus contribute secure priority of consideration in the event of their needing aid from the Institution.

PENSIONS.—The Annuitants now number thirty-six, the men receiving 25l. and the women 20l. per annum each, and they include:—The "Royal Victoria Pension Fund," which was established in 1887 and enlarged in 1897, 1901, and 1902, perpetually commemorates the great advantages the News Trade enjoyed under the rule of Her late Majesty Queen Victoria, provides Pensions of 20l. a year each for Six Widows of News-vendors.

The "Francis Fund" provides Pensions for One Man, 25l., and One Woman, 20l., and was specially subscribed in memory of the late John Francis, who died on April 6, 1882, and was for more than fifty years Publisher of the Athenæum. He took an active and leading part throughout the whole period of the agitation for the repeal of the various then existing "Taxes on Knowledge," and was for very many years a staunch supporter of this Institution.

The "Horace Marshall Pension Fund" is the gift of the late Mr. Horace Brooks Marshall. The employees of that firm have primary right of election to its benefits, but this privilege not having been exercised until 1904, the General Pensions of the Institution have had the full benefit arising from the interest on this investment from 1887 to 1903.

The "Herbert Lloyd Pension Fund" provides 25l. per annum for one man; and was established in 1903 in perpetual and grateful memory of Mr. Herbert Lloyd, who was a generous benefactor of this Institution, and who died May 12, 1899.

The "Hospital Pensions" consist of an annual contribution of 35l., whereby Sir Henry Charles Burdett and his co-directors generously enable the Committee to grant 20l. for One Year to a Man and 15l. for One Year to a Woman, under conditions laid down in Rule 8c.

W. WILKIE JONES, Secretary.

THE BOOKSELLERS' PROVIDENT INSTITUTION.

Founded 1837.

Patron—HER MAJESTY QUEEN ALEXANDRA.

Invested Capital 30,000l.

A UNIQUE INVESTMENT

Offered to London Booksellers and their Assistants.

A young man or woman of twenty-five can invest the sum of Twenty Guineas (or its equivalent by instalments), and obtain the right to participate in the following advantages:—

FIRST. Freedom from want in time of Adversity as long as need exists.

SECOND. Permanent Relief in Old Age

THIRD. Medical advice by eminent Physicians and Surgeons.

FOURTH. A Cottage in the Country (Abbots Langley, Hertfordshire) for aged Members, with garden produce, coal, and medical attendance free, in addition to an annuity.

FIFTH. A furnished house in the same Retreat at Abbots Langley for the free use of Members and their families for holidays or during convalescence.

SIXTH. A contribution towards Funeral expenses when it is needed.

SEVENTH. All these are available not for Members only, but also for their wives or widows and young children.

EIGHTH. The payment of the subscriptions confers an absolute right to these benefits in all cases of need.

For further information apply to the Secretary, Mr. GEORGE LARNER, 28, Paternoster Row E.C.

ELTHAM COLLEGE, KENT.—The ROYAL NAVAL SCHOOL.—EXAMINATION for ENTRANCE and other SCHOLARSHIPS, MARCH 27 and Following Days. Public School Life and Education, with Special Classes for all Navy and Army Examina- tions.—Apply to the Head Master, Rev. A. E. RUDIE, D.D.

F O L K E S T O N E. WOODLANDS PREPARATORY SCHOOL. Rev. HENRY T. J. COGGIN, M.A. Cantab.

EDUCATION.

Parents or Guardians desiring accurate information relative to the CHOICE of SCHOOLS for BOYS or GIRLS or TUTOR in England or Abroad are invited to call upon or send fully detailed particulars to MESSRS. GAHBITAS, THRING & CO., who for more than thirty years have been closely in touch with the leading Educational Establishments.

Advice, free of charge, is given by Mr. Thring, Nephew of the late Head Master of Uppingham, 36, Sackville Street, London, W.

THE DOWNS SCHOOL, SEAFORD, SUSSEX.

Head Mistress—Miss LUCY ROBINSON, M.A. (late Second Mistress St. Felix School, Southwold). References: The Principal of Bedford College, London; The Master of Peterhouse, Cambridge.

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE, LONDON. (University of London.)

FACULTY OF MEDICINE.

The SUMMER SESSION BEGINS on WEDNESDAY, April 26. The work is arranged so that a Student may advantageously begin his Medical Curriculum then.

The HUCKNILL SCHOLARSHIP and FOUR ENTRANCE EXHIBITIONS will be AWARDED in OCTOBER.

Full information may be obtained from either of the undersigned. SIDNEY MARTIN, M.D. F.R.S., Dean of the Faculty. WALTER W. SETON, M.A., Acting Secretary.

S T. THOMAS'S HOSPITAL, ALBERT EMBANKMENT, S.E. (University of London.)

The SUMMER SESSION will COMMENCE on APRIL 26. The Hospital occupies one of the finest sites in London, and contains 602 Beds, of which 540 are in constant use.

Entrance and other Scholarships and Prizes (Twenty-six in number), of the value of more than 500l., are offered for competition each year. Upwards of Sixty Resident and other Appointments are open to Students after qualification.

A Students' Club forms part of the Medical School Buildings; and the Athletic Ground, nine acres in extent, situated at Chiswick, can be reached in forty minutes from the Hospital.

A Prospectus, containing full particulars, may be obtained from the undersigned. J. H. FISHER, B.Sc. Lond., Dean.

THE UNIVERSITIES of MANCHESTER, LIVERPOOL, and LEEDS.

The NEXT MATRICULATION EXAMINATION will COMMENCE on WEDNESDAY, July 6, 1905, and will be held simultaneously at the Three Universities and in Schools approved by the Joint Matriculation Board.

The Fee is due on or before June 3. Information as to Scholarships awarded on the results of this Examination, and on other matters, may be obtained from the undersigned. R. F. GWYTHER.

Secretary to the Joint Matriculation Board.

Owens College, Manchester.

C O U N T Y of L O N D O N.

EDUCATION ACTS, 1870 to 1903.

The LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL invites applications for the post of a PRINCIPAL ASSISTANT in the EXECUTIVE OFFICER'S BRANCH of the EDUCATION DEPARTMENT. The Officer appointed will be required to assist the Executive Officer in the work relating to Higher Education, especially in connexion with Secondary Education, Scholarships, and the Training of Teachers. Candidates must have had a University or other equivalent training, and must have had experience in connexion with Secondary Schools and in Educational Administration. The Salary attached to the position is 400l. per annum, rising by annual increments of 25l. to 600l. per annum.

The person appointed will be required to give his whole time to the duties of the Office, and will in other respects be subject to the usual conditions attaching to the Council's service, particulars of which are contained in the Form of Application.

Applications should be made on the official Form, to be obtained from the Clerk of the London County Council, at the County Hall, Spring Gardens, S.W., or at the Education Office, Victoria Embankment, W.C. The applications must be sent in not later than 10 A.M. on SATURDAY, March 18, 1905, addressed to the Education Office as above, and accompanied by copies of not more than three recent Testimonials.

Canvassing, either directly or indirectly, will be held to be a disqualification for appointment.

G. L. GOMME, Clerk of the London County Council.
The County Hall, Spring Gardens, S.W., February 23, 1905

GRAMMAR SCHOOL of KING EDWARD VI. at STOURBRIDGE.

HEAD MASTER.

There will be a VACANCY in the HEAD MASTERSHIP of this SCHOOL after JULY 31, 1905. The Gentleman appointed must be a Graduate of one of the principal Universities of the United Kingdom. A knowledge of Modern Languages, Chemistry, and Natural Science is considered desirable.

The remuneration, by Stipend, Capitation Fees, &c., amounts at present to about 600l. per annum, with House.

There are six Assistant Masters, paid by the Governors.

Personal canvassing of the Governors will be considered a disqualification.

Applications, in writing, with Twelve Copies of Testimonials, to be sent to W. P. TRAVIS, Esq., Solicitor, Clerk to the Governors, on or before MAY 20, 1905.

OLDHAM EDUCATION COMMITTEE.

The COMMITTEE invite applications for the post of UNDER SECRETARY, at a Salary of 200l. a year. Applicants must be thoroughly acquainted with the requirements of various Classes of Schools. Applications to be made on a Form which may be obtained from me, the undersigned. Canvassing will be held to be a disqualification for appointment. J. KENNIE, Secretary.

Education Office, Union Street West, Oldham.
March 15, 1905.

ART EDITOR requires ASSISTANT with some experience in Commissioning Drawings and Making-up.—P., care of Peter Harper, 29, New Bridge Street, E.C.

HOLIDAY TUTORSHIP desired by OXFORD CLASSICAL SCHOLAR. Has travelled Abroad. Good Testi- monials.—Apply Box 987, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, E.C.

ASSISTANT EDITORSHIP WANTED, in LONDON or the PROVINCES by a UNIVERSITY MAN. Has had great experience as Editor and Leader Writer. Special knowledge of Far East.—Address Box 963, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

ADVERTISER desires post as LITERARY ADVISER to PUBLISHING FIRM. University Classical Honours Man.—Address A. H. S., Box 962, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

Yearly Subscription, free by post, Inland, 15s. 3d.; Foreign, 18s. Entered at the New York Post Office as Second Class matter.

FRANCE.—The ATHENÆUM can be obtained at the following Railway Stations in France:—

AMIENS, ANTIBES, BEAULIEU-SUR-MER, BIARRITZ, BOR-DEAUX, BOULOGNE, CALAIS, CANNES, DIJON, DUNKIRK, GENEVA, GOLFE-JUAN, HAVRE, HYÈRES, JUAN-LES-PINS, LILLE, LYONS, MARSEILLES, MENTONE, MONACO, MONTE CARLO, NANTES, NICE, PARIS (Est, Nord, Lyon), PAU, ROUEN, SAINT RAPHAEL, TOULON, TOURS.

PARIS: W. H. SMITH & SON, 248, Rue de Rivoli; and at the GALIGNANI LIBRARY, 224, Rue de Rivoli.

GENTLEMAN, with several years' experience of PUBLISHING in all its branches, seeks POSITION of TRUST in established firm.—A. R., care of Hepton & Co., Solicitors, 5 and 6, Clement's Inn, W.C.

ADVERTISER, who has been in the service of a well-known Literary Man for nineteen years, is anxious to obtain a post as an ASSISTANT in a LIBRARY or BOOKSELLER'S SHOP.
Can be highly recommended. Age 30.—Box 982, Athenæum Press, 13,
Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

MAN—METAL and REPOUSSE WORKER,
Medalist, fourteen years' practical experience—seeks SITU-ATION as TEACHER or otherwise.—Apply SILVERSMITH, 10, Arthur
Road, Handsworth, Birmingham

GENTLEMAN, 46, expert Photographer, with wide knowledge of Fine Arts and cultivated taste, requires POSITION with FINE-ART PUBLISHER, or other suitable post.—M.
NETHERDALE, Glendinning Avenue, Weymouth.

LADY PROOF READER, of some experience, wants SITUATION in London preferred.—Apply, personally or by letter, J. E. F., Athenæum Press, Bream's Buildings, E.C.

TRANSLATION, REVISION, RESEARCH,
REVIEWING, INDEXING, and other LITERARY WORK, or non-resident Secretaryship. Classics, French, German, Italian.
Special Subjects, Mythology and Literature. Varied experience.—
Miss SELBY, 53, Talbot Road, W.

LITERARY RESEARCH undertaken at the British Museum and elsewhere on moderate terms. Excellent Testimonials.—A. R., Box 910, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

TRAINING for PRIVATE SECRETARIAL
WORK and INDEXING.—Apply Miss PETHERBRIDGE (Nat. Sci.
Tripos), 52A, Conduit Street, Bond Street, London, W.

TYPE-WRITING undertaken by highly educated
Women (Classical Tripos; Cambridge Higher Local; Modern Languages). Research, Revision, Translation.—THE CAMBRIDGE
TYPE-WRITING AGENCY, 10, Duke Street, Adelphi, W.C.

AUTHORS' MSS., SERMONS, PLAYS, ENVE-LOPES, CIRCULARS, and all kinds, TYPED at home (Remington), 8d. per 1,000. Good paper. Orders promptly executed.—M. L., 7, Vernon Road, Clapham.

SHORTHAND and TYPE-WRITING.—
Authors' MSS., Plays, Sermons, Reports, &c., 9d. per 1,000.
Legal and General Copying. Accuracy and Despatch guaranteed.—
Miss N. E. ROBINSON, 8, Westover Road, Wandsworth Common, London, S.W.

TYPE-WRITING promptly and accurately done.
Ten years' experience. Excellent references. 10d. per 1,000 words.
Reduction for quantity.—Miss MESSIA, The Orchard, Cotterill Road,
Surrey, S.W.

TYPE-WRITING.—AUTHORS' MSS., NOVELS,
PLAYS, REVIEWS, SERMONS, &c., TYPE-WRITTEN with promptness and accuracy at 7d. per 1,000 words. Specimens and Testimonials on application.—Miss ALDENSON, 36, Boroughgate, Appley, Westmorland.

TYPE-WRITING.—MSS., PLAYS, &c., promptly and carefully TYPED. Black-and-White Illustrations. Moderate terms.—Miss GALEN, Elgin Lodge, Chadwell Heath.

TYPE-WRITING.—The WEST KENSINGTON
OFFICES. Authors' MSS., Translations, &c. Legal and General
Copying. Circulars, &c., duplicated. Usual terms. References.
Established twelve years.—SIXES & SIXES, 229, Hammersmith Road, W.
(Private Address: 13, Wolverton Gardens, Hammersmith.)

TYPE-WRITER.—AUTHORS' PLAYS, MSS.,
&c., of every description. Carbon and other Copies. MS. from Dictation quickly and accurately.—Miss E. M. TIGER, 5, Maitland Park
Road, Haverstock Hill, N.W. Established 1884.

AUTHORS' MSS., NOVELS, SERMONS,
PLAYS, REVIEWS TYPE-WRITTEN accurately and promptly,
8d. per 1,000 words. References to well-known Writers.—M. SYLVE,
Thirlbank, Rixborough Road, Harrow

TYPE-WRITING.—MSS., PLAYS, REVIEWS
(Historical or Scientific), or any kind of TABULATED WORK promptly and accurately executed from 9d. per 1,000. Confidential.
Excellent references.—M. GIBSON, 26, Victoria Street, Plington, Devon.

THE AUTHOR'S AGENCY.—Established 1879. The interests of Authors capably represented. Agreements for Publishing arranged. MSS. placed with Publishers.—Terms and Testimonials on application to Mr. A. M. BRAGHES, 54, Paternoster Row.

MR. GEORGE LARNER, Accountant and Licensed Valuer to the Bookselling, Publishing, Newspaper, Printing, and Stationery Trades. Partnerships Arranged. Balance Sheets and Trading Accounts Prepared and Audited. All Business carried out under Mr. Lerner's personal supervision.—28, 29, and 30, Paternoster Row, E.C., Secretary to the Booksellers' Provident Institution.

C. MITCHELL & CO., Agents for the Sale and Purchase of Newspaper Properties, undertake Valuations for Probate or Purchase, Investigations, and Audit of Accounts, &c. Card of Terms on application.
Mitchell House, 1 and 2, Snow Hill, Holborn Viaduct, E.C.

ATHENÆUM PRESS.—JOHN EDWARD FRANCIS, Printer of the Athenæum, Notes and Queries, &c., is prepared to SUBMIT ESTIMATES for all kinds of BOOK, NEWS, and PERIODICAL PRINTING.—13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

Catalogues.

PICKERING & CHATTO'S CATALOGUES.

CATALOGUE of TRACTS and PAMPHLETS, chiefly Historical and Topographical, 298 pp. 8vo, with Descriptions and Selling Prices of 3,000 Rare Tracts and Pamphlets, including Items on Africa—America—Queen Anne—Astrology—Bedfordshire—Berkshire—Buckinghamshire—Cambridgeshire—Civil War—Charles I. and II.—Channel Islands—Cheshire—Commonwealth—Cornwall—Oliver Cromwell—Cumberland—Derbyshire—Devonshire—Dorsetshire—Durham—Economics and Trade—Queen Elizabeth—Essex—Flanders—France—George I. and II.—Germany—Gloucestershire—Hampshire—Herefordshire—Hertfordshire—Holland—Ireland—James I. and II.—Jesuits—Jews—Kent—Lancashire—Law—Leicestershire—Lincolnshire—London—Middlesex—Monmouthshire—Norfolk—Northamptonshire—Northumberland—Nottinghamshire—Oxfordshire—Popery—Popish Plot—Pretender (the Young and Old)—Printing—Prynne—Quakers—Rutlandshire—Prince Rupert—Scotland—Shropshire—Somersetshire—Spain—Spanish Armada—Staffordshire—Suffolk—Surrey—Sweden—Wales—Warwickshire—Westmorland—William III.—Wiltshire—Worcestershire—Yorkshire. Paper cover, post free, 1s.

CATALOGUE of ENGLISH LITERATURE, noted Bibliographically and Biographically, including First or Early Editions of the Writings of practically every English Author from Chaucer to R. L. Stevenson. 504 pp. 8vo, with Descriptions and Selling Prices of nearly 4,000 Rare Books, half-cloth, post free, 3s. 6d. This Catalogue has been pronounced on all sides to be the most interesting Bookseller's Catalogue on the subject ever issued.

CATALOGUE of SPORTS, PASTIMES, ARTS, SCIENCES. 223 pp. 8vo, with Descriptions and Selling Prices of nearly 2,000 Old or Rare Books upon almost every Branch of Sport, Science, or Art, paper cover, post free, 1s.

CATALOGUE of MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS, 125 pp. 8vo, with Descriptions and Selling Prices of about 900 Old or Rare Books, including Works on Africa, America, Australasia—First Editions of Books Illustrated by Randolph Caldecott, George and Robert Cruikshank, Richard Doyle, Harry Furniss, James Gillray, Ernest Griset, John Leech, Hablot K. Browne (Phiz), Henry Alken, Thomas Rowlandson, and numerous Rare Works with Coloured Plates—an interesting Collection of Old Curiosa, Erotica, Fætiæ, Old Romances, Chap Books, and Children's Books—numerous Topographical Works relating to most of the Counties of England, Ireland, Scotland, and Wales—fine Illuminated Manuscripts, with Miniatures—a valuable Assemblage of Early Typographical Specimens, including many Rare Editions Principes and Examples of the Early Printers. Paper cover, post free, 1s.

CATALOGUE of NEW PURCHASES. Books on all Subjects, including a fine Collection of Stamped and Elaborately Gilt-Tooled Old Bookbindings, and several very beautiful Ancient Illuminated Manuscripts. 578 pp. 8vo, containing Descriptions, with Selling Prices, of 4,000 Valuable Books, Illustrated with 9 Coloured and 198 Reproductions of Manuscripts and Old Bindings, cloth, post free, 6s.

It has been found necessary to make the above charges for our Catalogues, to prevent an inundation of applications from irresponsible persons. The cost of the Catalogue will, however, be deducted from the first order of 11.

PICKERING & CHATTO, Antiquarian Booksellers, 66, HAYMARKET, LONDON, S.W.

LUDWIG ROSENTHAL'S ANTIQUARIAT, MUNICH, BAVARIA, HILDEGARDSTRASSE 16, begs to recommend to all Book-lovers' attention his CATALOGUE 111.

RARE AND PRECIOUS BOOKS,

as Americana—Antographs—rare Bible Editions—Bookbindings—Works on Fencing—Genealogy—Original Hand Drawings—Incunabula—Costume Works—Literary Rarities—Early Lithographs—Manuscripts—Medicine—Music—Ornaments—Placards—Ars Moriendi—Heraldry, &c., with 33 Facsimiles. Price 4m.

MESSRS. HENRY YOUNG & SONS possess one of the LARGEST STOCKS of OLD and NEW BOOKS in GREAT BRITAIN, and they will be glad to hear from any one in search of Books out of print, as they can in many cases supply them at once.

ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE MONTHLY. Price 6d.
12, South Castle Street, Liverpool.

H. H. PEACH, Antiquarian Bookseller, 37, Bel- voir Street, Leicester, issues CATALOGUES of MSS. and OLD BOOKS post free to Book Collectors. No. 10 contains Colonna Hypnerotomachia, 1545 (the William Morris Copy), &c.

THE INTERNATIONAL BOOK CIRCULAR, No. 139, containing a Special Article, entitled 'SOME CONTEMPORARY FOREIGN CHEMISTS,' by Dr. M. O. FORSTER, together with an exact Bibliography of their Publications, and a Double Plate of their Portraits. Specimen Copies gratis.—WILLIAMS & NORGATE, Book Importers, 14, Henrietta Street, Covent Garden, W.C.

NOW READY.

CATALOGUE of the SECOND PORTION of the LIBRARY of the late Prof. YORK POWELL, comprising History and Biography—Antiquarian Works—European and Oriental Literature and Philology, &c.
B. H. BLACKWELL, 50 and 51, Broad Street, Oxford.

MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS.—Send for CATALOGUE (post free) of good SECOND-HAND WORKS, esteemed Editions of various Authors, some scarce, all in new extra leather bindings, full and half bound, at prices affixed.—W. ROSE & FOX, Bookbinders, 29-30, Eagle Street, Red Lion Street, Holborn, W.C.

BOOKS.—All out-of-print and rare Books on any subject supplied. The most expert Bookbinder extant. Please state wants and ask for Catalogue. I make a special feature of exchanging any saleable Books for others selected from my various Lists. Special List of 2,000 Books I particularly want post free.—EDW. BAKER'S Great Bookshop, 14-16, John Bright Street, Birmingham.

LEIGHTON'S ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE of EARLY PRINTED and other INTERESTING BOOKS, MANUSCRIPTS, and BINDINGS.

Part VIII. SI—T, with 144 Illustrations, price 2s. JUST ISSUED. Parts I.—VII. containing A—SH, with 1050 Illustrations in Facsimile, price 17s. the 7 Parts.

J. & J. LEIGHTON, 40, Brewer Street, Golden Square, W.

FIRST EDITIONS of MODERN AUTHORS, including Dickens, Thackeray, Lever, Alnworth; Books illustrated by G. and R. Cruikshank, Phiz, Rowlandson, Leech, &c. The largest and choicest Collection offered for Sale in the World. Catalogues issued and sent post free on application. Books Bought.—WALTER T. SPENCER, 27, New Oxford Street, London, W.C.

CATALOGUE of FRENCH BOOKS, at greatly reduced prices. I. PHILOSOPHY. II. RELIGION. III. HISTORY. IV. POETRY, DRAMA, MUSIC. V. BEAUX-ARTS. VI. GEOGRAPHY. VII. MILITARY. VIII. FICTION. IX. GENERAL LITERATURE.

DULAU & CO. 37, Soho Square, London, W.

GLAISHER'S REMAINDER BOOK CATALOGUE.

FEBRUARY SUPPLEMENT NOW READY, Comprising all most Recent Purchases in PUBLISHERS' REMAINDER STOCK. Books in NEW condition, at REDUCED Prices.

WILLIAM GLAISHER,

Remainder and Discount Bookseller, 265, High Holborn, London.

BOOKS FOR SALE.—A GENTLEMAN has a number of RARE BOOKS FOR SALE, including Gregory's Decretalia, Couburger, 1482—Dolce's Transformationi, 1553—Las Casas' Tratado Comprobatorio, 1553—Calvin's In Iherum Psalmorum Commentarius, 1557—Herrera's Edition of Garcilasso de la Vega, 1580—Fulke's Defense and Confession, 1583—Sidney and Golding: De Mornay, 1587—Speght's Chaucer, 1598 and 1602 Editions—Daniel's Vision of the Twelve Goddesses, 1623—Thomas Nabbes' The Bride, 1640—Ogilby's Homer, 2 vols. 1669—Dryden & Lee, The Duke of Guise (with Music), 1683—Charles Davenant's Circe, 1685—Aphra Behn's Miscellany, 1685—De Hondt's Dutch Edition of Dampier, 1698—1704—The German and English Prayer-book, printed by Crooke in Dublin, 1710—The Tatler, 4 vols. 8vo, 1710—11—Woodes Rogers' Cruising Voyage, 1718—The Baskerville Milton, 1758—Walpole's Works, 5 vols. 1798—Wordsworth, White Doe, 1815—Dickens' Our Mutual Friend (Monthly Parts), 1864—5—Curzon's Persia, 1892—Underdowne's Heliogorus, 1895—Ricci's Correggio (Japanese Vellum), 1896.—Kindly address offers ATHENÆUM, Clarendon, Shalton, Teignmouth.

WANTED, BOOKS on CALLIGRAPHY, ALPHABETS, PALEOGRAPHY; also Facsimile or Photogravure Reproductions of Books of Hours, Missals, Psalters, &c. noted for their artistic beauty, with Catalogues containing any such items.

Report, with best cash prices, to C. L. RICKETTS, First National Bank Building, Chicago, U.S.A.

ARUNDEL CHROMOS.

Large number in Stock; many rare ones. Send stamp for this Month's Printed List. SAINT JUDE'S DEPOT, BIRMINGHAM.

PORTRAIT of GEORGE MEREDITH, after the celebrated Painting by G. F. WATTS, R.A., Engraved by W. BISCOMBE GARDNER. Limited to 600 Artist's Proofs at One Guinea each. Size, 12 in. by 8 1/2 in.—Address W. BISCOMBE GARDNER, Hoathly, Hind Head, Surrey.

MARLBOROUGH.—TO BE SOLD, WITH POSSESSION.—AXHOLME, on the London and Bath Road, within a mile of Marlborough College, with fine Views of the magnificently Timbered Slopes of Savernake Forest, a DETACHED FREEHOLD RESIDENCE, with Six Bedrooms, Dressing Room, Three good Reception Rooms, and Domestic Offices. Stabling, Lodge, Gardener's Cottage, and other Out-buildings. Well-timbered Grounds, nearly Four Acres, bounded and intersected by the River Kennet.—Solicitors, Messrs. KAYS & JONES, 37, Norfolk Street, W.C. Particulars of Mr. MARK JEANS, Marlborough.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS.—WINTER APART- MENTS—Comfortably Furnished Sitting-Room and One Bedroom. Pleasant and central. No others taken.—R. H., 66, Grove Hill Road, Tunbridge Wells.

SUPERIOR modern, well-appointed HOUSE, best position in TUNBRIDGE WELLS, TO BE LET FURNISHED, or APARTMENTS.—Mrs. KIDNER, Beausite, Boyne Park, Mount Ephraim.

Sales by Auction.

MESSRS. CHRISTIE, MANSON & WOODS respectfully give Notice that they will hold the following SALES by AUCTION at their Great Rooms, King Street, St. James's Square, the Sales commencing at 1 o'clock precisely:—

On MONDAY, March 20, MODERN PICTURES and DRAWINGS of the late Mrs. MERRY WEATHER and others.

On TUESDAY, March 21, ETCHINGS and ENGRAVINGS—Mezzotint Portraits by S. Cousins, R.A., after Sir T. Lawrence.

On WEDNESDAY, March 22, the LIBRARY of MODERN STANDARD BOOKS, the Property of JAMES HY. CROFTS, Esq., deceased, late of Lorraine House, St. Mark's Road, North Kensington, W.; also COLLECTIONS of PRINTS, NATURAL HISTORY DRAWINGS, &c., the Property of a LADY; and BOOKS from various Sources.

On THURSDAY, March 23, JEWELS of the late Miss BUSWELL and others.

On FRIDAY, March 24, OLD NANKIN and other PORCELAIN, DECORATIVE OBJECTS, and FURNITURE.

On SATURDAY, March 25, PICTURES by OLD MASTERS.

Engravings.

MESSRS. SOTHEY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C., on MONDAY, March 20, at 1 o'clock precisely, a COLLECTION of ENGRAVINGS, mostly in the Portfolio, comprising Naval and Military Subjects by Fittler, Leppinier, P. C. Canot, J. Burnet, A. Cardon, and others—Fancy Subjects of the English School, including Hesitation, by and after W. Ward, Proof in Brown; Girl Shelling Peas, and Girl Nutting, by P. W. Tompkins, after W. R. Bigg, Proofs with Untrimmed Margins—Others by R. Earlom, T. Burke, J. Young, &c., some printed in Colours—Mezzotint and other Portraits by J. R. Smith, J. McArdeil, V. Green, J. Faber, Nanteuil, Edelinck, R. Morghen, and others; including Lady Charlotte Duncombe, by C. Wilkin, after J. Hoppner, Proof before Letters, in Bistre; Mrs. Abington as Roxalana, by J. K. Sherwin, after Sir J. Reynolds, &c.—Caricatures of Political and other Subjects—English and Foreign Views, several in Colours, &c.

May be viewed. Catalogues may be had.

Valuable Books and Illuminated and other Manuscripts.

MESSRS. SOTHEY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C., on TUESDAY, March 21, and Three Following Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, valuable BOOKS and MANUSCRIPTS, comprising a large number of Manuscripts, Illuminated, Devotional, Historical, and Theological—many important and interesting Autograph Manuscripts and Letters of eminent Ancient and Modern Writers—First Editions of Elizabethan Writers—Shakespeareana, including the Poems of 1640—Early Folios, and interesting Books relating thereto—Horn on Vellum—Incunabula—an unpublished French Translation of Basilikon Doron, by Louisa Servia—Rare Bibles, including Coverdale's 1535, and other Early Editions.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

A Portion of the Library of the late ROBERT ROBERTS, Esq., of Boston, Lincolnshire, Part of the Library of the late G. H. BOUGHTON, R.A., and a nearly Complete Set of the Kelmscott Press Books on Vellum.

MESSRS. SOTHEY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C., on SATURDAY, March 25, at 1 o'clock precisely, a PORTION of the LIBRARY of the late ROBERT ROBERTS, Esq. (of Boston, Lincolnshire), including Allot's England's Parnassus, 1600—Herrick, Hesperides, 1648—Milton's Poems, 1645—Sir T. More's Utopia, 1551—Benlowes's Theophilus, 1652—Drayton's Poly-Oblion, 1622—Shakespeare Works, 1682 and 1685, &c.; a PART of the LIBRARY of the late GEORGE H. BOUGHTON, R.A., comprising an important Series of the Publications of the Orulier Club, New York—J. C. Smith, British Mezzotint Portraits, 4 vols. 1884—Purlington Fine-Arts Club, Illustrated Catalogues—Fine Books on Art, &c.; and the Greater Part of a Set of the Kelmscott Press Books on Vellum, all Picked Copies in Perfect Condition, including the Chaucer.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

The extensive and valuable Library of the late JOHN SCOTT, Esq., C.B.

MESSRS. SOTHEY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C., on MONDAY, March 27, and Eight Following Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, the extensive and valuable LIBRARY of MANUSCRIPTS and PRINTED BOOKS of the late JOHN SCOTT, Esq., C.B., of Halkhill, Largs, Ayrshire, comprising a large number of Works connected chiefly with Scotland, including a probably unique Collection relating to Mary, Queen of Scots—very rare Books and Tracts relating to the Stuarts, the Jacobites, the Rebellion of 1715 and 1745, the Early History, Antiquities, Poetry, and General Literature of Scotland—the Bannatyne, Maitland, Roxburgh, and Spalding Club Books—important and valuable MSS.—Editiones Principes—rare Early-Printed Books, English and Foreign—Specimens of fine Bindings, &c.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had, price Half-a-crown each.

The extensive and valuable Collection of Books on Shipping, Navigation, and Naval Affairs, formed by the late JOHN SCOTT, Esq., C.B.

MESSRS. SOTHEY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C., on THURSDAY, April 6, and Following Day, at 1 o'clock precisely, the extensive and unique COLLECTION of WORKS connected with SHIPPING, NAVIGATION, the NAVIES, and NAVAL AFFAIRS of ALL COUNTRIES, ANCIENT and MODERN, including very many rare Works in most of the European Languages, comprising nearly 1,000 different Works, formed by the late JOHN SCOTT, Esq., C.B., of Halkhill, Largs, Ayrshire.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had, price Half-a-crown each.

Library of Dr. F. A. LEES, removed from Leeds, and other Properties.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their Galleries, 47, Leicester Square, W.C., on THURSDAY, March 23, and Following Day, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, valuable BOOKS, comprising First Editions of Modern Authors—choice Illustrated Works—Standard Editions of Leading Writers on Science, Theology, Philosophy, &c., and including Tennyson's Poems, 1830, 1833, and 1842—Swinburne's Poems and Ballads, 1866—George Eliot's Romola, First Edition, 1863—Rowlandson's English Dance of Death, and Dance of Life—Tennyson (F.), Days and Hours, 1854—Gibbon's Roman Empire, 12 vols.—Marguerite de Navarre, Les Nouvelles, Plates by Freudenberg—Browning (E. B.), Poems before Congress, First Edition—Boccaccio, Il Decamerone, 5 vols. 1757—First Editions of Smollett—Morgan's Cock Fighting, Coloured Front—Burney, The Wanderer, 5 vols. uncut—Lamb's John Woodvil, First Edition—Letchford's Illustrations to the Arabian Nights—Books Illustrated by Aubrey Beardsley, including King Arthur, 1893—Proceedings of the Civil Engineers, Mechanical Engineers, Telegraph Engineers, and other Learned Societies—Clark's Foreign Theological Library—Anti-Nicene Christian Library—Swift's Works, 19 vols.—Strype's Works, 27 vols.—Bacon's Works, 10 vols. calf gilt—Percy Anecdotes, 20 vols.—Strickland's Queens of England, 12 vols.—Sowerby's Recent and Fossil Shells, 2 vols.—Dryden's Works, by Scott, 18 vols.—Harleian Miscellany, 12 vols.—Chaucer's Works, by Skeat, 7 vols.—Morris's Neats and Eggs of British Birds—Yorkshire Parish Register Society, 20 vols.—Parish Register Society, 51 vols.—Pratt's Flowering Plants—Throsby's Nottinghamian, 1795—Van Nooten, Fleurs et Fruits de Java—Works on Architecture and Decoration—Le Figaro Illustré, 13 vols.—Thoroton's Nottinghamshire—First Editions of Morris, Lang, Jefferies, Stevenson, and others—Books of Travel—an interesting Relic of W. M. Thackeray—Autographs, &c.

Catalogues may be had.

Valuable Books, including a Portion of the Library of a Gentleman, removed from Gloucestershire.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their Galleries, 47, Leicester Square, W.C., EARLY in APRIL, the ABOVE PROPERTIES, comprising Rare and Standard Works on Natural History and in various Branches of Literature, and including Curtis's Botanical Magazine, complete to 1899, 125 vols.—Botanical Register, 33 vols.—De Caudolle, Prodromus, 17 vols.—Loddiges' Botanical Cabinet, 14 vols.—Sowerby's English Botany, 22 vols.—Selby's British Ferns—English Flora, 6 vols., and others on similar Subjects—Horatio Opera, 1483—Gay and Esop's Fables, Plates by Blake, &c.—Naples Museum, Cabinet Secret, Coloured Plates—Sheraton's Cabinet Maker, 1791, fine Copy—and many other rare and interesting items.

Rare and Valuable Books, including the Library of a Clergyman (deceased), removed from the North of England, and other Properties.

MESSRS. HODGSON & CO. will SELL by AUCTION, at their Rooms, 115, Chancery Lane, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, March 22, and Two Following Days, at 1 o'clock, RARE and VALUABLE BOOKS, including the LIBRARY of a CLERGYMAN (deceased) and other Properties, comprising a Collection of Early Printed Books from the German, Italian, and French Presses—a few Black-Letter Books and Books with Woodcuts—Holland's Herologia Anglica, 1620, with the fine Portraits by Crispin de Passe—De Wit's Atlas of the World, a Coloured Copy—Schomburgk's Views in Guiana, and other Books with Coloured Plates—Fine Art and Architectural Works—French Illustrated Books—Froissart's Chronicles, with Noel Humphreys' Illuminations, 4 vols.—Dibdin's Bibliotheca Spenceriana, &c., 7 vols.—Westmacott's English Spy, Coloured Plates, 2 vols.—Original Drawings by W. M. Thackeray—Browning's Bells and Pomegranates, the 8 Parts, 1811-6, and other First Editions of Esteemed Authors—Byron's Works, Edition de Luxe, 13 vols.—the Italian Novelists, 9 vols.—Bentham's Works, by Bowring, 11 vols.—and other Standard Books in History, Travel, and Divinity.

To be viewed, and Catalogues had.

Valuable Law Books—handsome Oak and Mahogany Bookcases—Engravings—a Collection of Book-Plates (Ex-Libris), &c.

MESSRS. HODGSON & CO. will SELL by AUCTION, at their Rooms, 115, Chancery Lane, W.C., DURING MARCH, valuable LAW BOOKS—handsome Modern Oak and Mahogany Bookcases—Engravings, &c.; also a COLLECTION of BOOK-PLATES (Ex-Libris), comprising specimens of the Early Armorial, Jacobean, and Chippendale Styles, and a few scarce American Plates.

Catalogues are preparing.

Curiosities.

MR J. C. STEVENS will SELL by AUCTION, on TUESDAY, March 21, at half past 12 o'clock, CHINESE and JAPANESE PORCELAIN, LACQUER WARE, BRONZES, &c.—Carved Ivory Boxes—Figures—Satsuma Bowls—Cloisonné and Art Metal Ware; also Old English China—Wood Carvings—Native Weapons, &c.

Catalogues on application. 38, King Street, Covent Garden, W.C.

Scientific Instruments and Apparatus—Photographic Apparatus—Tools—Fishing Tackle, &c.

FRIDAY, March 24, at half-past 12 o'clock.

MR. J. C. STEVENS will OFFER, at his Rooms, 38, King Street, Covent Garden, London, W.C., PHOTOGRAPHIC CAMERAS, LENSES, and ACCESSORIES—fine Microscopes and Slides—Optical Lanterns and Sets of Slides—Lathes—Tools—Electrical Apparatus and Fittings—Table Glass—and a large quantity of Miscellaneous Property.

On view day prior 2 to 5 and morning of Sale. Catalogues on application.

TWENTY-FIFTH MEMOIR OF THE ### EGYPT EXPLORATION FUND.

ABYDOS. Part III. By C. T. CURRELLY, F. R. AYRTON, &c. (Special Extra.) With 61 Plates. Price 25s. Twenty-sixth Memoir.

EHNASYA. By W. M. FLINDERS PETRIE, &c. With 43 Plates. Price 25s. Also 32 extra Plates and Text. ROMAN EHNASYA. Price 10s.

Kegan Paul & Co., Bernard Quaritch, Asher & Co., Henry Frowde, and Offices of Egypt Exploration Fund, 37, Great Russell Street, London, E.

GEORGE CANNING.

By H. W. V. TEMPERLEY,
Lecturer in History at Leeds University.

Price 7s. 6d. net.

NELSON and RUFFO.

By F. P. BADHAM. Price 1s. 6d. net.

James Fitch & Co., Limited, 33, Paternoster Row, E.C.

INDEXING.

MANUAL of PRACTICAL INDEXING.

By A. L. CLARKE.

Crown 8vo, cloth, 5s. net. 1905.

"It is as complete and thorough a treatise of indexing as any one could possibly desire."—Scotsman, February 20, 1905.

Library Supply Co. 181, Queen Victoria Street, E.C.

ABSTRACTS of the WILLS in REGISTER

SOAME, 1620, in the PREROGATIVE COURT of CANTERBURY.

This Volume of over 600 Pages, now ready, contains concise but exhaustive Abstracts of every Will in the two volumes known as Register Soame, containing 1,366 Wills, with 40,000 References to Persons, and 10,000 to Places, all thoroughly indexed. The volume will be delivered at 6 dols., or 23s. (carriage extra). All correspondence relative to the work may be addressed to the Editor, J. HENRY LEE, 14, Clifford's Inn, London, E.C. Subscriptions should be sent to N. C. NASH, Treasurer, New England Historic Genealogical Society, Somerset Street, Boston, Mass., U.S.A.

LIVERPOOL LITERATURE.—A Bibliography

of Old Deeds, Codices, Rare Maps, and Printed Books, including many Privately Printed Pamphlets. Illustrating the History of Liverpool, North Wales, and North-West Britain. Over 800 Items, with Annotations, approximate Market Value, and Brief Introductory by W. M. JAGGARD. Limited to 100 Copies at 5s. each on Japanese Vellum, and 150 ordinary at 2s. 6d. each. Very few remain.

Shakespeare Press, 13, Moorfields, Liverpool.

ANCIENT and MODERN COINS.—Collectors

and Antiquarians are invited to apply to SPINK & SON, Limited, for Specimen Copy (gratis) of their NUMISMATIC CIRCULAR. The finest Greek, Roman, and English Coins on View and for Sale at Moderate Prices.—Spink & Son, Limited, Experts, Valuers and Cataloguers, 16, 17, and 18, Piccadilly, London, W. Established upwards of a Century.

THE TRADE-UNIONS and TRADE DISPUTES

BILL; The Discovery in Egypt; The Ventilation of Factories and Workshops; Law Courts (Architectural Association); Mr. Willis Clark on the Origin and Development of the Collegiate Plan at Oxford and Cambridge; A Working Drawing; Entrance Front and Details, 42, Great Portland Street; Old Oak Mantel-piece, White Hart Inn, Hull; Types of Ferro-concrete Structures (Student's Column), &c.—See the BULLETIN of March 18 (4d. by post 4d.).—Through any Newsagent; or direct from the Publisher of the Builder, Catherine Street, London, W.C.

MESSRS. CONSTABLE'S LIST.

ORDERS SHOULD NOW BE BOOKED FOR

FREE OPINIONS

FREELY EXPRESSED.

By MARIE CORELLI.

Crown 8vo, 6s.

The RUSSO-JAPANESE CONFLICT.

By K. ASAKAWA, Professor of Philosophy at Dartmouth College. Illustrated. Demy 8vo, 7s. 6d. net.

"This valuable book deserves to be purchased, read with attention, and kept at hand for reference by all those who take an intelligent interest in the origin and issues of the great campaign in the Far East.....The subject is treated with impartiality and a very agreeable spirit of moderation."—Times.

The SUN and the SERPENT. A

Contribution to the History of Serpent Worship. By Brigade-Surgeon C. F. OLDHAM. Demy 8vo. With 33 Full-Page Illustrations. 10s. 6d. net.

JOHN GRAHAM of CLAVER-

HOUSE, VISCOUNT of DUNDEE, 1648-1659. By C. SANFORD TERRY, M.A. Illustrated. Demy 8vo, 12s. 6d. net.

The KING in EXILE (CHARLES II.).

By EVA SCOTT, Author of 'Rupert, Prince Palatine.' Demy 8vo, illustrated, 15s. net.

GENERAL LEE'S LETTERS and

RECOLLECTIONS. By Capt. ROBERT E. LEE. Illustrated. Demy 8vo, 12s. 6d. net.

A Sword without a Stain.

"Of all the heroes of the nations of the nineteenth century Robert E. Lee stands with Charles Gordon in the highest place.....The Fatherlands of Sydney and Bayard never produced a nobler soldier, Christian, and gentleman than General Robert E. Lee."—Daily News.

FAR and NEAR. By John Burroughs.

Crown 8vo, 5s. net.

"Since Richard Jefferies died there is nobody writes so well in English about fields and hillsides and the open air and the life of free birds and beasts as does Mr. John Burroughs."—Scotsman.

BITS of GOSSIP. By Rebecca Hard-

ING DAVIS. Reminiscences of the famous "New England" School of Writers. Fcap. 8vo, 5s. net.

"This is most decidedly a book to be read."—Spectator.

"Pleasant to read, and often eminently interesting..... One leaves this book very grateful to the author, for it has many lights on American life and celebrities."—Daily Chronicle.

BARTHOLOMEW SASTROW. The

Memoirs of a German Burgomaster. Translated by ALBERT VANDAM. Introduction by HERBERT FISHER, M.A. Extra crown 8vo, illustrated, 3s. 6d. net.

FARTHEST NORTH. By Fridtjof

NANSEN. New Edition. About 700 demy 8vo pages. Illustrated with a Portrait, Map, and about 20 Full-Page Plates. Cloth gilt, 6s.

CITIES of INDIA. By G. W. Forrest,

C.I.E., Ex-Director of Records, Government of India. With 30 Illustrations. New Edition. Demy 8vo, 5s. net.

TRAVELS ROUND OUR VILLAGE.

By ELEANOR G. HAYDEN, Author of 'From a Thatched Cottage,' &c. With numerous Illustrations and Cover Design by L. LESLIE BROOKE. New Edition. Extra crown 8vo, 3s. 6d. net.

The FIGHT with FRANCE for NORTH

AMERICA. By A. G. BRADLEY, Author of 'Wolfe,' &c. New Edition. Demy 8vo. Illustrated. 3s. 6d. net.

[Constable's Standard Series.]

NATURAL HISTORY in ZO-

OLOGICAL GARDENS. By FRANK E. BEDDARD, M.A. Oxon. F.R.S. F.Z.S., &c. Illustrated by GAMBIER BOLTON and WINIFRED AUSTEN. Extra crown 8vo, 6s. net.

A PECULIAR PEOPLE: the

Doukhobors. By AYLMER MAUDE, Author of 'Tolstoy and his Problems.' Demy 8vo, illustrated, 6s. net.

[Next week.]

The CONCEPTION of IMMOR-

TALITY. By JOSIAH ROYCE, Professor of Philosophy at Harvard University. 16mo, 2s. 6d.

"Last year we had Prof. William James's masterly and inspiring little brochure; this year we have Prof. Royce's not less admirable treatment of the same subject.....His lecture is so stimulating and helpful that we have no hesitation in recommending it to the thoughtful reader."—Westminster Gazette.

NEW SIX-SHILLING NOVELS.

CRITTENDEN.

By JOHN FOX,

Author of 'The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come.'

JOHN FLETCHER'S MADONNA.

By Mrs. COMYNS CARR,

Author of 'Cottage Folk,' &c.

"Mrs. Comyns Carr has very cleverly worked out an original idea, contriving her picture in a perfect mosaic of picturesque detail. The Baron strongly recommends it to those capable of enjoying a good novel when they get it."—Punch.

IN SEARCH OF THE UNKNOWN.

By ROBERT W. CHAMBERS,

Author of 'The Maids of Paradise,' 'Cardigan,' &c.

THE WEDDING OF THE LADY OF LOVELL.

By UNA L. SILBERRAD,

Author of 'Petronilla Heroven,' &c.

THE DIVINE FIRE.

By MAY SINCLAIR,

Author of 'Two Sides of a Question,' &c.

THE STEPPING STONE.

By HELEN HESTER COLVILL,

Author of 'Our Wills and Fates.'

TALES OF RYE TOWN.

By MAUD STEPNEY RAWSON,

Author of 'A Lady of the Regency,' &c. [Next week.]

A ROUGH REFORMER.

By ERNEST GLANVILLE,

Author of 'The Kloof Bride,' &c. [Next week.]

RESURRECTION.

By LEO TOLSTOY.

Authorized Translation by LOUISE MAUDE.

With 33 Illustrations by PASTERNAK. 2s. 6d. net.

[Constable's 2s. 6d. Series.]

* * 6d. Edition in Paper Covers, completing 300,000, now on Sale.

MR. ERNEST THOMPSON SETON'S BOOKS.

MONARCH, the BIG BEAR. By

ERNEST THOMPSON SETON. With many Drawings by the Author in Half-Tone and Line. 5s. net.

TWO LITTLE SAVAGES. Being the

Adventures of Two Boys, who lived as Indians, and what they Learned. With over 300 Drawings. Written and illustrated by ERNEST THOMPSON SETON. Post 8vo, cloth, 6s. net.

The WORKS of GEORGE MEREDITH.

POCKET EDITION, in 17 vols., printed on thin opaque paper, bound in red cloth, gilt lettered on back and side, gilt top, 2s. 6d. net per Volume, or 3s. 6d. net in full leather per Volume. LIBRARY EDITION, in 18 crown 8vo vols., with Photogravure Frontispieces, 6s. each.

Please write for COMPLETE CATALOGUE and ANNOUNCEMENT LIST and PROSPECTUSES of all NEW BOOKS in above List to ARCHIBALD CONSTABLE & CO., Ltd., 16, James Street, Haymarket, S.W.

MR. NASH'S LIST.

NOW READY, 2 vols. price 24s. net.
SECOND EDITION.

THE PRIVATE LIFE OF TWO
EMPERORS.

William II. of Germany and Francis-Joseph of Austria.

SECOND EDITION. Price 12s. 6d.

WITH THE RUSSIANS IN PEACE AND WAR:

Recollections of a Military Attaché.

By Col. the Hon. F. A. WELLESLEY, formerly British Military Attaché in Russia.

ATHENÆUM.—"We put down this fascinating work with regret.....Col. Wellesley admits us so frankly into his confidence that in reading his narrative we almost seem to realize the presence of the grand dukes, princes, and generals."

DAILY TELEGRAPH.—"The book is one which should be read by all who wish to understand the tremendous catastrophe which is developing under our eyes in 1905."

NOW READY, price 3s. 6d. net.

ASPECTS OF BALZAC.

By W. H. HELM.

FOURTH LARGE EDITION. Price 7s. 6d.

THE TRUTH ABOUT THE TSAR
And the Present State of Russia.

By CARL JOUBERT, Author of 'Russia as it Really Is.'
[Sixth Edition.]

A BOOK WHICH SHOULD BE IN EVERY LIBRARY.
Demy 8vo, price 7s. 6d.

SPANISH INFLUENCE ON ENGLISH LITERATURE.

By MARTIN HUME,
Examiner in Spanish in the University of London.

TIMES.—"Major Hume's treatment of the complicated and fascinating theme is a model of illuminative compression.....Lucid and thorough."

SIXTH IMPRESSION. Price 7s. 6d.

RUSSIA AS IT REALLY IS.

By CARL JOUBERT.

READY SHORTLY, price 3s. 6d.

LETTERS TO A DÉBUTANTE.

By LADY JEPHSON.

NEW SIX-SHILLING NOVELS.

A DAUGHTER OF KINGS.

By KATHARINE TYNAN, Author of 'A Red, Red Rose.'

A CHARMING ROMANCE.

THE ROSE BROCADE.

By Mrs. PHILIP CHAMPION DE CRESPIGNY,
Author of 'The Mischief of a Glove,' &c.

MR. COBB'S BEST NOVEL.

SOPHY BUNCE.

By THOMAS COBB, Author of 'The Intriguers.'

READY SHORTLY, A GREAT HUMAN STORY.

SETH OF THE CROSS.

By ALPHONSE COURLANDER,
Author of 'The Taskmaster.'

READY MARCH 23.

A MAID AT LARGE.

By the Author of 'Strawberry Leaves.'

London: EVELEIGH NASH, 32, Bedford Street.

A NEW WORK BY AN OLD PUBLISHER.

AFTER WORK.

Fragments from the Workshop of an Old Publisher.

By EDWARD MARSTON, F.R.G.S.

Demy 8vo, pp. 358, cloth extra.

Price 10s. net.

The PUBLISHER has pleasure in announcing that of the first unusually large Edition printed, only a small number now remain unsold. The highly favourable and long reviews which this unpretentious work has received from the whole round of the press quite justify the expectation that the whole of the remaining copies will soon be wanted.

It would be quite impossible, within reasonable limits, to quote from or even to name these papers; it may suffice to say that they include over One Hundred of the principal Newspapers of the English-speaking World, as well as those of Germany and France.

*The book has been reviewed in the leading Journals in ENGLAND, SCOTLAND, IRELAND and WALES, AUSTRALIA, CANADA, NEW ZEALAND,
AMERICA, INDIA, CAPE TOWN and JOHANNES-
BERG, GERMANY and FRANCE.*

A small Pamphlet, containing Extracts from some of these Reviews, may be obtained gratis.

London:

WILLIAM HEINEMANN, 21, Bedford Street, W.C.
New York: CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS.

JUST PUBLISHED.

1 vol. with 208 Illustrations, royal 8vo, cloth extra,
price 16s. net.

PRIMITIVE ART IN EGYPT.

BY

JEAN CAPART,

Keeper of the Egyptian Antiquities of the Royal
Museums, Brussels,
Lecturer at the University of Liège.

Translated from the Specially Revised Original
Edition, with 23 New Illustrations,
By A. S. GRIFFITH.

I. PRELIMINARY CONSIDERATIONS.

II. PERSONAL ADORNMENT.

III. ORNAMENTAL and DECORATIVE ART.

IV. SCULPTURE and PAINTING.

V. The EARLIEST PHARAONIC REMAINS.

VI. DANCING, MUSIC, and POETRY.

VII. CONCLUSIONS. INDEX.

The book affords an extraordinary amount of information on the condition of art and culture in the Nile Valley during the remote prehistoric age before the earliest of the Pharaohs.

M. Capart has produced a work which introduces us to a new world of interest, while the anthropologist and ethnologist will find material collected and conclusions arrived at which are of the greatest interest and importance.

H. GREVEL & CO.

33, King Street, Covent Garden, London, W.C.

TENTH EDITION, price Two Shillings.

CELESTIAL MOTIONS:

A Handy Book of Astronomy.

Tenth Edition. With 3 Plates.

By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

"Well known as one of our best introductions to astronomy."—Guardian.

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & CO., LIMITED, St. Dunstan's House, Fetter Lane, E.C.

SEVENTH EDITION, fcap. 8vo, cloth, price Sixpence.

REMARKABLE ECLIPSES:

A Sketch of the most interesting Circumstances connected with the Observation of Solar and Lunar Eclipses, both in Ancient and Modern Times.

By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & CO., LIMITED, St. Dunstan's House, Fetter Lane, E.C.

THIRD EDITION, Revised to 1904, fcap. 8vo, cloth, price Sixpence.

ASTRONOMY FOR THE YOUNG.

By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & CO., LIMITED, St. Dunstan's House, Fetter Lane, E.C.

FROM
WILLIAMS & NORGATE'S
LIST.

JUST ISSUED, royal 8vo, cloth, 12s. 6d. net.
THE AMERICANS.

By HUGO MÜNSTERBERG,
Professor of Psychology at Harvard University.
Translated by EDWIN B. HOLT, Ph.D.

NOW READY, cloth, 3s. 6d.
THE EARLY CHRISTIAN CONCEPTION OF CHRIST:
Its Value and Significance in the History of Religion.

By OTTO PFLEIDERER, D.D.,
Professor of Practical Theology in the University, Berlin.

NOW READY, demy 8vo, 10s. 6d.
CHRISTIAN LIFE IN THE PRIMITIVE CHURCH.

By ERNST VON DOBSCHÜTZ, D.D.,
Professor of New Testament Theology in the University of Strassburg.

"It is only in the very best English work that we meet with the scientific thoroughness and all-round competency of which this volume is a good specimen; while such splendid historical veracity and outspokenness would hardly be possible in the present or would be holder of an English theological chair."—DR. RASHDALL in the Speaker.

CROWN THEOLOGICAL LIBRARY.

VOLUMES ALREADY PUBLISHED.

VOLUME I. AUTHORIZED TRANSLATION, with 77
Illustrations, cloth, 5s.

BABEL and BIBLE. By Dr. Friedrich
DELITZSCH, Professor of Assyriology in the University of Berlin.

VOLUME II. crown 8vo, cloth, 3s.

The VIRGIN BIRTH of CHRIST: an Historical and Critical Essay. By PAUL LOBSTEIN,
Professor of Dogmatics in the University of Strassburg.
Translated by VICTOR LEULIETTE, A.K.C. B.-ès-L.
Edited, with an Introduction, by W. D. MORRISON,
LL.D.

VOLUME III. crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

MY STRUGGLE for LIGHT:
Confessions of a Preacher. By R. WIMMER, Pastor of Weisweil-am-Rhein in Baden.

VOLUME IV. crown 8vo, cloth, 4s.

LIBERAL CHRISTIANITY: its Origin, Nature, and Mission. By JEAN RÉVILLE, Professeur adjoint à la Faculté de Théologie Protestante de l'Université de Paris. Translated and Edited by VICTOR LEULIETTE, A.K.C. B.-ès-L.

VOLUME V. crown 8vo, cloth, 5s.

FAITH and MORALS. I. Faith as RITSCHL DEFINED IT. II. The MORAL LAW as UNDERSTOOD in ROMANISM and PROTEST-ANTISM. By WILHELM HERRMANN, D.D., Professor of Dogmatic Theology in the University of Marburg. Translated from the German by DONALD MATHERSON, M.A., and ROBERT W. STEWART,
M.A. B.Sc.

VOLUME VI. CHEAP EDITION, crown 8vo, cloth, 5s.

WHAT IS CHRISTIANITY? By ADOLF HARNACK, Professor of Church History in the University of Berlin. Translated by T. BAILEY
SAUNDERS. With a Special Preface to the English Edition by the Author.

VOLUME VII. crown 8vo, cloth, 5s.

EARLY HEBREW STORY: a Study of the Origin, the Value, and the Historical Background of the Legends of Israel. By JOHN P. PETERS, D.D., Rector of St. Michael's Church, New York.

VOLUME VIII. crown 8vo, cloth, 5s.

BIBLE PROBLEMS: and the New Material for their Solution. By T. K. CHEYNE,
D.Litt. D.D., Fellow of the British Academy, Oriel
Professor of Interpretation at Oxford.

VOLUME IX. crown 8vo, 4s. 6d.

The DOCTRINE of the ATONE-MENT and its HISTORICAL EVOLUTION, and RELIGION and MODERN CULTURE. By the late
AUGUSTE SABATIER, Professor in the University of Paris. Translated by VICTOR LEULIETTE, A.K.C.
B.-ès-L.

WILLIAMS & NORGATE,
14, Henrietta Street, Covent Garden, London, W.C.

MR. EDWARD ARNOLD'S
NEW BOOKS.

NOW READY AT ALL LIBRARIES AND BOOKSELLERS'.

SIR CHARLES ELIOT'S BOOK.
THE EAST AFRICA
PROTECTORATE.

By Sir CHARLES ELIOT, K.C.M.G.,
Late H.M. Commissioner for the Protectorate.

With Illustrations and Maps. Demy 8vo, 15s. net.

MORNING POST.—"A book of singular interest and of permanent value, which is not only much the best account that has yet appeared of the Protectorate, but an invaluable contribution to the problem of the administration of Equatorial Africa."

STANDARD.—"A delightful book. The author's style is admirably simple, and throughout there is a pleasing vein of humour, which relieves the book of any suspicion of heaviness."

MANCHESTER GUARDIAN.—"The book is extremely well written, with a light touch that never descends to the trivial or lacks a certain distinction."

WORLD.—"The volume is written in a bright and clear style; it contains a vast amount of information, and at every turn the author shows himself a keen and shrewd observer."

A NEW BOOK BY THE AUTHOR OF 'THROUGH THE LANDS OF THE SERB.'

THE BURDEN OF THE BALKANS.

By M. EDITH DURHAM.

With a Map and Illustrations. Demy 8vo, 14s. net.

ATHENÆUM.—"Miss Durham is one of the most entertaining of all travellers."

SHEFFIELD INDEPENDENT.—"Miss Durham's book should be read by every one who desires to understand the true nature of the problems which the world must encounter before it can regard the condition of European Turkey as even moderately satisfactory. She writes with vividness and vivacity, and her book has an added piquancy from giving a woman's experiences in romantic situations which are usually supposed to be a prerogative of men."

DAILY NEWS.—"Miss Durham's achievements are of such a daring and romantic character, and her manner of writing so lively, that whatever happens her book must be one of striking interest."

FOURTH IMPRESSION IN THE PRESS.

THE UNVEILING OF LHASA.

By EDMUND CANDLER.

With Illustrations and a Map. Demy 8vo, 15s. net.

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'BALLADS OF THE BOER WAR.'

FISCAL BALLADS.

By Capt. HARRY GRAHAM ("Col. D. Streamer"),
Author of 'Ruthless Rhymes for Heartless Homes,' &c.

Fcap. 8vo, 1s. net.

IMPORTANT MUSICAL WORK.

ALESSANDRO SCARLATTI:

His Life and Works.

By EDWARD J. DENT,
Fellow of King's College, Cambridge.

Royal 8vo, with 100 Musical Illustrations, 12s. 6d. net.

TIMES.—"A book which cannot fail to be generally accepted as the authority on Scarlatti."

THE EVOLUTION THEORY.

By AUGUST WEISMANN,
Professor of Zoology in the University of Freiburg.

Translated by Prof. J. ARTHUR THOMSON.

2 vols. royal 8vo, with many Illustrations, 32s. net.

ASTRONOMICAL DISCOVERY.

By HERBERT HALL TURNER, D.Sc. F.R.S.,
Savilian Professor of Astronomy in the University of Oxford.
Demy 8vo, with Diagrams, 10s. 6d. net.

ATHENÆUM.—"In this work astronomical discovery is treated of in such a way as to render it of great interest to general readers as well as to professed astronomers. The typography of this admirable work is excellent."

A NEW AND POWERFUL NOVEL.

THE SEETHING POT.

By GEORGE A. BIRMINGHAM. 6s.

London:

EDWARD ARNOLD, 41 and 43, Maddox Street, W.

MESSRS. LONGMANS & CO.'S LIST.

THE CRISIS OF THE CONFEDERACY:

A History of Gettysburg and the Wilderness.

By CECIL BATTINE,

Captain 15th King's Hussars.

With Coloured Frontispiece (Battle Flags of the Confederacy) and 6 Maps. 8vo, 16s. net.

SOUTH AFRICA.

A Glance at Current Conditions and Politics.

By J. H. BALFOUR BROWNE, K.C.

8vo, 7s. 6d. net.

* * This book contains some descriptions of the voyage from England to Cape Town, and notes of the Author's journey from Cape Town to Johannesburg and Pretoria. It deals, too, with some of the social and political questions which are before the public of South Africa at the present time, and in a guarded way refers to some aspects of Johannesburg society. It touches such matters as Chinese Labour, the future form of government, and land settlement.

ADVENTURES AMONG BOOKS.

By ANDREW LANG.

With Photogravure Portrait after Sir W. B.
Richmond, R.A.

Crown 8vo, 6s. 6d. net.

Contents:—Adventures among Books—Recollections of Robert Louis Stevenson—Rab's Friend—Oliver Wendell
Holmes—Mr. Morris's Poems—Mrs. Radcliffe's Novels—A Scottish Romanticist of 1830—The Confessions of Saint Augustine—Smollett—Nathaniel Hawthorne—The Paradise of Poets—Paris and Helen—Enchanted Cigarettes—Stories and Story-telling—The Supernatural in Fiction—An Old Scotch Psychological Researcher—The Boy.

NEW CHEAP EDITION IN TWELVE PARTS.

THE EARTHLY PARADISE.

By WILLIAM MORRIS.

Parts I.-VI. crown 8vo, 1s. net each Part.

The type of this New Edition is reset, and the Parts bound in grey boards, with linen backs, similar in style to the various Lectures and Essays by William Morris, which were printed in the Golden Type.

RICE PAPERS:

Stories and Sketches of Life in China.

By H. L. NORRIS. Crown 8vo, 6s.

"Mr. L. Norris's 'Rice Papers' possess all the delicate attributes which properly self-respecting rice papers should have. They are as light as feathers... Held up to the light, each 'Paper' discloses its watermark—a Chinaman very wittily presented."—Academy.

"The author has evidently an intimate and first-hand knowledge of the Chinaman; he has a keen perception of the humorous, and an exceedingly good style of telling a story."—Aberdeen Free Press.

MISS BADSWORTH, M.F.H.

A Novel.

By EYRE HUSSEY.

With 6 Illustrations by G. D. ARMOUR.

Crown 8vo, 6s.

"If there breathes the man with soul so dead that the sight of a pack of dappled hounds with waving tails, of well-groomed horses and pink-coated riders, rouses no answering thrill within his breast, let him avoid Mr. Eyre Hussey's new novel, for it is a hunting novel pure and simple; hounds and horses, kennels, stables, and runs across country are its theme."—Daily Graphic.

LONGMANS, GREEN & CO.

39, Paternoster Row, London, E.C.

MACMILLAN & CO.'S LIST.

VOL. IV. NOW READY.

DIARY & LETTERS OF MADAME D'ARBLAY

(1778-1840). As Edited by her Niece, CHARLOTTE BARRETT. With Preface and Notes by AUSTIN DOBSON. With Photogravure Portraits and other Sketches. In 6 vols. Vol. I., 1778 to June, 1781. Vol. II., 1781-86. Vol. III., August, 1786, to June, 1788. Vol. IV., July, 1788, to July, 1791. 8vo, 10s. 6d. net each.

WILLIAM RATHBONE:

A Memoir.

By ELEANOR F. RATHBONE. With Portraits. Extra crown 8vo, 7s. 6d. net.

TWELVE ENGLISH STATESMEN.
CONCLUDING VOLUME.

CHATHAM.

By FREDERIC HARRISON. Crown 8vo, 2s. 6d.
ST. JAMES'S GAZETTE.—"Though there have been several admirable books in this series, this is one of the best. Lucid amid a tangle of details, vivid without being too highly coloured, faithful to the statesman while mindful of the man, it comes near the model of what such a book should be."

ENGLISH MEN OF LETTERS.—New Series.

SYDNEY SMITH.

By GEORGE W. E. RUSSELL. Crown 8vo, gilt top, flat back, 2s. net.

THE BRITISH ARMY

(1783-1802).

Four Lectures delivered at the Staff College and Cavalry School. By the Hon. J. W. FORTESCUE, Author of 'A History of the British Army.' With Maps. 8vo, 4s. 6d. net.

SECOND EDITION JUST PUBLISHED.

ROMAN SOCIETY,

From Nero to Marcus Aurelius.

By Prof. SAMUEL DILL, M.A. Litt.D. LL.D. 8vo, 15s. net.

TIMES.—"In its general outlines Dr. Dill's picture of the Roman world seems to us luminous and pre-eminently sane. He sees his world steadily, and sees it whole. He will not allow any partial aspect to overset the point of his judgment.....Dr. Dill writes an English which, while perfectly unaffected and straightforward, is always well balanced and dignified, which can be eloquent without being turgid, and can take on colour without losing its sobriety. It is a style which has the secret of making everything it touches to be interesting, and which should secure for Dr. Dill's new book not only literary esteem but the best sort of popularity."

THE

LOGIC OF HUMAN CHARACTER.

By CHARLES J. WHITBY, B.A. M.D. Cantab. Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d. net.

A NEW BOOK FOR LENT.

CHRIST THE LIFE AND LIGHT.

Lenten Readings selected from the Writings of the Right Rev. PHILLIPS BROOKS, D.D. By W. M. L. JAY. Crown 8vo, 6s.

SECOND IMPRESSION NOW READY.

THE DIARY OF A CHURCH-GOER.

Crown 8vo, gilt top, 3s. 6d. net.

Globe 8vo, red cloth, 4s. net each.

THE EVERSLEY SERIES

CONTAINS

163 VOLUMES,

Among which are Works by

DEAN CHURCH. 10 vols.

SHAKESPEARE. 10 vols.

LAMB. 7 vols.

WORDSWORTH. 12 vols.

CHARLES KINGSLEY. 13 vols.

MATTHEW ARNOLD. 8 vols.

J. R. GREEN. 16 vols.

JOHN MORLEY. 12 vols.

EMERSON. 6 vols.

HUXLEY. 12 vols.

R. H. HUTTON. 6 vols.

SIR R. JEBB. 1 vol.

SIR JOHN SEELEY. 5 vols.

AND

FREDERIC HARRISON. 1 vol.

ACADEMY.—"In truth, we can hardly imagine a pleasanter fate than to be locked for a year on some sunny island, with trees, a few friends, some food, and a stout wooden case containing the entire 'Eversley Series.'"

** Complete List sent post free on application.

MACMILLAN &amp; CO., LIMITED, London.

HURST & BLACKETT'S NEW LIST.

In 2 vols. royal 8vo, with over 250 beautiful
Illustrations and 7 Maps, 2l. 2s. net.

L H A S A.

An Account of the Country and People of
Central Tibet, and of the Progress of the Mission sent there by the English Government in the Year 1903-4.

Written, with the help of all the Principal Persons
of the Mission,

By PERCEVAL LANDON,

Special Correspondent of the Times.

With an Introduction by

Col. Sir FRANCIS YOUNGHUSBAND,
K.C.I.E.

An Illustrated Prospectus sent free on application.

"Our correspondent has had such opportunities of studying the internal politics of Tibet as perhaps no European ever before obtained."—Times (leader).

"The climax of the narrative of course is the approach to Lhasa, and Mr. Landon does not miss his opportunity. In a few pages, now eloquent, now rhetorical, he describes his first sight of the city, which so few strangers had ever beheld, and which for centuries remained a place of dreams.
Of the illustrations it is impossible to speak too highly, and we know not where the art of photography has been carried to a loftier pitch of excellence."—Daily Mail.

In 1 vol., medium 8vo, illustrated by over 250 Reproductions of Photographs taken especially for this Work, 4 Coloured
Plates from Paintings, and 3 Maps, 18s. net.

ANTARCTICA.

Two Years amongst the Ice of the South Pole.

By Dr. OTTO NORDENSKJOLD.

"The authors have as good a story to tell as any polar explorer since Nansen, and they have told it with spirit and enthusiasm."—Times.

"The story which is graphically told in this profusely illustrated volume adds an eloquent chapter to the long record of daring enterprise beyond the sea undertaken for a definite useful purpose."—Daily Chronicle.

A BOOK OF ANECDOTE ILLUSTRATING LITERARY LIFE IN LONDON.

In 1 vol. large crown 8vo, with 16 Portrait Sketches, 6s. net.

TWENTY YEARS AGO.

By EDMUND DOWNEY,

Author of 'Through Green Glasses.'

"The anecdotes are all fresh goods, and in the humour of them there is an unmistakable taste of reality which adds immensely to the flavour."—St. James's Gazette.

"Mr. Downey has an ample collection of good stories, and knows how to tell them well."—World.

In 1 vol. crown 8vo, 6s.

A GENDARME OF THE KING.

Being the Experiences of the Laird of
Lindourie with the Great Frederick
in the Seven Years' War.

By PHILIP L. STEVENSON.

"Narrated with plenty of movement and with a graphic picture of Frederick himself."—Times.

"Major Stevenson has managed to conjure up the real spirit of life in Frederick's Courts and camps."—Pall Mall Gazette.

NEW EDITION, REVISED AND ENLARGED.

In 1 vol. demy 8vo, illustrated with numerous Reproductions
from Photographs and Drawings, 12s. net.

ILLUSTRATED HORSEBREAK- ING.

By Capt. M. H. HAYES, Author of 'Points of the Horse,' 'Veterinary Notes,' &c.

In 1 vol. large crown 8vo, with Illustrations, 6s.

The CHILD SLAVES of BRITAIN.

By ROBERT SHERRARD, Author of 'The White
Slaves of England,' &c.

London: HURST & BLACKETT, LIMITED,
182, High Holborn, W.C.

SPRING, 1905.

A LITERARY HISTORY OF THE ENGLISH PEOPLE.

Vol. II By J. J. JUSSERAND, French Ambassador to the United States. Demy 8vo, cloth, 12s. net.
[In preparation.]

TRAVELS OF A NATURALIST IN NORTHERN EUROPE.

By J. A. HARVIE-BROWN, F.R.S.E. F.Z.S., Author of 'Fauna of the Moray Basin,' 'A Vertebrate Fauna of Orkney,' &c. With 4 Maps and many Illustrations. 2 vols. royal 8vo, cloth. LIMITED EDITION, Uniform with 'Fauna of the Moray
Basin.' Prices on application. [In preparation.]

SIBERIA:

A Record of Travel, Climbing, and Exploration.

By SAMUEL TURNER, F.R.G.S. With 100 Illustrations and 2 Maps. Demy 8vo, cloth, 21s. net.
[In preparation.]

INTERNATIONAL LAW AND THE NORTH SEA CRISIS.

By F. E. SMITH, B.C.L., Fellow of Merton College, Oxford, and Vinerian Scholar in the University of Oxford, and N. W. SIBLEY, LL.M. Trin.H.Cant.,
Barristers-at-Law. Royal 8vo, cloth, 21s. net.
[In preparation.]

RUSSIA UNDER THE GREAT SHADOW.

By LUIGI VILLARI, Author of 'Giovanni
Segantini,' 'Italian Life in Town and Country,'
&c. With 60 Illustrations. Demy 8vo, cloth,
10s. 6d. net. [In preparation.]

THE AGE OF THE EARTH, And other Geological Studies.

By W. J. SOLLAS, LL.D. D.Sc. F.R.S., Professor of Geology in the University of Oxford. Illustrated. Demy 8vo, cloth, 10s. 6d.
[In preparation.]

BYGONES WORTH REMEMBERING.

By GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE. With a
Photogravure Frontispiece and 18 other Portraits.
2 vols. demy 8vo, cloth, 21s. [Ready.]

LADY JEAN:

The Romance of the Great Douglas Cause.

By PERCY FITZGERALD, F.S.A. With Photo-gravure Frontispiece and 12 other Illustrations.
Demy 8vo, 12s. net. [Ready.]

THE PERSONAL STORY OF THE UPPER HOUSE.

By KOSMO WILKINSON. With Photogravure
Frontispiece. Demy 8vo, cloth, 16s. [Ready.]

THE

WESTMINSTER CATHEDRAL:

A Criticism.

By PERCY FITZGERALD, F.S.A. With 3 Plates.
Crown folio, 5s. net. [In preparation.]

IN PERIL OF CHANGE:

Essays Written in Time of Tranquility.

By C. F. G. MASTERMAN, Fellow of Christ's College, Cambridge, Author of 'From the Abyss,' &c. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s. [In preparation.]

CHATS ON OLD FURNITURE.

By ARTHUR HAYDEN, Author of 'Chats on English China,' With over 100 Illustrations. 5s.
[Ready.]

T. FISHER UNWIN, Paternoster Square.

SATURDAY, MARCH 18, 1905.

CONTENTS.

|   |         |
|---|---------|
| MOORE AS MAN OF LETTERS...  | 327     |
| POEMS BY WILLIAM WATSON AND JOHN DAVIDSON ...   | 328     |
| ENGLAND UNDER THE STUARTS ...   | 330     |
| THE ASSOCIATIONS OF HAM HOUSE ...   | 331     |
| NEW NOVELS (The Golden Bowl; The Marriage of William Ashe; Contre l'Impossible) ...   | 332-333 |
| GEOGRAPHY AND TRAVEL ...  | 333     |
| OUR LIBRARY TABLE (Lord Salisbury's Essays; The Personal Story of the Upper House; L'Angleterre et son Empire; The Friends of England; Creatures that Once were Men; The Child-Slaves of Britain; Popular Ballads of the Olden Time; Towards Democracy; The Standard Library; Tennyson in the Favourite Classics) ... | 334-336 |
| LIST OF NEW BOOKS ...   | 336     |
| THE DISCOVERERS OF THE POEMS OF CATULLUS; RECENT KRATS LITERATURE; MISTAKES IN PRERAGES; BOOKSELLERS' PROVIDENT INSTITUTION; THE SPRING PUBLISHING SEASON ...   | 336-337 |
| LITERARY GOSSIP ...   | 338     |
| SCIENCE—RESEARCH NOTES; SIR STAMFORD RAFFLES AND THE FOUNDING OF THE ZOOLOGICAL SOCIETY; THE N RAYS; SOCIETIES; MEETINGS NEXT WEEK; GOSSIP ...  | 339-342 |
| FINE ARTS—ART HISTORY AND PRACTICE; MR. RICH'S WATER-COLOURS AT THE ALPINE CLUB; THE ARUNDEL CLUB; ARCHÆOLOGICAL NOTES; THE LATE LORD SOUTHBESK; SALES; GOSSIP ...  | 343-345 |
| MUSIC—EIGHTH SYMPHONY CONCERT; FIRST PHILHARMONIC CONCERT; GOSSIP; PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK ...   | 346     |
| DRAMA—OFF THE RANK; EVERYBODY'S SECRET; THE THREE DAUGHTERS OF M. DUPONT; SHAKSPEAREANA; GOSSIP ...   | 347-348 |

LITERATURE

Thomas Moore. By Stephen Gwynn. (Macmillan & Co.)

MR. GWYNN has accomplished no easy task with tact and literary skill, if not with accuracy. Thomas Moore has been so variously esteemed, and these variations of judgment have such good foundation, that it required not only a sympathetic, but also a very calm umpire to assign to the poet his proper place in English literature. To all who came within the reach of his personal fascination such a task was almost impossible. The whole of his own generation, including all its greatest literary men, with the solitary exception of the surly Wordsworth, were subdued by his charms, and esteemed him far more highly than he did himself, for he was a modest and clear-sighted man, and felt that he had little chance of immortality except through his songs. On the other hand, the professional critics of a later age have set him down as little better than a facile rhymers, who wrote society verses without the smallest inspiration. A more violent antinomy there does not exist in our literary history. Mr. Gwynn seems to us to have given the critical solution with perfect good sense. The whole person, and not merely the poet, was a mass of contradictions such as could hardly be found except in Ireland. He was a dapper little creature, insignificant of mien, and exciting at first sight amusement rather than respect. He was improvident, and always in debts and difficulties which were a torment to himself and his family. He was very lukewarm in religion, and content to have his children adopt a creed opposed to his own. Even his patriotism was of no earnest type, in that he would not quarrel with his country's oppressors, though he did so with those who agitated for her relief. He spent his time in a society far above his rank, and among people from whom he was supposed to obtain favour by his obsequiousness. He was not capable of violent anger or bursts of noble passion. Could any picture be more unattractive, or any person less likely to stand forth as either powerful or popular in the world? Who could ever reverence such a teacher? Yet, with all these weaknesses, he had both remarkable gifts and a most surprising backbone of character. The people who at first sight despised him as a cock-sparrow were conquered in a few minutes by his gift of agreeable conversation, wherein he had no equal. The very men whom he challenged to a duel became his fast friends during the talk on the field before and after the combat. There is perfect unanimity on this point. In any society, from that of Byron, Rogers, and Scott down to that of sailors on a merchantman, he was the most agreeable man alive, his wit and gaiety suiting itself at once to his company. His average talk was so good that no one ever thought of collecting his "good stories," which were legion. This is the highest possible compliment to his quality. And, unlike other wits, whose brilliancy is often ill-natured and leaves an unpleasant after-taste, Moore made friends of all sorts and conditions of men. He was, without contradiction, "the very best creature in this world." He was beloved by great and small, and made fast friends of the leading men of his age. Moreover, though poor and thriftless, and always in want of money, he consistently refrained from using his unlimited power of borrowing from his friends, and could not be persuaded to receive even indirect help from those who were longing to relieve him. He slaved and slaved all his life at hack-work, when he might have lived in comfort on the generosity of others. The same proud independence he showed in politics. When offered a seat in Parliament and a lucrative post by a Government whose Irish policy he resented, he rejected this escape from poverty, though pressed on him by noble friends, with every delicacy of feeling. There never was a man more truthful and fastidiously honourable in all his dealings. Yet he was the son of an obscure shopkeeper in a back street of Dublin. He was attracted by female fascination as a butterfly by scented flowers, yet never was there a more faithful and devoted husband. Such were the paradoxes of the man's life and character, a perfect exponent of his nation, at once flexible but intractable, admirable but reprehensible, chivalrous but timid, winsome but querulous, constant in hilarity, yet steeped in many sorrows.

Mr. Gwynn analyzes with delicate appreciation this fascinating yet disappointing man of letters. As a workman Moore was remarkable both for his skill and care, and his mastery of the language is shown very clearly by the metrical tour de force necessary for the English singing of the Irish melodies. But, as is well observed by his critic, Moore wrote rather to be heard than read; he expanded each idea like a skilful rhetorician, who knows that no effect can be produced on an audience by a rapid process of thinking in the speaker. Hence he dealt more in simile than in metaphor, and no one can quote from him those lightning flashes with which great poets have illumined the hearts of men. With all his grace and tenderness we feel a lack of depth or concentration in all his work; his life seems to us superficial and without passion; even his enduring sense of Ireland's wrongs did not prevent him from living by preference among her oppressors. The only man whom he systematically hated was the famous Castlereagh, probably not so much for his politics as for his cynicism. No Irishman can bear this quality in any man, and whether rightly or wrongly, it was always ascribed to the real Transactor of the Union.

As Mr. Gwynn is no specialist in music, he has wisely avoided any close estimate of the merit of Moore's work in this respect. The poet's great and immediate popularity as a singer of songs proves clearly that he had exceptional gifts for this charming social art; but he was no musician in the proper sense; his self-accompaniment was simple and unscientific, and he lived in an uncritical age, and in a society the worst possible for reproducing the national expression of another age or race. The art of the eighteenth century was essentially self-complacent. Westminster boys played the 'Andria' of Terence in perruques and patches. Pseudo-classical form was everywhere rampant. The shepherds and shepherdesses were still those of Watteau and of the Trianon, in spite of the affected return to primitive life, and the children of nature were only admitted into good company with their faces washed and their scanty garments decently arranged. Such was also the treatment which the melodies received from Moore, and still more from his collaborator Stevenson. This latter was wholly trained in the Dublin cathedrals on English church music and on English glees, and his extant services and anthems show him to have been a very commonplace composer, whose work is, however, still popular in Dublin, because his main purpose was to write florid and effective solos for the leading gentlemen of the choirs. How little he appreciated the melodies which he arranged for Moore is patent from the fact that in none of his many compositions is there a single reminiscence of the quaint and beautiful phrases he undertook to harmonize, and therefore must have studied with care. Worse than this was the impertinence with which he and others in his day took liberties with these curious tunes, substituting modern banality for the unfamiliar, and therefore difficult, progressions of the original airs, hard as they are to sing, still harder to harmonize. A comparison of the settings by modern masters like Sir C. Stanford, who really appreciate the national flavour, will show clearly the contrast. Stevenson was no doubt the chief culprit, but we are not confident that Moore did not share in the crime, which amounts to no less than lèse-majesté against the noblest and most distinctive expression of the genius of the nation which he loved.

As we have said already, he had not much voice, and no training whereby to master difficulties. He was, therefore, bound to make words and music thoroughly vocal, of which art he was a perfect master. He knew the vowels and the consonants which suited every note on the compass of his voice; he knew the limited range of that voice, and so he contrived to smooth many difficulties, to the cost of both the tune and the sense. What could be a greater feat than to find words melodious and effective for a beautiful air of a very difficult rhythm, which words when analyzed contain hardly any meaning at all? We refer the reader for a specimen to the well-known "No, not more welcome than fairy numbers."

Mr. Gwynn tells us that Moore always accompanied himself on the piano, which is no doubt true in his early life, and especially in England, where the Irish melodies were unfamiliar even to the best musicians. But our biographer seems to have missed the point of his preference for a mixed company, and his dislike of singing at mere men's parties. These latter were in the Dublin of Moore's day, and probably in London also, gay suppers round a table, where songs had to be sung, or rather shouted, without any help beyond perhaps the chorus of the refrain. This by no means suited the poet's delicate organ. In a drawing-room with ladies there was always the support of a piano. Nor did he disdain, as we have heard from those who helped him, the great assistance of a truly sympathetic accompanist. There were at least two young ladies in Dublin in whom he trusted, because they understood his ad libitum style, and subdued their part to a delicate pianissimo. His singing was almost a recitation, delivered with great pathos, and it was "the correct thing" for the ladies who crowded round the piano to be dissolved in tears. Yet he was modest about his singing, and would insist on giving way to the Rev. Dr. Griffin (afterwards Bishop of Limerick), whom he regarded as his superior in voice and his equal in expression. But the taste for these performances did not last. When he returned in later life to Dublin, though one of the ladies was still there to accompany him, a generation that did not know him had arisen, who listened to him, not with rapturous sympathy, but with cold curiosity. He is said to have felt deeply this change, this drifting out of popularity, chiefly due to his long estrangement from his native city.

It is a great pity that Mr. Gwynn is too young to have gathered from those who knew the Dublin of 1820 these and many other memories of the poet. It was still socially a stately city; the beautiful houses built by the Adams were but forty years old; the higher gentry had not yet deserted them. If political life was killed by the Union, convivial life—gay, brilliant, and refined—still lingered about the Court, the University, and the squares. The learned professions were full of brilliant men, who have now, alas! few successors. But all this society was intensely Protestant, and there were many fine people who hesitated to invite even the gifted Moore because he was a Roman Catholic and of low extraction. The far greater houses of London were much more accessible, and this may go some way to explain his steady preference for an English home.

He had been long forgotten when he died, and his death coinciding with a change of Ministry (February, 1852) and with the death of the Catholic Archbishop of Dublin, we find that only one Dublin paper, The

Freeman, thought his departure worthy of a leading article. "Sic transit gloria mundi." Yet Byron, Scott, and Shelley have left it on record that they thought him in the very first rank as a writer of songs. Surely this is a charter to fame of which he never can be deprived.

The Poems of William Watson. 2 vols. (John Lane.)

Selected Poems. By John Davidson. (Same publisher.)

WHEN a poet issues a collected edition of his poems, he challenges the critic to judge his work as a whole, and therefore we gladly take up the glove thrown down by Mr. Watson and by his editor, Mr. J. A. Spender, in this careful recension. Before doing so, we must congratulate Mr. Lane on the dignity and beauty of the edition, and upon the admirable bibliography which completes its useful charm.

It is a quarter of a century since Mr. Watson published his first verses, for 'The Prince's Quest' appeared in 1880. At that moment the romantic movement still dominated English poetry. Tennyson, Rossetti, Swinburne, Browning, and William Morris were the gods of literature, and it seemed certain that the fire of romantic poetry which had burnt steadily for nearly a hundred years was inextinguishable. The eighteenth-century conventions appeared to be dead beyond hope of resurrection. If any critic had predicted that the romantic movement would die, and that the Augustan School would spring to life again, he would have been derided. Yet a thoughtful student might have detected the beginnings of such a reaction in the poetry of Matthew Arnold, although he could not have foretold that it would culminate in the work of Mr. Watson.

Mr. Spender acutely points out that 'The Prince's Quest' is "rather curiously unprophetic of Mr. Watson's subsequent development. It is an essay in the romantic and æsthetic direction exclusively; it touches neither the ethical, the intellectual, nor the practical region at any point; it abounds in quaint archaisms of diction. The reader will look in vain for any successor of this order in Mr. Watson's later work. His subsequent devotion is to an austerer mode, which deliberately rejects all conceits, which lays its stress on the ethical and the intellectual, and searches perpetually for more condensed and sculpturesque forms of expression. In point of style, Mr. Watson's later work stands midway, like Norman architecture, between the Classic and the Gothic, but his early poems, and particularly 'The Prince's Quest,' show us the point from which he started, and suggest a possible development on which he has quite deliberately turned his back."

"Like Norman architecture"—the metaphor is felicitous, and if we wish to supplement Mr. Spender's account of Mr. Watson's reversion to Norman poetry we have only to turn to Mr. Watson's lines 'To Edward Dowden,' in which he tells how Wordsworth "sang him free" from Shelley and from Keats. Here we are at once arrested by the coincidence that it was Wordsworth who sang Matthew Arnold free from the romantic movement, and we are driven to ask if the seeds of the Augustan reaction were not lurking even in Wordsworth himself, in the very magician who saw the lady of the lake

Sole-sitting by the shores of old romance.

This may seem flat blasphemy, but it is necessary to face the fact that movements in poetry are not like movements in stocks—measurable by figures, divisible by dates. Poetry is a spiritual thing, and, like the soul of man, it is fluent and fluctuating and impalpable. Wordsworth was half a Romantic and half an Augustan, and in the end his romanticism was subjugated by "an austerer mode," by his didactic passion. In the case of Mr. Watson the struggle was feebler and briefer. It did not last beyond the imitative period. It was a false dawn.

We do not lament Mr. Watson's early desertion of romance; on the contrary, we think it shows that he is one of the few poets who are born critics of themselves, and who waste no time in futile tillage of barren soil. His genius is literary. His imagination is bookish. His inspiration comes from the library, and not from life. He cultivates his garden with delicate diligence, but it is not a wild garden. It is not even a carelessly ordered garden. It is a formal garden, with shaven lawns, trim borders, and exquisitely symmetrical parterres, free from the dishevelled exuberance of romance, and securely guarded against the insurgence of life by lofty walls of calm taste and cold restraint. Dryden and Pope—outside, of course, their deliberate attacks on particular persons—seldom spill a drop of their personal pain and pleasure into their verse. The beat and throb of their personality does not perturb their style. Mr. Watson preserves the same sober reticence. He never once allows us to possess his soul. He sings only of external things. His poetry is "a criticism of life," and viewed as such, it is magnificent in its lucidity, its elegance, its dignity. Its melancholy is polished ad unguem. Its pessimism neither strives nor cries. Its serene gravity does not explode in riotous despair, and its governed cheerfulness steals rather than breaks in. In short, it represents the culmination of the reaction against romance, and the triumph of taste over feeling.

But the catholic critic does not condemn Augustanism because it is not romanticism. He recognizes that there are various schools of poetry, and he appreciates excellence in them all. Mr. Watson does not conceal his belief in the superior excellence of the didactic school. He finds in Keats "some-what of a glorious soullessness." He beautifully defines one aspect of Shelley as

The hectic flamelike rose of verse,
All colour, and all odour, and all bloom,
Steeped in the noonlight, glutted with the sun,
But somewhat lacking root in homely earth,
Lacking such human moisture as bedews
His not less starward stem of song, who, rapt
Not less in glowing vision, yet retained
His clasp of the prehensible, retained
The warm touch of the world that lies to hand,
Not in vague dreams of man forgetting men,
Nor in vast morrows losing the to-day.

He expresses his view of Swinburne's poetry thus:—

Poet, thy strain, a mountain cataract, leaps
From so remote and superhuman steeps,
It never finds the valley, but midway
Hangs beautifully lost upon the day,
In iridescence lost, in vapour spent,
Yet made immortal in evanishment.

These fine verses, like many of Mr. Watson's noblest passages, pleasantly recall an earlier master. They were probably suggested by the lines in Tennyson's 'Guinevere':—

Then—as a stream that spouting from a cliff
Falls in mid air, but gathering at the base
Re-makes itself, and flashes down the vale.

As in these and other passages Mr. Watson frankly challenges comparison with poets of the romantic school, he must not be offended if we argue against his view. The placid stream has its own beauty, but its safe and sober course deprives it of the wilder glory and the larger splendour. There is less waste in its stately progress, and its "practical" usefulness is more evident. But what it gains in one way it loses in another. Mr. Watson must be content with the laurels of the homely and domestic muse. We are aware that some accomplished critics deliberately set the eighteenth-century school above the romantic school. We know that the reaction against romance has gone far, accelerated, as it is, by the Philistine temper of our time, with its shameless deification of wealth, its worship of vulgar charlatanism, its debased standard of manners, and its rampant snobbery. But we are convinced that we have touched nearly the deepest depth, and that the second revival of romance is at hand. And although we admit that Mr. Watson has successfully carried on that eighteenth-century reaction whose beginnings must be sought even in Wordsworth, Tennyson, and Matthew Arnold, it is clear that his poetry is permeated with the influence of the romantic revival, and therefore it has never attained the soulless perfection of the eighteenth-century model. The architecture is not pure Norman, after all, for the squat towers are continually flowering with illicit roses, and the heavy porches are festooned with the tendrils of the Gothic vine. The great poets of romance have made a permanent revival of Augustanism for ever impossible. Mr. Watson has fought against the romantic virus in his veins for a quarter of a century; but it is ineradicable, and we think that it is the one vitalizing quality in his poetry. If we were asked to choose the verse of Mr. Watson's which seems to us the strongest proof of his poetic genius, we should select it not from 'Lacrimæ Musarum,' not from his sculptural poems about poets, not from his sonnets, not from his epigrams, but from the lines 'To Edward Dowden':—

I saw each blade of grass
With roots that groped about eternity.

That is a flash of the romantic imagination which could not have come out of Dryden or Pope. Similar flashes so often illumine Mr. Watson's "ethical, intellectual, and practical" verse, that we are tempted to ask whether he "turned his back" on his romantic beginning so deliberately as Mr. Spender maintains. In 'A Prelude' the poet himself hints that there is another explanation:—

The mighty poets from their flowing store
Dispense like casual alms the careless ore;
Through throngs of men their lonely way they go,
Let fall their costly thoughts, nor seem to know—
Not mine the rich and showering hand, that strews
The facile largess of a stintless Muse.
A fitful presence, seldom tarrying long,
Capriciously she touches me to song—

Then leaves me to lament her flight in vain,
And wonder will she ever come again.

No poet ever "meditated" a "thankless muse" more "strictly." No poet toiled more nobly to eke out a "fitful" imagination with cunningly carved phrases and sonorous cadences. Those who sneer at this laborious wielder of the file fail to realize that art is an infinite patience as well as an infinite impatience. For our part, we revere and admire Mr. Watson's pursuit of a splendid ideal, and we are sure that his artistic self-mastery will be rewarded by a secure place in the ranks of our poets. We do not care to place him in a class as if he were an examinee, but we may express our belief that Mr. Watson will keep his high and honourable station when many showier but shallower reputations have withered away, and must figure in any representative anthology of English poetry.

By placing 'Lacrimæ Musarum' first in this edition Mr. Watson seems to suggest that he regards it as his finest poem. We think he is wrong. It falls short of 'Wordsworth's Grave' in symmetry of outline, in fusion of scheme, in felicity of phrase, and in emotional glow. It opens with a babel of echoes and iterations, filling our ears so full with memories of Milton, Tennyson, and Swinburne that it is hard to repel the suspicion that the poet before he sat down to write the elegy had saturated his imagination with 'Lycidas,' 'Ave Atque Vale,' and the 'Ode on the Duke of Wellington,' finishing up with 'Adonais' and 'Itylus.' Mr. Watson has filed away some flaws in his poem, for nobody has a keener eye for artistic blemishes. His revisions are in most cases happy, and reveal his wonderful gift of self-criticism. But all the files in his armoury could not put life into this artificial threnody. It needs to be "hatched over again and hatched different." The rhetoric is that of a funeral oration, and our judgment refuses to commend such lines as these:—

Demand of lilies wherefore they are white,
Extort her crimson secret from the rose,
But ask not from the Muse that she disclose
The meaning of the riddle of her might:
Somewhat of all things sealed and recondite,
Save the enigma of herself, she knows.

Here the rhetoric is false as well as feeble, for to cross-examine the lily and the rose would be as futile as to administer interrogatories to the Muse. There is but one passage in the poem which rises into poetry:—

And now, from our vain plaudits greatly fled,
He with diviner silence dwells instead,
And on no earthly sea with transient roar
Unto no earthly airs, he sets his sail,
But far beyond our vision and our hail
Is heard for ever and is seen no more.

'Wordsworth's Grave,' in our judgment, is Mr. Watson's masterpiece. It is written in that elegiac quatrain which best suits his gnomic style. Although it owes its flawless form to "the frugal note of Gray," its music is graver and deeper, its language is purer and clearer, than the frigid droning and fugitive beauties of the 'Elegy in a Country Churchyard.'

As for Mr. Watson's philosophical poems, they seem to us essentially unpoetic. 'The Hope of the World' may be an excellent statement of Mr. Watson's resolute pessimism, but it is not poetry. As a sonnet-writer Mr. Watson holds a high place. His gift of sonorous phrase and epigram is better utilized in the sonnet than in the lyric. His political sonnets have the fire which his poetry generally lacks, although it burns through layers of literary self-consciousness. But he is at his best in the epigrams. Here cold impersonality is a cardinal virtue, and there is no doubt that Mr. Watson has written some of the finest epigrams in the language. Yet we cannot help wishing and hoping that he may be able to let himself go in some larger and more original work than anything in these volumes. It is all very well to carve heads on cherrystones, to make beautiful tombstones for poets, to thunder against the Sultan, to philosophize about the universe, but why does not Mr. Watson gird up his loins and try to accomplish something at once greater and more poetical in scope and scale?

Mr. John Davidson has not yet issued a collected edition of his work. Instead he modestly offers the public a small volume of selected poems. We wish he could find some friend who would do for his work what Mr. Spender has done for Mr. Watson's. There is urgent need for a collected edition of Mr. Davidson's poems and plays. The volume and the variety of his poetry ought to win for it the wider acceptance which it has hitherto lacked. It is, indeed, curious that poetry so splendid as Mr. Davidson's should fail to get fuller recognition. There are many aspects of his genius which ought to make his work popular in the best sense of the word. For instance, he has almost invented the modern ballad. He uses that fine old form as a vehicle for modern emotions. Instead of endeavouring to ape the archaisms and airs of the old ballad, he puts into it the new conceptions of a new age. Further, he handles the metre with masterly skill, filling it with imaginative life and power. Indeed, the chief virtue of his ballads is the virile energy of the shaping strength that we feel working in them, as if a smith smote the iron on the anvil. Mr. Davidson is a stalwart and sinewy songsmith. He is not a bloodless word-kneader, a pretty embroiderer of phrases, a patient artificer of single lines. No, he has life in him—violent, harsh, impetuous, rebellious life.

Interwoven with this exuberantly insurgent vitality there is a delicate thread of romantic fantasy. There is not among our younger poets one whose soul is more magically flushed with the wonder of beauty and the miracle of the world. His feeling for the witchery of the English countryside is fresh, eager, wistful, tender, spontaneous. It breaks out, like a throstle's carol or a blackbird's flute, with an exquisite sudden passion. And often this outburst of beauty is found in the midst of an arid tract of philosophy, like an oasis in the desert. And here we may say that metaphysical dialectic is Mr. Davidson's besetting sin. He is a poet led captive by Nietzsche, whose pessimism continually breaks out into songs of joy. Of course, a poet must sing out the sorrow at his heart, and there is no reason why a cry of sorrow should not be great poetry. But it must be a personal cry, not an abstract utterance of general gloom. We think that Mr.

Davidson in his 'Testaments' is on the wrong tack. His genius is lyrical. We hope he will write more ballads with the riot and fire and glory of life in their music. We hope he will write more songs with the lilt of love in their melody. And will he not go on singing the splendour of the workaday world? No other modern poet has struck the note of comradeship and democracy so nobly. We will quote 'Piper, Play!'

Now the furnaces are out,
And the aching anvils sleep;
Down the road the grimy rout
Tramples homeward twenty deep.
Piper, play! Piper, play!
Though we be o'erlaboured men,
Ripe for rest, pipe your best!
Let us foot it once again!

Bridled looms delay their din;
All the humming wheels are spent;
Busy spindles cease to spin;
Warp and woof must rest content.
Piper, play! Piper, play!
For a little we are free!
Foot it, girls, and shake your curls,
Haggard creatures though we be!

Racked and soiled the faded air
Freshens in our holiday;
Clouds and tides our respite share;
Breezes linger by the way.
Piper, rest! Piper, rest!
Now, a carol of the moon!
Piper, piper, play your best,
Melt the sun into your tune!

We are of the humblest grade;
Yet we dare to dance our fill:
Male and female were we made—
Fathers, mothers, lovers still!
Piper—softly; soft and low;
Pipe of love in mellow notes,
Till the tears begin to flow,
And our hearts are in our throats.

Nameless as the stars of night
Far in galaxies unfurled,
Yet we yield unrivalled might,
Joints and hinges of the world!
Night and day! night and day!
Sound the song the hours rehearse!
Work and play! work and play!
The order of the universe!

Now the furnaces are out,
And the aching anvils sleep;
Down the road a merry rout
Dances homeward, twenty deep.
Piper, play! Piper, play!
Wearied people though we be,
Ripe for rest, pipe your best!
For a little we are free!

Fine as this lyric of labour is, it is not nearly so fine as many of Mr. Davidson's poems. The well-known quatrain in 'A Ballad of a Nun' has been justly praised:

The adventurous sun took heaven by storm;
Clouds scattered largesses of rain;
The sounding cities, rich and warm,
Smouldered and glittered in the plain.

But still more splendid passages are found scattered through Mr. Davidson's plays and poems, which do not need the fort of his ruggedness to commend their beauty.

England under the Stuarts. By G. M. Trevelyan. (Methuen & Co.)

(Second Notice.)

WE have already expressed our appreciation of the success with which Mr. Trevelyan has dealt with the earlier part of his task. We have now to comment shortly upon the manner in which he has stood the test which confronts any one who comes fresh from an heroic to an unheroic age. He has had to leave a time when the passionate utterances of great antagonists and the clash of arms formed a real index of the tremendous issues at stake for one of incessant surface-play, beneath which astute politicians scrambled for Cromwell's inheritance, toleration, and the power of the sword. He has had to exchange the exhilaration of the fierce winds of free and well-defined conflict for the depression of one who moves in obscurity and in a debased and vitiated air. And he has, on the whole, stood the test well. His purpose has been too austere to allow him to dwell upon the lighter details which serve to relieve the drab and sorry picture. He does not even hint at Nelly Gwyn; there is no person for whom he can find any warmth of sympathy; and the result is a certain greyiness of treatment. This, indeed, we do not regret, especially since he displays in abundance the certainty of touch and the epigrammatic force which we recognized in his earlier chapters.

We are forced, however, to admit that, in dealing with the Restoration period, we seem to detect a comparative unfamiliarity with what may be called the atmosphere of the time, which leads Mr. Trevelyan to form some conclusions from which we differ, and to make one or two statements which, we must frankly say, are certainly erroneous.

We think in the first place that Mr. Trevelyan greatly overrates the effective seriousness of Charles's designs. He names him, indeed, as the leader of "the wittiest company of comedians that history records," but he treats him throughout as a dark and deadly conspirator against his people's religion and liberties. He does not, we think, distinguish sufficiently between brave words and actual intentions, between secrecy and sincerity; he does not realize that, whatever he might wish, Charles's early training had led him, even at thirty years of age, to act habitually and deliberately along the line of least resistance. That he entered upon the first stages of a negotiation with Rome for the "Gallicizing"—so to speak—of the Anglican Church is, of course, indisputable, and on paper these negotiations look formidable; but that he ever imagined that they could succeed, knowing, as he had good reason to know, the invariable practice of the Holy See; that they were anything but the outcome of a wish to satisfy himself, and Catholic opinion, of his sincerity in favour of Catholics, we do not believe. It is probable that floating ideas of the employment of a standing army for some undefined purpose, in circumstances which might perhaps arise, passed before his eyes; but for the view that such ideas ever obtained definite form or consistency we can see no evidence. Mr. Trevelyan, however, differs so far that he would have us believe that Charles designed to erect "a Second Stuart Despotism, far more terrible in its nature than the First Despotism, which his grandfather had inherited and his father lost." We think rather that the capitals in this sentence illustrate a certain tendency to phrase-making, which occasionally mars Mr. Trevelyan's work, and which appears perhaps in its most pronounced and misleading form when he says that the king

"pined in his southern heart to sit on the throne among a silenced and ordered people, in the death-like peace that broods over a land where the priests are satisfied."

Mr. Trevelyan must forgive us when we say that in this short sentence he has achieved the most complete misrepresentation of Charles's character and outlook upon life that it has been our lot to meet. This, however, is a matter of opinion. But the conviction of the dark resolves of Charles has led Mr. Trevelyan to repeat a serious error, in which, it is true, he has had many predecessors. He speaks of "the secret Treaty of Dover, by which..... Louis promised money and soldiers to Charles to help him to establish the Catholic religion in England."

Of course it was not so. If Mr. Trevelyan will consult the text of the treaty—to which he refers the reader—he will see that there is not a word about establishing the Catholic religion. The money and troops were to be used—nominally—to suppress any trouble which might arise when Charles should declare his own conversion, a very different thing—to secure the obedience "que tous les peuples doivent à leurs souverains, mesme de Religion contraire." Neither monarch was a fool, or so ill-informed as to imagine that anything more was possible; Sheldon's admonitions long before had banished any such thought from the mind of Charles. And if anything were wanting to illustrate the insincerity of the whole of this part of the business, it is that Charles was left perfectly free as to the date of declaring his conversion. In fact, as the amusing fencing described by Mignet must convince any one, all that Charles wanted was the money, all that Louis wanted was his co-operation in the war.

It is, we think, unfortunate that Mr. Trevelyan should have stuck so closely to his text of 'England under the Stuarts,' as to leave Scotland and Ireland virtually without mention. For he has thus deprived himself of the most fertile sources of illustration of Charles's objects and methods. In England Charles was, from first to last, in the grip of the Anglican Church, and his running fight with her was continuous defeat. But in Scotland it was a very different story. There, in this as in other matters, he could do as he liked with his own. Neither Anglican Church nor English Parliament could interfere. With the help of Lauderdale and the knavish Primate Sharp he taught the Scottish Church that the airs of her haughty sister in England did not become her; and her complete subjection was notified when Alexander Burnet was forced to resign the Archbishopric of Glasgow. The same want of familiarity with Scotch history accounts for two striking errors in one short sentence about Lauderdale. Mr. Trevelyan describes him as "a Covenanter at heart, a Prelatist and persecutor in act." Lauderdale, with an even greater talent for hypocrisy than his master, had been a Covenanter, just as Charles himself had been a Covenanter, while it was necessary, and not a moment longer. He was an ambitious man, and previous to the Restoration no one who refused the Covenant could be in the forefront of political life in Scotland; as he himself said, genially enough, in later days, he was willing to swallow a cartload of oaths. Nor was he a Prelatist; he was jubilant at his success in seconding Charles's efforts to destroy the power of the prelates in Scotland. In fact, in the Cabal or out of it, he is to be regarded not as an English statesman, but as a well-nigh irresponsible vizier in Scotland, especially as Charles's own man, one to whom, as he expressed it, "your Majesty's wishes are more than all human laws."

Mr. Trevelyan has also, we think, done some injustice to the behaviour of English Justices of the Peace in regard to the penal laws of the Clarendon code. They did not all lend themselves to persecution. If he will study the letters of Seth Ward to Sheldon in the Bodleian Library—some of which have been printed—he will find that that uncompromising prelate laments bitterly the difficulties which the slackness of the justices—their outspoken sympathy with the Dissenters—put in the way of the due performance of his task.

But we gladly turn from these and a rather considerable number of other points, in which we think that Mr. Trevelyan is at fault in regard to this most difficult time, to the more gracious task of noticing his admirable grasp and lucid exposition of the warring currents of thought, and the reforming of parties, which succeeded the Restoration. We could forgive him a good deal for the manner in which he explains the downfall of the Presbyterian hopes:—

"The Presbyterians did not foresee that a restoration in religion would follow from the restoration in society and politics. They did not know that in re-establishing squirearchy they were setting up a persecuting Anglicanism; for the squires whom they remembered had been haters of parsons and bishops. Nor did they suspect that in realizing at last their cherished ideal of a monarch controlled by a free Parliament they were laying firmer than Laud the foundations of an Anglican State Church; for their recollections of a free Parliament recalled groups of angry gentlemen shouting approval while Elliot demanded the suppression of Arminians, or while Pym declared that Prelacy had been tried and found wanting. Absorbed in hatred of the sects, the orthodox Puritans did not consider that the class for whom they were now forging power was led by men whose religion and estates they had themselves proscribed at the close of the first Civil War—men who for their part had not forgiven the rule of the Long Parliament, because it had been followed by the rule of the Major-Generals. The Presbyterians little suspected that in a year's time their own Church would be swept out of England for ever, while the sectaries, whom they thought to have slain by the stroke which slew the Republicans, would inherit and carry on the Puritan work."

The following passage—even though it closes with a somewhat remarkable misstatement, which vitiates a good deal of its force—we quote as a typical instance of Mr. Trevelyan's suggestive faculty:—

"The division of the religious world into Church and Dissent made freedom of thought a possibility for the future. The English could not be argued into toleration by their reason, but they could be forced into it by their feuds. In a country where the proportion of really devout persons is so large and their spontaneous activity so great, it would have been dangerous if all the principal forces of religion had been accumulated in one State Church. If the zeal of the Anglicans who enforced the Clarendon Code had been united to the zeal of the Presbyterians who passed the Blasphemy Laws, English popular opinion would have become hardly less intolerant, and far less assailable, than the hierarchy which Voltaire undermined; for in England no Voltaire could have attacked Christianity with any chance of political success. Fortunately a settlement was made under which the persecutors would rage unceasingly against each other. The rivalry of Church and Dissent forced both sides to overlook, to tolerate, and sometimes even to court, any third party. The Dissenters needed deliverance from oppressive laws too much to inquire whether Shaftesbury or Charles Fox were in a state of grace; the Church made no attempt to invigilate over the proceedings of the Royal Society, or to stop the sale of Hobbes's philosophical works."

How far Mr. Trevelyan's assertion that the Church was not openly antagonistic to Hobbes and his teaching is incorrect, may be gathered from the authorities quoted by Buckle in the notes to his fine passage on the subject ('History of Civilization,' i. 390, ed. 1867).

The description of the religious toleration, in act if not in spirit, which England owed to William's resolve, is excellent:—

"At last the time had come when English Protestants were ready to let one another worship God. All their parties were exhausted with fifty years of revolution, bloodshed, and terror, culminating in the recent narrow escape of their common religion. Like dogs that have been flogged off each other, Anglican and Puritan lay down and snarled."

These words are preceded by a noteworthy and luminous apology for the party system which resulted from the long uncertainty of the succession subsequent to the Revolution:—

"But short of foreign conquest, there would never be absolute monarchy again. A restoration, other than by French bayonets, could only be a restoration of the Clarendon Code and high Parliamentary Toryism. But as the balance of parties was kept by William and Anne, party strife came to impregnate all English life. Party spirit was the spirit of the age. Its coarse, free, vigorous breath kept the nation heartily alive. It pervaded the worlds of high society, commerce, and even of scholarship; it inspired literature, religion, finance; it guided diplomacy and war. It was the motive power of our great achievements; it founded the Bank and the National Debt; it carried through the recoinage; it evoked the genius of Swift; it effected the union of England and Scotland; it won the wars of Marlborough, and it made the peace of Utrecht."

Here we must stop, with an assurance to our readers that the foregoing extracts give but a meagre indication of the profit to be derived from a careful study of a work which is always suggestive and often exhilarating, and, in spite of some statements and inferences which can easily be put right, most accurate—a work which, as we said at the outset, must undoubtedly take a high and permanent place in the literature of the subject.

Ham House: its History and Art Treasures.
By Mrs. Charles Roundell. 2 vols. (Bell & Sons.)

THANKS to the Historical Manuscripts Commission and to private authorship, the great mansions of England are fast yielding up their treasures to the public. Ham House, as rich as any of them in rare books and miniatures, has now found a judicious chronicler in Mrs. Charles Roundell, who has received valuable assistance from Mr. William Younger Fletcher and Dr. G. C. Williamson. Some of her historical allusions are rather inexact, as, for example, the mention of Bombay as the "first possession of England in India," an honour which really belongs to Fort St. George in Madras; but she has, at any rate, disentangled the complicated Tollemache pedigree with much ability. Even if implicit confidence cannot be placed in the rhyme asserting that

Before the Normans into England came,
Bentley was my resting-place and Tollemache was my name,

the family were early established near Ipswich, and built Helmingham Hall at the beginning of the sixteenth century. The third baronet advanced their fortunes by marrying the daughter and heiress of the first Earl of Dysart, a Scotchman who had been "whipping boy" to the Prince of Wales, afterwards Charles I., and who stood high in the royal favour, though Burnet draws his character in anything but an amiable light. However, "he had one particular quality, that when he was drunk, which was very often, he was on a most exact reserve, though he was pretty open at other times." The builder of Ham House was Sir Thomas Vavasour, whom Mrs. Roundell dismisses rather abruptly, nor does she allude to the story that it was originally intended for Henry, Prince of Wales, who, however, did not live to occupy it.

The first earl's daughter became a countess in her own right, and married, secondly, John, Duke of Lauderdale, the L of the Cabal. In their days Ham House became an important political centre, whence issued measures for the coercion of the British Isles, and more especially of Scotland. Among the beautiful reproductions of portraits with which these sumptuous volumes abound, that of Lely's 'Duke and Duchess of Lauderdale' is perhaps the most attractive. The painter has thrown more strength than was his wont into the figure of the oppressor of Scotland, and has brought out in the square chin and cunning eyes the statesman's grim tenacity of purpose. Evelyn visited Ham, and, exacting critic though he was, pronounced its house and gardens to be inferior to few of the best villas in Italy itself. A few years later, however, James II. demurred to taking up his quarters there after William of Orange had established himself in Whitehall. "Ham," he said, "was a very ill winter house, and now unfurnished," so he repaired to Rochester instead, much to the relief of the victorious party.

The Tollemaches seem to have been most fortunate in their marriages. We are told of a "Cheshire heiress," Grace Wilbraham, and of a "Stanhope heiress" who brought wealth into the family. Fame attached itself rather to the younger sons, notably to the unfortunate General Tollemache, or Talmash, who fell before Brest, as his monument records, "through the envy of some of his pretended friends." Several of the earls appear to have been far from amiable. The third carried miserly habits to such an extent that Ham became known as the Temple of Famine. Yet in his younger days he made love with spirit, and Mrs. Roundell publishes some diverting letters, in the course of which he informed the Cheshire heiress that, if he could not see her, his passion was of such a nature that it would "oblidge mee uppon some desperate designe." In subsequent courtships a natural daughter of the Duke of Devonshire of the day, and a niece of Horace Walpole, also born out of wedlock, were successfully concerned. But Mrs. Roundell's most romantic story relates to a young Tollemache who fought a duel across a table with Capt. Pennington in 1777, while an officer on board the Scorpion. He was run through the heart, and sixteen years later Pennington, become a colonel, saw the dead body of Tollemache's only son carried past him at the siege of Valenciennes.

Much of the charm of Ham House consists in its exemption from the caprices of fashion. The gardens, with their fine Scotch firs, remain pretty much as they were when planned by a pupil of Le Nôtre. With the aid of two inventories compiled in the days of the Duchess of Lauderdale, Mrs. Roundell passes from room to room, and shows how every article in the state apartments occupies its original position, and every picture hangs in its old place. She also publishes numerous illustrations of the furniture, which includes some beautiful incised lacquer work.

Mr. Fletcher's chapter on the library, and Dr. Williamson's on the miniature room, are, of course, thoroughly authoritative. Though the splendid Lauderdale manuscript is at Helmingham, the library contains no fewer than twelve Caxtons, and some of the choicest works from the press of Wynkyn de Worde. Among the miniatures is one of Princess Mary of Orange, the eldest daughter of Charles I., by Pooley Wright, a rare artist, only one other specimen of whose work is known by Dr. Williamson to exist; while a miniature, by Catherine da Costa, supposed to represent Mary, Queen of Scots, is of much interest as art, even if it cannot be accepted as a trustworthy portrait. A pretty little study of an old housekeeper by Lady Sudeley brings the account of Ham House to a close. In the course of it we gather that the lady who was known in society for so many years as "Maria Marchioness," or as "Lady A." (Ailesbury), might, if she had only bided her time, have become the wife of the Duke of Wellington.

NEW NOVELS.

The Golden Bowl. By Henry James. (Methuen & Co.)

THE theory of Impressionism has been summed up in the dictum of Monet, that light is the only subject of every picture. The theory of Mr. Henry James's art might also be put in a formula: "Human thoughts are the sole material of the novelist." Whoever fails to realize this elementary principle is sure to come to grief in the effort to follow a master never other than difficult. This principle alone accounts for the order in which events are narrated—or rather, they are not narrated at all. They are delineated only in so far and at such times as they are producing an effect on the inward life of one of his characters. Consequently they are never seen in a clear dry light, such as serves to display the events of Scott, or even Thackeray. We learn them always through the refracting medium of some person's mind—and that often is rather not his notion of the event in itself, but his suspicion of somebody else's notion of it. Now this is in reality the only way in which events, whether personal or historical, exist for any of us. "A fact when it is past becomes an idea," said Creighton. This truth, forgotten alike by most novelists and nearly all historians, is the justification of Mr. James's method. It gives us, of course, no ground for asserting his success. But one reason why some folks give him up is that they refuse to see that he is attempting what, to the best of our belief, has never been attempted before, even by the most "psychological" of novelists or poets, such as Browning. For even Browning's characters always display themselves to an audience. Not so with those of Mr. James. Here we are shown not the human heart under a microscope, as with the ordinary analytical novelist, but the soul developing itself from within, finding in other persons, circumstances, and happenings nothing but the matter of its thought. It is objected that Mr. James is supersubtle, and trails an idea through far too many windings, sets it in too many lights, refines and explains and exiguates, so to say, ad nauseam. This book will awaken this objection more than ever. But let any one reflect on his thought upon any matter that concerns him personally; let him take only half-an-hour of it, and try to retrace all its involutions, and he will find himself ten times as full of distractions, of strange backward twists, of hesitations, of reasons and imaginings, as any of Mr. James's characters. The fact is brought out in this new book, for none of the dramatis personæ is at all extraordinary. The impecunious but charming Italian prince who marries the daughter of a widowed American millionaire, his wife, his father-in-law, and his lover (the American girl of brilliant social qualities who marries the millionaire), are all commonplace persons enough. Indeed, the lack of greatness in his characters—their essential littleness—while it may enhance the realism of Mr. James's work, strikes us as one of its serious defects as great art. The father continues so wrapped up in his daughter that the two former lovers are naturally brought together, and the plot turns on a peculiarly treacherous adultery. The gradual discovery of this by the princess, her desire to shield her father from the knowledge of it; his discovery of it, and desire to shield her; her success in finally severing her husband from his paramour and in securing his love, are the theme of the story. It is told—or, to be correct, it works itself out—with all the convincing realism of which Mr. James is a master. But it is very difficult, for everybody is occupied in concealing from every one else what he or she knows; and even when they desire to convey the truth, it is commonly done by the statement of something else. The triumph of this method is shown in the scene between Maggie and her father, when, as a result of what she omits to say, the millionaire resolves to pack his traps and take his wife back for good and all to America. But for the "chorus work" of Bob Assingham and his wife the whole thing would be scarcely intelligible. As it is, the book is clear to those who think Mr. James worth a little trouble. The method, in spite of its "inwardness," is detached, cold, and, if the word is possible, a little cruel. But its mental agility, its likeliness, its atmosphere, are perfect. Why Mr. James should require so very disagreeable a situation to develop his study we cannot understand, but that he has elaborated it as no one else could, we are sure; indeed, we should have liked two more books in the novel, one giving the story as it affects the mind of Charlotte, the brilliant, hard, repulsive woman, and the other showing it in the mind of the millionaire, strange compound of shrewdness and simplicity, inexorable decision and inexhaustible kindness. Mr. James can hardly achieve a greater success than that of making even one of his readers desire that the book were double its length. At the same time we trust that in the next book which he writes he will purge himself of certain mannerisms that are little more than affectations. He overworks the word "lucidity" even more than writers of an earlier age did that of "sensitivity." He plays upon the phrase "There you are" as though the words were the strings of a violin. He puts the commonest and most obvious expressions in inverted commas, and we dislike his too frequently interrupting adverbs. Doubtless all are defensible as necessary on the hypothesis of the method. We grant the method, but deny the necessity. All the same, we admit that Mr. Henry James is at his best throughout this book. The final month at Fawns, especially the two scenes between Charlotte and Maggie, is a veritable triumph. We quote one description—that in Maggie's mind of a card-party:—

"Meanwhile, the facts of the situation were upright for her round the green cloth and the silver flambeaux; the fact of her father's wife's lover facing his mistress; the fact of her father sitting all unsounded and unblinking between them; the fact of Charlotte keeping it up—keeping up everything, across the table, with her husband beside her; the fact of Fanny Assingham, wonderful creature, placed opposite to the three and knowing more about each, probably, when one came to think, than either of them knew of either. Erect above all for her was the sharp-edged fact of the relation of the whole group, individually and collectively, to herself—herself so speciously eliminated for the hour, but presumably more present to the attention of each than the next card to be played."

The Marriage of William Ashe. By Mrs. Humphry Ward. (Smith, Elder & Co.)

A NEW book by Mrs. Humphry Ward is an event in the novel-reader's calendar. It is sure to be much read, and may be remarkable. That 'The Marriage of William Ashe' will not fall short of its predecessors in popularity is probable, for it makes a wide appeal, both by its milieu and by the note struck in the principal actors. We find here vivid life, tempestuous life, "high life." But it is not in any real sense a remarkable book. There is little or nothing in it that has not been given before both by the writer herself and by others. The hand of the experienced literary artist is visible—too visible, in fact; the design—what would have been called a few years ago the “problem”—is clearly conceived and skilfully developed; but the excellence is technical, the praise cold. In essentials Mrs. Ward has followed the lines of ‘Lady Rose’s Daughter.’ We move in exalted political circles along the thread of a story familiar to the memoirs of a former generation. We are informed of this in the preface, and in the book itself (p. 284) more than a clue is given to the originals. As before, our eyes are fixed on a woman. Here, indeed, is one of the faults of the book. The predominance of Lady Kitty Bristol is foreshadowed in the frontispiece, to the exclusiveness of which Mr. Ashe, while asserting himself through the tissue-paper on the title-page opposite, is not admitted. The conception of the one character governs the rest, who are framed, by sympathy or contrast, to bring her out.

We shall not be betraying too much if we mention the fact that at an early stage Ashe marries Lady Kitty. From this point the real motif is developed—the strife of heredity on the man’s side with a love in which his best qualities are enlisted, on the woman’s with a peculiarly intense personal individuality. The strength of the opposing forces is carefully brought out. In him the instinct and capacity for politics and government, and in her an inheritance of evil and madness, make for division, while the attraction by contrast as strongly unites them. In this condition of unstable equilibrium they are at the mercy of circumstance. Circumstance takes the opportunity, and weights the scale of tragedy. Geoffrey Cliffe, a theatrical figure enough, genius and adventurer, with all the magnetism of vehement life, appeals imaginatively to all that is wild and defiant in the woman; while Mary Lyster, the embodied representative of all, good and bad, that is most unsympathetic to her, stands by to intervene with decisive results at the crises of her fate. By Lady Kitty the book stands or falls. The subordinate pair are dependent on her not only for their conception, but also for their action, and in themselves are unreal and unconvincing. Ashe himself leaves us unmoved, a type for whose public existence we are duly grateful, but incapable of genuinely interesting the reader in his private affairs. The writer herself seems to betray a rather laborious regard for him. With his wife it is different. Mrs. Ward has used all her arts to interest and charm us, including a somewhat unusual device in these days of analysis—that of treating her from outside, “objectively.” The hero’s feelings are expounded at length, the heroine’s shrouded from all but the most occasional glimpses. Whether the result is successful or not—whether Lady Kitty lives and whether she charms—is a matter of opinion, but for our own part we cannot, for all her undoubted individuality, admit her as a creation likely to hold more than a transitory place in the memory. The illustrations are conceived in a style contemporary with the action of the book.

Contre l’Impossible. By Marie Anne de Bovet. (Paris, Alphonse Lemerre.)

WHEN the works of Ford Madox Brown were exhibited at the Grafton Gallery it was pointed out that they varied so greatly in style and treatment as to seem to come from the hands of five or six great painters. The writings of Madame de Boishébert present the same extraordinary diversity. There is nothing in the most able novel now before us which recalls any one of thirteen out of fifteen books from her pen which are advertised opposite to the title-page. From that list, which includes, we think, all the work signed “Mab” and a good deal besides, there are omitted some of her best books which have appeared elsewhere, and at least one which resembles ‘Contre l’Impossible.’ “Mlle. de Bovet” has achieved such success in her lighter writings that it is difficult to set her more solid work above them in the scale of merit. All her readers outside France will agree that when she took up the “Nationalist” line, pursued in one or two of her recent books, the writer detracted from her deserved reputation. ‘Contre l’Impossible’ did not please us in its earlier pages. They are full of excellent description of a provincial world upon the Loire, and remind us of some of the openings—also a little dull—of Balzac. The first part is crowded with more characters than can be suitably developed or sufficiently differentiated. But as we overcome a certain reluctance, caused by drowsiness, and read on, four persons stand out: three of them women and one a man, all four with a noble standard. This fact in itself causes ‘Contre l’Impossible’ to differ from almost all novels from French pens, and from most great novels of all countries. We cannot say that there is no villain in the play, but the villains are not great villains, and the people that we remember are the four good ones. The three good women are absolutely distinct, indeed totally unlike to one another, and in their creation Madame de Boishébert has achieved a triumph such as readers who know her through her cynical work for the Vie Parisienne would think utterly outside her nature. Plenty of faults will be found by this critic or that with the situations, and with the action and language even of the hero and the three heroines in the trying circumstances in which they are all placed. But we do not intend to enter upon argument, and prefer to recognize the completeness of the whole. A few passages of considerable philosophical insight and observation—as, for example, on death and sorrow—strike us as new from our author. In her ‘Terre d’Émeraude’ she showed many years ago some of the great qualities which have gone to the making of the present book, but not, we think, any of equal maturity of art.

GEOGRAPHY AND TRAVEL.

A GOVERNMENT Blue-book is not exactly light reading, especially when it runs to 1,141 pages, and weighs nearly 6lb. avoirdupois. Yet no one who desires the latest information about Sweden, its People and its Industry, can afford to neglect the historical and statistical “handbook” with the above title (Stockholm), edited by Gustav Sundbärg and published by order of the Riksdag. According to the terms of the vote of credit it was to be issued in Swedish, French, and English; and the French edition was brought out in time for the Paris Exhibition of 1900. The Swedish edition appeared a year later; but the delay in issuing the English edition has had the result that the work is more thoroughly up to date. Its great feature—a novelty, we should say, in Blue-books—is the number of illustrations, which amount to nearly 400, besides about fifty maps and many diagrams. The type and paper are excellent; but its bulk is so cumbrous for a paper-bound volume that it would have been far better to issue it in two separate parts. Unfortunately the English is often of a rather peculiar kind—due, perhaps, to the fact that among the eleven translators there are only two English names; and it is a pity that the work has not been revised as a whole by some Englishman with a competent knowledge of Swedish.

The first part, which deals with the country, government, and people, abounds in useful information, both historical and political, and has been judiciously compressed. Its leading divisions are physical geography, the Swedish people, constitution and administration, and education and mental culture. In the last department, from the thoroughness of her methods, Sweden is exercising no little influence upon the rest of Europe. The sections on educational “sloyd” and workshops for children might give many hints to our own reformers, still more that on Swedish gymnastics under the Ling and Zander systems, which have gained a world-wide celebrity. The problem of underfed school children has been solved in Stockholm at small expense by providing dinners from the food cooked at the girls’ cookery classes—a capital idea, if the quality of the dinners really comes up to the mark. In so sparsely populated a country the organization of education (which is both free and compulsory) is a special difficulty, which has been partly overcome by “ambulatory schools,” in which the teacher shifts his quarters twice a year or oftener within his district. The local management of education is part of the duties of the clergy, and this system seems to work without friction, though Sweden has her Nonconformists, perhaps because the latter are compelled to contribute to the support of the State Church. There is an excellent account of higher education and of scientific and literary institutions, with a special section on the Nobel Foundation, with its five prizes.

In the constitutional chapter the most interesting section is that on the union with Norway. The revision of this compact, which has now lasted nearly a century, is the burning question of the moment. Norway has long been dissatisfied with the arrangements for diplomatic affairs, while Sweden considers that Norway is not contributing her fair share to the national defence. There would thus seem to be ample scope for striking a bargain by mutual concessions; but a committee of both Parliaments, which sat from 1895 to 1898, separated without coming to an agreement, and the trouble has lately reached an acute stage. The remarks on this subject are certainly fair, though written from the Swedish point of view; but they rather ignore the fact that Norway is much less exposed to invasion than Sweden.

The second part of the work deals with the national industries, and reveals an astonishing rate of progress, for in the last forty years the assessed income from business or trade has increased nearly fourfold. The chief export is naturally timber; indeed, more than half the land area of Sweden is occupied by forest. Of the cereals consumed a large and increasing proportion has to be imported, yet Sweden has for the last seventeen years been a Protectionist country. The numerous illustrations are principally from photographs, but it is a serious omission that there is no list of these, or of the maps.

Our American cousins are nothing if not enterprising, but it may be doubted if many of them can compete in the matter of travel and exploration with Dr. William Hunter Workman and Mrs. Fanny Bullock Workman, some of whose journeys in India are recorded in Through Town and Jungle (Fisher Unwin). Fourteen thousand miles on cycles over the plains of India, often with a scorching sun overhead and heavy sand under wheel, involve energy and determination which those only who know the country can fully appreciate. Nothing short of enthusiasm for its architectural treasures, supported by remarkable endurance, could have brought the doctor and his wife to a successful issue of their labour. They tell us that their object was to study what remains of "structural temples, cave temples cut in rock hills and in huge boulders, sculptures on rocks, figures of animals, towers, palaces, mosques, and tombs..... We set out to make the necessary journey on cycles so far as the existence of roads would permit, and in the execution of our purpose we cycled, with some interruptions, where roads failed, from near the southern extremity of India northward far into Kashmir, and from Cuttack on the eastern coast, over Calcutta, across the whole breadth of India, to Somnath Patan on the Arabian Sea, besides leaving the main lines at many points to travel in the interior."

Three winters were thus spent, the great Durbar at Delhi was attended, and in the summer of 1903 Kashmir and the Himalaya were visited. At Srinagar, where their effects were stored, a great flood destroyed their property, including many hundred photographs and negatives destined to be used to illustrate this book; but we are bound to say that their loss is not apparent, for out of 380 pages, index included, there are some 202 illustrations, many of them full-page. Indeed, the book may not unfairly be described as consisting of pictures and accessory description; and a work of the kind does not lose by this method. For the pictures are generally admirable, conveying to the mind the extraordinarily lavish profusion of ornament and detail characteristic of Southern Indian architecture, better than any description, however correct, would do. This style appeals more strongly to the authors than the simpler and plainer Mohammedan buildings of Northern India, and certainly it is more marvellous. Consequently the volume deals chiefly with the buildings and remains in peninsular India. Fatehpur Sikri is disposed of in five lines, presumably because it has been sufficiently described elsewhere; whilst the Græco-Buddhist remains visited from Hoti Mardán, the headquarters of the distinguished Queen's Own Corps of Guides, have but one brief chapter allotted to them.

The writers, with much reason, complain of the want of accommodation for strangers in ordinary Indian towns and villages which happen to be remote from main lines of traffic. Of course, it is not to be expected that these smaller places should be luxuriously provided with hotels or travellers' bungalows; but where accommodation exists ordinary furniture and sufficient attendance should be found. Improvement also in waiting-rooms, or their equivalents, at the less important railway stations seems to be required. The fact is that as yet India is not ready for ordinary travellers—globe-trotters, as they are there called. Officers travelling on duty either go by the main lines provided, road or rail, on which sufficient accommodation is usually to be had; or, when the nature of their work takes them to remote parts, they travel with tents and equipage of every description, and with ample supplies, being often independent of the country through which they pass, though ordinarily some necessities in the way of food, water, and fuel are locally procured.

In several places the accuracy of Murray's 'Indian Handbook' is impugned; it would be a pity if so excellent a guide failed in accuracy when that can be supplied, consequently attention to the fact is invited; reference to p. 85 may be made.

The book is printed on "coated paper," and is therefore heavy. In view of the great proportion of illustrations, this defect could scarcely have been avoided. It is a worthy record of remarkable journeys.

The Mountains. By Stewart Edward White. (Hodder & Stoughton.)—There was a time, not fifty years ago, when Alpine regions were explored on horse- or mule-back, and little books were written describing the byways of Switzerland. That period has passed away, and our tourists, if they do not cling to railroads, climb afoot. But in the Far West the man who is tired of towns still starts with a party of friends for a ride in the wilderness. He finds his recreation in camping out and sport rather than in climbing peaks. In the portions of California here described the peaks are perhaps unattractive, while the deep, high-walled valleys form the most striking feature of the scenery. The reader, therefore, must not expect, or need not fear to find, in this volume another story of scrambles among peaks, passes, and glaciers. Its pages are filled with descriptions of scenery and rough trails, of the denizens—human and animal—of the high places, the misadventures of packhorses, the pursuit of game. They are pervaded by a healthy spirit of enjoyment. Indeed, for the general reader the author is almost too keenly interested in his subject. He might have shortened his practical hints as to equipment and camp-cookery, and such-like details.

Mr. White shows both appreciation and descriptive power. He feels, and makes his readers feel, the local atmosphere. His pictures live, and we put down his book with a better acquaintance with the backlands of the Pacific coast, the fascination of their scenery, and the types of humanity who haunt them. His style, it must be said, is also local. He often falls into a somewhat raw and restless humour, an aggravating admixture of sentiment and jests. It is the style of young people and of a young nation. "The solid eternal granite lay heavy in its statics across the possibility of even a whisper" is hardly a successful sentence. But here is a happy picture:—

"The moon rose. The night has strange effects on the hills. A moment before they had menaced black and sullen against the sky, but at the touch of the moon their very substance seemed to dissolve, leaving in the upper atmosphere the airiest, most nebulous, fragile, ghostly simulacrum of themselves you could imagine in the realms of fairyland. They seemed actually to float, to poise like cloud-shapes about to dissolve. And against them were cast the inky silhouettes of three fir trees in the shadow near at hand."

Mr. White's pages abound in such vivid descriptions of natural effects. The illustrations are above the average, and the coloured frontispiece conveys a distinct impression of the characteristic features of the higher crests, with their scattered woods and deep blue tarns.

Tibet and Nepal. Painted and described by A. H. Savage Landor. (A. & C. Black.)—The readers of Mr. Savage Landor's work will soon find themselves lost in a maze of geographical enigmas, and alpine achievements that are not to be reconciled with anything in the history of mountaineering. We say nothing of the marvellous hairbreadth escapes, some of which are depicted in his illustrations (see more especially those on pp. 22, 34, and 96), or of the acrobatic feats performed on the sides of lofty mountains and sheer declivities shown on pp. 82, 190, and 194. Mr. Landor poses as a great explorer, and as one who adds much to our geographical knowledge. In this very book he claims many things which, if they were granted, would place him at the head of those who seek knowledge in the highest altitudes of the earth's surface. He says that he broke the world's record by reaching a summit on the Lumpa peak whose altitude he took at 23,490 feet, and, not content with this result, he declares that if the summit had been higher, he "could have reached a considerably greater elevation." He also throws in the observation that he wore comparatively light boots, such as he used in London, and that his clothes were such as he would put on for "a stroll down Piccadilly." As a feat of physical endurance this was surpassed by his taking the altitude of the Nui Pass, about 19,600 feet, in his shirt-sleeves, without a cap on his head—or rather, as he is careful to state, it was a straw hat! Mr. Landor is very scornful of Alpinists, who have, he says, an absurd mania "for climbing mountains by impracticable ways." If his own drawings are accurate, Mr. Landor is not qualified to throw a stone at them in this respect. We imagine that some of them would describe his "ways" as impracticable indeed. Mr. Landor also runs a tilt at Anglo-Indian officials, to whom he applies all sorts of unkind epithets, and whom he credits with a dark design to thwart his journey, which he tells us was undertaken for reasons of health, and "a little change from the monotony of a civilized existence." These motives scarcely seem provocative enough to bring down the vials of official wrath on his head. His proceedings at the Nepalese frontier fort, described on p. 45 and the following pages, and his carrying off with him of a Government chuprassi "to do a little involuntary mountaineering," because he believed that he had been sent to interfere with his movements, would certainly have justified some remonstrance, if not more active steps, by the Indian Government on his return to British territory. It is difficult to take Mr. Landor seriously, and we find it impossible to follow his tour geographically, although he has distributed the names of his family pretty freely on glaciers, of which he gives a curious bird's-eye plan at the end of his volume. We do not know why he dubs Nanda Devi "the highest mountain in the British Empire"; and the description of the Tibetans as "contemptible cowards" is no longer justified. But it appears from a casual remark on p. 192 that these travels happened five years ago; so possibly, after all, it is only Mr. Landor's memory that has played him false.

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

Essays by the late Marquis of Salisbury, 2 vols. (Murray), are of unequal merit. Three in the first volume deal with Castlereagh and with Stanhope's life of Pitt. All will be glad to have them reprinted in their present form. The three articles on foreign affairs which are contained in the second volume are both out of date, and inferior, on account of their narrowness, to the later utterances on similar subjects of Lord Salisbury, when long tenure of the Foreign Secretaryship had given maturity and increased liberality of mind. There is much to be said for Lord Salisbury's defence of Castlereagh's skill as a diplomatist, and of his work at Vienna, and during the early days of that Holy Alliance which he refused to join; but we cannot agree in the defence of his Irish policy. Lord Salisbury says that "he reaped a reward, richer than renown, in the blessings he conferred on the two nations whom he had made one." Neither can we agree with Lord Salisbury when he goes out of his way to denounce that intervention in Syria which, he says, presented it "at the cannon's mouth, with a form of Government of European manufacture." Lord Dufferin's work in Syria is now universally known to have been good work, and it has survived Lord Salisbury. In defending Castlereagh's liberality of mind, Lord Salisbury writes: "So strongly did he recognize the obligations which had been contracted in the crisis of the war that he extended them even to Murat." It is true that Lord Castlereagh ordered Lord William Bentinck to concur in the Austrian policy of alliance with Murat, but it is also true that he allowed Lord William Bentinck to go contrary to his instructions, and thus to destroy all chance of accepting Murat in the alliance on the terms which Austria had arranged. A curious passage in this essay, published in 1862, explained the wrecking of Castlereagh's policy by the assumed fact that "the art of leading the House of Commons and the art of beguiling illustrious ladies are gifts which cannot co-exist in the same mind." We wonder whether Lord Salisbury would have left the passage after he had lived to watch the triumph of Disraeli's career. Another passage, which seems out of date, defends Castlereagh's transfer of Norway against its will to Sweden, and declares that the Norwegians have become "as contented a people as any on the Continent." The curious narrowness of the opinions of Lord Robert Cecil is to be seen in his attack in this essay on American institutions, and "that kind of freedom which is conferred by universal suffrage." It is, indeed, hardly possible to recognize in the bitter Toryism of these pages the man who lived to become the favourite Foreign Minister of Sir William Harcourt and of the survivors of the Manchester school.

The Personal Story of the Upper House, by Mr. Kosmo Wilkinson (Fisher Unwin), is a good book of gossip about the Lords, in which there are plenty of stories and few mistakes. The author is wrong in finding an "important distinction between the two estates" in the fact that in the Lords any peer may present a Bill without notice, "and that in the Commons such an act of presentation is preceded by a humble petition for leave." There is nothing "humble" in the asking for leave, which is still the usual form in the case of Bills brought in by Government. As regards private members' Bills, the universal form is now presentation without any "leave" at all. Mr. Wilkinson is hard on Chesterfield, and we doubt whether that distinguished author and wit was, in fact, ill-favoured of countenance as well as misshapen of limb; the portraits do not give the impression of being flattered. Our author states that Archbishop Sumner retained the wig; we doubt it, but do not intend to compete with Notes and Queries by pursuing an inquiry upon the subject.

A MEMBER of a clever family, M. Élio Halévy, in his L'Angleterre et son Empire (Paris, Pages Libres), gives us a tract on the history of the British conduct of foreign affairs during the nineteenth century, with which we have little fault to find. The bald statement that while Lord Granville would have wished a delegate of the French Government to take part in the Black Sea Conference of 1871, the opposition of Bismarck and the hesitation of the French Government of National Defence prevented it, is, perhaps, hardly correct. France consented in ample time to be represented, and nominated M. Jules Favre. Count Bismarck declined to give a safe-conduct, and France went unrepresented. There had at first been some natural hesitation on the part of France, but M. Halévy is not justified in suggesting that the non-representation was the result of the hesitation. He can, however, support his view by reference to official statements by other powers who were anxious to show that the non-representation of France was not their fault. Another statement which is questionable, though it is not incorrect, concerns the protest of the German Government against "the cession," or rather lease, to us of a strip of territory between the African lakes. The fact is that Germany and France protested on the same day. A third piece of history with which it is possible to find fault is the account of the negotiations between France and ourselves with regard to Siam at the moment of Lord Rosebery's ultimatum. M. Halévy's narrative reads as though the arrangement was of the most friendly description, the fact being that the two countries were on the point of war, and that a menace of the use of force was uttered in the House of Commons, though toned down in the telegraphic reports for the Continent. These three little holes are all that we can pick, and it will be seen that they only point to incompleteness in a history which is obviously condensed.

A VOLUME on a similar subject is Mr. George Peel's The Friends of England, published by Mr. John Murray. Its descriptions of British policy do not to our mind become fresh or interesting until we reach the account of the dealing of British statesmen with the white colonies in the middle of the nineteenth century, a subject which is well handled by the author, who declares incidentally that "Lord Robert Cecil (afterwards Lord Salisbury)" was not "a Little Englander"—he is writing of 1861. Almost on the day on which Mr. Peel's book was published by Mr. Murray, Lord Salisbury's early essays reviewed above were issued by the same firm, and they contain a passage in which Lord Salisbury proves that George III. was a Little Englander. The fact is that most British statesmen, including George III. himself, and, most certainly, Lord Salisbury, can be quoted as pointing out at times that we have a tendency to spend more money than we can afford, and, to use the words of George III., to take "a showy part.....and from ideal greatness to draw ourselves into lasting distress. The old English saying is applicable to our situation: 'England must cut her coat according to her cloth.'"

Disraeli is quoted by Mr. Peel as having in 1872 "most clearly struck the note of the coming time, and anticipated the exigencies of the country." It is, however, a well-known fact that Disraeli had shortly before that moment been intriguing with Cobden against Palmerston for the opposite policy, and his familiar outburst of an earlier date about the "wretched colonies.....a millstone round our necks," is indeed given by Mr. Peel in another portion of his volume. The real inventors of the modern Imperial movement were Sir George Grey (not the Home Secretary but the Colonial Governor), Mr. Edward Jenkins, Lord George Hamilton, and his brother Lord Claud Hamilton, no one of whom is named by Mr. Peel. It was their campaign throughout England which familiarized the public with the language that is now in all men's mouths. Mr. Peel attaches much importance to the Carnarvon Commission, which inquired into the defence of British possessions across the seas; but it is a curious fact that many of the stations which were defended in consequence of their report are being abandoned in the present year. Mr. Peel protests in his book against the opinion that the Empire should "be dismantled as soon as the peace of the world is assured"; he does not add that dismantlement is taking place, while he still thinks that we are not secure of peace even with the United States. Our author is indeed one of those who use language intended to suggest that we ought not to look upon the United States as likely to be animated by sentiments similar to our own. He quotes a Yale professor who gives weight to the consideration that the Western States are being peopled by an "ignorant and turbulent element" composed of "the lower classes of South-Eastern Europe." Mr. Peel adds that our colonies should remember "that the United States is becoming of so uncertain a composition that it might perhaps be ill advised for them to cast in their fortunes with such a community."

We should be inclined to say that the danger of the Latinization of the United States is diminishing, and that the experience of the last few years goes to show that the influence of the orderly and settled elements in America is increasing. Argentina receives a vastly larger proportion of immigrants from South-Eastern Europe than does North America, and they are not balanced, as in the north, by a great Scandinavian immigration. Even in Argentina, however, the better people have consolidated their power, and appear to be able to guide their great State in the direction of peaceful progress. The subjects with which Mr. Peel deals are of the deepest interest, and he shows wide reading on every page.

Creatures that Once were Men, by Maxim Gorky, translated from the Russian by J. K. M. Shirazi, with introduction by G. K. Chesterton (Alston Rivers), is one of the novelist's very pessimistic sketches. Mr. Chesterton indulges in his usual brilliant paradox, but also propounds some vigorous truths, e.g., that "there are no English revolutionists because the oligarchic management of England is so complete as to be invisible." Gorky's tale contains all the hard realistic word-painting which is characteristic of him. We do not see that the wretched characters described in it are peculiarly Russian. If the lives of the tenants of a "doss-house" in any of the capitals of Europe were examined, they would furnish the same result. We need go no further than Whitechapel to meet with them—mutatis mutandis. Mr. Shirazi has rendered his author fairly well; perhaps he uses a little too much slang. The foot-notes are also meagre. What ordinary English reader, for instance, will understand the allusion conveyed in "Elia Marumets" on p. 72, or "an attaman" on p. 88? Some of the coarse passages of the original might have been toned down with advantage. Our modern literature, since the days of Walt Whitman, seems to affect these brutalities, as we feel inclined to call them.

MR. ROBERT SHERARD indisposes us towards his (reprinted) The Child-Slaves of Britain (Hurst & Blackett) by ascribing to "destitute alien" competition the depressed condition of the children of our poor. The whole alien problem is so trifling in this country as compared, for example, with France, from which Mr. Sherard dates his preface, that it is evident that his position cannot bear the test of inquiry. Our author picks out for special notice the "child slavery" of towns and of trades in which there are no aliens at all.

MR. FRANK SIDGWICK has issued a second series of his Popular Ballads of the Olden Time (Bullen). It is even more interesting than the first, for the ballads selected are those of Mystery and of Miracle, and Fyttes of Mirth. The Lyke-Wake Dirge, in particular, is admirably illustrated, and is the subject of a special appendix. Parallels and notes are well done throughout.

MESSRS. SWAN SONNENSCHNEIDER have sent us an edition of Mr. Edward Carpenter's Towards Democracy, which is sure to be popular. It is excellently printed on thin paper, neatly bound, and contains the four parts.

MESSRS. METHUEN send us several examples of their new "Standard Library." Each volume contains from one hundred to three hundred pages, and is sold at sixpence in paper covers. Such a volume before us contains The English Works of Francis Bacon: Vol. I. The Essays and New Atlantis. A double volume at a shilling is a first instalment of Prof. Bury's edition of Gibbon's Decline and Fall. To put a remarkable achievement in editing like this before the public at a price within the reach of all is to do a great service to learning. One of the chief things that distinguish this library from other ventures is the independence shown in departures from the beaten track. We have Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress, and The Works of Shakespeare, Vol. I., before us, bound in red cloth at a shilling; but we also have The Meditations of Marcus Aurelius, in the translation of R. Graves, one of the best; and further books which every lover of English ought to possess, but which are not generally available, are promised. As to the Library in general, we may say that in each case Mr. Sidney Lee supplies a brief yet sufficient prefatory note. The type is a little close, but good of its kind, and pleasant to read, certainly a long way above that of the average sixpenny book; the text is, wherever we have tested it, accurate, even in Latin quotations. There are no double columns, though the margins are rather small; and the paper covers are free from distressing pictures of a sensational or popular character, and from quotations advertising the wares inside. The cloth binding in red is simple but effective. The size of the books, 7½ inches by 5 inches, differentiates them from the many pocket editions on the market, and, in their way, they may be said to be unique. We do not see how they could be cheaper.

IN Mr. Heinemann's "Favourite Classics," another wonderful series, we have Tennyson's Princess and Early Poems, introduced in each case by Mr. Arthur Waugh, who always does such work well, and in this case has special knowledge.

LIST OF NEW BOOKS.

ENGLISH.

Theology.

- Grafton (C. C.), Christian and Catholic, cr. 8vo, 6/ net.
Henson (H. H.), Moral Discipline in the Christian Church, cr. 8vo, 5/ net.
Herford (B.), Eutychus and his Relations, 12mo, 2/ net.
Lowrie (W.), Gaudium Crucis, 12mo, 3/ net.

Fine Art and Archaeology.

- Collectors' Annual for 1904, compiled by G. E. East, 8vo, 7/6 net.
Littmann (E.), Semitic Inscriptions, 4to, 42/ net.
Longmans' Charts of Colour Drawing and Design: Elementary, Intermediate, Advanced, by Cecil L. Burns, 24/ each.
Millet, by Netta Peacock, 16mo, 2/6 net.

Poetry and the Drama.

- Chapin (A. A.), Makers of Song, cr. 8vo, 5/
Heine (Heinrich), Germany, Romancero, Books I. and II., translated by M. Armour, cr. 8vo, 5/

Music.

- Flood (W. H. G.), A History of Irish Music, cr. 8vo, 6/ net.

History and Biography.

- Battine (C.), The Crisis of the Confederacy, 8vo, 16/ net.
Chatham, by F. Harrison, cr. 8vo, 2/6
Eliot (Sir C.), The East Africa Protectorate, 8vo, 15/ net.
Hamilton (Adam), The Angel of Syon, cr. 8vo, 3/6 net.
Helm (W. H.), Aspects of Balzac, cr. 8vo, 3/6 net.
Münsterberg (H.), The Americans, translated by E. B. Holt, 8vo, 12/6 net.
Paterson (W. R.), Life's Questionings, cr. 8vo, 3/6 net.
Salisbury (Robert, Marquess of), Essays, Biographical; Essays, Foreign Politics, cr. 8vo, 6/ net each.
Sichel (E.), Catherine de' Medici and the French Reformation, 8vo, 15/ net.
Wilkinson (K.), The Personal Story of the Upper House, 8vo, 16/

Sports and Pastimes.

- Loder-Symonds (F. C.) and Crowdy (E. P.), A History of the Old Berks Hunt from 1760 to 1904, 8vo, 12/6 net.

Education.

- Palmer (A. E.), The New York Public School, 4/6 net.

Folk-lore.

- MacLagan (R. C.), The Perth Incident of 1393 from a Folk-lore Point of View, 8vo, 5/ net.

Science.

- Baker (J. L.), The Brewing Industry, cr. 8vo, 2/6 net.
Beddard (F. E.), Natural History in Zoological Gardens, cr. 8vo, 6/ net.
Cassell's Popular Gardening, 2 vols. imp. 8vo, 30/ net.
Dockrell (M.), An Atlas of Dermatology, folio, 50/ net.
Loeb (J.), Studies in General Physiology, 8vo, 31/6 net.
Maylard (A. E.), Abdominal Pain: Its Causes and Clinical Significance, 8vo, 7/6 net.
Merriman (M.), Elements of Mechanics, cr. 8vo, 4/6 net.
Westell (W. P.), British Bird Life, extra cr. 8vo, 5/

General Literature.

- Agnew (G.), The Countess, cr. 8vo, 2/6
Bashford (H. H.), The Manitoban, cr. 8vo, 6/
Brady (C. T.), The Two Captains, cr. 8vo, 6/
Chesterton (G. K.), The Club of Queer Trades, cr. 8vo, 6/
Cleeve (L.), Mademoiselle Nellie, cr. 8vo, 6/
Colvill (H. H.), The Stepping-Stone, cr. 8vo, 6/
Crawshaw (A.), My Turkish Bride, cr. 8vo, 6/
Crockford's Clerical Directory for 1905, imp. 8vo, 20/
Darlington (H. A.), The Chaunceys, cr. 8vo, 2/6
Dawson (A. J.), The Fortunes of Farthings, cr. 8vo, 6/
Delannoy (B.), Dead Man's Rooms, cr. 8vo, 3/6
Diehl (A. M.), The Temptation of Anthony, cr. 8vo, 6/
Donovan (D.), A Knight of Evil, cr. 8vo, 6/
Fox (J.), Crittendon, cr. 8vo, 6/
Gilkes (A. H.), A Day at Dulwich, 12mo, 1/ net.
Hammond (L. H.), The Master-Word, cr. 8vo, 6/
Herford (O.), Overheard in a Garden, &c., cr. 8vo, 3/6 net.
Hussey (E.), Miss Badsworth, M.F.H., cr. 8vo, 6/
Kennedy (B.), Slavery: Pictures from the Depths, 6/
Marshall (E.), The Middle Wall, cr. 8vo, 6/
Peel (Hon. G.), The Friends of England, 8vo, 12/ net.
Ready (O. G.), Ch' Un-Kwang, cr. 8vo, 6/
Sergeant (A.), The Sixth Sense, cr. 8vo, 6/
Sherard (R. H.), The Child-Slaves of Britain, extra cr. 8vo, 6/
Tynan (K.), A Daughter of Kings, cr. 8vo, 6/
Ward (Mrs. Humphry), The Marriage of William Ashe, 6/
Wintle (G.), Strange Partners, cr. 8vo, 6/

FOREIGN.

Theology.

- Stade (B.), Biblische Theologie des Alten Testaments: Vol. 1. Die Religion Israels u. die Entstehung des Judentums, 6m.

Law.

- Attlmayr (F. v.), Das internationale Seerecht, 2 vols. 18m.

Poetry and the Drama.

- Fabre (É.), Les Ventres Dorés, 3fr. 50.

Philosophy.

- Seillière (E.), La Philosophie de l'Impérialisme: II. Apollon ou Dionysos, 8fr.

History and Biography.

- Baudin (P.), L'Armée Moderne et les États-majors, 3fr. 50.
Bonnefons (A.), Marie-Caroline, Reine des Deux-Siciles, 1768-1814, 7fr. 50.
Capon (G.) et Yve-Plessis (R.), Lettres d'Amour de Cyrano de Bergerac, 7fr. 50.
Claretie (J.), La Vie à Paris, 1904, 3fr. 50.
Fraisie (F. J.), Les Millions de la Succession Thiéry, 3fr.
Kann (R.), Journal d'un Correspondant de Guerre en Extrême-Orient, 4fr.
Rietschel (S.), Untersuchungen zur Geschichte der deutschen Stadtverfassung, Vol. 1, 10m.

Philology.

- Leonhardi (G.), Kleinere angelsächsische Denkmäler, 4 parts, 10m.

Science.

- Boinet (E.), Les Doctrines Médicales: leur Évolution, 3fr. 50.
Fabre (J. H.), Études sur l'Instinct et les Mœurs des Insectes, 3fr. 50.
Mégret (Comte M.), Les Perfectionnements Automobiles en 1905, 8fr. 50.
Nencki (M.), Opera Omnia, 2 vols. 45m.

General Literature.

- Bordeaux (H.), La Petite Mademoiselle, 3fr. 50.
Champsaur (F.), Dinah Samuel, 3fr. 50.
Frapic (L.), Les Obsédés, 3fr. 50.
Lyris (J. de), Le Goût en Littérature, 3fr.
Mandelstamm (V.), Suzannah, 3fr. 50.

THE DISCOVERER OF THE POEMS OF CATULLUS.

Clarendon Press, Oxford.

IN his interesting lecture, recently published, on 'Catullus in the Fourteenth Century,' Prof. Robinson Ellis enumerates the many attempts that have been made to explain the epigram "De resurrectione Catulli poetæ Veronensis," attributed to Benvenuto Campesani. The text is as follows:—

Ad patriam venio longis a finibus exul,
Causa mei reditus compatriota fuit,
Scilicet a calamis tribuit cui Francia nomen,
Quique notat turbæ prætereuntis iter.
Quo licet ingenio vestrum celebrate Catullum,
Cuius sub modio clausa papyrus erat.

The third and fourth lines evidently represent enigmatically the name (or the name and description) of the man, probably a Veronese, by whom the long-lost works of Catullus were discovered.

It has for over two hundred years been a generally accepted conclusion that the third line contains an allusion to the name Francesco. I am very sensible of the audacity of questioning an opinion which has been held by so many distinguished scholars, including Prof. Ellis himself. But I cannot help thinking that the most natural interpretation of the line would be that the person referred to bore a name derived from the French word for "reed." If so, the name intended cannot well have been anything else than the surname Roselli (recorded at least as early as 1397), unless there was a Christian name Rosello. On the supposition that the writer of the epigram wished to enigmatize Roselli (or Rosello), the only possible way of doing it would be by referring to the French word rosel (now roseau), as the name does not admit of any Latin or Italian pun. For the name concealed in the fourth line Sir E. M. Thompson (cited by Prof. Ellis) has suggested Strada, which would suit fairly well. Lachmann's conjecture, Notapassanti, would be still better; but what evidence is there that such a surname existed? If there were any trace of a real Rosello Notapassanti, or of a Roselli nicknamed Notapassanti (or anything of equivalent meaning), the question might be considered settled. But the discoverer of Catullus may have been a quite undistinguished merchant or traveller who had picked up the MS. in some foreign land; and in that case any mention of him is not very likely to be discovered. It is, of course, possible that my novel guess may be entirely wide of the mark; but in the admitted absence of any satisfactory explanation of the epigram it seems worth while to submit it to the judgment of your learned readers.

HENRY BRADLEY.

RECENT KEATS LITERATURE.

University College, Oxford, March 11th.

IN the scholarly and generous notice of the 'Hyperion' MSS. edited by me for the Clarendon Press your reviewer calls attention to the brackets supplied to the word "do" in l. 167 of 'The Fall of Hyperion':—

What benefit canst thou [do], or all thy Tribe,
To the great World?

and adds:—

"[The editor] says 'the brackets are in ink, by Woodhouse.' This would really appear to be a reason for omitting the word, which interferes with the measure, removes the accent from the emphatic thou, and is not truly necessary to the sense. The only question is whether Woodhouse used the brackets in the ordinary sense, to imply that he had inserted the word. This is a point that wants clearing up."

Will you allow me space to suggest an explanation of this interesting point? The MS., it will be remembered, was copied by one of Woodhouse's clerks, and then corrected by Woodhouse. The word "do" is in the hand of the clerk. It is evident from the spelling and the kind of error which is to be found in the MS. that it is a very careful copy, and that the errors were not the clerk's, but such as Keats himself made when in the heat of poetic composition. Moreover, if the word had not been in the original MS., but was an unauthorized addition by the clerk, I take it that Woodhouse would have put his pen through it, and not merely enclosed it in brackets. The conclusion, therefore, seems to me to be that Keats wrote "do," and that Woodhouse, seeing clearly what your reviewer has so ably pointed out—i.e., how much better the line was without it—took upon himself to suggest the alteration. The printing of "could" for "canst" in the same line, where it is quoted in my introduction to the poem, is, of course, a gross error on my part, which I only discovered when it was too late for correction. But the readings of the transcript itself were checked several times, and I believe them to be accurate.

ERNEST DE SÉLINCOURT.

MISTAKES IN PEERAGES.

March 11th, 1905.

THE interesting letter of your correspondent Mr. Bartle Teeling, in your issue of to-day, is marred by one "patent defect."

He says the "Red Earl" of Ulster, Richard de Burgo, was ancestor "of the line of kings of the House of Stewart."

"Ellen [Elizabeth?] (daughter of Richard de Burgo) married King Robert Bruce.....and by the marriage of their daughter Margaret with Walter Stewart, father of King Robert II., Richard de Burgo became ancestor of the Stewart line of kings."

This is not so; "Marjory" Bruce was King Robert I.'s daughter by his first marriage with Isabel of Mar. In 1297, about seven years before Bruce's second marriage, the capitulation of Irvine provided for her future delivery to Edward I. as a hostage for her father. She was probably a grown woman when she was taken with her stepmother from the sanctuary at Tain and sent prisoner to England.

She predeceased her father, who had also a daughter "Margaret" by his second marriage, who married the Earl of Sutherland. Hence possibly the confusion. It was Marjory who married the Stewart.

The historical value of this note is that by his first marriage with the daughter of Donald, Earl of Mar, by Christina Nic-Ruari of the house of Garmoran and the North Isles, a descendant of Somerled, Bruce obtained strong alliances in the north and west, the Celtic parts of the country. This, as history shows, was as useful to him in his early struggles and wanderings as his Irish alliance may have been suggestive of the expedition which ended at Dundalk. His own maternal Celtic descent was also an element in his position.
J. M. COLLYER.

BOOKSELLERS' PROVIDENT INSTITUTION.

THE annual meeting at Stationers' Hall on Thursday week last was a great success. There were about five hundred members and visitors present, including Mr. John Murray, Mr. T. N. Longman, Mr. H. H. Hodgson, Mr. Keay, Mr. Miles, Mr. Reginald Smith, Mr. E. Nash, Mr. Bowes (Cambridge), Mr. Pearce (Taunton), and Mr. George Lerner, the indefatigable secretary. Mr. Charles James Longman presided, and stated that the finances of the Institution were satisfactory. The receipts for the past year amounted to no less than 2,525*l.* This included the handsome donation of 500*l.* from Mr. W. Ellerby Green. Mr. Longman expressed a little disappointment that there had not been so many new members during the past year as he could have wished, but stated that there had been one important addition, Mr. Reginald Smith, the President of the Publishers' Association. Mr. Shaylor, in seconding the adoption of the report, stated that among the recipients one widow had received 719*l.*, another 810*l.*, and a third 964*l.*, while they had only paid into the funds a little over 21*l.* each. Mr. Frederick Macmillan, in proposing a vote of thanks to the President, Mr. C. J. Longman, referred to the many years of serious and hard work he had devoted to the interests of the Institution. Among other speakers were Mr. Awdry, Mr. Richard Bentley, Mr. Darton, Mr. George H. Whitaker, and Mr. R. B. Marston, who pointed out that "one great advantage of the Institution was that when we come upon the fund we feel we are not coming upon charity. We feel that our wives and our children will be able to say, 'We ask you for something we feel we have a right to ask for.'"

At the close of the meeting a conversazione was held, at which Lord Avebury delivered an interesting address.

THE SPRING PUBLISHING SEASON.

THE CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS

are publishing:—In Philology, Archaeology, &c.: The Jataka, Vol. V., translated by H. T. Francis; Vol. VI., translated by E. B. Cowell and W. H. D. Rouse,—Vedic Metre in its Historical Development, by Prof. E. V. Arnold,—Studia Sinaitica: Forty Facsimiles of Dated Arabic MSS., edited by A. S. Lewis and M. D. Gibson,—St. John's Gospel: the Revised Version, edited for schools by the Rev. Arthur Carr,—History of the Religion of the Hebrews, by Prof. R. L. Ottley,—An Eighth-Century Latin-Anglo-Saxon Glossary at Leiden, edited by J. H. Hessels,—Aristophanes: The Acharnians, edited by C. E. Graves,—M. T. Ciceronis Tusculanarum Disputationum Libri Quinque, a revised text, Vol. I., edited by Prof. T. W. Dougan,—The Early Age of Greece, by Prof. W. Ridgeway, Vol. II.—An Introduction to Greek Epigraphy: Vol. II. The Inscriptions of Attica and Peloponnesus, edited by E. S. Roberts and Prof. E. A. Gardner,—Harvard Lectures on the Revival of Learning, by Dr. J. E. Sandys,—De Republica Anglorum, by Sir Thomas Smyth, edited by Prof. F. W. Maitland,—Select Cases in Real Property Law, edited by W. J. Whittaker,—Guide to the Preservation of Antiquities, translated from the German of Dr. Rathgan by Dr. G. A. Auden. In Science and Geography: Immunity in Infectious Diseases, by Prof. Metchnikoff, translated by F. G. Binnie,—The Fauna and Geography of the Maldive and Laccadive Archipelagoes, edited by J. S. Gardiner, Supplement I.—The Plague, by Prof. J. W. Simpson. In the Cambridge Biological Series: The Origin and Influence of the Thorough-bred Horse, by Prof. W. Ridgeway,—Fossil Plants, by A. C. Seward, Vol. II.—The Morphology of Plants, by J. C. Willis,—Trees: Vol. III. Inflorescences and Flowers, by H. Marshall Ward,—The Lands of the Eastern Caliphate, by G. Le Strange. School-Books and English Classics—In the "Pitt Press" Series: Galdos, Trafalgar, edited by F. A. Kirkpatrick,—Thucydides, Book VI., edited by A. W. Spratt. Thomas Dekker's The Seven Deadly Sinnes of London, in the Cambridge Type,—Bunyan's Holy War and Mr. Badman, edited by the Rev. J. Brown,—Crabbe's Early Poems, edited by A. W. Ward,—and a series of selected Fifteenth-Century Facsimiles.

MESSRS. A. &amp; C. BLACK have in hand Florence and some Tuscan Cities, painted by Col. R. C. Goff and described by Mrs. Goff,—Rome, painted by A. Pisa, with text by M. A. R. Tucker and H. Malleon,—Brittany, painted by M. Menpes, with text by D. Menpes,—Ireland, painted by F. S. Walker and described by F. Mathew,—Norway, painted by N. Jungman and described by B. Jungman,—London to the Nore, painted by W. L. Wyllie and described by Mrs. Wyllie,—The Scenery of London, painted by H. M. Marshall and described by G. E. Mitton,—Beautiful Wales, painted by R. Fowler and described by E. Thomas,—The West Indies, painted by A. S. Forrest and described by J. Henderson,—The English Lakes, painted by A. H. Cooper and described by W. T. Palmer,—Rembrandt, by M. Menpes,—Abbotsford, painted by W. Smith, Jun., and described by the Rev. W. S. Crockett,—Nuremberg, painted by A. G. Bell and described by Mrs. Bell,—The Metaphysics of Nature, by C. Read,—new editions of Trout Fishing, by W. E. Hodgson, and Around the World through Japan, by W. Del Mar,—A Treatise on Zoology, edited by E. R. Lankester: Part V. Mollusca,—The Final Transition, by J. K. Ingram,—The Three Greatest Forces of the World, by W. W. Peyton,—Quiet Resting-Places, and other Sermons, by the late A. Raleigh,—Liong-San, by F. P. Crowther,—new editions of Black's Guide-Books, and of Harnack's Christianity and History, and The Apostles' Creed; Schopenhauer, by T. B. Saunders; Thoughts of a Free Thinker; and the "Soho" Edition of Dickens, Scott, and Thackeray. School-Books: The "Council" Arithmetic for Schools, Scheme B, eight parts,—The Story of the English People, by J. Finemore,—A Biographical History Reader, arranged by B. A. Lees,—The "Council" History Readers: The Glory of London, by G. E. Mitton,—The "Council" Literary Readers, by J. Finemore,—Première Année de Français, by F. B. Kirkman,—and Old Testament History, Part III., by the Rev. T. Nicklin.

MESSRS. GEORGE ROUTLEDGE &amp; SONS' spring announcements include:—History and Biography: Pepys's Diary, with notes by Lord Braybrooke, a verbatim reprint of the edition of 1818-9, with copious index,—Evelyn's Diary and Correspondence, edited by William Bray,—Hamilton's Memoirs of Gramont, with etchings,—The Russian Peasantry, by Stepniak, a new edition. Dictionaries: Nares's Glossary of Words, Phrases, Names, and Allusions, edited by J. O. Halliwell and T. Wright,—Dictionary of Archaic and Provincial Words, Obsolete Phrases, &c., by J. O. Halliwell, new edition,—Shakspearean Quotations,—Phrases and Proverbial Sayings,—Pseudonyms and Nicknames, a miniature dictionary, by Prof. Bower,—Miniature Dictionary of Prose Quotations. Fiction: Boccaccio's Decameron, translated by J. M. Rigg, with Symonds's essay,—The Heptameron, translated by Arthur Machen,—Oroonoko, with other novels by Aphra Behn,—The Fool of Quality, by Henry Brooke,—several additional volumes in the "Half-Forgotten Books" series, all edited by E. A. Baker,—A Japanese Utopia, by L. A. Magnus,—and A Martyr to the Law, by A. E. Bull. In Poetry: "The Muses' Library," including Blake; Patmore; Hall's Satires; and Crashaw,—and "Poets and Poetry of the Nineteenth Century," edited by J. H. Miles, 12 vols. Sports and Pastimes: History of the Test Matches between Australia and England, by W. Sapte, jun.,—Every Boy's Book of Sport and Pastime, by Prof. Hoffmann, revised,—Every Girl's Book of Sport, Occupation, and Pastime, by Mrs. Mary Whitley, revised,—and Classified Chess Games, by C. T. Blanchard, Vol. II. In Science, Philosophy, &c.: Practical Course of Instruction in Personal Magnetism, Telepathy, and Hypnotism, by G. White,—How to Use a Camera, by Clive Holland,—A Woman's Words to Women, and The Young Mother's Guide to the Health and Management of her Children, both by Dr. Mary Scharlieb,—Bacon's Complete Philosophical Works, with the Essays, New Atlantis, &c., re-edited by J. M. Robertson,—Al Khazari, by Abul-Hazan Judah Hallevi, translated, with an introduction, from the Arabic by H. Hirschfeld,—Development of the Feeling for Nature in the Middle Ages, by Prof. Biese,—Trench's English, Past and Present, and Trench's Proverbs and their Lessons, edited by the Rev. Dr. Smythe Palmer. In "The Photogravure Series": Milton's Paradise Lost, illustrated by William Strang; Blair's Grave, illustrated by William Blake; Aucassin and Nicolette, translated by Andrew Lang, illustrated by Gilbert James; and Ruth and Esther, illustrated by the same. One-Syllable Books for juvenile readers, and numerous volumes in the "New Universal Library," including Arnold's On Translating Homer, with F. W. Newman's Homeric Translation in Theory and Practice, and Arnold's reply; George Brimley's Essays, edited by W. G. Clark; Coleridge's Aids to Reflection, edited by Thomas Fenby; The Spectator, edited by G. A. Aitken, 6 vols.; J. S. Mill's Dissertations and Discussions, Series I., and Utilitarianism, with an index; Sir Lewis Morris's Poems, a selection; Victor Hugo's William Shakespeare; Jeffrey's Essays from The Edinburgh Review; Froude's Essays, Vol. I.; Leopardi's Dialogues, translated by James Thomson and edited by Bertram Dobell; Peacock's Novels (2 vols.); Carlyle's Sartor Resartus; and Cowley's Essays.

MESSRS. PUTNAM'S SONS'

list includes:—In History and Biography: The Kaiser as He Is, by H. de Noussanne, translated by W. Littlefield,—The Romance of Victor Hugo and Juliette Drouet,—The Old Shipmasters of Salem, Mass.,—American Politics, 1763 to 1876, edited by Prof. J. A. Woodburn,—in the "Heroes of the Nations" series: Constantine the Great, by J. B. Firth; Mahomet and the Rise of Islam, by the Rev. D. S. Margoliouth; and George Washington, by Prof. J. A. Harrison,—Thomas Cranmer and the English Reformation, 1489-1556, by A. F. Pollard,—The United States, 1607-1901, by W. E. Chancellor and F. W. Hewes, 10 vols.,—The United States, by Prof. E. E. Sparks,—Narragansett Bay, by E. Mayhew Bacon,—The Ohio River, by A. B. Hulbert,—The St. Lawrence River, by G. W. Browne,—The Connecticut River, by E. Monroe Bacon,—Old Paths and Legends of New England, by K. M. Abbott, Vol. II.,—Romance of the French Abbess, by E. W. Champney,—Daniel Webster, by E. P. Wheeler,—A History of the Parish of Trinity Church in the City of New York, by Morgan Dix, Part III,—Presidential Problems, by Grover Cleveland,—and Citations from the Writings of the Fathers, edited by Prof. L. B. Evans, 4 vols. In Geography and Travel: The Philippines and the Filipinos, by J. A. Leroy,—The Story of the Congo Free State, by H. W. Wack,—The Jordan Valley and Petra, by Prof. Libbey and the Rev. F. E. Hoskins,—Breaking the Wilderness, by F. S. Dellenbaugh,—The History of Yachting, by Capt. A. H. Clark,—Bucking the Sagebrush, by C. J. Steedman,—and The Biography of a Prairie Girl, by E. Gates. In Law and Theology: The Liquor Law of New York State, by W. T. Jerome,—Corporations, by J. P. Davis, 2 vols.,—The Administrative Law of the United States, by F. J.

Goodnow,—The Constitutional Decisions of John Marshall, edited by J. P. Cotton, jun., 2 vols.,—Man's Responsibility, by T. G. Carson,—Man and the Incarnation, by S. J. Andrews,—The Religion of the Early Egyptians, by Prof. G. Steindorff,—and The Ideal Mother, by B. G. Newton. In Science: The Case for Physical Culture, by H. I. Hancock,—Physical Regeneration, by J. Cantlie,—The Trees of North-Eastern America, with introduction by N. L. Britton,—Life Insurance Examinations, by B. Symonds,—Strabismus, by F. Valk,—An Introduction to Vertebrate Embryology, by A. M. Reese. Fiction, Belles-Lettres, and General: A Self-made Man's Wife, her Letters to her Son, by C. E. Merriman,—The Girl of La Gloria, by Clara Driscoll,—Talks in a Library with Laurence Hutton, by Isabel Moore,—My Lady of the North, by R. Parrish,—The Compounding of English Words, by F. H. Teall,—French Classics for English Readers, edited by Prof. Cohn and C. H. Page, 6 vols.,—new volumes in the "Ariel Booklets,"—Out of Work, by F. A. Kellor,—Sainte-Beuve's Portraits of the Seventeenth Century, translated by K. P. Wormeley, 2 vols.,—Wanted a Cook, by A. Dale,—The Heart's Quest, verses by B. Grey,—The Garden of Years, and other poems, by G. W. Carryl,—Representative Irish Stories, by W. B. Yeats, 2 vols.,—Up through Childhood, by G. A. Hubbell,—A Bookful of Girls, by A. Fuller,—new editions of Modern Civic Art, by C. M. Robinson; Slav or Saxon, by W. D. Foulke; Tabular Views of Universal History, by G. P. Putnam; and other volumes.

MR. GEORGE ALLEN'S

new books include A Country Diary, by Mrs. A. Cock,—The Pictures at Haughton Hall, Tarporely, by R. R. Carter, a limited edition,—Verses from Maori Land, by Dora Wilcox,—The Trojan Women and the Electra of Euripides, both translated into verse by Prof. Gilbert Murray,—The Sensitive, and other Essays, by A. E. M. Foster,—Bird-Life Glimpses, by E. Selous,—continuation of Ruskin Reprints for the Pocket: Giotto and his Works in Padua; The Bible References in Ruskin; The Stones of Venice, 3 vols.; The Poetry of Architecture; Sesame and Lilies, and other works,—and completion of the "Library Edition" of Ruskin, 18 vols.

MR. WERNER LAURIE'S

spring announcements include Red o' the Feud, by Halliwell Sutcliffe,—Lady Jim of Curzon Street, by Fergus Hume,—Playing the Kuave, by Florence Warden,—The Bell and the Arrow, by Nora Hopper,—The Cost, by David Graham Phillips,—English Translations from Homer to Heine, by T. W. H. Crosland and W. Collinge,—Classic Myths in Art, by J. Addison, illustrated,—The A B C Literary Guide to London, illustrated,—The Cathedrals of England and Wales, by T. F. Bumpus, illustrated,—Pictures in Umbria, by K. S. Macquoid, with fifty illustrations by T. R. Macquoid,—Notes from my South Sea Log, by Louis Becke,—Chats on Violins, by Olga Raster, illustrated,—The Wild Irishman, by the author of 'The Unspeakable Scot,'—A Manual for Wives and Mothers on the Management of their Health, by Laing Gordon,—Horace, in the "Classical Library," and other reprints in the "Eclectic Library."

SALE.

MESSRS. SOTHEY, WILKINSON & HODGE sold on the 8th to 11th inst. the following valuable books and MSS. from the library of the late Wickham Flower, of Great Tangley Manor, Guildford: Bacon's Advancement of Learning, first edition, 1605, 19l. Balzac, Œuvres, édition de luxe, 50 vols., 1900-2, 14l. Biblia Vulgata cum Glossa Ordinaria Walafridi Strabonis, &c., 4 vols., 1480, 19l. 10s. Burlington Fine-Arts Club Portrait Miniatures, 1889, 20l. Exhibition of Bookbindings, 1891, 10l. Cervantes, Les Principales Aventures de Don Quichotte, 31 full-page engravings by Coypel and Picart, 1746, 24l. Chaucer, edited by W. Thynne, 1542, 34l. Constable's Memoirs, by Leslie, 22 mezzotints by Lucas and 2 autograph letters, 1843, 13l. Dante, Venet., Vind. de Spira, 1477, 55l.; Dante, mise en Ryme française, first French translation of Dante, Paris, 1597, 11l. 15s. Darcie's Annales of Queen Elizabeth, 1625, 10l. Dibdin's Bibliotheca Spenceriana, Bibliographical Decameron, Tour in France and Germany, and in the Northern Counties, 19 vols., 25l. 14s. Dictionary of National Biography, 69 vols., 40l. 10s. Drayton's Polyolbion, both books, 1622, 17l. Recueil Sommaire de la Chronique Francoise jusqu'au Couronnement de Hugues Capet, MS. on vellum, 5 vols., Sæc. XVI., 30l. 10s. Goupil's Illustrated Historical Monographs—Mary Stuart, Elizabeth, and Cromwell, 25l. 15s. Higden's Polychronicon, P. Treveris, 1527, 29l. Imitations of Holbein's Original Drawings, by Chamberlaine, 1792, 33l. 10s. Houbraken's Heads, large paper, 108 portraits, 1743-51, 12l. 5s. Jacquin, Floræ Austriacæ, 5 vols., 1773-8, 33l. 10s.; Icones Plantarum Rariorum, 3 vols., 1781-93, 30l.; Plantarum Rariorum Horti Cesarei Schoenbrunnensis, 4 vols., 1702-1804, 28l. 10s. Kelm-scott Chaucer, 1896, 49l. Lilford's British Birds, 7 vols., 1891-7, 50l. Lodge's Portraits, large paper, India proofs, 12 vols. in 6, 1823-32, 16l. 5s. Maunds's Botanic Garden, 18 vols., 1827, &c., 12l. Molière, Œuvres, plates by Boucher, 6 vols., 1754, 10l. Raynouard, Poésies des Troubadours et Lexique Roman, 12 vols., morocco, 1816-44, 19l. Redouté, Les Liliacées, 8 vols., 1802-16, 75l. Reproductions of Rembrandt's Drawings by Lippmann, 6 vols., 1888-1901, 22l. Scott's Novels, "Border" Edition, 48 vols., 1892-4, 16l. Shelley's Works, by H. B. Forman, 8 vols., 1880, 10l. Silvestre, Paléographie Universelle, 1839-41, 29l. 10s. Smith's Catalogue of British Mezzotint Portraits, 4 vols., 125 portraits, 1884, 35l. 10s. Spenser's Faerie Queen and other works, 1611, 14l. 5s. Symonds's Renaissance in Italy, 5 vols., 1880-1, 11l. 15s. Ventenat, Jardin de Malmaison (dedicated to Josephine Bonaparte), 1803, 27l. Wallich, Plantæ Rariores, 3 vols., 1830-2, 11l. Walton and Cotton's Angler, Pickering's edition, India proofs, 2 vols., morocco, 1839, 11l. 15s. Exchequer Documents, including two autograph letters to Cardinal Wolsey, 73l.

Literary Gossip.

THE collected edition of Mr. Swinburne's dramatic works will go to press immediately. It will consist of five volumes, uniform with the collected edition of his poetical works recently published. Vol. I. will contain 'The Queen Mother' and 'Rosamund.' Vol. II. will contain 'Chastelard,' and probably the first two acts of the great chronicle play now called 'Bothwell.' These two acts may have a new title, as the play really falls into two plays, the first play ending with Act II. Vol. III. will consist of the remaining portion of the play now called 'Bothwell.' Vol. IV. will contain 'Mary Stuart.' Probably the essays on the life and character of Mary Stuart (which now appear in the 'Miscellanies') will be included as a useful appendix, giving the argument of the entire trilogy of plays. Vol. V. will contain 'Lochrine,' 'The Sisters,' 'Marino Faliero,' and 'Rosamund, Queen of the Lombards.' The work will be published in Great Britain by Messrs. Chatto & Windus, and in the United States by Messrs. Harper Brothers.

'TRINITY HOUSE, LONDON, PAST AND PRESENT,' is the title of a work by Mr. Walter H. Mayo, which Messrs. Smith, Elder & Co. will publish this spring. This volume, which is illustrated with portraits and facsimiles of documents in the possession of the Trinity House, goes into the history of the Association of Mariners in times before the first known charter, and throws light on the honourable work of the Corporation in defence of the Thames, especially in the age of Elizabeth and Napoleon.

THE April number of The Independent Review will contain an article by Mr. Michael Davitt on the present political situation in Ireland, and another, by Mr. George Russell, on the English situation. Mrs. de Bunsen (Miss Victoria Buxton) contributes a paper on Eastern travel; Mr. G. M. Trevelyan gives a description, historical and topographical, of that part of the Northumbrian Border which was formerly known as the Middle Marches; the former Warden of Glenalmond deals with the thorny subject of 'The Appeal to the First Six Centuries'; and Mr. G. L. Strachey contributes a study of Voltaire's tragedies.

MR. FISHER UNWIN will publish before long a second novel by Mrs. Margaretta Byrde, whose book 'The Searchers' appeared in the "First Novel Library." Like its predecessor it is an attempt to tell a story of love and life seen in a spiritual atmosphere. The scene is laid alternately in a West-Country town and in a mining village in South Wales, and the book deals with a complicated and difficult moral problem.

MESSRS. KEGAN PAUL are publishing for Mr. Horace Bleackley, under the title of 'Some Distinguished Victims of the Scaffold,' an account of some of the cases that attracted the public attention at the end of the eighteenth century and the beginning of the nineteenth. The author has taken nothing at second hand, and has in more than one case settled a disputed point. His victims include Mary Blandy, who poisoned her father with the help of her lover, the brothers Perreau, and Fauntleroy, the banker and forger.

AMONGST the contents of Chambers's Journal for April will be 'Sub-Tropical New Zealand,' by Mr. Theodore Arnold, grandson of Arnold of Rugby; and 'The Grammarian of York,' a paper on Lindley Murray.

THE New York Book Buyer for March has the following interesting announcement concerning a new uniform edition of Stevenson's works:—

"'The Biographical Edition,' to be issued immediately by his publishers, has an important feature which will give it a unique value for all time. Mrs. Stevenson has here prefixed to each of her husband's books an interesting and intimate account of the circumstances under which it was written, with digressions and anecdote that make these charming papers a really new light on Stevenson's life."

The Boston Evening Transcript notes concerning a recent acquisition by Mr. Pierpont Morgan, the original manuscript of Dickens's 'Hunted Down,' that it was the first story ever written by Dickens for an American periodical, "and the first Dickens manuscript to come to this country." Originally written for Bonner's New York Ledger in 1859, the MS. was presented by Mr. Bonner to the Sanitary Fair held in New York in 1864. It was there bought by Mr. George H. Holliday, at whose sale in New York in 1870 it was sold to a Mr. Root for 102 dollars 50 cents. It was inherited by Mrs. J. De Forest Danielson, of Boston, who sold it to Mr. Morgan. It consists of eighteen pages quarto. Mr. Morgan has also the MSS. of 'The Christmas Carol' and 'The Battle of Life.'

MR. REGINALD BALFOUR is about to publish through Messrs. Burns & Oates a little book entitled 'The Assisi Keepsake: being the Talisman against Temptation written for Brother Leo by St. Francis of Assisi, together with Words of Counsel by the same Seraphic Father.' These two writings by the saint will be reproduced in facsimile.

MAJOR BUTTERWORTH writes from Carlisle :—

"May I be permitted to point out that the statement in the 'Literary Gossip' column of The Athenæum for March 4th, that no copy of the third volume of 'The Philanthropist' (1813), containing Lamb's famous essay 'The Confessions of a Drunkard,' has yet come into the English salerooms, is slightly incorrect? This book was offered for sale by Mr. Walter T. Spencer in one of his catalogues published either at the end of 1902 or the beginning of 1903, and the price asked for it was 3*l.* 3*s.* half-calf. It will be interesting to know whether a higher or less price was realized at its sale recently at Messrs. Anderson's rooms in New York."

THE subject for the English essay for the Members' Prize this year at Cambridge is 'The Use of the Novel in English Literature for Religious or Political Purposes.' We hope it will produce a good book, for surveys of the advance and development of fiction within the last fifty years are singularly lacking.

THE Board of Studies at Cambridge has suggested to the Senate that in 1908 and every fourth year thereafter a Maccoll Lecturer should represent the bequest of 500*l.* to encourage the study of the language and literature of Spain or Portugal.

THE Spanish Academy has decided to distribute gratis among the people 60,000 copies of a specially prepared popular edition of 'Don Quixote,' in honour of the Cervantes commemoration to be held May 7th to 9th.

AN interesting discovery concerning the same book has been made at Valladolid, being a copy of the first edition, with numerous marginal notes, perhaps from the hand of Cervantes himself.

IN the April number of Scribner's Magazine Madame Waddington will give her reminiscences of a recent visit to Rome. Mr. T. N. Page is writing on the University of Virginia, and Mr. R. H. Davis on 'Kits and Outfits.' The number will contain some special spring illustrations.

AMONGST the numerous works on Petöfi continuously appearing in Hungary is one of more than usual interest by József Szinnyi, of the National Museum, Buda-Pesth. Besides a new biography of the poet, the volume contains a voluminous bibliography of Petöfi, consisting, it is stated, of five thousand separate items, in nearly every civilized language. Another life of Petöfi, by Emöd Farkas, written in the form of a romance, has also just appeared at Buda-Pesth.

AN important find of manuscripts is reported from Schwalbental by Cassel. They are well preserved for the most part, with beautiful coloured initial letters. The most interesting of the twenty-two MSS., which include hymns, prayers, texts, and psalms in Latin, are those containing music, as they present excellent specimens of the notation of the Middle Ages, probably the tenth century, as well as of that in use from the eleventh century to the fourteenth.

THE Parliamentary Papers of the most general interest to our readers this week are: Report on Technical Instruction in Germany, Supplementary and Miscellaneous (4*d.*); Annual Statistical Report of the University of Aberdeen (2*d.*); and Statutes made by New College, Balliol College, and Magdalen College, Oxford ( $\frac{1}{2}$ d. each).

SCIENCE

RESEARCH NOTES.

THE centre of interest in wireless telegraphy seems to be shifting from the wave-detector or coherer to the means of producing the energy required to act upon it. Hitherto we have depended for this upon the induction coil, with its troublesome adjunct the break, and this combination, however convenient for laboratory experiment, has proved of very limited use in practice. Directly the high tensions necessary for long-distance work are reached, the Hertzian waves begin to attack the coil itself, and, if it be wound on the usual or Ruhmkorff system, sooner or later make it useless by breaking down its insulation. Or, again, if the coil be used to set in action the oscillation transformers that are now used in all long-distance systems, either compressed air or magnetic or other means of "blowing" the spark has to be used to prevent the formation of an arc which would destroy the electrodes. M. de Rochefort did something to overcome the first of these objections by the modifications—too little known in England—which he introduced into the Ruhmkorff coil, and the improvement which he made in its insulation. But the apparatus which, as here mentioned at the time (see The Athenæum, No. 4010), was lately exhibited by Dr. d'Arsonval to the Société Française de Physique seems to get rid of all inconveniences. If the new development does not acquire any faults of its own in practice, the induction coil, except as a laboratory instrument, seems to be doomed.

M. d'Arsonval's invention, which during the last few days has been shown in London by M. Gallot, consists in the first instance of a transformer with closed magnetic circuit specially insulated. From the secondary terminals of this run leads to four plate-condensers and two liquid resistances arranged to protect the transformer against Hertzian waves on the principle detailed in M. d'Arsonval's communication to the Académie des Sciences of February 8th, 1904. The wires from these terminate in a spark gap enclosed in a glass bulb partly filled with powdered chalk to absorb the nitrous vapours evolved, and thence go to charge four other plate-condensers for producing oscillations of high frequency. This apparatus is enclosed in a wooden case no bigger than a medium-sized refrigerator or dwarf bookcase, and is fed, in the model shown, either by an alternating lighting current or by a continuous current converted into an alternate one by means of a motor-generator. By mounting it on an automobile it may be rendered independent of any external source, as the motor of the car can be used to manufacture the current without extra weight, and an automobile of this construction followed the staff of General Brugère in the late manoeuvres of the French army with, it is claimed, perfect success. The energy developed in this case proved itself superior to that of two 20-inch Ruhmkorff coils connected in parallel, while the addition of a Villard valve is all that is necessary to render it a source of X rays. The switchboard contains voltmeter, ampère-metre, and an adjustable resistance, which, it is claimed, enables the operator to maintain the most perfect control over the instrument, and entirely to do away with all jerking and uncertainty in its operations.

This exactness of control is said to be of the greatest use not only in radiography and the production of high-frequency and other currents for medical work, but also for syntony, or electrical "tuning" in wireless telegraphy and other matters. In a model arranged by Mr. Alexander Sharman for lecture purposes, two circuits, consisting of a few coils of stout wire on triangular frames, can be so tuned by the adjustable rheostat of the switchboard that a glow-lamp mounted on a third and similar circuit placed near one of them can be made to light and extinguish itself by the simple pressure of the hand on a small plate-condenser. The use of any separate self-induction coil, such as is used in the Seibt-Ernecke and other apparatus for demonstrating the effects of resonance, is therefore entirely done away with.

Prof. Rutherford's Bakerian Lecture on the progressive stages of the emanations of radium has now been issued as a separate publication, and will no doubt form for some time the classic treatise on the subject. In the meantime Mr. McClelland has been investigating the nature of the secondary radiation given off by substances which have been exposed for some time to the Beta (or the Gamma) rays from radium, and finds that it varies in accordance with their atomic weight. But this agreement is not proportional, and while the substance with greater atomic weight gives the greater radiation, the radiation increases less rapidly than the atomic weight. This seems to point to the existence of some disturbing cause which hinders the free development of the radiation effect, and the same theory has been invoked by at least one distinguished observer to account for the alleged irregularity in the production of the Blondlot rays.

Experiments are still being conducted into the anatomy of electrical fishes, such as the Torpedo marmorata, or sting ray, and the Gymnotus electricus, or electric eel. M. Cavalié, of Bordeaux, claims to have discovered what he describes as a "considerable fibrillary apparatus" in the sheaths of the various fibres of the electric organ, and that a similar one exists independently in the substance of the ventral lobes of it. M. Mendelssohn has also established that the Torpedo marmorata, when exposed to the action of radium, suffers from great local disturbance and actual lesion of the skin. This he attributes to the destructive effect of its own electric charge, the resistance of its skin, which under normal conditions is sufficient to make this harmless, being broken down by the increased conduction caused by the radium emanation.

The phosphorescence of phosphorus at ordinary temperatures, which has been claimed in some quarters as an electrical phenomenon, has now been shown by M. Jungfleisch, in a communication to the Académie des Sciences, to be principally due to the formation of an oxide of phosphorus much more volatile than the parent substance. Although he does not assert that this accounts for the whole of the phosphorescence, he thinks that by far the greater part of it is due to the slow combustion of this volatile oxide on coming into contact with the free oxygen of the surrounding air.

A communication by MM. Chantemesse and Borel to the Académie de Médecine seems to leave no doubt that yellow fever is propagated by the mosquito Stegomyia fasciata, which can only flourish between 43° of north and 43° of south latitude. Hence they conclude that England, Austria, and almost the whole of France should be practically exempt from the scourge, which nevertheless gains foothold in the Hyères Islands, the north of Corsica, Italy, Spain, and Portugal, and will continue to do so until organized measures are taken for the destruction of the insects. But they point out that much has been already done to check the propagation of the plague by the introduction of iron ships, the wet wood of the older vessels forming an ideal breeding-ground for the mosquito, while the greater rapidity of transit now made possible by steam more frequently brings the mosquito's eggs into cold regions, in which they become incapable of incubation. This last phenomenon, however, seems to lack confirmation. F. L.

SIR STAMFORD RAFFLES AND THE FOUNDING OF THE ZOOLOGICAL SOCIETY.

II.

At the commencement of 1824 The Zoological Journal made its first appearance. Vol. i. covers the period March, 1824–January, 1825. It contains Dr. Horsfield's paper on Sir S. Raffles's collection already quoted from. The Journal, which was only carried on for five volumes, is chiefly important because it contains contemporary evidence of the origin and early beginnings of the Zoological Society. In its volume for 1825 (vol. ii. p. 284) the following article, dated March 1st of that year, appeared :

"THE NEW ZOOLOGICAL INSTITUTION.—It is with much satisfaction that we record the preliminary arrangements that have been made for the establishment of a new Institution designed for the advancement and extension in all its branches of that important and delightful science to assist in the promotion of which is the object of this journal. One of the more immediate and special objects of this Institution is the application to the uses of civilized society of some of the innumerable subjects of the animal kingdom in every class which have either not yet been so applied, or from which man has not yet derived all the benefits they are susceptible of affording him.

"We understand the plan to have been originally suggested by Sir Stamford Raffles, who appears desirous of continuing in his native land the honourable career of usefulness and devotion to science which he pursued with so much zeal and success during his residence in the East, and we are also informed that the subject has been taken up with much interest and activity by the illustrious President of the Royal Society [i.e., Sir Humphry Davy], who during the few years he has occupied his exalted station has uniformly exerted himself in the promotion of every department of natural knowledge. The following prospectus, which has been extensively circulated, explains in detail the objects of the proposed establishment :—

"Prospectus of a Society for introducing and domesticating new breeds or varieties of animals, such as quadrupeds, birds, or fishes likely to be useful in common life, and for forming a general collection in zoology."

"Should the Society flourish and succeed, it will not only be useful in common life, but would likewise promote the best and most extensive objects of the scientific history of animated nature, and offer a collection of living animals such as never yet existed in ancient or modern times. The present menageries of Europe are devoted to objects of curiosity. Rome, at the period of her greatest splendour, brought savage monsters from every quarter of the world then known to be shown in her amphitheatres, to destroy or be destroyed as spectacles of wonder to her citizens. It would well become Britain to offer another and a very different series of exhibitions to the population of her metropolis—animals brought from every part of the globe to be applied to some useful purpose as objects of scientific research, not of vulgar admiration, and upon such an institution a Philosophy of Zoology founded pointing out the Comparative Anatomy, the habits of life, the improvement and the methods of multiplying those races of animals which are most useful to man, and thus fixing a most beautiful and important branch of knowledge on the permanent basis of direct utility."

The development of the scheme is described further on in the same volume :—

"On Wednesday, June 22nd, a public meeting of the friends to the Institution took place at the Rooms of the Horticultural Society, the Earl of Darnley in the chair; when a committee of noblemen and gentlemen was chosen to further the objects of the Society, Sir Stamford Raffles being appointed the Chairman.

"Persons desirous of belonging to the Society will signify their wishes by letter to Mr. T. Griffiths, 21, Albemarle Street, London."

We come now to April, 1826, and the intervening twelve months between that date and the issue of the prospectus quoted were taken up with the preliminary work of arranging the organization and defining the scope of the proposed Society. In a letter to his cousin the Rev. Dr. Raffles, written during this period, Sir Stamford said :—

"I am rather at issue with Sir H. Davy re the Zoological Society, Sir H. Davy looking chiefly to its utility to the country gentlemen, and I to the scientific side."

The minutes of the general meeting held on April 29th, 1826, show the progress made in founding the Zoological Society. The following is the official report :—

"At a general meeting of the Friends of the proposed Zoological Society, held at the rooms of the Horticultural Society on the 29th April, 1826.

"Present : Sir Stamford Raffles, Marquis of Lansdowne, the Lord Mayor, &c.

"It was moved by Sir Humphry Davy, and seconded by the Earl of Darnley, 'That Sir Stamford Raffles should take the chair.' Mr. Vigors was requested to act as Secretary pro tempore of the meeting.

"Minutes of a General Meeting of the Friends of the proposed Society at the rooms of the Horticultural Society on the 22nd June, 1825, were read by Secretary.

"The minutes of the several meetings on the 26th February, 4th March, and 28th April, 1826, of the Committee appointed at the general meeting of the 22nd June, 1825, for making arrangements for the formation of the Society, were also read.

"A letter received by the Committee since the meeting of the 28th April from the Secretary of the Commissioners of Woods and Forests was read :—

"Office of Woods, &c., 23th April, 1826.

"MY LORD AND SIR, —The Commissioners of His Majesty's Woods, Forests, and Land Revenues having laid before the Lords of His Majesty's Treasury your applications, on behalf of the Zoological Society, for a grant of land in the Regent's Park for the purposes of the Society's intended Establishment, I am commanded to acquaint you that their Lordships have been pleased to authorize the said Commissioners to let to you as Trustees for the Society, on a yearly tenancy, a plot of land not exceeding five acres in the whole, partly on the situation marked No. 8 on the accompanying plan of the Park, and partly on the side of the adjoining road, at a yearly rent calculated at the rate of 6*l.* 6*s.* per acre for so much as shall be within the Park, and at 8*s.* per foot on the frontage of so much as shall be on the north-east of the said road.....

"A. MILNE.

"Lord Auckland.

"Sir Stamford Raffles.

"Sir Humphry Davy.

"Twelve Resolutions constituting the Society were then read by the Secretary, and, having been separately proposed from the Chair, were carried unanimously :—

"I. That a Society, to be designated the 'Zoological Society,' be instituted for the advancement of zoological knowledge.

"II. That the attention of the Society be directed to the following objects : The formation of a collection of living animals; a museum of preserved animals, with a collection of comparative anatomy; and a library connected with the subject.

"III. and IV. [unimportant].

"V. That the affairs of the Society shall be directed by a President, Treasurer, Secretary, and Council, the officers being members of the Council.

"VI. That the Council shall consist of eighteen members, exclusive of the officers, and that five shall be a quorum.

"VII. That the President shall nominate Vice-Presidents from the Council.

"VIII. That the Presidents of the Royal Society, the Presidents of the Linnean and Horticultural Societies, and the Presidents of the Colleges of Physicians and Surgeons for the time being, shall be ex officio members of the Society and Council.

"IX. That the Council shall have the management of the Society during the first year, at the end of which or sooner they shall submit to the members detailed regulations for the government of the Society.

"X. The President, Secretary, and Treasurer to be a standing Committee for charge of collections and to receive presents.

"XI. The property of the Society to be vested in three or more Trustees.

"XII. Members admitted before January 1st, 1827, to be original members. Admission fee and subscription for 1826, 5*l.*, and 2*l.* annually, commencing January, 1827, or sum of 25*l.* as a donation.

"It was then moved by the Marquis of Lansdowne and seconded by the Earl of Darnley and carried by acclamation — that Sir Stamford Raffles be appointed President of the Zoological Society.

"The following Resolution was then proposed by the President and carried unanimously : That the Council for the ensuing year shall consist of the following Noblemen and Gentlemen : Sir Stamford Raffles, President; His Grace the Duke of Somerset; The Most Noble the Marquis of Lansdowne; The Right Hon. the Earl of Darnley; The Right Hon. the Earl of Egremont; The Right Hon. Viscount Gage; The Right Hon. Lord Auckland; The Right Hon. Lord Stanley, M.P.; Sir Everard Home, Bart.; Edward Barnard, Esq.; Sir Humphry Davy; J. E. Bichen, Esq.; J. G. Children, Esq.; H. T. Colebrooke, Esq.; Rev. Dr. Goodenough; G. B. Greenough, Esq.; Dr. Thomas Horsfield; Joseph Sabine, Esq.; Charles Stokes, Esq.; N. A. Vigors, Esq.; Charles Baring Wall, Esq., M.P.

"And that the following gentlemen be appointed officers of the Society for the ensuing year :—

"Treasurer—Joseph Sabine, Esq.

"Secretary—Nicholas Aylward Vigors, Esq.

"Assistant Secretary—Dr. Thomas Horsfield.

"The President then proceeded to read an opening address to the Society, in which he took a review of the past and present state of zoology in this country, and entered into a detail of the objects and plans of the Society.

"On the motion of Sir Humphry Davy, seconded by the Earl of Darnley, the thanks of the meeting were voted to the President for his address to the Society, and his general conduct in the chair this day."

There is only a brief report of the meeting in The Times of May 2nd, 1826. Unfortunately, no copy of Sir Stamford's address has yet been found. The Times states that among other supporters of the Society besides those named were H.R.H. the Duke of Sussex, the Duke of Bedford, the Marquis of Hertford, Earls Spencer, Malmesbury, Carnarvon, and Minto, Sir Robert Peel, Sir Thomas Lawrence, and Mr. J. Wilson Croker. Over a hundred noblemen and gentlemen were at the meeting.

The minutes of Council meetings subsequent to this general meeting contain some interesting references. At that held on May 5th, 1826, Sir Stamford nominated the Duke of Somerset, the Marquis of Lansdowne, the Earl of Darnley, and Lord Auckland as vice-presidents. A resolution was passed "requesting the President to look out for a suitable house for the temporary accommodation of the Society." At that of June 3rd it was stated that "350 members have already joined the Society," and that a capital of 6,000*l.*, added to a yearly income of 350*l.*, had been secured, while by January 1st, 1827, these figures might be expected to increase to 7,000*l.* and 500*l.* respectively. On this statement 5,000*l.* was appropriated for the establishment in Regent's Park, and 1,000*l.* for the museum, library, and contingencies. In 1826 it was decided that "operations in the Regent's Park will be confined to draining, planting, &c." A subsequent resolution reveals the active and prominent part taken by Sir Stamford in the arrangements for the establishment of the Society and its gardens in the Regent's Park. It reads :—

"The President having laid before the Council a sketch of the proposed plan for laying out the grounds in the Regent's Park, it was resolved : 'That the outline of the Plan seems unobjectionable, and that the Committee appointed be authorized to proceed from the plan to the amount of 1,000*l.*' The President was requested to communicate with Mr. Decimus Burton on the subject respecting terms, &c.

"The President reported to the Council that he had made diligent inquiry for a house or apartments fit for the accommodation of the Society, and that he has been able to meet with one house only adequate to that purpose—a house situated at No. 33, Bruton Street, formerly in possession of Mr. Owen, the Royal Academician.....The parties have been induced to grant an underlease to the Society at the yearly rent of 250*l.*; the Society paying 100*l.* for fixtures, &c., and being liable to all rates, taxes, &c., exclusive of the ground rent of 12*l.* 13*s.*

"The President further reported that having requested Mr. Burton to examine the property, that gentleman stated the house to be generally in good condition. Mr. Field also, having been subsequently desired to go over the house, furnished the following estimate.....from which and other considerations it appeared that the house may be obtained and put into sufficient repair for the purposes of the Society at a yearly expense not exceeding 300*l.*, taxes and other rates being excluded.

"The house having been examined by the President, the Earl of Darley, Lord Auckland, the Secretary, and others, and appearing adequate not only for offices, but for affording sufficient accommodation for a Museum and Library, and as it may be calculated that the expenses of the taxes at least may be covered either by letting the upper part of the House, or charging the public for admission to the Museum—the Council was of opinion that the Society will be justified in taking the House. An immediate decision being required, the President was requested to close for the Lease on the best terms attainable."

One month after this meeting Sir Stamford Raffles died—July 6th, 1826—quite suddenly at Highwood, Hendon.

At the next meeting of the Council, held on July 8th, when the Duke of Somerset was in the chair, the following minute of the proceedings describes what took place:—

"The Vice-President, in the chair, informed the Council that they had been summoned in consequence of the sudden and lamented death of their President. His Grace suggested that under the present distressing circumstances, and at this unfavourable season of the year, it would be inexpedient to take any steps to fill up the vacancy that has occurred with so great a loss to the Society, and proposed that the Vice-Presidents who may be in town during the summer months be requested to superintend the execution of the plans already commenced under the direction of their late President."

On March 7th, 1827, the Marquis of Lansdowne was elected President in succession to Sir Stamford Raffles, and the Rev. Dr. Raffles was at the same time elected member of the Council to fill his cousin's place. At a Council meeting of April 24th, 1827,

"a communication was made by Dr. Raffles and Sir Everard Home, on the part of Lady Raffles, intimating her intention to transfer to the Society the Sumatran Collection formed by the late Sir Thomas Stamford Raffles, upon the following conditions, viz., 'That every subject shall be distinguished by a particular mark upon being deposited in the Society's museum, and that a separate catalogue of the whole be printed; that the property in this collection should remain vested in the representatives of the late Sir Thomas Stamford Raffles; and in case of any breach taking place in the Society that the whole, as deposited in the Museum, shall return to his family.'"

For this donation Lady Raffles at the next general meeting was elected an honorary member of the Society.

The following references to the death of Sir Stamford Raffles, written at the time by persons well acquainted with all the circumstances, show very clearly the prominent part he took in founding the Zoological Society.

The Zoological Journal (vol. iii., January, 1827, p. 143) said:—

"Considerable progress was made in the preliminary arrangements of the Institution [Zoological Society], when the sudden and lamented death of the President deprived the Society of its founder and chief support."

The same volume contains the description by Dr. Horsfield and Mr. Vigors of the new mammalia discovered by Sir Stamford in Sumatra, to which he had given the specific name of Gymnura. These distinguished naturalists attributed to him its discovery as a distinct genus, and decided to perpetuate his name with it as Rafflesii gymnura. I allude to this matter chiefly to introduce the pretty Latin dedication that Dr. Horsfield composed to his friend:—

"Viri illustrissimi, in omni scientiâ præstantio, in vitâ nobis amicissimi, in morte heu! Nunquam satis defendi, hæc species memoriæ sit sacra."

Mr. J. E. Bicheno, speaking in November, 1826, in his address to the Zoological Club, said:—

"The sorrow occasioned by the premature death of Sir Thomas Stamford Raffles at the early age of forty-five hangs upon every tongue. His political career is not a subject to be touched on from this place, though it is to his success in this department that we, as naturalists, are indebted to him. Whoever looks into the thirteenth volume of the Linnean Transactions only, will find enough to render his name imperishable. To have had so anomalous and gigantic a type of plants dedicated to him, and by such an authority, might justly make any naturalist envious of the distinction.....There was a promptness and resolution about his actions that silenced all opposition, and enabled him to effect his purpose while those around him were thinking of the means. ....To him the East India Company is indebted for a splendid portion of its museum collected in Java, and just before his death he gave his Sumatran collection to the Zoological Society, to be at once its foundation and ornament."

Mr. J. G. Children said in his address as chairman at the next annual meeting of the Zoological Club on November 29th, 1827:—

"The Zoological Society may proudly claim that not one shilling has been drawn from the public purse for its support, and could it condescend to ask such aid I for one would raise my voice against the humiliating petition—absiste precando, viribus indubitare tuis.....The spirit of its immortal Founder has gone forth, and will not fail to light up in every heart capable of exalted feelings some portion of that fire which animated his own, some wish, some sacred hope of treading, with however unequal steps, in the path he has so zealously marked out for them."

Nor did time weaken these impressions. At the next meeting of the Zoological Club, in November, 1828, the Chairman, Mr. Joshua Brookes, F.R.S., referred to:—

"The Sciurus rafflesii, a beautiful and very distinctly marked squirrel, which in common with nearly the whole of these new animals formed part of the noble collection made in Sumatra by the distinguished patron of zoology to whose memory it is dedicated, and was subsequently presented by him to the Museum of that Society which hails him with just pride as its founder."

I might make further quotations, but I think enough has been said to establish the claim of Sir Stamford Raffles to be called the Founder of the Zoological Society.

DEMETRIUS C. BOULGER.

THE N RAYS.

MR. BUTLER BURKE's letter in your last issue seems hardly explicit. If he will say that he has himself repeated M. Blondlot's experiment on the photography of the electric spark exactly as it is described in 'Rayons N,' pp. 53 sqq., and has found no increase of light recorded when a source of N rays is added, there will undoubtedly be a case to answer. If his words,

"Others who have devoted their time and attention to the matter find as great a difficulty in satisfying themselves that there is any photographic effect as they do that there is any visual effect or variations in the brightness of a phosphorescent screen when exposed to these mysterious rays," are to be taken as referring to persons other than himself, the evidence is only hearsay, and should, in my opinion, be disregarded.

Nothing has appeared in The Athenæum that could imply that Prof. R. W. Wood made any inquiry, as suggested by Mr. Butler Burke, into the eyesight of M. Blondlot, or of any of his assistants, when he visited Nancy. From a comparison of Prof. Wood's own account of his visit, as given in his letter to Nature of September 29th, 1904, with the declaration of M. Blondlot appearing in the Revue Scientifique of November 12th last, it is plain:—

1. That it was difficult for Prof. Wood and M. Blondlot to understand each other, German, the native tongue of neither, being their only common language.

2. That the experiment with the electric spark witnessed by Prof. Wood was not that detailed in 'Rayons N,' a leaden screen being used in this last to cut off the rays, which Prof. Wood tells us he attempted to do with his hand.

3. That he was warned by M. Blondlot that the experiment he proposed with a phosphorescent screen and a source of N rays present and absent without the operator's knowledge would succeed, as M. Blondlot put it, "nicht sicher, nicht mit Sicherheit," for reasons which he states in his declaration; and that on this experiment having failed as foretold, Prof. Wood left the laboratory with the conviction that all the announced changes of light in spark and screen were, as he says, purely imaginary.

Mr. Butler Burke, like Prof. Wood and most of those who deny the existence of the N rays, jumps to the conclusion that all those who affirm it are either suffering from hallucination or have defective eyesight. But the counter assumption that those who cannot see the alleged changes of light which they are said to produce are insufficiently trained in, or endowed by nature for, the art of photometry, is at least as plausible. Mr. Hackett (Trans. Roy. Dub. Soc., September, 1904) has given an easy test by which any one wishing to make experiments with the phosphorescent screen can try his eyesight beforehand, and it is much to be wished that this test should be used by all anxious to proffer their personal testimony on the subject. Fortunately we are not reduced to a choice between these two assumptions. It has been suggested by more than one observer that a disturbing factor may be present in some cases which prevents the regular repetition of the phenomena observed in others. Should this be so, it will doubtless be discovered and eliminated in course of time, when the sanity of judgment of those who can and those who cannot see the increase of light will alike be vindicated. The fact just announced by Dr. Rutherford, that it is the mass of slow-moving electrons that has prevented till now the demonstration of the positive charge of the particles emitted by radio-active bodies, may turn out to be a case in point.

THE WRITER OF THE ARTICLE.

SOCIETIES.

ASTRONOMICAL. — March 10. — Mr. W. H. Maw, President, in the chair.—Dr. Lockyer read a description of the spectroheliograph of the Solar Physics Observatory. The complete instrument consists of a siderostat to throw the solar beam in a southerly and horizontal direction; a lens placed in this beam to form the solar image; and the spectroheliograph itself to photograph in monochromatic light the image thus formed. A description of the apparatus was given, illustrated with photographs. Photographs of the sun taken with the instrument were also exhibited, showing the surface covered with a network of fine branching lines, which in middle and low latitude form thicker flocculi. "Disc" photographs, showing the prominences, were also exhibited, and it was pointed out that while the flocculi were often closely related to sunspots, they seemed to have no connexion with the prominences.—Mr. Maunder read a paper, communicated by the Astronomer Royal, on the large sunspot of January 29th to February 11th, and the contemporaneous magnetic disturbances. A series of photographs taken at the Royal Observatory were shown on the screen.—Mr. Fowler read a paper on spectroscopic observations of the recent great sunspot and associated prominences.—Father Cortie also gave an account of the observations of the sunspots made at the Stonyhurst Observatory, and showed photographs of the spectra.—Mr. Maunder read a paper in reply to criticisms on his paper on sunspots and associated magnetic disturbances.

SOCIETY OF ANTIQUARIES. — March 2. — Mr. W. Gowland, V.P., in the chair.—This being an evening appointed for the election of Fellows, no papers were read.—Mr. Philip Norman exhibited a painted cloth from Sweden, with Scriptural subjects.—Mr. C. E. Keyser exhibited a fine series of large photographs of the churches of Childrey and Sparsholt, Berks.—The following were elected Fellows: Messrs. R. Rickards, E. A. Abbey, E. S. Prior, W. H. Fox, P. H. Newman, and Arthur Kay.

LINNEAN. — March 2. — Prof. W. A. Herdman, President, in the chair.—Mr. W. N. Cheeseman was admitted a Fellow.—Miss E. M. Berridge, Mr. F. H. Capron, Miss H. C. I. Fraser, and Miss D. F. M.

Pertz were elected Fellows.—Mr. D. Finlayson exhibited and explained the Ashe-Finlayson "Comparascope." (See The Athenæum, March 4th, p. 277.)—A discussion followed, in which Dr. W. G. Ridewood, Dr. D. H. Scott, the Rev. T. R. R. Stebbing, and the President joined. Criticism was chiefly directed to the hybrid term for the invention, and "synoptoscope" or "synthetoscope" was suggested in its place.—A discussion on 'Zoological Nomenclature: International Rules and Others,' was opened by the Rev. T. R. R. Stebbing. He insisted on the paramount importance of obtaining agreement among zoologists on this subject, and pointed out that the Standing Committee of the International Congress of Zoology was an admirable instrument for this purpose. While claiming for the Linnean Society, or at any rate for Great Britain, more direct representation on the committee than either one or the other at present enjoyed, he bore cordial witness to the conciliatory attitude and judicious methods of the existing members. Still it must be borne in mind that the wisest decisions lie under the difficulty, first, of obtaining anything like world-wide assent, and, secondly, of securing anything like continuity of recognition, not so much in the centres of scientific thought and education as among beginners and isolated students. For obviating the latter inconvenience effort more sustained and better directed was needed in the future than had been exercised in the past. Incidentally Mr. Stebbing ventured to ask whether there were not many rules of nomenclature on which it would be satisfactory and advisable for zoologists not only to agree among themselves, but also to come to terms with their botanical colleagues. In this regard he offered some remarks in favour of adopting the year 1751 and the 'Philosophia Botanica' as starting-point and basis for what might be called the Linnean era. Reference was made to the 'Nomenclator Entomologicus' of F. Weber, published in 1795, with the object of showing that the generic names in that catalogue, recently brought into notice by an eminent carcinologist, are without value in questions of priority. He concluded with a proposal to get rid of tautonymy—as in Trutta trutta, Apus (Apus) apus, or other comical arrangements—by a plan distinguishing what was legal in the past from what is to be legal in the future.—In the ensuing discussion the President and the following speakers took part: Dr. P. L. Selater, Mr. E. M. Holmes, Dr. O. Stapf, Mr. H. J. Elwes, Mr. F. N. Williams, Mr. J. L. Bonhote, Mr. B. Daydon Jackson, Mr. J. Hopkinson, and Mr. H. Groves.—Dr. G. H. Fowler read a paper dealing with the Thaliacea, being the fourth of a series of papers on Biscayan Plankton collected by H.M.S. Research in 1901.

ZOOLOGICAL.—March 7.—Dr. W. T. Blanford, V.P., in the chair.—Dr. Albert Gray exhibited a series of lantern-slides in illustration of remarks upon the membranous labyrinth of certain animals.—Mr. H. Scherren called attention to pictures of the zebra in Aldrovandus (1649) and the 'Commentarius' of Ludolphus (1691). He said that in the seventeenth century zebras (now known as Equus grevyi) had been sent by the ruler of Abyssinia to the Governor of the Dutch East India Company at Batavia, and to the Sultan of Turkey, so that the species was seen in Europe two centuries before the type of Equus grevyi reached France in 1882. In proof, passages were cited from Philostorgius Ludolphus, Jean de Thévenot, and other writers.—Mr. G. A. Boulenger exhibited and made some remarks on a series of spirit-specimens of fishes from Lake Chad and the Chari River, collected and presented to the British Museum by Capt. G. B. Gosling.—Mr. J. L. Bonhote gave an exhibition of hybrid ducks which had been bred in his aviaries at Cambridge. In describing the various plumages, Mr. Bonhote pointed out that the hybrids mallard (Anas boschas) × spotbill (A. pæcilorhyncha) × pintail (Dafila acuta) were divisible into two races, a light and a dark, and also that, whereas in the full-plumaged drakes the mallard and pintail characters were chiefly apparent, in the eelipe plumage the characters of the spotbill supervened. Some curious resemblances to species other than their parents were then noticed, and also characters that could be referred to no known species. Mr. Bonhote then alluded to a paper he had read to the Linnean Society last year, pointing out that colour-variations tended to appear first of all on certain definite parts of the body, and that these parts, to which the name "pæcilomeres" had been given, were common to mammals and birds alike. After treating of this matter at some length, Mr. Bonhote came to the conclusion that, from the study of the birds shown, hybridization tended to bring about great variation, which followed the lines of the pæcilomeres, and as the result of that variation resemblances were shown towards species which had no part in their parentage. As illustrating this last statement, a bird (presumably a hybrid between a wigeon and pintail) which had been shot wild a short time back was shown. This bird, in addition to the characters of the two parent species, showed on the head markings that might be referred to both the teal and the New Zealand duck.—A communication from Mr. Cyril Crossland contained an account of the ecology and deposits of the Cape Verde marine fauna. The author pointed out that so far as the Cape Verde group was concerned there was no evidence of any common tropical marine fauna, though certain species were found in both the Atlantic and Indian Oceans. Reef animals were remarkably few in number, the fauna in their place having a considerable sub-tropical constituent.—Mr. C. Tate Regan read a paper entitled 'A Revision of the South American Cichlid Genera Crenacara, Batrachops, and Crenicichla,' in which twenty-three species were described, four of them as new to science.—A communication from Capt. R. Meinertzhagen contained a description of Ourebia kenya, a new antelope from British East Africa.

ENTOMOLOGICAL.—March 1.—Mr. F. Merrifield, President, in the chair.—The Duke of Bedford, M. Lucien Chopard, Mr. Wilfrid Fleet, and Mr. R. S. Mitford were elected Fellows.—Mr. H. St. J. Donisthorpe exhibited examples of Oxyptoda sericea, Heer, taken in Dulwich Wood, June 17th, 1904, a species new to Britain; also O. nigrina, Wat., with a type lent by Mr. E. A. Waterhouse, to demonstrate that it is not synonymous with sericea, as stated on the Continent; and O. exigua, which is also there regarded as synonymous with nigrina.—Mr. Hugh Main and Mr. Albert Harrison exhibited a long series of Colias edusa, with var. helice, bred from one female helice sent by Dr. T. A. Chapman from the south of France, to show the proportion of type and variety obtained. They also showed the results of similar experiments with Amphidasyus betularia, bred from a male var. doubledayaria, and a type female taken in cop. at Woodford, Essex, in 1903.—Mr. R. Priske exhibited a specimen of Helops striata showing an abnormal formation of the right antenna, which was divided into two branches from the fifth joint.—Mr. P. H. Grimshaw showed examples of Hydrotæa pilipes, Stein, male and female, the female being previously unknown, and several specimens of Hydrotæa tuberculata, Rond, not hitherto recorded in Britain, captured by Mr. C. W. Dale and Dr. J. H. Wood in various localities.—Dr. F. A. Dixey exhibited some cocoons and perfect imagines of hybrid Saturniids, including male and female of S. paronia, L., by S. pyri, Scheff, with added specimens of both sexes of the parent forms for comparison, the cross product resembling a large S. paronia rather than a small S. pyri. The exhibit further included three males and three females, of which the female parent was S. paronia, and the male parent a hybrid between a male S. paronia and a female S. spini, viz., the cross product to which Prof. Standfuss has given the name S. bornemanni.—Prof. E. B. Poulton exhibited groups of Synapsematic Hymenoptera and Diptera captured by Mr. A. H. Hamm; three much worn specimens of Papilio hesperus, taken at Entebbe in 1903 by Mr. C. A. Wiggins, to show that the tails of a Papilio, if untouched by enemies, can endure a great deal of wear; and Nymphaline butterflies from Northern China, apparently mimetic of the male Hypolimnas misippus, which is not known to occur in this region.—The President exhibited a number of examples of Pyrameis atalanta and Aglaia urticae, illustrating the effects of cold-season breeding by Mr. Harwood, of Colchester, some of them lent by Mr. R. S. Mitford.—Mrs. De la B. Nicholl read a paper on 'Butterfly-hunting in British Columbia and Canada,' illustrated by numerous examples of the species captured during the summer of 1904.—Sir George Hampson communicated a paper on 'Three Remarkable New Genera of Micro-Lepidoptera,'—Mr. Herbert Druce one on 'Descriptions of some New Species of Diurnal Lepidoptera collected by Mr. Harold Cookson in Northern Rhodesia in 1903-4; Lycopidæ and Hesperiidæ by Hamilton H. Druce,'—Mr. F. Du Cane Godman one on 'Descriptions of some New Species of Satyridæ from South America,'—and Mr. W. L. Distant, 'Additions to a Knowledge of the Homopterous Family of Cicadidæ.'

INSTITUTION OF CIVIL ENGINEERS.—March 14.—Sir Guilford L. Molesworth, President, in the chair.—The paper read was 'Shipbuilding for the Navy,' by Lord Brassey.

METEOROLOGICAL.—March 15.—The President, Mr. Richard Bentley, delivered an address on 'The Growth of Instrumental Meteorology.'—Mr. W. Marriott exhibited a number of lantern-slides illustrating meteorological phenomena.—At the close of the meeting the Fellows and their friends inspected the exhibition of meteorological instruments which was arranged in the library of the Institution of Civil Engineers.

MATHEMATICAL.—March 9.—Prof. A. R. Forsyth, President, and temporarily Dr. E. W. Hobson, in the chair.—Dr. W. H. Eccles and Mr. J. F. Cameron were elected Members.—Dr. Eccles and Mr. H. Bateman were admitted into the Society.—The following papers were communicated: 'On the Projection of Two Triangles on to the same Triangle,' by Prof. M. J. M. Hill, Dr. L. N. G. Filon, and Mr. H. W. Chapman, 'The Weddle Quartic Surface,' by Mr. H. Bateman, 'On the Complete Reduction of any Transitive Permutation Group, and on the Arithmetical Nature of the Coefficients in its Irreducible Components,' by Prof. W. Burnside, 'On the Theory of the Logarithmic Potential,' by Prof. T. J. I'A. Bromwich, and 'Alternative Expressions for Perpetuant Types,' by Mr. P. W. Wood.—Prof. Forsyth made an informal communication 'On the Theory of Geodesics.'

PHYSICAL.—March 10.—Dr. R. T. Glazebrook, Past-President, in the chair.—A paper 'On Direct-Reading Resistance-Thermometers, with a Note on Composite Thermocouples,' was read by Mr. A. Campbell.—A paper 'On the Stresses in the Earth's Crust before and after the Sinking of a Bore-hole' was read by Dr. Chree, and one 'On the Lateral Vibration of Bars of Uniform and Varying Sectional-area' by Mr. J. Morrow.

MEETINGS NEXT WEEK.

- Mon. Society of Arts, 8.—'Telephony,' Lecture II., Mr. H. Laws Webb. (Cantor Lecture.)
- Tues. Royal Institution, 5.—'Engineering Problems,' Lecture I., Prof. W. E. Dalby.
- Institution of Civil Engineers, 8.—Discussion on 'Shipbuilding for the Navy,' Paper on 'Coolgardie Water-Supply,' Mr. C. S. Russell Palmer.
- Society of Arts, 8.—'West-County Screens and Rood-Lofts,' Mr. F. Bligh Bond.
- Zoological, 8½.—'Notes on the Mammals and Birds of Liberia,' Sir Harry Johnston; 'On some Abnormal Remains of Cervus elaphus from the Post-Pliocene Deposits of the South of England,' Mr. Martin A. C. Hinton; 'On the Affinities of Procolophon,' Dr. R. Broom; 'On the Effects of Castration on the Horns of the Prongbuck,' Mr. R. I. Pocock.
- Wed. British Numismatic, 8.—'Forgery in relation to Numismatics: Part I, How to distinguish Forgeries,' Mr. L. A. Lawrence.
- Geological, 8.—'An Experiment in Mountain-Building, Part II,' Lord Avebury; 'The Rhatic Rocks of Monmouthshire,' Mr. Linsdall Richardson.
- Society of Arts, 8.—'The Present Aspect of the Fiscal Question,' Sir C. Malcolm Kennedy.
- Sociological, 8½.—'The Influence of Magic on Social Relations,' Dr. E. Westermarck.
- Thurs. Royal, 4½.
- Royal Institution, 5.—'The Reasonableness of Architecture,' Lecture I., Mr. T. G. Jackson.
- Institution of Electrical Engineers, 8.—'On the Effect of Heat on the Electrical and Mechanical Properties of Dielectrics,' and 'On the Temperature Distribution in the Interior of Field Coils,' Mr. E. H. Rayner; 'On Temperature Curves and the Rating of Electrical Machinery,' Mr. R. Goldschmidt.
- Antiquaries, 8½.
- Fri. Physical, 5.—'Note on the Voltage Ratios of an Inverted Rotary Converter,' Mr. W. C. Clinton; 'On the Flux of Light from the Electric Arc with Varying Power Supply,' Mr. G. B. Dyke; 'The Application of the Cymometer and the Determination of the Coefficient of Coupling of Oscillation Transformers,' Prof. J. A. Fleming.
- Institution of Civil Engineers, 8.—'The Wanki to Victoria Falls Section: Victoria Falls Railway,' Mr. C. T. Gardner; 'Design of a Double-Line Plate-Girder Railway Bridge,' Mr. H. S. Coppock. (Students' Meeting.)
- Royal Institution, 9.—'A Pertinacious Current,' Sir Oliver Lodge.
- Sat. Royal Institution, 3.—'Electrical Properties of Radio-active Substances,' Lecture III., Prof. J. J. Thomson.

Science Gossip.

THE writer of the article 'At the University,' in this month's Blackwood, comments quaintly on the argument of a Cambridge don in favour of the retention of Greek—that "the ordinary modern chemist cannot express himself in intelligent language because he has not even a modicum of Greek." This is the comment:—

"I will own that, personally, I regard it as a matter of small importance whether my chemist 'speaks with the tongues of men and of angels,' or whether he is ignorant of the most elementary rules either of grammar or rhetoric, provided always that he can be trusted to make up a prescription properly. A conversational chemist might become as great a nuisance as a conversational barber."

Though it is now some time since the druggist began to usurp the name of chemist, it is surprising that one who feels himself qualified to deal with University matters should display this kind of ignorance.

Two new variable stars are announced: one (var. 41, 1905, Cassiopeiae) by Madame Ceraski, examining M. Blajko's photographic plates taken at the Moscow Observatory, which showed that star several times of the twelfth magnitude or fainter, but on October 31st last as bright as the ninth magnitude; and var. 42, 1905, Monocerotis, by Dr. Anderson, of Edinburgh, who estimated its magnitude as 8.5 on January 18th, from which it had sunk to 9.3 on the 22nd ult.

'NAUTICAL ALMANAC CIRCULAR,' No. 19, gives a number of local particulars with regard to the total eclipse of the sun on August 30th next. At Domino Harbour, Labrador, the totality will last 2<sup>m</sup> 38<sup>s</sup>, about a quarter past eight o'clock (local time) in the morning; a little south-west of Burgos, in Spain, and at Ateca, some distance to the south-east of that town, its duration will be 3<sup>m</sup> 45<sup>s</sup>, at about five minutes before and five minutes after one o'clock in the afternoon respectively; at a station to the south-west of Philippeville, in Algeria, 3<sup>m</sup> 36<sup>s</sup>, about two o'clock; near Ras Mahara, Tunis, 3<sup>m</sup> 30<sup>s</sup>, about half-past two; near Misratah (a little to the south-east), in Tripoli, 3<sup>m</sup> 20<sup>s</sup>, a few minutes before three; and near Assouan (a little to the north-east), in Egypt, 2<sup>m</sup> 33<sup>s</sup>, at a few minutes later than half-past four o'clock. Domino Harbour, it may be remarked, in Labrador, is some considerable distance to the south-east of Eclipse Harbour, which was so named by Sir John Ross because an eclipse of the moon took place (on September 12th, 1829) whilst he was making his long voyage of discovery on that coast, which ended in the ship being lost in the ice.

Two annual reports from the Victoria Observatory have been received together, ending on March 31st, 1903 and 1904 respectively. Mr. Baracchi, the Government Astronomer, states that all branches of the regular observations have been carried on as usual; and the second report informs us that the catalogue plates (1,149 in number) for the Melbourne section of the astrographic chart are completed, and that the measurement of them and of those taken at Sydney is being done at Melbourne, satisfactory progress having been made, so that this great work is approaching completion. He also states that the measurement of the magnetograph curves and the general reduction of the magnetic observations from 1868 are being actively proceeded with, and their publication may shortly be expected. Apart from astronomical, magnetical, and meteorological observations, seismology forms a part of the routine work of the establishment; besides what is now always looked for at a public observatory, the regular distribution of time-signals.

FINE ARTS

ART HISTORY AND PRACTICE.

Outlines of the History of Art. By Dr. Wilhelm Lübke. Edited, minutely revised, and largely rewritten by Russell Sturgis. (Smith & Elder.)—Some idea of the nature of this American recension of Lübke's history may be gained by a perusal of the index and the added illustrations. From the former we find that while the Hudson River School of Painting is noticed, the master of Reynolds is not; that while such important names as John F. Kensett, Sanford R. Gifford, and Jervis McEntee, not to mention Fortuny and Otto Brausewetter, receive full recognition, the names of men like Manet, Monet, Degas, Renoir, do not find a place. From the same source we discover that Masaccio was spelt Macaccio, and that Legros was an eighteenth-century sculptor, though of a nineteenth-century painter of that name there is no trace.

The remarks attached to the added illustrations are written with a view to attract the wandering eye of the overworked tourist. Opposite a Constable is written, "Several of his pictures are landscapes of great extent, representing miles of country"; opposite a Turner, "The picture is a splendid glow of colour"; while Landseer's 'Member of the Humane Society' is greeted with the appropriate remark that "he studied the dog and understood the creature well." Of Botticelli's 'Primavera' we learn that "it hangs in the Academy of Fine Arts at Florence, and is greatly admired, much studied, and often copied." The 'Concert' of the Pitti is said to be "one of the very few highly finished and complete pictures which are undoubtedly by Giorgione" (shade of Lermolieff!).

If we admit the prevalent notion that popular information is the information that was accepted as correct thirty or forty years ago, the book may be regarded as an admirable popular guide to art, though we fancy even the most innocent novice will be a little shocked at the coloured representations of Karnak and the Parthenon taken from models in the New York Metropolitan Museum.

Apollo: Histoire Générale des Arts Plastiques. Par Salomon Reinach. (Paris, Librairie Hachette.)—The Story of Art throughout the Ages: an Illustrated Record. By S. Reinach. From the French by Florence Simmonds. (Heinemann.)—'Apollo' is founded on lectures delivered at the École du Louvre in 1902-3, and appears simultaneously in English and English dress under the title just given. The liberal supply of illustrations in both is similar in the pages we have tested, though the English reproductions are the sharper. But in both cases the reduced size does not allow of any precision of detail. We notice that the English version does not contain the 'Professor's Preface,' which says that his lectures were crowded, and special arrangements had to be made for extra seats. On the other hand, the English version is printed with more margin, and is a bigger book. We are somewhat surprised to find that it contains remarks, e.g., on Hogarth, which are absent from the French original. We conclude that these are authorized by the Professor, but there is no word explaining if they are his or not, and in some cases they seem especially adapted to fit the prejudices of an English audience. The translation is fluent and adequate as a whole, though it is occasionally clumsy, and sometimes a word which seems vital in so brief a summary is not adequately translated. The French is delightful, both easy and felicitous. To survey art from its origin to our own day was a heroic business; but the Professor has a rare gift of condensation, and though specialists will differ from him in detail, they will, we think, generally recognize both the ability and the comprehensiveness of his study.

It was time for such a summary, for many of the old gods have fallen, stricken by modern pens, but the popular taste seems about as bad, or as good, as ever it was, and we hope that wide circulation of this book will improve it and lead to further study, which will be assisted by the excellent bibliographies at the end of each chapter. We are surprised to find the 'Venus of Milo' called 'Amphitrite,' and given to the school of Phidias, some three centuries earlier than the usual date ascribed to it. We rank with the majority of modern archaeologists in finding it anything but Phidian in quality. There is a section on the wonderful Mycenaean art, which Mr. Arthur Evans has done so much to open out for us. The modern point of view of the book may be exhibited by this sentence:

"The truth about the formation of Raphael's genius was discovered by Morelli about 1880; it is the more necessary to insist on it, because it has not yet become an accepted fact in the teaching of art history."

To take another instance, Alfred Stevens is acclaimed as "one of the greatest sculptors of modern times," while Roubiliac's name is not mentioned.

We are glad to find a succinct record of these changes, which penetrate the common intelligence much more slowly than might be supposed, and we congratulate M. Reinach on having had the time and means to contribute to an essential, but neglected side of modern education. We are sure that he will surprise the Philistines. We hope that he will convert an honourable minority of them.

The Year's Art for 1905, compiled by A. C. R. Carter (Hutchinson), is a useful manual. We think the photographs which it reproduces are out of place. The business of a year-book such as this is to give a record of the various manifestations of art. Pictures of the gentlemen who sat on the Committee concerning the Chantrey Bequest are not particularly illuminating. There is plenty of real information here which is wanted, and should be sufficient, without concession to the popular taste for personalities.

The Treatment of Drapery in Art. By G. W. Rhead. (Bell.)—There is little in this book beyond a superficial classification of different types of drapery, and a dissertation on the tunic and the toga. Some attempt is also made to explain the typical forms of drapery by the effect of gravity acting on the unsupported parts; but this does not take us very far. The fact is that the choice of materials of differing weight and softness allows of such infinite diversity of character that the real history of drapery in art is the history of the artist's à priori inclinations as a pure designer. It is precisely in its subservience to this that the peculiar expressiveness and charm of drapery lie, and it is only by holding to some such idea that the subject can be profitably treated. As it is, the mere assertion that Fra Angelico used one kind of drapery and Mantegna another, even if enlivened by personal anecdotes, is scarcely profitable.

Figure Composition. By R. G. Hatton. (Chapman & Hall.)—Among a number of exasperatingly disjointed and casual remarks we find here not a few suggestions which may be profitable to the young designer. The author seems fairly conversant with good models, which renders it all the more surprising that certain unnamed examples, as to whose authorship we may make a guess, should be distressingly bad. 'Corona Gloriæ,' plate vi., may be taken as an example. The subject of figure composition is one that really covers the whole æsthetics of the art of design, and it is not to be expected that in a popular and "chatty" book like this any fundamental principles should be discovered; but there is more good sense in some of the author's incidental remarks than one would be inclined to expect, if one judged by the garrulity and inconsequence of his style.

Figure Drawing. By R. G. Hatton. (Same publishers.)—The object of this book is admirable—namely, to teach the art student anatomy, not as a separate science, but solely in connexion with its effect on the visible forms of the figure. The author, moreover—as a result, we should imagine, of practical experience as a teacher—has discovered numberless ingenious devices for arresting the student's attention, and fixing his memory on the cardinal points of structure. His general plan is to begin with a rough schematic approximation to the natural form—an approximation which is almost geometrical, and therefore easily grasped—and gradually to fill this out till it has the complexity of the actual form. This is an admirable method for stimulating from the first the plastic sense and constructive imagination of the student. Indeed, the method seems to us so good—at all events, for the earlier stages of the study—that we should expect those who follow our author's instructions to arrive at a much better idea of figure drawing than he himself displays in the singularly infelicitous illustrations. These, at all events, ought not to be imitated by the student.

MR. RICH'S WATER-COLOURS AT THE ALPINE CLUB.

MR. RICH is one of the few modern artists who use water colour with real distinction, and his show at the Alpine Club contains the best work he has yet produced. He is by no means invariably successful, and indeed this is scarcely a bad sign, since it shows how constantly he strives to discover fresh motives of design. He has seen that the finest beauties of water colour are to be attained only when the appearances of nature are reduced to such elementary shapes as are capable of being expressed easily by the loaded brush. This, it is true, is also understood by a good many of the more skilful water-colour draughtsmen, who have adopted what may be roughly indicated as an impressionist method of vision. But Mr. Rich stands almost alone in choosing those effects of nature where strong contrasts of tone play a part. He insists, that is, on those elementary shapes which arouse most clearly the idea of mass and of light and shade upon solid forms. This choice implies at once greater difficulties than the more evanescent and atmospheric effects give rise to, since the problem of design has to be solved according to more rigorous rules. Mr. Rich's silhouettes are not always completely worked out, and one can imagine that, without increasing the number of divisions of tone that he employs, or delineating with greater detail, he might by weaving more closely the texture of his design, and chastening the contours of his silhouettes, attain to a higher power of expression and make a more definite appeal to the imagination even than he does at present. But he has found that the imagination is more deeply moved by the sombre masses of shadowed trees seen against golden depths of sky, and by the solid architecture of earth and hill, than by those iridescent effects of atmospheric colour where the contrasts are less marked, and where, in consequence, the artist is never compelled to a definite and uncompromising design. And how much in this extremely difficult art he has already accomplished such drawings as the Wolstanbury Hill (13), Ditchling Mill (23), Arundel Castle (33), The Castle (46), and many others in this exhibition testify. His range of tone is really remarkable; he can get gloomy shadows which suggest depths of colour without laborious stippling or unduly disturbing his surface; while in the light divisions of his pattern he can build up solid forms by the palest washes. He has, in fact, found out the secret (known perfectly to the water-colour draughtsmen of the early nineteenth century) of keeping each division within its own envelope of tone; and without this the finest effects of decorative and massed design are impossible.

Mr. Rich's colour is not always entirely satisfactory. He sometimes introduces greys of a cold violet tint, and his reds are sometimes almost dirty, with brownish shadows; but his management of the cooler harmonies of green and blue is often remarkable. Few artists since Constable have interpreted at once so truly and harmoniously the cool grey-greens of mid-summer, or found so just a complement in the pinkish notes of buildings and the degraded blues of water and sky. Occasionally, as in the beautiful Malling Mill (84), he treats a subject entirely in pale tints with great subtlety and nicety of colour—in this case the scheme is a pale buff, with notes of white and blue. In many ways Mr. Rich represents the best side of the English tradition of landscape; he has no great sense of what is imposing or dramatic, nor does he explore the appearances of nature with passionate zest, but he reacts to the changing effects of light and shade over gentle pastoral lands, with a genial sympathy and quiet meditative joy. His drawings will scarcely stir a thrill of excitement in the hurry and rush of our large exhibitions, but they are assuredly good to live with.

THE ARUNDEL CLUB.

WE have received the first year's publication of this society, which has been formed to distribute to its members photographs of little-known or unedited works of art. The set of fifteen photographs which make up this year's instalment is full of interest. The pictures receive the ascriptions given them by their owners. These in many cases are not likely to meet with universal acceptance, but the Committee rightly felt that it would be too invidious a task to rename the pictures, though they have evidently tried to select works which will be of interest to lovers of early art. Among the most remarkable are an important altar-piece from the Archbishop's palace at Evora, in Portugal, ascribed to Gerard David. This is, unfortunately, a poor photograph. There are an interesting 'Madonna' signed and dated by Francesco da Rimini, an artist to whom Signor Ricci has lately called attention; a signed Benedetto Diana, a head of Christ, which settles at once the authorship of a celebrated 'Supper at Emmaus' in S. Salvatore in Venice, once attributed to Bellini; the curious Sicilian 'Madonna and Child,' recently lent by Mr. Salting to the Burlington Fine-Arts Club; a beautiful Martin Schongauer; and Sir Frederick Cook's 'Adoration of the Magi,' by Filippo Lippi, a picture of which Morelli long ago pointed out the capital importance for the study of the artist, though it has been completely overlooked by two recent biographers. From the same collection is a very tragic 'Pietà' ascribed to Moretto, which seems to us more in the manner of Cavazzola. There follows a magnificent family group by Frans Hals, from Lieut.-Col. Warde's collection. This hitherto unknown picture is a great discovery, due, we believe, to Mr. Herbert Cook. Finally, we have two fifteenth-century English paintings from the Society of Antiquaries, and the Hon. Mrs. Meynell Ingram's noble portrait, ascribed to Giorgione or Titian. It will be seen that the choice is varied enough to suit the students of different schools of art. The photographs are, on the whole, good, though we could wish that they were printed on rather thicker paper, so as to prevent their curling up so rapidly. No doubt, in future publications improvements will be made, but in the meantime the present issue must be considered very encouraging.

ARCHÆOLOGICAL NOTES.

THE results obtained by Capt. Croz, the late M. de Sarzec's successor at Telloh, are now published, and form a very creditable record. He has, in the first place, found the head of a statue in diorite, which, when applied to one of the smaller statues of Gudea at the Louvre, was found to fit perfectly. We have, then, a presentment of the famous viceroy or patesi of Lagash, if not in his habit as he lived, at least in the shape in which it pleased the sculptors of his time to represent him. It shows us, as reproduced in heliogravure by the Revue d'Assyriologie, a well-shaped, somewhat open face, with large eyes and eyebrows meeting over the nose, lips curved in the arcu Cupidinis, a delicately chiselled nose, and firm chin. It bears the turban already familiar to us from other Sumerian statues, but the head is disproportionately large for the rest of the figure, the neck is almost non-existent, and the whole gives one the impression of an extremely squat figure, or, perhaps, of a dwarf. M. Heuzey, in an explanatory and informing article, argues strongly that this is due to the convention among Sumerian sculptors, of which he gives other instances, whereby the bases of statues were regarded as blocks of stone intended primarily to receive inscriptions, to which the head was added later as a work of supererogation. Among other finds is a tablet on which are inscribed curses against the people of Gishku for the ruin which they wrought upon Lagash in the reign of Urukagina. M. Thureau-Dangin, who publishes a translation, remarks that it seems to have been written by a priestly person, who is anxious to see in this inter-civic struggle an act of sacrilege against Nin-girsu, the god of Lagash. He also points out that at the moment the seat of government seems to have shifted to Uruk or Erech, and that the advent of Sargon of Accad must soon after have put an end to these petty wars between town and town. There may also be noted the study of a cylinder of the solar hero Gilgames, represented as a fisherman, which M. Heuzey compares to one of the labours of Hercules, to all of which he would attribute a Chaldean origin. The cylinder in question, which first saw the light in Lajard's 'Culte de Mithra,' shows a person tightly cinctured, and with a wasp-waist, resembling the men on Mycenaean monuments.

From Egypt also the results of the excavation season are beginning to come in. Besides the work of Mr. Theodore Davis at Biban-el-Moluk, which has led, as announced in The Times and elsewhere, to the discovery of the mummies of Iuaa and Thuaa, the father and mother of Amenophis III.'s famous queen Thi, and a great find of gold and gold-plated objects connected with their burial, excellent results have been achieved by M. Legrain at Karnak, where the unearthing of more than six hundred statues of Egyptian kings will probably prove to be of the first importance for many points of history. Dr. Naville and Mr. H. R. Hall at Deir-el-Bahari have also found fine statues of Usertsen II., of which two will probably be shown at the exhibition of the Egypt Exploration Fund's work in July next. All are in more or less perfect condition. They also were fortunate enough to find on the platform of the eleventh-dynasty temple a sarcophagus in white marble, made for the use of the Princess Kaa of the same period, which for beauty of workmanship and perfection of condition is said to be unequalled. This will probably be kept at Khasr-el-Nil. Another find of theirs shows Nebkheru-ra's wife to have been an Ethiopian.

An excellent article by M. Cumont on the worship of the goddess Anahita or Anaïtis appears in the current number of the Revue Archéologique. While presenting many of the features of the Greek Artemis, she seems to have been long known in Persia, whence, no doubt, her constant association in later times with Mithras. Essentially a hunting goddess, her relation to most of the other goddesses of Asia Minor—such as, for instance, the Mâ of Cappadocia—seems plain, and M. Cumont sticks to the position taken by him in his encyclopædic work on the 'Mysteries of Mithras,' that the institution of the taurobolium, or blood-bath, is to be attributed to her rather than to her assessor. This may be so, and the typical Pergamene statues of the bull-slaying Niké may well have been the model from which the famous group of Mithras and the bull was originally taken. Until, however, we are certain what was symbolized by the last-mentioned group the question will probably remain open. The discovery of a new Mithreum at Merida, in Spain, which has just been announced by M. Pierre Paris, may do something to solve it. At all events, it is only by the collection of as many instances as possible that this, or any other vexed archæological question, is capable of solution.

A Græco-Aramæan inscription at Aghatcha Kalé, in Turkish Armenia, is also reported by M. Granard, the French Consul at Sivas. A squeeze has been sent to M. Clermont-Ganneau, and a full reproduction will doubtless appear in due course. It appears to mention two new satraps, named Oromanes and Ariukes, and to date from the third century B.C. Hence it is claimed as the oldest Greek inscription yet discovered in Asia Minor to the east of the Halys.

Another possible parent for the 'Apollo Belvidere' and the 'Artemis with a Stag' has been found by Dr. Amelung. According to a memoir lately presented by him to the Académie des Inscriptions, the sculptor of both statues was not, as hitherto supposed, Leochares, but Euphranor of Corinth, who flourished in the fourth century B.C. M. Salomon Reinach seemed to regard the new theory with a certain amount of approval. With this may be coupled a conversation between Thiers and the archæologist Tarral, just published, in which the statesman supported the contention that the 'Venus of Milo' was a Fame, and that he could even see indications of the end of the trumpet which he supposed to rest against the right knee of the goddess. We have not heard much lately of the rival theory of Dr. Waldstein, which would make the figure part of a group which included an Ares, on whose shoulders he supposed the missing arm to rest.

The Russian savant Dr. Rostovtzeff has completed a study of the tesserae in bone and ivory, apparently of the reign of Nero, which M. Clermont-Ganneau found in Crete and Cyrene, and which are now exhibited at the Louvre. He is against the theory that they form tickets of admission to places of entertainment or baths, and inclines to the idea formerly put forward by M. Fröhner that they were pieces resembling draughts and used in some game. This he supports by many illustrations drawn from the grave-deposits of children, and thinks that he can reconstitute the game, which he claims to have originated in Alexandria. The pieces, fifteen in number, bore, according to him, the heads of Augustus, Jupiter, Hermes, Hercules, Kronos, Castor, and Pollux, while the others show busts of Isis, Juno, Aphrodite, and a young woman with an Augustan head-dress. The number is completed by representations of an Egyptian temple, two different crowns, and an unnamed personage in the toga pretexta.

THE LATE LORD SOUTHESK.

By the death of the Earl of Southesk the Society of Antiquaries of Scotland has lost a distinguished member, and a conspicuous figure in the world of Scottish archæology has disappeared. For the last twenty years and more his interest in the absorbing subject of the antiquities of his country had been unabated. One of his earliest contributions which I can recall was a paper on the Newton Stone, the inscriptional Sphinx of the North. It was read to the Antiquaries in December, 1882; but late last year his letters to me were as full as ever of enthusiasm for archæology. Of late the stimulus had been supplied by the discovery of the Bradsbutt Ogham in Aberdeenshire. He took a great deal of trouble about it, and was ever anxious that nothing should be left undone to recover the missing fragments.

In the meantime (1884) he contributed a careful account to the Antiquaries of 'The Oghams of Scotland.' This was followed shortly afterwards by a paper on 'The Oghams at Brodie, Aquhollie, Golspie, and Newton.' In some of these cases Lord Southesk revised his previous readings and conclusions, for he was possessed of the scientific spirit, and was never afraid of correcting himself. His next contribution was his volume entitled 'Origins of Pictish Symbolism,' published by David Douglas at Edinburgh in 1893, and enriched with numerous illustrations and diagrams. Pictish inscriptions and Pictish symbolism are among the hardest and most obscure subjects of their respective kinds within the range of British archæology, and little progress has been made in the study of either of them since Lord Southesk wrote on them.

He was probably drawn to study the script by the symbolism sometimes associated with it, and the symbolism perhaps attracted him by reason of a certain mystic tendency which he had. This seems to have been what he has described in his 'Suomira, a Fantasy,' as an inclination towards occult research. The same 'Fantasy' explains his character still further: "A love for poetry and art, with vast delight in all things beautiful, whether in living or inanimate forms, rules in my soul with more than wonted sway." His love of poetry manifested itself in his sense of style, and it has been naturally embodied in his poetical compositions, on which I am not competent to pass judgment. His love of the beautiful in art may be said to have left its material exponent in his fine collection of ancient gems, in which he took a legitimate pride. He had the true spirit of research joined to a poetic imagination and the highest culture.

JOHN RHYS.

SALES.

MESSRS. CHRISTIE sold on the 11th inst. the following:—Drawings: Birket Foster, Kensington Gardens, 50*l.* Henriette Ronner, Cat and Kittens, 50*l.* P. Sadée, Looking for the Fishing-Boats, 65*l.* Pictures: F. Bramley, Eyes and No Eyes, 126*l.* T. S. Cooper, Canterbury Meadows: a Cool Retreat, 525*l.*; Sheep on the Hills, 199*l.* Sir J. Gilbert, The Timber-waggon, 110*l.* J. W. Godward, Dolce far Niente, 162*l.* Colin Hunter, Landing Fish, 115*l.* B. W. Leader, The Lledr Valley, 199*l.* E. Blair Leighton, How Lisa loved the King, 651*l.*; Where there's a Will there's a Way, 157*l.* J. Linnell, Evening, 220*l.* A. Moore, Battledore, 315*l.* H. Moore, Breeze off the Isle of Wight, 535*l.* F. Morgan, The Mid-day Rest, 136*l.* Erskine Nicol, The Bachelor, 131*l.* Briton Riviere, Tick-Tack, 115*l.* W. Dendy Sadler, A Game of Chess, 147*l.* Marcus Stone, The Post-bag, 210*l.* Sir L. Alma Tadema, Venus and Mars, 336*l.*

The same firm sold on the 13th inst. a picture by F. Cotes, Portrait of Lady Mary Hay, 115*l.*

Fine-Art Gossip.

THE authorities appear to have underestimated the interest of the Watts-Sandys exhibition at Burlington House. Last Saturday, when this most attractive show closed, there was an almost despairing cry for more catalogues, which by the afternoon were not to be had at any price. It is estimated that at least 500 more copies would have found ready purchasers. By the way, the Academy might very reasonably follow the Guildhall precedent, and publish the number of paying visitors to each of its winter exhibitions. It is probably too much to expect the authorities to publish the number of those who pay to see the summer exhibition, although both of the Paris Salons do so.

At an election of the Royal Society of British Artists, held on Monday last, the following candidates were successful: Messrs. H. L. Richardson, W. Dexter, G. E. Collins, D. M. Smith, T. H. Liddell, and W. M. Palin.

YESTERDAY was the private view at the Modern Gallery of water-colours of Perugia, studies at the Zoological Gardens, &c., and miniatures by Miss Katharine McCracken and Miss Nellie Hadden.

MESSRS. SHEPHERD BROTHERS will hold the private view of their spring exhibition of portraits and landscapes by early British masters on Saturday next.

THE New York Water-Colour Club will hold their first exhibition in England at the Modern Gallery. It will consist of over one hundred works, contributed by about seventy members, and will open to the public on Monday next.

M. GABRIEL JULES THOMAS, the French sculptor, who died last week, was born in Paris on September 10th, 1824, and studied under Dumont. In 1848 he carried off the Grand Prix de Rome for his figure called 'Philoctète partant pour le Siège de Troie.' Thomas remained in Italy for six years, and again came before the public in 1855 with his statue of 'Le Général Marceau,' now at the Louvre, where, by the way, may be found a number of his works—e.g., 'L'Industrie,' 1857; 'Orphée,' 1857; 'Athlète,' 1858; 'La Force,' 1867; 'L'Astronomie,' 1877; and 'La France,' 1885. He is also well represented in other public museums and churches in France. One of his most popular exhibits, 'Soldat Spartiate rapporté à sa Mère,' 1857, is at Nantes; his 'Virgile,' 1861, and 'L'Adolescence,' a bronze statue exhibited at the Salon of 1903, are in the Luxembourg; his statue of Mlle. Mars, 1865, is at the Comédie Française, and 'Le Drame et la Musique' at the Opéra. M. Thomas was a man of extraordinary energy, and the total output of his long life was enormous. He was devoted to the classical school of his youth, and had little sympathy with modern originality.

THE death of M. Thomas creates a third vacancy at the Académie des Beaux-Arts, to which he was elected on December 29th, 1875, in succession to Barye. The other two vacant chairs are those of Barrias and Guillaume. There are already several candidates, and there can be little doubt that M. Rodin will be elected to one of the seats. M. Denys Puech will almost certainly obtain another, as he came within an ace of winning it at a recent election. Since then M. Puech, whose brother is one of the deputies for Paris, has executed busts of all the Academicians not already immortalized in this way, to say nothing of small medallions of their wives and children. Rodin is hardly like to allow himself to be nominated unless election is a foregone conclusion.

SEVERAL other deaths of well-known artists are reported from Paris. M. Victorien Antoine Bastet, who died recently at Bollène, at the age of fifty-two years, was a sculptor who studied first under Dumont, and then under Thomas, whose death is recorded above. He frequently exhibited at the Salon.—M. Paul Charles Galbrunner, who also died recently in Paris, at the age of eighty-two years, was a sculptor as well as an engraver of medals and "pierres fines." He was a native of Paris, but his parents were Germans. He first exhibited at the Salon in 1848, and obtained a Silver Medal at the Salon of 1900.—The death is also announced of M. Gustave Albert Anderson, known chiefly under the name of Gustave Albert, an excellent landscape artist. He exhibited two of his works at the New Salon last year. He was a native of Sweden, and was thirty-eight years of age.

ALTHOUGH the fate of the late M. Rodolphe Kann's splendid collection of pictures (referred to in The Athenæum on February 18th) is not at the time of writing made public, it is, at all events, known that he has bequeathed to the Louvre a very fine portrait of a man by Thomas de Keyser. This is an especially welcome gift, as the Louvre possesses no good work by this excellent Dutch artist, and only one attributed to him. The portrait which M. Kann has bequeathed to the Louvre was acquired by him at the Secrétan sale in 1889, the pendant picture, a portrait of a young woman, being secured at the same sale for the Berlin Museum.

THE Librairie Armand Colin announces a new and exhaustive 'Histoire de l'Art depuis les Premiers Temps Chrétiens jusqu'à nos Jours,' under the general editorship of M. André Michel, whose competence and skill are well known to readers of The Athenæum. The new history is the work of some of the most competent French writers on art, and will appear in fortnightly parts at 1fr. 50c. each. When complete it will form eight volumes, each of which will contain about five hundred engravings in the text and twelve separate plates. The price of each volume will be 15fr.

INSCRIPTIONS discovered by the Danish archaeologists in the Acropolis of Lindos are said to throw a new light on the date of the Laocoön group, and suggest that it was produced in the Augustan age.

AN interesting exhibition of Italo-Byzantine art will be held in the course of this month at Grottaferrata, in commemoration of the 900th anniversary of the founding of the abbey. It will present an unprecedented opportunity for lovers of art, as Italy is very rich in beautiful specimens of Byzantine art, and exhibits of paintings, goldsmiths' work, carved works, &c., are promised from the Vatican and elsewhere.

THE meeting of the Society of Antiquaries of Scotland on Monday night was one of more than usual interest, for reports were presented on the excavations of the Roman station of Barhill, on the Antonine Wall, near Glasgow, by Mr. George Macdonald and Mr. Thomas Ross, architect; also a report on the excavation of the forts of Ardifuar, Duntroon, and Dunadd, Argyllshire, by Dr. Christison and the Hon. J. Abercromby. The excavations at Barhill have resulted in such varied and numerous finds of Roman occupation as to give them a unique place in the digging in North Britain. Barhill was excavated under the superintendence of Mr. Park, factor to Mr. Whitelaw, of Gartshore, who defrayed the cost. The work was begun in November, 1902, and is not yet completed. As the result of a suggestion by Mr. Haverfield, search was made within the square of the camp of 399 ft. by 393 ft., of the second century, for an earlier camp, which was found. It is believed to be one of the forts of Agricola.

MUSIC

THE WEEK.

QUEEN'S HALL.—Eighth Symphony Concert.

BERLIOZ, Liszt, and Strauss are the chief figures in the history of so-called programme music since Beethoven, and in discussing the works of Liszt the debt he owed to Berlioz must never be forgotten. The 'Symphonie Fantastique,' produced in 1830, was the first bold step in a direction dangerous in that the real is apt to gain ascendancy over the ideal. In Liszt's 'Faust' Symphony, revived last Saturday afternoon by Mr. Henry J. Wood at the Queen's Hall, the music is of the mood- or character-painting genre. Thus it is subjective, and in view of the matter which it seeks to illustrate, of a certain nobility.

Berlioz in his symphony had moments of inspiration, as in the slow movement; so also had Liszt, and his slow 'Gretchen' movement, too, is one of his strongest, yet neither work, however interesting, offers convincing proof that programme music has really progressed since Beethoven. Strauss, in his 'Tod und Verklärung,' produced a work which, as abstract music, needed no programme, but in his later works he seems to have read Beethoven's wise canon, "Mehr Empfindung als Malerei," in can-crizans fashion. Strauss as yet must, however, be sub judice, for his artistic career is not completed; he may modify, or even alter, his present views with regard to the function and limits of his art.

Liszt's 'Faust' we regard as the best specimen of post-Beethoven programme music. The attempt to give tone-pictures of Faust, Gretchen, and Mephistopheles was a bold one. In the first movement the composer followed his own dictum that exclusively musical considerations are subordinate to the action of the given subject, and accordingly manner attracts more than the actual matter. Again, there is often mere repetition instead of real development. The Finale is very clever, though the chorus 'Mysticus' at the close is not really impressive. The middle slow movement is the most satisfactory section of the work, for here the tender music speaks for itself. The 'Faust' Symphony was written over half a century ago, and even though it may not now satisfy—for that the influence of Wagner is too strong—much of the music still appeals to musicians by reason of its emotional character. The rendering of the difficult work last Saturday was excellent, and Mr. Wood may be thanked most heartily for reviving it. The technical skill and extravagances of Strauss's later works may create astonishment; but the 'Faust' of Liszt seems to us to contain, if less artifice, more genuine art.

QUEEN'S HALL.—First Philharmonic Concert.

THE programme of the first Philharmonic Concert of the ninety-third season at Queen's Hall on Wednesday evening included one novelty, viz., a 'Canadian Rhapsody,' by Sir A. C. Mackenzie. As implied by the title, it is based on popular Canadian melodies. They are pleasing, and have been treated with skill, and at the same time lightness, by the composer. The attractive work—consisting of a brisk Allegro, an expressive slow movement, and a vivacious Finale—is of very moderate length. Sir A. C. Mackenzie conducted, and his work was cordially received. Signor Busoni, the pianist of the evening, played Saint-Saëns's Concerto in F admirably; but his masterly rendering of Liszt's clever, though somewhat eccentric, 'Todtentanz,' with orchestral accompaniment, created special excitement. Dr. Cowen conducted ably, and the hearty applause after a refined performance of a Haydn Symphony showed that taste for pure, simple music is not extinct.

Musical Gossip.

THE first of a series of concerts for children was given at the Steinway Hall by the Chaplin Trio and the Misses Nellie and Ruby Holland on Monday afternoon. Short pieces for piano, violin, or 'cello are to be heard at recitals which children could enjoy; as a rule, however, concert programmes are too long, and consist of music too elaborate for youthful minds. There are children of various ages, and to suit all is certainly not easy. The programme on Monday began with simple pieces, instrumental and vocal, passing on to music of a higher standard of difficulty. The scheme is an excellent one, and judging from the large audience, consisting mainly of young people, it will prove successful. Before each number of the programme Miss A. E. Keeton made a few appropriate remarks as to the form and character of the music.

THE programme of the Patron's Fund Orchestral Concert at the Royal College of Music included five new compositions. Mr. W. H. Bell's Serenade, 'Epithalamion,' is natural, healthy, also clever; in previous works his effort to avoid the beaten track was too obvious. The other numbers consisted of an excellent Fantasia, for violin and orchestra, by Mr. Thomas F. Dunhill, on Manx melodies; a bright, vigorous Suite in A by Mr. H. Balfour Gardiner, popular in character, yet without a trace of commonness; some refined settings of Heine poems by Mr. G. Molyneux Palmer; and a clever though not altogether satisfactory concert piece for organ and orchestra by Mr. Benjamin J. Dale.

AT the Subscription Concert last Monday at the Aeolian Hall, Dr. Lierhammer sang two very fine songs by Mr. Granville Bantock: 'The Unutterable,' solemn and dignified, from his 'Songs of Egypt,' and 'In the Village,' with dainty melody and an accompaniment in which Indian local colour is laid on with skilful hand. 'Die Ablösung,' by Mr. Alexis Hollander, also proved impressive, with its effective combination of the ideal and the real. Dr. Lierhammer sang these and other songs with artistic skill and feeling.

A SPECIAL feature of the violin recital given by Miss Maud MacCarthy at the Bechstein Hall on Wednesday afternoon was the excellent performance of Bach's Concerto for two violins in A minor, in which Señor Arbos, the young artist's former teacher, took part. The quick movements were rendered with all breadth and vigour, and the slow movement with beauty of tone and rare refinement.

DR. DIETZ is about to deliver three lectures at Vienna 'On European Music Drama up to Handel,' with illustrations from operas of the most eminent masters of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries—Monteverde, Cavalli, Scarlatti, Lully, &c., and also Handel. This is one of many signs that interest in music, both instrumental and vocal, before Handel and Bach is on the increase.

DR. WALFORD DAVIES's 'Everyman' will be performed for the second time in London at the second Bach Concert, Queen's Hall, April 12th, under the composer's direction; also Bach's fine church cantata 'O Ewiges Feuer.'

LAST year, in reviewing M. Jules Tiersot's interesting book, 'Hector Berlioz et la Société deson Temps,' we took exception to the author's statement that when Wagner, in a letter to Liszt (1852), spoke unfavourably of Berlioz's 'Benvenuto Cellini,' he had not had any opportunity either of seeing or even reading the work. M. Tiersot, in his 'Berlioziana' in Le Ménestrel of March 12th, returns to the charge, and adheres to his statement "de la façon la plus formelle." We, however, cannot but think that Wagner, arriving in Paris not long after the production of the opera, and during his long stay in Paris frequently meeting Berlioz, most probably had the score shown to him by the composer.

PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK.

|       |  |
|-------|--|
| SUN.  | Concert Club, 3.30, Bechstein Hall.  |
| —     | Sunday Society Concert, 3.30, Queen's Hall.  |
| —     | Sunday League, 7, Queen's Hall.  |
| MON.  | Madame Blanche Marchesi and Mr. Boris Hambourg's Recital, 3.15, St. George's Hall. |
| —     | Subscription Concert, 8.30, Aeolian Hall.  |
| TUES. | Signor Antonietti's Violin Recital, 3, Aeolian Hall.                               |
| —     | Mr. Arthur Friedheim's Pianoforte Recital, 3, St. George's Hall.                   |
| —     | London Trio, 8.30, Aeolian Hall.   |
| —     | Mr. Charles Williams's Orchestral Concert, 8.45, Queen's Hall.                     |

WED. Madame Frickehaus's Pianoforte Recital, 3, Bechstein Hall.
 — Mr. C. Clarke's Vocal Recital, 3, Eolian Hall.
 — Miss Dora Bright's Orchestral Concert, 8.45, Bechstein Hall.
 THURS. Miss Kathleen Parlow's Violin Recital, 3, Bechstein Hall.
 — Broadwood Concert, 8.30, Eolian Hall.
 SAT. Symphony Concert, 3, Queen's Hall.
 — Mr. Plunket Greene's Vocal Recital, 3, Bechstein Hall.
 — Orchestral Society Concert, 3.30, Crystal Palace.

DRAMA

THE WEEK.

STRAND.—Off the Rank: a Farce in Three Acts. By Lawrence Sterner.

MUCH has been said about the influence of Lent upon theatrical entertainments. In the present case that influence has been wholly stimulating, and the close of the last week and the beginning of the present have witnessed an outburst of novelty. Very little of this is of home growth, and none of it speaks much for the invention or the resourcefulness of our dramatists. 'Off the Rank,' the only piece of English genesis, is a three-act farce, originally produced in June last at the Gaiety Theatre, Douglas, on which Mr. Willie Edouin has laid hands, transferring it to the Strand, and exhibiting in it his quaint and comic individuality. Mr. Sterner, by whom it is, has been at little cost of imagination. Few themes can be more common upon the stage than the regrets and anxieties of men who after a debauch fail to grasp what iniquities they may have committed in their moments of drunkenness. This old theme is treated once more, and proves in the hands of Mr. Edouin infinitely diverting. To the talent of the actor, and nowise to that of the dramatist, is attributable the amusement that is caused. The farce is virtually a one-part play, and might, with no strong abuse of language, be called a monologue. As such it errs principally in excess of length. No actor, whatever his talent and how great soever the concession allowed him in regard to change of costume, can keep an audience amused for too long a period. The course of laughter which Mr. Edouin begets is accordingly checked at times by a yawn.

HAYMARKET.—Everybody's Secret: a Comedy in Three Acts. Adapted from 'Le Secret de Polichinelle' of Pierre Wolff by R. Marshall and L. N. Parker.

VERY far from a good specimen of adaptation is 'Everybody's Secret,' which now holds possession of the Haymarket. An initial difficulty which they have been unable to surmount fronted Capt. Marshall and Mr. Parker. In order to get rid of or evade it they have greatly altered the piece, which, except in the second act, shows comparatively few traces of the original. The result of their efforts has been to render goody-goody what at the outset erred in respect of over-sentimentality. In 'Le Secret de Polichinelle' a father and mother, a charming couple, having arranged a suitable match for their only son, discover that he lives with a mistress by whom he has a son, and from whom he declines to part. In face of this resolution each assumes an attitude of the utmost sternness. Each, however, unknown to the other, visits the bachelor establishment, and is conquered by the gentleness and refinement of the mistress and the winning ways of the child. In the end they are both reconciled to an arrangement which is duly sanctioned by law, and the mystery of these stolen visits is the "secret de Polichinelle." But when, as in the Haymarket piece, for an illicit relation is substituted a secret marriage, the raison d'être of the piece disappears. It is true that the heroine of 'Everybody's Secret' is a florist, and that she has allowed her marriage to be deferred until the birth, immediately to be expected, of a child renders the nuptials imperative. There is, however, no reason for delay in the parental recognition of the union, even though the father is the recipient of a colonial baronetcy and the mother third in descent from an Irish peer. Acted as it is by Mr. Cyril Maude, Miss Carlotta Addison, Mr. Edmund Maurice, and Miss Jessie Bateman, the English piece retains a measure of the tenderness of the original. But its pathos is cloying, and its story, for the reason we have stated, unconvincing. We prefer Capt. Marshall on his own ground, and the facile pen of Mr. Parker fails to reconcile us to the alterations he has effected.

KING'S HALL, COVENT GARDEN.—Performances of the Incorporated Stage Society: The Three Daughters of M. Dupont: a Comedy in Four Acts. Adapted from Brieux by St. John Hankin.

THE latest experiment of the Incorporated Stage Society consists in the presentation in an English rendering of 'Les Trois Filles de M. Dupont' of M. Eugène Brieux, first produced on November 8th, 1897, at the Gymnase. As much unsuited to its original home as to an average English public is this work, a grave and, as we believe, solitary contribution of its author to the comédie rosse. Though aimed directly at the institution of marriage as it is understood in France, and at the greed and dishonesty of the bourgeoisie, the work, the title of which promises an entertainment of a widely different nature, is, in fact, a satire on humanity in general. As it is not likely to be seen again in London, in which, indeed, it ought scarcely to have been presented, there is no temptation to deal with the story. It is devoid of humour and of literary style, but is crude enough for a parade of Collé, invented for the delectation of the Regent Orleans; it has much acute and savage observation; it has a scene in the third act of remarkable power, and one in the fourth of funereal sadness. Several parts were well played, and that of the heroine, the youngest of Dupont's three daughters, furnished Miss Ethel Irving with a brilliant opportunity on which she seized. Except for a conventional and superfluous fall, her performance was a triumph.

SHAKSPEAREANA.

DURING the last few years no class of books has been more in demand than those which fall within the designation of Shakspeareana. There are in America at least two or three collectors who are making almost frantic attempts to get ahead of one another in purchasing books which have any sort of bearing on the life and times of the great dramatist. No expense is spared by either of these enterprising collectors, and their yearly account with the cable companies must reach a very considerable sum—more, indeed, than many wealthy Englishmen spend on books alone. It would be interesting to know which of these collectors has been successful in obtaining the recently discovered unique copy of the first edition of 'Titus Andronicus,' and if it is true that he has had to pay something like 4,000*l.* for the privilege of possessing the play. He has, at all events, the certain knowledge that he has out-distanced his rivals, and to a collector that reflection means a very great deal: it is the crowning point of a collector's career.

A very large number of the Shakspeareana have only a remote connexion with Shakspeare or his times. There are, on the other hand, very many books which, without any undue strain on the imagination, fall within this category. It would be difficult to compile a complete bibliography of Shakspeare; but within the last few years some of the second-hand booksellers of London and elsewhere have made some important contributions to such a work, and none has been more enterprising than Mr. W. M. Voynich, whose new catalogue enumerates over sixty such books. These, with those described in previous catalogues—nearly every one of which has been, I believe, sold—would alone constitute a formidable bibliography, whilst the bibliographical notes appended to each entry would render any further research unnecessary on the part of one who undertook a new bibliography of Shakspeare. Mr. Voynich's annotations are made with such obvious care that their accuracy almost goes without saying. He has discovered so many books of a distinctly interesting Shakspearean character that one can only wonder whether there yet remain any others to be found. The new catalogue contains many rarities which are of great bibliographical interest, quite apart from any real or supposed connexion with Shakspeare. There are, for instance, not only a copy of the first Cicero printed in Spain—it is from the first Alcala press, 1520, and was apparently unknown to Brunet, Salva, and others—but three early English editions of the 'Three Bookes of Duties,' translated by N. Grimald: the two Tottell editions of 1558 and 1583, and the excessively rare one from Thomas Este's press, circa 1600. There are two works by Dr. John Dee, from whom Shakspeare is said to have taken his character of Prospero; one of these, 'Monas Hieroglyphica,' 1564, was apparently at one time in the British Museum, the stamp of which it bears, and was probably sold as a duplicate. Neither is in the Birmingham Shakspeare Memorial Library. There is also a very large copy of the 'Gesta Romanorum,' 1493 (a collection of tales and romances to which Shakspeare was greatly indebted), from the Strassburg press of the printer of the 1483 Jordanus de Quedlinburg; this work is dealt with very fully by Douce in his 'Illustrations of Shakspeare,' and by Warton (not "Walton," as Mr. Voynich has it) in the 'History of English Poetry.'

One would hardly have associated an early eighteenth-century Newcastle magazine with Shakspeare, and yet The Newcastle General Magazine, 1748-53, contains several articles in connexion with the dramatist; it was doubtless one of the crowd of magazines which the success of Cave's Gentleman's Magazine called into existence, although, curiously enough, The Gentleman's has not yet attained to the distinction of being included in any bookseller's "Shakspeareana," in spite of the fact that in its first fifty-six volumes there are ninety-nine essays on him and his works! Of Shakspeare proper there are only two plays mentioned in Mr. Voynich's new catalogue: a copy of the third quarto edition of 'Julius Cæsar,' 1691, and one of the last quarto edition of 'King Henry IV., Part I.,' 1700, or the first with Bettorton's alterations.

There are many other very interesting Shakspeareana here described at length, a few of which, however, seem to be out of place. For instance, the fact that Sir William Temple "speaks in two places about Shakspeare" in his 'Miscellanea,' 1701 (a scarce edition, by the way), hardly justifies the book being ranged among the "Shakspeareana"; the same may be said of Edward Young's 'Love of Fame,' 1728, and also of Obadiah Walker's 'Of Education, especially for Young Gentlemen,' 1673, of which there is no copy of this first edition in the British Museum. These little idiosyncrasies, however, do not detract from the value and interest of the catalogue.

The Shakspeareana in Messrs. J. & J. Leighton's admirable 'Catalogue of Books, Manuscripts, &c.' (Part VII.), extend to 160 numbers, and comprise twenty-nine very welcome facsimiles of title and other pages. The collection as a whole is of very high literary and bibliographical interest. Of the four folio editions of Shakspeare here offered, by far the most important is that of the second issue, 1632, with the excessively rare "Richard Hawkins" title; this is the copy which was at Sotheby's in December, 1903, and the price asked, 350*l.*, is surprisingly low, since the only other example with this title sold at auction in recent years produced 850*l.* Messrs. Leighton's copy is inscribed "Charles Wylde, 1662, cost 24*s.*," on the verso of the leaf with Ben Jonson's verses. The two copies of the Fourth Folio, 1685, have totally distinct title-pages, and these differences are well set out in the two entries.

The Shakspeareana proper range from Brandt's 'Stultifera Navis.....The Ship of Fools,' 1570, to a 'Play Bill of an Amateur Performance in aid of the Fund for the Endowment of a Perpetual Curatorship of Shakspeare's House,' 1848, in which Dickens was the moving spirit. It will be seen, therefore, that Messrs. Leighton put a wide interpretation on the word "Shakspeareana." Dugdale's 'Antiquities of Warwickshire,' 1656, is important in this way, since nearly ten pages are devoted to Stratford-on-Avon; the epitaphs of Shakspeare and his connexions are here transcribed and the monument engraved. The two copies of Erasmus, 'The Praise of Folie,' issued by T. Berthelet in 1549, show some curious if small variations, which prove, what is not generally known, that there were two issues of the same date and by the same printer. The book is included in Capell's 'Shakspeareana'; there are two copies in the British Museum, but the catalogue does not indicate whether they are of the different issues or of the same. There are three editions of Sir Thomas Elyot's 'Image of Governance,' 1540-1, 1549, and 1556; and the Towneley copy of Gascoigne's 'Whole Woorkes,' 1587, including the 'Comedie called Supposes,' part of the plot and of the phraseology of which Shakspeare transferred into 'The Taming of the Shrew.' Perhaps the most interesting number of all is the first complete edition of Chapman's version of the Iliad and the Odyssey, printed for N. Butter, 1613-16, which, apart from its Shakspearean interest, formerly belonged to Charles II., with his cipher (interlaced C's surmounted by a crown between two palm branches); it offers certain bibliographical points which suggest that it may be a unique copy, specially made up for the royal library. The copy of Ben Jonson's 'Workes,' 1640, also belonged to Charles II.

There is an unusually fine copy of the very rare Copland edition (1553) of Raoul le Fevre's 'The Recuile of the Histories of Troie,' so well known by name from the fact that it was translated by Caxton, and first printed by him circa 1474; the 1617 edition is the only one in the Capell collection, and Messrs. Leighton's is the only one which has appeared in the market for years. Both the 'Mirrour for Magistrates,' 1616 (the only complete edition), and Mon-tagne's 'Essayes,' 1613, are undeniably Shakspeareana, and traces of the former may be noticed in several of Shakspeare's plays. The works of Bacon, Spenser, and Drayton are also to be found here; and, on the whole, it will be admitted that Messrs. Leighton have contrived to offer their customers a very varied and interesting collection.

W. ROBERTS.

Dramatic Gossip.

'WHEN THE WIFE'S AWAY,' a farce by Judge Parry and Mr. Frederick Mouillot, has been produced at the Theatre Royal, Dublin, with Mrs. Mouillot as the heroine. It is partly concerned with the humours and flirtations of a hydropathic establishment.

'KING LEAR' and 'The Comedy of Errors' have been included in the Benson performances during the present week at the Coronet.

'EINE PALAST-REVOLUTION,' a four-act farce of Herr Richard Showronnek, given on Monday at the Great Queen Street Theatre, was well played all round, and exhibited Fräulein Camilla Dalberg to great advantage.

ON Monday next Herren Hans Andresen and Max Behrend will appear at the Royalty for their benefit in 'Zwei Wappen,' a farcical comedy by Blumenthal and Kadelburg, and a one-act piece called 'Abu Said.' This will be the farewell performance of Herr Behrend, who has accepted the directorship of the Municipal Theatre in Mayence.

AFTER the conclusion of her engagement with Mr. Charles Frohman, Miss Lena Ashwell will be associated with Mr. William Greet in the management of a West-End theatre, at which she proposes to open in a new play by Mr. C. M. S. McLellan, holding in reserve Mr. Michael Morton's adaptation of 'Les Oiseaux de Passage' of M. Maurice Donnay.

NEGOTIATIONS are pending between Mr. Forbes Robertson and Mr. Frederick Harrison for the occupation by the former of the Haymarket when the partnership of Messrs. Harrison and Maude is finally dissolved.

ON Monday 'Mr. Hopkinson' was transferred, with its original cast, from the Avenue to Wyndham's Theatre, where it seems likely to outlast the season.

'A MAN'S SHADOW' will be revived by Mr. Tree at His Majesty's on Saturday next. Mr. Tree is also negotiating with Mr. Alexander for 'Les Affaires sont les Affaires,' in an adaptation of which by Mr. Sydney Grundy he hopes to appear with his daughter.

MISS TITA BRAND has taken the Shaftesbury, at which house she will appear on April 10th as Desdemona to the Othello of Mr. Hubert Carter. 'Renaissance,' a translation from the German, is on her list of plays to be produced.

ABOUT the third week in June the appearance of Madame Bernhardt may be expected at the Coronet Theatre.

'THE DRYAD,' by Mr. Justin Huntly McCarthy, has been produced for copyright purposes at the Theatre Royal, Margate.

'THE PRODIGAL SON' of Mr. Hall Caine will be seen at Drury Lane in September.

DEPARTING from its traditions, the Ambigu Comique has produced 'La Belle Marseillaise,' a play of M. Pierre Berton in four acts and five tableaux, dealing with plots to assassinate Napoleon Bonaparte, who is one of the characters.

GABRIEL D'ANNUNZIO, a son of the Italian dramatist, will make his first appearance as an actor at Leghorn in a new tragedy of his father.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.—P. W. S.—C. E. M.—W. A. J. A.—A. C. M. & Co.—received.
L. C.—Next week.
A. W. P.—Too late.
No notice can be taken of anonymous communications.

MESSRS. BELL'S NEW BOOKS.

MINIATURE ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE
POST FREE ON APPLICATION.

NOW READY, COMPLETE.

In 5 vols. 21*s.* net each; or in half-morocco,
31*s.* 6*d.* net each.

BRYAN'S DICTIONARY OF PAINTERS AND ENGRAVERS.

A New Edition, Revised and Enlarged under the supervision of

G. C. WILLIAMSON, Litt.D.,

Assisted by a Staff of Specialists.

With 500 Illustrations, including 40 Photogravures.

Illustrated Prospectus on application.

In this Edition upwards of 1,400 New Biographies have been added, and nearly 6,000 Corrections made in other Articles. In addition, some 250 Lives have been partly rewritten.

"No one interested in the Fine Arts can afford to be without this comprehensive and indispensable dictionary."—Pall Mall Gazette.

"Will no doubt take rank among the standard publications of the twentieth century."—Studio.

"The new Bryan reflects the greatest credit on the editor and publishers. The book, long since recognized as a classic, will be more than ever indispensable."—Magazine of Art.

NOW READY, COMPLETE.

A CHEAPER EDITION OF WHEATLEY'S PEPYS.

The DIARY of SAMUEL PEPYS,

M.A. F.R.S. Transcribed from the Shorthand MS. in the Pepysian Library, Magdalene College, Cambridge, by the Rev. MYNORS BRIGHT, M.A. With LORD BRAYBROOK'S Notes. Edited, with Additions, by HENRY B. WHEATLEY, F.S.A. In 8 vols. post 8vo, 5*s.* net each.

** This reprint contains the whole of the text of the Diary, and the Notes and Index, as given in the ten-volume edition, the volume entitled 'Pepysiana' only being omitted.

"Mr. Wheatley has easily distanced all previous editors, both in the completeness of his matter and his annotations, and there is little doubt that this new classic edition of a classic will be a great success."—Athenæum.

Pott 8vo, illustrated, cloth, 1*s.* net each; or in limp leather, with Photogravure Frontispiece, 2*s.* net each.

BROWNING. By Sir Frank T. MARZIALS, C.B.

DICKENS. By W. Teignmouth Shore.

JOHNSON. By John Dennis.

[Miniature Series of Great Writers.]

THE YORK LIBRARY.

A NEW SERIES OF REPRINTS ON THIN PAPER.
Small 8vo, 2*s.* net in cloth, and 3*s.* net in leather.

NEW VOLUMES.

CERVANTES' DON QUIXOTE.

Motteux's Translation, Revised. With Lockhart's Life and Notes. 2 vols.

EMERSON'S WORKS. Edited and

Collated by GEORGE SAMPSON. Vol. IV. Containing Miscellaneous Pieces.

COLERIDGE'S TABLE TALK and

OMNIANA. Arranged and Edited by T. ASHE, B.A.

DRAPER'S HISTORY of the IN-

TELLECTUAL DEVELOPMENT of EUROPE. 2 vols.

The THOUGHTS of MARCUS

AURELIUS ANTONINUS. Translated by GEORGE LONG, M.A. With an Essay on Marcus Aurelius by MATTHEW ARNOLD.

Others to follow.

London: GEORGE BELL & SONS,
Portugal Street, Lincoln's Inn, W.C.

FROM DUCKWORTH &amp; CO.'S LIST.

THE NOVEL OF THE DAY, AT ALL LIBRARIES, BOOKSELLERS', AND BOOKSTALLS.

NEW BOOK BY ELINOR GLYN,

AUTHOR OF 'THE VISITS OF ELIZABETH.'

"SHE IS AT THIS MOMENT OUR LEADING NOVELIST OF MODERN MANNERS."—SPHERE.

THE VICISSITUDES
OF EVANGELINE.

Crown 8vo, with Coloured Frontispiece, 6s.

"The author, an impressionist artist of remarkable ability, gives us distinct characters in dexterous touches, with capital scenes from the comedy of life. Very charming."—WORLD.

"Mrs. Elinor Glyn set all society laughing. The clever, satiric pages will find thousands of readers. We have all the portrait painting, cynicism, and humour that we expect, sprinkled through the pages."

DAILY EXPRESS.

BOOKS AND THINGS.

A Volume of Essays. By G. S. STREET. Crown 8vo, 6s.

"Most delightful reading. Full of the kindly cynicism and whimsical philosophy one has grown to expect from Mr. Street's diamond-pointed pen."—WORLD.

GOSSIP.

By BENJAMIN SWIFT, Author of 'In Piccadilly,' 'Life's Questionings,' &amp;c. Crown 8vo, 6s.

"Very characteristic of the author's undoubted talent."—SPEAKER.

"Full of 'brains' and of skilful work."—TO-DAY.

"A MAGNIFICENT BOOK," SAYS THE WORLD OF PROGRESS.

By R. B. CUNNINGHAME-GRAHAM. Crown 8vo, 6s.

"Rich in observation. Briefly, he is in this volume a master of the sublime, the showy, the pathetic, the picturesque."—WORLD.

THE PURPLE LAND.

By W. H. HUDSON, Author of 'Green Mansions.' SECOND IMPRESSION NOW READY. Crown 8vo, 6s.

"This enchanting romance. Extraordinary charm. A more romantic recital of adventure it would be difficult to imagine.....Has no competitors, and need fear no rivals."—SPECTATOR.

THE HOUSE OF BARNKIRK.

By AMY McLAREN, Author of 'From a Davos Balcony.' Crown 8vo, 6s. [Shortly.]

THE DISCIPLE'S WIFE.

By VINCENT BROWN, Author of 'A MAGDALEN'S HUSBAND.' Crown 8vo, 6s. [Shortly.]

THE GREY BRETHREN.

By MICHAEL FAIRLESS, Author of 'THE ROADMENDER.' UNIFORM WITH 'THE ROADMENDER.' Cloth, 2s. 6d. net; leather, 3s. 6d. net. [Just out.]

VELAZQUEZ.

By AUGUSTE BRÉAL, Author of 'Rembrandt.' With 45 Illustrations. Cloth, 2s. net; leather, 2s. 6d. net. (In the "Popular Library of Art.") [Immediately.]

Ask your Bookseller to show you all the Volumes issued in

DUCKWORTH'S POPULAR LIBRARY OF ART.

Cloth, 2s. net; leather, 2s. 6d. net.

|                        |           |               |
|------------------------|-----------|---------------|
| REMBRANDT.             | WATTS.    | GAINSBOROUGH. |
| DURER.                 | LEONARDO. | FRED. WALKER. |
| ROSSETTI.              | MILLET.   | BOTTICELLI.   |
| FRENCH IMPRESSIONISTS. |           |               |

AUGUSTE RODIN.

By CAMILLE MAUCLAIR, Author of 'The Great French Painters,' 'French Impressionists.' With 40 Illustrations, Photogravure Frontispiece. Crown 4to, 10s. 6d. net.

"The most complete and authoritative account. M. Maclair has the advantage of being an intimate friend.....Many photographs of unusual excellence."—DAILY CHRONICLE.

"M. Rodin is now on one of his visits to London, and the public interest in the Michael Angelo of our time is more than ordinarily acute. We could have no better guide than M. Maclair.....giving us this illuminating study of a genius."—DAILY NEWS.

IDEALS AND REALITIES IN RUSSIAN
LITERATURE.

By PRINCE KROPOTKIN. Demy 8vo, 7s. 6d. net.

[Shortly.]

THE ITALIAN POETS SINCE DANTE.

By WILLIAM EVERETT. Crown 8vo, 5s. net.

[Immediately.]

A study of the language and poetry of Italy, accompanied by a series of verse translations.

CRITICAL STUDIES AND FRAGMENTS.

By the late S. ARTHUR STRONG. With Memoir by LORD BALCARRES. Royal 8vo, with 22 Illustrations, 16s. net.

[In the press.]

METAPSYCHICAL PHENOMENA.

By Dr. JOSEPH MAXWELL. With Prefaces by Sir OLIVER LODGE and Prof. CH. RICHTER. Large crown 8vo, 10s. net.

[In the press.]

This book is a most important contribution to the scientific and methodical study of the phenomena variously known as "spiritistic," "occult," or, to use the term now suggested by M. Richter, "metapsychical."

ALBERT DÜRER.

By T. STURGE MOORE. With 4 Copperplates and 50 Half-Tone Engravings. Pott 4to, 7s. 6d. net.

VERROCCHIO.

By MAUD CRUTTWELL. 48 Illustrations. Pott 4to, 7s. 6d. net.

MEDIÆVAL ART, A.D. 312-1350.

By W. R. LETHABY. With 60 Plates and many Original Drawings by the Author. Post 8vo, 8s. 6d. net.

GIOTTO.

By BASIL DE SELINCOURT. 45 Illustrations. Pott 4to, 7s. 6d. net.

[This month.]

PISANELLO.

By G. F. HILL. 74 Illustrations. Pott 4to, 7s. 6d. net.

[Next month]

"LEARNED, CHATTY, USEFUL."—Athenæum.

"THAT DELIGHTFUL REPOSITORY OF FORGOTTEN LORE, 'NOTES AND QUERIES.'"

Edinburgh Review, October, 1880.

Every Saturday, of any Bookseller or Newsagent in England, price 4d.; or free by post to the Continent, 4½d.

NOTES AND QUERIES:

A MEDIUM OF INTERCOMMUNICATION FOR LITERARY MEN AND GENERAL READERS.

* * * Subscription, 10s. 3d. for Six Months; 20s. 6d. for Twelve Months, including postage.

The NINTH SERIES of NOTES AND QUERIES, complete in 12 vols. (JANUARY, 1898, to DECEMBER, 1903), price 10s. 6d. each Volume, contains, in addition to a great variety of similar Notes and Replies, Articles of Interest on the following Subjects.

FIRST SELECTION.

AMERICANA.

President J. Adams's Biography—Sarah Flower Adams and Mrs. Beecher Stowe—The Alabama and Lord John Russell—Alewife, an American Fish—Discovery of America—Study of Dante in America—Genealogical Research in America—England and Scotland reproduced in America—America v. United States—Raleigh in America—British Suzerainty in South America—Losses in American Civil War—Value of American Diplomas and Degrees—American Orthography.

BIBLIOGRAPHY and LITERARY HISTORY.

Addison and Tennyson—Harrison Ainsworth—"Anne of Swansea," her Works—Anonym: Autonym—"Abbey of Kilkhampton"—"Butterfly's Ball and the Grasshopper's Feast"—"The Coming K"—"History of the Rod"—Junius's Letters—"Nova Solyma"—"Twelve Profits of Tribulation"—Matthew Arnold—Arnold of Rugby—H. S. Ashbee—Poet Laureate's Birthplace—Authors' Mistakes—Francis Bacon, his Mistakes in Classical Names—Philip James Bailey—Barclay's "Argenis"—Bibliography of the Bicycle—History of Bookselling and Publishing—Book-Sale Catalogues—Riming Warnings to Book-Borrowers—Books and Bookmen—E. B. and Robert Browning—Michael Bruce and Logan—Bunyan and the "Pilgrim's Progress"—Peculiar Words in Burns—Burton's "Anatomy"—Ode on Byron's Death.

BIOGRAPHY.

Bridget Abbot—Two George Abbots, contemporary M.P.s—Adam the Carthusian and Adam the Scot—Elizabeth Alkin, "Parliament Joan"—Annie of Tharau—General Benedict Arnold—Dr. Barry, Female Army Doctor—Beaconsfield's Birthplace—Cardinal Beaton's Reputed Marriage—Admiral Bligh—Bonaparte's Attempted Invasion of England—John Bond, two Puritan Divines—Cæsar Borgia's Parentage—Cobham Brewer's Monument—Robert Bruce's Heart.

ECCLESIASTICAL MATTERS.

Collect for Advent Sunday—Alfriston Registers—Woodcarvings at Allhallows the Great, Upper Thames Street—Cushions on the Altar—Anchorites and Low Side Windows—Angels, their Traditional Representation—Martyr Bishop of Armagh—Christian Basilicas—Bell Inscriptions—Bellingers' Rimes—"Breeches," "Treacle," "Vinegar," and "Wicked" Bibles—Bishops' Signatures.

FOLK-LORE and POPULAR ANTIQUITIES.

Acervation, the Custom—Animals in People's Insides—Animals Tried and Sentenced—Apple Blossoms in Coffins—Wassailing the Apple Tree—White Gloves at Assizes—Cutting Baby's Nails—Baptismal and Marriage Superstitions—Bees—Bird of the Soufrière—Bluebeard, the Original—Borrowing Days—Building Customs.

GENEALOGY and HERALDRY.

Acts of the Apostles as a Christian Name—Agnes a Fateful Name—Algernon, its Origin—Alias in Family Names—Ancestors Defined—Soldier Ancestors—Andrews Family of Cornwall—Angier or Aungier Family—Anglo-Saxon Heraldry—Arbuthnott Family—Archer Family—Armigerous Families—Arms of Continental Cities, and of Boroughs and Dioceses—Foreign Arms in England—"Bar sinister"—Arms of Ulster in Baronet's Shield—Bear and Ragged Staff—Bibliography of Heraldry—Bulls in Coats of Arms—Borough English Succession—Bristow Family.

HISTORY: ENGLISH, IRISH, and SCOTTISH.

Abbot of Westminster's Plot, 1399—Long Administrations—South African War, Newspaper Correspondents Killed and Wounded—King Alfred, the Truth-teller and England's Darling—Lines on Queen Anne—Queues worn in the Army—Chain-mail in the Army—King Arthur's Crown—The Indian Mutiny and the Athenæum—Duchy of Berwick—Boadicea or Boudicca—Anne Boleyn's Execution—Battle of the Boyne—Britain as "Queen of Isles" and "Empress of the Main"—British Academy, its Foundation Members.

PHILOLOGY and GRAMMAR.

Short a v. Italian a—A or an before h sounded—Accent and Etymology—Accorder, its Derivation—Extraordinary Adjectives—Affection and Connexion, their False Forms—African Names, their Pronunciation and Derivation—Alamains, its Meaning—"Alright" for "All right"—Erroneous use of "And which"—Anglo-Hebrew Slang—Anglo-Saxon Speech—Anyone: Everyone—Appendicitis—Peculiar Use of "Arrived"—Barracked, Colonial Slang—Bask Language—Bayard, Horse-name—Bezique—Bird-eyed—Bletheramskite—Bonnet-laird: Cock-laird—Bridewain, its Meaning—Bridge, the Card Game, its Derivation.

PROVERBS and QUOTATIONS.

South Africa, "grave of great reputations"—"Devil walking through Athlone"—"A far cry to Loch Awe"—"All Cooper's ducks with me"—"All roads lead to Rome"—"Babies in the eyes"—"Save one's bacon"—"Baff week"—"Be the day weary"—"Beatific vision"—"Better to have loved and lost"—"Between the devil and the deep sea"—"Blood is thicker than water"—"Box Harry"—"Bristol look"—"Broaching the Admiral."

TOPOGRAPHY.

Achill Island, its History—"Gibraltar and Malta" at Albert Gate—Aldersgate, its Name—Aldgate and Whitechapel—Amen Court, its Name—Argh as Termination—Arundel and Ash, Place-names—Meaning of "Bailey"—Ball's Pond Road—Barras, Bayswater, Beaulieu, and Bibury as Place-names—Changes in Bream's Buildings.

TWELFTH EDITION JUST OUT, price Sixpence, cloth.

REMARKABLE COMETS:*A Brief Survey of the most interesting Facts in the History of Cometary Astronomy.

By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON &amp; CO., LIMITED, St. Dunstan's House, Fetter Lane, E.C.

THIRD EDITION, REVISED AND ENLARGED.

THE PENNY CHRONOLOGY:*A Series of Important Dates in the History of the World from the Reign of David to the Present Time.

By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON &amp; CO., LIMITED, St. Dunstan's House, Fetter Lane, E.C.

SECOND EDITION, fcap. 8vo, price Fourpence.

NEW TESTAMENT CHRONOLOGY:*The Principal Events Recorded in the New Testament, Arranged under their Probable Respective Dates.

By WILLIAM THYNNE LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.,

Associate of King's College, London; Lay Reader in the Diocese of Rochester.

Author of 'Celestial Motions,' 'Remarkable Comets,' 'Remarkable Eclipses,' 'Astronomy for the Young,' &amp;c.

London: SAMUEL BAGSTER &amp; SONS, LIMITED, 15, Paternoster Row.

AUTHORIZED TO BE USED BY BRITISH SUBJECTS.*THE NATIONAL FLAG,

BEING

THE UNION JACK.

COPIES OF

NOTES AND QUERIES

FOR JUNE 30, 1900,

Can still be had, containing an account of the Flag, with Coloured Illustration according to scale.

JOHN C. FRANCIS, Notes and Queries Office, Bream's Buildings, E.C.CLIFFORD'S INN.

For view of CLIFFORD'S INN, taken in 1892, see

NOTES AND QUERIES, April 2, 1892.

The same Number also contains Sketches of the ROLLS CHAPEL, OLD SERJEANTS' INN, the GATEWAY, LINCOLN'S INN, &amp;c.

Price 4½d., free by post, of

JOHN C. FRANCIS, Notes and Queries Office, Bream's Buildings, E.C.

NOW READY.

Price 10s. 6d. net.

THE

NINTH SERIES

GENERAL INDEX

OF

NOTES AND QUERIES.

With Introduction by

JOSEPH KNIGHT, F.S.A.

This Index is double the size of previous ones, as it contains, in addition to the usual Index of Subjects, the Names and Pseudonyms of Writers, with a List of their Contributions. The number of constant Contributors exceeds eleven hundred. The Publisher reserves the right of increasing the price of the volume at any time. The number printed is limited, and the type has been distributed.

Free by post, 10s. 11d.

JOHN C. FRANCIS, Notes and Queries Office,
Bream's Buildings, E.C.NATIONAL PROVIDENT
INSTITUTION

Etab.]

[1835.

FOR MUTUAL LIFE ASSURANCE.

|                          |     |     |             |
|--------------------------|-----|-----|-------------|
| Accumulated Fund over    | ... | ... | £3,000,000  |
| Paid in Claims more than | ... | ... | £12,400,000 |

PROFITS.

These are divided every five years solely amongst the Assured. At the 1902 Division a Cash Profit of £761,602 was apportioned amongst the members, being considerably more than one-third of the amount paid in premiums during the previous five years.

ENDOWMENT-ASSURANCE

Policies are issued, combining Life Assurance at minimum cost with provision for old age, and are singularly advantageous.

L. F. HOVIL,

Actuary and Secretary.

48, Gracechurch Street, London, E.C.

Applications for Agencies invited.

ACCIDENTS OF ALL KINDS,*EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY.*ACCIDENT AND DISEASE

(SMALL POX, SCARLET FEVER, TYPHOID, DIPHTHERIA, APPENDICITIS, &amp;c.)

BURGLARY AND FIDELITY INSURANCE.*RAILWAY PASSENGERS' ASSURANCE CO.

Established 1849.

CLAIMS PAID £4,800,000

64, CORNHILL, LONDON.

A. VIAN, Secretary.

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

The best remedy for
ACIDITY of the STOMACH, HEADACHE, HEARTBURN,
GOUT,

And INDIGESTION.
And Safest Aperient for Delicate Constitutions,
Ladies, Children, and Infants.

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

SMITH, ELDER &amp; CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

MRS. HUMPHRY WARD'S NEW NOVEL.

SECOND IMPRESSION. With Illustrations by ALBERT STERNER. Crown 8vo, 6s.

THE MARRIAGE OF

CHRISTIAN WORLD.—"Brilliant and fascinating from beginning to end."

WILLIAM ASHE.

DAILY NEWS.—"This is probably the best book which Mrs. Humphry Ward has yet produced. ....Lady Kitty is a real human being."

By Mrs. HUMPHRY WARD,

AUTHOR OF 'ROBERT ELSMERE,' 'MARCELLA,' 'LADY ROSE'S DAUGHTER,' &amp;c.

PALL MALL GAZETTE.—"A superb book, full of colour and stimulus, noble in its elevation, sweeping in its current of narrative, vibrating with all that the heart cares for, an achievement possible only to the resource and concentration of the most brilliant powers."

WORLD.—"Mrs. Humphry Ward has done no finer work.....It is an extraordinary feat to have made the persons in this transposed episode from the human comedy so living, real, vivid."

ACADEMY.—"The story is one of the best that Mrs. Humphry Ward has written.....Her study of the girl is acute and in every way excellent. She has laid bare the feminine mind with a precision that is almost scientific."

TIMES.—"Mrs. Ward's latest novel is of unfailing interest. To begin it is to be forced to continue it to the end.....She is a story-teller to the core, with an interest in life such as few novelists have surpassed, an outlook upon it which extends very far, and—what is, perhaps, her dearest possession—a very penetrating knowledge of and sympathy with young men."

READY MARCH 22.

With 20 Full-Page Illustrations, demy 8vo, 12s. 6d. net.

The STORY of an INDIAN UPLAND. By F. B. BRADLEY-BIRT, F.R.G.S. I.C.S. With an Introduction by the Hon. H. H. RISLEY, C.S.I. C.I.E., Home Secretary to the Government of India.

* * This book attempts to strike the happy mean between the Blue-book and the novel, giving a picture of the real India which both so often disguise. It deals brightly with the history of an out-of-the-way district—a fascinating land of jungle and mystery—and gives a picturesque account of the many races that have peopled it from the earliest times, through Hindu and Mussulman supremacy down to its final subjugation by the British.

READY MARCH 28.

With a Portrait Frontispiece, small demy 8vo, 10s. 6d. net.

TRACKS of a ROLLING STONE. By the Hon. HENRY J. COKE, Author of 'A Ride over the Rocky Mountains,' 'Creeds of the Day,' &c.

* * The Hon. Henry Coke has gathered together many experiences of a varied and interesting career. There can hardly be another who was kissed as a child by Queen Adelaide, served in the Chinese War of 1840, explored the prairies when herds of buffalo still roamed there, and was welcomed as a guest of the Emperor Napoleon to the revelries of Compiègne.

SPRING in a SHROPSHIRE ABBEY. By Lady CATHERINE MILNES GASKELL, Author of 'The New Cinderella' and 'Old Shropshire Life.' With 16 Full-Page Illustrations. Small demy 8vo, 9s. net. [Shortly.]

* * Grouping her facts and reflections under the heading of the months, the author presents the history of the ancient house and its possessors as a vivid background to the march of the seasons and the living interests of daily life.

PROBLEMS in MANŒUVRE TACTICS, with Solutions, for Officers of all Arms. By Major HOPPENSTEDT, Instructor at the War School, Potsdam. Translated and Adapted by Major J. H. V. CROWE, R.A. p.s.c., Instructor at the Royal Military Academy. With Maps. Small demy 8vo, 6s. net. [Shortly.]

A VAGRANT ENGLISHWOMAN.

By CATHERINE I. DODD.

Crown 8vo, 6s.

[On March 22.]

* * Miss Catherine Dodd, whose educational interests have led her to know German life from within, depicts with clear but sympathetic touch many scenes of life, whether in a German university town or further afield, as it appears to a cultivated Englishwoman living in close intimacy with the professional and student classes.

PETER'S MOTHER.

By Mrs. HENRY DE LA PASTURE,

Author of 'Deborah of Tod's,' 'Cornelius,' &amp;c. Crown 8vo, 6s.

FOURTH IMPRESSION IN THE PRESS.

MANCHESTER GUARDIAN.—"The success of the story—and of its success there can be no doubt—is due to the writer's knowledge of the human heart, to her imaginative sympathy, to her sense of the tears and laughter that lie in human things."

TO LHASSA AT LAST. By Powell Millington, Author of 'In Cantonments,' 'In and Beyond Cantonments,' &c. With a Frontispiece. Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d. net.

SECOND EDITION NOW READY.

SPECTATOR.—"Major Millington has accomplished a difficult task with much success.....He has aimed at producing a light-hearted, slangy chronicle of the road. His jokes are nearly always good, and they are very numerous."

TRUTH.—"Written with a delightful lightness and brightness."

NEW AND CHEAPER EDITIONS OF TWO POPULAR BOOKS.

SHORTLY, crown 8vo, 3s. 6d. each.

The TRAGEDY of the "KOROSKO." By A. CONAN DOYLE. With 40 Full-Page Illustrations.

DAILY NEWS.—"A fine story, the interest of which arrests the reader's attention at the start and holds it to the close."

The GREEN FLAG, and other Stories of War and Sport. By A. CONAN DOYLE. With a Frontispiece.

DAILY TELEGRAPH.—"The battle picture is perfect of its kind. Altogether the volume is admirable."

JULIA. Second Impression.

By KATHARINE TYNAN. Crown 8vo, 6s.

SPECTATOR.—"A most delightful little story. The character of old Mrs. O'Kavanagh is vividly drawn, and most readers will envy the hero his intimate acquaintance with her. ....The love story is prettily given, but the real charm of the book lies in its portraiture and its Irish atmosphere."

THE MARQUIS'S EYE.

By G. F. BRADBY,

Author of 'Joshua Newings; or, the Love Bacillus.'

Crown 8vo, 6s.

[In the press.]

* * The story tells the curious adventures which befell a good young man after an operation whereby he exchanges a damaged eye of his own for the eye of a gay French Marquis, and consequently sees life through a strangely sophisticated medium.

London: SMITH, ELDER &amp; CO. 15, Waterloo Place, S.W.

THE ATHENÆUM

Journal of English and Foreign Literature, Science, the Fine Arts, Music and the Drama.

No. 4039.

SATURDAY, MARCH 25, 1905.

PRICE
THREEPENCE
REGISTERED AS A NEWSPAPER

OLD BRITISH SCHOOL.—SHEPHERD'S
SPRING EXHIBITION includes choice Landscapes and Portraits by the Masters of the Old British School.—SHEPHERD'S GALLERY, No. 27, King Street, St. James's.

NEWSVENDORS' BENEVOLENT and PROVIDENT INSTITUTION.

Founded 1839.

Funds exceed 4,000*l*.

Office: Memorial Hall Buildings, 16, Farringdon Street, London, E.C.

Patron:

The Right Hon. the EARL of ROSEBURY, K.G.

President:

The LORD GLENESK.

Treasurer:

The LONDON and WESTMINSTER BANK, LIMITED.

A Donation of Ten Guineas constitutes a Vice-President and gives three votes for life at all elections. Each Donation of Three Guineas gives a vote at all elections for life. Every Annual Subscriber is entitled to one vote at all elections in respect of each Five Shillings 6*d* paid.

MEMBERSHIP.—Every Man and Woman throughout the United Kingdom, whether Publisher, Wholesaler, Retailer, Employer, or Employed, is entitled to become a Member of this Institution, and enjoy its benefits upon payment of Five Shillings annually, or Three Guineas for life, provided that he or she is engaged in the sale of Newspapers, and such members who thus contribute secure priority of consideration in the event of their needing aid from the Institution.

PENSIONS.—The Annuitants now number Thirty-six, the men receiving 25*l*. and the Women 20*l*. per annum each, and they include:—The "Royal Victoria Pension Fund," which was established in 1887 and enlarged in 1897, 1901, and 1902, perpetually commemorates the great advantages the News Trade enjoyed under the rule of Her late Majesty Queen Victoria, provides Pensions of 20*l*. a year each for Six Widows of News-vendors.

The "Francis Fund" provides Pensions for One Man, 25*l*., and One Woman, 20*l*., and was specially subscribed in memory of the late John Francis, who died on April 6, 1882, and was for more than fifty years Publisher of the Athenæum. He took an active and leading part throughout the whole period of the agitation for the repeal of the various then existing "Taxes on Knowledge," and was for very many years a staunch supporter of this Institution.

The "Horace Marshall Pension Fund" is the gift of the late Mr. Horace Brooks Marshall. The employees of that firm have primary right of election to its benefits, but this privilege not having been exercised until 1904, the General Pensions of the Institution have had the full benefit arising from the interest on this investment from 1887 to 1903.

The "Herbert Lloyd Pension Fund" provides 25*l*. per annum for one man; and was established in 1903 in perpetual and grateful memory of Mr. Herbert Lloyd, who was a generous benefactor of this Institution, and who died May 12, 1899.

The "Hospital Pensions" consist of an annual contribution of 55*l*., whereby Sir Henry Charles Burdett and his co-directors generously enable the Committee to grant 20*l*. for One Year to a Man and 15*l*. for One Year to a Woman, under conditions laid down in Rule 8*c*.

W. WILKIE JONES, Secretary.

THE BOOKSELLERS' PROVIDENT INSTITUTION.

Founded 1837.

Patron—HER MAJESTY QUEEN ALEXANDRA.

Invested Capital 30,000*l*.

A UNIQUE INVESTMENT

Offered to London Booksellers and their Assistants.

A young man or woman of twenty-five can invest the sum of Twenty Guineas (or its equivalent by instalment), and obtain the right to participate in the following advantages:—

FIRST. Freedom from want in time of Adversity as long as need exists.

SECOND. Permanent Relief in Old Age.

THIRD. Medical advice by eminent Physicians and Surgeons.

FOURTH. A Cottage in the Country (Abbots Langley, Hertfordshire) for aged Members, with garden produce, coal, and medical attendance free, in addition to an annuity.

FIFTH. A furnished house in the same Retreat at Abbots Langley for the free use of Members and their families for holidays or during convalescence.

SIXTH. A contribution towards Funeral expenses when it is needed.

SEVENTH. All these are available not for Members only, but also for their wives or widows and young children.

EIGHTH. The payment of the subscriptions confers an absolute right to these benefits in all cases of need.

For further information apply to the Secretary, Mr. GEORGE LARNER, 28, Paternoster Row E.C.

LONDON INTER-COLLEGIATE SCHOLAR-

SHIPS BOARD.—About TWENTY SCHOLARSHIPS and EXHIBITIONS, ranging in value from 20*l*. to 50*l*. a year, for Men and Women, tenable at University College, King's College, and the East London Technical College, in the Faculties of Arts, Science, and Engineering will be OFFERED for COMPETITION by the LONDON INTER-COLLEGIATE SCHOLARSHIPS BOARD on JUNE 27 and following Days.

Entries will close on May 30. Full particulars and forms of Application may be obtained on application to the SECRETARY OF THE BOARD, King's College, Strand, W.C.

MERCHANT TAYLORS' SCHOOL,

CHARTERHOUSE SQUARE, E.C.

An ORDINARY ENTRANCE EXAMINATION will be held on WEDNESDAY, April 12, 1905, at 1.30 p.m.

FIVE ENTRANCE SCHOLARSHIPS, for Boys under 14 years of age on June 11, 1905, will be COMPETED for on the 3rd, 4th, and 5th of NEXT JULY.

For particulars apply to the SECRETARY.

ELTHAM COLLEGE, KENT.—The ROYAL

NAVAL SCHOOL.—EXAMINATION for ENTRANCE and other SCHOLARSHIPS, MARCH 27 and Following Days. Public School Life and Education, with Special Classes for all Navy and Army Examinations.—Apply to the Head Master, Rev. A. E. RUMIE, D.D.

EDUCATION.

Parents or Guardians desiring accurate information relative to the CHOICE of SCHOOLS for BOYS or GIRLS or TUTOR in England or Abroad are invited to call upon or send fully detailed particulars to

MESSRS. GAMBITAS, THIRNO & CO.,

who for more than thirty years have been closely in touch with the leading Educational Establishments.

Advice, free of charge, is given by Mr Thring, Nephew of the late Head Master of Uppingham, 36, Sackville Street, London, W.

F O L K E S T O N E.
WOODLANDS PREPARATORY SCHOOL.
Rev. HENRY T. J. COGGIN, M.A. Cantab.

THE UNIVERSITIES of MANCHESTER, LIVERPOOL, and LEEDS.

The NEXT MATRICULATION EXAMINATION will COMMENCE on WEDNESDAY, July 5, 1905, and will be held simultaneously at the Three Universities and in Schools approved by the Joint Matriculation Board.

The Fee is due on or before June 3.

Information as to Scholarships awarded on the results of this Examination, and on other matters, may be obtained from the undersigned.

R. F. GWYTHER,

Secretary to the Joint Matriculation Board.

Owens College, Manchester.

ST. MARY'S HOSPITAL MEDICAL SCHOOL, PADDINGTON, W.

The SUMMER SESSION will BEGIN on MAY 1.

The Medical School provides complete Courses of Instruction for the Medical Degrees of the Universities of London, Oxford, Cambridge, and Durham; for the Diplomas of the Royal Colleges of Physicians and Surgeons; and for the Government Medical Services.

SIX ENTRANCE SCHOLARSHIPS in NATURAL SCIENCE, value 145*l*. to 52*l*. 10*s*., will be COMPETED for in SEPTEMBER. Students entering in May are eligible.

Handbook of Curriculum on application to the DEAN.

C O U N T Y of L O N D O N.

EDUCATION ACTS, 1870 to 1903.

The LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL invites applications for the following appointments in the Education Department:—

FOUR DIVISIONAL INSPECTORS, who will have the general superintendence of large districts, and give special attention to the co-ordination of education within their areas. Their chief duties will be to inspect Pupil Teachers' Centres, Secondary Schools, Training Colleges, Science and Commercial Centres, Polytechnics, and all Institutions for Higher Education aided by the Council.

Candidates will be required to possess special qualifications in one of the following subjects:—(1) English Language and Literature. (2) Modern Languages. (3) Mathematics and Science. (4) Technology, including Mechanical and Electrical Engineering. The Salary will be in each case 600*l*. a year, rising by annual increments of 25*l*. to a maximum Salary of 800*l*. a year.

ONE ART INSPECTOR, whose chief duties will be to inspect the Art Teaching in Elementary and Secondary Schools, Art Schools, and Polytechnics. The Salary will be 400*l*. a year, rising by annual increments of 20*l*. to a maximum Salary of 500*l*. a year.

ONE INSPECTOR OF WOOD and METAL WORK, whose chief duties will be to inspect the Teaching in Wood and Metal Work in Manual Training Centres and Elementary and Secondary Schools. He will also be required to inspect certain classes at Polytechnics. The Salary will be 400*l*. a year, rising by annual increments of 20*l*. to a maximum Salary of 500*l*. a year.

ONE INSPECTOR OF WOMEN'S TECHNICAL CLASSES, whose chief duties will be to inspect Technical Classes for Women (including Upholstery, Flowermaking, Needlework, Millinery, Dressmaking, and Dresscutting) in Evening Schools, Girls' Clubs, and Polytechnics. The Salary will be 300*l*. a year, rising by annual increments of 20*l*. to a maximum Salary of 400*l*. a year.

The persons appointed will be under the control of the Chief Inspector, and will be required to give their whole time to the duties of the Office, and will in other respects be subject to the usual conditions attaching to the Council's service, particulars of which are given in the Form of Application.

In connexion with the appointments there is no restriction with regard to sex.

Applications should be made on the Official Form, to be obtained from the Clerk of the London County Council at the County Hall, Spring Gardens, S.W., or at the Education Offices, Victoria Embankment, W.C. The applications must be sent in not later than 10 a.m. on SATURDAY, April 1, 1905, addressed to the Education Offices as above, and accompanied by copies of not more than three recent Testimonials.

Canvassing, either directly or indirectly, will be held to be a disqualification for appointment.

G. L. GOMME, Clerk of the London County Council.

Spring Gardens, S.W., March 2, 1905.

GRAMMAR SCHOOL of KING EDWARD VI.

at STOURBRIDGE.

HEAD MASTER.

There will be a VACANCY in the HEAD MASTERSHIP of this SCHOOL after JULY 31, 1905. The Gentleman appointed must be a Graduate of one of the principal Universities of the United Kingdom. A knowledge of Modern Languages, Chemistry, and Natural Science is considered desirable.

The remuneration, by Stipend, Capitation Fees, &c., amounts at present to about 600*l*. per annum, with House.

There are six Assistant Masters, paid by the Governors.

Personal canvassing of the Governors will be considered a disqualification.

Applications, in writing, with Twelve Copies of Testimonials, to be sent to W. P. TRAVIS, Esq., Solicitor, Clerk to the Governors, on or before MAY 20, 1905.

COUNTY BOROUGH of WOLVERHAMPTON.

The LOCAL EDUCATION AUTHORITY require an ART MASTER to take the general management of their SCHOOL of ART, and the CORPORATION require the same person to act as CURATOR of their ART GALLERY. Commencing Salary (inclusive) for both Offices, 300*l*. per annum, rising by annual increments of 25*l*. to a maximum of 375*l*. per annum. Candidates must be duly qualified as Art Masters according to the rules and regulations of the Science and Art Department, and must also have had experience in teaching Design Metal Work and Enamelling. The person appointed will be required to enter upon his duties on JUNE 1 next, and will not be permitted to hold any other appointments or to take Private Pupils without permission. Sealed applications, accompanied by not more than three recent Testimonials, addressed to the CHAIRMAN of the EDUCATION COMMITTEE, Town Hall, Wolverhampton, endorsed "Art Mastership," must be sent in not later than APRIL 10 next.

Personal canvassing of the Members of the Education Authority will be deemed a disqualification.

HORATIO BREVITT, Clerk to the Education Authority.

Town Hall, Wolverhampton, March 21, 1905.

HOLIDAY TUTORSHIP desired by OXFORD

CLASSICAL SCHOLAR Has travelled Abroad. Good Testimonials.—Apply Box 987, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, E.C.

Yearly Subscription, free by post, Inland, 15*s*. 3*d*.; Foreign, 18*s*. Entered at the New York Post Office as Second Class matter.

FRANCE.—The ATHENÆUM can be obtained at the following Railway Stations in France:—

AMIENS, ANTIBES, BEAULIEU-SUR-MER, BIARRITZ, BORDEAUX, BOULOGNE, CALAIS, CANNES, DIJON, DUNKIRK, GENEVA, GOLFE-JUAN, HAVRE, HYÈRES, JUAN-LES-PINS, LILLE, LYONS, MARSEILLES, MENTONE, MONACO, MONTE CARLO, NANTES, NICE, PARIS (Est, Nord, Lyon), PAU, ROUEN, SAINT RAPHAEL, TOULON, TOURS.

PARIS: W. H. SMITH & SON, 24*s*, Rue de Rivoli; and at the GALIGNANI LIBRARY, 224, Rue de Rivoli.

KENDAL PUBLIC LIBRARY.

WANTED, LIBRARIAN, with previous experience. Commencing Salary, 65*l*. per annum. Applications, endorsed "Librarian," stating age and experience, and accompanied by copies of three recent Testimonials (which will not be returned), to reach Town Clerk, Kendal, not later than morning post, WEDNESDAY, April 5.

MANAGER WANTED for high-class LIBRARY on Book-Lover Principles for West-End Stores; must have had good experience; good salary and commission on profits.—Apply, stating age and particulars of experience, to G. M., care of Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

ASSISTANT EDITORSHIP WANTED, in LONDON or the PROVINCES by a UNIVERSITY MAN. Has had great experience as Editor and Leader Writer. Special knowledge of Far East.—Address Box 963, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

ADVERTISER desires post as LITERARY ADVISER to PUBLISHING FIRM. University Classical Honours Man.—Address A. H. S., Box 962, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

PUBLISHER requires energetic ASSISTANT, with good knowledge and experience of Outward Advertising and the Trade generally.—Apply, by letter only, stating age, salary, and experience, to HARPER & BROTHERS, 45, Albemarle Street, London, W.

TEMPORARY SECRETARIAL WORK.—Fiction and General Literary Copying undertaken by expert Shorthand Writer, and accurately Typed. Research Work. Phonograph Records Transcribed.—J. JOCELYN, 63, Paulet Road, Camberwell, S.E.

TRANSLATION, REVISION, RESEARCH, REVIEWING, INDEXING, and other LITERARY WORK, or non-resident Secretaryship. Classics, French, German, Italian. Special Subjects, Mythology and Literature. Varied experience.—Miss SELBY, 53, Talbot Road, W.

LITERARY RESEARCH undertaken at the British Museum and elsewhere on moderate terms. Excellent Testimonials.—A. B., Box 910, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

LADY PROOF READER, of some experience, wants SITUATION. In London preferred.—Apply, personally or by letter, J. E. F., Athenæum Press, Bream's Buildings, E.C.

TRAINING for PRIVATE SECRETARIAL WORK and INDEXING.—Apply Miss PETHERBRIDGE (Nat. Sci. Tripos), 52*a*, Conduit Street, Bond Street, London, W.

TYPE-WRITING.—MSS., SCIENTIFIC, and of all Descriptions, COPIED. Special attention to work requiring care. Dictation Rooms (Shorthand or Type-writing) Usual Terms.—Misses E. B. and I. FARRAN, Donington House, 30, Norfolk Street, Strand, London.

TYPE-WRITING.—WANTED, experienced COPYING OFFICE CLERK.—Apply Miss DICKENS, 3, Tavistock Street, Strand, between 11 and 12 or 3 and 4, or by appointment.

TYPING.—8*d*. per 1,000. Duplicates half-price. Accurate, prompt. Good paper.—Mr. HATTON, 15, Argyle Square, W.C.

AUTHORS' MSS., NOVELS, STORIES, PLAYS, ESSAYS TYPE-WRITTEN with complete accuracy, 9*d*. per 1,000 words. References to well-known Writers.—M. STUART, Thirlbank, Roxborough Road, Harrow.

TYPE-WRITING.—TECHNICAL and SCIENTIFIC WORKS, AUTHORS' MSS., NOVELS, PLAYS, SERMONS, &c. Accuracy guaranteed. Indexing and Literary Work. Translations.—Special terms: BELLS-LETTERS BUILDING, 62, Chancery Lane, W.C. (next door to Chancery Lane Safe Deposit).

TYPE-WRITING undertaken by highly educated Women (Classical Tripos; Cambridge Higher Local; Modern Languages). Research, Revision, Translation.—THE CAMBRIDGE TYPE-WRITING AGENCY, 10, Duke Street, Adelphi, W.C.

AUTHORS' MSS., SERMONS, PLAYS, ENVELOPES, CIRCULARS, and all kinds, TYPED at home (Remington), 9*d*. per 1,000. Good paper. Orders promptly executed.—M. L., 7, Vernon Road, Clapham.

TYPE-WRITING promptly and accurately done. Ten years' experience. Excellent references. 10*d*. per 1,000 words. Reduction for quantity.—Miss MISSIA, The Orchard, Cottrell Road, Surbiton S.W.

THE AUTOTYPE COMPANY,

74, NEW OXFORD STREET, LONDON, W.C.

MONOCHROME COPIES

BY THE

PERMANENT AUTOTYPE CARBON PROCESS OF PICTURES BY OLD MASTERS

From the Principal Collections of Note.

NUMEROUS EXAMPLES OF WORKS BY MODERN ARTISTS.

The AUTOTYPE COMPANY'S Processes of Permanent Photographic Reproduction are extensively employed by the Trustees of the British Museum, the Local Government Board, many of the Learned Societies, and leading Publishers.

Copies of Coins, Seals, Medals, MSS., Drawings, Engravings, Art Objects, Microscopic Work, &c.

Inquiries are invited from those requiring Book Illustrations of the very highest quality. Specimens and Estimates submitted.

THE AUTOTYPE FINE-ART GALLERY,

74, NEW OXFORD STREET, LONDON, W.C.

Open Free Daily, 10 to 6.

SHORTHAND and TYPE-WRITING.—

Authors' MSS., Plays, Sermons, Reports, &c., 9d. per 1,000. Legal and General Copying. Accuracy and Despatch guaranteed.—Miss N. E. ROBINSON, 8, Westover Road, Wandsworth Common, London, S.W.

TYPE-WRITING.—AUTHORS' MSS., NOVELS,

PLAYS, REVIEWS, SERMONS, &c., TYPE-WRITTEN with promptness and accuracy at 7d. per 1,000 words. Specimens and Testimonials on application.—Miss ALDERSON, 56, Boroughgate, Appleby, Westmorland.

THE AUTHOR'S AGENCY.—Established 1879.

The interests of Authors capably represented. Agreements for Publishing arranged. MSS. placed with Publishers.—Terms and Testimonials on application to Mr. A. M. BUCHANAN, 34, Paternoster Row.

C. MITCHELL & CO., Agents for the Sale and Purchase of Newspaper Properties, undertake Valuations for Probate or Purchase, Investigations, and Audit of Accounts, &c. Card of Terms on application.

Mitchell House, 1 and 2, Snow Hill, Holborn Viaduct, E.O.

Catalogues.

MESSRS. HENRY YOUNG & SONS possess one of the LARGEST STOCKS of OLD and NEW BOOKS in GREAT BRITAIN, and they will be glad to hear from any one in search of Books out of print, as they can in many cases supply them at once.

ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE MONTHLY. Price 6d.
12, South Castle Street, Liverpool.

H. H. PEACH, Antiquarian Bookseller, 37, Belvoir Street, Leicester, issues CATALOGUES of MSS. and OLD BOOKS post free to Book Collectors. No. 10 contains Manuscripts—Dibdin—Bibliotheca Spenceriana, &c.

MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS.—Send for CATALOGUE (post free) of good SECOND-HAND WORKS, esteemed Editions of various Authors, some scarce, all in new extra leather bindings, full and half bound, at prices affixed.—W. ROSE & SON, Bookbinders, 29-30, Eagle Street, Red Lion Street, Holborn, W.C.

CATALOGUE No. 42.—Drawings—Engravings—

Turner's Liber Studiorum—Lucas's Mezzotints after Constable—Engravings, Hogarth, Girtin—Etchings, Palmer, Whistler—Japanese Colour-Prints—Illustrated Books—Works by Ruskin. Post free, Sixpence. Wm. WARD, 2, Church Terrace, Richmond, Surrey.

THE INTERNATIONAL BOOK CIRCULAR,

No. 139, containing a Special Article, entitled 'SOME CONTEMPORARY FOREIGN CHEMISTS,' by Dr. M. O. FORSTER, together with an exact Bibliography of their Publications, and a Double Plate of their Portraits. Specimen Copies gratis.—WILLIAMS & NORRIS, Book Importers, 14, Henrietta Street, Covent Garden, W.C.

BOOKS.—All out-of-print and rare Books on any subject supplied. The most expert Bookbinder extant. Please state wants and ask for Catalogue. I make a special feature of exchanging any saleable Books for others selected from my various Lists. Special List of 2,000 Books I particularly want post free.—EDW. BAKER'S Great Bookshop, 14-16, John Bright Street, Birmingham.

PICKERING & CHATTO'S CATALOGUES.

CATALOGUE of TRACTS and PAMPHLETS,

chiefly Historical and Topographical, 238 pp. 8vo, with Descriptions and Selling Prices of 3,000 Rare Tracts and Pamphlets, including Items on Africa—America—Queen Anne—Astrology—Bedfordshire—Berkshire—Buckinghamshire—Cambridgeshire—Civil War—Charles I. and II.—Channel Islands—Cheshire—Commonwealth—Cornwall—Oliver Cromwell—Cumberland—Derbyshire—Devonshire—Dorsetshire—Durham—Economics and Trade—Queen Elizabeth—Essex—Flanders—France—George I. and II.—Germany—Gloucestershire—Hampshire—Herefordshire—Hertfordshire—Holland—Ireland—James I. and II.—Jesuits—Jews—Kent—Lancashire—Law—Leicestershire—Lincolnshire—London—Middlesex—Monmouthshire—Norfolk—Northamptonshire—Northumberland—Nottinghamshire—Oxfordshire—Poetry—Popish Plot—Pretender (the Young and Old)—Printing—Frynne—Quakers—Rutlandshire—Prince Rupert—Scotland—Shropshire—Somersetshire—Spain—Spanish Armada—Staffordshire—Suffolk—Surrey—Sweden—Wales—Warwickshire—Westmorland—William III.—Wiltshire—Worcestershire—Yorkshire. Paper cover, post free, 1s.

CATALOGUE of ENGLISH LITERATURE,

noted Bibliographically and Biographically, including First or Early Editions of the Writings of practically every English Author from Chaucer to R. L. Stevenson. 504 pp. 8vo, with Descriptions and Selling Prices of nearly 4,000 Rare Books, half-cloth, post free, 3s. 6d. This Catalogue has been pronounced on all sides to be the most interesting Bookseller's Catalogue on the subject ever issued.

CATALOGUE of SPORTS, PASTIMES, ARTS,

SCIENCES. 222 pp. 8vo, with Descriptions and Selling Prices of nearly 2,000 Old or Rare Books upon almost every Branch of Sport, Science, or Art, paper cover, post free, 1s.

CATALOGUE of MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS,

126 pp. 8vo, with Descriptions and Selling Prices of about 900 Old or Rare Books, including Works on Africa, America, Australasia—First Editions of Books Illustrated by Randolph Caldecott, George and Robert Cruikshank, Richard Doyle, Harry Furniss, James Gilray, Ernest Griset, John Leech, Hablot K. Browne (Phiz), Henry Alken, Thomas Rowlandson, and numerous Rare Works with Coloured Plates—an interesting Collection of Old Curiosa, Erotica, Facetiae, Old Romances, Chap Books, and Children's Books—numerous Topographical Works relating to most of the Counties of England, Ireland, Scotland, and Wales—fine Illuminated Manuscripts, with Miniatures—a valuable Assemblage of Early Typographical Specimens, including many Rare Editions of Principles and Examples of the Early Printers. Paper cover, post free, 1s.

It has been found necessary to make the above charges for our Catalogues, to prevent an inundation of applications from irresponsible persons. The cost of the Catalogue will, however, be deducted from the first order of 11.

PICKERING & CHATTO, Antiquarian Booksellers,

66, HAYMARKET, LONDON, S.W.

LEIGHTON'S

ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE of EARLY PRINTED and other INTERESTING BOOKS, MANUSCRIPTS, and BINDINGS.

Part VIII. SI—T, with 144 Illustrations, price 2s JUST ISSUED. Parts I.—VII. containing A—SH, with 1050 Illustrations in Facsimile, price 17s. 7 Parts.

J. & J. LEIGHTON, 40, Brewer Street, Golden Square, W.

GLAISHER'S REMAINDER BOOK CATALOGUE.

FEBRUARY SUPPLEMENT NOW READY,
Comprising all most recent Purchases in
PUBLISHERS' REMAINDER STOCK.
Books in NEW condition, at REDUCED Prices.

WILLIAM GLAISHER,

Remainder and Discount Bookseller, 265, High Holborn, London.

ARUNDEL CHROMOS.

Large number in Stock; many rare ones.
Send stamp for this Month's Printed List.
SAINT JUDE'S DEPOT, BIRMINGHAM.

TWELVE "ARUNDEL" CHROMOS FOR SALE,

at little more than half the price of advertising and other firms. Also Sussex Archaeological Collections, 1-47 (wanting 2 and 3). Twelve Guineas. Also Horsfield's History of Sussex, 2 vols. 53s.—W. HENNEAGE Legge, Ringmer, Lewes.

PORTRAIT of GEORGE MEREDITH, after the celebrated Painting by G. F. WATTS, R.A., Engraved by W. BISCOMBE GARDNER. Limited to 600 Artist's Proofs at One Guinea each. Size, 12 in. by 8 in.—Address W. BISCOMBE GARDNER, Hoathly, Hind Head, Surrey.

Sales by Auction.

Valuable Books, including a Portion of the Library of a Gentleman, removed from Gloucestershire.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL

by AUCTION, at their Galleries, 47, Leicester Square, W.C., EARLY in APRIL, the ABOVE PROPERTIES, comprising Rare and Standard Works on Natural History and in various Branches of Literature, and including Curtis's Botanical Magazine, complete to 1899, 125 vols.—Botanical Register, 33 vols.—De Candolle, Prodromus, 17 vols.—Lodiges' Botanical Cabinet, 14 vols.—Sowerby's English Botany, 22 vols.—Selby's British Ferns—English Flora, 6 vols., and others on similar Subjects—Horatio Opera, 1483—Gay and Esop's Fables, Plates by Blake, &c.—Naples Museum, Cabinet Secret, Coloured Plates—Sheraton's Cabinet Maker, 1791, fine Copy—and many other rare and interesting items.

Valuable Miscellaneous Books.

MESSRS. HODGSON & CO. will SELL by

AUCTION, at their Rooms, 115, Chancery Lane, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, March 29, and Two Following Days, at 1 o'clock, VALUABLE MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS, including the Lives of John Raphael Smith and William and James Ward, by Mrs. Frankau, with the Portfolios of Engravings—Sir Thomas Lawrence, by Lord Ronald Sutherland Gower, Large Paper—George Romney, by Humphry Ward and W. Roberts, 2 vols.—Wedmore's Turner and Ruskin, Edition de Luxe, 2 vols.—Propert's History of Miniature Art—Foster's Miniature Painters, 2 vols.—Omph's Historical Monographs—Japanese Paper Copies, with Duplicate Sets of the Plates, 10 vols.—Editions de Luxe of Tenyson and Matthew Arnold—Dickens's Works, Illustrated Library Edition, 30 vols. calf extra—a fine Set of Balzac's Comédie Humaine, Edition de Luxe, 40 vols.—Curtius's History of Greece, 5 vols. and other Standard Historical Works—Pepys's Diary, by Wheatley, 10 vols.—Sowerby's Botany, 13 vols. full morocco—a Complete Set of the 11bs. from the commencement to 1903—Encyclopædia Britannica, 35 vols. half-morocco—Engravings by Bunbury, &c.

To be viewed and Catalogues had.

The extensive and valuable Library of the late JOHN SCOTT, Esq., C.B.

MESSRS. SOTHEY, WILKINSON & HODGE

will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C., on MONDAY, March 27, and Eight Following Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, the extensive and valuable LIBRARY of MANUSCRIPTS and PRINTED BOOKS of the late JOHN SCOTT, Esq., C.B., of Halkhill, Largs, Ayrshire, comprising a large number of Works connected chiefly with Scotland, including a probably unique Collection relating to Mary, Queen of Scots—very rare Books and Tracts relating to the Stuarts, the Jacobites, the Rebellions of 1715 and 1745, the Early History, Antiquities, Poetry, and General Literature of Scotland—the Hannatyne Maitland, Roxburghe, and Spalding Club Books—Important and valuable MSS.—Editions Principales—rare Early-Printed Books, English and Foreign—Specimens of fine Bindings, &c.

May be viewed. Catalogues may be had, price Half-a-crown each.

The extensive and valuable Collection of Books on Shipping,

Navigation, and Naval Affairs, formed by the late JOHN SCOTT, Esq., C.B.

MESSRS. SOTHEY, WILKINSON & HODGE

will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C., on THURSDAY, April 6, and Following Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, the extensive and unique COLLECTION of WORKS connected with SHIPPING, NAVIGATION, the NAVIES, and NAVAL AFFAIRS of ALL COUNTRIES, ANCIENT and MODERN, including very many rare Works in most of the European Languages, comprising nearly 1,000 different Works, formed by the late JOHN SCOTT, Esq., C.B., of Halkhill, Largs, Ayrshire.

May be viewed. Catalogues may be had, price Half-a-crown each.

Important Collection of Lepidoptera.

TUESDAY, March 28, at half-past 12 o'clock.

MR. J. C. STEVENS will OFFER, at his Rooms,

38, King Street, Covent Garden, London, W.C., the COLLECTION of BRITISH LEPIDOPTERA formed by E. HARRIS JONES, Esq., and others, comprising long Series of most of the rare Species, fine Varieties in the best state of preservation, together with the first-rate Cabinets in which they are contained; also fine lot of Exotic Lepidoptera from various localities.

On view Monday prior and morning of Sale. Catalogues post free on application.

Exceptionally fine Photographic Lenses (by order of Trustees)—Scientific Instruments, &c.

FRIDAY, March 31, at half-past 12 o'clock.

MR. J. C. STEVENS will OFFER (by order of the Trustees) DOUBLE and TRIPLET PHOTOGRAPHIC LENSES by Ross; Portrait Lenses by Voigtlander, Busch, Field & Sons—Spectroscopes—fine Microscopes, Prisms, and Telescope with Tripod—Case of best quality Drawing Instruments—3½-in. Astro Telescope by Beck; also Lathe and Accessories, Tools, Scientific Apparatus, &c.

On view day prior 2 to 5 and morning of Sale. Catalogues on application.

MESSRS. CHRISTIE, MANSON & WOODS

respectfully give Notice that they will hold the Following SALES by AUCTION at their Great Rooms, King Street, St. James's Square:—

On MONDAY, March 27, at 1 o'clock, OBJECTS of VERTU from various Sources.

On TUESDAY, March 28, at 1 o'clock, the COLLECTION of ENGRAVED PORTRAITS after Sir T. Lawrence of the Right Rev. the BISHOP of TRURO.

On WEDNESDAY, March 29, at 1 o'clock, EUROPEAN and ORIENTAL ARMS, OBJECTS of ART of the SIXTEENTH, SEVENTEENTH, and EIGHTEENTH CENTURIES, the Property of a GENTLEMAN.

On THURSDAY, March 30, at 2 o'clock, the CELLAR of WINES of the late A. G. HUBBUCK, Esq., and choice WINES from other Cellars.

On FRIDAY, March 31, at 1 o'clock, OLD ENGLISH PORCELAIN of the late Mrs. HARDCASTLE.

On SATURDAY, April 1, at 1 o'clock, important MODERN PICTURES of the late ABRAHAM MITCHELL, Esq.

THE CORNHILL MAGAZINE

For APRIL. Price One Shilling.

Contents.

ROSE of the WORLD. Book III. Chaps. I-5. By Agnes and Egerton Castle.

AUTOUR D'EVELINA. Some Unpublished Letters of Fanny Burney's. By Walter Frith.

The SECOND MATE. By Perceval Gibbon.

GREEKS and TROJANS.

SCHOOLS and COLLEGES. A Dialogue. By Megister Artinm.

COMPULSORY CLASSICS. By the Hon. John Collier.

MR. G. B. SHAW and the BRITISH PUBLIC. By Stephen Gwynn.

HOW the PRINCE WAS SAVED. By Dora Greenwell McChesney.

DEBITA FLACCO. By E. H. Pember, K.C.

SPUR and SPBAR. By Venour Davidson.

REPRINTS and their READERS. By Joseph Shaylor.

DYING OUT. By George Bourne.

The KING'S REVOKE. Chaps. 8-9. By Mrs. Margaret L. Woods.

London: Smith, Elder & Co. 15, Waterloo Place.

LONGMAN'S MAGAZINE.

APRIL. Price SIXPENCE.

HAY FEVER. By Walter Herries Pollock and Gny C. Pollock. Chaps. 8-10.

ARE the ENGLISH PEOPLE TOO GENTEEL? By Reginald Turner.

The MAKING of a MAN. In Two Parts. Part II. By Capt. Vaughan.

A MOOD. By E. Hubbard.

ANCIENT WILLS. By W. Henneage Legge.

The PHANTOM WHERRY. By C. F. Marsh.

WILD WHEAT. By M. E. Francis (Mrs. Francis Blundell). Chaps. 9-11.

AT the SIGN of the SHIP. By Andrew Lang.

Longmans, Green & Co. 39, Paternoster Row, London.

THE NATIONAL PHYSICAL LABORATORY;

Decorative Painting (Institute of Architects); The Society of Arts and the London Institution; Two Sketch-books; An Electrical Exhibition; Types of Concrete-Steel Structures (Student's Column); Examples of French Medal Engraving; The Arch of Trajan at Beneventum; Sculpture—"Enfants et Grenouilles"; New Volunteer Headquarters, Liverpool, &c.—See the BUILDER of March 25 (4d.); by post, 4d.). Through any Newsgate, or direct from the Publisher of the Builder, Catherine Street, London, W.C.

ANCIENT and MODERN COINS.—Collectors

and Antiquarians are invited to apply to SPINK & SON, Limited, for Specimen Copy (gratis) of their NUMISMATIC CIRCULAR. The finest Greek, Roman, and English Coins on View and for Sale at Moderate Prices—Spink & Son, Limited, Experts, Valuers, and Cataloguers, 16, 17, and 18, Piccadilly, London, W. Established upwards of a Century.

SWAN SONNENSCHN & CO.

THE GROWTH OF THE ENGLISH MANOR.

By Prof. P. VINOGRADOFF.

Demy 8vo, 10s. 6d.

"Seems likely at once to take rank as a leading authority upon its subject."—Scotsman.

"Prof. Vinogradoff's method and the mastery of the detail of his subject combine to produce a notable book."—Academy.

"He has compiled a large mass of information about the early history of this country, which may usefully be studied in an age which seems likely to be troubled by some of the very problems which vexed the souls of the people of England in a somewhat remote past."—Notts Guardian.

"His treatment of the subject is eminently judicial and judicious. The University of Oxford may be heartily congratulated on the first fruits of the labours of her new Professor of Law."—Manchester Guardian.

The PRINCIPLES of PHYSIOLOGICAL

PSYCHOLOGY. By Prof. W. WUNDT. A Translation of the Fifth and wholly Rewritten (1902-3) German Edition by Prof. E. B. TITCHENER, M.A. In 3 vols. Vol. I., with 156 Illustrations, demy 8vo, 12s.

"Anything more finished and judicial than Wundt's description of the anatomy of the brain we have never met anywhere."—Academy.

"Prof. Titchener has done his part of the work with notable success."—Scotsman.

VOLUME II. OF

The STUDENT'S TEXT-BOOK of ZOOLOGY.

By ADAM SEDGWICK, M.A., Fellow and Lecturer of Trinity College, Cambridge. Demy 8vo, 21s.

NEW EDITIONS OF

HANDBOOK of SYSTEMATIC BOTANY. By

Dr. E. WARMING. Edited by M. C. POTTER, M.A., Professor of Botany in the Durham College of Science. 610 Illustrations. Demy 8vo, 15s.

An ELEMENTARY TEXT-BOOK of BOTANY.

By Dr. SIDNEY H. VINES, M.A. D.Sc. F.R.S., Sherardian Professor of Botany in the University of Oxford. 483 Illustrations. Demy 8vo, 9s.

NEW LIGHT ON THE SHAKESPEARE-BACON CONTROVERSY.

The SHAKESPEARE STORY. By George Pitt-

LEWIS, K.C., ex-M.P., Author of 'Taylor on Evidence,' &c. Crown 8vo, paper covers, 1s. 6d. net.

THREE NEW VOLUMES OF

THE "SOCIAL SCIENCE SERIES."

Each crown 8vo, 2s. 6d.

The HISTORY of the ENGLISH CORN LAWS.

By J. S. NICHOLSON, M.A. D.Sc.

The PHILOSOPHERS and the FRENCH REVO-

LUTION. By P. A. WADIA, Professor of History and Political Economy, Gujarat College, Ahmedabad.

The BIOLOGY of BRITISH POLITICS. By

CHARLES H. HARVEY.

A NEW EDITION OF

FRANCES POWER COBBE'S AUTO-

BIOGRAPHY. 1 vol. crown 8vo, 7s. 6d.

FIAT LUX: Outspoken Essays in Theology and Criticism. By INQUISITOR. 6s.

"Thoughtful and reverent essays by a Liberal Christian on fundamental religious doctrines."—Times.

REWRITTEN EDITION OF DR. A. RUSSEL WALLACE'S

The WONDERFUL CENTURY in the AGE

of NEW IDEAS in SCIENCE and INVENTION. By ALFRED RUSSEL WALLACE, Author of 'Island Life,' &c. Entirely Revised, and now first illustrated with 107 Pictures. 540 pp., 7s. 6d. net.

The PHENOMENA of NATURE. By James

WALKER. Crown 8vo, in Two Parts, 3s. 6d. each.

A QUEEN of UNREST. By Harry Tighe,

Author of 'Archie Wynward,' &c. The Story of Juana of Castile, Mother of Charles V. Crown 8vo, 6s.

TWO NEW SIX-SHILLING NOVELS.

WHEN the WORLD WENT WRY. By M. F.

WILSON, Author of 'When the Swallows Come Again,' 'How the Dreams Came True,' &c.

"Well written, and in many parts exceedingly graceful."

Glasgow Herald.

"A story that all through controls attention."—Dundee Advertiser.

BENDISH. By William St. Clair, Author of

'Prince Baba and his Wives.'

The SCIENTIFIC BASIS of MORALITY. By

G. GORE, LL.D. F.R.S., Author of 'The Scientific Basis of National Progress,' &c. Pp. viii-600, 10s. 6d. net.

This important work, on which the author has been engaged for many years, is the outcome and expression of the thoughts of a lifetime spent in scientific work. The chief subject of the book and the main idea pervading it, are expressed in the title. The leading objects are to show, in a general way, that the entire conduct of man—physical, mental, and moral—is based upon a scientific foundation: to make clear the truth that the great powers and laws of science are the chief guides of life; to show that universal energy, acting according to law, is the true "divine" power governing physical, moral, social, and religious conduct; and to illustrate the influence of science upon the material, mental, and moral progress of mankind. The work also seeks to show that all human progress is due to natural causes; that it has its origin in new knowledge; that maintenance of the existing state of civilization is due to education and the constant diffusion of knowledge; that the rate of progress is regulated by the continual conflict of ignorance and intelligence, and that this conflict is itself due to natural causes.

GOD and the AGNOSTICS; or, the End of the Age of Faith. By AN ENGLISHMAN. Large crown 8vo, 6s.

"A book of some originality. The work is largely critical of leading philosophers and divines, and the consideration of a rational social ideal leads him into the field of politics."—Times.

"Much vigorous writing and not a little stimulating thought. The book is in many ways refreshing, and points are made which deserve to be considered."—Sheffield Telegraph.

NINTH EDITION, ENTIRELY REWRITTEN.

SCHOOL HYGIENE. By Arthur Newsholme,

M.D. F.R.C.P., Examiner in State Medicine to the University of London; and W. C. C. PAKES, D.P.H., Demonstrator of Sanitary Science in Guy's Hospital; with a Chapter on EYESIGHT, by JAMES KERR, M.D., Medical Officer to the School Board for London. 311 pp., with 43 Illustrations, 3s.

WELLS GARDNER, DARTON & CO.'S LIST.

THE CREED OF THE CHRISTIAN.

By the Right Rev. CHARLES GORE, D.D.,
Bishop of Birmingham.

8vo, cloth boards, 1s. 6d.; paper, 6d. net.
In consequence of several requests for a Cheap Edition of this popular Work, the Publishers have decided to issue the above, but to limit the Edition to 50,000 Copies.

THE OLD TESTAMENT AND ITS MESSAGES.

By the Rev. EDGAR C. F. GIBSON, DD.,
Bishop Designate of Gloucester.

Crown 8vo, cloth boards, 3s. 6d.

"Dr. Gibson has studied the Old Testament, and his thoughts are new as well as true. If the publisher will give us more of this we shall be thankful."—Expository Times.

WHY CHRISTIANITY IS REASONABLE.

By the Rev. WALTER J. CAREY, M.A.

With Introduction by Canon SCOTT HOLLAND, D.D.

Cloth, 1s. net; paper, 6d. net. [Second Edition.

"The frank output of a living man of his own vital creed."—Guardian. "Very valuable."—School Guardian.

WAS JESUS CHRIST DIVINE?

An Enquiry into the Credibility of the Incarnation.

By the Rev. J. HOWARD B. MASTERMAN, M.A.,
Professor of History in the University of Birmingham.

Cloth, 1s. 3d. net; paper, 9d. net. [Second Edition.

"One of the best answers."—Expository Times.
"A masterly handling of the subject.....eminently lucid and clear."—Western Morning News.

THE STORY OF THE BEGINNING.

Genesis in the Light of Recent Research.
By Mrs. FREDERIC GREEN.

With Introduction by the BISHOP of WINCHESTER.

Cloth, 1s. 3d. net; paper, 9d. net. [Nearly ready.

This will be found a most valuable help to parents and teachers at the present time.

FAITH OF CHURCH AND NATION.

By the Right Rev. A. F. WINNINGTON INGRAM,
D.D., Bishop of London.

Cloth, 3s. 6d. [Just published.

SOME BIBLE CHARACTERS AND OTHER ADDRESSES.

By the late Canon TWELLS.

Cloth, 3s. 6d.

The first series of addresses, 'Sermons on Hymns and other Subjects,' now in its Third Edition, was so well received that we have ventured to publish another volume by this thoughtful preacher.

HOW TO PREACH.

A Manual for Students.

By the Rev. E. TYRRELL GREEN, M.A.,
Lecturer in Theology and Hebrew, St. David's College, Lampeter.

Cloth boards, 2s. net. [Just out.

THE DESTINY OF MAN.

By the Rev. J. H. LESTER, M.A.,
Prebendary and Canon non-residentiary of Lichfield.

Cloth, 3s. net.

"Lucid, reasonable, and well written."—Pall Mall Gazette.

London:

WELLS GARDNER, DARTON & CO., LIMITED.

MESSRS. LONGMANS & CO.'S LIST.

MISS BADSWORTH, M.F.H.

By EYRE HUSSEY.

With 6 Illustrations by G. D. ARMOUR. Crown 8vo, 6s.

"Miss Badsworth is indeed a most amiable person, but her niece, Miss Lavinia Badsworth, is one of the sweetest heroines whose acquaintance the impressionable Baron has ever had the opportunity of making; and if she be a portrait, then is Mr. Eyre Hussey to be greatly envied his knowledge of the original. Here is a perfectly pure, country-scented, fresh-air story, simple as it can be made, and, granting the eccentricity of one character, perfectly natural; yet so cleverly managed that you are interested in it from start to finish."—THE BARON DE BOOK WORMS in Punch.

THE CRISIS OF THE CONFEDERACY:

A History of Gettysburg and the Wilderness.

By CECIL BATTINE, Captain 15th King's Hussars.

With Coloured Frontispiece (Battle Flags of the Confederacy) and 6 Maps. 8vo, 16s. net.

SOUTH AFRICA.

A Glance at Current Conditions and Politics.

By J. H. BALFOUR BROWNE, K.C.

8vo, 7s. 6d. net.

"* * This book contains some descriptions of the voyage from England to Cape Town, and notes of the Author's journey from Cape Town to Johannesburg and Pretoria. It deals, too, with some of the social and political questions which are before the public of South Africa at the present time, and in a guarded way refers to some aspects of Johannesburg society. It touches such matters as Chinese Labour, the future form of government, and land settlement.

"MR. LANG AT HIS BEST."—DAILY GRAPHIC.

ADVENTURES AMONG BOOKS.

By ANDREW LANG.

With Photogravure Portraits after Sir W. B. Richmond, R.A.

Crown 8vo, 6s. 6d. net.

Contents:—Adventures among Books—Recollections of Robert Louis Stevenson—Rab's Friend—Oliver Wendell Holmes—Mr. Morris's Poems—Mrs. Radcliffe's Novels—A Scottish Romanticist of 1830—The Confessions of Saint Augustine—Smollett—Nathaniel Hawthorne—The Paradise of Poets—Paris and Helen—Enchanted Cigarettes—Stories and Story-telling—The Supernatural in Fiction—An Old Scotch Psychical Researcher—The Boy.

"This book, the latest of a gay multitude from the same pen, is entertaining from cover to cover.....The best of the contents of this excellent volume we have left till last. It is that which gives its name to the title-page, 'Adventures among Books.' Into his literary biography Mr. Lang has put his cleverest work."—Evening Standard.

HISTORIC MARTYRS of the PRIMITIVE CHURCH. By the Rev. A. J. MASON, D.D., Master of Pembroke College, Cambridge, Author of 'The Faith of the Gospel,' &c. 8vo, 10s. 6d. net.

INTERNATIONAL LAW: a Treatise. By L. Oppenheim, LL.D.,

Lecturer in Public International Law at the London School of Economics and Political Science (University of London), and Member of the Faculty of Economics and Political Science of the University of London; formerly Professor Ordinarius of Law in the University of Basle (Switzerland). In 2 vols. Vol. I. PEACE. 8vo, 18s. net.

SECOND EDITION, with an Introductory Note on the Unit of Family Holding under Early Tribal Custom.

The TRIBAL SYSTEM in WALES: being Part of an Inquiry into the Structure and Methods of Tribal Society. By FREDERIC SEEBOHM, LL.D. (Edin.), Litt.D. (Camb.). With 3 Maps. 8vo, 12s. 6d.

A DAY at DULWICH. By A. H. Gilkes, Master of Dulwich

College. Fcap. 8vo, 1s. net.

RICE PAPERS: Stories and Sketches of Life in China.

By H. L. NORRIS. Crown 8vo, 6s.

"Mr. L. Norris's 'Rice Papers' possess all the delicate attributes which properly self-respecting rice papers should have. They are as light as feathers.....Held up to the light, each 'Paper' discloses its watermark—a Chinaman very wittily presented."—Academy.

"The author has evidently an intimate and first-hand knowledge of the Chinaman; he has a keen perception of the humorous, and an exceedingly good style of telling a story."—Aberdeen Free Press.

LONGMANS, GREEN & CO. 39, Paternoster Row, London, E.C.

EVERYMAN'S LIBRARY.

The Publication of the First Six Volumes of METHUEN'S STANDARD LIBRARY is the commencement of an enterprise which may have far-reaching results. There are many excellent Series containing fine literature, but there is no Series that combines all the qualities which distinguish the STANDARD LIBRARY. Here the texts have been carefully read and collated, they are unabridged and untouched save in the modernization of spelling. The books are finely printed on good paper, each contains a Prefatory Note by Mr. SIDNEY LEE, and their cheapness is extraordinary. The price of a Volume in paper covers is

SIXPENCE NET.

Now many excellent books are being produced at Sixpence, but this is practically the first time you have been able to buy for this coin such books as are contained in METHUEN'S STANDARD LIBRARY. The First Six Volumes give a foretaste of the future:—FIVE PLAYS of SHAKESPEARE, The PILGRIM'S PROGRESS, SENSE and SENSIBILITY, MARCUS AURELIUS, The ESSAYS and NEW ATLANTIS of BACON, Volume I. (a double one, 1s. net) of The DECLINE and FALL, with Prof. BURY'S Notes. Here is a feast. Then follow:—PARADISE LOST, Volume I. of MILTON'S PROSE, GOLDSMITH'S PLAYS and POEMS, BURKE'S REFLECTIONS on the FRENCH REVOLUTION, The IMITATION of CHRIST, and Volume I. of BEN JONSON. Thus, when Fifty Volumes have been published, you have a shelf full of the finest literature of the world for under Thirty Shillings. Here, indeed, is The Poor Man's University. The Volumes can also be obtained in a handsome cloth binding at 1s. net. Kindly ask your Bookseller or Newsagent to show you Copies, and write to Messrs. METHUEN for a Prospectus.

THE THIRD FOLIO.

MR. WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE'S Comedies, Histories, and Tragedies. Published according to the true Original Copies. The third Impression. And unto this Impression is added seven Playes, never before Printed in Folio. Viz. Pericles Prince of Tyre. The London Prodigall. The History of Thomas Lord Cromwell. Sir John Oldcastle Lord Cobham. The Puritan Widow. A Yorkshire Tragedy. The Tragedy of Locrine. London, Printed for P. C. Reproduced in Facsimile from the Edition of 1664. The Droeshout Portrait is contained in this Volume. 4l. 4s. net.

MINIATURES. By DUDLEY HEATH. With 9 Plates in Colour, 15 in Collotype, and 15 in Photogravure. Wide royal 8vo, 25s. net.

This book is a history of the Art of Miniature Painting from its earliest origin and development in the Illuminated Manuscript under Byzantine, Carolingian, Celtic, and Saxon influences, and in the French, Flemish, and Italian Schools of the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries, showing the growth of realistic expression in the Miniature, and tracing its subsequent history as an independent art of portraiture "in little" down to the present day.

GREAT ZIMBABWE. By R. N. HALL, part Author of 'The Ancient Ruins of Rhodesia.' With numerous Plans and Illustrations. Royal 8vo, 21s. net.

ENGLAND UNDER the STUARTS. By G. M. TREVELYAN, Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge, Author of 'The Age of Wyclif.' With Maps and Plans. Demy 8vo, 10s. 6d. net.

This is the Fifth Volume, though the first published, of the Six Volumes of a New HISTORY of ENGLAND (Edited by Prof. C. W. C. OMAN), from the earliest times down to the year 1815.

WILLIAM BODHAM DONNE and his FRIENDS.

Edited by Mrs. BARHAM JOHNSON. With Illustrations. Demy 8vo, 10s. 6d. net. W. B. Donne, cousin of the poet Cowper, was a man of letters; successively Librarian at the London Library, and Licensor of Plays; better known as the intimate friend of Edward FitzGerald, Mrs. Kemble, John Mitchell Kemble, &c., letters from whom are included in this correspondence.

The POEMS of JOHN KEATS. With an Introduction and Notes by E. De SELINCOURT, M.A. With a Portrait in Photogravure. Demy 8vo, 7s. 6d. net.

The WORKS of CHARLES and MARY LAMB. Edited by E. V. LUCAS. With numerous Illustrations. In Seven Volumes. Demy 8vo, 7s. 6d. each. Vols. VI. and VII. The LETTERS.

This Edition contains a large number of New Letters, and all the Letters have been collated afresh. Mr. E. V. Lucas, the Editor, has attempted in the elaborate Notes not only to show the relation of Lamb's writings to his life, but to account for all his quotations and allusions—an ideal of thoroughness far superior to any that previous Editors have set before themselves.

OLD GORGON GRAHAM. By G. H. LORIMER. Second Edition. Crown 8vo, 6s.

This is a pendant to Mr. Lorimer's 'Letters from a Self-made Merchant,' a book which has had, both here and in America, an almost unprecedented success. In this book the father tells the story of his own rise with the same inimitable wit and racy wisdom.

CROMWELL'S ARMY: a History of the English Soldier during the Civil Wars, the Commonwealth, and the Protectorate. By C. H. FIRTH, M.A. New and Cheaper Edition. Crown 8vo, 6s.

JEREMY BENTHAM. By C. M. ATKINSON. Demy 8vo, 5s. net.

SICILY. By DOUGLAS SLADEN. With 334 Illustrations. Crown 8vo, 5s. net.

LIFE'S QUESTIONINGS. By W. R. PATERSON (Benjamin Swift). Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d. net.

This Edition is limited to 750 Copies, and will not be reprinted. The form of the book is unusual, at least in English literature. It is a criticism of life done in the manner of the French epigrammatists.

The MAN in the PULPIT. By JAMES DOUGLAS. Crown 8vo, 2s. 6d. net.

CHITRAL: the Story of a Minor Siege. By Sir G. S. ROBERTSON, K.C.S.I. Third Edition. With numerous Illustrations, Map, and Plan. Crown 8vo, 2s. 6d. net. [Half-Crown Library.]

The GOLDEN POMP. A Procession of English Lyrics. Arranged by A. T. QUILLER-COUCH. Second and Cheaper Edition. Crown 8vo, 2s. 6d. net. [Half-Crown Library.]

WHAT DO WE KNOW CONCERNING ELECTRICITY? By ANTONIA ZIMMERN, B.Sc. Crown 8vo, 1s. 6d. net.

ENGLAND'S RUIN. Discussed in Sixteen Letters to the Right Honourable Joseph Chamberlain, M.P. By A. M. S. METHUEN. Fourth Edition. Crown 8vo, 3d. net.

NEW NOVELS.

THE GOLDEN BOWL. By HENRY JAMES. Crown 8vo, 6s.

[Third Edition in the press.] "Nothing more exquisitely and pathetically beautiful than the character of Maggie, the herocially patient, persistent, developed little wife and daughter, is to be found in the gallery of modern fiction."—Standard.

"It is impressively clever. The mind out of which this work is spun is of astonishing capacity and insight."—Daily Mail.

"To give any idea of the infinite subtlety and delicacy with which the author narrates his story is beyond the strength of mortal reviewer."—Daily Chronicle.

"The novel is masterly. The three leading women are differentiated with the nicest skill; each is living and persuasive."—Academy.

The SECRET WOMAN. By EDEN PHILLPOTTS. Fourth Edition. Crown 8vo, 6s.

"A more magnificent scenic environment a story could scarcely have than this, and with splendid force and truth is it set forth by Mr. Phillpotts. In his moor-men, his quarrymen, his labourers, his granite merchant, and the rest, he gives us character that is unerringly the genuine product of the soil. These folk are drawn from the life by a master hand. We are greatly impressed by the art with which Mr. Phillpotts has worked out of its simple elements this powerful and gloomy tragedy, which possesses, as we have hinted, so many qualities of the Elizabethan drama. The book is undoubtedly a very remarkable one, strongly conceived, and wrought with striking power and originality."—Westminster Gazette.

The DRYAD. By JUSTIN HUNTLY MCCARTHY, Author of 'If I were King.' Illustrated. Crown 8vo, 6s.

The OLD CANTONMENT. By B. M. CROKER. Crown 8vo, 6s.

MRS. GALER'S BUSINESS. By W. PETT RIDGE. Crown 8vo, 6s.

"The story is told with charming geniality and unfailing humour, and the author's sympathy is large and sincere."—Morning Leader.

"There are quite a number of interesting characters drawn with a firm hand and fine insight, and Mr. Pett Ridge displays throughout all his old keenness of observation of the ordinary life and movement of the London streets."—Glasgow Herald.

The CASTLE of the SHADOWS. By Mrs. C. N. WILLIAMSON, co-Author of 'The Lightning Conductor.' Illustrated. Crown 8vo, 6s.

[Second Edition in the press.] "The author gives a picturesque and vivid description of life on a convict settlement, and the horrors associated with it. A strong love element underlies the whole story. It is as romantic as it is quaint and remarkable."—Scotsman.

"The story is narrated with all Mrs. Williamson's picturesqueness and skill."—Times.

BARHAM of BELTANA. By W. E. NORRIS. Crown 8vo, 6s.

"Sane and sincere, and these are qualities which give Mr. Norris's work a charm of its own."—Times.

"It is written in excellent English, and is entirely free from any of the literary affectations of the day."—Glasgow Herald.

The VALLEY of the SHADOW. By WILLIAM LE QUEUX. With 2 Illustrations by A. H. BUCKLAND. Crown 8vo, 6s.

[Second Edition in the press.] "The tale is straightforward and absorbing. Mr. Le Queux is the best living author of exciting novels."—Morning Leader.

The SYSTEM. By PERCY WHITE, Author of 'The West End,' &c. Third Edition. Crown 8vo, 6s.

"Very life-like and intensely readable."—Daily Mail. "Mr. White's good things are not only excellently said, but also, it seems to us, tolerably true. He has never been happier in his exposure of the taste of the age in which we live."—Athenæum.

"The System' is in Mr. White's best manner and contains both thought and pleasures admirably mixed."—Morning Leader.

"Mr. White is not less interesting than usual, and his firm touch, his quiet humour and cynicism, his assured methods are all here."—Standard.

"The novel is deeply interesting and excessively clever."—Academy.

"A clever and interesting book. It is well written; its sketches of character are vivid and ably contrasted."—Scotsman.

The GATE of the DESERT. By JOHN OXENHAM, Author of 'Barbe of Grand Bayou.' With a Frontispiece. Third Edition. Crown 8vo, 6s.

"The heroine is sublime, but the most individual person is the Jew."—Athenæum.

"Full of incident, adventure, humour, and human interest."—St. James's Gazette.

"There is not a dull page in the book. The accounts of the shipwreck and the storm in the desert are in the author's best style."—Daily News.

HIS ISLAND PRINCESS. By W. CLARK RUSSELL. Illustrated. Crown 8vo, 6s.

"Devised with unusual invention."—Daily Mail.

"Interesting, surprising, and exciting."—Morning Leader.

"There is abundant life and colour and movement, sympathy and tragedy, and plenty of incident."—St. James's Gazette.

The TEMPESTUOUS PETTICOAT. By ROBERT BARR, Author of 'The Countess Tekla,' &c. Illustrated. Second Edition. Crown 8vo, 6s.

"A bright and amusing story and engrossing."—Daily Mail.

"Entertaining and amusing to a high degree."—Scotsman.

Kindly write to Messrs. METHUEN for particulars of their Two New Series, "METHUEN'S HALF-CROWN LIBRARY" and "METHUEN'S SHILLING NOVELS."

METHUEN & CO. 36, Essex Street, Strand, W.C.

H A R P E R ' S

FOR APRIL,

READY MARCH 27.

Points on splendid List of Contents.

DO WE COMMUNICATE with ONE ANOTHER by N-RAYS? Some of the Mysteries of Life may be explained by the alleged discovery of this new kind of light. See 'The N-Rays: One of the most remarkable Anomalies of Science,' by Prof. R. K. Duncan.

The MEDIEVAL LIBRARY. A full Description, illustrated by Curious Prints. By E. C. Richardson, Ph.D.

The PROMISE of HERCULANEUM. The rich field awaiting Exploration by the Co-operation of the whole Civilized World. See 'What Herculanum offers to Archaeology,' by Charles Waldstein, Ph.D. L.H.D.

W. D. HOWELLS'S PILGRIMAGE in ENGLAND. A typical Phase of recent English Civilization as seen on Landing at Plymouth.

The NEW GOLD CAMP in NEVADA, on the edge of Death Valley. "Constitutes a wonderful fast-written drama in the desert."

SHARING the GAINS in the GREAT CORPORATIONS of the FUTURE. How much can Profit-Sharing do to solve the Problem of Monopoly? See Article on 'Profit-Sharing, Old and New,' by J. B. Clark, Ph.D. LL.D.

EIGHT COMPLETE STORIES.

SKETCHES—MANY ORIGINAL ILLUSTRATIONS—SPECIAL WOOD ENGRAVING OF FOREST-SCENE AFTER WYANT—HUMOROUS DRAWINGS, &c.

HARPER'S MAGAZINE. 1s.

CHESTERTON'S "IRRESISTIBLE HUMOUR."

THE CLUB OF QUEER TRADES.

By G. K. CHESTERTON.

Illustrated by the Author. 6s.

SECOND IMPRESSION, CALLED FOR ON PUBLICATION, NOW READY.

"There is a liberal supply of ingenious parody, telling satire, and irresistible humour. It bears the stamp of unquestionable genius."—World.

"Its humour is delicious, its ingenuity is marvellous. It is unique."—ROBERT BARR in the Idler.

THE FORTUNES OF FARTHING.

By A. J. DAWSON. 8s.

By the Author of 'Things Seen in Morocco,' &amp;c.

"The love of David and Mercy is a beautiful thing beautifully portrayed.....Reminds us of one of Mr. Hardy's fine Wessex stories."—Daily Telegraph.

MY TURKISH BRIDE.

By ARTHUR CRAWSHAY. With Frontispiece. 6s.

The Russian secret police and their marvellous system of espionage play an interesting part. The love story concerns an Oxford man with his keenness for sport and adventure, and the scene moves from England to Russia and Constantinople.

LANGBARROW HALL.

By THEODORA WILSON-WILSON. 6s.

By the Author of 'T' Bacca Queen.'

A fresh-air novel of the north country (Westmoreland), with plenty of movement and some unforgettable characters—the crafty supplanter, the unscrupulous speculator, the daring, unconventional heroine, and her studious, deep-thinking lover.

THE SILENCE OF MRS. HARROLD.

By S. M. GARDENHIRE. 6s.

By the Author of 'Lux Crucis.'

A powerful novel, dealing adroitly with a vitally interesting question—the equality of woman with man in the marriage contract.

"A NEW MASTER OF THE DETECTIVE STORY."

THE MARATHON MYSTERY.

By B. E. STEVENSON. 6s.

By the Author of 'The Halladay Case.'

"The best detective story we have read for a long time. It has an originality of its own. Mr. Stevenson is to be congratulated."—Athenæum.

HARPER & BROTHERS,
45, Albemarle Street, London, W.

MR. MURRAY'S NEW BOOKS.

NOW READY AT ALL BOOKSELLERS' AND LIBRARIES.

LHASA AND ITS MYSTERIES.

A RECORD OF THE EXPEDITION, 1903-1904.

By L. AUSTINE WADDELL, LL.D. C.B. C.I.E.,

Lieut.-Colonel Indian Medical Service.

With 200 Illustrations from Special Photographs and Maps. Demy 8vo, 25s. net.

OUR SUDAN: its Pyramids and Progress.

By JOHN WARD, F.S.A., Author of 'The Sacred Beetle,' 'Greek Coins and their Parent Cities,' &c. Dedicated by request to LORD KITCHENER of KHARTOUM. Crown 4to, 400 pp., 720 Illustrations, 21s. net. Including Maps and many Portraits. [Ready next week.]

THE FRIENDS OF ENGLAND.

By the Hon. GEORGE PEEL, Author of 'The Enemies of England.' Demy 8vo, 12s. net. [Now ready. "The subjects with which Mr. Peel deals are of the deepest interest, and he shows wide reading on every page."—Athenæum.

"Thoughtful, eloquent, stimulating, the book should be read to good purpose by every one interested in its subject."—Scotsman.

A NEW AND CHEAPER EDITION, 1s. net.

IRELAND IN THE NEW CENTURY.

By the Right Hon. Sir HORACE PLUNKETT, K.C.V.O. F.R.S., Vice-President of the Department of Agriculture and Technical Instruction for Ireland; Member of His Majesty's Privy Council in Ireland; Commissioner Congested Districts Board, Ireland. Large crown 8vo, paper covers. [Ready next week.]

JUST PUBLISHED. TWO VOLUMES OF ESSAYS BY THE LATE LORD SALISBURY.
ESSAYS ON FOREIGN POLITICS.

Large crown 8vo, 6s. net.

BIOGRAPHICAL ESSAYS.

Large crown 8vo, with Portrait, 6s. net.

"Their intrinsic merit and their personal interest are alike beyond dispute."—Times.

"Many readers will welcome the opportunity now afforded them of reading these articles, written by the distinguished statesman, and even those who were politically opposed to him will readily acknowledge the literary ability which is abundantly displayed throughout."—Daily Telegraph.

"They possess a unique interest as exhibiting the bent of the author's mind at a comparatively early age, and the growth of convictions destined to bear such golden fruit. Their historical value is, of course, considerable."—Standard.

THIRD IMPRESSION NOW READY.

THE LIFE OF THE MARQUIS OF DUFFERIN AND AVA.

By Sir ALFRED LYALL, P.C. With Portraits, &amp;c. Demy 8vo, 2 vols. 36s. net.

"A masterpiece of biographical art; the writer never obtrudes his own personality, devoting sound judgment and consummate skill to moulding in just proportions the figure and lineaments of his subject."—Punch.

NOTES FROM A DIARY, 1896—Jan. 23, 1901.

By the Right Hon. Sir MOUNTSTUART E. GRANT DUFF, G.C.S.I. F.R.S. Seventh Series. 2 vols. crown 8vo, 18s. [Now ready.]

"The closing volumes of a modern journal which has qualities, contents, and a style that suggest Evelyn's."—Daily Chronicle.

MAKERS OF MODERN HISTORY.

NAPOLEON III. CAVOUR. BISMARCK.

By the Hon. EDWARD CADOGAN. Demy 8vo, 8s. net. [Ready next week.]

BIRD LIFE AND BIRD LORE.

By R. BOSWORTH SMITH, Author of 'The Life of Lord Lawrence,' &c. Square demy 8vo, with Illustrations, 10s. 6d. net. [Now ready.]

A NEW SIX-SHILLING NOVEL.

A QUIXOTIC WOMAN.

By ISOBEL FITZROY. Large crown 8vo.

[Ready next week.]

JOHN MURRAY, Albemarle Street, W.

LOVELL REEVE & CO.'S NEW AND STANDARD WORKS.

NEW SERIES (THE FOURTH), PART IV., 3s. 6d. net.

The BOTANICAL MAGAZINE. Hand-Coloured Figures with Descriptions, Structural and Historical, of New and Rare Plants, suitable for the Garden, Stove, or Conservatory. Edited by Sir WM. T. THISELTON-DYER, K.C.M.G., F.R.S., &c., Director of the Royal Botanic Gardens, Kew. Monthly, with 6 Hand-Coloured Plates, 3s. 6d. Annual Subscription, 42s. net.

NOW READY.

FLORA of HAMPSHIRE, including the Isle of Wight. A List of the Flowering Plants and Ferns found in the County of Southampton, with Localities of the less common Species. By F. TOWNSEND, M.A. F.L.S. New Edition. With Enlarged Coloured Map mounted on Ilucn, and 2 Plates, 1 Coloured. 21s. net.

The HEPATICÆ of the BRITISH ISLES: Figures and Descriptions of all known British Species. By W. H. PEARSON. 2 vols. 228 Plates, 7l. 10s. net plain; 11l. 2s. 6d. net Coloured.

FLORA of TROPICAL AFRICA. By D. OLIVER, F.R.S. Vols. I. to III. 20s. each net. The CONTINUATION, Edited by Sir W. T. THISELTON-DYER, F.R.S. Vol. IV. Section 1. 30s. net. Vol. V. 25s. 6d. net. Vol. VII. 27s. 6d. net. Vol. VIII. 25s. 6d. net. Published under the authority of the First Commissioner of His Majesty's Works.

FLORA CAPENSIS: a Systematic Description of the Plants of the Cape Colony, Caffraria, and Port Natal. Vols. I. to III. by W. H. HARVEY and O. W. SONDER, 20s. each net. The CONTINUATION, Edited by Sir W. T. THISELTON-DYER, F.R.S. Vol. IV. Section 2, 24s. net. Vol. V. Part I. 9s. net. Vol. VI. 24s. net. Vol. VII. 33s. net. Published under the authority of the Government of the Cape of Good Hope and Natal.

FLORA of BRITISH INDIA. By Sir J. D. HOOKER, C.B. G.C.S.I. F.R.S., &c., assisted by various Botanists. 7 vols. 12l. net.

FLORA of MAURITIUS and the SEYCHELLES: a Description of the Flowering Plants and Ferns of those Islands. By J. G. BAKER, F.L.S. 24s. net.

HANDBOOK of the NEW ZEALAND FLORA: a Systematic Description of the Native Plants of New Zealand and the Chatham, Kermadec's, Lord Auckland's, Campbell's, and Macquarrie's Islands. By Sir J. D. HOOKER, G.C.S.I. F.R.S. 42s. net.

FLORA AUSTRALIENSIS: a Description of the Plants of the Australian Territory. By GEORGE BENTHAM, F.R.S., assisted by FERDINAND MUELLER, F.R.S. 7 vols. 7l. 4s. net.

FLORA of the BRITISH WEST INDIAN ISLANDS. By Dr. GRISEBACH, F.L.S. 1 vol. 42s. net.

FLORA of WEST YORKSHIRE: with an Account of the Climatology and Lithology in connexion therewith. By FREDERIC ARNOLD LEES, M.R.C.S. Eng. L.R.C.P. Lond. 8vo, with Coloured Map, 21s. net.

HANDBOOK of the BRITISH FLORA. By G. BENTHAM, F.R.S. Revised by Sir J. D. HOOKER, C.B. F.R.S. Eighth Edition. 9s. net.

ILLUSTRATIONS of the BRITISH FLORA. Drawn by W. H. FITCH, F.L.S., and W. G. SMITH, F.L.S. 1,315 Wood Engravings. Fifth Edition. 9s. net.

The NARCISSUS: its History and Culture. By F. W. BURBIDGE, F.L.S. With a Scientific Review of the Entire Genus by J. G. BAKER, F.R.S. F.L.S. With 48 beautifully Coloured Plates. 30s. net.

BRITISH FERNS. By M. PLUES. 16 Coloured Plates and Woodcuts. 9s. net.

BRITISH GRASSES. By M. PLUES. 16 Coloured Plates and Woodcuts. 9s. net.

HANDBOOK of BRITISH MOSSES. By the Rev. M. J. BERKELEY, M.A. F.L.S. Second Edition. 24 Coloured Plates. 21s. net.

SYNOPSIS of BRITISH MOSSES. By C. P. HOBKIRK, F.L.S. Revised Edition. 6s. 6d. net.

The BRITISH MOSS-FLORA. By R. BRAITHWAITE, M.D. F.L.S. Vol. I., with 45 finely executed Plates, 50s. Vol. II., with 39 Plates, 42s. 6d. Parts XVII. to XXII. each 6s. net.

BRITISH FUNGI, PHYCOMYCETES, and USTILAGINEÆ. By GEORGE MASSEE. 8 Plates. 6s. 6d. net.

BRITISH FUNGOLOGY. By the Rev. M. J. BERKELEY, M.A. F.L.S. With a Supplement of nearly 400 pages by WORTHINGTON G. SMITH, F.L.S. 2 vols. 24 Coloured Plates, 36s. net. Supplement only, 12s.

The ESCULENT FUNGUSES of ENGLAND. By C. D. BADIHAM, M.D. Second Edition. Edited by F. CURREY, F.R.S. 12 Coloured Plates. 12s. net.

Complete in 1 vol. 4to, with 2 Structural and 60 Coloured Plates, cloth, gilt top, 6l. 15s. net.

MONOGRAPH of the MEMBRACIDÆ. By GEORGE BOWDLER BUCKTON, F.R.S. F.L.S. F.E.S., to which is added a Paper entitled 'Suggestions as to the Meaning of the Shapes and Colours of the Membracidae in the Struggle for Existence,' by EDWARD B. POULTON, D.Sc. M.A. Hon.LL.D. (Princeton), F.R.S., &c., Hope Professor of Zoology in the University of Oxford.

MONOGRAPH of the BRITISH CICADÆ or TETTI-GIDÆ. By GEORGE BOWDLER BUCKTON, F.R.S. F.L.S. F.C.S. F.E.S., &c. 2 vols. 8vo. 82 Coloured Plates. 42s. net.

Part CXII. 4 Coloured Plates. 5s. net.

The LEPIDOPTERA of the BRITISH ISLANDS. By CHARLES G. BARRETT, F.E.S. Vols. I. to IX. each 12s.; Large Edition, Vol. I., with 40 Coloured Plates, 53s.; Vols. II. to IX. each, with 48 Coloured Plates, 63s. net.

LABELLING LIST of the BRITISH MACRO-LEPIDOPTERA, as arranged in 'Lepidoptera of the British Islands.' By CHARLES G. BARRETT, F.E.S. 1s. 6d. net.

Part LXX. 8 Coloured Plates. 15s.

LEPIDOPTERA INDICA. By F. MOORE, F.Z.S. F.E.S. Vols. I. to V. each, with 96 Coloured Plates, 9l. 5s. cloth; 9l. 15s. half-morocco. Parts LXI. to LXIX. each 15s. net.

The LEPIDOPTERA of CEYLON. By F. MOORE, F.Z.S. 3 vols. medium 4to, 215 Coloured Plates, cloth, gilt tops, 21l. 12s. net. Published under the auspices of the Government of Ceylon.

TERACOLUS: a Monograph of the Genus. By E. M. BOWDLER SHARPE. Parts I. to XI. 4to, each with 4 Coloured Plates, 7s. 6d. net.

The LARVÆ of the BRITISH LEPIDOPTERA and their FOOD PLANTS. By OWEN S. WILSON. With Life Sized Figures Drawn and Coloured from Nature by ELEANORA WILSON. 40 Coloured Plates. 63s. net.

The HYMENOPTERA ACULEATA of the BRITISH ISLANDS. By EDWARD SAUNDERS, F.L.S. Complete, with 3 Plates, 16s. Large-Paper Edition, with 51 Coloured Plates, 68s. net.

The HEMIPTERA HETEROPTERA of the BRITISH ISLANDS. By EDWARD SAUNDERS, F.L.S. Complete, with a Structural Plate, 14s. Large Edition, with 31 Coloured Plates, 48s. net.

The HEMIPTERA HOMOPTERA of the BRITISH ISLANDS. By JAMES EDWARDS, F.E.S. Complete, with 2 Structural Plates, 12s. Large Edition, with 28 Coloured Plates, 43s. net.

The COLEOPTERA of the BRITISH ISLANDS. By the Rev. Canon FOWLER, M.A. F.L.S. Complete in 5 vols. with 2 Structural Plates, 4l. Large Edition, with 180 Coloured Plates, 14l. net.

A CATALOGUE of the BRITISH COLEOPTERA. By D. SHARPE, M.A. F.R.S., and W. W. FOWLER, M.A. 1s. 6d.; or printed on one side for Labels, 2s. 6d. net.

The BUTTERFLIES of EUROPE. Described and Figured by H. C. LANG, M.D. F.L.S. With 82 Coloured Plates, containing upwards of 900 Figures. 2 vols. 3l. 18s. net.

BRITISH INSECTS. By E. F. STAVELEY. 16 Coloured Plates and Woodcuts. 12s. net.

BRITISH BEETLES. By E. C. RYE. New Edition. Revised by the Rev. Canon FOWLER, M.A. F.L.S. 16 Coloured Plates and Woodcuts. 9s. net.

BRITISH BEES. By W. E. SHUCKARD. 16 Coloured Plates and Woodcuts. 9s. net.

BRITISH BUTTERFLIES and MOTHS. By H. T. STAINTON. Second Edition. 16 Coloured Plates and Woodcuts. 9s. net.

BRITISH SPIDERS. By E. F. STAVELEY. 16 Coloured Plates and Woodcuts. 9s. net.

FOREIGN FINCHES in CAPTIVITY. By ARTHUR G. BUTLER, Ph.D. F.L.S. F.Z.S. F.E.S. With 60 Plates, beautifully Coloured by Hand. Royal 4to, cloth, 4l. 14s. 6d. net.

BRITISH ZOOPHYTES. By A. S. PENNINGTON, F.L.S. 24 Plates. 9s. net.

ELEMENTS of CONCHOLOGY: an Introduction to the Natural History of Shells and of the Animals which form them. By LOVELL REEVE, F.L.S. 2 vols. 62 Coloured Plates. 2l. 15s. net.

CONCHOLOGIA ICONICA; or, Figures and Descriptions of the Shells of Mollusks, with Remarks on their Affinities, Synonymy, and Geographical Distribution. By LOVELL REEVE, F.L.S., and G. H. SOWERBY, F.L.S. Complete in 20 vols. 4to, with 2,727 Coloured Plates, half-calf, 178l. net.

A Detailed List of Monographs and Volumes may be had.

LOVELL REEVE & CO., LIMITED, Publishers to the Home, Colonial, and Indian Governments,
6, Henrietta Street, Covent Garden, W.C.

MACMILLAN & CO.'S LIST.

SECOND EDITION READY NEXT TUESDAY. SHAKESPEAREAN TRAGEDY:

Lectures on Hamlet, Othello, King Lear, and Macbeth. By Prof. A. C. BRADLEY, LL.D. Litt.D. 8vo, 10s. net.

TIMES.—"The book is a great achievement. Nothing has been written for many years that has done so much as these lectures will do to advance the understanding and appreciation of the greatest things in Shakespeare's greatest plays.....One may well doubt whether in the whole field of English literary criticism anything has been written in the last twenty years more luminous, more masterly, more penetrating to the very centre of its subject."

VOL. IV. NOW READY.

DIARY & LETTERS OF MADAME D'ARBLAY

(1778-1840). As Edited by her Niece, CHARLOTTE BARRETT. With Preface and Notes by AUSTIN DOBSON. With Photogravure Portraits and other Sketches. In 6 vols. Vol. I., 1778 to June, 1781. Vol. II., 1781-86. Vol. III., August, 1786, to June, 1788. Vol. IV., July, 1788, to July, 1791. 8vo, 10s. 6d. net each.

WILLIAM RATHBONE: A Memoir.

By ELEANOR F. RATHBONE. With Portraits. Extra crown 8vo, 7s. 6d. net.

TWELVE ENGLISH STATESMEN.

CONCLUDING VOLUME.

CHATHAM.

By FREDERIC HARRISON. Crown 8vo, 2s. 6d.

ENGLISH MEN OF LETTERS.—New Series.

SYDNEY SMITH.

By GEORGE W. E. RUSSELL. Crown 8vo, gilt top, flat back, 2s. net.

AN ANGLER'S HOURS.

By H. T. SHERINGHAM, Angling Editor of the Field. Extra crown 8vo, 6s. net. [Tuesday.]

SECOND EDITION JUST PUBLISHED.

ROMAN SOCIETY,

From Nero to Marcus Aurelius.

By Prof. SAMUEL DILL, M.A. Litt.D. LL.D. 8vo, 15s. net.

THE

LOGIC OF HUMAN CHARACTER.

By CHARLES J. WHITBY, B.A. M.D. Oantab. Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d. net.

NEW AND CHEAPER EDITION.

CHRISTIAN CHARACTER.

Being some Lectures on the Elements of Christian Ethics. By J. R. ILLINGWORTH, M.A. D.D., Author of 'Personality, Human and Divine,' 'Reason and Revelation,' &c. Crown 8vo, 6s.

A NEW VOLUME OF LENTEN READINGS.

CHRIST THE LIFE AND LIGHT.

Lenten Readings selected from the Writings of the Right Rev. PHILLIPS BROOKS, D.D. By W. M. L. JAY. Crown 8vo, 6s.

SECOND IMPRESSION NOW READY.

THE DIARY OF A CHURCH-GOER.

Crown 8vo, gilt top, 3s. 6d. net.

APRIL NUMBERS READY NEXT TUESDAY.

THE CENTURY MAGAZINE.

Illustrated. Price 1s. 4d. Annual Subscription, 16s.

The APRIL Number contains:—

The CHATEAUX of the LOIRE. I. Chinon—Chenonceaux—Luynes. By RICHARD WHITEING, Author of 'No. 5 John Street,' &c. Pictures by Jules Guérin and André Castaigne.

A WONDER-WORKER of SCIENCE. An Authoritative Account of Luther Burbank's Unique Work in creating New Forms of Plant Life. II. By William S. Harwood.

SANDY. A Story. By ALICE HEGAN RICE, Author of 'Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch.' V. Illustrated. And numerous other Stories and Articles of General Interest.

ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE FOR CHILDREN.

ST. NICHOLAS.

Price 1s. Annual Subscription, 12s.

MACMILLAN & CO., LIMITED, London.

MESSRS. HURST & BLACKETT

beg to announce that, owing to the continued demand for Mr. PERCEVAL LANDON'S great work on Tibet, the First Impression is nearly exhausted. A Second Impression is now being prepared.

L H A S A.

By PERCEVAL LANDON, Special Correspondent of the Times. With an Introduction by Col. Sir FRANCIS YOUNG-HUSBAND, K.C.I.E. In 2 vols. royal 8vo, beautifully illustrated, 2l. 2s. net.

An Illustrated Prospectus, with Extracts from Reviews, sent free on application.

NOW IN GREAT DEMAND.

In 1 vol. medium 8vo, with over 250 Illustrations, 18s. net.

ANTARCTICA.

Two Years amongst the Ice of the South Pole.

By Dr. OTTO NORDENSKJÖLD.

"The authors have as good a story to tell as any polar explorer since Nansen, and they have told it with spirit and enthusiasm."—Times.

MR. DOWNEY'S BOOK IS THE SUCCESS OF THE SEASON.

In 1 vol. large crown 8vo, with 16 Portrait Sketches, 6s. net.

TWENTY YEARS AGO.

A Book of Anecdote.

By EDMUND DOWNEY,

Author of 'Through Green Glasses.'

"The anecdotes are all fresh goods, and in the humour of them there is an unmistakable taste of reality which adds immensely to the flavour."—St. James's Gazette.

"Mr. Downey has an ample collection of good stories, and knows how to tell them well."—World.

In 1 vol. crown 8vo, 6s.

A GENDARME OF THE KING.

Being the Experiences of the Laird of Lindourie with the Great Frederick in the Seven Years' War.

By PHILIP L. STEVENSON.

"Narrated with plenty of movement and with a graphic picture of Frederick himself."—Times.

"Major Stevenson has managed to conjure up the real spirit of life in Frederick's Courts and camps."—Pall Mall Gazette.

A BOOK OF GREAT INTEREST ON CHILD LIFE AND LABOUR IN OUR BIG CITIES.

In 1 vol. large crown 8vo, with Illustrations, 6s.

The CHILD SLAVES of BRITAIN.

By ROBERT SHERRARD, Author of 'The White Slaves of England,' &c.

NEW EDITION, REVISED AND ENLARGED.

In 1 vol. demy 8vo, illustrated with numerous Reproductions from Photographs and Drawings, 12s. net.

ILLUSTRATED HORSEBREAK-

ING. By Capt. M. H. HAYES, Author of 'Points of the Horse,' 'Veterinary Notes,' &c.

London: HURST & BLACKETT, LIMITED,
182, High Holborn, W.C.

J. M. DENT & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

THE GREATEST RUSSIAN AUTHOR

DENT'S COMPLETE TOLSTOY.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—Not only will Dent's "TOLSTOY" be completed in 12 months, but it will contain everything written by the great Russian Author up to 1905, including a Thought-Index to all the important thoughts and ideas in the Works, together with a Biography, Bibliography, and Critical Analysis.

Large crown 8vo, illustrated, 3s. 6d. per vol. (sold separately).

Edited and Translated by Prof. LEO WIENER, Professor of Slavic Languages and Literature at Harvard University, and Author of 'An Anthology of Russian Literature,' 'Yiddish Literature in the Nineteenth Century,' &c.

JUST READY, Vols. 5, 6, 7, and 8.

WAR AND PEACE. 4 vols.

Vol. I. CHILDHOOD, BOYHOOD, YOUTH, 1852-1857.

Vol. II. The COSSACKS, SEVASTOPOL, &c., 1852-1856.

Vol. III. A MOSCOW ACQUAINTANCE, The SNOWSTORM, DOMESTIC HAPPINESS, &c., 1856-1859.

Vol. IV. PEDAGOGICAL ARTICLES, The LINEN MEASURER, 1861-1862.

ALSO LARGE-PAPER EDITION, sold in Sets only, 10s. 6d. net per Vol.

The MORNING POST says:—"An excellent edition, well bound and clearly printed.....Prof. Wiener is an accomplished Russian scholar, and we are grateful for his clear and unpretentiously worded translations of Tolstoy's life-work."

PLEASE WRITE FOR A PROSPECTUS.

MEDIÆVAL TOWNS. VENICE. VENICE.†

By THOMAS OKEY.

Illustrated by NELLIE ERICHSEN.

PUNCH says:—"Admirable.....Indispensable to those about to visit Venice."

The SPECTATOR says:—"He has had no easy task in compressing into the limits of even the larger volumes of this series so great a mass of material; and he has performed it with skill and success."

ASSISI.* BRUGES.† CAIRO.† CHARTRES.† CONSTANTINOPLE.* FERRARA.† FLORENCE.† LONDON.† MOSCOW.* NUREMBERG.* PERUGIA.* PRAGUE.* ROME.† ROUEN.† SEVILLE.† SIENA.† TOLEDO.* VERONA.†

*Pocketable, cloth, 3s. 6d. net; roan, 4s. 6d. net.

†Cloth, 4s. 6d. net; roan, 5s. 6d. net.

Prospectus and Lists post free on application.

NOW READY.

HOMES OF THE FIRST FRANCISCANS.

In Umbria, the Borders of Tuscany, and the Northern Marches.

By BERYL D. DE SELINCOURT.

With 13 Illustrations from Photographs. Large crown 8vo, 4s. 6d. net.

LES CLASSIQUES FRANCAIS.

Pott 8vo, cloth, 1s. 6d. net; leather, 2s. 6d. net.

NEW VOLUME.

COLOMBA.

By PROSPER MÉRIMÉE.

With Preface by AUGUSTIN FILON.

NEW ILLUSTRATED EDITION OF
The Novels of Charlotte, Emily, and Anne Brontë.

In 10 vols. fcap. 8vo, cloth, with Striking New Coloured Illustrations by EDMOND DULAC.

JANE EYRE.

Fcap. 8vo, Cover Designed, 2 vols. complete, 5s. net.

London: J. M. DENT & CO. 29, Bedford Street.

SATURDAY, MARCH 25, 1905.

CONTENTS.

|  |         |
|--|---------|
| THE LIFE OF SIR JAMES BROWNE ... ..  | 361     |
| ROMAN SOCIETY FROM NERO TO MARCUS AURELIUS...  | 362     |
| HAWKER OF MORWENSTOW ... ..  | 363     |
| THE EAST AFRICA PROTECTORATE ... ..  | 363     |
| NEW NOVELS (The Fortunes of Farthings; Fergy the Guide; It was a Boy; Gossip; Heirs of Reuben; Nicole; My Lady of the North) ... ..  | 364-365 |
| SPAIN AND THE SPANISH ... ..   | 365     |
| GERMAN BOOKS ... ..  | 366     |
| OUR LIBRARY TABLE (The Country Day by Day; Twenty Years Ago; A New Text of Shelley; John Bunyan; Elementary Schools; Adventures among Books; Reprints; Crockford; A Historical Survey of the Boiler Makers and Iron and Steel Ship Builders' Society; Harmsworth Encyclopædia; Newspaper Cuttings Book) ... .. | 367-369 |
| LIST OF NEW BOOKS ... ..   | 369     |
| ENGLISH AND AMERICAN COPYRIGHT; OXFORD NOTES; MISTAKES IN PERAGES; THE SPRING PUBLISHING SEASON; SALE ... ..   | 369-371 |
| LITERARY GOSSIP ... ..   | 371     |
| SCIENCE—THE STRUCTURE OF THE ATOM; THE NATIONAL PHYSICAL LABORATORY; THE N RAYS; SOCIETIES; MEETINGS NEXT WEEK; GOSSIP ... ..  | 373-375 |
| FINE ARTS—THE BRIDGEWATER GALLERY; CHATS ON OLD FURNITURE; APOLLO; DANIEL GARDNER; THE TRUE PORTRAITURE OF MARY, QUEEN OF SCOTS; SALES; GOSSIP ... ..  | 376-377 |
| MUSIC—THE GARCIA CENTENARY; GOSSIP; PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK ... ..  | 378-379 |
| DRAMA—DU BARRI; THE THIEVES' COMEDY; THE DROESHOOT PORTRAIT OF SHAKESPEARE; GOSSIP ... ..  | 379-380 |

LITERATURE

*The Life and Times of General Sir James Browne, R.E., K.C.B.,* K.C.S.I.* By General J. J. McLeod Innes, R.E., V.C. (Murray.)

EIGHT years and a few months have elapsed since the news of Sir James Browne's short illness and unexpected death in Baluchistan reached England. It is not a long time, but long enough for most people, except those connected with him by the ties of private or official life, to have forgotten his existence. Such is the way of the world, and it is generally a beneficent way, because kindly oblivion hides defects which would be unduly prominent. But where, as in the present case, the good predominates, it is well that a record should be made; for many of Browne's good works still flourish and bear fruit. Consequently, we are indebted to General Innes for the memoir which he has compiled, under considerable difficulties, with much success.

It is divided into two main parts—Browne's biography, and remarks on the history of his time in India, these being enlivened by the strange story of the double, or doppelgänger, which enhances the interest of the book by the magic of romance.

James Browne was the third son of Dr. Robert Browne, of Falkirk, who began life as a doctor on board ship, and eventually practised successfully in Calcutta. There he married a lady of Dutch origin; they left Calcutta in 1835, and lived for a time in France, where, in 1839, James was born. The first fifteen years of his life were passed in France and Germany; consequently, he learnt languages colloquially with ease, a gift which was of much service to him afterwards. In 1855 he studied for a year at Cheltenham College, whence he went to Addiscombe, the East India Company's military college, in 1856. He was a strong, burly youngster, and having followed his brother, who was known there as "Buster," he naturally was called by the cadets "Young Buster": when the elder died during the Mutiny James succeeded to the title. In due course, he was appointed to the Bengal Engineers, and went towards the end of 1859 to Calcutta, whence he was sent to Roorkee, the headquarters of the Bengal Sappers and Miners. Soon after he joined, a detachment was required for an expedition under Neville Chamberlain against the Mahsud Waziris, and Browne was sent in charge. He arrived at headquarters the day before the force advanced, took part in the operations, attracting the favourable notice of his commanders, and thus successfully began his military career. He was next appointed to the Public Works Department, and posted to Attock, on the Indus, where, apart from Europeans, he lived among Pathan villagers, learnt their language, and acquired their respect and goodwill.

Matters were quiet on the frontier till 1863, when a force was assembled to punish the fanatics at Sitana, who had become troublesome. Neville Chamberlain again commanded, with Taylor (now Sir Alexander and G.C.B.) as chief engineer, Henry Blair, James Browne, and T. T. Carter being his assistants. The force, as originally composed, was too weak for its work, and consequently opposition was strong; but eventually the coalition against us was broken up, and the expedition was brought to a successful conclusion. Blair and Browne both distinguished themselves greatly; and the latter had the good fortune to receive substantial recognition, deferred, as is the custom of the service, till his promotion to be captain some seven years later.

Meantime, after some further episodes, including marriage, Browne was transferred from the rough frontier to Kangra, one of the most delightful and beautiful districts in the Punjab. There he built some notable bridges of brickwork, timber, and concrete, receiving deserved credit for the boldness of his designs and the resource he showed in overcoming difficulties. Two years' leave of absence was spent for the most part in visiting and studying important engineering works in England and on the Continent, but to most advantage in America, where railways were made in a rough-and-ready way, and iron or steel bridges were built on a scale suitable to Indian requirements. It is said, though the fact is not mentioned in the memoir before us, that his visit to the States had an unforeseen result; he left England full of fine faith in Radical principles and practice, but returned a confirmed Conservative. However that may be, the knowledge of construction acquired was extensively and successfully applied on his return to India. Some of these works brought him back to his old quarters near the North-West Frontier, so that when complications with Afghanistan (1876-8) were foreseen or arising, Lord Lytton, then Viceroy, selected Browne to reassure the tribes whose goodwill it was expedient to retain. He succeeded, and when war broke out was appointed to the staff of Sir Donald Stewart, commander of the army which invaded Southern Afghanistan. In this capacity, as well as in other dealings with the tribes, he was greatly assisted by an extraordinary delusion of the natives, specially the Ghilzis, that he had lived for some years among them as a Mulla or priest, and enjoyed a reputation for remarkable sanctity. This belief was so strong that, whilst other divisions or detachments of the army were suffering from want, wherever Brownemight be, plentiful supplies were forthcoming; and, most remarkable of all, when the enemy became aware that he was with the force about to attack Khelat-i-Ghilzi, a strong fort strongly held, towards which he was reconnoitring, some of his escort who had gone forward sent back word that no one would touch him if he occupied the fort. He promptly did so, spiked the guns surrounded by sulky tribesmen, and returned to British headquarters unmolested. The story, a very strange one, was told, as far as Browne knew it, in Blackwood's Magazine for August, 1896: it has since been partly unravelled, but there is still much that is obscure, which may perhaps some day be revealed.

In 1882 Browne accompanied the Indian contingent under the late Sir Herbert Macpherson to Egypt as commanding the Royal Engineers; and with him, it is interesting to mention, was W. G. Nicholson, now Sir William, just arrived from Japan in order to succeed Sir George White in the command of Gibraltar. On return to India Browne was placed in charge of that most difficult bit of engineering, the construction of the Harnai railway, from the plains of Baluchistan to the highlands of Peshin, through rifts and gorges, under colossal hindrances from climate, pestilence, and red tape. Indeed, apart from his own vigour and the devotion of able men serving under him, the only extraneous assistance, the only piece of luck, would seem to have come from the mysterious doppelgänger, for Browne was again credited with his spiritual excellences, and received unusual attention and reverence in consequence. The perseverance shown was rewarded with success; many distinguished persons visited the works and testified to their magnitude and to the skill of the engineers.

Afterwards Browne came to England, and while here was appointed in 1889 Quartermaster-General of the army in India by Lord Roberts. He remained head of that department till 1892.

Finally, after the death of Sir Robert Sandeman, Browne became Governor-General's Agent for Baluchistan—a position at any time full of difficulties, by no means made easier by an interregnum which ensued. But eventually his administration prospered, though his chief title to admiration rests on his undoubted merits as a soldier and an engineer.

Such in outline are the facts at the disposal of the biographer, and it will not be denied that they warrant expansion. This work the author has done, and mainly done it well, showing powers of graphic description. Witness the following adventure of his hero when with the Ambeyla force:—

* More correctly, Sir James Browne, K.C.S.I., C.B.

"His special function as an engineer was to strengthen this position and assist the defence of the picket; hence he was all night engaged on its outskirts, and this brought him twice into conflict with isolated Bonairwals creeping forward into the position. The first of them he had marked down at a spot whence he had been keeping up an unpleasant fire; and pouncing on him at last, he cut him down and stopped his doing any further mischief. Then, later on, he came unwittingly on an ambushed foe and was himself suddenly and vigorously attacked. The combat that issued was typical—nay Homeric. The Bonair's tulwar was of superb steel, a splendid weapon. It shattered Browne's sword at the hilt; but with that hilt Browne felled his foe to the ground, receiving, however, a slash on the arm at the same time. A struggle ensued. Browne, hammering the enemy, mastered him in spite of his wound, and seizing the tulwar, slew him with it, and ever held it as the choicest in his collection of trophies."

As literature the book is, however, unequal, and there are to be found repetitions, as well as the inclusion of matter of slender interest to the general reader. That curious person would probably consent to the elimination of much from the historical digressions which, though in themselves of interest and of value, interrupt the continuity of the narrative. Moreover, the matter dealt with contains much that is controversial, and much that the few who were behind the scenes are alone in a position to expound. It is, of course, open to any one to form opinions as to the merit or otherwise of this or that policy or administration, but that those opinions should be authoritative involves either unusual opportunity for exact knowledge of the circumstances, or prolonged study of the confidential correspondence of many departments of Government.

The volume is very well turned out, light in hand, though somewhat bulky; the illustrations are excellent and well chosen; and there is an index. It should be widely read by that increasing public which concerns itself in our empire abroad; it certainly will be read with great interest by the decreasing number of Browne's contemporaries.

---

Roman Society from Nero to Marcus Aurelius. By Samuel Dill. (Macmillan & Co.)

READERS of Mr. Dill's earlier volume, 'Roman Society in the Last Century of the Western Empire,' which appeared in 1898, and in a second edition in 1899, were prepared to extend a hearty welcome to this new work, which deals with a better-known and more interesting period. The success which attended the previous book is already, we are glad to say, secured for this. For in it appear the same excellent qualities—acquaintance with the original documents and modern discussions about them, clear arrangement, a pleasing style, which rises at times to real eloquence, sanity of judgment, and breadth of sympathy. The author's enthusiasm leaves with the reader a resolution to make himself better acquainted with the original authorities.

The work is divided into four books, dealing respectively with private life, public life, philosophy, and religion during this period. The first contains chapters on 'The Aristocracy under the Terror,' 'The World of the Satirist,' and 'The Society of the Freedmen.' The second book is similarly divided into three chapters, sketching the circle of the younger Pliny, municipal life, and the plebeian life, with its colleges. In the third book the philosophy of the time is expounded in three chapters, which present most attractive pictures of Seneca as a type of the philosophic director; Lucian, Dion Chrysostom, and others as philosophic missionaries; and Plutarch, Maximus of Tyre, and others as philosophic theologians. The last book discusses superstition, belief in immortality, the old Roman religion, the Magna Mater, Isis and Serapis, and the religion of Mithra; and the whole closes with an excellent index.

Of some of the portions of this subject there is no treatment in English except Mr. Dill's, and of many his treatment is undoubtedly the best in our language. Much that he has to say about freedmen, for example, about the literature, and about the worship of Eastern gods will be new to many well-informed scholars.

With Mr. Dill's survey of these subjects we must pronounce ourselves to be in almost complete agreement. It is evident that he has read widely and well, and that he has been careful both in his opinions and in the expression of them. We feel, however, that he has been more than just to paganism, and that the best explanation of the moral elevation we find in many characters during the period under discussion has not been hinted at by him, namely, the influence of Christianity. We find no reference here to the Christians of Cæsar's household, mentioned by St. Paul in the Epistle to the Philippians, or to Flavius Clemens and Domitilla, the cousins of the Emperor Domitian, to mention two examples that occur readily to the mind. The author seems to consider that, because Christianity is hardly mentioned by the original authorities of his period, it was therefore a negligible force. But the reason for this is surely that in the earliest days of the Church Christianity was simply leaven, working in the whole lump of society, but without its later hierarchy to attract the attention of the literary pagan. We have dwelt at some length on this point, because we think it to be the only serious fault in Mr. Dill's presentation of his subject.

In view of the great importance of this book, and the certainty that it will be regarded as the best work on this period in English, we have taken some trouble to collect matter which will help towards its improvement. There is a crying need for a bibliography, which would probably have saved some mistakes, apart from its great usefulness, even to the specialist. Many works are referred to in the notes in the briefest way, without mention of their size, date, or character. The references to ancient works are generally clear enough. It is to modern works we specially allude: Friedländer's 'Sittengeschichte Roms' is given a fourth volume, which it does not possess; once it even gets a sixth volume (p. 496, n. 3). It is only by an examination of the book itself that we learn that the author uses a copy of the fifth edition, ignoring the sixth and seventh. It is unfortunate that he has used Orelli-Henzen for inscriptions, when we have the much better collections of Wilmanns and Dessau, neither of which is once mentioned. The disadvantage of using antiquated authorities is shown in the use of the form "Bilbilus" for Nero's diviner, instead of "Balbillus" (pp. 45, 448); Mr. Dill should have seen that the first form is impossible. The year of Aristides's birth is given as 117; it should be 129. On p. 215 we hear of the "Lex Ursonnitana"; Mommsen, Dessau, and others call it the "Lex Ursonensis." Manetho, the founder of Serapis worship, is wrongly identified with Manetho, the astrological writer, who was born in the year 80 A.D., as Dr. Richard Garnett has shown.

Some further points are the following. The quotation from Martial (p. 86, n. 4) is incorrectly given; on p. 102, n. 1, the word "III." should be struck out; on p. 112 it would be better to exchange the poetic "Synnas" for the prose "Synnada"; on p. 136, n. 2, for "x" read "iv"; on p. 145, n. 5, improve the punctuation, and remove the ? in note 7; on p. 201 Strabo is spoken of as if he were much later than Tiberius, whereas he was a contemporary of Augustus; on the same page a reference to Cyprian would have given the number of the episcopal sees in Africa in the third century also; on p. 202 read "Ceionius." In making the statement on p. 214, "his own town became each man's 'patria,'" Mr. Dill seems to be unaware that a man's own town was always his "patria," as still in Spanish; this correction should lead to an alteration of the language on p. 271. There is no hint given that the "Flavian amphitheatre" of p. 234 is the same building as the "Colosseum" of p. 228, though this is certainly not well known; p. 242, there is nothing improbable in the descent of viragoes into the arena; p. 253, n. 1, for "margitaria" read "margaritaria"; p. 265, for "Paetovio" read "Poetovio"; p. 279, n. 1, read "pinacothecis"; p. 298, n. 3, strike out the first 6; on p. 335, n. 1, the first quotation is ix. 34, the second v. 33; in the quotation from Tacitus (p. 453, n. 6) an important "semper" is omitted after "vetabitur"; p. 468, n. 4, lacks a reference; p. 490, for "Corinth" read "Athens"; p. 549, n. 8, references to the Pseudo-Augustinian 'Questions,' 114 and 115 (Migne, 'Patrol. Lat.,' xxxv.), might have been added; p. 555, n. 2, insert dots after "redimit"; p. 564, for "184" read "186." The text is very accurately printed (we have observed only five slips, on pp. 14, 189, 254, 278, 355), but the notes are in need of revision; we have found in them fifteen misprints.

The work suffers in about half a dozen instances from unnecessary repetitions, the most glaring case being a note on p. 615, which is repeated verbatim on p. 617. On p. 35 the lack of a public prosecutor in Rome should have been mentioned. On p. 55, n. 4, the discovery of the basis of Domitian's equestrian statue might have been mentioned, and a reference given to Stat., 'Silv.' i. 1. On p. 161 Paley receives a compliment he does not deserve; we hardly think any Cambridge man would regard him as an authority on Latin. We were not aware that "Lambesi" had been naturalized as an equivalent for "Lambæsis."

The journalist is apt to sneer at minute corrections, for which, indeed, he has no time, but accuracy is so generally regarded as both the pleasure and duty of the classical scholar that we are sure that Prof. Dill will welcome our suggestions, small as they may seem.

In taking leave of his admirable work we hope it will secure a wide public, and trust that it may do something to tempt readers to explore the ancient literature produced during the period with which it deals, a period which has suffered from being outside the ordinary classical curriculum.

---

The Life and Letters of R. S. Hawker, sometime Vicar of Morwenstow. By C. E. Byles. (Lane.)

It is nearly thirty years since Hawker of Morwenstow died. After so long an interval his son-in-law, Mr. C. E. Byles, has at length presented us with an authoritative and satisfactory biography of the Cornish poet. It was well to wait. The bitterness of the newspaper controversy which raged over the reception of the dying vicar into the Church of Rome has been well-nigh forgotten. Meanwhile the unauthorized biography by Mr. Baring-Gould, the inaccuracies of which we have exposed on more than one occasion, has, in spite of its defects, done much to popularize the author of the Trelawny ballad and 'The Quest of the Sangraal.' That popularity would come to him at last, that his fame would grow and his poems be accepted after his death, Hawker seems never to have had any more doubt than Wordsworth. Again and again in his correspondence he expresses this conviction, usually to the sad accompaniment of a complaint of present neglect. The history of the Trelawny ballad, as he writes in one place, was suggestive of his whole life:—

"I published it first anonymously in a Plymouth paper. Everybody liked it. It, not myself, became popular. I was unnoted and unknown.....It attracted the attention of Sir Walter Scott, who praised it, not me, unconscious of the author. Afterwards Macaulay (Lord) extolled it in his 'History of England,' and again Dickens in Household Words. All these years the song has been bought and sold, set to music and applauded, while I have lived on among these far-away rocks, unprofited, unpraised, unknown. This is an epitome of my whole existence."

We are glad to note that, in discussing the pedigree of that poem, Mr. Byles quotes Mr. Latimer's contribution to our columns (November 21st, 1891), which effectually disposes of the suggestion made recently elsewhere that Hawker invented the famous refrain as well as the rest of the song.

From the very frontispiece—a clever colour-sketch by Lord Carlisle—to the last page this book reveals an original in mind, manner, and garb, whose portrait Mr. Byles has drawn with singular fulness and fidelity. By the age of twenty-four Hawker had married (the Baring-Gould legend concerning that marriage is here dismissed in the terms of The Athenæum, March 25th, 1876); he had composed the Trelawny ballad, and won the Newdigate Prize at Oxford. From that time forward his life was that of the eccentric Vicar of Morwenstow, with the 'Summa' of St. Thomas Aquinas for his one book, the opium habit to stimulate his mystic fancies and poetic dreams, a mixed multitude of "smugglers, wreckers, and Dissenters of various hue" for his flock, the Severn Sea for his lawn, and cliffs as high as the Great Pyramid to build him in. Thanks to the fortunate circumstance of this isolation, Hawker was only "fastened to the far world by the fibre of the daily post." His character developed unchecked by the criticism of city dwellers, whilst his interest in men and things led him to spend much of his time in correspondence which supplied for him the place of social intercourse. And his letters, racy, imaginative, graphic, and satiric, are naturally full of himself. Aware that he was unusual, he did not shrink from revealing himself. His pen was the tongue of a versatile, independent, and humorous thinker, ever busy retailing curious lore gathered from his books, from the lips of his parishioners, from the observation of quaint customs, or from the workings of his own humorous and mystic fancy. At one moment he is prophesying disaster to the Great Eastern, the demoniac ship, which he identifies with the leviathan; at another he discusses the "spasms of woolly-brained Pusey," or explains, with the mystic symbolism so characteristic of him, the "zig-zag" moulding as representing the ripples on Gennesaret, the sea of sighs. In one letter we see him trying—vainly, we are sure—to persuade Tennyson that the ἀνήριθμον γέλασμα of Æschylus referred not to the sight, but the sound of rippling waves. Elsewhere he writes of wrecks or magic, of birds or angels, of poems, politics, and pigs, of books and theology. There is much of his theology, which was of a mystic sort, for whilst he firmly believed in a literal interpretation of the Bible, he believed also in all beautiful legends as facts. Grandson of Robert Hawker, the famous Plymouth preacher, and son of a doctor who abandoned the medical profession and took holy orders, he had uncompromising theology combined with lavish generosity to the poor in his blood.

"What a life mine would be if it were all written and published in a book!" he exclaimed in one of his letters, for he was, as we have suggested, conscious, and perhaps not a little proud, of his singularity. Well, here we have that life written and published.

Mr. Byles has performed his task—by no means an easy one—with skill and good taste. The book has evidently been written with him, as with his publisher, a genuine labour of love. Mr. Byles regrets, indeed, that he has been able to print only a third of the material he had accumulated; but in our opinion the book is already long enough, and perhaps errs on the side of being too long. In these cases a third is often better than the whole, and compression into nearly seven hundred pages rarely spoils a book. We have noticed a few inaccuracies of printing and so forth; and the repetition of the epigram on Disraeli and Gladstone seems hardly wise where material was too abundant.

---

The East Africa Protectorate. By Sir Charles Eliot, K.C.M.G., late H.M. Commissioner for the Protectorate. With Illustrations and Maps. (Arnold.)

DISCREETLY reticent as to the circumstances, in no way discreditable to him, which led to the abrupt relinquishment of his post in East Africa, but making good use of his three and a half years' close acquaintance with the country and its people, Sir Charles Eliot has here provided a much more compact and, within its limits, comprehensive handbook on the subject than was previously available. The preliminary chapters, giving a bald summary of historical and geographical information, are rather dry reading, but useful for reference to those for whom the volume is evidently intended; and though some other chapters, especially the three describing and grouping the native tribes, are almost laboriously condensed, all are brightly written, their good sense being flavoured with a pretty humour. The illustrations, too, are exceptionally pleasing, thanks to the artist's eye apparent in the choice of subject and treatment.

"My special object," the author says in his preface, "has been to point out the opportunity which it" (the British East Africa Protectorate) "offers for European colonisation and the interesting effect which such a colony may have on the future development of Africa." Whether the highlands, which are separated from the coast by nearly 200 miles of scrub, but now easily reached by the Uganda railway, are really suitable for such regular European colonization as has built up South Africa under conditions likely to be all the more satisfactory after the gold and diamond mines have been exhausted, is more questionable than Sir Charles Eliot seems inclined to admit; and in this part of the continent no attraction in the way of gold or diamonds has yet been discovered or seems likely to offer itself. There appears, however, to be in the healthiest districts a good deal of land well adapted to the sort of farming with which Englishmen are familiar, while the scrub is only waiting to be consumed as fuel in order to facilitate the opening up of the ground for the cultivation of india-rubber and other indigenous products, as well as cotton, coffee, tobacco, and other exotics. Sir Charles, as we know, quarrelled with the Foreign Office because he objected to its patronage of a speculating syndicate, and was snubbed in his encouragement of smaller and, as he thought, more desirable applicants for land grants. He condemns the proposed Zionist settlement near Mount Elgon, on the plea that such excellent settling-ground ought to be reserved for English farmers, with 500l. or so apiece to invest in honest fortune-making. We offer no opinion on this matter, as to which it is enough to say that Sir Charles states his case forcibly.

One of his arguments for stocking East Africa with white settlers of a right sort is that, while Arab slave-raiding and other troubles have reduced the aboriginal population in all but a few parts of British East Africa to a much smaller proportion than we find in Uganda and elsewhere,

"the natives have of late shown a docility and aptitude which was hardly anticipated, and have proved that they can and will work, not only in the fields, but at various mechanical crafts in the railway workshops."

Sir Charles seems recently to have developed what looks like a prejudice against the Masai, who are the sturdiest and most adventurous of the tribes in East Africa, but his views on these questions must have great weight, as, during his commissionership, he showed exemplary zeal, both in seeing that the natives within touch of civilization, whether interfered with by the railway and other encroachments or employed as labourers, had fair treatment, and in abstaining from punitive expeditions of the kind in favour in West as well as East Africa. He carefully abstained from meddling with the Ogaden Somali in Tanaland and Jubaland, when it would have been easy to goad them into active sympathy with their kinsmen, whom we were hunting down on the other side of Italian East Africa; and he appears to have always acted in accordance with views thus aptly expressed:—

"In the relation of European and African tribes, it is not true that familiarity breeds contempt. The hostile natives are almost invariably those who know nothing about Europeans, and kill some stragglers out of mere bravado. With the possible exception of the Somalis, who cannot be classed as ordinary African natives, every tribe appears to accept the white man as a superior and not unfriendly creature the moment he appears as the representative of regular government, and it is surprising how small a force of police is sufficient to support our authority. But when natives receive their first experience of the foreigner by chance contact with traders, particularly Indians, who fail to inspire respect and at the same time provoke resentment by arbitrary acts and forcible appropriation of supplies, then trouble often occurs, and as a rule it is found that those who are most aggressive are least capable of defending themselves."

Sir Charles is of the same mind as an authority, evidently versed in the Russian official stories of half a century ago, who, he reports,

"used to say that every military officer on landing at Mombasa ought to be presented with two decorations; after the first punitive expedition in which he took part he would be deprived of the first, and if after that he took part in a second expedition he would lose the other."

He adds:—

"If there were no decorations, there would be fewer of these little wars. Every administrator ought to regard a punitive expedition as an evil, and in some ways an admission of failure, and ought to take care that the love of decorations, or even the worthier desire of giving the troops some practice and experience in military operations, is not allowed to override the greater claims of justice and good policy."

As the administration of British East Africa, along with that of Uganda and Somaliland, is on the point of being transferred from the Foreign Office to the Colonial Office, it ought to be easier for some of Sir Charles Eliot's sensible suggestions to be carried out. One, which it may be hoped is a foregone conclusion, is that the two southern protectorates, at any rate, should be placed under a High Commissioner, with a uniform system of government. This area, he thinks, should be administered in three clearly marked-out sections, so that due attention may be paid to the separate and, in some respects, divergent requirements of the singularly progressive Baganda and their neighbours; of the coast tribes, who are still more or less under the now easygoing, but formerly oppressive control of the Arab slave-holders and slave-traders; and of the intermediate and as yet least manageable races, the Masai to the south and the Somali to the north. Another commendable suggestion is that, instead of the increase of the native fighting force which is threatened, there shall be a reduction, with corresponding increase of the police, sufficiently trained in soldiership to put down occasional disturbances, but with no temptation to work up unnecessary wars.

Dealing chiefly with the parts of East Africa which have been under his own rule, Sir Charles Eliot has something interesting to say about the neighbouring districts administered by German, Portuguese, Italian, and Belgian masters. In some respects the Germans are ahead of us:—

"When I was Commissioner of the Protectorate, I habitually consulted a German map, which took some account of the districts on our side of the boundary, and nourished myself, so to speak, on the crumbs which fell from the Teutonic table. They were better than any repast which our own cartographers could provide."

But the scientific zeal of the Germans can have mischievous results:—

"A curious story is told to the effect that some years ago several rebels were executed on Kilima-Njaro, and, as specimens were wanted for the craniological section of the museum at Berlin, their skulls were destined for this purpose, and prepared by boiling. The impression produced on the native mind was inevitable and ineradicable—namely, that the flesh was eaten by the authorities."

This anecdote is in lighter vein:—

"The half-civilised Swahilis seem to be the only African race who can cope with the intricacies of the German language. There is an amusing story which relates that some spot in the interior was christened Wilhelmshöhe, and a discourse made to the assembled natives on the august significance of the imperial name. When subsequently asked if they could remember what the place was called, they replied, 'Yes, Whisky-soda.'"

NEW NOVELS.

The Fortunes of Farthings. By A. J. Dawson. (Harper & Brothers.)

MR. DAWSON'S new book will delight his old admirers, and should win him many new ones. It is a romance of real rustic simplicity, describing the love of a Dorset couple in the early eighteenth century. The scene is laid in Marnell village in the vale of Blakemore (the same, if we mistake not, that gave birth to Mr. Hardy's Tess); the local colour is well laid on, and the notes of that rich and varied scenery admirably expressed without ever being unduly emphasized. The story is almost old-fashioned in its entire avoidance of anything subtle or strange in the characters. The hero, who is of the clean-limbed, athletic and gentlemanly type, with a touch of scholarship which separates him from the ordinary, after some passages of love is kidnapped by the machinations of a wicked uncle, Thomas de Sayles, so-called owner of Farthings Hall—in reality filched from the heroine, the daughter of his nephew, whose marriage Thomas de Sayles takes every means to conceal. The result of the kidnapping is that David Merivele, the youth, spends some time as a slave in "Sunset Land" under the rule of that terrific tyrant Moulai Ismail. Both the descriptions and the characterization of the Moorish part of the book are extremely vivid, and form in their gorgeous barbarism and Oriental violence a fine contrast to the soft and lucid setting of the most Saxon part of England. All the characters are strongly imagined, and without any elaborate technique we are made to realize the spirit of the pastoral England of the eighteenth century and the mingled horror and humour of the doings of Moulai Ismail. 'The Fortunes of Farthings' is one of those novels—rare, indeed, nowadays—which give rest to the reader wearied with the rush of life or tired of its intricacies. It has no great brilliance, no shower of epigrams: rather it recalls the "green thought" of Marvell's Garden, with a charm, a peace, for which we too often seek in vain.

Fergy the Guide. By H. S. Canfield. (Nutt.)

THIS is a book to read. Full of rough humour and open-air pleasantries, it will delight most robust readers. The guide of the title is a sort of Mr. Dooley of the backwoods of North America, the American equivalent of our gillies in Scotland, with the added loquacity and descriptive freedom, the luxuriance of humour and exaggeration, which we associate with Transatlantic life. Sportsmen of all grades should be attracted, for Fergy's life is devoted to rod and gun, and his sporting reminiscences form a rich mine of anecdote. Exaggeration would seem to come natural to the fisherman, despite the tradition of the gentle Izaak. Fergy thus describes his discovery of a little lake he had never seen before:—

"'It laid there among the trees an' alder bushes like a lookin'-glass, not more'n a acre, an' I wanter say as it were broke from end to end with ripples made by the small-mouth bass. They was two million of 'em, or mebbe they was three million, an' it were pretty 'nough to make a man keep away from whiskey an' the gals for ever an' ever amen. I dug m' hands into m' pockets an' I didn't have no more bait as would catch a starvin' minner in a wash-bowl. I thought hard f'r three an' a quarter minnits an' then I out with th' tail of m' red flannel shirt an' tore off a hunk big 'nough to wrap a penknife in. I didn' need that much, but I wanted fish, an' th' other guides had plenty o' shirts an' we all bunked in the same cabin. Now, a little piece o' red flannel ain' the mos' eatful thing in the worl', but, say, them fish was crazy f'r it. It hadn' touch the water when twenty-three of 'em made a dash f'r it, an' one of 'em that weighed four an' a quarter pounds got it right in the left gill. Then begin the dabingdest hurroosh whatever."

The whole passage that follows is alive with humour and realism. Fergy "ketched sixty-one red-eyed bass in sixty minnits flat." He is a most amusing fellow, and one likes him better than his "bar-keeping" contemporaries of American fiction.

It was a Boy. By H. A. Mitchell Keays. (Bristol, Arrowsmith.)

THIS is mainly an account of the arrival and development of "Baby Bell," the little son of an American minister and his wife, in a small provincial town in an Eastern State. Infancy, old age, death, religion, and coroners' inquests, mostly lead to facetiousness in work of this type. Fortunately Baby Bell presently emerges from the screaming period, and, entering boyhood, allows fully grown mortals to play some part in the tale. It is not at all a bad tale, as such things go; there is a good deal of homely humanity about it, and here and there evidences of humorous observation of certain simple phases of provincial life. The book may fairly be recommended to those who have the beguilement of an idle hour in view.

Gossip. By Benjamin Swift. (Duckworth & Co.)

BENJAMIN SWIFT adheres with tenacity to his Meredithian manner. Indeed, one wonders if, after all, one is not doing him an injustice in attributing him to the influence of Mr. Meredith, and if he is not himself born, by an astonishing coincidence, with the point of view of the master. At least, he has got into the skin of the part so wonderfully that we might be almost reading a new Meredith. But, alas! not quite a new Meredith. Manner, style, standpoint, cynicism, sense of comedy, all are here, but on an inferior scale. The tale lacks Mr. Meredith's amplitude of air, and his wonderful sense of control. We feel the characters here are rather puppets; the author is not quite certain of them; whereas it is ordained from the beginning that Richard Feverel shall perish as he does, or that Rhoda Fleming shall develop in tragedy. Yet consider these elements, and reflect if they do not derive from our master of comedy. Sacheverell is in love with Mrs. Beaufoy, widow and forty, and with stripling children. Mrs. Beaufoy is in love with Eustace Melmore, aged twenty, twin son to the late Sir Arthur Melmore. His brother Hugh is in love with Daisy Rorison, daughter of a broken-down proud gentleman who keeps an inn. Is it not Mr. Meredith who loves to handle these juvenile affairs of the heart? But the soul of the comedy lies in the fact that no one, not even Lady Melmore, knows whether Eustace or Hugh is the elder twin, and consequently baronet. Thus gossip goes about the country place, and in her wonted character as Meredithian chorus. Yet had Mr. Meredith been treating of the affair of Mrs. Beaufoy and Eustace, he would have painted it another colour, one feels certain. There was more room for irony, which the author economizes. Even with shut ears can no reader mistake his concluding echo:—

"Here, therefore, we commend the use of the loud pedal for a finale, and announce fortissimo to all whom it may concern that love is the supreme windfall for the human soul."

Heirs of Reuben. By Chris Healy. (Chatto & Windus.)

MR. HEALY'S new book scarcely justifies its inclusion among novels, for it is only by the merest thread that it is held together. As a series of short stories with a definite connexion it might have been very popular in a popular magazine. Possibly such has been its history. But the semblance of a unity is speciously given to it by the earlier and last chapters. A capable journalist is dispatched in disguise by his editor to take up a case of murder. In order to further his investigations he takes lodgings in an East-End slum, and in the lodging-house he makes the acquaintance of sundry characters, who round the fire tell stories to the company. They are all dismal failures, and their adventures, which are ostensibly frank, relate to the seamy side of life. Mr. Healy's invention and knowledge of the vicissitudes of a great city have stood him in good stead, but one is apt to grow weary of the string of sordid narratives, and they are too manifestly related with one voice—the author's. However, ingenuity and spirit are here in plenty, and some minds will find the tales engrossing. Of course, the murderer is among the company, and the book is pulled together by this fact and his narrative. Altogether, the idea is skilfully contrived, but the mystery of the murder seems left in the air.

Nicole. By Owen Johnson. (Macmillan & Co.)

IT is curious that the French Revolution, a subject possessing an inexhaustible fascination for novelists of all classes, should apparently lend itself so little to variety in the method of treatment. The example now before us at once recalls the names of Dickens, Lytton, Wilkie Collins, and many other less distinguished authors by a detailed account of the September massacres, and the story of a girl who takes her lover's place on the scaffold, and is all but saved by the dramatic downfall of Robespierre. Even the women knitting as they count falling heads are once more resuscitated. Yet a certain degree of power and originality is shown in describing the poorer quarters of old Paris, and the strange types of humanity which they harboured; the best instance being, perhaps, the episode of the flower-girl, popularly named the daughter of the guillotine.

My Lady of the North. By Randall Parrish. (Putnam's Sons.)

THIS tale of the American Civil War has much vivid adventure and realistic fighting in it. There is also a pleasant love story; but the gallant Southern captain is very obtuse in not finding out till so very late in the day that his lady-love was a widow, not a wife. We leave them, however, without any misgiving for their future, unless a tendency to talk which is rather "tall" should prove occasionally fatiguing. There is a comic man with a virago and a mule who relieves some tragic situations, and the book is very well illustrated.

SPAIN AND THE SPANISH.

Spanish Influence on English Literature. By Martin Hume. (Nash.)—A trustworthy monograph on the literary relations which have existed between England and Spain would be a welcome contribution to the history of comparative literature; but Major Hume has not the faculty of patient labour necessary for such a work. It is strange that a writer who can make room for references to Aben Chobair and El Abdari has not a word to say of either Donne or Hooker; it is disappointing to find commonplaces and imperfect summaries of familiar results where we had looked for some attempt at original criticism and independent research; and such expressions as "too lovely to live," "a hash up," and "caught on" do not commend themselves. But these faults of arrangement, selection, and taste are minor defects in comparison with the want of knowledge and the inaccuracy which the book shows. The following sentence is typical:—

"In the fourteenth century, Thomas Lonelich, later a scribe at the court of Henry IV. of England—a contemporary of Chaucer—wrote in verse, which was afterwards put into French prose, the first of the real Arthurian cycle of tales, called 'The Sangreal.'"

The most perverse ingenuity could not condense more errors into an equal space. The Christian name of the writer in question was not "Thomas," but Henry; his surname, as Mr. Bradley has shown in these columns (The Athenæum, No. 3914), was not "Lonelich," but Lovelich; Lovelich was not at the court of Henry IV., and did not write till fifty years after Chaucer's death; his 'Seynt Graal' was not put into French prose, but was itself a metrical adaptation of the 'Grand Saint Graal,' a prose romance composed about two centuries before Lovelich was born. This succession of mistakes proves that Major Hume knows nothing of the chronology of the compositions which form the Breton cycle, and that he is even ignorant as to the language in which these compositions were written.

Instances of reckless assertion are numerous in every chapter. 'The Shepherd's Calendar,' in which experts perceive the influence of Barclay and Marot, is said to be "clearly inspired" by Montemayor's 'Diana.' This inspiration is not clear to ordinary readers, and least of all to those who remember that Spenser's poem was published in 1579, several years before Young began to translate the Spanish pastoral. Greene, we are told, "took many of his dramatic plots from Spanish sources." This is not informing; the sources and the number of these plots should have been recorded. Greene has left but six plays, none of which is known to have a plot derived from Spanish sources; only one has a Spanish theme, and of all Greene's characters Dorothea alone shows some slight trace of Spanish origin. Major Hume contends that Don Adriano de Armado is a caricature of the refugee Antonio Perez; he overlooks the fact that the type was represented previously by Sir Topham in Lyly's 'Endimion.' He recalls the conjecture that the Jew physician Lopez was the original of Shylock, but it does not strengthen the case to add that "soon after" his execution in June, 1594, Lopez figured in 'The Jew of Malta,' in 'Doctor Faustus,' and in Middleton's 'Game at Chess.' Marlowe's plays were performed in 1588-1589 and 1591, respectively, while Lopez was still living; and the 'Game at Chess' was not produced till 1624. The statement that Ben Jonson depended largely on Spain for his plots is in direct contradiction with Dryden's admission that "Ben Jonson has designed his plots himself," and should be supported by detailed evidence. The author of 'Elvira' cannot have been "Ambassador in Spain when the marriage treaty fell through." He was a boy of eleven at the time. Major Hume has evidently confused John Digby, first Earl of Bristol, with his son George, the second Earl, a very curious blunder for a student of political history to make. A still more comical case of mistaken identity arises from the attribution to Fielding of "a poor female Quixote, which showed that he was well versed in Spanish fiction." Nobody the least versed in English literature could mistake Harry Fielding for Mrs. Lennox.

But English literature is no worse treated than any other. Avicbron dies on p. 11, and is resuscitated on p. 16 as Solomon Ben Gabirol, without a word to indicate that both names designate the same author. The sense of unbroken continuity conveyed by the remark that Lully formulated his doctrine "some years after Averroes's death" is disturbed by the reflection that Averroes died more than thirty years before Lully's birth. In reproducing the legends that Lesage lived for several years at the French Embassy in Madrid, and that Victor Hugo was born in Spain, Major Hume fails to distinguish between fact and fiction. Lesage never visited Spain, and Victor Hugo was born at Besançon. There is not the least reason to suppose that 'Gil Blas' embodies the substance of some mysterious manuscript containing political gossip about Olivares; the chief sources of Lesage's information in this respect were Guibaud's version of Pallavicino's 'Disgrazie del Conte d'Olivares' and Valdory's 'Anecdotes,' also translated from the Italian. This series of mistakes in every other section tends to shake our confidence in Major Hume's knowledge of Spanish literature; and where we can test it the result is discouraging. The description of 'Artus de Algarve' (if that be the correct title) as a Spanish sequel or imitation of 'Amadis' must be erroneous; the Spanish book can be nothing more than a translation of a French romance by Philippe Camus, published at Geneva many years before 1508, when, as Major Hume himself says, 'Amadis' was first printed. Three plays attributed to Calderon on p. 283 are all transferred to Vega Carpio on p. 292. The statement that the second part of 'Guzman de Alfarache' was written in Mexico conflicts with the view of all the recognized authorities, who are agreed that the continuation was published before Aleman left Europe. These authorities also concur in stating that Quevedo died in 1645, and, if they are right, it cannot be pretended that Quevedo was still writing when Molière "was in his prime"; Molière was twenty-three years old in 1645, and 'L'Étourdi,' the earliest of his important plays, was not produced till 1653.

The analysis of the vulgate 'Merlin' and the 'Suite de Merlin' not only confuses the continuation with the prose romance attributed to Robert de Boron (scarcely recognizable as "one Barron"), but also varies considerably from the current editions. As we are not told which text has been adopted, we are unable to check the analysis; it does not inspire confidence to find a passage in blank verse from Ben Jonson printed as prose with verbal alterations. A compiler should at least verify his references carefully before he rebukes "the shallow superficiality which is the hall-mark of modern so-called scholarship" (p. 299). Major Hume has lost his sense of proportion. In view of this volume, the less said of scholarship the better.

It is difficult to imagine why Mr. Albert F. Calvert calls his Life of Cervantes (Lane)

"the tercentenary edition," more especially if, as may be inferred from an entry (p. 107) in his list of documents, he believes that 'Don Quixote' was published before May 26th, 1604. His views on the matter are not fixed, however, for he declares against this conjecture on p. 47. The arguments against the theory are so decisive that it has been abandoned by its inventor, Dr. Perez Pastor. Mr. Calvert is evidently unacquainted with the recent literature of his subject, and he admits that he has no new data to add to those collected by his English predecessors; but he provides a number of illustrations which are interesting, and which might have been made valuable by a competent annotator. Unfortunately the scanty notes are misleading. At the foot of the apocryphal portrait facing p. 20, the year of Cervantes's death is wrongly given; the title-page opposite p. 34 is from the edition of 'La Galatea' published at Alcalá de Henares in 1585, though it purports to be from a 1585 Madrid edition, the existence of which is more than doubtful; the reproduction facing p. 60 is wrongly described as the "oldest plate," and it should be dated 1618 instead of 1622. The text is no better. It is mere surmise that Cervantes was known as el manco de Lepanto before 1575, and that his countrymen conferred this title on him; he seems to have conferred this title on himself, and, so far as can be gathered, it was probably never heard of till 1617, when it appeared in the preface to the posthumous 'Trabajos de Persiles y Sigismunda.' The nearest approach to anything of the kind occurs in 'La Viuda Valenciana,' the work of an author whom Mr. Calvert despises. There is no foundation for the statements that Cervantes served in the Portuguese campaign, or that Galvez de Montalvo ranked him among the most famous poets of Castile, or that Lope de Vega was secretary to the Duke of Alba in 1585, or that Cervantes's plays were issued in 1614, or that the Spanish Academy brought out Avellaneda's continuation, or that Andres Perez wrote 'La Picara Justina.' These assertions have been disproved again and again. Mr. Calvert's qualifications may be judged by one small but significant fact. On p. 11, following Mr. Fitzmaurice-Kelly, he refers correctly to the tercio de Figueroa as Figueroa's regiment; left to himself, and confronted with the same words on p. 99, he translates them as "the third Figueroa." A biographer of Cervantes should know the difference between a noun and the alternative form of an ordinal. This book cannot but give a deplorable idea of the state of Spanish study in England, and yet critics have been found to praise it. That is the worst possible symptom.

By giving to his work the charming, popular, traditional name of Andalusia, Mr. W. S. Maugham raises expectations of legend and folk-lore, which are not fulfilled in The Land of the Blessed Virgin (Heinemann). The author is frankly in love with everything Spanish, except the cooking, and he writes his romantic recollections with a boyish enthusiasm that makes one forgive his gorgeous superlatives. There is too much liquid gold and emerald and sapphire in his rivers; the sun is too habitually blood-red, both at Ronda and Granada; "all was silent" in one place, and "all again was still and lifeless" in another; white teeth gleam and eyes flash darkly in the ordinary course of things. It is absolutely fantastic and unreal, but it is agreeable juvenile rhapsody, no more likely to impose on any reader than the description of the conventional impossible sky, where the stars "shone in their countless millions." It all happened at Seville when Mr. Maugham was twenty-three, and his reminiscences make very pleasant reading—at all events, for the first half hour. The romanticism is relieved by such sly strokes of humour as the solemn declaration that "as many people in proportion get drunk in Seville as in London." The joke can only be appreciated by those who know both cities. The amateur peeps out in such expressions as "olla podrida," "neve," "Che maravilla!" and even "toreador" (p. 53), a barbarism which is ridiculed later in the book. Mr. Maugham should revise his proofs more carefully; but he leaves an impression of knowing Spain, and even something of her popular literature, though he admires in and out of season.

GERMAN BOOKS.

Goethe in meinem Leben. Erinnerungen und Betrachtungen von Bernhard Rudolf Abeken. Herausgegeben von Adolf Heuermann. (Weimar, Hermann Böhlau Nachfolger.)—The sub-title, 'Erinnerungen und Betrachtungen,' accurately defines the scope of this volume of Abeken's literary remains, now published many years after his death, which took place in 1866. There is no attempt at anything like an autobiography in the ordinary sense of the word, nor yet at any comprehensive criticism of Goethe and his work. Abeken wrote the slight sketch of his life in the form of a letter to an intimate friend, and merely intended, it would seem, to show what sort of an influence Goethe had exercised upon him from youth onwards. We need not regret the limitations of the plan, for Abeken's life was uneventful, and though he came in contact with several people of note, yet his personal intercourse with them was, for the most part, of much less consequence to him than the influence of their general teaching. This is eminently the case with regard to Goethe himself. Abeken, who was a student at Jena from 1799 to 1802, and spent some years in Weimar later, did, indeed, meet the great poet pretty often, but he never was on really familiar terms with him, and the personal acquaintance probably did not greatly affect his attitude towards him one way or the other. But his admiration of Goethe's work was always profound and dominating, and he could say with Reinhard, "Die Hochachtung vor Goethe ist das Gefühl meines ganzen Lebens." This is what gives the book its value and interest, that it shows how an earnest, intelligent, and artistic nature like Abeken's could find in Goethe adequate mental sustenance and aid to development throughout a long lifetime. In this respect it really is a worthy monument to Europe's sagest head, and much of its criticism is deserving of attention. For the rest, a good deal of it is trivial and unnecessary, and as it contains little in the shape of anecdote or personal description, it is hardly likely to find much favour with the general reader. Besides this main essay, the volume contains several extracts from Abeken's journals relating to Goethe, Schiller, Wieland, and others, and it also gives in their original form Schiller's 'Gespräche mit Christiane v. Wurmb,' familiar to the student of Schiller from Caroline von Wolzogen's life of the poet. They are excellent specimens of Schiller's table-talk, and we are glad to have them just as they were taken down.

Die besten Gedichte der deutschen Sprache. Erstes Hundert: Lyrik, herausgegeben von Rolf Lembeck (Leipzig, Wilhelm Weicher; Glasgow, Gowans & Gray), owes its origin to and adopts the format of 'The Hundred Best Poems in the English Language,' which was published a year or two ago, and has achieved a marked success. We wish an equal good fortune to the German series; and surely there will be plenty of readers, even in this country, ready to expend their testrils on such an attractive booklet. The editor has probably come as near to justifying the title as one could expect. There are one or two poems, we think, scarcely worthy of a place in such a selection, Schiller's somewhat pale 'Jüngling am Bache' among them, and we question the propriety of including the 'Lied von der Glocke'; but on the whole there is little fault to be found. Heine, we note, is handsomely treated, and this is by no means always the case in German anthologies. A comparison of this collection with its English forerunner brings out one or two rather interesting points. In the latter there are forty poets represented; in the German there are only thirty-two, and none of these is quite modern, the most recent being Geibel, Herwegh, and Storm, all of whom now belong to an older generation. It will be remembered that Stevenson and Henley were given a place in the English selection. It is worthy of remark also that the English poems are, as a rule, considerably longer and less purely lyric than the German: the Germans seem to excel in the brief and simple song of a few lines.

Peter Cornelius Literarische Werke. Erste Gesamtausgabe.—I. Band. Ausgewählte Briefe. Herausgegeben von seinem Sohne Carl Maria Cornelius. (Leipsic, Breitkopf & Härtel.)—Peter Cornelius has hardly won to fame even in his own country, and here he is little more than a name to the general public. Yet, though he certainly did not belong to the "weltbegregenden Genien," as his son admits, he was a man of real talent, and a versatility astonishing in these days. Nephew of the great painter, his namesake, and son of an actor, he inherited artistic tendencies in various directions—he had dramatic gifts, was an excellent linguist, a more than mediocre poet, and a distinguished musician and musical critic. Much of his literary work, both original and translated, is of value; and that he was a fluent and agreeable correspondent the present substantial collection of his letters will amply prove. The volume before us contains some three hundred of them, and fills eight hundred pages, yet it only brings us down to the end of 1864, just when he was finishing his 'Cid,' so that we presume a second volume will be devoted to the following decade. The whole will then serve as a substitute for the autobiography which he purposed to write, but never did write. Probably the editor has done wisely in allowing the letters to speak for themselves and tell the story of Cornelius's life, for though they do not always give a connected account of events, and yield scanty information on certain points of interest, yet they present the writer's personality very fully and clearly, and, after all, that is the main thing. He writes frankly and unreservedly to nearly all his correspondents, and his eager, impetuous, somewhat "schwärmerisch," but very attractive character is everywhere apparent. A number of the letters are in verse, and these are for the most part very charming, being fresh and spontaneous, and full of genuine feeling. "Ich bin leider kein Dichter, nur ein poetisch gesinnter Mensch," Cornelius says of himself, and that is no doubt true; but his verses are always enjoyable, and often show a remarkable command of rhyme and metre. Perhaps, however, the chief interest of his correspondence arises from his connexion and intimacy with various musical and literary celebrities, such as Liszt, Hebbel, Hans von Bülow, and above all Wagner, for whose genius he had a profound admiration, while at the same time he had an instinct to keep away from his dæmonic influence, and fully recognized the blemishes of his character. Wagner, it must be owned, could be strangely inconsiderate and exacting, and it is not surprising that Cornelius should have felt bitterly at times. "Wagner denkt nicht einen Augenblick an einen anderen als sich," he writes to his brother on one occasion. It is certainly a matter for regret that the letters addressed by Cornelius to Wagner were not obtainable, though perhaps the editor protests more hotly than is necessary at their retention in Villa Wahnfrid. Wagner's own letters to Cornelius, however, are printed here, and are characteristic.

In Sagenschatz der Stadt Weimar und ihrer Umgegend (Weimar, Hermann Böhlau Nachfolger) Ellen and Paul Mitzschke have gathered a large number of legends, tales, proverbial sayings, and local traditions connected with Weimar and the neighbouring country. As several of these have not hitherto been published, the collection is of interest to the student of folk-lore, but it will also appeal to a wider class of readers, for the tales are simply and pleasantly put down, and visitors to Weimar who do not confine their attention too rigorously to the Goethe cult should find the little volume an agreeable appendage to their guide-book.

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

PROBABLY the most sensitive chronometer of the year that we have amongst us is Mr. E. Kay Robinson, whose books on nature have been more than once commended in these columns. His latest work, The Country Day by Day (Heinemann), is by no means his least successful, though the form it necessarily takes, as the expanded and amended daily diary contributed to a popular newspaper, is against full and leisurely treatment of the topics included. Yet in a manner the book draws a special charm of its own from this very limitation, for it forms a vade mecum of pleasant information for all the passing hours of the rolling year; as thus, on an early day in March:—

"Listening to the song thrush, the feeling grows upon one that the bird is talking in song, that it means something all the while, whereas the blackbird seems to be consciously 'discoursing sweet music,' as the phrase goes, and to invite you to listen to his best passages. Every one has fancies about the song of birds; but I cannot help regarding the blackbird as a finished performer, conscious of his powers, and the thrush as a sweet singer, singing from impulse. The blackbird sings to please; the thrush pleases to sing—so at least fancy would have it, did one not know that both sing from sexual rivalry."

This displays not only knowledge but also imaginative inference, a valuable quality in the worship of nature. Mr. Kay Robinson's confessed ambition has been to "write the story of the year in little things," and he has succeeded admirably. In looking over the pages one does not see how his information could be bettered, or things could be better stated than in his simple, comprehensive, and picturesque style. Rarely do we meet with this sort of writing, which seems both dignified and easy:—

"Thus Nature works on the wise rule that when the male, by sexual evolution, has become conspicuous, upon his head shall be the danger. To the prowling beast of prey, the antlered herd of males appears plain against the skyline from afar; while the inconspicuous company of fertile females slips unnoticed into distant safety. The male has fulfilled his function, and with his grandeur he often carries, for the good of the species, the privilege of death."

This keen and sympathetic observer, from his nook in East Anglia, keeps a special eye on migrants. He knows to a day when the fieldfares go and the swallows arrive. How many people are aware that the fieldfare leaves us early in April to nest in Norway?—that homely bird we see in thousands over the winter hedges. It is possible that Mr. Robinson may not have an exact scientific avian knowledge; there is nothing in his books to denote this. But he has what to a literary mind is worth more than this. He belongs to the race of naturalists of whom Gilbert White, Audubon, and Waterton were ornaments. Let the laboratories take care of themselves; they have their place, and verily they have their reward. But that reward is not in literature, to which Mr. Robinson's work belongs. And what man of the laboratories could tell us this, which we accept implicitly, and which comes pat to this bourgeoning season?

"The surest sign of spring—one that I have never known to err—is the appearance of the scarlet velvety mite. It is a very tiny creature; but who that observes Nature in small things has not, at one time or another, been amazed at the loveliness of these atoms, upholstered in the most vivid vermilion plush, which are suddenly found crawling about the soft, warm earth, one fine morning in spring, and for a season pursue a beneficial career in the destruction of aphides?"

Alas! and we have known many respectable and kindly people who have persisted in waging war against this benignant mite, on the supposition that it was red spider! We hope Mr. Robinson's excellent book will go their way.

MR. EDMUND DOWNEY, who of later years has earned for himself an admirable reputation by his delineations of Irish life, was once upon a time a publisher. Not only was he one of the firm of Ward & Downey, but also before that he served apprenticeship to the publishing trade with the veteran William Tinsley, who at one time or another published books for most of the famous writers of his day. Tinsley issued his autobiography in 1900, not long before his death, but Mr. Downey's recollections of events do not invariably square with those of his old chief, as is apparent from a perusal of the interesting reminiscences, Twenty Years Ago (Hurst & Blackett). Tinsley was connected with the trade for half a century, and

"produced works—many of them first books—by George Meredith, Miss Braddon, Mrs. Henry Wood, Wilkie Collins, Capt. Burton, Rhoda Broughton, G. A. Sala, Harrison Ainsworth, William Black, Thomas Hardy, J. R. Planché, Mrs. Molesworth, Anthony Trollope, George Henty, Percy Fitzgerald, James Hannay, Mrs. Riddell, 'Ouida,' Justin McCarthy, James Payn, Frank Buckland, Richard Jefferies, Mrs. Cashel Hoey, Sir W. H. Russell, Richard Dowling, Edmund Yates, and numerous other well-known authors."

Mr. Downey gives Tinsley credit for flair as a publisher, but considers him to have been wanting in the commercial capacity. He published William Black's first three novels, none of which did very well, and then the novelist brought him 'Kilmeny,' saying:

"I think I've done it this time, Tinsley.....I have been closely studying the public taste. My 'Silk Attire' caught on because it appealed to the womenfolk. The pathetic heroine business, you know, with streaks of light stuff. Now the story I have just finished is all about this class of heroine—of course, with bits of humour, just to give the thing the proper effect."

Tinsley, according to Mr. Downey, offered to publish it if the loss on the other books—nothing considerable—were wiped off. Black declined, and was told to take his book to a warm region. The result was that 'Kilmeny' did well, and the 'Daughter of Heth,' which followed, made a great popular success. Tinsley seems to have had bad luck in this way. He published Mr. Hardy's first novel, 'Desperate Remedies,' which "went very flat." Then he "tried him again with a little book, 'Under the Greenwood Tree.'" That did not succeed, and the third venture was 'A Pair of Blue Eyes,' which ran in Tinsley's Magazine. Of this we learn that Crofts, "the firm's accountant," protested against the tragic conclusion; but the author would not listen to him! The non-success of this fine story was attributed to the conclusion. Finally Tinsley said:—

"Hardy called on me and said he wanted to be quite fair and quite candid with me. The editor of another magazine had written to him offering to take a novel from him, and this editor's firm was willing to give three hundred pounds for it. I think it was three hundred—anyhow, it seemed too much money for me to give with my experience of him so far; so I thanked him very much, and said, 'Take the offer, my boy. I couldn't spring so much.' I seem to be very unlucky, Downey, about fourth novels, for the one I declined was 'Far from the Madding Crowd.'

The editor who took it was Mr. Greenwood, and the magazine was The Cornhill.

It will be seen from these extracts that Mr. Downey has many amusing and interesting anecdotes to tell, and he tells them very well. His reminiscences are not confined to literature: they comprise stories and memories of theatrical and other Bohemians. The book is "frankly a book of anecdote," and catches Bohemianism in its last ebb. The manners of the times, as well as, in some degree, the spirit, have changed almost as "if a century had elapsed." And this is one reason why this book will be found an interesting record of the observations of a shrewd, kindly man with a nice sense of the humorous.

The Complete Poetical Works of Shelley. Including Materials never before printed in any Edition of the Poems. Edited, with Textual Notes and Bibliographical List of Editions, by Thomas Hutchinson. (Oxford, Clarendon Press.)—The Oxford Shelley is a thoroughly useful book. Once more the standard editions of Shelley's poetry have required bringing up to date, in consequence of the long-delayed accessibility of family material now in the custody of Bodley's librarian. The twaddle known as "Original Poetry by Victor and Cazire" has also, it will be remembered, come to the surface and babbled of its claims to be included, with much other rubbish, in Shelley's overweighted works. Mr. Hutchinson, who has courageously faced the misery of inserting this "original poetry" among Shelley's juvenilia, has also had the pleasurable task of fitting into an edition of Shelley for the first time the new material which Mr. Locock issued in the slender separate publication reviewed in these columns last spring. Mr. Hutchinson's handling of the Oxford Wordsworth left no room for doubting his qualifications to deal with an English poet of the nineteenth century in an intelligent, businesslike, and sufficiently erudite manner; and he has edited the great mass of verse formed by Shelley's poetry, properly so called, and his most unpoetic juvenile effusions, sympathetically and with thoroughness. He has not given, and makes no profession of giving, a complete variorum edition of Shelley; but he has inserted a great number of variations, probably quite enough to satisfy the general reader and the average student. He has been scrupulous without being fussy in the display of his sources of text and illustrative matter alike, and has acknowledged with generosity his debts to several predecessors in the work of handing on the text of Shelley to posterity, a feature of his work which is worthy of commendation and emulation. His exclusion of Medwin's silly stuff, 'The Wandering Jew,' must also be imputed to him for righteousness; it is a great advantage to be able to relieve Shelley's works of that companionship. For a book of this class it is a further evidence of sound judgment that the great singer's vagaries in the matter of spelling are not too punctiliously followed, and that his punctuation is not preserved when it hurts the sense and does not help the metre. The arrangement of the poems and fragments is generally sensible and convenient. We do not think the so-called Prologue to 'Hellas' stands well between the Preface to the true 'Hellas' and the lyrical drama itself, as published for Shelley; and we doubt the utility of placing 'The Daemon of the World' first among Shelley's poems, while banishing to the appendix of juvenilia 'Queen Mab,' from the substance of which 'The Daemon' is compact. Still, there is something to be said for the arrangement in an edition wherein the principal poems form a first chronological sequence and the minor poems a second. The foot-notes employ the very short forms of reference usual in heavily annotated classical books, but, read with the head-notes, are generally clear enough for practical purposes. Is it not pedantic to import the indisputably correct form "Vergil" into the page of a poet who invariably used the familiar form "Virgil," which even the greatest of scholars connected with that august name have been content to perpetuate as the English equivalent of "Vergilius" down to the present day? Mr. Hutchinson forms independent judgments on most points which he has to treat. One of his longest notes, for instance, is on Mr. Locock's attempt to renumber the divisions of the 'Ode to Naples'; this he unhesitatingly rejects, and adopts instead a numbering of his own, for which he claims (and to which we must allow) the distinction that, "if it lacks MS. authority in some particulars," it has "at least the merit of being absolutely logical and consistent throughout" (p. 1005). We notice that Mr. Buxton Forman's library edition in four volumes is constantly referred to under the date 1876, even when the reference is to one of the later volumes, though the third and fourth are dated 1877, in which year they appeared. The revised library edition of 1882 does not figure in Mr. Hutchinson's bibliography of editions consulted. There is not often much to say against Mr. Hutchinson's dealings with the text; but we observe an instance in which he corrects Shelley's rendering of a classic against the weight of evidence furnished by the poet's holograph. This is in that fragmentary piece of unregenerate work, some forty or fifty lines, full of lovely sympathetic touches, from Bion's 'Elegy on the Death of Adonis,' in which Shelley either made his jottings from a bad text or with insufficient knowledge. His version speaks of the blood flowing from "her" (Venus's) thigh, and he wrote "her" plainly. Mr. Hutchinson, knowing that Shelley ought to have made it "his" (Adonis's) thigh, corrects the English poet's translation for him; whereas the torso, being valuable only as an illustrative bit of Shelley, should be left with the limits of his translatorship unobscured. But these are, comparatively, trifles. Mr. Hutchinson has performed a laborious task both earnestly and ably, and we wish his edition the acceptance which it merits.

John Bunyan. By the Author of 'Mark Rutherford.' (Hodder & Stoughton.)—We must express our opinion at the outset that the class of person who wants an analysis of 'The Pilgrim's Progress' is not worthy to be catered for. The work is neither dear nor difficult to read. However, the writer does with success what he has to do, and imagines very well the personality of the great John. He is quite right in calling attention to his being essentially a leader, and by no means a mere enthusiast. But we do not think him justified in complaining that Bunyan is ignored or despised because he was a Nonconformist; nor do we think that that is true of any period within the last hundred years. Both publishers and general fame must be sadly in error if 'The Pilgrim's Progress' is not a prime favourite among books, though we suppose the author does not mean that its readers are to assume that Bunyan was a perfect theologian. Otherwise we should have to be Catholic with Dante, sceptical with Montaigne, Puritan with Bunyan. The remarks on Puritanism in general seem to us ill-balanced. To say of a movement which had for its monuments the massacre of Wexford, the enslavement of thousands, the persecution of the majority in its deepest ideals, the execution of Laud, and the government of the major-generals, that it was the most "distinct, energetic, and salutary movement in history," is to take the view of a partisan rather than an historian.

THE little volume of Mr. F. Norris on Elementary Schools (Longmans) is about as lively as anything dealing with the dreary subject of the Education Acts can ever hope to be. It gives the clergy admirable advice as to the way in which it is wise to work, and is characterized by clearness and decision. The historical survey is succinct and lucid, and the summaries are accurate. It is worthy of a place in the series of "Handbooks for the Clergy," in which it appears.

OUR thanks are due to the friend who hoarded and preserved the articles by Mr. Lang which now appear as Adventures among Books (Longmans). Some we remember a while since, and all are pleasant to see in a book. The author is so busy with folk-lore and history that we dare say he disregards these less serious parerga. Still there is no master of literary lightness equal to Mr. Lang, and for the un-English quality of gaiety which he unfailingly exhibits we are so grateful that we condone a certain casualness. He is a writer of strong preferences and exclusions, somewhat wilful on occasion; but on a favourite author, or a subject, at any rate, in which he takes an interest, his gossip is delightful. Further, it holds the sound criticism which proceeds from good taste and wide knowledge, though it is so lightly presented as to seem mere butterfly work. Essays and causeries of a similar kind, with nothing of real value in them, are both wearisome and fairly common. One needs the grace and ease of the scholar, which are Mr. Lang's, to amuse without flippancy and inform without heaviness. Mr. Lang's reminiscences of his own early experience of books, of Stevenson and Dr. John Brown, are alike excellent, and he indicates with critical geniality that Oliver Wendell Holmes was not precisely an epoch-making person, as has been somewhat strangely affirmed. Scotland and the supernatural figure, as was to be expected, in other pages. We note a capital piece of fooling in the vein of 'The Wrong Paradise,' and a graceful article on 'Helen and Paris,' which deals with all the best poetry on the subject except Mr. Lang's own poem. We should have given more attention here to Euripides, though he is not at his best on Helen. Mr. Lang is certainly the first of literary critics on Homer, and it is pleasing to find reminiscences of a deep and early love scattered over his writing. His forgotten or rejected literary projects are amusingly described under the title, from Balzac, of "enchanted cigarettes." The phrase has had some vogue, we believe, and we do not therefore think it pedantic to ask for its authenticity. Balzac seems too big for cigarettes, the impressionist may say, and we think that he has textual support, for in 'La Cousine Bette' we read, "Penser, rêver, concevoir de belles œuvres est une occupation délicieuse. C'est de fumer cigares enchantés." Is not this the passage cited? It was a "wise thrush," not a blackbird, which Browning associated with recapturing rapture (p. 83); and Ruskin's 'Poems' were properly published (p. 71), not remaining privately printed like many sets of his letters. This event took place in 1891, ten years after Dr. John Brown's death. Sir W. B. Richmond's portrait of the author is the frontispiece to this attractive volume.

SEVERAL important books have been just reprinted. M. Jusserand's English Wayfaring Life in the Middle Ages has been published by Mr. Fisher Unwin in a "popular edition." It is complete, cheap, and really notable, like other books in the same series.—A reprint of Unbeaten Tracks in Japan, by Isabella Bird (Murray), is very welcome. It is one of the accomplished traveller's best things, both in style and matter. Her Six Months in the Sandwich Islands is available in a similar form (same publisher).

GISSING'S By the Ionian Sea (Chapman & Hall) is another book which should secure many new readers in a cheaper edition.

Crockford's Clerical Directory for 1905 is before us (Horace Cox), and wins, as usual, our unstinted admiration for its wealth of detail and wonderful accuracy. The editor talks of giving up the preface, which has been a feature of the volume for many years; but we hope that he will long continue his comments. They are valuable as a pillory for the strange want of sense and impertinence in more ways than one which are known to most editors. A great and laborious work like this justifies, even demands, a preface, especially since editors of 'Crockford' are so good at writing it.

A GREAT trade union, famous for its comprehensiveness and statecraft, as well as for its wealth, the United Society of Boilermakers, publishes, through Messrs. R. Robinson & Co., of Newcastle-on-Tyne, A Historical Survey of the Boiler Makers' and Iron and Steel Ship Builders' Society from August, 1834, to August, 1904, by Mr. D. C. Cummings, the General Secretary, long a member of the Parliamentary Committee of the Trade Congress. The survey will interest all those who care for the early history of trade unions. The Lodges of this old society had a ritual similar to that of British Masonry and other secret and semi-secret societies, and the forms are here fully set forth. The old coat of arms of the society is of interest as showing the workers in the costume of the period of its origin in the two boilermakers who act as supporters of the shield. They have their coats off, indeed, to show that they are working men, which no one would gather from their pumps and socks, the cut of their trousers and waistcoats, or the set of their shirts and high collars. One of them resembles Palmerston in his prime, and the other some hero of a Dickens first edition.

WE have received the first three parts of the Harmsworth Encyclopædia, published by the Amalgamated Press and Messrs. Nelson & Son, who were, till recently, understood to be its promoters. It is certainly very cheap, and, though very condensed, supplies sounder information than we have hitherto seen in books of the sort. It is also up to date in the articles we have tested, and there is a fair supply of illustrations. The references to books of value seem more numerous than usual, which is gratifying.

MESSRS. MARLBOROUGH, GOULD & Co., of 52, Old Bailey, have sent us the "Marlborough" Newspaper and Magazine Cuttings Book, which contains within boards a number of removable sheets held by steel wires. It is thus easily refilled, and seems to us an excellent repository for the cuttings which the busy man wants to keep and often loses.

LIST OF NEW BOOKS.

ENGLISH.

Theology.

- Bigg (C.), The Church's Task under the Roman Empire, 8vo, 5/ net.
 Douglas (J.), The Man in the Pulpit, cr. 8vo, 2/6 net.
 Facsimiles of the Athos Fragments of Codex H of the Pauline Epistles, photographed and deciphered by K. Lake, 4to, in wrapper, 21/ net.
 Harper (W. R.), Critical and Exegetical Commentary on Amos and Hosea, 8vo, 12/
 Legge (H.), From Plunkett's Pavilion to Plettenberg Bay, cr. 8vo, 2/6

Law.

- Oppenheim (L.), International Law: Vol. 1, Peace, 18/ net.

Fine Art and Archaeology.

- Auscher (E. S.), A History and Description of French Porcelain, translated by W. Burton, roy. 8vo, 30/ net.
 Capart (J.), Primitive Art in Egypt, translated by A. S. Griffith, roy. 8vo, 16/ net.

Poetry and the Drama.

- Children's Garland (The), selected by C. Patmore, 2/6 net.
 Keats (J.), Poems, edited by H. de Selincourt, 8vo, 7/6 net.
 Newbigging (T.), Sketches in Prose and Verse, 3/6 net.

History and Biography.

- Brooks (G.), Dames and Daughters of the French Court, extra cr. 8vo, 8/6 net.
 D'Arblay (Madame), Diary and Letters, edited by C. Barrett, Vol. 4, 8vo, 10/6 net.
 Fortescue (Hon. J. W.), The British Army, 1783-1802, 8vo, 4/6 net.
 Lutzow (Count), Lectures on the Historians of Bohemia, 8vo, 5/ net.
 Noussaine (H. de), The Kaiser as He Is, translated by W. Littlefield, cr. 8vo, 6/
 Rathbone (William), by E. F. Rathbone, 8vo, 7/6 net.
 Rhys (J.), Studies in Early Irish History, Vol. 1, 8vo, sewed, 4/ net.

Geography and Travel.

- Hollis (A. C.), The Masai, their Language and Folk-lore, 8vo, 14/ net.
 Modern Atlas of America, 4to, 10/6

Education.

- Hubbell (G. A.), Up through Childhood, cr. 8vo, 6/ net.

Philology.

- Kenyon (F. G.), The Evidence of Greek Papyri with regard to Textual Criticism, Vol. 1, 8vo, sewed, 2/ net.

Science.

- Investigation of Mine Air, edited by Sir C. Le N. Foster and J. S. Haldane, cr. 8vo, 6/ net.
 Macpherson (H.), Astronomers of To-day and their Work, extra cr. 8vo, 7/6 net.
 Maynard (S. T.), Successful Fruit Culture, cr. 8vo, 5/ net.
 Meldrum (A. N.), Avogadro and Dalton, 8vo, 3/ net.
 Poincaré (H.), Science and Hypothesis, cr. 8vo, 3/6
 Sanders (T. W.), The Book of the Potato, cr. 8vo, 2/6 net.
 Smith (R. B.), Bird Life and Bird Lore, 8vo, 10/6 net.
 Spillman (W. J.), Farm Grasses of the United States, 5/

General Literature.

- Barrett (A. Wilson), The Silver Pin, cr. 8vo, 6/
 Bradshaw's Railway Manual, 1905, cr. 8vo, 12/
 Church of England Official Year-Book, 1905, 8vo, boards, 3/
 Clyde (C.), A Pagan's Love, cr. 8vo, 6/
 Coleridge (G.), An Instinctive Criminal, cr. 8vo, 6/
 Colliery Book-keeping, by Monkhouse, Goddard & Co., 4to, 5/ net.
 Dale (A.), Wanted: a Cook, cr. 8vo, 6/
 Driscoll (C.), The Girl of La Gloria, cr. 8vo, 6/
 Farjeon (B. L.), The Clairvoyante, cr. 8vo, 6/
 Freeman (R. A.), The Golden Pool, cr. 8vo, 6/
 Fuller (R. H.), The Golden Hope, cr. 8vo, 6/
 Gilman (C. P.), Human Work, cr. 8vo, 7/ net.
 Haggard (A.), A Bond of Sympathy, cr. 8vo, 6/
 Kellor (F. A.), Out of Work, cr. 8vo, 5/ net.
 Kelly (M.), Little Citizens, cr. 8vo, 6/
 Lang (A.), Adventures among Books, cr. 8vo, 3/6 net.
 Lowe (C.), A Lindsay's Love, cr. 8vo, 6/
 McCarthy (J. H.), The Dryad, cr. 8vo, 6/
 McCutcheon (G. B.), Beverly of Graustark, cr. 8vo, 6/
 Medical Register, 1905, roy. 8vo, 10/6
 Nash (E.), The Principles of Strategy, 12mo, 3/6 net.
 Penrose (Mrs. H. H.), The Unequal Yoke, cr. 8vo, 6/
 Reich (E.), Imperialism: its Prices, its Vocation, 3/6 net.
 Seton (E. T.), Monarch, the Big Bear of Tallic, 5/ net.
 Silver (R. N.), Held Apart, cr. 8vo, 3/6
 Stock Exchange Official Intelligencer, 1905, 4to, 50/
 Whitby (C. J.), The Logic of Human Character, 3/6 net.
 Willcocks (M. P.), Widdicombe, cr. 8vo, 6/
 Wilson (H. L.), The Seeker, cr. 8vo, 6/
 Ystridde (G.), Three Dukes, cr. 8vo, 6/

FOREIGN.

Fine Art and Archaeology.

- Documents de Décoration Moderne, 5fr.
 Pollot (P.), Documents de Bijouterie et Orfèvrerie Modernes, 15fr.
 Lechat (H.), La Sculpture Attique avant Phidias, 20fr.
 Robida (A.), L'île de Lutèce, 5fr.

Drama.

- Lemaitre (J.), La Massière, 3fr. 50.

History and Biography.

- Costa (G. da), La Commune Vécue, Vol. 3, 3fr. 50.
 Golovkine (Comte F.), La Cour et le Règne de Paul I., 7fr. 50.
 Lestrade (Vicomte C. de), La Russie Économique et Sociale à l'Avènement de Nicolas II., 6fr.
 Recueil des Discours, Rapports et Pièces diverses de l'Académie Française, 1900-4, Part 1, 12fr.
 Rocca (C. de C.), Le Nid de l'Aigle: Napoléon, sa Patrie, son Foyer, sa Race, 3fr. 50.

Geography and Travel.

- Jottrand (M. et Madame), Au Siam, Journal de Voyage, 4fr.

Science.

- Buchetti (J.), La Fonderie de Cuivre Actuelle, 30fr.
 Guène (E.) et Goujet (F.), Nos Voies Ferrées, 3fr. 50.

ENGLISH AND AMERICAN COPYRIGHT.

CORRESPONDENCE has been going on in The Standard and elsewhere concerning the difficulties involved in the simultaneous publication of books in this country and the United States, and the unfairness of the present state of the law to English authors, and, we may add, to English publishers, who have notoriously botched some good books for this very reason. But protest apart from practical measures is of little value, and we are glad to put before our readers the fact that real advance has been made towards the solution of the question, thanks to the energy and ingenuity of Mr. Heinemann, who has been stating the English case with conspicuous ability in the United States, undeterred by the attitude of non possumus adopted even by well-wishers on the English side.

On March 2nd, at the Aldine Association of New York, Mr. Heinemann met informally representatives of the Typographical Unions, having enlisted their co-operation at the suggestion of Mr. G. H. Putnam, whose name is inseparably associated with copyright reform. He was able to show that if a provisional copyright could be obtained by entering a work at Washington, with the option of completing such copyright within a period of, say, two or three months, such a measure would not only, of course, be an advantage to English publishers, but, further, even a gain to the typographers of the United States. He proceeded to divide the books of English origin selling in the United States into the following classes: (1) Books of which the success was certain before publication would always be copyrighted in America, and would be set up by American typographers. (2) Books commanding a limited sale, or involving great expense in manufacture, would continue to be set as and where they are now set, and would never, in any circumstances, repay the expense of double setting, the cheapness of English composition tending to their being set in England. (3) The third class is then the only one which need be seriously considered, and consists of books where the question of taking out American copyright is a doubtful policy with English publishers, on account of the risk and expense involved by the manufacturing clause. This class can be divided further into (a) experimental books, which might tempt pirates, though it is generally recognized that English publishers have sufficient judgment to make such action negligible; (b) books promising enough to tempt English publishers to set them up in America for the sake of copyright, and ship their plates or printed sheets to England; (c) books published in England which have a moderate success with the press and the public. These books it does not pay an American publisher to reset, and under the present conditions he buys sheets or plates from England, which are cheaper than American sheets or plates, as there is no advantage gained by American setting, the copyright being forfeited.

Mr. Heinemann pointed out that the chances of success with class (a) were far outbalanced by the fact that books in class (c) would always be set up by the American publisher, if six months' provisional protection was secured for them, which would give the English publisher time to take the test of the English market. In this period of grace it would be possible for the English publisher to persuade his American colleague to complete the copyright provisionally asked for on the English publication of the book, and—we repeat the main point—the American printer would secure type-setting and machining, which he now generally loses.

This obvious advantage to American printers also includes the gain to English publishers of time before deciding on the American market, and the ability to place a book of momentary interest before the public at the right moment, instead of losing that chance by the delay due to the present law in the United States.

The period of grace which seemed generally to be favoured was sixty days; but the result of the discussion was that both American publishers and typographers were in favour of Mr. Heinemann's proposal, provided that means were found to regulate the importation of the English edition between application and completion of copyright. There is also the idea that no knowledge should be withheld from the public which is for the benefit of the public. This Mr. Heinemann proposes to meet by the importation of single copies and books demanded for library purposes under consular certificate that they will not be offered for sale in America.

The details concerning this provision can no doubt be settled without difficulty, and at last we seem within view of a substantial amendment to the Copyright Act, which will go before Congress next autumn and become law.

This great achievement, as we hope it will be, is entirely due to Mr. Heinemann's own initiative, though he is, as some of our readers may know, Vice-President of the Publishers' Association over here. The thanks of all who are concerned for or in literature are due to him for a far-reaching initiative, which may fairly be described as epoch-making, and confirms the epigram that it is only the busiest men who have time to work for the common good.

Just as we go to press we learn that Congress has decided that the privilege of copyright in the United States shall be reserved under the Act approved March 1st, 1905, for books published in all foreign languages. This privilege extends for twelve months, under certain formal conditions of registration at Washington, and certain facts and dates on the back of the title-page. The principle of extended or optional time is thus admitted, and we have every hope that similar rights will before the year is out be extended to Great Britain.

OXFORD NOTES.

THIS term Oxford has possessed herself in a wholly unbroken peace. The most stirring events have, without doubt, been the opening of the new golf-links and the performance of the Greek play. The fact is that our energies have been wholly absorbed in watching the Titanic struggle proceeding at "the other place." Not merely did the vastness of the numbers engaged appeal to the spectacular sense. There was the special question to be settled by analogy—an academic question, perhaps, but then we are an academic body—What would have happened with us, if it had become necessary to take the opinion of Convocation? For there were those who thought that the country parson, though in his day he had suffered in the cause of Greek, would, as the father of a family, be chary of playing into the rapacious hands of the pass-coach. Lastly, if Cambridge made Greek optional for the science man, Oxford knew herself bound to follow suit, if her laboratories were not to be emptied. However, King τύπτω lives. Long live the king!

Even the Rhodes Scholars fail to provide "copy." A goodly number disported themselves in the Torpids. An American buggy has been observed in the High. Statistics seem to show the Rhodesians to have displaced an exactly equal number of British pass-men—not χρύσεια χαλκείων, if time—the tutor's time—be money. And, for the rest, we are quietly engaged in assimilating one another.

Steps are at length being taken to organize a diploma course in anthropology, of similar standard to the courses that already exist in geography and economics. A committee of Council has been recently engaged in collecting and weighing the views of the experts as to the precise form that the scheme of studies ought to take. To harmonize these views may turn out to be a matter of some difficulty. For one thing, the very name "anthropology" is apt to suggest different things to different minds. (And yet, as was said of the yorker, "What else would you call it?") Seek as you will to restrict the word to meaning the study of savagery, etymology, in sinister conjunction with megalomania, is sure to induce some anthropologists to pose as the heaven-appointed students of humanity at large. Meanwhile, the sort of compromise that appears to satisfy the vague-minded consists in the notion that anthropology has to do with anything anybody happens to regard as "primitive." But this at least is clear, that if the proposed course is to include the study of things Mycenaean, Proto-Egyptian, or what not, it will certainly prove unworkable. Now archaeology has cause to complain of the treatment it has hitherto received at Oxford. Our present system of examinations by no means allows it its fling. Thus, rather than play wallflower any longer, it might, one suspects, be ready to stand up with the cave-man, or even the cave-bear, for partner. Let archaeology, however, institute a diploma course of its own. Savagery, the cultural condition of tribal society, presents a vast and, at the same time, determinate subject of comparative research—a subject which needs its specialists, and which can make them, if only it be given plenty of elbow-room and a free hand.

A further difficulty that must be faced in organizing an anthropological course is concerned with the relation to be borne by anthropology to ethnology. The study of culture and the study of race having manifold points of contact, the question arises, Which interest has the greater educative value for the purposes of our scheme? Now, were archaeology permitted to have its say in the matter, there can be little doubt how its influence would be used. In the Mediterranean area the problem of race is held to condition largely, and even primarily, the problem of the origins of civilization. Meanwhile, whereas somatological and linguistic considerations have in this field a certain importance as indications of race, the main source of our exceedingly vague and precarious knowledge of Mediterranean ethnology is history. But savages, to speak broadly, have no history. Thus it is precisely to the weaker kinds of evidence, the somatological and linguistic, that we are perforce driven when dealing with the classification of savages according to the principle of descent. When every so-called Rassenmerkmal has been taken into account—cranium, frontal process, nose, jaws, teeth, hair, humerus, pelvis, calf, tibia, heel, colour, smell, direction of the heart-line, language, emotional and intellectual traits—ethnology unsupported by history remains, in the words of a leading authority, Mr. A. H. Keane, a very "transcendental" science. By all means let our anthropological student be taught the elements of anthropometry; to which may be added the rudiments of the theory and method of experimental psychology. One of the chief objects of the course must be the training of the first-hand investigator, and in an Oxford laboratory he might learn something of how to take stock of physical and psycho-physical characteristics; though, to complete his education, it is essential that he should have practical experience of the work in such a school of observation as that which Prof. Haddon would like to see established off the coast of New Guinea. But the caput cene of our Oxford course must be the comparative study of the early cultural institutions of mankind, for which abundant material is ready to hand, and concerning which it is possible, to an extent perhaps unsuspected by the layman, to reason from sound observations to sure conclusions. Yet in a recent memorandum that has appeared over the name of Prof. Tylor, it seems to be suggested that the comparative study of institutions, save in so far as it bears on the problem of race-distribution, should form but an outlying and optional part of the course. So strangely would such a proposal come from the author of 'Primitive Culture,' that it is better to suppose his real intention to have been obscured by hurry or compression in the drafting. Subordinate culture to race, and you cut the nerve of the scheme. There will not be teachers, or learners, or data, or results.

How anthropology may serve to quicken and, in some sense, transform old-established departments of learning, such as classical archaeology and Christian theology, is clearly brought out in the excellent Hibbert Lectures which

Dr. Farnell is delivering at Manchester College on 'The Anthropological Study of Religion.' The very vastness of the issues raised, however, warns us how necessary it is that our anthropological course should modestly restrict itself to the investigation of savagery, rejecting Prof. Tylor's apparent suggestion that it has rights over the whole field of comparative religion. In his first lecture Dr. Farnell drew a much-needed distinction between the proximate and the remoter pre-history of Christian institutions. Whilst the anthropologist may fitly deal with the latter branch of the subject, the former belongs to the student of early civilization—of that Hellenism, for instance, which in the single matter of cult, as Dr. Farnell's own experience shows, can both claim and richly reward the systematic labours of years.

Prof. Firth's inaugural lecture of last term, dealing with the shortcomings of the Honour School of Modern History, regarded as a training ground for the "professional historian," has called forth a much-needed reply—it would be a mistake to describe it as a protest—from the united body of history tutors and lecturers. The purpose of their open letter is neither that of making war nor of patching up a peace, since from the first the most cordial desire to co-operate has evidently existed between the new Regius Professor and the college teachers. The latter are naturally anxious to justify themselves and their admirable school in the eyes of those "who have no means of ascertaining the exact facts or weighing the merits of academic policy," namely, the outside public. When a reformer would strike home, he is bound to exaggerate. The preacher is naturally moved to rate his congregation as miserable sinners. Rightly understood, such language is a compliment to their powers of self-improvement rather than a stigma on their capacities for the ordinary duties of life. To prevent misunderstanding, then, on the part of an indiscriminating public, the tutors point out that the Professor's strictures relate solely to one aspect, and that not the primary aspect, of the school. Edmond About once said (by way of banter, to be sure), "La fonction d'une université n'est que de former des universitaires." Such, however, is not the ideal of the English universities. They aim at producing, in Plato's phrase, the guardian. The don is a by-product, if it may be said without disrespect to that worthy embodiment of the theoretic life. It is in point to refer to the don, for outside the higher ranks of the teaching profession there is next to no career open to the "professional historian" in this country. The case of France is enviably different, where almost every public institution has its trained archivist. But, if primarily designed as a general education in a department of the humaner letters, the B.A. course in Modern History is no friend to smattering and pretty writing, but invites concentration of mind and even specialization, so far as specialization is possible and suitable for the tiro. Indeed, in insisting that all who desire a first or second class shall offer a special subject, Modern History has set an example which other schools—notably, Literæ Humaniores—would do well to follow. Something might perhaps be done to encourage original research by allowing candidates to substitute a thesis for one or another of the more special subjects. Prof. Firth's suggestion that work done for certain prize essays might be submitted to the examiners, and considered by them in the assignment of honours, receives the approval of the tutors as making in this direction. On the whole, however, they maintain, and, it would seem, maintain with reason, that the school as at present constituted fulfils its primary purpose. Meanwhile, amongst the practical recommendations appended to their letter is one which appears to point the way to the true solution of the difficulty how the professional historian is to be trained:—

"We would suggest the desirability of printing, with an explanatory pamphlet, the scheme that the University has devised for the degree of Bachelor of Letters, and circulating this particularly in America and the British colonies, with a view to encouraging post-graduate students in Oxford."

That "expansion" of the History School whereof Prof. Firth dreams is about to become actual in one very important respect, thanks to the munificence of Mr. Beit. Henceforth the list of special subjects will always include some portion of colonial history. Nor is the provision likely to become a dead letter when, on the one hand, there are keenly interested students likely to be forthcoming in the colonial Rhodes Scholars, and, on the other hand, ample means are at hand for obtaining adequate instruction. Mr. Beit is ready to contribute the sum of 1,310*l.* per annum for seven years, and if at the end of that period the Council votes the scheme a success—and this it is likely to do, unless we elect none but "Little Englanders" in the interval—Mr. Beit undertakes to provide a permanent endowment. The money is to be devoted to the maintenance of a resident Professor of Colonial History, supported by assistant lecturers; to the establishment of an annual "Beit Prize" of the value of 50*l.*, to consist of an essay on some subject connected either with the advantages of "Imperial Citizenship" or with colonial history; and to the purchase of books on colonial subjects. "Colonial history" is understood by Mr. Beit as including the history of Imperial policy towards British possessions, together with the detailed history of the self-governing colonies—including the American colonies before their separation—and of all British possessions, past and present, other than India and its dependencies. M.

MISTAKES IN PEERAGES.

March 18th, 1905.

ALLOW me to thank Mr. J. M. Collyer for the courteous way in which he calls my attention to the fact that, King Robert Bruce having had two daughters named "Margaret" living at the same time, I inadvertently married the wrong Margaret to Walter Stewart. But this does not affect the fact that Richard de Burgo, the "Red Earl" of Ulster, was an ancestor of the Stewarts, inasmuch as his descendant Elizabeth (daughter of Edward IV.) married King Henry VII., whose daughter Margaret, by her marriage with James IV. of Scotland, was mother of James V., grandmother of Mary, Queen of Scots, and great-grandmother of James VI. of Scotland and first of England. Putting, therefore, the two Margarets aside, Richard de Burgo is still an ancestor of the House of Stewart as well as of the House of York, and of his Majesty King Edward VII., who is twenty-second in descent, through the Plantagenets and the Stewarts, from the said Richard de Burgo, the "Red Earl" of Ulster.

Neither does Mr. Collyer's remark affect the fact—to which I wished to draw particular attention—that my recent discoveries have revealed mistakes in Peerages of which genealogists have hitherto been unaware.

As regards his query as to whether King Robert Bruce's wife was Ellen or "Elizabeth," I think he will find that the doubt which existed was whether the Earl of Gloucester married "Elizabeth" or Matilda, and the Papal document to which I referred states clearly that he married Matilda.

As my statement in The Athenæum of March 11th was necessarily merely an epitome of the result of my researches, I did not go into details relative to other royal connexions of the House of De Burgo, and to much interesting matter revealed in the documents to which I have had access.

BARTLE TEELING.

THE SPRING PUBLISHING SEASON.

MESSRS. HUTCHINSON & CO.'S

announcements for the spring include the following: The Romance of Savoy: Victor Amadeus II. and his Stuart Bride, by the Marchesa Vitelleschi, 2 vols.,—The Regent of the Roués, by Lieut.-Col. Andrew C. P. Haggard,—Letters from Catalonia and other Parts of Spain, by Rowland Thirlmere, with illustrations by Seymour Lucas, Frank Brangwyn, G. Haité, T. Haddon, T. R. Macquoid, Tom Browne, and others, 2 vols.,—Imperialism: its Prices, its Vocation, by Dr. E. Reich,—The Real New York, by Rupert Hughes, with illustrations by H. Mayer,—Paris and the Social Revolution, by A. F. Sanborn, with illustrations,—The Trial of Jesus, by Giovanni Rosadi,—in "The Woman's Home Library": The Mother's Manual, by E. L. Coolidge, and Beauty through Hygiene, Commonsense Ways to Health for Girls, by E. Walker,—Makers of Song, by A. A. Chapin, fourth edition,—new volumes in "The Library of Standard Biographies," including Carlyle's Life of Cromwell, with a selection of his letters and speeches, edited by E. Sanderson; and Boswell's Life of Johnson, abridged and edited by R. Ingpen,—Liberia, the Negro Republic in West Africa, by Sir H. Johnston, with illustrations and maps, 2 vols.,—Uganda and its Peoples, by J. F. Cunningham,—The Ruined Cities of Ceylon, by H. W. Cave,—The Uganda Protectorate, by Sir H. Johnston, revised and cheaper edition,—Every Morning: First Thoughts for First Hours, by the late Joseph Parker,—"The World of Music," by the Comtesse de Brémont, 3 vols.: The Great Composers, The Great Singers, The Great Virtuosi,—The Confessions of Rousseau, with illustrations after Maurice Leloir,—A Diplomatist's Wife in Japan, by Mrs. Hugh Fraser, popular edition,—Memoirs of Emma, Lady Hamilton, with Anecdotes of her Friends and Contemporaries, edited and annotated by W. H. Long,—Memoirs of Mrs. Siddons, interspersed with Anecdotes of Authors and Actors, by J. Boaden,—The Story of Nell Gwyn and the Sayings of Charles II., by Peter Cunningham, edited by H. B. Wheatley,—Adventures in Pondland, by Frank Stevens,—Twenty-six Ideal Stories for Girls, by twenty-six popular authors, including E. T. Fowler, E. Everett-Green, Rosa N. Carey, Sarah Doudney, L. T. Meade, Emma Marshall, and Jane Barlow,—new volumes in the "Classic Novels" series: Fielding in 6 vols., and Smollett in 6 vols., with illustrations by George Cruikshank, "Phiz," &c.; the novels of Sterne, in 3 vols., with photogravures and etchings after Ed. Hedouin and Harry Furniss,—The Truth about Man, by a Spinster,—Hearts of Wales, by Allen Raine,—Fata Morgana, by André Castaigne,—The White Causeway, by Frankfort Moore,—The Grand Duke, by Carlton Dawe,—Linked by Fate, by Charles Garvice,—Patricia: a Mother, by "Iota,"—The Clairvoyante, by B. L. Farjeon,—The Marble City, by G. B. Burgin,—The Three Essentials, by Dorothea Gerard,—The Secret of Wold Hall, by E. Everett-Green,—The Rebel Wooing, by J. A. Steuart,—The Sixth Sense, by Adeline Sergeant,—Guthrie of The Times, by J. A. Altscheler,—Mr. Chippendale of Port Welcome, by Charles Fellows,—A Prima Donna's Romance, by F. W. Hayes,—Aunt Phipps, by Tom Gallon,—The Middle Wall, by Edward Marshall,—The Rose of Life, by M. E. Braddon,—Queer Lady Judas, by "Kita,"—and novels by "Lucas Malet," Stanley Weyman, Rider Haggard, J. K. Jerome, Mary Cholmondeley, E. T. Fowler, Dorothea Gerard, W. Le Queux, and Katherine C. Thurston.

MESSRS. SEELEY & CO.

announce cheaper editions of The Hope of Immortality, by Bishop Welldon,—Edinburgh, by R. L. Stevenson, pocket issue,—The Story of the Iliad, and The Story of the Odyssey, both by the Rev. A. J. Church, with illustrations after Flaxman. In the "Illustrated Pocket Library": The British Seas, by W. Clark Russell and others; and Oxford, by Andrew Lang,—and additions to their "Sixpenny Series," "Olive Library," and "Pink Library."

SALE.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE sold on the 21st and 22nd inst. the following valuable books: Ackermann's Microcosm of London, 3 vols., 1810, 15*l.* 15*s.*; Repository of Arts, &c., 40 vols., 1809-28, 30*l.* Prologue and Characters of Chaucer's Pilgrims, intended to illustrate Blake's engraving, 1812, 10*l.* 10*s.* Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress, tenth edition, 1685, 16*l.* 10*s.* Chaucer's Works, by Stowe, 1561, 15*l.* 10*s.* Dorat, Les Baisers, 1770, 19*l.* 5*s.* Drayton's Polyolbion, 1613-22, 14*l.* Ben Jonson's Works, large paper, 1616, 29*l.* 10*s.* Pope's Sober Advice from Horace to the Young Gentlemen about Town, uncut, 1725, 15*l.* 15*s.* Spenser's Faerie Queene, first edition (slightly defective), 1590-6, 76*l.*; the same, 1609, 13*l.* 5*s.* The Countesse of Pembroke's Arcadia, by Sir P. Sidney, first edition (very few perfect copies exist), 1590, 450*l.* Tennyson's Poems, 1830, 10*l.* Thackeray's Book of Snobs, 1848, 12*l.* Ainsworth's Novels, first editions, 106 vols., uniform morocco, 1823-78, 66*l.* Sonnets by E. B. B. (Mrs. Browning), 1847, 33*l.* S. Daniel's Poetical Works, 1718, with MS. notes by Charles Lamb and S. T. Coleridge, &c., 39*l.* 10*s.* Dickens's Martin Chuzzlewit, 1848, with some proofs and MS. corrections by Dickens, 29*l.* 10*s.* Dr. John Hall (Shakespeare's son-in-law), Select Observations on English Bodies, 1657, 25*l.* David's Sling against Great Goliath, by H. E., 1581, 15*l.* 10*s.* Keats's Endymion, first edition, uncut, 1818, 19*l.* 5*s.* Lilford's British Birds, 8 vols., 1885-97, 51*l.* George Keith's Tracts, printed at Philadelphia (6), 1692-6, 88*l.* Coryat's Crudities, 1611, John Davies of Hereford's copy, 55*l.* Davies of Hereford's Witt's Pilgrimage, 1603, 24*l.* Bryan's Dictionary of Painters and Engravers, with upward of 3,000 extra illustrations, 11 vols., folio, 65*l.*

Literary Gossip.

IN The Cornhill Magazine for April Mr. Walter Frith describes from contemporary sources the publication of 'Evelina.' Under the joint title of 'Greeks and Trojans,' Magister Artium contributes 'A Dialogue' on 'Schools and Colleges,' and the Hon. John Collier an article on 'Compulsory Classics, by an Outsider.' Mr. Stephen Gwynn discourses on 'Mr. G. B. Shaw and the British Public,' and Mr. Joseph Shaylor writes with authority on 'Reprints and their Readers.' In 'Dying Out,' Mr. George Bourne describes the older generation of farm-labourers as contrasted with their less competent successors. In verse, Mr. E. H. Pember, K.C., with his 'Debita Flacco,' gives an Horatian account of an episode which five-and-forty years ago befell a politician, known first in Australia, then later and better at St. Stephen's.

THE April Blackwood will contain articles on 'Who and Where are the Unemployed?' 'The German Staff on Lord Roberts's Campaign'; 'The Scottish Religious Revolution (History versus Tradition),' by Mr. Andrew Lang; 'The Waterways of the Sudan,' by Dr. Andrew Balfour; 'The Fear of Russia and the Defence of India'; and 'A Study of the Russo-Japanese War,' Part IV.

MR. MURRAY has in hand a complete text of Byron's poetry in accordance with the revised and enlarged version included in his big edition. This, the only authentic and copyright text of Byron in one volume, is being edited by Mr. Ernest Hartley Coleridge, who will also add a short biographical and critical introduction. The book will be published next autumn.

MR. FISHER UNWIN has in the press a new novel by Mr. L. P. Truscott. It is entitled 'Stars of Destiny,' and is a psychological study of the relations between a man and two women, one of them appealing to his ideals, the other to the lower side of his nature.

DR. WALLIS BUDGE, of the British Museum, who has for some years past carried on excavations on the site of the Pyramids at Gobel Barkal and Shendy, is to write a history of the Soudan from the archaeological point of view. On this he is now occupied, and it will contain, among other things, an account of his discoveries, with full illustrations. At present our knowledge of the history of the Nubian kingdom, where so many of the earlier Egyptian customs must have been preserved, is almost entirely confined to the facts stated in the eighth volume of his 'History of Egypt.'

PROF. W. A. COPINGER has just completed a 'History of the Manors of Suffolk,' which will appear in seven volumes folio. The accounts of each manor will usually start with the Domesday entry, and many of the manors (there are about 1,500) have been traced down through authentic records, almost without a break, to the present day. The work will contain illustrations of the old manor-houses now rapidly disappearing. The first volume, treating of the manors in the Hundreds of Babergh and Blackbourn, is now in the press, and will shortly be published by Mr. Fisher Unwin.

MR. E. G. CLAYTON writes:—

"A reader at the British Museum for more than a quarter of a century, I was sorry to read of the early death of Sergeant Henry Hook, V.C., of Rorke's Drift, for so many years a well-known attendant at the entrance to the Library. Is it presumptuous to suggest to the Trustees, through your columns, that it would be a graceful act to place in the lobby leading to the Reading-Room a small brass plate, briefly recounting the name and services of this hero? Many readers, I believe, would be pleased to subscribe. I, for one, should be glad to do so."

MR. THOMAS WRIGHT writes from the Cowper School, Olney:—

"As my work 'The Life of Sir Richard Burton' is now nearly finished, I should be pleased to hear from any one who has letters of either Sir Richard or Lady Burton. The work, which will correspond in size with my 'Life of Edward FitzGerald,' and contain about seventy illustrations, is being written with the full approval and assistance of the Burton family."

SCHOLARSHIPS of the value of 10*l.* each have been awarded by the Director of the School of Irish Learning (Dr. Kuno Meyer) to the following students to enable them to attend the summer course in Irish philology to be held by Prof. J. Strachan: Mr. Stephen MacDonagh (given by Sir Antony MacDonnell), Mr. Jarvis MacLean (given by Dr. Henry Jones and other professors of Glasgow University), Mr. W. J. Gruffydd (given by Lord Castletown of Upper Ossory), and Mr. Timothy Lewis (given by Prof. W. P. Ker).

THE Government has assigned a grant of 100*l.* per annum to assist the School in carrying out its programme of publications from Irish MSS. A further contribution of 1,000 dollars has been promised by Mr. Quinn, the editor of the New York Daily News, who also offers several scholarships to enable American students to attend the session of the School. Intending students should apply to Dr. Kuno Meyer, The University, Liverpool.

AN article, signed by the well-known name of Julia Magruder, in The North American Review for March 15th, makes an attack on Tennyson for the view of marriage presented in his 'Idylls of the King,' the striking fact about Mrs. Magruder's criticism being that the points which she selects are hardly Tennyson's, for they are to be found in the various legends upon which he based his poem.

Temple Bar for April will contain a centenary paper on Hans Christian Andersen by Mr. A. L. Salmon. Mr. J. W. de la Mare contributes a poem entitled 'The Lady of Sleep.' Mr. Charles Oliver describes 'A Russian Laager on a Peace Footing,' showing the humours and hospitalities of a Russian camp in Poland. Miss Helen H. Colvill (Katherine Wyldé) again takes her readers 'From South to North in Spain'; and Mr. Laurence Jerrold commemorates the death of La Revue Blanche by an obituary paper called 'The Last of Les Jeunes.'

THE April number of Macmillan's Magazine contains an article on 'Matthew Arnold as a Critic,' by Mr. H. H. Dodwell; S. G. Tallentyre's second paper on 'The Fellow-Workers of Voltaire,' which discusses the career of D'Alembert; 'The Alien,' by Mr. Edward John Prior, which is an attempt to forecast the lines of forthcoming legislation; and an account of the relations of Ruskin and Gladstone, by Mr. W. Sinclair.

A NEW work for which Mr. Elliot Stock is the sole agent in this country will shortly be published in four volumes by Messrs. Dodd, Mead & Co., of New York. It consists of a tabulated report and analysis of all the important book sales which have been held in England and America since 1864, when the celebrated Daniel collection was dispersed at Messrs. Sotheby's. The volumes of 'Book-Prices Current' up to 1902 have been drawn upon by arrangement, and Mr. J. Herbert Slater, the editor of that periodical, has written a short introduction to the new American work, which will be issued on a separate slip. The forthcoming volume of 'Book-Prices Current' will, by the way, contain what will doubtless prove to be a distinct improvement. The two indexes, general and subject, are to be amalgamated, and placed after the table of contents at the beginning of the book.

THE Eragny Press, Hammersmith, have just issued 'Some Old French and English Ballads,' with music designed from sixteenth-century models, and a coloured wood-cut frontispiece by Lucien Pissarro.

THE death is announced of M. Hugues Rebelle, a young writer of considerable promise. He was only thirty-five years of age, and had been writing articles and books since his twentieth year. He contributed to the Mercure de France, to La Plume, L'Ermitage, and other reviews "d'avant-garde." His first book, 'Baisers d'Ennemis,' was quickly followed by others, notably 'Chants de la Pluie et du Soleil,' 'Micharia,' 'La Femme qui a connu l'Empereur' (the best known probably to English readers), 'La Camorra,' 'Le Magasin d'Auréoies,' and others. His published works also include a political brochure, 'L'Union des Trois Aristocraties,' and studies under the title of 'Victorien Sardou' and 'Inspirations de Balzac, de Stendhal et de Mérimée.'

AT the meeting of the Institut de France held last week the disposition of 30,000 francs forming the Debrousse legacy was the chief subject of discussion, and M. Poincaré's report recommended the following "subventions": "Publication des 'Tables de la Lune,' 5,000 fr.; Journal des Savants, 5,000 fr.; "catalogue" of the works of Leibnitz, 3,000 fr.; for the study of the "tuniciers" at Naples, 3,000 fr.; for the work in connexion with the installation of the Library at Chantilly, 7,000 fr.; and for the introduction of a seismographic apparatus at the Paris Observatoire, 3,000 fr. The remaining sum of 4,000 fr. is carried over to next year's account. Each member of the Institut received a "plaquette magnifique," 'Le Triomphe et les Gestes de Mgr. Anne de Montmorency,' from the MS. at Chantilly.

THE death, in his seventy-fifth year, is announced from Bonn of the distinguished historian Hermann Hüffer. He was the author of a number of valuable works, and his careful study of the archives enabled him to throw a new light on many political occurrences, notably on the position of Austria and Prussia during the war of the French Revolution. He also wrote a number of literary studies. His most important writings were: 'Diplomatische Verhandlungen aus der französischen Revolution bis zum Abschluss des Friedens von Campo-Formio,' 'Quellen zur Geschichte des Zeitalters der französischen Revolution,' 'Aus dem Leben Heinrich Heines,' &c. Hüffer was Professor of Jurisprudence at the University of Bonn, and was a member of the Reichstag from 1867 to 1870.

THE well-known Norwegian novelist Mrs. (Fru) Amalie Skram died on the 15th inst., after a very short illness, at Copenhagen, where she had been settled since her marriage in 1884 with the Danish author Erik Skram. Among the many powerful works by her are the series of four volumes about the people of Hellemys, 'Offspring,' 'Constance Ring,' 'Lucie,' and 'Professor Hieronimus,' a painful study of mental suffering, published in an English translation in 1899.

IT has been decided to celebrate the centenary of Schiller in Paris, as well as in Germany, at the beginning of May, although the exact form which the celebration will take is not yet settled. Schiller's early revolutionary writings, especially the sentiments embodied in 'Don Carlos,' according to "Jean Frolo" in Wednesday's Petit Parisien, led the Convention to pass a décret constituting him a "citoyen français."

RECENT Parliamentary Papers include University Colleges, Great Britain, Grant in Aid, Copy of Treasury Minutes, First Report of the University Colleges Committee, &c. (2*d.*); Code of Regulations for Day Schools, Scotland, with Appendices, 1905 (4½*d.*); Associations constituted under the Voluntary Schools Act, 1897, Amounts of Aid Grants to Associated and Unassociated Schools (1*s.* 1*d.*); Education, Scotland, Return showing Expenditure from the Grant, a List of Day Schools, &c. (10*d.*); Circular as to Additional Grants on account of Pupil Teachers (½*d.*); and Reports on the Educational Systems of the Federated Malay States, Hong Kong, Straits Settlements, Fiji, Falkland Islands (1*s.* 8*d.*), and West Africa, Basutoland, Southern Rhodesia, East Africa Protectorate, Uganda, Mauritius, Seychelles (1*s.* 8*d.*).

SCIENCE

THE STRUCTURE OF THE ATOM.

THE popularization of science has its dangers, and Prof. J. J. Thomson's recent lecture at the Royal Institution on the above subject has already produced a fine crop of false impressions. It was instantly hailed by a certain section of the press as a new revelation, which co-ordinates and illumines whole series of facts, proves the truth of Herbert Spencer's evolutionary theories, and performs other wonders. Well accustomed as Prof. Thomson may be by this time to the enthusiasm of ill-informed admirers, the outburst must have astonished him a good deal.

The experiment which produced all this pother is as follows. A quantity of sewing-needles are magnetized and mounted in small discs of cork in such a fashion that they will float vertically in liquid with their north poles uppermost. They are then put into a basin of water having the south pole of a bar magnet suspended at an adjusted distance above the surface. Attracted by the bar, and repelled by each other, they group themselves in ring formation below the former, the number of rings formed being naturally governed by the number of needles used. But in this there can be observed a certain periodicity. Three, four, or five needles will all group themselves at an equal distance from the centre; but if a sixth be added, one will sometimes place itself in the centre and the others form a ring round it. With 8 and 9 needles, the inner group will generally consist of 2; with 10 and 11, of 3; with 12 and 13, of 4; and with 14, of 5. But then another change takes place. Fifteen needles will form themselves into three groups, with 1 in the centre and 5 and 9 in the two outer ones successively; and this three-group formation generally persists until 28 needles are reached, when a four-group system is formed, which lasts up to and including 42, after which it gives place to a five-group system, and so on. The experiment is not new, having been first devised by Prof. A. M. Mayer, and can be found detailed in that excellent text-book 'Ganot's Physics,' in Prof. Thomson's American lectures reprinted in England as 'Electricity and Matter,' and with some additions in Mr. W. C. D. Whetham's 'Recent Development of Physical Science.'

Prof. Thomson, in his Friday evening lecture, used this experiment as an illustration of the way in which the negatively charged corpuscles, which he imagines to inhabit the chemical atom, may group themselves so as to account for the differences of atomic or combining weights noticeable among the different chemical elements. He pointed out that the equilibrium of these different systems of needles was not equally stable, and that while it was possible in many cases to add or withdraw one or more needles without interfering with the number of groups in the system, in others the addition or withdrawal of a single one was sufficient to break up the arrangement and cause regrouping. Carrying his analogy a step further, he drew attention to the likeness between this state of things and the Periodic Law of Mendeléeff, wherein it is shown that the chemical elements, when arranged in the order of their atomic weights, present marked similarity of physical or chemical properties at regularly recurring intervals. Beyond this he did not, so far as can be remembered in the absence of a verbatim report, go on the occasion in question, but in his 'Electricity and Matter' he has developed his thesis further still, and has attempted to deduce from the experiment the cause of chemical valency, and of the positive or negative charge borne by atoms of different elements.

This is all very well, and Prof. Thomson is much too cautious not to be aware that there are gaps in his analogies. He himself mentions in 'Electricity and Matter' that his negative corpuscles are by the hypothesis free to move about in all directions in space, while the floating magnets are restricted to motion in a (horizontal) plane. He might have added that, even in this plane, they are not free to move in any direction, because the attracting force of the central magnet and the repelling force of its fellows exercise constant restraint upon every individual needle, and the cause which allows one needle now and again to escape to the centre remains yet to be investigated. But his followers, as is usual in such cases, going far beyond the point at which he prudently stops, will have the figures formed by his—or, rather, by Prof. Mayer's—floating magnets to be no mere suggestion of what is possible, but an accurate representation of what is taking place within the structure of the actual atom. Without further considering statements confessedly addressed to the uninstructed reader of newspapers, and perhaps not intended to be taken very seriously, let us see what Mr. Whetham says in the interesting book mentioned above. Here (p. 259) we find a list of "all the arrangements of corpuscles.....with 20 in the outer ring," as follows:—

|  | I. | II. | III. | IV. | V. | VI. | VII. | VIII. | IX. |
|--|----|-----|------|-----|----|-----|------|-------|-----|
| Total number of corpuscles               | 59 | 60  | 61   | 62  | 63 | 64  | 65   | 66    | 67  |
| Number of corpuscles in successive rings | 2  | 3   | 3    | 3   | 3  | 4   | 4    | 5     | 5   |
|  | 8  | 8   | 9    | 9   | 10 | 10  | 10   | 10    | 10  |
|  | 13 | 13  | 13   | 13  | 13 | 13  | 14   | 14    | 15  |
|  | 16 | 16  | 16   | 17  | 17 | 17  | 17   | 17    | 17  |
|  | 20 | 20  | 20   | 20  | 20 | 20  | 20   | 20    | 20  |

Of these he declares 60 to be the "model of a monovalent, strongly electro-positive atom"; 61 "a less electro-positive, divalent atom"; 62 "a trivalent atom with still less marked electro-positive properties"; 64 "a trivalent electro-negative atom"; 65 "a divalent electro-negative element"; 66 "an atom, monovalent, and strongly electro-positive"; while 67 is declared to have "no valency," in this resembling 59; 63 is, for some reason, left without qualities assigned to it, but it may, from the context, be a tetravalent atom, with either very feebly marked electro-positive or electro-negative properties.

With this new system of "correspondences" one can have no quarrel, although it seems a little odd that out of seven different types of atoms, four should be electro-positive, one doubtful, and only two electro-negative; but Mr. Whetham now (p. 261) invites us to "compare these theoretical results with the first two rows of Mendeléeff's Periodic Table," which he sets forth thus:—

| I.      | II.      | III.       | IV.        | V.       | VI.         | VII.     | VIII.     | IX.    |
|---------|----------|------------|------------|----------|-------------|----------|-----------|--------|
| Helium. | Lithium. | Beryllium. | Boron.     | Carbon.  | Nitrogen.   | Oxygen.  | Fluorine. | Neon.  |
| Neon.   | Sodium.  | Magnesium. | Aluminium. | Silicon. | Phosphorus. | Sulphur. | Chlorine. | Argon. |

Where Mr. Whetham gets his table from is hard to say, for, although groups I. to VIII. are correctly given in their order of atomic weight, and argon (38) falls into place between chlorine (36) and potassium (39), which last comes directly under sodium, one cannot understand why neon should be repeated out of order, unless it is to make up a series of nine elements to correspond with his groups of magnets ranging from 59 to 67. Yet he says (p. cit.):—

"The concordance of Thomson's theoretical scheme with the periodic properties of the chemical elements themselves—a concordance almost Satanic in its exactness and verisimilitude—forces us irresistibly to believe that in these hypothetical systems of revolving corpuscles we have models which reflect in some really intimate way the structure of the mysterious originals."

Mr. Whetham's reputation as a man of science forbids one to suppose that this passage is mere rhetoric, and as he declares in his preface that the particular chapter in which it occurs has been revised by Prof. Larmor, we are doubly entitled to look upon it as a well-considered conclusion.

One is therefore astonished to find that, on examination, this supposed concordance is reduced to extremely modest proportions. The most remarkable thing about Mendeléeff's Periodic Law is the regularity of its periodicity. Arrange the elements according to the order of their atomic weights in rows of seven, and the elements in each vertical row will be seen to have a well-recognized resemblance to each other. Thus it comes about that the row of alkali-metals, beginning, as shown above, with lithium and sodium, can be continued with potassium, copper, rubidium, silver, caesium, and gold; and the halogen group of fluorine and chlorine is completed by manganese, bromine, and iodine. In text-book language, "the properties of the elements are periodic functions of their atomic weights"; and so much is this the case that Prof. Mendeléeff was able to predict, on constructing his table, the existence of three then unknown elements with atomic weights ranging, in one case between calcium and titanium, and in the other two between zinc and arsenic, which have all since been discovered, and named scandium, gallium, and germanium respectively. It is true that there are some irregularities in the table, but these all seem to be connected with the group that begins with iron and ends with platinum, and there is still room for these to be harmonized by the discovery of new elements; while Prof. Mendeléeff, in the latest edition of his 'Principles of Chemistry,' has shown how the new gases, helium, neon, krypton, and argon, and the radio-active metals, radium and thorium, can be made to fall into line with the earlier known elements. But what periodicity is noticeable in Mr. Whetham's table of corpuscles given above? On passing from 63 to 64, the added corpuscle goes to the inmost ring, from 64 to 65 to the middle one, and the process is repeated in groups 66 and 67. Hence at first sight it might appear as if there were some order in their proceedings. But when we look at the lesser numbers we see that this is not so. A corpuscle added to the number 59 goes to the inmost ring indeed, but one added to 60 to the next inmost. When one is added to 60 it jumps two rings to lodge itself in the outermost but one, then one added to 61 flies back to the all-but innermost, and so on. Plainly, these differences in grouping are either due to mere chance, or take place in accordance with some law which does not bear out Mr. Whetham's comparison.

Again, if there were a part of the scale where the resemblance between the grouping of the floating magnets and Mendeléeff's Law might be supposed to manifest itself, it is in the groups consisting of the smallest numbers. Yet here we find that the grouping, so far from being periodic, is not even constant. In the figure which Prof. Thomson ('Electricity and Matter,' p. 115) takes from Mayer, it is shown that several alternations of grouping are possible. Thus, 5 needles will sometimes arrange themselves in two different figures; so will a group of 6, and so again one of 18; while one of 8 can take no fewer than three separate forms. Yet this is followed by no corresponding irregularity in the Mendeléeff table. Oxygen does indeed possess an allotropic modification in ozone, but there is no reason to consider this due to changes within the atom, nor is it herein copied by many other elements.

Other remarks arising out of Mr. Whetham's statements concerning the valency and the electric charge of the atom must be held over for the present. But perhaps enough has been said to show that the system of correspondences announced by him has not been worked out with sufficient care to ensure, in Prof. Karl Pearson's phrase, "equal validity for all normally constituted minds." One may, therefore, be permitted to regret that it was given in this shape to the general public.

THE NATIONAL PHYSICAL LABORATORY.

THE annual meeting of the General Board of the National Physical Laboratory, which is held at Bushy House, serves usefully as the occasion for an inspection of the various departments of the institution, as well as for the formal reception of the report of the Executive Committee on the year's work. In this respect the double function partakes of the character of the familiar visitation of Greenwich Observatory, which arrives with the month of June.

The progress of the Laboratory during 1904 was satisfactory, if somewhat slow in certain aspects of development; but in this connexion it should be remembered that the English institution, as compared with the sister establishments of other countries—the German Reichsanstalt, the French Laboratoire d'Essais, and the United States Bureau of Standards—is frugally subsidized by the State, so that expansion is correspondingly slow. But the executive body are very much in earnest over their duties; moreover, Lord Rayleigh is at their head, which implies a good deal more than appears on the face of things, so that, in spite of existing drawbacks, there is every reason to believe that the Laboratory will ultimately fulfil its high functions.

Satisfaction will be felt in the Treasury's promise of an increased grant-in-aid, that is, from 4,000*l.* per annum, the present figure, to 5,500*l.* for this year, and to 6,000*l.* for next year. In addition, an immediate grant of 5,000*l.* is to be made for new buildings and equipment, and there is a prospect of further subsidies for a few years to come.

Commercial standardizing and testing work of practical importance to industrial undertakings are now carried on at Bushy House on a considerable scale, apart from inquiries of a more or less theoretical nature. We may mention an investigation into the properties of samples of gutta-percha, a photometric examination of a series of electric lamps, tests of gas mantles, and a variety of general electro-technical operations which are of importance to trade. Fees are, of course, charged in these branches. As regards the verification of scientific instruments, a total of some 28,000 passed through the Laboratory for this purpose, including telescopes, sextants, clinical thermometers, and chemical vessels, to name only a few.

It is pleasant to record that a volume of memoirs dealing with the results of research conducted in the Laboratory is on the point of issue. It will appropriately take its place with the Bulletin of the Washington Bureau of Standards, of which a second fascicule has just appeared.

The yearly development of the National Physical Laboratory, under the fostering care of the Director, Mr. R. T. Glazebrook, F.R.S., will be watched with interest by all who are concerned in the proper application of scientific inquiry to the needs and processes of industry.

THE N RAYS.

Cavendish Laboratory, Cambridge, March 18th, 1905.

I SHOULD like to add a word of explanation, if I may, to my note in The Athenæum of March 11th last, as the writer of the article in the last number complains that I have not been sufficiently explicit. Most certainly did I include myself amongst those "other workers" in the words which he has quoted from me, and, indeed, if he had read a little further, he would have found, I said that "from my own experiments on the subject, I have found no evidence of the existence of these rays." It was scarcely necessary for me to enter into or to give a description of what I had already done in my notes in Nature, February 8th and June 30th, 1904.

The question as to whether Prof. Wood did or did not test the vision of some observers in the laboratory he visited—which I gathered from your correspondent's article was that of Prof. Blondlot at Nancy—is, I think, very clearly answered by Prof. Wood in his note in Nature, September 29th, 1904; for he describes four experiments on this point, and I think a reference to that note will suffice: the most striking test being, that the maxima and minima in the spectrum were still observed even when the prism which was supposed to produce the spectrum was removed without the observer's knowledge.

With regard to the photography of the spark, I have said elsewhere (Electrician, December 9th, 1904) that "I have seen one of M. Blondlot's photographic plates which shows two different intensities most distinctly, but the record, I fear, does not prove the required result, because, as has been repeatedly pointed out, the method of alternate exposures with a screen does not eliminate the personal equation, nor the power of suggestion on the one hand, whilst, on the other, the presence of a metallic screen close to a very small spark would be sufficient to alter its brightness by the accompanying increase of capacity, if the screen be sufficiently close to the spark. Lastly, the fact that nobody has been able, so far as I am aware, to obtain a satisfactory photographic record—and I too, I may add, have tried persistently to get the effect, though with negative results—shows that if one could get some independent confirmation of the eye observations, which M. Blondlot himself admits to be the most sensitive test, we should, at any rate, then feel we had something to go upon, and at last reach the solid ground of facts. But until this is done, it seems idle to discuss the matter at much greater length."

And the object of my note in The Athenæum was to emphasize the fact that it is only fair to M. Blondlot to say that,

"although from my own experiments on the subject I have found no evidence of the existence of these rays, the observations of those who do assert that they are satisfied with these new facts should be tested under the most favourable conditions."

JOHN BUTLER BURKE.

SOCIETIES.

GEOLOGICAL.—March 8.—Dr. J. E. Marr, President, in the chair.—Mr. A. Mayon Henshaw was elected a Fellow.—Mr. Alfred Harker exhibited a series of photographic views illustrating the geological structure and physical features of the mountains of Skye. The photographs were mostly taken by Mr. Abraham, of Keswick, but a few were taken by one of the officials of the Geological Survey of Scotland.—Dr. F. H. Hatch, in exhibiting lantern-slides of the Cullinan diamond, said that the photographs were made by Mr. E. H. V. Melville, to illustrate a description of the stone which Dr. Corstorphine and the exhibitor had received the permission of the directors of the Premier Company to make, and which they proposed shortly to publish. The photographs showed the diamond from four points of view and its actual size. The stone was a portion (probably less than half) of a distorted octahedral crystal. As it now existed, the stone was bounded by portions of four original octahedral surfaces and by four cleavage-planes. The former showed in places a slight curvature, a mammillary structure, striations, and triangular pittings, while the cleavage-surfaces were distinguished by greater regularity and smoothness. The stone weighed 3,024½ carats. Its greatest linear dimension was 4 inches. It was of remarkable purity for so large a stone, approaching "blue-white" in colour. It was found at the beginning of the present year, in the "yellow ground" of the Premier Mine, at a depth of 18 feet below the surface. The Premier Mine was a true "pipe," situated on the farm of Elandsfontein, 20 miles north-east of Pretoria.—Two papers by Miss Jane Donald, 'Observations on some of the Loxonematidæ, with Descriptions of Two New Species,' and 'On some Gasteropoda from the Silurian Rocks of Llangadock, Caermarthenshire,' were communicated by Prof. T. Groom.

SOCIETY OF ANTIQUARIES.—March 9.—Prof. Gowland, V.P., in the chair.—Messrs. W. H. Fox and P. H. Newman were admitted Fellows.—The Chairman read a paper on 'Five Crucibles from Rhodesia, found near Panhalanga, not far from the Border of Manicaland, by the Lord Bishop of Chichester.' The crucibles, although not of prehistoric types, are of very rude construction, and from this alone they might easily have been referred to an early date. A few minute globules of metal (some of copper, others of a copper-zinc-tin alloy) were, however, found adhering to their sides. The alloy contained virtually the same percentage of zinc as some of the ornamental castings from Benin. The globules, moreover, were quite free from any incrustation of copper carbonate. From these data it is evident that the crucibles are not of earlier date than the settlements of the Portuguese colonists in Sofala (c. 1505 A.D.).—Mr. Horace Sandars read a paper on 'The Linares Bas-relief and Roman Mining Operations in Bætica.' He pointed out that the prolific valley of the Bætis and the mountain ranges so rich in minerals which enclose it had attracted towards their northern confines races and nations who had established permanent settlements there before Roman times. The best-known of such settlements, in pre-Roman, Roman, and post-Roman times, was the town of Cástulo, the position and importance of which were dwelt on. The whole range of the Mariani Montes close by, from the Saltus Castulonensis to the mouths of the Anas, was extensively mined by the Romans, who worked the principal minerals (if not all) to be found in their surface or which were hidden away deep within them. The Roman operations embraced the lead mines near the Saltus, and copper mines in the neighbouring plateaus; the rich silver-lead mines of the central section, within what is now the province of Cordova; the powerful copper lodes which undoubtedly constituted the mine referred to by Pliny in book xxxiv. chap. ii., and which produced that "æs Murianum quod et Cordebense dicitur" which was as excellent as aurichalcum for making sesterties and double asses; and, still further south, the very extensive cupreous iron pyrites deposits which are now exploited by the Rio Tinto, the Tharsis, and other companies. The Roman methods and practices can readily be followed, and in some cases, especially in that of the Rio Tinto and the Tharsis mines, the traces of mining operations which they have left behind them are stupendous. At Tharsis, for instance, they converted the top of a mountain into a crater, and removed the hardest quartzite rock to form their open caste, which offers even to-day a striking example of their system of working by fire, distinct traces of which can be seen on the eastern wall. The Roman road which led from Cástulo to Sisapo, and with regard to which inscriptions have been found at Cástulo, passed in all probability in close proximity to "Palazuelos," where there was a strong fortress of a quadrangular form, flanked by towers and built of irregular blocks of sandstone. Who the original builders were is lost to history, but that the Romans were the last to occupy it there can be no doubt. The fortress stands contiguous to, and indeed is built over, an ancient and extensive mine, which is known to-day as the "Pozos de Anibal" or Hannibal's shafts. Romance says that this is the mine which Himilce brought as a dowry to Hannibal, and that it is moreover the mine which Pliny described as having produced for Hannibal 300 lb. of silver per day. There is, however, no evidence in support of either contention. It was in the neighbourhood of this mine that the Linares bas-relief was found in 1875. It is not the work of an artist of a high order, but it faithfully renders and intelligibly depicts the intention of the sculptor, who desired to show a gang of Roman miners proceeding to their work. The bas-relief is worked on a slab of red sandstone, and it must have originally taken the form of a picture about twenty inches square, surrounded by a frame. It was first published in France in the Revue Archéologique of April, 1882, where

M. Daubrée gave an account of it. Dr. R. de Berlanga, of Malaga, whose erudite works on the bronzes of Malaga, Osuna, and Aljustrel are but too little known outside his own country, described it, and produced a photograph of it in 1884; and others have referred to it perfunctorily and described it incorrectly. The foreman has been turned into the god Mercury, and the miners into Christian martyrs; but no correct representation was published until a photograph of it was reproduced, with notes by Mr. Sanders, in the Revue Archéologique of April, 1903. The bas-relief really represents eight stalwart Roman miners under the charge of a foreman, walking along the gallery of a mine. The foreman, being a man of importance, is of larger stature than the miners. He carries a pair of large, double-looped tongs over his right arm, and a hollow object in his left hand, while the miner who precedes him carries a pick on his shoulder, and the miner who is still further to the front has a lamp in his hand. The date of the sculpture is uncertain, but the conjectures which have been made as to its archaic origin were all based upon incorrect representations. From the castle of Palazuelos Mr. Sanders took the meeting to another fortress on the skirts of the Sierra Morena, about fifteen miles to the west, known as the Salas de Galiarda, and built on the general plan of Palazuelos, but in this instance of blocks of granite, regular in form and of large size, and set without mortar. There was an ancient copper mine in its immediate vicinity which was worked by the Romans, and the Romans were the last occupiers of this castle too. Mr. Sanders subsequently showed some photographs of objects and implements found on the surface of or within Roman mines in Bætica.

BRITISH ARCHÆOLOGICAL ASSOCIATION.—March 15.—Dr. W. de Gray Birch in the chair.—The Chairman exhibited, on behalf of Mr. W. E. A. Axon, a fine photograph and several other illustrations of the very curious sculptured stone which was discovered in the foundations of the west wall of the south porch of Manchester Cathedral in 1871, and is known as the "Angel Stone." It measures 13½ in. by 8½ in., and represents an angel with extended wings standing, and holding a kind of scroll bearing an incised inscription, which Canon E. L. Hicks reads as follows:—

IN MANVS T
VAS DM CO
MMED SP

"In manus Tuas Domine commendo spiritum" (meum). Considerable difference of opinion exists as to the real meaning of this stone and as to its date. Dr. Birch thinks the sculpture and inscription belong to the eighth or ninth century, and formed part of a representation of the Crucifixion. The stone is being carefully preserved by the cathedral authorities.—Dr. Astley exhibited, on behalf of Mr. Ludovic M. Mann, some sixty objects, many of flint, others of sandstone and quartz, part of a collection of about 1,200 found at Coulmore, in the south of Scotland, on the site of a supposed prehistoric workshop. They are of the Neolithic Age, and some seem to have been handled at a period earlier than that in which the workshop flourished, as they show evidence of the presence of two distinct patinæ on the worked surfaces; some also show signs of fire. No pottery was met with. This exhibition was very interesting in connexion with finds made recently by Dr. Astley and Mr. Andrew in earthworks at Castle Rising, in Norfolk, showing a similar Neolithic workshop there. Dr. Astley also submitted some "lucky stones," and a perforated hammer from the Fens.—Mr. Selley, through Dr. Astley, sent for exhibition some portions of Samian ware showing signs of fire, found near the site of East Gate, Exeter, at a depth of 10 ft. He also showed some pottery from the site of a Roman villa recently unearthed at Brislington, near Bristol.—A paper was read by Mr. C. H. Compton on 'Villa Faustini,' with reference to a letter in The Standard of September 10th, 1904, from Mr. Barham, of Bury St. Edmunds, in which that gentleman, describing Roman remains he had found some three weeks previously at Sicklesmere, about two miles from Bury, raised the question whether the discovery had not localized the position of the "Villa Faustini" of the Itinerary of Antoninus. Mr. Compton, although he had not been successful in locating Faustinus's villa at the 35 miles distance from Colonia which was required, hoped that the materials he had worked out would prove useful in determining the points at issue.—Mr. Forster, Mr. Emanuel Green, Dr. Astley, Mr. Maples, and the Chairman took part in the discussion.

ROYAL NUMISMATIC.—March 16.—Sir Henry H. Howorth, V.P., in the chair.—Mr. Joshua Watts Brooke, Mr. H. Clay Miller, and Mr. Howard

Saunders were elected Fellows.—Dr. T. Armstrong Bowes exhibited a Gaulish gold half-stater recently found on the shore near Reculver. It bears on the obverse a widespread laureate head, and on the reverse Victory in a chariot drawn by a single horse; she holds a leaf-shaped sword, and below the horse is another sword of the same form. The handle of the sword in each case terminates in a semicircular ornament, and is of the form of early British swords which appear to be of about the same date as the coin, circa B.C. 150. This coin is unpublished.—Mr. Baldwin exhibited a gold stater weighing 104 grains, which purported to have been struck by Tyrane, King of Armenia, B.C. 89-36, and which showed on the obverse the bust of the king, and on the reverse a turreted seated figure dividing the king's name.—Mr. R. A. Hoblyn showed a series of gun-money pieces of James II. of interesting varieties of type.—Mr. A. Banes showed a half-crown of Charles II. of his early coinage, which may have been a contemporary forgery.—Mr. P. Webb exhibited a dupondius of Septimius Severus, with an unpublished reverse type of Victory; and Mr. Messenger a sestertius of Titus, with a figure of Annona on the reverse, and without the usual letters S. C. (Senatus Consulto).—Mr. W. Monckton exhibited a silver ticket of the style associated with Vauxhall Gardens, and probably struck about 1750.—Mr. L. M. Hewlett read a paper on 'Anglo-Gallic Coins from Henry II. to Edward I.' In the early series the writer suggested several fresh attributions and rectifications in the chronological sequence of the issues; and in dealing with the coins of Edward I., which are more numerous than in any previous reign, he divided them into several classes which corresponded with various periods of his reign. The districts in which Edward struck his French money were Gascony, Aquitaine, and Ponthieu, and amongst the mint places were Abbeville, Bordeaux, and Guéssin. This is the first of a series of papers in which the writer proposes to deal with the whole series of Anglo-Gallic coins.

STATISTICAL.—March 21.—Sir Francis Sharp Powell, President, in the chair.—A paper on 'The Seasons in the British Isles from 1878' was read by Dr. W. N. Shaw.

ANTHROPOLOGICAL INSTITUTE.—March 14.—Col. Sir T. H. Holdich in the chair.—The Rev. W. H. Edgell gave an interesting description of the manners and customs of the Melanesians, which he illustrated by a collection of ethnographical objects and lantern-slides. These included views of the different types of peoples, and illustrated the development of canoes and houses. One of the finest of the slides illustrated a Melanesian waiting to shoot a fish. He was poised on one leg, and the lecturer stated that he had seen natives waiting motionless for hours by the side of the rivers for an opportunity to shoot. The illustrations of the canoes showed three distinct types. Especially interesting was the lecturer's statement that some of the natives have entirely lost the art of canoe-making, although they still make paddles. Instead of a canoe they use a raft of bamboos.

HISTORICAL.—March 16.—The Rev. W. Hunt, President, in the chair.—The following were elected Fellows: J. Fitzmaurice-Kelly, Sir J. C. E. Shelley, C. M. Turnell, W. G. Waters, and the Rev. J. Lloyd Williams.—Mr. I. S. Leadam communicated transcripts from the Exchequer Memoranda Rolls and Chancery Patent Rolls of the last years of the reign of Henry VII. and first years of Henry VIII., containing the proceedings taken against Polydore Vergil for infringement of the statutes against unauthorized foreign exchanges in his capacity of sub-collector of Peter's Pence in England. A commentary on the proceedings in question was read by Mr. Leadam; and a discussion followed, in which the President, Sir F. Pollock, the Secretary, and the Director took part.—A communication was also made by Mr. R. G. Marsden on the subject of the identification of English ships in the reign of James I., an extensive list of which had been compiled by the author from unique sources of information.

BIBLIOGRAPHICAL.—March 20.—Mr. Faber, President, in the chair.—Mr. H. B. Wheatley read a paper on 'Dr. Johnson as a Bibliographer,' beginning with a short account of the word "bibliographer," and the different senses in which it has been used. Dr. Johnson's claim to the title in the modern sense of the word rested, perhaps, primarily on his interest in books, as evinced by his notes on what he saw in various libraries during his visit to France. He was, however, intimately connected with two great libraries. His taste for old books was no doubt hereditary, being derived from his father, Michael Johnson the bookseller, who was no ordinary tradesman. In conjunction with Oldys, Johnson was engaged by Osborne to catalogue the printed books of the Harleian Collection, which he had purchased en bloc. The prospectus of the catalogue was written by Johnson. Although intended as a sale catalogue, the work was planned as a catalogue raisonné, and priced at five shillings a volume, but the notes were gradually reduced in number. Johnson catalogued the Latin books, Oldys the English, and the work was one which should have brought more credit to Osborne than he has received for it. Why Johnson knocked him down is no better known now than when Mrs. Piozzi asked for information on the subject. Various accounts of the incident were quoted, and instances given of persons knocked down, or who feared to be knocked down, by Johnson. The other library with which Johnson was connected was that formed by George III., as to the selection of which Johnson was consulted.

BRITISH NUMISMATIC.—March 22.—Mr. P. Carlyon-Britton, President, in the chair.—It was announced that the Queen of Italy, the King and Prince Royal of the Hellenes, and the King and Crown Prince of Denmark had honoured the Society by becoming Royal Members.—Their Excellencies Count Albert Mensdorff-Pouilly-Dietrichstein (Austria-Hungary), M. de Bille (Denmark), M. Paul Cambon (France), Count Paul Wolff-Metternich (Germany), Commendatore Alberto Pansa (Italy), Viscount Tadasu Hayashi (Japan), Baron Gericke van Herwijnen (the Netherlands), Count Alexandre de Benckendorff (Russia), and Baron C. Bildt (Sweden and Norway), and Mr. Vernon H. Rendall were elected Honorary Members.—Messrs. F. E. Arbouin, A. Eugster, L. M. Hewlett, P. Cheyney Plowman, and H. H. Schloesser were elected Ordinary Members; and five further applications for ordinary membership were received.—Mr. L. A. Lawrence, Director, read the first part of his paper on 'Forgery in relation to Numismatics,' wherein he described the different classes of forgeries, the methods of their production, and the means of distinguishing false from real coins. The object of the writer was to render assistance to the numismatologist, and he therefore avoided giving specific information likely to assist the forger of the future in attaining a greater proficiency in his nefarious work. Mr. Lawrence exhibited an interesting series of forgeries in illustration of his subject.—Mr. C. McIver Grierson sent for exhibition some forgeries of current silver coins of Queen Victoria, stated to be made by the tanners, or travelling tinkers, in the west of Ireland, and recently collected at a bank in Sligo; and Messrs. Oswald Fitch and W. C. Wells exhibited other examples of forged coins.—Exhibitions of general numismatic interest were contributed by Fleet-Surgeon A. E. Weightman and Messrs. H. Hill, H. Fentiman, and Bernard Roth.

MEETINGS NEXT WEEK.

- |        |   |
|--------|---|
| MON.   | Institute of Actuaries, 5.—'Bonuses in Model Office Valuations and their Relations to Reserves,' Mr. J. Buchanan.   |
| —      | Society of Arts, 8.—'Telephony,' Lecture 111., Mr. H. Laws Webb. (Cantor Lecture.)  |
| —      | Surveyors' Institution, 8.—'The Rating of Railways—their Over-Taxation; its Causes and its Remedies,' Mr. F. Oliver Lyons.  |
| —      | Geographical, 8½.—'Liberia,' Sir H. Johnston.   |
| TUES.  | Colonial Institute, 4½.—'Emigration of State Children,' Mr. C. Kinloch Cooke.   |
| —      | Society of Arts, 4½.—'The Manufactures of Greater Britain: II. Australasia,' Hon. W. Hartwell James. (Colonial Section.)  |
| —      | Royal Institution, 5.—'Vibration Problems in Engineering,' Lecture 11., Prof. W. E. Dalby.  |
| —      | Institution of Civil Engineers, 8.—'Coolgardie Water-Supply,' Mr. C. Stuart Russell Palmer.   |
| WED.   | Society of Arts, 8.—'British Woodlands,' Sir H. Maxwell.  |
| THURS. | Royal, 4½.  |
| —      | Royal Institution, 5.—'The Reasonableness of Architecture,' Lecture 11., Mr. T. G. Jackson.   |
| —      | Antiquaries, 8½.—'Notes on the Harbour and Fortifications of Famagusta, and on some Byzantine Silver Plate and Jewellery, at present in the custody of the Government of Cyprus,' Mr. O. M. Dalton. |
| FRI.   | Institution of Mechanical Engineers, 8.—Discussion on 'First Report to the Steam-Engine Research Committee.'  |
| —      | Royal Institution, 9.—'The Scientific Study of Dialects,' Prof. J. Wright.  |
| SAT.   | Royal Institution, 3.—'Some Controverted Questions of Optics,' Lecture 1., Lord Rayleigh.   |

Science Gossip.

THE Cambridge University Press will publish immediately a treatise on plague by Dr. W. J. Simpson, Professor of Hygiene in King's College, London. The author was engaged specially in connexion with the outbreak of plague in Cape Colony in 1901, and was commissioned by the Colonial Office to inquire into the causes of the continuance of plague in Hong-kong. In this work he has brought together the principal facts concerning plague, viewed from both practical and historical aspects.

THE Chemical Society will hold its anniversary dinner at the Whitehall Rooms, Hôtel Métropole, on Wednesday next.

PRINCE PEDRO OF ORLEANS AND BRAGANZA, son of the Comte d'Eu, who has already visited that part of Central Asia, contemplates making a fresh tour in Chinese Turkistan.

ONE of the most eminent of French specialists in mental diseases has passed away in Dr. Paul Garnier. M. Garnier was a comparatively young man, having been born at Chérac (Charente-Inférieure) on April 28th, 1848. In 1883 he was appointed first assistant at the Infirmerie Spéciale, and three years later he succeeded his chief, M. Legrand du Saulle. Dr. Garnier published a number of works dealing with mental diseases, was Lauréat of the Institut and of the Académie de Médecine, and at one time President of the Société Médico-Psychologique.

'THE AMERICAN EPHEMERIS AND NAUTICAL ALMANAC' for 1908 has been received. The general arrangement remains the same as in the previous volumes since that for 1900, and very few changes are made in the data. Although the central line of the total solar eclipse of January 3rd will be confined in its course to the Pacific Ocean, a small partial eclipse will be visible in Mexico and the South-Western States of America. The duration of totality will be greatest between the Friendly Islands and the Marquesas Group.

A NEW small planet was registered by Prof. Max Wolf at the Königstuhl Observatory, Heidelberg, on the night of the 8th inst.

PROF. CERASKI, Director of the Moscow Observatory, writes to the Astronomische Nachrichten (No. 4003) that Madame Ceraski noticed on a plate taken by M. Blajko about four years ago that the star B.D. -7°.1623) was somewhat fainter than on other photographs. But as the change was small, and noticed on only one plate, it was decided to wait for visual observations before announcing it. With this object M. Blajko repeatedly observed the star, but, finding it continuously of the same magnitude (about 9.8), considered that it must be of the Algol type. But on the 23rd ult. he succeeded in finding it at a minimum, about 10.5 magnitude, and on the following day noticed the increase of brightness. It is thought that the whole change occurs in six or seven hours, and that the minima succeed each other at intervals of about 21<sup>h</sup>.8. The star will be reckoned as var. 43, 1905, Monocerotis.

FINE ARTS

The Bridgewater Gallery. One Hundred and Twenty of the most Noted Paintings at Bridgewater House, reproduced in Photogravure from Photographs by Walter Langley Bourke. With Descriptive and Historical Text by Lionel Cust, M.V.O. (Constable & Co.)

THE collection of the Earl of Ellesmere has maintained its reputation in spite of the great changes in taste which have occurred since its formation, and the destructive action of the newer criticism. When it was made connoisseurs were in the habit of discussing whether a picture was by Guido Reni or one of his followers, now they neglect Guido and all his fellows to dissect the minor reputations of the Quattrocento. It follows that that part of the collection which was perhaps the most admired when the Orleans Gallery was bought arouses now only an academic interest. But, fortunately, Lord Bridgewater acquired first-rate paintings of many schools and periods, and while the reputation of some of his purchases has declined, that of others has increased out of all proportion, so that today, just as much as a hundred years ago, the Bridgewater Gallery retains its place as one of the greatest private collections in the world. The catalogue which Mr. Lionel Cust and Mr. Bourke have compiled is worthy of the subject of which it treats. Nothing more splendid has been accomplished in this direction. In the first place the 120 reproductions in photogravure are all of them extraordinarily fine impressions. Such perfection in the engraving and printing as is here seen can only be the result of infinite care and fastidious selection. It implies, besides the mastery of the mechanical craft, a real appreciation of the beauties to be rendered, a choice of the best impressions, and a stern rejection of everything that does not come up to the highest standard.

For his complete success in this difficult part of the undertaking Mr. Bourke deserves the highest praise. What adds, perhaps, to one's enjoyment of this magnificent series of photogravures is the good taste shown in the printing and binding of the volume.

Mr. Lionel Cust has also acquitted himself well of the difficult task of writing the notices which accompany the illustrations. It cannot be expected that they will close discussion on some of the debatable questions, but they reflect in the main the best opinions of connoisseurs. At times he may appear a little indulgent, but at others he is almost too severe. Thus at the very outset he seems to us to apologize unnecessarily for the admirable 'Madonna and Child' by Raphael. This he describes as repainted almost beyond recognition, and though he inclines to see Raphael's hand, he does so with diffidence. We found the picture damaged in certain definite localities only, by no means repainted indiscriminately, and for the greater part showing Raphael's unmistakable handiwork. It is not only a marvellously interwoven linear design, but it is also beautiful in colour, and where it is undamaged has the peculiar and mysterious perfection of Raphael's handling. Moreover, it damages Mr. Cust's defence of this picture, No. 1 of the catalogue, that he defends the tondo of 'The Virgin, Child, and St. Joseph' in somewhat similar terms. Here, to be frank, we could not find that repainting seriously interfered with the work, which, for the most part, is in good preservation, certainly in a good enough state to make us sure that Raphael never had anything directly to do with it. The drawing is everywhere feeble and corrupt, the tone relations are misunderstood, and the whole effect leché and displeasing.

The other so-called Raphaels scarcely need discussion, though one, 'The Madonna del Passeggio,' is a good school piece of the Roman period.

Unquestionably, the greatest glory of the gallery consists in the five Titians, for we are quite in agreement with Mr. Cust in seeing Titian's hand in the beautiful 'Holy Family' (No. 6). The difficulty in accepting this view has been its curious resemblance to Palma's work, but, as Dr. Gronau has shown, Titian, after Giorgione's death, went for a short time through a Palmesque phase. In any case, we cannot think of Palma as the author here, for, in spite of the picture's general prettiness, and somewhat too delicate and finished charm, there are touches which have all Titian's nervous force and deliberate accent. Curiously enough, the Bridgewater Gallery possesses in 'The Three Ages' yet another of the comparatively rare Palmesque Titians. Then comes the 'Venus' of the middle period, intensely classic in its restrained modelling, its large, easily related planes; and finally, the two Diana pieces, 'Diana and Actæon' and 'Diana and Callisto,' in which painting transcends all known limitations, and becomes an art so compact of intention, so replete in every minutest part with rare discoveries, each one of which might have made an artist's reputation, that criticism is reduced to inarticulate admiration. To no other artist was it given to live and work long enough to acquire such science as these display, and to keep withal this intense force of passion. Beside these even the 'Venus,' consummate though it is, seems but the effort of untrained youth.

The 'Virgin and Child with St. Catherine,' ascribed to Parmegianino, is a charming picture, with a beautiful reflection in the landscape of Correggio's dawn effects. It seems to us, however, too rich and solid in colour, and too weak in drawing, for Parmegianino. Schiavone in the later phases of his art might, we think, have executed this.

The rest of the Italian School is of minor importance, though one or two of the Seicentists are here so well represented as to explain almost, even to modern eyes, the place they took for our forefathers. This is notably the case with a really noble 'Dream of St. Catherine,' by Ludovico Caracci, which accounts for much in Reynolds's art, and a very vigorous though overstrained Salvator Rosa, a so-called 'Riposo,' which we think it would have been well to reproduce in the catalogue. It is a picture which exemplifies Salvator's art in its most ambitious flights. In the catalogue he is seen only in one piece, though that is a very beautiful and original landscape. Domenichino is represented in the catalogue by a rather unsatisfactory figure piece instead of the beautiful landscape which the gallery contains. Neither the Francisque Milet, the Mola, nor the two very beautiful Gaspar Dughet landscapes find a place in the catalogue. For these we would willingly have dispensed with the feeble cento of Veronese's pictures which is ascribed without justification to so serious an artist as Jacopo da Ponte. In the Tintoretto portraits there seems some confusion; only one of these has any strong claim to be by him, and this we find unaccountably given to his daughter Maria Robusti. To the other two we can give no names, though that of Tintoretto would seem to be excluded.

Of the splendid series of Nicholas Pousin's work that the gallery contains only one is reproduced. The 'Baptism' is so remarkable and original a composition that we wish space could have been found for it.

The Dutch School is almost as remarkably represented at Bridgewater House as the Italian. It is true that, except for two of the Rembrandts—the 'Hannah and Samuel' and the late portrait of the artist—there is not much that is of the first rank; but the presence of good examples of little-known artists, such as Arie de Vois, Isaac van Ostade, and Bega, makes the collection of great interest, and all these are admirably reproduced in the catalogue.

The portrait ascribed to Rubens does not seem to bear his authentic signs; on the other hand, the rather unpleasing little composition made up from copies of the Farnesina frescoes might, we think, be by the master.

Besides the perfect photogravures which compose this magnificent volume, the fortunate possessor of this catalogue receives a portfolio containing photographs on a large scale of a few of the most important pictures in the collection. For the sake of completeness, and as a record for future generations, we should have liked to see an appendix with a concise descriptive catalogue of the pictures which are not reproduced.

Chats on Old Furniture. By Arthur Hayden. (Fisher Unwin.)—Mr. Hayden's volume has been written to guide the amateur in his choice of old furniture, and to awaken "the possessors of fine old English furniture" to a sense of their responsibilities. For Mr. Hayden complains that "many of the finest specimens of old English woodwork and furniture have left the country of their origin and crossed the Atlantic"; and "that the temptation of money will shortly denude the old farm-houses and manor-houses of England of their unappreciated treasures." In this we think he is much too pessimistic, for, to the chagrin of the modern collector, it is becoming increasingly difficult to wring the treasures from the aforesaid farmhouses. Cottagers cling to their heirlooms nowadays, and the value of old hutches, gate-tables, dressers, and chairs is pretty well known to the peasant of to-day. The number of guides, such as Mr. Hayden's, is formidable, and connoisseurs of furniture are as plentiful as blackberries. Nevertheless this book has its place. It is practical in its construction. It contains a glossary of the terms used suitable for the veriest beginner, as well as prices current for those who are more advanced, and may even be "professionals"; and of course it traces the history of furniture from the time when its history virtually opens, namely, the sixteenth century. Mr. Hayden's intention is kept in view with a single-mindedness that is creditable to him. His gossip is intended to be as simple and as useful as possible. The result is that he has produced a book which is a good deal more than its modest name would suggest. It is not a treatise, for it is but a slender volume, yet nothing essential is left out. All trappings, decorations, and gewgaws, so to speak, are austere omitted, and the reader is unembarrassed in his pursuit of information. Moreover, the choice of illustrations has been wise and careful. Mr. Hayden does not offer us these for the sake of beautiful plates; they all "illustrate" a point, as illustrations should do. And for the sanity of his taste let this verdict on Chippendale stand:—

"Chippendale was the most masterly adapter that England has ever produced. His adaptations became original under his hand, and his creations are sturdy and robust, tempered by French subtleties, and having here and there, as in the fretwork in the chair-legs and angles, a suggestion of the East. He is the prince of chair-makers. His chairs are never unsymmetrical. He knew the exact proportion of ornament that the structure would gracefully bear. The splats in the chairs he made himself are of such accurate dimensions in relation to the open spaces on each side that this touch alone betrays the hand of the master, which is absent in the imitations of his followers."

Mr. Hayden's knowledge is more than that of an expert in furniture; it is that of a man of cultured and artistic taste. Moreover, his information penetrates sources of history not usually reached by the ordinary writer on furniture. The hints to collectors are the best and clearest we have seen; so that altogether this is a model book of its kind.

'APOLLO: THE STORY OF ART THROUGH-OUT THE AGES.'

REFERRING to your kind review of 'Apollo' and its English version, allow me to state that I am not responsible for the passages written with due regard for the prejudices of English readers. I authorized the translator to add what she thought fit on English art and artists; but I can be called to account for the French text only, where there is no extravagant praise bestowed on any modern English sculptor, and where there is an enthusiastic line about the landscape-painter Leader, which does not appear in the English version.

The German theory, putting down the Venus of Melos to about 100 B.C., is based on a gross mistake relating to the circumstances of the discovery.

SALOMON REINACH.

DANIEL GARDNER.

The Mount, Guildford.

IN your issue of March 4th your art critic, in referring to Messrs. Agnew's show of water-colours, mentions at the close of his article the artist Daniel Gardner, as a man very little known. Permit me to inform you that I hope very shortly to remedy this sad state of affairs, as in a new book on portraiture that I have in hand I am giving considerable space to the delightful works of this artist, and shall be able to tell somewhat of the story of his life. Many papers relating to him, and some of his works in gouache and in pencil, are in my possession, obtained from his last living descendants, and I shall be able to illustrate several of his pictures, his early sketches, and his work in oil, as well as to relate some interesting information relative to his connexion with Sir Joshua Reynolds and Romney, both of whom were his personal friends. Some more papers that were sold at Christie's in 1805 are still missing, and if I may appeal to any of your readers for a sight of these I shall be grateful. I would also take the opportunity of asking for information respecting any works by Gardner, whether in gouache or oil.

GEO. C. WILLIAMSON.

'THE TRUE PORTRAITURE OF MARY, QUEEN OF SCOTS.'

National Portrait Gallery, March 15th, 1905.

THE reviewer of the book which forms the heading of this note lays stress upon the correspondence of the jewels described in Robertson's 'Inventaires de la Roynie d'Escoce' with those worn by Mary Stuart in a portrait belonging to the Earl of Leven and Melville, which was exhibited at the Exhibition of National Portraits at South Kensington in 1866.

The portrait was then carefully inspected by Mr. George Scharf (afterwards Sir George Scharf, K.C.B.), and his notes and sketches are in the library of the National Portrait Gallery. It is clear from these notes that in Scharf's opinion the Leven and Melville portrait could not in any way be accepted either as a true portrait of Mary Stuart or as a painting contemporary with her life. So decided was Scharf's opinion that I omitted the Leven and Melville portrait from those worthy of serious consideration in the book which I myself published as a contribution to the study of the authentic portraits of Mary Stuart.

Recently I have been corresponding with the reviewer of Mr. Foster's book, and the interesting details which he brought forward as to the jewels worn by the queen impelled me to wish to see with my own eyes that which I had before taken upon Scharf's word. By the kind permission of the Earl of Leven and Melville I have been able to inspect the portrait in question, in company with a well-known expert critic of pictures. I found myself in complete agreement with Scharf's opinion as to the date of the picture, which cannot be contemporary, as Mr. Foster would suppose, or the work of Jehan de Court or another painter of the French School, as your reviewer would wish it to be. The jewels do not exactly tally with the description given in the inventories, but they are sufficiently alike to make one suppose that the Leven and Melville portrait may be either a copy from an older portrait, or a later portrait, made up in the seventeenth century under the direction of some person who knew by personal association or by tradition the special jewels in which Mary Stuart arrayed herself in the heyday of her beauty and prosperity. The portrait itself is carefully painted and the work of an expert artist, and differs from the many fabrications which are too often to be met with. It is, moreover, an undoubted likeness of Mary Stuart, though its resemblance to the "Morton" portrait is not so striking as your reviewer would seem to make out. A photograph of the Leven and Melville portrait was included in the series published by the Science and Art Department after the exhibition in 1866. The portrait was only acquired in recent days by the ninth Earl of Leven and Melville.

LIONEL CUST.

SALES.

MESSRS. CHRISTIE sold on the 15th inst. the following:—Plates from Turner's Liber Studiorum: Windmill and Lock (lot 31), 38*l.*; Twickenham, Pope's Villa, 29*l.*; The Seventy-one Plates in an Album, 68*l.* After Reynolds: Sir Joshua Reynolds as President, by V. Green, 147*l.*; Master Braddyl, by J. Grozer, 75*l.*; Mrs. Bunbury, by J. Watson, 58*l.*; Lady Taylor, by W. Dickinson, 89*l.*; Miss Theophila Palmer, by J. R. Smith, 32*l.*; Viscount Malden with Lady Elizabeth Keppel, by C. Turner, 94*l.*; Lady Elizabeth Keppel, whole-length, by E. Fisher, 26*l.*; The Marlborough Family, by C. Turner, 32*l.*; Mrs. Siddons as the Tragic Muse, by F. Haward (lot 101), 32*l.*; another copy (lot 102), 65*l.* Etching by Sir F. Seymour Haden: The Grande Chartreuse, 25*l.* By C. Méryon: La Galerie de Notre-Dame, 52*l.*; La Tour de l'Horloge, 36*l.*; Tourelle Rue de la Tixeranderie, 32*l.*; St. Etienne du Mont, 33*l.*; La Pompe Notre-Dame, 42*l.*; Le Pont Neuf, 33*l.*; Le Pont au Change, 52*l.*

The same firm sold on the 18th inst. the following:—Drawings: Birket Foster, Going Home, 56*l.* W. Hunt, A Bird's Nest, with Primroses, 115*l.* A. Mauve, Returning Home, 110*l.* Pictures: J. Yates Carrington, Sport by Proxy: Anticipation. Agitation, and Realization, 136*l.* T. S. Cooper, A Flock of Sheep on Romney Marshes, 113*l.* Sir J. E. Millais, The Romans leaving Britain, 115*l.* Erskine Nicol, Kept In, 194*l.* G. C. Stanfield, Rivoltella, looking to the Castle of Fermione, 420*l.* Sir E. Burne-Jones, Cupid's Hunting-Field, 315*l.* J. H. Weissenbruch, A Dutch Coast Scene, with a fishing-boat, low tide, 141*l.* Vicat Cole, A Harvest-Field, 136*l.* J. MacWhirter, Nidpath Castle, 110*l.*

The same firm sold on the 21st inst. the following engravings:—After Lawrence: Lady Grey and Children, by S. Cousins, 73*l.* After Sir E. Landseer: The Stag at Bay, by T. Landseer, 27*l.*

Fine-Art Gossip.

TO-DAY is the private view, at the gallery of the Guild of Handicraft, of drawings, etchings, &c., by Mr. F. L. Griggs, whose work has done much to commend the "Highways and Byways" series. There will also be a show of the Guild's recent work.

WATER-COLOURS by Mr. John S. Sargent are on private view at the Carfax Gallery next Wednesday.

FROM Monday next till April 8th Mr. Arthur Ellis is showing water-colours of England and South Wales at the Modern Gallery.

MR. A. C. CORBOULD is holding a first collective exhibition of his work, mostly from Punch, at the Quest Gallery. The private view took place yesterday.

THE Royal Society of British Artists opened their exhibition in Suffolk Street yesterday.

MR. BAILLIE is opening next Wednesday an exhibition of paintings and etchings by Mr. Claude Hayes, Mr. F. Laing, and Miss Halhed.

'SKETCHES OF A LIFETIME MADE IN MANY LANDS,' by Miss E. Julia Robinson, were on private view at the Fine-Art Society's rooms on Wednesday and Thursday last.

MR. JOHN M. SWAN was the Associate chosen to be R.A. on Wednesday last at Burlington House.

MR. SIDNEY L. SMITH, a Boston engraver whose portrait etchings have recently attracted favourable notice, is now engaged on a large etched portrait of President Roosevelt, working directly from life.

At the last general meeting of the Society of Women Artists, Henrietta Rae (Mrs. Normand) was elected a Member. Miss Halhed, Miss Karuth, Miss Oules, Mrs. Raphael, and Miss Vicary were elected as Associates.

MR. M. H. SPIELMANN contributes to the April number of The Burlington Magazine an article advocating the establishment of a Ministry of Fine Arts. He is supported by an editorial article, in which an appeal is made to Mr. Balfour to make good use of the opportunity afforded by the vacancies at the National Gallery and South Kensington. The most important article to students of art is the first part of an account of the life and work of Andrea da Castagno by Mr. Herbert Horne, which promises to revolutionize the hitherto accepted history of this painter. Mr. Francis Lathrop writes on the portrait of Philip IV. recently acquired by the Boston Museum, defending its attribution to Velasquez. There are two contributions by Prof. Holmes, one dealing with 'Archaic Chinese Bronzes,' the other with a picture in a private collection, which he is inclined to identify as the lost painting by Titian engraved by Nicolo Boldrini. Mr. Roger Fry publishes a Florentine 'Nativity,' and a painting of the head of St. John the Baptist, the chief interest of which lies in the fact that it seems to prove the existence of a hitherto unknown Antonio da Solario. An interesting Netherlandish picture in a French private collection is published by Mr. Weale. Miss May Morris continues her series of articles on 'Opus Anglicanum' with an account of the Pienza cope; Mr. Starkie Gardner writes on the Charles II. silver in the Duke of Portland's collection; Mr. R. S. Clouston continues the series of articles on 'Minor English Furniture Makers'; and Mr. C. H. Wylde maintains the English origin of certain drug and unguent pots, resembling Italian Albarelli, which have been unearthed in London excavations.

AMONG other articles in the April number of The Antiquary are 'Glass-Making at Knole, Sevenoaks,' by Mr. T. Barrett-Lennard; the conclusion of 'Notes on Prehistoric Man in West Kent,' by Mr. J. Russell Larkby, and 'The Round Towers of Ireland,' by the Rev. J. B. McGovern, both illustrated; 'Sacred Sites in a Shetland Isle,' by Mrs. Jessie M. E. Saxby; 'Stonehenge: its Relative Position with regard to other Ancient Works,' by Mr. J. H. Spencer; and 'Some Ancient Brooches,' illustrated.

A RETROSPECTIVE exhibition of the work of Baron Henri Leys and his nephew and pupil, Henri de Braeckeleer, the two greatest masters of Flemish art in the nineteenth century, will be opened in Antwerp on May 15th. Most of the public and private galleries will send the works owned by them.

THE sale last week at the Hôtel Drouot, Paris, of M. A. Beurdeley's remarkably fine collection of drawings and water-colours by artists of the eighteenth century, included a fine series of Fragonard drawings, which for the most part sold at prices far in advance of what had been paid for them. A sepia drawing, 'Le Verrou,' sold for 24,000 francs, as against 4,550 fr. paid for it at the Walferdin sale in 1880, and 8,100 fr. at the Josse sale in 1894; another in sanguine, 'Ruines du Temple de Vesta, à Tivoli,' 20,000 fr., against 1,110 fr. realized at the Walferdin sale; and 'Taureau de la Campagne Romaine,' in bistre, 11,000 fr., which is a great advance on the 305 fr. paid for it at the Walferdin sale. Another drawing in bistre, 'La Réveuse,' went for 20,000 fr.; and a portrait of Mlle. Gérard, in black chalk, 10,000 fr.

AN exhibition of the works of Whistler will be held at the Luxembourg, and the arrangements are so far forward that it will be opened in May. The well-known curator of the Luxembourg has visited the interesting collection at the New Gallery, and doubtless some of the exhibits there have been secured for display in Paris, and others have also been promised. The exhibition is under the patronage of M. Dujardin-Beaumetz, who is manifesting unusual enterprise in his new position of Under-Secretary of State for the Fine Arts.

THE death, in his ninety-third year, is announced from Vienna of the distinguished painter in water colours, Rudolf Alt. His work presented a great contrast to that of the Viennese secessionists, whose Honorary President he was.

It is announced that Mrs. A. B. Sale, widow of the late rector of St. Thomas's, Winchester, has presented to the Mayor and Corporation of that city, for hanging in the Guildhall, a portrait of Benjamin Hoadly, Bishop of Winchester 1734-61, painted by Hogarth. It would be interesting to have the history of this portrait. Hogarth is known to have painted more than one portrait of this divine. One of these was acquired by the National Gallery of Ireland from Messrs. Colnaghi & Co. in or about 1891, and this was painted in 1740. Another, done in 1743, belonged to Serjeant D'Oyly in 1833; and yet another, chiefly the work of Mrs. Hoadly, "touched upon by Hogarth," is in the National Portrait Gallery. A "very fine" portrait of the bishop, "in his robes, half length," was Lot 761 at Messrs. Puttick & Simpson's on February 28th, 1847.

FROM April 7th to 13th there will be a Congress of Archaeology at Athens. The subjects are divided into seven sections, dealing with (1) classical archaeology, (2) prehistoric and Oriental archaeology, (3) excavations, museums, and the conservation of monuments, (4) epigraphy and numismatics, (5) geography and topography, (6) Byzantine archaeology, and (7) the teaching of archaeology. The members of the French School are acting as secretaries to the sections, and the official language to be used is French, though Greek, German, English, and Italian will also be allowed. Several English scholars are expected to attend, and after the congress is over facilities will be offered for trips by sea to various places of interest.

MUSIC

THE GARCIA CENTENARY.

MANUEL GARCIA completed his hundredth year last Friday week, March 17th, and the manner in which the day was spent—the royal honours conferred on the veteran discoverer of the laryngoscope and teacher of many great vocalists, among them Jenny Lind, his two daughters, and Madame Marchesi, mother of Madame Blanche Marchesi, Prof. Stockhausen, of Frankfort-on-Maine, and Mr. Charles Santley—the addresses from learned bodies, colleges of music, old pupils, and congratulations from admirers in all quarters of the globe—all these things have been fully related in the daily papers. In many notices which have appeared attempts have been made to show how far Garcia has outstretched the ordinary span of life allotted to man by recalling the names of many illustrious composers who were born after him, but who have long passed away. The fact of his having preceded and survived, for instance, such men as Wagner and Verdi, brings vividly to remembrance important changes in the form and character of music he has witnessed. In another way we may perhaps be able briefly to emphasize those changes by referring to one or two events connected with the Garcia family when they were in England in 1825, previous to their departure for New York, also after their arrival in that city.

The father and "Miss" Garcia (afterwards known as Madame Malibran) were performing at the King's Theatre in the early part of 1825, at which time Mr. Ebers was director. Mozart's 'Figaro' and 'Don Giovanni' and Rossini's 'Barber,' given during that season, still keep the boards; but Zingarelli's 'Romeo and Gulletta' is now quite unknown, and so are other operas by Rossini and Meyerbeer which then flourished. Manuel Garcia's father and sister were both members of the company that season.

Here is another glance at the music in vogue in those days. The York Festival was held in September of that same year. Handel's name, of course, figured largely in the programmes; Mozart was represented by his 'Jupiter' Symphony, and Beethoven by his Symphonies in c and d, and his 'Leonora' Overture (which of the three is not stated); but such names as, for instance, Pepusch, Spontini, Salieri, have now disappeared entirely from view. Again, the style of festival programme was then of a very mixed and, as regards some numbers, of a very popular kind. Festivals at the present day are much more serious, and not unfrequently even of too serious a character. We mention this York Festival particularly because Mlle. (as she was there styled) Garcia was one of the solo vocalists.

A notice in The Harmonicon of October, 1825, of the "Spanish family of the Garcias, consisting of husband, wife, son, and daughter," engaged by Mr. Price, at that time manager of the theatre of New York, refers to performances by Madame and Mlle. Garcia in Paris and London, but states that "the son has never appeared." At New York he made apparently his début as Iago to his father's Otello. The opera was Rossini's; but since then Verdi's 'Otello' has ousted it from the operatic field. The life of Manuel Garcia has been long, but that of many musical art-works within his recollection has been of comparatively short duration.

We offer him our heartiest congratulations on having lived to see wonderful progress in music generally, though not, perhaps, in the special art in which he won fame.

Musical Gossip.

THE season at Covent Garden commences on May 1st. The novelties at present announced by the Syndicate include Giordano's 'Andrea Chenier,' produced in English by the Carl Rosa Company at Manchester in 1903. Puccini's 'Madame Butterfly,' as revised by the composer after the production of the work at Milan in 1904, will be given, with Fräulein Destinn in the title rôle and MM. Caruso and Scotti in important parts. There will also be an operatic version, by Franco Leoni and an Italian librettist, of the American play 'The Cat and the Cherub.' Donizetti's 'Don Pasquale,' which has not been heard for many years, is to be given. 'Orfeo,' too, will be revived, with Madame Kirkby Lunn in the title rôle. Wagner's works will again form a prominent feature of the season. There are to be two cycles of the 'Ring'; also performances of 'Die Meistersinger' and 'Tristan.' Mozart will be represented by 'Don Giovanni,' and Beethoven by his 'Fidelio,' if Fräulein Ternina's health enables her to come.

THE following soprano vocalists are announced: Mesdames Melba, Suzanne Adams, Knüpfer Egli, Reinl, and Sobrino, and the Misses Agnes Nicholls, Parkina, and Kurz; also Mesdames Wittich from Dresden, Bosetti from Munich, and Rauney from Brussels and Paris (Opéra-Comique). Mezzo-sopranos and contraltos will include Mesdames Kirkby Lunn, and Paulin of Brussels, and the Misses Simeoli (Milan) and Edna Thornton. Madame Bauermeister retires from the stage of which for many years she was so useful a member. The tenors include, in addition to Caruso, MM. Burrian, Dalmore, Herold, Reiss, Dufliche, and Krauss; and the basses MM. Maurel, van Rooy, Giliert, Journet, Scotti, Goritz (from the New York Opera), &c. All German performances will be under the safe direction of Dr. Richter, while for French and Italian opera there will be MM. Mancinelli, Messenger, and Campanini. The season ends July 24th, or possibly 25th. Earl De Grey, Viscount Esher, and Mr. H. V. Higgins will again be directors, M. Messenger stage manager, while Mr. Neil Forsyth will occupy his accustomed post in front of the house.

CÉSAR THOMSON, the Belgian violinist, who has not been heard for some time in London, appeared at the Monday Subscription Concert, Æolian Hall, and played Corelli's 'Follia' Sonata and Tartini's 'Trillo del Diavolo' Sonata. His style is broad and forcible, though, at times, too modern.

MISCHA ELMAN, the latest of the youthful prodigies, made his first appearance in London at Mr. Charles Williams's third concert, at the Queen's Hall, on Tuesday. He played the solo part of Tschaiikowsky's Violin Concerto in D. His command of his instrument is simply wonderful, but in addition he plays with understanding and feeling which would seem possible only to a full-grown man. There is also a calm assurance about the boy, which seems the result not of conceit, but of consciousness of great gifts. Another feature of the concert was the revival of Sir Hubert Parry's Symphony in F, first produced at the Cambridge Musical Society nearly a quarter of a century ago; since then it has only been given at a Richter and at a Philharmonic Concert. The music is exceedingly clever, though the form often seems too strict for the programme to which, according to a statement made by Mr. C. A. Barry, the composer wrote. The performance was excellent, and Mr. Williams deserves all credit for recognizing a thoroughly sound and not sensational native work.

LAST week Sir Edward Elgar delivered his inaugural address as Professor of Music at Birmingham. To perceive the relative importance of works by contemporary composers is doubly difficult for one like Sir Edward, who himself is playing an important part in the history of British art, and some of his comments scarcely showed a catholic spirit. On the other hand, his remarks concerning rising British composers were most encouraging; amidst a certain, perhaps inevitable, storm and stress in their works, he detects qualities which make for progress.

Mlle. CAMILLA LANDI gives a recital at Leighton House next Thursday. The great singer will be accompanied by Mr. Henry Bird. Miss Evelyn Stuart will play two pianoforte solos. Among the fifteen songs that Mlle. Landi will sing are works by Astorga, Galuppi, Handel, Beethoven, Schubert, Brahms, Fauré, and Chaminade. Further particulars can be obtained from the hon. sec., Leighton House.

WE regret to learn from Mr. Schulz-Curtius that, by medical advice, Dr. Richter, though convalescent, will not conduct the Richter Concert at Queen's Hall on Monday. Herr Franz Beidler, conductor of the Imperial Opera, Moscow, strongly recommended by Dr. Richter himself, will appear in his place.

MR. WALTER W. HEDGCOCK has been appointed successor to Sir August Manns as musical director of the Crystal Palace.

THE Royal Library of Berlin has purchased all the Bach autographs and original editions collected by Franz Hauser, after whose death in 1870 they passed into the possession of his son, Josef Hauser, who died last year. The collection is said to include 194 cantatas, the autograph of the Luke Passion, and various instrumental works—in all 282 sheets in the handwriting of Bach and twenty-one in that of Emanuel Bach; also original editions engraved by Bach himself, and old copies by Walter and Penzel. The Royal Library, already rich in Bach autographs and rare copies, has now acquired the next largest collection to its own.

THE brothers Shubert announce that for eight weeks after the inauguration of the new Waldorf Theatre, operas will be given every week on three evenings and two afternoons, with a cast including Madame Calvé and the Misses Mary Garden and Alice Nielsen, and MM. Édouard de Reszké, Ancona, Bonci, and de Lucia.

LAST Sunday Sir Edward Elgar's 'Dream of Gerontius' was performed for the first time in French at the Concert Populaire, Brussels, under the direction of M. Sylvain Dupuis.

PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK.

|        |  |
|--------|--|
| SUN.   | Sunday Society Concert, 3.30, Queen's Hall.  |
| —      | Sunday League, 7, Queen's Hall.  |
| MON.   | Miss Gertrude Peppercorn's Pianoforte Recital, 3, St. George's Hall.                     |
| —      | Richter Concert, 8.15, Queen's Hall.   |
| —      | Mr. J. Holbrooke's Pianoforte Recital, 8.15, Salle Erard.                                |
| —      | Miss Alice Joseph's Concert, 8.15, Steinway Hall.  |
| —      | Subscription Concert, 8.30, Æolian Hall.   |
| —      | Mr. F. Fairbank's Pianoforte Recital, 8.30, Bechstein Hall.                              |
| TUES.  | Mr. Charles Clark's Vocal Recital, 3, Æolian Hall.                                       |
| —      | Madame Hetty Houters's Vocal Recital, 8.30, Bechstein Hall.                              |
| WED.   | Philharmonic Concert, 8, Queen's Hall.   |
| THURS. | Royal Choral Society ('Acis and Galatea'), 8, Albert Hall.                               |
| —      | Signor Sametini's Violin Recital, 8.30, Bechstein Hall.                                  |
| FRI.   | London Ballad Concert, 3, Queen's Hall.  |
| —      | Mr. Watkin Mills's Vocal Recital, 8, Bechstein Hall.                                     |
| SAT.   | Symphony Concert, 3, Queen's Hall.   |
| —      | Mr. J. Holbrooke and Herr Zimmermann's Pianoforte and Violin Recital, 3, Bechstein Hall. |
| —      | Messrs. Bauer and Casel's Concert, 3, Æolian Hall.                                       |

DRAMA

THE WEEK.

SAVOY.—Du Barri (sic): a Play in Five Acts. Translated from Jean Richepin by Christopher St. John.

IN his drama of 'Du Barry,' for we do not charge him with the purposeless Italianization of a well-known and historic French name, M. Jean Richepin has sought to do for the infamous mistress of Louis XV. what Victor Hugo has done for Marion Delorme, Sardou for Théodora, and longo intervallo more than one English dramatist for Nell Gwyn. Materials were abundant, the work principally employed being the 'Du Barry' of the brothers De Goncourt. On this basis M. Richepin has written a drama which, so far as we can trace, no French actress has ventured to produce, and which has approached no nearer the press than the footlights. It is a creditable work, aiming at accuracy of colouring rather than of design, presenting a series of pictures of life in one of the most licentious of epochs, and steering clear, with what seems ingenuity, of dramatic incident or suggestion. As a vehicle for spectacle 'Du Barry' is happy, and it supplies views, not too strongly caricatured, of the men constituting the most venal and corrupt Court in Europe—of cynics such as Maupeou, timeservers such as Terray, and debauchees such as the king himself and all his surroundings. Some, but not much, attempt is made at the rehabilitation of the Du Barry. She is provided with a lover so virtuous and so sensitive that we might almost, were such a thing conceivable, regard him as following her for le bon motif. This worthy is no less a personage than the Prince de Rohan Rochefort, belonging presumably to some unrecorded branch of the great Breton family of Rohan. Slight indeed are the relations between them. They consist on his part of watching every night, wet or fine, under her bedroom window, and entering on a solitary occasion by her balcony, when he erroneously believes her to have sent for him. Not the least concession, meanwhile, is made by Madame du Barry to the persistent and imprudent lover. She wears a gaze d'amour in the shape of a ribbon, which proves the means of stirring the jealousy of the king. Innocent as the liaison is in the present rendering—and we cannot, though we know nothing, avoid the suspicion that the ordinary processes of the English adapter have been at work—it results in the separation (wholly gratuitous on the part of the dramatist) of the Du Barry and the infatuated monarch. At the end of the fourth act we see her deserted by him and all who have fed on her bounty, while the man who has innocently compromised her is led a prisoner to the Bastille. The scene in which this imaginary and fantastic action occurs is a fête in the Château of Luciennes, taken in part from a famous design of Moreau le jeune. It is a singularly beautiful tableau, involving some pardonable anachronisms. Other scenes exhibited include the shop of a modiste in the Rue St. Honoré, in which, as Mlle. Lange, the heroine, learning her trade of courtesan, first dreams of captivating the king. At this establishment she again stops when, a generation later, she is, after her return from England, on her fateful progress to the guillotine. We have a view also of the historic supper at Versailles, when she captures the fancy of the uxorious king, and a petit lever in the same palace where the Du Barry, more decently dressed than seems to have been her custom, receives the homage of a servile Court. In all this the spectacle is admirable, though the dramatic significance is of small account. The essentially mannered style of Mrs. Brown Potter is seen in Madame du Barry to all conceivable advantage, and the actress realizes the fascinations of a strangely alluring woman whom, in a letter to her mother, the Dauphine (Marie Antoinette) called "la plus sottie et impertinente créature qui soit imaginable." Mr. Gilbert Hare was also good as the infatuated monarch. To the Duc d'Agén Louis once said, "Je sais bien que je succède à Sainte-Foix," receiving in answer the reply, coupled with a low inclination, "Oui, sire, comme votre majesté succède à Pharamond." The other parts were indifferently, in one or two cases feebly, played. Many anticipatory thunders of Revolution are heard. The extent of the period covered shows that M. Richepin has looked rather to the supposed exigencies of an actress than the shapeliness of his piece.

COURT.—The Thieves' Comedy. Translated from Hauptmann by Christopher Horne.

As a satire and as a piece of characterization 'The Thieves' Comedy' of Hauptmann is equally excellent. Frau Wolff, the organizer of robberies which her obstinate and surly husband puts into execution, is a creation worthy of Balzac; and Von Wehrhahn, the police magistrate, is a splendid type of official noodledom—almost, with allowance for difference of station, a German Dogberry. The closing scene, in which this worthy, wholly occupied in the pursuit of political heresy, places caressingly his hands upon the shoulders of the two criminals who owe their escape entirely to his own incompetency, and congratulates them on the end of a frivolous and disagreeable matter, is a triumph of humour. As the Frau, Miss Rosina Filippi showed herself an admirable comedian, and gave an example of interpretation such as our stage seldom witnesses. So good is the entire performance, we regret that the piece may not be mounted for a run.

THE DROESHOUT PORTRAIT OF SHAKSPEARE.

Oxford, March 14th, 1905.

THERE is in America an impression of the Droeshout engraving (formerly in the possession of Mr. Halliwell-Phillipps) which is said to be in a unique state. This portrait was extracted from a First Folio of Shakspeare which is now at Stratford-on-Avon, and it is stated to differ from all other copies in that it is an impression from the earliest state of the plate, before it was touched up. The most conspicuous differences between it and other impressions are (1) That no shading appears on the collar on the (spectator's) right-hand side. (2) The beard is only very slightly indicated.

It may interest Shakspearean students to know that at least one example of this early impression still remains on this side of the Atlantic, in the Malone copy of the First Folio, now in the Bodleian Library. Although the letterpress of the title-page is not original, the portrait (which is mounted) is genuine, though the verses by Ben Jonson on the opposite leaf are taken from a copy of the Fourth Folio. There is no real reason to suppose that no other specimens exist, but this one is at present the only known copy in England.

G. M. R. TURBUTT.

Dramatic Gossip.

FOR a charitable purpose at the Court Theatre, two pieces—a three-act comedy, entitled 'The Little More,' and a one-act trifle, called 'The Dancer,' both by Mr. H. C. M. Hardinge—were given on Monday afternoon. The latter served no purpose beyond unduly prolonging the entertainment; the earlier, which presented a devoted but reticent husband, jealous of his wife's affection for an unworthy and criminal son, had freshness of motive. It was well played by Miss Henrietta Watson, Mr. W. Graham Browne, and Mr. Dawson Milward, and might, with slight modification, be made worthy of a permanent place in a bill.

MR. GEORGE BERNARD SHAW'S 'How He Lied to her Husband' has been added to the programme at the St. James's, with Miss Gertrude Kingston, Mr. Granville Barker, and Mr. A. G. Poulton in their original parts.

'PETER PAN' will be withdrawn on April 1st from the Duke of York's Theatre, whereat it will reappear for the Christmas season on December 14th. It is announced that booking for the new season has already begun.

THE first production at the same theatre of the new comedy of Mr. J. M. Barrie, unnamed as yet, in which Miss Ellen Terry and Miss Irene Vanbrugh will appear, has been fixed for April 5th.

IN the September production, at Drury Lane, of 'The Prodigal Son' of Mr. Hall Caine, a concession to popular sympathies will be made by supplying a happy termination. Three out of the four acts will be in Iceland and one on the Riviera.

IN Miss Brand's revival at the Shaftesbury of 'Othello,' on April 8th, Miss Granville will play Emilia, and Mr. Henry Ainley Cassio.

DURING a temporary indisposition of Miss Marion Terry, her part in 'Mollentrave on Woman' was successfully taken by Miss Edith Olive.

THE Comedy Theatre will be reopened next Tuesday with Mr. G. P. Bancroft's four-act comedy, 'Lady Ben,' in which Miss Dorothy Grimstone, Miss Fanny Coleman, Mr. Frank Cooper, Mr. Charles Fulton, and Mr. J. D. Beveridge will take part.

'SANNA,' a five-act play by Herr Hermann Bahr, produced at the Kleines Theater, Berlin, is a curiously perverse and morbid work by a Viennese dramatist not usually given to such painful studies. Frau Eysoldt obtained a success in a juvenile, but not very sympathetic part.

'MONSIEUR BEAUCAIRE' is to be revived at the Imperial Theatre for three weeks, with Miss Eva Moore as the heroine.

'THE BEAUTY OF BATH' will, it is said, be the title of a play by Messrs. Seymour Hicks and Cosmo Hamilton, the heroine of which will be played by Miss Ellaline Terriss at the new Hicks Theatre.

'LA BELLE MARSEILLAISE' of M. Pierre Berton, the production of which at the Ambigu Comique we last week chronicled, will be adapted for production in England and America.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.—R. C.—A. S.—A. R. H.—A. F. H.—G. P. J.—received.

W. M. G. E.—Not suitable for us.

No notice can be taken of anonymous communications.

BEMROSE & SONS' LIST.

SHORTLY.

MEMORIALS of OLD HERTFORD-

SHIRE. Edited by PERCY CROSS STANDING, Author of 'The Battles of Hertfordshire,' &c. Dedicated by Kind Permission to the Right Hon. the EARL of CLARENDON, G.C.B., Lord Chamberlain. With numerous illustrations. Demy 8vo, handsome binding, cloth extra, gilt top, price to Subscribers, 10s. 6d. net. Prospectus will be sent on application.

MEMORIALS of OLD DEVON-

SHIRE. Edited by F. J. SNELL, M.A., Author of 'A Book of Exmoor,' &c. Dedicated by Kind Permission to the Right Hon. VIS-COUNT EBRINGTON, Lord Lieutenant of the County. Demy 8vo, handsome binding, cloth extra, gilt top, with numerous illustrations, price 15s. net.

"Is a fascinating volume, which will be prized by thoughtful Devonians wherever they may be found.... richly illustrated, some rare engravings being represented." North Devon Journal.

MEMORIALS of OLD HEREFORD-

SHIRE. Edited by Rev. COMPTON READE, M.A., Author of 'A Memoir of Charles Reade, D.C.L.,' &c. Dedicated by Kind Permission to Sir JOHN G. COTTERELL, Bart., Lord Lieutenant of the County. Demy 8vo, handsome binding, cloth extra, gilt top, with many illustrations, price 15s. net.

"This collection of papers—historical, archaeological, and sociological—forms a most interesting and varied set of contributions to local history."—Westminster Gazette.

MEMORIALS of OLD OXFORD-

SHIRE. Edited by the Rev. P. H. DITCHFIELD, M.A. F.S.A., Editor of 'Memorials of Old Buckinghamshire.' Dedicated by Kind Permission to the Right Hon. the EARL of JERSEY, G.C.B. G.C.M.G. Demy 8vo, handsome binding, cloth extra, gilt top, with numerous illustrations, price 15s. net.

"This beautiful book contains an exhaustive history of 'the wondrous Oxford,' to which so many distinguished scholars and politicians look back with affection. We must refer the reader to the volume itself.... and only wish that we had space to quote extracts from its interesting pages." Spectator.

HISTORY of OLD ENGLISH

PORCELAIN and its MANUFACTORIES. With an Artistic, Industrial, and Critical Appreciation of their Productions. By M. L. SOLON, the well-known Potter Artist and Collector. In one handsome volume, royal 8vo, well printed in clear type on good paper, and beautifully illustrated with 20 Full-Page Coloured Collotype and Photo-Chromotype Plates and 48 Collotype Plates on Tint, artistically bound, price 2l. 12s. 6d. net.

"Mr. Solon writes not only with the authority of the master of technique, but likewise with that of the accomplished artist, whose exquisite creations command the admiration of the connoisseurs of to-day."—Athenæum.

IN APRIL.

GARDEN CITIES in THEORY and

PRACTICE. Being an Amplification of a Paper on the Potentialities of Applied Science in a Garden City, read before Section F of the British Association. By A. R. SENNETT, A.M.I.C.E. Large crown 8vo, 2 vols. attractively bound in cloth, with 300 Plates, Plans, and Illustrations, price to Subscribers, 21s. net. Prospectus will be sent on application.

JOHN N. RHODES: a Yorkshire

Painter, 1809–1842. By WILLIAM H. THORP, Author of 'An Architect's Sketch-Book at Home and Abroad.' A Monograph on the Life and Work of John N. Rhodes, a Painter whose Drawings and Pictures are well known in the County of York. The book is illustrated by 19 Plates of Reproductions of J. N. Rhodes's Oil Paintings, Sepia Drawings, and Crayon Sketches, Four of which are in Colour. Crown 4to, artistically bound in cloth, price 10s. 6d. net. The Edition is limited to 400 Copies. Prospectus will be sent on application.

London: BEMROSE & SONS, LIMITED, 4, Snow Hill, E.C.; and Derby.

SOME OF CASSELL & COMPANY'S NEW VOLUMES.

NOW READY, price 9s. net.

REMINISCENCES OF A RADICAL PARSON.

By Rev. W. TUCKWELL, M.A.

In this Work the Author relates how he became a Radical, discusses the Parson's place in Politics, analyzes the causes of and expounds his remedies for English misery. Mr. Tuckwell includes reminiscences of such celebrities as Mr. Gladstone, Sir William Harcourt, Sir Wilfrid Lawson, Thorold Rogers, Hutton (of the Spectator), and Henry George.

RUSSIA. By Sir Donald Mackenzie Wallace,

K.C.I.E. K.C.V.O. Entirely New Revised and Enlarged Edition, Reset, and in great part Rewritten. 2 vols. with Maps, 24s. net.

CANADA AS IT IS. By John Foster Fraser,

Author of 'The Real Siberia,' 'America at Work,' &c. With about 40 Full-Page Illustrations. 6s.

KING LEOPOLD II. His Rule in Belgium

and the Congo. By JOHN DE COURCY MacDONNELL. With 48 Full-Page Plates. 21s. net.

The OTHER SIDE of the LANTERN. By

Sir FREDERICK TREVES, Bart., G.C.V.O. C.B. LL.D., Sergeant-Surgeon to H.M. the King, &c. With Photogravure Frontispiece and 39 Full-Page Plates from Photographs by the Author. Fifth Impression. 12s. net.

CASSELL'S HISTORY of the RUSSO-

JAPANESE WAR. With numerous Illustrations. Vol. I. FROM the OUTBREAK of the WAR to the CAPTURE of KIN-CHAU. Half-leather, 15s. net.

CASSELL'S POPULAR GARDENING.

Edited by WALTER F. WRIGHT. With 24 Coloured Plates and numerous Illustrations. 2 vols. in half-leather, 30s. net the Set.

NEW NOVELS.

NOW READY, 6s. each.

THE ONE WHO SAW.

By HEADON HILL.

"The interest grows with every chapter, and the reader will certainly not be able to put down the book until he has learned the fate of pretty Helen, her lover, and her enemy."—World.

THE ADVENTURES OF AN EQUERRY.

From the Memoirs of Mr. Francis Lesterne, Equerry to his Grace the Great Duke of Marlboro'.

Set forth by MORICE GERARD.

"Fiction ingeniously founded on fact. The adventures are exciting and the book is admirably written."—Daily Express.

THE NEW ADVENTURE STORY.

THE GOLDEN POOL:

The Story of a Forgotten Mine.

BY

RICHARD AUSTIN FREEMAN.

[Just published.]

NEW FINE-ART WORK, UNIFORM WITH 'THE OLD FRENCH FAIENCE' AND 'ENGLISH PORCELAIN.'

NOW READY, 30s. net.

FRENCH PORCELAIN.

This is an entirely New Work, which has been Written expressly for this unique Series.

By E. S. AUSCHER, formerly Chef de Fabrication at Sevres.

Translated and Edited by WILLIAM BURTON, Author of 'English Earthenware,' &c.

Containing 24 Plates in Colours, and 48 in Black and White, with numerous Reproductions of the Various Marks.

THE EDITION IS LIMITED TO 1,250 COPIES.

CASSELL & COMPANY, LIMITED, London; and all Booksellers.

JUST PUBLISHED.

1 vol. with 208 Illustrations, royal 8vo, cloth extra, price 16s. net.PRIMITIVE ART IN EGYPT.

BY

JEAN CAPART,Keeper of the Egyptian Antiquities of the Royal Museums, Brussels,

Lecturer at the University of Liège.

Translated from the Specially Revised Original
Edition, with 23 New Illustrations,

By A. S. GRIFFITH.

- I. PRELIMINARY CONSIDERATIONS.
- II. PERSONAL ADORNMENT.
- III. ORNAMENTAL and DECORATIVE ART.
- IV. SCULPTURE and PAINTING.
- V. The EARLIEST PHARAONIC REMAINS.
- VI. DANCING, MUSIC, and POETRY.
- VII. CONCLUSIONS. INDEX.

The book affords an extraordinary amount of information on the condition of art and culture in the Nile Valley during the remote prehistoric age before the earliest of the Pharaohs.

M. Capart has produced a work which introduces us to a new world of interest, while the anthropologist and ethnologist will find material collected and conclusions arrived at which are of the greatest interest and importance.

H. GREVEL &amp; CO.

33, King Street, Covent Garden, London, W.C.

MR. DAVID NUTT'S LATEST PUBLICATIONS.

BLOOMSBURY. By C. F. Keary,
Author of 'The Two Lancrofts,' &c. Crown
8vo, cloth, 6s.

STANDARD.—"A book out of the common.....for the student of human nature, the thinker, even the scholar."
H. W. Chesson in the DAILY CHRONICLE.—"With satire mellowed by philosophy, Mr. Keary describes to the life the little world of philanthropies and speculations where advanced ideas jostle each other."

The ENGLISH and SCOTTISH POPULAR BALLADS. Edited by FRANCIS
JAMES CHILD. With Introduction by G. L.
KITTREDDGE. Demy 8vo, xxi-722 pp. (double columns), cloth, 12s. 6d. net.

** The late Prof. Child's edition of the entire corpus of English and Scottish Ballad Poetry, in 5 vols. royal 8vo, is one of the greatest achievements of scholarship in the field of comparative literature. The present edition gives every ballad in the larger work in at least one form, all the important variants, and a choice of the full and elaborate notes upon each ballad. It is the fullest, most accurate, and most scholarly one-volume edition of our ballad literature. Prof. Kittredge's Introduction is worthy its place, even by the side of Prof. Child's admirable work. In twenty pages he gives a masterly survey of the ballad literature, and a summing-up of the many problems it presents.

"MUNCHAUSEN REINCARNATED IN THOMPSON SETON."

FERGY the GUIDE, and his Moral and Instructive Lies about Beasts, Birds, and Fishes. By H. S. CRANFIELD. With Illustrations by A. J. BLASHFIELD. Square 8vo, 242 pp. cloth, 6s. net.

** A most amusing collection of backwoodsman's yarns of the tallest description about his hunting and fishing exploits. An American critic has wittily and truthfully described Fergy, the "veracious" guide, as "Munchausen reincarnated in Ernest Thompson Seton."

THE SURGICAL AID SOCIETY.

Chief Offices—SALISBURY SQUARE, FLEET STREET, E.C.

Telephone No.: 12282 CENTRAL.

Patron—HIS MAJESTY THE KING.

This Society was established in 1862 to supply Leg Instruments, Spinal Supports, Trusses, Elastic Stockings, Artificial Limbs, &c., and every other description of Mechanical Support, to the Poor.

OVER 400 PATIENTS ARE RELIEVED EVERY WEEK.

CONTRIBUTIONS EARNESTLY SOLICITED.

Annual Subscription of £0 10 6 Entitles to Two Recommendations
Life Subscription of £5 5 0 per Annum.

Bankers—Messrs. BARCLAY &amp; Co., Ltd., 54, Lombard Street.

RICHARD C. TRESIDDER, Secretary.

OLIPHANT, ANDERSON & FERRIER.*THE MISTY ISLE OF SKYE.

Its Scenery, its People, its Story.

By J. A. MACCULLOCH.

With 20 Full-Page Illustrations.

TO BE PUBLISHED ON THE 31ST INST.

NOTICE.—Price to Subscribers before publication, 3s. 6d. net. To be raised immediately on publication to 4s. net.

The GIST of JAPAN. The Islands and their People. By R. B. PEERY, A.M. Ph.D. With 8 Full-Page Illustrations. 5s. post free.
ATHENÆUM.—"By far the most authoritative statement on the subject that we have met with."

HOLY HIMALAYA. The Religion, Traditions, and Scenery of a Himalayan Province. By E. SHERMAN OAKLEY, M.A., of the London Missionary Society. With 16 Full-Page Illustrations. 5s. net (postage 4d.).
SPECTATOR.—"Mr. Oakley has given us a really valuable book."
TIMES.—"Mr. Oakley writes attractively and with the knowledge gained by fifteen years' residence in the province."

The GREAT RELIGIONS of INDIA.

By the late J. MURRAY-MITCHELL, M.A. LL.D. With Map and Portrait. 5s. net (postage 4d.).
STANDARD.—"The book gives a singularly clear and unprejudiced account of the true inwardness of Hinduism, Buddhism, Zoroastrianism, and Mohammedanism as they exist in the present day in India."

ETERNAL ELEMENTS in the CHRISTIAN FAITH. By the Rev. D. BUTLER, M.A., Minister of the Tron Kirk, Edinburgh, Author of 'Life and Letters of Archbishop Leighton,' &c. 2s. 6d. net.

SECOND EDITION, WITH NEW PREFACE, OF The FAITH of ROBERT LOUIS

STEVENSON. By JOHN KILMAN, Jun., M.A. 6s. net, half-vellum cloth, gilt top.
ATHENÆUM.—"An attempt to figure the man forth in all his qualities. The attempt is astonishingly successful."

21, PATERNOSTER SQUARE, E.C.; and 100, Princes Street, Edinburgh.

In 2 vols. crown 8vo, with 2 Portraits, 24s.

JOHN FRANCIS and the 'ATHENÆUM.'

A Literary Chronicle of Half a Century.

By JOHN C. FRANCIS.

Macmillan &amp; Co., Limited, London.

"I'll note you in my book of memory."—SHAKESPEARE.

S E C C O T I N E

S E C C O T I N E

S E C C O T I N E

Regd.
Trade Mark.

Sticks everything.

FREE SAMPLE

From the Sole Proprietors:

M'CAW, STEVENSON &amp; ORR, LIMITED, Belfast and London.

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

The best remedy for
ACIDITY of the STOMACH, HEADACHE, HEARTBURN,
GOUT,

And INDIGESTION.
And Safest Aperient for Delicate Constitutions,
Ladies, Children, and Infants.

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

NOW READY.

Price 10s. 6d. net.

THE

NINTH SERIES

GENERAL INDEX

OF

NOTES AND QUERIES.

With Introduction by

JOSEPH KNIGHT, F.S.A.

This Index is double the size of previous ones, as it contains, in addition to the usual Index of Subjects, the Names and Pseudonyms of Writers, with a list of their Contributions. The number of constant Contributors exceeds eleven hundred. The Publisher reserves the right of increasing the price of the volume at any time. The number printed is limited, and the type has been distributed.

Free by post, 10s. 11d.

JOHN C. FRANCIS, Notes and Queries Office,
Bream's Buildings, E.C.

THE LIFE AND LETTERS OF R. S. HAWKER,

VICAR OF MORWENSTOW. By his Son-in-Law, C. E. BYLES. With numerous Illustrations, including a Water-Colour Portrait by the EARL of CARLISLE, Lithographs by J. LEY PETHYBRIDGE, &c. Demy 8vo, 21s. net.
TIMES.—"A triumphant acquittal."
MORNING POST.—"Gratitude is distinctly due to Mr. Byles."
OUTLOOK.—"This admirable biography."
STANDARD.—"A breezy book, with plenty of salt in it."
DAILY TELEGRAPH.—"This fascinating and charmingly produced book."
DAILY CHRONICLE.—"This admirable memoir.....the definitive life."
PALL MALL GAZETTE.—"Hawker will live long."
DAILY NEWS.—"Here, at length, is the authentic life."
DAILY EXPRESS.—"One of the most readable biographies written for a long time past."

WITH THE PILGRIMS TO MECCA.

The Great Pilgrimage, A.H. 1318, A.D. 1902. By HADJI KHAN, M.R.A.S., and WILFRID SPARRO. With an Introduction by Prof. VAMBERY, and many Illustrations. Demy 8vo, 12s. 6d. net.
OUTLOOK.—"Captivates and retains the interest of the reader to the end."
DAILY TELEGRAPH.—"One of the most enlightening and captivating books about the East ever written."
DAILY CHRONICLE.—"Fascinating."
DAILY NEWS.—"A most vivid and interesting account."
WESTMINSTER GAZETTE.—"A most impressive picture.....Capital reading throughout."
GLOBE.—"Of extreme interest."

THE TWENTIETH CENTURY CHILD.

By EDWARD H. COOPER. Crown 8vo, 6s. [Second Edition.
The COUNTESS OF WARWICK (in the DAILY MAIL).—"This delightful book.....I had no idea that a man could know all that there is to know about children."
PALL MALL GAZETTE.—"Mr. E. H. Cooper is the philosopher of the child world in much the same way that Mr. Barrie is its artist."
ST. JAMES'S GAZETTE.—"Mr. Cooper has made himself the expert on child-life."
M.A.P..—"A charming book."
WESTMINSTER GAZETTE.—"The volume brings him to the front rank, proclaims him a leader.....This deliciously fresh and unconventional book."

THE POEMS OF WILLIAM WATSON.

Edited and Arranged, with an Introduction, by J. A. SPENDER. 2 vols, with Portrait and many New Poems. crown 8vo, 9s. net.
ATHENÆUM.—"His poetry is 'a criticism of life,' and, viewed as such, it is magnificent in its lucidity, its elegance, its dignity. We revere and admire Mr. Watson's pursuit of a splendid ideal, and we are sure that his artistic self-mastery will be rewarded by a secure place in the ranks of our poets.....Mr. Watson will keep his high and honourable station when many showier but shallower reputations have withered away, and must figure in any representative anthology of English poetry.....'Wordsworth's Grave,' in our judgment, is Mr. Watson's masterpiece.....Its music is graver and deeper, its language is purer and clearer, than the frigid droning and fugitive beauties of the 'Elegy in a Country Churchyard'.....Mr. Watson has written some of the finest epigrams in the language."

SELECTED POEMS OF JOHN DAVIDSON.

Fcap. 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d. net; leather, 5s. net.
ATHENÆUM.—"There is urgent need for a collected edition of Mr. Davidson's poems and plays. The volume and variety of his poetry ought to win for it wider acceptance. It is curious that poetry so splendid should fail to get fuller recognition. There are many aspects of his genius which ought to make his work popular in the best sense of the word. He has almost invented the modern ballad. He handles the metre with mastery skill."

MUSA VERTICORDIA.

By FRANCIS COUTTS. Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d. net.
ACADEMY.—"Mr. Coutts stands out head and shoulders from the generality of our modern minor poets in that, in addition to its technical excellence, his verse strikes a strongly individual note.....The 'Musa Verticordia,' with which the volume opens,.....reminds us of Milton by the sustained majesty of both its thought and its rhythm. 'There shall be Weeping'.....is one of the best short lyrics we have seen in recent years."

BOOKS AND PERSONALITIES.

By H. W. NEVINSON, Author of 'Between the Acts.' Crown 8vo, 5s. net.
DAILY CHRONICLE.—"Masterly appreciations."

THE WOMEN OF SHAKESPEARE'S FAMILY.

By MARY ROSE, Curator of Shakespeare's Birthplace. Illustrated. 16mo, cloth, 1s. net; leather, 1s. 6d. net.

NAPOLÉON: the First Phase.

By OSCAR BROWNING. Chapters on the Boyhood and Youth of Napoleon I., 1769-1793. With Portraits. Demy 8vo, 10s. 6d. net. [Ready shortly.]

THE CREED OF CHRIST.

Crown 8vo, 5s. net.

[Ready shortly.]

THE

NOVELS OF LORD BEACONSFIELD.

"THE MOST GLITTERING PERFORMER OF HIS DAY."

Mr. JOHN LANE begs to announce that he has just published in the "New Pocket Library" the First Volume of a new handy-volume edition of the NOVELS of the EARL of BEACONSFIELD.

The Volumes will be printed upon a specially thin paper from a large-faced type. Each will be handsomely bound in red cloth and leather respectively, with a gilt top, and will contain an Introduction by the EARL of IDDESLEIGH.

Size, pott 8vo (6 in. by 3½ in.), gilt top; bound in cloth, 1s. 6d. net; bound in leather, 2s. net.

SYBIL. [Ready March 23.
TANCRED. [Ready April 11.
VENETIA. [Ready May 9.
CONTARINI FLEMING. [Ready June 6.

WILD WALES.

By GEORGE BORROW.

Uniform with 'Lavengro,' 'The Romany Rye,' 'The Bible in Spain,' 'The Zincifer,' in the New Pocket Library, and completing the Set. Cloth, 1s. 6d. net; leather, 2s. net. [Ready April 4.

NEW SIX-SHILLING NOVELS.

HELEN OF TROY. By W. S. JACKSON.
ATHENÆUM.—"Exceedingly funny."
ACADEMY.—"His fooling is excellent."

BEFORE THE CRISIS. By F. B. MOTT.
DAILY TELEGRAPH.—"Worthy to rank with Mrs. Beecher Stowe's universal work ('Uncle Tom's Cabin')."

A NEW PAOLO AND FRANCESCA. By ANNIE E. HOLDSWORTH.
WESTMINSTER GAZETTE.—"If Miss Holdsworth had done nothing else in her new novel than create the character of Janice, the heroine, she would thereby alone have increased her reputation as a talented novelist."

WIDDICOMBE. By M. P. WILLCOCKS.
PALL MALL GAZETTE.—"The story is capitally set.....The author is to be congratulated upon a success."

THE MANITOBAN. By H. H. BASHFORD.
MORNING LEADER.—"The promise of 'Tommy Wideawake' is fully maintained."

CONSTANCE WEST.
TIMES.—"It has real qualities of force and passion and vividness; the story moves easily.....the characters have genuine life."
SPEAKER.—"Some really excellent character-drawing."

PHOTOGRAPHS FROM THE COLLECTIONS OF THE BRITISH MUSEUM.

Photographed and Published with the sanction of the Trustees.

PART III.

BABYLONIAN

AND

ASSYRIAN.

SUMMARY OF CONTENTS.

BABYLONIAN.

EARLY BABYLONIAN EMPIRE (from B.C. 4500-1600)—

Memorial Tablets, Bricks, Cones.
Clay Records, Bronze and Alabaster Objects, &c.

TELL-EL-AMARNA TABLETS (B.C. 1500-1450)—
Bricks, Boundary Stones, Tablets, &c. (B.C. 1450-600).

SECOND EMPIRE of BABYLON—
Clay Cylinders, Bricks, Tablets, Stone and Bronze Objects (B.C. 625-538).

BABYLON UNDER PERSIAN and OTHER RULERS (B.C. 538-280)—
Clay Cylinders, Tablets, Casts of Behistun. Inscriptions, Paper Squeezes, &c.
Cylinder-seals, Gems, &c. (various dates).

ASSYRIAN.

STONE and CLAY RECORDS of EARLY RULERS of ASSYRIA (B.C. 2000-1325).

INSCRIBED RECORDS in the REIGNS of—

Tiglath Pileser I. (B.C. 1100).
Assur-nasir-pal (B.C. 885).
Shalmaneser II. (B.C. 860).
Tiglath Pileser III. (B.C. 745).
Sargon (B.C. 722).
Sennacherib (B.C. 705).
Esarhaddon (B.C. 681).
Assur-bani-pal (B.C. 668).
Shamash-shum-ukin (B.C. 663).
Ashur-etil-ilani (B.C. 626).

INSCRIBED TABLETS:

Creation, Deluge, and other Legends (B.C. 668).
Syllabaries and Explanatory Texts (B.C. 668).
Historical, Astrological, and Religious Texts (B.C. 668).
Letters, Deeds, and Legal Documents (B.C. 668).
Miscellaneous Objects (B.C. 860-668).

SCULPTURED SLABS and MONUMENTS (B.C. 860-668).

Catalogue, with some Illustrations, price 6d. post free.

Foreign Stamps can be sent in payment by Correspondents abroad.

W. A. MANSELL & CO.,
405, Oxford Street, London, W.

JOHN LANE, Publisher, London and New York.

MESSRS. BELL'S PUBLICATIONS.

Catalogue or Prospectuses sent post free on application.

BELL'S HANDBOOKS OF THE GREAT MASTERS IN PAINTING AND SCULPTURE.

Post 8vo, with 40 Illustrations and a Photogravure Frontispiece, 5s. net each.

LUINI—CRIVELLI—DELLA ROBBIA—FRANCIA—WILKIE—MICHAEL ANGELO—VELASQUEZ—CORREGGIO—GIORGIONE—BRUNELLESCHI—GERARD DOU—DEL SARTO—DONATELLO—MEMLINC—MANTEGNA—WATTEAU—SIGNORELLI—PERUGINO—PIERO DELLA FRANCESCA—REMBRANDT—BOTTICELLI—RAPHAEL—SODOMA—PINTORICCHIO—GIOTTO—TINTORETTO—GAUDENZIO FERRARI—FRANS HALS—LEONARDO DA VINCI.

Illustrated Prospectus of this Series post free on application.

THE BRITISH ARTISTS SERIES.

Profusely illustrated, post 8vo, 7s. 6d. net each.

DANTE GABRIEL ROSSETTI. By H. C. Marillier.

GAINSBOROUGH. By Lord Ronald Sutherland Gower, F.S.A.

SIR JOSHUA REYNOLDS, P.R.A. By Lord Ronald Sutherland Gower, F.S.A.

The ENGLISH PRE-RAPHAELITE PAINTERS: their Associates and Successors. By PERCY BATE.

FREDERIC, LORD LEIGHTON, P.R.A. An Illustrated Chronicle. By ERNEST RHYS.

SIR J. E. MILLAIS, Bart., P.R.A.: his Art and Influence. By A. LYS BALDREY.

SIR EDWARD BURNE-JONES, Bart.: a Record and Review. By MALCOLM BELL.

BELL'S MINIATURE BIOGRAPHIES.

Pott 8vo, cloth, illustrated, 1s. net; or in limp leather, with Photogravure Frontispiece, 2s. net each.

WRITERS.

BROWNING—CHAUCER—COLERIDGE—DE QUINCEY—DICKENS—JOHNSON—SHAKESPEARE.

PAINTERS.

CONSTABLE—REYNOLDS—GREUZE—MILLAIS—ROMNEY—ALMA TADEMA—REMBRANDT—BURNE-JONES—HOLBEIN—MURILLO—WATTEAU—HOGARTH—TURNER—LANDSEER—MICHAEL ANGELO—GAINSBOROUGH—LEIGHTON—J. F. MILLET—CORREGGIO—HOLMAN HUNT—RAPHAEL—WATTS—FRA ANGELICO—VELASQUEZ—WHISTLER—ROSA BONHEUR.

MUSICIANS.

BACH—BEETHOVEN—CHOPIN—GOUNOD—HANDEL—MENDELSSOHN—MOZART—ROSSINI—SCHUMANN—SULLIVAN.

HOW to LOOK at PICTURES. By Robert Claremont Witt, M.A. With 35 Illustrations. Fourth Edition. Post 8vo, 5s. net.

HOW to COLLECT OLD FURNITURE. By Frederick Litchfield, Author of 'Illustrated History of Furniture,' &c. With 40 Plates and numerous other Illustrations. Third Edition. Post 8vo, 6s. net.

HOW to IDENTIFY OLD CHINA. A Handbook for Collectors of English Pottery and Porcelain. By Mrs. WILLOUGHBY HODGSON. With 40 Illustrations and 50 Reproductions of Marks. Sixth Thousand. Large post 8vo, 5s. net.

BOHN'S LIBRARIES.

Complete Catalogue, containing over 760 Volumes, on application.

New Volumes of Standard Works in the various branches of Literature are constantly being added to this Series, which is already unsurpassed in respect to the number, variety, and cheapness of the Works contained in it. The following are some recent additions:—

The PROSE WORKS of JONATHAN SWIFT. Edited by Temple SCOTT. With an Introduction by the Right Hon. W. E. H. LECKY, M.P. In 12 vols. with numerous Portraits and Facsimiles, 5s. each.

[Vols. 1-6, 8, 9, 10 now ready; Vols. 7 and 11 immediately.

The LETTERS of THOMAS GRAY, including the Correspondence of Gray and Mason. Edited, with an Introduction and Notes, by DUNCAN C. TOVEY, Editor of 'Gray and his Friends,' &c. In 3 vols. 3s. 6d. each.

[Vols. I. and II. now ready.

CARLYLE'S FRENCH REVOLUTION. Edited, with Introduction, Notes, and Appendices, by J. HOLLAND ROSE, Litt.D., Author of 'The Life of Napoleon I.' 3 vols. 5s. each.

SHAKESPEARE DOCUMENTS. A Chronological Catalogue of Extant Evidence relating to the Life and Works of William Shakespeare. Collated and Chronologically arranged by D. H. LAMBERT, B.A. With numerous Illustrations and Facsimiles. 3s. 6d.

LAMB'S TALES from SHAKESPEARE. With 24 Illustrations by BYAM SHAW.

BELL'S CATHEDRAL SERIES.

PROFUSELY ILLUSTRATED.

In specially Designed cloth cover, crown 8vo, 1s. 6d. net each.

NOW READY.

ENGLISH CATHEDRALS. An Itinerary and Description—BRISTOL—CANTERBURY—CARLISLE—CHESTER—CHICHESTER—DURHAM—ELY—EXETER—GLOUCESTER—HEREFORD—LICHFIELD—LINCOLN—MANCHESTER—NORWICH—OXFORD—PETERBOROUGH—RIPON—ROCHESTER—ST. ALBANS—ST. ASAPH—ST. DAVIDS—ST. PATRICK'S, DUBLIN—ST. PAUL'S—SALISBURY—SOUTHWELL—WELLS—WINCHESTER—WORCESTER—YORK.

Uniform with above Series. 1s. 6d. net each.

ST. MARTIN'S CHURCH, CANTERBURY—BEVERLEY MINSTER—WIMBORNE MINSTER and CHRISTCHURCH PRIORY—TEWKESBURY ABBEY and DEERHURST PRIORY—BATH ABBEY, MALMESBURY ABBEY, and BRADFORD-ON-AVON CHURCH—WESTMINSTER ABBEY—STRATFORD-ON-AVON.

BELL'S HANDBOOKS TO CONTINENTAL CHURCHES.

PROFUSELY ILLUSTRATED. Crown 8vo, cloth, 2s. 6d. net each.

CHARTRES: the Cathedral and other Churches. AMIENS: the Cathedral and other Churches.

ROUEN: the Cathedral and other Churches. PARIS (NOTRE-DAME). MONT ST. MICHEL. BAYEUX.

NEW EDITION, REVISED, crown 8vo, 5s. net.

CITIES and SITES of SPAIN. A Handbook for Travellers. By Mrs. A. LE BLOND (Mrs. Main). With numerous Illustrations and Maps. With a Note by G. F. CHAMBERS, F.R.A.S., on the coming Total Eclipse of the Sun.

Small 4to, 10s. 6d. net.

LIGHT and WATER. An Essay on Reflection and Colour in River, Lake, and Sea. By Sir MONTAGU POLLOCK, Bart. With 39 Photographic Illustrations and numerous Diagrams.

The TREATMENT of DRAPERY in ART. By G. Woolliscroft RHEAD, R.E. A.R.C.A.Lond. With over 50 Diagrams and Drawings in Line by the Author, and 32 Half-Tone Illustrations. Post 8vo, 6s. net.

THE YORK LIBRARY.

A New Series of Reprints on thin paper, with Cover and End Papers designed by Mr. A. A. MARTIN, and Title-Pages by Mr. D. CLAYTON CALTHROP.

Small 8vo, 2s. net in cloth, and 3s. net in leather.

COLERIDGE'S AIDS to REFLECTION, and The CONFESSIONS of an INQUIRING SPIRIT.

MOTLEY'S RISE of the DUTCH REPUBLIC. With a Biographical Introduction by MONCURE D. CONWAY. 3 vols.

BURNEY'S EVELINA. Edited, with an Introduction and Notes, by ANNIE RAINE ELLIS.

EMERSON'S PROSE WORKS. A New Edition, with the Text Revised and Collated by GEORGE SAMPSON. In 4 vols.

COLERIDGE'S FRIEND. A Series of Essays on Morals, Politics, and Religion.

BURNEY'S CECILIA. Edited, with an Introduction and Notes, by ANNIE RAINE ELLIS. 2 vols.

LAMB'S ESSAYS. Including the Essays of Elia and Eliaana.

BURTON'S ANATOMY of MELANCHOLY. Edited by the Rev. A. R. SHILLETO, M.A. With Introduction by A. H. BULLEN. 3 vols.

Others to follow.

WEBSTER'S INTERNATIONAL DICTIONARY

Revised Throughout and brought up to date.

2,348 PAGES. 5,000 ILLUSTRATIONS.

WEBSTER is the best practical Working Dictionary of the English Language. It is recognized as the Standard Authority throughout the English-speaking World. It is an indispensable Reference Book.

Send for Illustrated Pamphlet, with Hundreds of Testimonials, Specimen Pages, Prices, &c.

London: GEORGE BELL & SONS, Portugal Street, Lincoln's Inn, W.C.

THE ATHENÆUM

Journal of English and Foreign Literature, Science, the Fine Arts, Music and the Drama.

No. 4040.

SATURDAY, APRIL 1, 1905.

PRICE
THREEPENCE
REGISTERED AS A NEWSPAPER

THE ELIZABETHAN STAGE SOCIETY.

EVERYMAN, ST. GEORGE'S HALL, W., TUESDAY and FRIDAY, April 4 and 7, at 8.30.
FRANCIS OF ASSISI, a Religious Drama, will be given at ST. GEORGE'S HALL, on THURSDAY, April 6, at 8.30, and FRIDAY, April 7, at 3. Seats can be booked at the Hall.

ROYAL INSTITUTION OF GREAT BRITAIN, ALBEMARLE STREET, PICCADILLY, W.

THIS DAY (SATURDAY), April 1, at 3 o'clock, the Right Hon. LORD RAYLEIGH, O.M. D.C.L. LL.D. Sc.D. F.R.S., Professor of Natural Philosophy, R.I., FIRST OF THREE LECTURES on 'Some Centroverted Questions of Optics.' Half-a-Guinea the Course.

TUESDAY NEXT, April 4, at 5 o'clock, PERCEVAL LONDON, Esq., FIRST OF TWO LECTURES on 'Tibet.' Half-a-Guinea.

THURSDAY, April 6, at 5 o'clock, Prof. R. MELDOLA, F.R.S., FIRST OF TWO LECTURES on 'Synthetic Chemistry' (Experimental). Half-a-Guinea.

Subscription to all Courses in the Season, Two Guineas.

OLD BRITISH SCHOOL.—SHEPHERD'S

SPRING EXHIBITION includes choice Landscapes and Portraits by the Masters of the Old British School.—SHEPHERD'S GALLERY, No. 27, King Street, St. James's.

THE BOOKSELLERS' PROVIDENT INSTITUTION.

Founded 1837.

Patron—HER MAJESTY QUEEN ALEXANDRA.

Invested Capital 30,000l.

A UNIQUE INVESTMENT
Offered to London Booksellers and their Assistants.

A young man or woman of twenty-five can invest the sum of Twenty Guineas (or its equivalent by Instalments), and obtain the right to participate in the following advantages:—

FIRST. Freedom from want in time of Adversity as long as need exists.

SECOND. Permanent Relief in Old Age.

THIRD. Medical advice by eminent Physicians and Surgeons.

FOURTH. A Cottage in the Country (Abbots Langley, Hertfordshire) for aged Members, with garden produce, coal, and medical attendance free, in addition to an annuity.

FIFTH. A furnished house in the same Retreat at Abbots Langley for the free use of Members and their families for holidays or during convalescence.

SIXTH. A contribution towards Funeral expenses when it is needed.

SEVENTH. All these are available not for Members only, but also for their wives or widows and young children.

EIGHTH. The payment of the subscriptions confers an absolute right to these benefits in all cases of need.

For further information apply to the Secretary, Mr. GEORGE LARNER, 28, Paternoster Row E.C.

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE, LONDON.

(University of London.)

FACULTY OF MEDICINE.

The SUMMER SESSION BEGINS on WEDNESDAY, April 26.

The work is arranged so that a Student may advantageously begin his Medical Curriculum then.

The BUCKNILL SCHOLARSHIP and FOUR ENTRANCE EXHIBITIONS will be AWARDED in OCTOBER.

Full information may be obtained from either of the undersigned, SIDNEY MARTIN, M.D. F.R.S., Dean of the Faculty, WALTER W. SETON, M.A., Acting Secretary.

ST. THOMAS'S HOSPITAL,

ALBERT EMBANKMENT, S.E.

(University of London.)

The SUMMER SESSION will COMMENCE on APRIL 26.

The Hospital occupies one of the finest sites in London, and contains 602 Beds, of which 540 are in constant use.

Entrance and other Scholarships and Prizes (Twenty-six in number), of the value of more than 500l., are offered for competition each year.

Upwards of Sixty Resident and other Appointments are open to Students after qualification.

A Students' Club forms part of the Medical School Buildings; and the Athletic Ground, nine acres in extent, situated at Chiswick, can be reached in forty minutes from the Hospital.

A Prospectus, containing full particulars, may be obtained from the undersigned. J. H. FISHER, B.S. Lond., Dean.

MERCHANT TAYLORS' SCHOOL,

CHARTERHOUSE SQUARE, E.C.

An ORDINARY ENTRANCE EXAMINATION will be held on WEDNESDAY, April 12, 1905, at 1.30 p.m.

FIVE ENTRANCE SCHOLARSHIPS, for Boys under 14 years of age on June 11, 1905, will be COMPETED for on the 3rd, 4th, and 5th of NEXT JULY.

For particulars apply to the SECRETARY.

THE DOWNS SCHOOL, SEAFORD, SUSSEX.

Head Mistress—Miss LUCY ROBINSON, M.A. (late Second Mistress St. Felix School, Southwold). References: The Principal of Bedford College, London; The Master of Peterhouse, Cambridge.

F O L K E S T O N E.

WOODLANDS PREPARATORY SCHOOL.

Rev. HENRY T. J. COGOIN, M.A. Cantab.

KORESPONDANTOJ dezirataj en la LINGVO

ESPERANTO, kaj en ANOLA TEJTONIKAJ, kaj LATINIDAJ LINGVOJ. Temo, "Eugeniko, Progreso de la Homaro raso per la scienco de heredo." Mi respondos Angle, France, au Esperante.—Adresu C. G. SEURAT-MENTATH, 23, Upper Bedford Place, London.

EDUCATION.

Parents or Guardians desiring accurate information relative to the CHOICE of SCHOOLS for BOYS or GIRLS or

TUTORS in England or Abroad

are invited to call upon or send fully detailed particulars to

MESSRS. GARRITAS, THRING & CO.,

who for more than thirty years have been closely in touch with the leading Educational Establishments.

Advice, free of charge, is given by Mr. Thring, Nephew of the late Head Master of Uppingham, 36, Sackville Street, London, W.

ST. PAUL'S SCHOOL, LONDON.

The GOVERNORS of ST. PAUL'S SCHOOL, LONDON, hereby give notice that it is their intention shortly to ELECT a HIGH MASTER, who will enter upon his duties in SEPTEMBER NEXT.

Candidates must be Graduates of some University in the United Kingdom. No person is disqualified by reason only of his not being or not intending to be in Holy Orders. The Governors and the High Master are required to make proper provision for religious instruction in the School in accordance with the principles of the Church of England.

Candidates are requested to make their application in writing, and forward thirty copies of not more than three Testimonials, together with not more than three References, to the undersigned on or before APRIL 29 NEXT.

Any further information which may be desired may be obtained from the undersigned, and Candidates may be supplied, if they desire it, with copies of the Scheme settled by the Charity Commissioners and approved by Her late Majesty in Council.

JOHN WATNEY, Clerk to Governors.

Mercers' Hall, Cheapside, E.C., March 23, 1905.

GRAMMAR SCHOOL of KING EDWARD VI.

at STOURBRIDGE.

HEAD MASTER.

There will be a VACANCY in the HEAD MASTERSHIP of this SCHOOL after JULY 31, 1905. The Gentleman appointed must be a Graduate of one of the principal Universities of the United Kingdom. A knowledge of Modern Languages, Chemistry, and Natural Science is considered desirable.

The remuneration, by Stipend, Capitation Fees, &c., amounts at present to about 600l. per annum, with House.

There are six Assistant Masters, paid by the Governors.

Personal canvassing of the Governors will be considered a disqualification.

Applications, in writing, with Twelve Copies of Testimonials, to be sent to W. P. Travis, Esq., Solicitor, Clerk to the Governors, on or before MAY 20, 1905.

COUNTY BOROUGH of WOLVERHAMPTON.

The LOCAL EDUCATION AUTHORITY require an ART MASTER to take the general management of their SCHOOL of ART, and the CORPORATION require the same person to act as CURATOR of their ART GALLERY. Commencing Salary (inclusive) for both Offices, 300l. per annum, rising by annual increments of 25l. to a maximum of 375l. per annum. Candidates must be duly qualified as Art Masters according to the rules and regulations of the Science and Art Department, and must also have had experience in teaching Design Metal Work and Enamelling. The person appointed will be required to enter upon his duties on JUNE 1 next, and will not be permitted to hold any other appointments or to take Private Pupils without permission.

Scaled applications, accompanied by not more than three recent Testimonials, addressed to the CHAIRMAN of the EDUCATION COMMITTEE, Town Hall, Wolverhampton, endorsed "Art Mastership," must be sent in not later than APRIL 10 next.

Personal canvassing of the Members of the Education Authority will be deemed a disqualification.

HORATIO BREVITT, Clerk to the Education Authority.

Town Hall, Wolverhampton, March 21, 1905.

URBAN DISTRICT of SHIPLEY.

EDUCATION COMMITTEE.

APPOINTMENT OF HEAD MASTER OF THE SHIPLEY SCHOOL OF ART.

The SHIPLEY EDUCATION COMMITTEE invite applicants for the post of HEAD MASTER of the SCHOOL of ART at the TECHNICAL SCHOOL, SALTAIRE. Commencing salary 200l. per annum.

Full particulars of the appointment may be obtained from the undersigned, to whom applications should be sent on or before APRIL 10, 1905.

WALTER POPPLESTONE, Secretary.

Education Offices, Saltaire Road, Shipley, March 23, 1905.

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE of WALES,

ABERYSTWYTH.

The COUNCIL invites applications for the Post of WARDEN of the ALEXANDRA HALL of RESIDENCE for WOMEN STUDENTS, in succession to Miss E. A. Carpenter. Applications and 70 Copies of Testimonials to be sent by MAY 10 to the undersigned, from whom further particulars may be obtained. T. F. ROBERTS, Principal.

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE of WALES,

ABERYSTWYTH.

The COUNCIL invites applications for the post of REGISTRAR and SECRETARY of the COLLEGE, at a Salary of 600l.

Applications and 70 copies of Testimonials to be sent by MAY 10 to the undersigned, from whom further particulars may be obtained.

T. F. ROBERTS, Principal.

KENDAL PUBLIC LIBRARY.

WANTED, LIBRARIAN, with previous experience. Commencing Salary, 65l. per annum. Applications, endorsed "Librarian," stating age and experience, and accompanied by copies of three recent Testimonials (which will not be returned), to reach Town Clerk, Kendal, not later than morning post, WEDNESDAY, April 5.

HOLIDAY TUTORSHIP desired by OXFORD

CLASSICAL SCHOLAR. Has travelled Abroad. Good Testimonials.—Apply Box 987, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, E.C.

ASSISTANT EDITORSHIP WANTED, in

LONDON or the PROVINCES by a UNIVERSITY MAN. Has had great experience as Editor and Leader Writer. Special knowledge of Far East.—Address Box 963, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

ADVERTISER desires post as LITERARY

ADVISER to PUBLISHING FIRM. University Classical Honours Man.—Address A. H. S., Box 962, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

PRINTER'S ASSISTANT MANAGER.—

Advertiser, who has served his Apprenticeship in every Department practically, DESIRES ENGAGEMENT, or as Manager of Production Department of a Publishing House. Understands Estimating and Forwarding in all Branches.—A. B., Box 997, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

Yearly Subscription, free by post, Inland, 15s. 3d.; Foreign, 18s. Entered at the New York Post Office as Second Class matter.

FRANCE.—The ATHENÆUM can be obtained at the following Railway Stations in France:—

AMIENS, ANTIBES, BEAULIEU-SUR-MER, BIARRITZ, BORDEAUX, BOULOGNE, CALAIS, CANNES, DIJON, DUNKIRK, GENEVA, GOLFE-JUAN, HAVRE, HYÈRES, JUAN-LES-PINS, LILLE, LYONS, MARSEILLES, MENTONE, MONACO, MONTE CARLO, NANTES, NICE, PARIS (Est, Nord, Lyon), PAU, ROUEN, SAINT RAPHAEL, TOULON, TOURS.

PARIS: W. H. SMITH & SON, 243, Rue de Rivoli; and at the OALIGNANI LIBRARY, 224, Rue de Rivoli.

NEW MAN'S TRUST.

For the Benefit of Unmarried Daughters of Retail Booksellers.

In connexion with the
BOOKSELLERS' PROVIDENT INSTITUTION.

The sum of 45l. 14s. 4d. is now available for apportionment under the terms of the Will of the late Mrs. Frances Elizabeth Layton, and the Board of Directors are prepared to receive applications from persons who may be duly qualified under the rules.

Applicants must be Daughters of Retail Booksellers, as defined below, who are Sixty Years of age and upwards, also Daughters of Retail Booksellers who are under that age, and whom the Board consider to be in necessitous circumstances. The term "Retail Bookseller" shall be taken to comprise every Principal who shall have carried on in Great Britain or Ireland the sale of books by retail as a part of his business.

Application forms and Copies of the Rules may be obtained by sending stamped and directed envelope to the Secretary, Mr. GEORGE LARNER, Booksellers' Provident Institution, St. Paul's Buildings, 26, Paternoster Row, London.

YOUNG UNIVERSITY GRADUATE, Classical

Scholar of his College, French and German (acquired abroad), SEEKS OPENING in good PUBLISHING HOUSE.—Pen-y-Graig, Tyndall Avenue, Bristol.

ACTOR-DRAMATIST of twenty years' experience, a master of stage technique, REPORTS UPON and MAKES PLAYS ACTABLE.—DRAMATIST, 142A, St. John's Avenue, Streatham Hill.

TRANSLATION, REVISION, RESEARCH,

REVIEWING, INDEXING, and other LITERARY WORK, or non-resident Secretaryship. Classics, French, German, Italian. Special Subjects, Mythology and Literature. Varied experience.—Miss SELAY, 53, Talbot Road, W.

LITERARY RESEARCH undertaken at the British Museum and elsewhere on moderate terms. Excellent Testimonials.—A. H., Box 910, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

LADY PROOF READER, of some experience,

wants SITUATION. In London preferred.—Apply, personally or by letter, J. E. F., Athenæum Press, Bream's Buildings, E.C.

TRAINING for PRIVATE SECRETARIAL

WORK and INDEXING.—Apply Miss PETHERBRIDGE (Nat. Sch. Types), 52A, Conduit Street, Bond Street, London, W.

TYPE-WRITING undertaken by highly educated

Women (Classical Tripos; Cambridge Higher Local; Modern Languages). Research, Revision, Translation.—The CAMBRIDGE TYPE-WRITING AGENCY, 10, Duke Street, Adelphi, W.C.

AUTHORS' MSS., SERMONS, PLAYS, ENVE-

LOPES, CIRCULARS, and all kinds, TYPED at home (Remington), 9d. per 1,000. Good paper. Orders promptly executed.—M. L., 7, Vernon Road, Clapham.

TYPE-WRITING promptly and accurately done.

Ten years' experience. Excellent references. 10d. per 1,000 words. Reduction for quantity.—Miss MESSIA, The Orchard, Cotterill Road, Surbiton, S.W.

SHORTHAND and TYPE-WRITING.—

Authors' MSS., Plays, Sermons, Reports, &c., 9d. per 1,000. Legal and General Copying. Accuracy and Despatch guaranteed.—Miss N. E. ROBINSON, 8, Westover Road, Wandsworth Common, London, S.W.

TYPE-WRITING.—AUTHORS' MSS., NOVELS,

PLAYS, REVIEWS, SERMONS, &c., TYPE-WRITTEN with promptness and accuracy at 7d. per 1,000 words. Specimens and Testimonials on application.—Miss ALDENSON, 56, Boroughgate, Appley, Westmorland.

TYPE-WRITING.—The WEST KENSINGTON

OFFICES. Authors' MSS., Translations, &c. Legal and General Copying. Circulars, &c., duplicated. Usual terms. References. Established twelve years.—SIRIS & SIRIS, 229, Hammersmith Road, W. (Private Address: 13, Wollerton Gardens, Hammersmith.)

TYPE-WRITING.—SERMONS, AUTHORS' MSS.,

&c., carefully and promptly executed, 8d. per 1,000 words. Unsolicited Testimonials.—Miss A. MESSIA, Strathairn, New Barn, Long-Beld, Kent.

AUTHORS' MSS., NOVELS, STORIES, PLAYS,

ESSAYS TYPE-WRITTEN with complete accuracy, 9d. per 1,000 words. References to well-known Writers.—M. S. Smith, Thirlbank, Roxborough Road, Harrow.

TYPE-WRITER.—AUTHORS' PLAYS, MSS.,

&c., of every description. Carbon and other Copies. MS. from Dictation quickly and accurately.—Miss E. M. THORP, 64, Maitland Park Road, Haverstock Hill, N.W. Established 1884.

THE AUTHOR'S AGENCY.—Established 1879. The interests of Authors capably represented. Agreements for Publishing arranged. MSS. placed with Publishers.—Terms and Testimonials on application to Mr. A. M. BRADSHAW, 34, Paternoster Row.

MR. GEORGE LARNER, Accountant and Licensed Valuer to the Bookselling, Publishing, Newspaper, Printing, and Stationery Trades. Partnerships Arranged. Balance Sheets and Trading Accounts Prepared and Audited. All Business carried out under Mr. Larner's personal supervision.—28, 29, and 30, Paternoster Row, E.C., Secretary to the Booksellers' Provident Institution.

C. MITCHELL & CO., Agents for the Sale and Purchase of Newspaper Properties, undertake Valuations for Probate or Purchase, Investigations, and Audit of Accounts, &c. Card of Terms on application. Mitchell House, 1 and 2, Snow Hill, Holborn Viaduct, E.C.

ATHENÆUM PRESS.—JOHN EDWARD FRANCIS, Printer of the Athenæum, Notes and Queries, &c., is prepared to SUBMIT ESTIMATES for all kinds of BOOK, NEWS, and PERIODICAL PRINTING.—13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

Catalogues.

PICKERING & CHATTO'S CATALOGUES.

CATALOGUE of TRACTS and PAMPHLETS, chiefly Historical and Topographical, 238 pp. 8vo, with Descriptions and Selling Prices of 3,000 Rare Tracts and Pamphlets, including Items on Africa—America—Queen Anne—Astronomy—Bedfordshire—Berkshire—Buckinghamshire—Cambridgeshire—Civil War—Charles I. and II.—Channel Islands—Cheshire—Commonwealth—Cornwall—Oliver Cromwell—Cumberland—Derbyshire—Devonshire—Dorsetshire—Durham—Economics and Trade—Queen Elizabeth—Essex—Flanders—France—George I. and II.—Germany—Gloucestershire—Rampshire—Herefordshire—Hertfordshire—Holland—Ireland—James I. and II.—Jesuits—Jews—Kent—Lancashire—Law—Leicestershire—Lincolnshire—London—Middlesex—Monmouthshire—Norfolk—Northamptonshire—Northumberland—Nottinghamshire—Oxfordshire—Popery—Popish Plot—Pretender (the Young and Old)—Printing—Prynne—Quakers—Rutlandshire—Prince Rupert—Scotland—Shropshire—Somersetshire—Spain—Spanish Armada—Staffordshire—Suffolk—Surrey—Sweden—Wales—Warwickshire—Westmorland—William III.—Wiltshire—Worcestershire—Yorkshire. Paper cover, post free, 1s.

CATALOGUE of ENGLISH LITERATURE, noted Bibliographically and Biographically, including First or Early Editions of the Writings of practically every English Author from Chaucer to R. L. Stevenson. 504 pp. 8vo, with Descriptions and Selling Prices of nearly 4,000 Rare Books, half-cloth, post free, 3s. 6d. This Catalogue has been pronounced on all sides to be the most interesting Bookseller's Catalogue on the subject ever issued.

CATALOGUE of SPORTS, PASTIMES, ARTS, SCIENCES. 222 pp. 8vo, with Descriptions and Selling Prices of nearly 2,000 Old or Rare Books upon almost every Branch of Sport, Science, or Art, paper cover, post free, 1s.

CATALOGUE of MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS, 126 pp. 8vo, with Descriptions and Selling Prices of about 900 Old or Rare Books, including Works on Africa, America, Australasia—First Editions of Books Illustrated by Randolph Caldecott, George and Robert Crickshank, Richard Doyle, Harry Furniss, James Gilray, Ernest Griset, John Leech, Hablot K. Browne (Phiz), Henry Alken, Thomas Rowlandson, and numerous Rare Works with Coloured Plates—an interesting Collection of Old Curiosa, Erotica, Facetiae, Old Romances, Chap Books, and Children's Books—numerous Topographical Works relating to most of the Counties of England, Ireland, Scotland, and Wales—fine illuminated Manuscripts, with Miniatures—a valuable Assemblage of Early Typographical Specimens, including many Rare Editions of Principles and Examples of the Early Printers. Paper cover, post free, 1s.

CATALOGUE of NEW PURCHASES. Books on all Subjects, including a fine Collection of Stamped and Elaborately Gilt-Tooled Old Bookbindings, and several very beautiful Ancient illuminated Manuscripts. 578 pp. 8vo, containing Descriptions, with Selling Prices, of 4,000 Valuable Books, illustrated with 9 Coloured and 198 Reproductions of Manuscripts and Old Bindings, cloth, post free, 6s.

It has been found necessary to make the above charges for our Catalogues, to prevent an inundation of applications from irresponsible persons. The cost of the Catalogue will, however, be deducted from the first order of 1l.

PICKERING & CHATTO, Antiquarian Booksellers, 66, HAYMARKET, LONDON, S.W.

MESSRS. HENRY YOUNG & SONS possess one of the LARGEST STOCKS of OLD and NEW BOOKS in GREAT BRITAIN, and they will be glad to hear from any one in search of Books out of print, as they can in many cases supply them at once.

ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE MONTHLY. Price 6d.
12, South Castle Street, Liverpool.

CATALOGUE No. 42.—Drawings—Engravings—Turner's Liber Studiorum—Lucas's Mezzotints after Constable—Engravings, Hogarth, Girtin—Etchings, Palmer, Whistler—Japanese Colour-Prints—Illustrated Books—Works by Ruskin. Post free, Sixpence. Wm. Ward, 2, Church Terrace, Richmond, Surrey.

THE INTERNATIONAL BOOK CIRCULAR, No. 139, containing a Special Article, entitled 'SOME CONTEMPORARY FOREIGN CRITICISMS,' by Dr M. O. FORSTER, together with an exact Bibliography of their Publications, and a Double Plate of their Portraits. Specimen Copies gratis—WILLIAMS & NOAGATE, Book Importers, 14, Henrietta Street, Covent Garden, W.C.

H. H. PEACH, Antiquarian Bookseller, 37, Belvoir Street, Leicester, issues CATALOGUES of MSS. and OLD BOOKS post free to Book Collectors. No. 10 contains Manuscripts—Dibdin—Bibliotheca Spenceriana, &c.

BOOKS.—All out-of-print and rare Books on any subject supplied. The most expert bookfinder extant. Please state wants and ask for Catalogue. I make a special feature of exchanging any saleable Books for others selected from my various Lists. Special List of 2,000 Books particularly wanted post free—EDW. BAKER'S Great Bookshop, 14-16, John Bright Street, Birmingham.

TO BOOKBUYERS and LIBRARIANS of FREE LIBRARIES.—The MARCH CATALOGUE of valuable SECOND-HAND WORKS and NEW REMAINDERS, offered at prices greatly reduced, is now ready, and will be sent post free upon application to W. H. SMITH & SON, Library Department, 186, Strand, London, W.C.

FIRST EDITIONS of MODERN AUTHORS, including Dickens, Thackeray, Lever, Almsworth; Books illustrated by G. and H. Crookshank, Phiz, Rowlandson, Leech, &c. The largest and choicest Collection offered for Sale in the World. Catalogues issued and sent post free on application. Books Bought—WALTER T. SPENCER, 27, New Oxford Street, London, W.C.

LEIGHTON'S

ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE of EARLY PRINTED and other INTERESTING BOOKS, MANUSCRIPTS, and BINDINGS.

Part VIII. SI—T, with 144 Illustrations, price 2s. JUST ISSUED. Parts I.—VII. containing A—SH, with 1050 Illustrations in Facsimile, price 17s. the 7 Parts.

J. & J. LEIGHTON, 40, Brewer Street, Golden Square, W.

W. GLAISHER'S NEW GENERAL CATALOGUE OF REMAINDERS

(Spring, 1905)

IS NOW READY, and can be had on application.

It contains many important BOOKS, offered at a GREAT REDUCTION IN PRICE by

WILLIAM GLAISHER,

Wholesale and Export Bookseller, 265, High Holborn, London.

RETURNABLE CATALOGUE.—Large number of EARLY-PRINTED FOREIGN BOOKS in Gothic and Roman Type, Woodcuts and Copperplates.—Box 996, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

ARUNDEL CHROMOS.

Large number in Stock; many rare ones. Send stamp for this Month's Printed List. SAINT JUDE'S DEPOT, BIRMINGHAM.

PORTRAIT of GEORGE MEREDITH, after the celebrated Painting by G. F. WATTS, R.A., Engraved by W. BISCOMBE GARDNER. Limited to 600 Artist's Proofs at One Guinea each. Size, 12in. by 8in.—Address W. BISCOMBE GARDNER, Hothly, Hind Head, Surrey.

Sales by Auction.

The extensive and valuable Library of the late JOHN SCOTT, Esq., C.B.

MESSRS. SOTHEY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C., on MONDAY, March 27, and Eight Following Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, the extensive and valuable LIBRARY of MANUSCRIPTS and PRINTED BOOKS of the late JOHN SCOTT, Esq., C.B., of Halkhill, Largs, Ayrshire.

May be viewed. Catalogues may be had.

The extensive and valuable Collection of Books on Shipping, Navigation, and Naval Affairs, formed by the late JOHN SCOTT, Esq., C.B.

MESSRS. SOTHEY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C., on THURSDAY, April 6, and Following Day, at 1 o'clock precisely, the extensive and unique COLLECTION of WORKS connected with SHIPPING, NAVIGATION, the NAVIES, and NAVAL AFFAIRS of ALL COUNTRIES, ANCIENT and MODERN, including very many rare Works in most of the European Languages, comprising nearly 1,000 different Works, formed by the late JOHN SCOTT, Esq., C.B., of Halkhill, Largs, Ayrshire.

May be viewed. Catalogues may be had.

Caricatures and other Humorous Engravings and Drawings.

MESSRS. SOTHEY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C., on FRIDAY, April 7, at 1 o'clock precisely, a COLLECTION of DRAWINGS and ENGRAVINGS of Humorous Subjects, Caricatures, &c., by Rowlandson, Gillray, Dighton, Cruikshank, Bunbury, &c.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

The Collection of Coins and Medals of the late REUBEN CULL, Esq.

MESSRS. SOTHEY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C., on TUESDAY, April 11, and Following Day, at 1 o'clock precisely, COINS and MEDALS, including a Collection of Greek, Roman, and Modern Coins, partly formed in the Eighteenth Century—Greek, Roman, English, and Foreign Coins—Proofs and Pattern Coins—rare English Medals, from various Sources; and the extensive Collection formed by the late REUBEN CULL, Esq., comprising Greek Coins—Roman Consular and Imperial Denarii—English Coins in Gold, Silver, and Copper—Coin Cabinets—Numismatic Books, &c.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

Engravings and Drawings.

MESSRS. SOTHEY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C., on FRIDAY, April 14, at 1 o'clock precisely, ENGRAVINGS and DRAWINGS, FRAMED and in the PORTFOLIO, from various sources, comprising Sporting and Military Subjects—fine Mezzotint Portraits of Ladies, including Le Baiser Envoiyé, Viscountess Andover, Lady Langham (after Hoppner), Lady Hamilton as a Bacchante, Oliver Goldsmith (Proof), Mrs. Abington (Proof before Letters), Countess of Salisbury, Lady Stanhope (Proof before Letters, after Reynolds), &c.—Fancy Subjects of the English School, after Morland, Ward, Wheatley, Bigg, Smith, Buck, Cosway, Bunbury, &c.—Drawings in Water Colours, by Morland, Wheatley, Rowlandson, &c.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

Photographic Cameras and Lenses—Scientific Instruments and Apparatus—Fishing Tackle.

FRIDAY, April 7, at half-past 12 o'clock.

MR. J. C. STEVENS will OFFER, at his Rooms, 38, King Street, Covent Garden, W.C., a number of PHOTOGRAPHIC CAMERAS for Hand or Studio; also Lenses and Accessories by all Best Makers—Tools—Mechanical Models—Electrical Fittings and Apparatus—Fishing Rods and Tackle—and a large Quantity of valuable Miscellaneous Property.

On view day prior 2 to 5 and morning of Sale. Catalogues on application.

Curiosities.

MR. J. C. STEVENS'S NEXT SALE of CURIOS will take place on TUESDAY, April 11, at half-past 12 o'clock, at his Rooms, 38, King Street, Covent Garden, London, W.C., and will include Chinese and Japanese Porcelain, Carved Ivories, and Cloisonné Ware—interesting Specimens of Native Bead Work from South Africa—a fine Specimen Brank of the Sixteenth Century—Carved and Inlaid Furniture—Pictures—Prints—and Curios from all Parts.

On view day prior 10 to 5 and morning of Sale. Catalogues on application.

Valuable Law Books—a Collection of Ex-Libris—Handsome Oak and Mahogany Bookcases, &c.

MESSRS. HODGSON & CO. will SELL by AUCTION, at their Rooms, 115, Chancery Lane, W.C., on FRIDAY, April 7, at 1 o'clock, valuable LAW BOOKS, including a Set of the Law Reports to 1892, 240 vols.—a fine Set of the Law Times Reports, from 1870 to 1905, 69 vols. half-cloth—The Revised Reports, 71 vols. half-cloth—Encyclopædia of the Laws of England, 13 vols.—Campbell's Ruling Cases, 26 vols., &c.; to which is added a COLLECTION of EX-LIBRIS, including Examples of the Armorial, Jacobean, and Chippendale Styles, and a few scarce American Plates; also handsome OAK and MAHOGANY BOOKCASES—Mahogany Secretaire Bookcase, and other Office Furniture—Etchings and Engravings.

To be viewed and Catalogues had.

Valuable Miscellaneous Books, including the Library of a Barrister; also a Selection from that of a Gentleman.

MESSRS. HODGSON & CO. will SELL by AUCTION, at their Rooms, 115, Chancery Lane, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, April 12, and Two Following Days, valuable MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS, including Gould's Birds of Europe, 5 vols.—Whitaker's Richmondshire, 2 vols., and other Topographical and Genealogical Books, many relating to Yorkshire—Ackermann's Microcosm of London, Coloured Plates by Rowlandson, 3 vols.—Architectural Works by Hillings, Brandon, Bowman, Crowther, and others—Armstrong's Sir Henry Raeburn, and other Fine-Art Books—Books and Tracts relating to America—Villon Society's Translations, 22 vols.—Best Editions of the Historical Writings of Frodoe, Lecky, Mahon, &c.—Standard Works in General Literature—Publications of the Learned Societies, including Complete Sets of the Harleian Society (with the Register Section), the Index Library, Folk-lore Society, &c.

Catalogues are preparing.

Library of the late A. J. HIPKINS, Esq., F.S.A., the Eminent Authority on Music; a Portion of the Library of the late E. L. PAYNE, Esq.; a Portion of the Library of the late MACKENZIE WALCOTT, Esq., the well-known Antiquary; and other Properties.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their Galleries, 47, Leicester Square, W.C., EARLY in APRIL, the ABOVE PROPERTIES, comprising Rare and Standard Works on Natural History and in various Branches of Literature, and including Curtius's Botanical Magazine, complete to 1899, 125 vols.—Botanical Register, 33 vols.—De Candolle, Prodromus, 17 vols.—Loddiges' Botanical Cabinet, 14 vols.—Sowerby's English Botany, 22 vols.—English Flora, 6 vols., and others on similar Subjects—Horati Opera, 1483—Gay and Laop's Fables, Platea by Blake, &c.—Naples Museum, Cabinet Secret, Coloured Plates—Sheraton's Cabinet Maker, 1791, fine Copy—Works on Music and Musicians—Topographical and Archaeological Books—First Editions of Modern Authors—Autograph Letters—and many other interesting items.

MESSRS. CHRISTIE, MANSON & WOODS respectfully give Notice that they will hold the FOLLOWING SALES by AUCTION at their Great Rooms, King Street, St. James's Square, the Sales commencing at 1 o'clock precisely:—

On MONDAY, April 3, MODERN PICTURES and DRAWINGS.

On TUESDAY, April 4, EARLY ENGLISH ENGRAVINGS in COLOURS and OLD SPORTING PRINTS.

On WEDNESDAY, April 5, PORCELAIN, OBJECTS of ART, and DECORATIVE FURNITURE.

On THURSDAY, April 6, OLD ENGLISH SILVER PLATE of the late H. W. NELSON, Esq., the late Mrs. BEGLEY, and others.

On FRIDAY, April 7, PORCELAIN and OBJECTS of ART of the late HENRY WILLETT, Esq.

On SATURDAY, April 8, MODERN PICTURES and DRAWINGS.

On MONDAY, April 10, PICTURES by OLD MASTERS of the late HENRY WILLETT, Esq.

WILLIS'S ROOMS, KING STREET, ST. JAMES'S SQUARE, S.W. Without Reserve.—The Whole of the extensive and valuable Collection of Mr. HENRY LYON, of 15, King William Street, Strand, whose lease having expired, he is relinquishing business.

MESSRS. ROBINSON & FISHER are instructed to SELL, at their Rooms, as above, on TUESDAY, April 11, and Three Following Days, and TUESDAY, April 18, and Following Day, at 1 o'clock precisely each day, the WHOLE of the extensive and valuable COLLECTION, as above, comprising a large quantity of English and Continental Pottery and Porcelain—Books—Miniatures—Old Cut Glass—Metal Work—Nelson and other Relics—Battersea Enamel and Jewelled Boxes and Candlesticks—about 500 oz. of Old Chased Plate—Sheffield Plated Articles and Jewellery—a large Collection of Old Sporting Prints—Engravings in Mezzotint and Colours—Water-colour Drawings—Pictures on Glass—Pictures of the English and Dutch Schools—Decorative Furniture, comprising Chippendale, Sheraton, and Hepplewhite Chairs, Sheraton Card-tables and Secretaire Bookcases, a Flemish Cabinet, a Parquetierie Commode, an Ivory Davenport, &c.—Marble Bases—Old French and English Bracket and Mantel Clocks—a Collection of Elizabethan Wax Models—and a quantity of Decorative Property.

May be viewed the Saturday and Monday prior in each week, and Catalogues had.

FINE COLLECTION of ANTLER FURNITURE and TWO EMPIRE PIER GLASSES from the Hawkstone Museum, to be included in the SALE of ANTIQUE PROPERTY, all from Private Sources, to be held at the COUNTY MART, SHREWSBURY. Particulars in Catalogues on application.—WM. HALL, WATERIDGE & OWEN, Auctioneers, Shrewsbury.

MR. DOWELL will SELL by AUCTION, within his Rooms, No. 18, GEORGE STREET, EDINBURGH, on MONDAY, TUESDAY, WEDNESDAY, and THURSDAY, April 10, 11, 12, and 13, at 12 o'clock each day, the exceedingly choice and valuable LIBRARY which belonged to the late THOMAS DICKSON, Esq., LL.D., Curator of the Historical Department H.M. General Register House. The Library is rich in Historical, Bibliographical, Family History, and Topographical Literature in rare condition and tasteful Bindings.

Catalogues may be had on application.

Edinburgh, 18, George Street, March, 1905.

ANCIENT and MODERN COINS.—Collectors and Antiquarians are invited to apply to SPINK & SON, Limited, for Specimen Copy (gratis) of their NUMISMATIC CIRCULAR. The finest Greek, Roman, and English Coins on View and for Sale at Moderate Prices—Spink & Son, Limited, Experts, Valuers, and Cataloguers, 16, 17, and 18, Piccadilly, London, W. Established upwards of a Century.

NOW READY, with Illustrations, 2s. 6d. net; by post, 2s. 9d.

X RAYS: their Employment in Cancer and other Diseases.

By RICHARD J. COWEN, L.R.C.S.I. L.R.C.P.I., &c.
London: H. J. Glaisner, 57, Wigmore Street, W.

SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE

For APRIL.

Beautifully illustrated. 1s. net.

MADAME WADDINGTON'S RECOLLECTIONS. (Third Paper.) Illustrations from Photographs.

KITS and OUTFITS. By Richard Harding Davis.

The UNIVERSITY of VIRGINIA. By Thomas Nelson Page.

POLITICAL PROBLEMS of EUROPE. By F. A. Vanderlip. (Fourth Paper.) Paternalising Nationalism.

The EDGE of the WILDERNESS. By F. E. Schoonever.

The HOUSE of MIRTH. By Edith Wharton. Book I. Chaps. 8-10. Illustrated.

AND MANY SHORT STORIES BY WELL-KNOWN WRITERS.

London: Wm. Heinemann, 21, Bedford Street, W.C.

2s. 6d. 2s. 6d.

THE CONTEMPORARY REVIEW

For APRIL,

NOW READY, contains:—

THE BANKRUPTCY of HIGHER CRITICISM.

By Dr. EMIL REICH.

THE NEW YORK CHILDREN'S COURT.

By ERNEST K. COULTER, Deputy Clerk of the Court.

THE RECONSTRUCTION of BELIEF.

By W. H. MALLOCK.

The AGRICULTURAL PROSPERITY of GERMANY. By O. Eltzbacher.

The PARALYSIS of RUSSIAN GOVERNMENT. By Dr. E. J. Dillon.

SCIENTIFIC LOCAL WEATHER FORECASTS. By the Hon. Rollo Russell.

The GEOLOGY of SOCIETY. By Mrs. Mary Higgs.

LIBERAL CHURCHMEN and "The REPROACH of CHRIST." By the Rev. A. W. Hutton.

The FEEDING of SCHOOL CHILDREN and the COOKERY CLASSES. By Mrs. Mary A. Davies.

The RAILWAYS of GERMANY and ENGLAND. By W. M. Acworth.

PARLIAMENTARY REPORTING: a Reply. By A. P. Nicholson.

The FUTURE of the PEOPLES in HUNGARY. By D. Draghicesco, Professor of the University of Buda-Pest.

London: Horace Marshall &amp; Son.

APRIL NUMBER NOW READY.

2s. 6d. net. Subscriptions 10s. per annum, post free.

THE HIBBERT JOURNAL

A Quarterly Review of Religion, Theology, and Philosophy.

The EDUCATION of a MINISTER of GOD. The Right Rev. W. Boyd Carpenter, D.D., Bishop of Ripon.

MR. BALFOUR as SOPHIST. Prof. Henry Jones, M.A. LL.D., Professor of Moral Philosophy, Glasgow.

The CRUX of THEISM. W. H. Mallock.

The LORD is a MAN of WAR. Rev. F. W. Orde-Ward, B.A.

CHRISTIAN, GREEK, or GOTH? H. W. Garrod, Fellow of Merton College, Oxford.

The RESURRECTION of OUR LORD and RECENT CRITICISM. Rev. C. F. Nolloth.

The KNOWLEDGE of GOOD. Prof. W. R. Sorley.

The TESTAMENTS of the TWELVE PATRIARCHS. Prof. C. H. Charles.

The HISTORICAL JESUS and the CHRIST of EXPERIENCE. Romanus.

RELIGION of ROME, CLASSICAL and CHRISTIAN. M. A. B. Tucker.

DISCUSSIONS, a number of SIGNED REVIEWS, and a BIBLIOGRAPHY of RECENT LITERATURE.

Williams &amp; Norgate, 14, Henrietta Street, Covent Garden, London.

THE

INDEPENDENT REVIEW.

APRIL Price 2s. 6d. net.

NOTES on CURRENT EVENTS.

A LIBERAL ADMINISTRATION. G. W. E. Russell.

The IRISH NATIONAL ASSEMBLY. Michael Davitt.

ON the TIGRIS. Victoria Buxton.

The TRAGEDIES of VOLTAIRE. G. L. Strachey.

The APPEAL to the FIRST SIX CENTURIES. Rev. J. H. Skrine.

STANZAS to TOLSTOY. Herbert Trench.

The MIDDLE MARCHES. G. M. Trevelyan.

FISCAL POLICY and BRITISH SHIPPING. Charles Booth, Jun.

CARDAN. E. M. Forster.

'DE PROFUNDIS.' O. Lowes Dickinson.

OTHER REVIEWS.

T. Fisher Unwin, London.

THE APPEAL COURT and ARCHITECTS'

DRAWINGS; The New Scheme of Architectural Education; Canterbury Cathedral—the Tower from the South-West; Old Buildings in Famagusta, Cyprus; The New Stock Exchange, Johannesburg; Sketch Plans and Working Drawings (Architectural Association); The Automobile Exhibition; Types of Concrete Steel Structures (Student's Column), &amp;c.—See the BUILDER of April 1 (4d., by post 4½d.). Through any Newspaper, or direct from the Publisher of the BUILDER, Catherine Street, London, W.C.

ABSTRACTS of the WILLS in REGISTER

SOAME, 1630, in the PROBATE COURT of CANTEBURY. This Volume of over 600 Pages, now ready, contains concise but exhaustive Abstracts of every Will in the two volumes known as Register Soame, containing 1366 Wills, with 40,000 References to Persons, and 10,000 to Places, all thoroughly indexed. The volume will be delivered at 6d. net, or 23s. (carriage extra). All correspondence relative to the work may be addressed to the Editor, J. HENRY LEE, 14, Chifford's Inn, London, E.C. Subscriptions should be sent to N. C. NASH, Treasurer, New England Historic Genealogical Society, Somerset Street, Boston, Mass., U.S.A.

BLACKWOOD

FOR APRIL

CONTAINS

Who and Where are the Unemployed?

The Kingdom of Bath.

By J. H. LOBBAN.

The German General Staff on Lord Roberts' Campaign.

"April Fool."

By PHILIPPA TRENT.

The Mystics.

By the AUTHOR of 'JOHN CHILCOTE, M.P.'

Music—and Muffins.

(On the Passing of St. James's Hall.)

By J. K.

Richard Hartley, Prospector.

By DOUGLAS BLACKBURN.

The Scottish Religious Revolution.

(History versus Tradition.)

By ANDREW LANG.

The Waterways of the Sudan.

From the Atbara to Tuti.

By Dr. ANDREW BALFOUR, Khartoum.

Musings Without Method.

A Study of the Russo-Japanese War.—IV.

By CHASSEUR.

The Fear of Russia and the Defence of India.

WILLIAM BLACKWOOD & SONS,
Edinburgh and London.

THE NINETEENTH CENTURY and AFTER.

APRIL.

DEMOCRACY and REACTION. (Concluded.) By the Right Hon. John Morley, M.P.

MUSICAL HOURS. By Her Majesty the Queen of Roumania (Carmen Sylva).

The HEART of the MIKADO. By Baron Suyematsu.

JAPAN and the MAHOMETAN WORLD. By Prof. A. Vambéry.

THIBET and the INDIA OFFICE: a "Blazing Indiscretion." By Ian Malcolm, M.P.

The COMMEMORATION of SHAKESPEARE. By Sidney Lee.

The PUBLIC as SEEN from the STAGE. By Gertrude Kingston.

BRITISH SHIPPING and FISCAL REFORM. By Evelyn Cecil, M.P.

The LUMINISTS. By Arthur Nicholson.

The DEFENCE of the GRAIN ROUTE. By P. T. McGrath.

An ARTIST'S LOVE STORY. By Lady Priestley.

CHARITY a HUNDRED YEARS AGO. By the Countess of Jersey.

The ART of CLASSICAL QUOTATION. By the Right Rev. Bishop Welldon.

A CENTURY of INTERNATIONAL ARBITRATIONS. By Sir John Macdonell, C.B. LL.D., Associate of the Institut de Droit International.

London: Spottiswoode &amp; Co., Ltd., 5, New Street Square, and 54, Gracechurch Street, E.C.

ANALOGY BETWEEN MUSIC and LIFE.—

ONE GUINEA PRIZE for the best, Original or Quoted. Send 3d. for APRIL Number of MUSICAL HERALD. Office, 24, Berners Street, London, W.

THE BOOK OF THE SEASON.

THE CONFLICT of TRUTH.

By F. HUGH CAPRON,
B.A. F.L.S. F.R.A.S. F.R.G.S.

FOURTH EDITION.

10s. 6d. net.

Extracts from the British Press.

"I am enthralled by the magnificence of the reasoning and the striking freshness of the treatment."—Dr. GEORGE MATHESON, D.D. LL.D. F.R.S.E.

"It deserves and will reward careful perusal."—Standard.

Extracts from the American Press.

"It ought to sell by the tens of thousands."—Judge HIRAM L. SIBLER in the Western Christian Advocate.

"A mind-enlarging book."—Kpworth Herald (Chicago).

Hodder &amp; Stoughton, 27, Paternoster Row, E.C.

OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS.

The OXFORD ENGLISH DIC-

TIONARY. A New English Dictionary on Historical Principles. Founded mainly on the Materials collected by the Philological Society. Edited by Dr. JAMES A. H. MURRAY. Single Section, RRE to REIGN, prepared by Mr. W. A. CRAIGIE. 2s. 6d.

CAIN ADAMNAIN. An Old Irish

Treatise on the Law of Adamnan. Edited and Translated by KUNO MEYER, Ph.D. ("Anecdota Oxoniensia," Mediaeval and Modern Series, Part XII.) Crown 4to, paper covers, 5s.

SELECT DOCUMENTS ILLUS-

TRATIVE of the HISTORY of the FRENCH REVOLUTION. (The Constituent Assembly.) Edited by L. G. WICKHAM LEGG, M.A. 2 vols. crown 8vo, cloth, 12s. net.

CONCORDANCE to the ITALIAN

PROSE WORKS and CANZONIERE of DANTE. Prepared by Members of the Dante Society, Cambridge, Massachusetts, and Edited by E. S. SHELDON and A. C. WHITE. Royal 8vo, cloth, subscription price 28s. net, to be raised on publication to 36s. net.

[Immediately.]

The VETUS CLUNIACENSIS of

POGGIO. Being a Contribution to the Textual Criticism of Cicero Pro Sex. Roscio, Pro Cluentio, Pro Murena, Pro Caelio, and Pro Milone. By A. C. CLARK, M.A. ("Anecdota Oxoniensia," Classical Series, Part X.) With 2 Facsimiles. Crown 4to, paper covers, 8s. 6d.

The CHURCH'S TASK UNDER the ROMAN EMPIRE. By the Rev. C. BIGG, D.D. 8vo, cloth, 5s. net.

The Subjects dealt with include Education, Religion, and Moral and Social Conditions.

The MASAI: their Language and

Folk-lore. By A. C. HOLLIS. With Introduction by Sir CHARLES ELIOT, many Illustrations, and a Map. 8vo, cloth, 14s. net.

ALSO PUBLISHED BY HENRY FROWDE,

CHAUCER. Facsimile Reproduction

of the First Folio, 1532. Edited, with Introduction, by the Rev. Prof. SKEAT, Litt.D.

The Edition is limited to 1,000 Copies, of which the greater number have now been subscribed for. Prices, 5l. 5s. net, bound in antique boards, and 6l. 6s. net in rough calf. Any other style of binding can be supplied to order.

NOTES and QUERIES.—"A boon to the scholar, such as he does not receive often in a lifetime.....Language of eulogy fails us to deal with so noble accomplishment."

GUARDIAN.—"One of the noblest reprints of the century."

SPECTATOR.—"Among the various facsimile reproductions which have lately been given to the world there is not one more beautiful and interesting than this."

LECTURES on the HISTORIANS

of BOHEMIA. By the Count LÜTZOW. The Ilchester Lectures for 1904. Crown 8vo, buckram, 5s. net.

SCOTSMAN.—"There is so little known in this country of true Bohemian history, except as it is reflected through books made in Germany, that the work would be highly prized even were it less fresh, less original, less first-hand than it is."

Uniform with the above.

LECTURES on SLAVONIC LAW.

Being the Ilchester Lectures for 1900. By FEODOR SIGEL. 5s. net.

London: HENRY FROWDE, Oxford University Press Warehouse, Amen Corner, E.C.

MACMILLAN & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

SECOND EDITION NOW READY. SHAKESPEAREAN TRAGEDY:

Lectures on Hamlet, Othello, King Lear, and Macbeth. By Prof. A. C. BRADLEY, LL.D. Litt.D. 8vo, 10s. net.

AN ANGLER'S HOURS.

By H. T. SHERINGHAM, Angling Editor of the Field. Extra crown 8vo, 6s. net.

DIARY & LETTERS OF MADAME D'ARBLAY

(1778-1840). As Edited by her Niece, CHARLOTTE BARRETT. With Preface and Notes by AUSTIN DOBSON. With Photogravure Portraits and other Sketches. In 6 vols. Vol. I., 1778 to June, 1781. Vol. II., 1781-86. Vol. III., August, 1786, to June, 1788. Vol. IV., July, 1788, to July, 1791. 8vo, 10s. 6d. net each.

TWELVE ENGLISH STATESMEN. CONCLUDING VOLUME.

CHATHAM.

By FREDERIC HARRISON. Crown 8vo, 2s. 6d.

ENGLISH MEN OF LETTERS.—New Series.

SYDNEY SMITH.

By GEORGE W. E. RUSSELL. Crown 8vo, gilt top, flat back, 2s. net.

SECOND EDITION JUST PUBLISHED.

ROMAN SOCIETY,

From Nero to Marcus Aurelius.

By Prof. SAMUEL DILL, M.A. Litt.D. LL.D. 8vo, 15s. net.

CLASSICAL REVIEW.—"The work is as thorough and solid as readers would expect who know the companion volume. . . . We close the volume with the sense that we have been listening to a man of great learning, but equal power and judgment."

MACMILLAN'S GUIDE-BOOKS. THE EASTERN MEDITERRANEAN,

Including GREECE and the GREEK ISLANDS, CONSTANTINOPLE, SMYRNA, EPHEBUS, &c. Second Edition. With 27 Maps and Plans. 9s. net.

ITALY AND SICILY.

With 19 Maps and 33 Plans. Fifth Edition. 10s. net.

THE LOGIC OF HUMAN CHARACTER.

By CHARLES J. WHITBY, B.A. M.D. Cantab. Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d. net.

NEW AND CHEAPER EDITION.

CHRISTIAN CHARACTER.

Being some Lectures on the Elements of Christian Ethics. By J. R. ILLINGWORTH, M.A. D.D., Author of 'Personality, Human and Divine,' 'Reason and Revelation,' &c. Crown 8vo, 6s.

ELECTROMAGNETIC THEORY OF LIGHT.

By CHARLES EMERSON CURRY, Ph.D. Part I. 8vo, 12s. net.

MACMILLAN'S NEW NOVELS.

Crown 8vo, gilt tops, 6s. each.

FOND ADVENTURES.

Tales of the Youth of the World.

By MAURICE HEWLETT.

THE RED CRAVAT.

BY

ALFRED TRESIDDER SHEPPARD

VANITY FAIR.—"A striking story in a thoroughly original and delightful setting."

BLACK and WHITE.—"A delight to read."

THE BELL IN THE FOG, and other Stories.
By GERTRUDE ATHERTON.

MACMILLAN & CO., LIMITED, London.

MESSRS. HURST & BLACKETT
beg to announce that, owing to the continued demand for Mr. PERCEVAL LONDON'S great work on Tibet, the First Impression is nearly exhausted. A Second Impression is now being prepared.

LHASA.

By PERCEVAL LONDON, Special Correspondent of the Times. With an Introduction by Col. Sir FRANCIS YOUNG-HUSBAND, K.C.I.E. In 2 vols. royal 8vo, beautifully illustrated, 2l. 2s. net.

An Illustrated Prospectus, with Extracts from Reviews, sent free on application.

NEW AND IMPORTANT WORK.

NOW IN THE PRESS, in 1 vol. crown 8vo, with Illustrations, 5s.

THE RUSSIAN NAVY IN THE PRESENT WAR.

By Capt. N. KLADO,
Of the Imperial Russian Navy.

NOW IN GREAT DEMAND.

In 1 vol. medium 8vo, with over 250 Illustrations, 18s. net.

ANTARCTICA.

Two Years amongst the Ice of the South Pole.

By Dr. OTTO NORDENSKJÖLD.

"The authors have as good a story to tell as any polar explorer since Nansen, and they have told it with spirit and enthusiasm."—Times.

MR. DOWNEY'S BOOK IS THE SUCCESS OF THE SEASON.

In 1 vol. large crown 8vo, with 16 Portrait Sketches, 6s. net.

TWENTY YEARS AGO.

A Book of Anecdote.

By EDMUND DOWNEY,
Author of 'Through Green Glasses.'

"The anecdotes are all fresh goods, and in the humour of them there is an unmistakable taste of reality which adds immensely to the flavour."—St. James's Gazette.

"Mr. Downey has an ample collection of good stories, and knows how to tell them well."—World.

NEW NOVEL BY MADAME ALBANESI.

READY IN APRIL, in 1 vol. 6s.

MARIAN SAX.

By Madame ALBANESI,
Author of 'Capricious Caroline,' 'Susannah and One Elder,' &c.

In 1 vol. crown 8vo, 6s.

A GENDARME OF THE KING.

Being the Experiences of the Laird of Lindourie with the Great Frederick in the Seven Years' War.

By PHILIP L. STEVENSON.

"Narrated with plenty of movement and with a graphic picture of Frederick himself."—Times.
"Major Stevenson has managed to conjure up the real spirit of life in Frederick's Courts and camps."—Pall Mall Gazette.

A BOOK OF GREAT INTEREST ON CHILD LIFE AND LABOUR IN OUR BIG CITIES.

In 1 vol. large crown 8vo, with Illustrations, 6s.

The CHILD SLAVES OF BRITAIN.

By ROBERT SHERRARD, Author of 'The White Slaves of England,' &c.

NEW EDITION, REVISED AND ENLARGED.

In 1 vol. demy 8vo, illustrated with numerous Reproductions from Photographs and Drawings, 12s. net.

ILLUSTRATED HORSEBREAK-
ING. By Capt. M. H. HAYES, Author of 'Points of the Horse,' 'Veterinary Notes,' &c.

London: HURST & BLACKETT, LIMITED,
182, High Holborn, W.C.

MR. MURRAY'S NEW BOOKS.

NOW READY, with 200 Illustrations from special Photographs and Maps. Demy 8vo, 25s. net.

LHASA AND ITS MYSTERIES.

A Record of the Expedition, 1903-4.

By L. A. WADDELL, LL.D. C.B. C.I.E.,
Lieut.-Col. Indian Medical Service.

MR. WARD'S NEW WORK ON THE NILE VALLEY.

OUR SUDAN.

By JOHN WARD, F.S.A., Author of 'The Sacred Beetle,' 'Greek Coins and their Parent Cities.' Dedicated by request to LORD KITCHENER of KHARTOUM. Crown 4to, 400 pp., 720 Illustrations, 21s. net. Including Maps and many Portraits.

NOW READY, Demy 8vo, 8s. net.

MAKERS OF MODERN HISTORY:

NAPOLEON III., CAVOUR, BISMARCK. By the Hon. EDWARD CADOGAN.

A CHEAP EDITION, paper covers, 1s. net.

IRELAND IN THE NEW CENTURY.

By the Right Hon. Sir HORACE PLUNKETT, K.C.V.O. F.R.S., Vice-President of the Department of Agriculture and Technical Instruction for Ireland; Member of His Majesty's Privy Council in Ireland. Large crown 8vo. [Ready next week.]

THE GEORGICS OF VIRGIL.

Translated into English Verse by LORD BURGHCLERE. Fcap. 4to, 10s. 6d. net.

"We confess that when we compare Dryden and Lord Burghclere side by side we cannot say that the advantage is always with the former."—Athenæum.

"Lord Burghclere's work will excite the constant envy and admiration of all readers of taste."—Spectator.

"He expresses the exact meaning in the words best calculated to produce poetry's emotional effect. It is impossible to give higher praise to a translation than this."—Westminster Gazette.

"We hardly know whether the following lines could be better done."—Standard. "The work is fine."—Scotsman.

"Most admirably are the sustained power and melodious utterance of the great master poet reflected in our Saxon speech."—Leeds Mercury.

NOW READY, A NEW 6s. NOVEL.

A QUIXOTIC WOMAN.

By ISOBEL FITZROY.

NOW READY.

THE MONTHLY REVIEW.

Edited by CHARLES HANBURY WILLIAMS.
APRIL, 1905. 2s. 6d. net.

IN the CITY. John Davidson.

The PSYCHOLOGY of the RUSSIAN NATION. A. S. Rappoport.

AVE ATQUE VALE, HONESTATES. J. F. W. Howley.

BEETHOVEN. Arthur Symonds.

GREAT BRITAIN and GERMANY. J. L. Bashford.

POPULAR SONGS of OLD CANADA. George Stewart.

The LATER BOURBONS. G. W. P.

ABOUT "THINKING IMPERIALLY." Moreton Frewen.

QUAINT MEMORIES. Emma Hessey.

SAINT-BEUVE. Ferdinand Brunetière.

A SIDE-LIGHT on INDIA: The BYLE. E. H. Aitken.

BEAUJEU. Chaps. 12-15. H. C. Bailey.

JOHN MURRAY, Albemarle Street, W.

SATURDAY, APRIL 1, 1905.

CONTENTS.

|  | PAGE    |
|--|---------|
| MR. GOSSE ON COVENTRY PATMORE ... ..   | 389     |
| THE ENGLISH CHURCH UNDER ELIZABETH AND JAMES I. ... ..   | 391     |
| THE COLLECTED WORKS OF HAZLITT ... ..  | 391     |
| SOME AMERICAN MEMOIRS ... ..   | 393     |
| MR. FREDERIC HARRISON ON CHATHAM ... ..  | 394     |
| NEW NOVELS (Shining Ferry; The Dryad; Amanda of the Mill; The Vicissitudes of Evangeline; The One who Saw; Lord Eversleigh's Sins; La Lueur sur la Cime) ... ..  | 394-396 |
| BOOKS ON JAPAN ... ..  | 396     |
| OUR LIBRARY TABLE (The Return of Sherlock Holmes; De Profundis; A French War Correspondent with the Japanese; The Kaiser as He Is; The Real New York; Industrial Conciliation and Arbitration; Hymns from the Greek Office Books; The English Catalogue of Books; Reprints) ... .. | 397-398 |
| LIST OF NEW BOOKS ... ..   | 398     |
| NOTES FROM CAMBRIDGE; JULES VERNE; A LYKE-WAKE DIRGE; CHARLES II. AND THE TREATY OF DOVER; SALE ... ..   | 399-401 |
| LITERARY GOSSIP ... ..   | 401     |
| SCIENCE—HOLDICH ON INDIA; THE RAT; PROF. J. YOUNG'S ESSAYS; SMALL DESTRUCTORS; THE BOOK OF THE ROSE; REPRINTS; NATUR UND ARBEIT; EARTHQUAKES; ANTHROPOLOGICAL NOTES; THE STRUCTURE OF THE ATOM; THE N RAYS; SOCIETIES; MEETINGS NEXT WEEK; GOSSIP ... ..                           | 402-406 |
| FINE ARTS—AUGUSTE RODIN; THE WHITECHAPEL ART GALLERY; SARGENTS AT THE CARFAX GALLERY; MR. JAMES'S WATER-COLOURS; THE TRUE PORTRAITURE OF MARY, QUEEN OF SCOTS; SALES; GOSSIP ... ..  | 407-409 |
| MUSIC—GOSSIP; PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK ... ..  | 410     |
| DRAMA—THE TROADES IN ENGLISH VERSE; A MAN'S SHADOW; LADY BEN; A MAN'S LOVE; GOSSIP ... ..  | 410-412 |

LITERATURE

Coventry Patmore. By Edmund Gosse. "Literary Lives Series." (Hodder & Stoughton.)

SINCE Coventry Patmore's death in 1896 but one biographical account of him has appeared: the large 'Life' in two volumes by Mr. Basil Champneys. That, as Mr. Gosse remarks, cannot be superseded as a comprehensive storehouse of facts and materials. But the very width of the net which Mr. Champneys cast is against his book as a popular and compendious life. It is virtually a biography not of Patmore alone, but, in a subordinate and partial degree, of his first wife and certain of his children. It includes not only a wide selection from his letters, but also a collection—amounting to a fair bulk—of his unpublished fragments in verse and prose; and besides all these, a close and detailed study of his religious philosophy. To the student of Patmore it is invaluable and indispensable, for he will find in it nothing neglected which can throw light on the poet and his writings. But its very completeness and conscientiousness as a Patmore thesaurus render it, to the general reader who has not the zeal of a special cult, diffuse and unwieldy. He wants a clear-cut and attractive view of the poet's career and its literary results, presenting essentials and putting aside merely collateral issues. This is the precise need which Mr. Gosse has supplied, and very well supplied. His volume is not without its limitations. But it is, on the whole, able, at times brilliant; its personal knowledge and enthusiasm are balanced by an acute perception of the individualizing flaws, the roughnesses which give burr (as it were) and richness to character. It is written with a trained sense of symmetry, with an alert liveliness and interest. Among Mr. Gosse's faults dulness has no place. His book shows discriminating taste; indeed, one of the points he claims for it is that it supplements Mr. Champneys's 'Life' on the critical side, which could scarcely be adequately handled "in a family memoir." Within its chosen range it achieves clearness and completion.

This was the more possible, under the limits imposed by the scheme and the series to which the book belongs, because Patmore's life presents little for record, apart from his literary work. It is an entirely quiet and domestic life. The Bohemianism of the literary career exists now only in name, as a pretext for clubs and good-fellowship; but even from such factitious and recherché Bohemianism his unnoted days were sequestered. Born in 1823, he was the son of a father, Peter George Patmore, with no very savoury reputation among his contemporaries, and a littérateur of no particular quality. Living at Woodford in Essex, the small Coventry was over-indulged and applauded by father and grandmother (according to him a strong-minded and intellectual woman), while he was snubbed by a repellent and unsympathetic mother. He is an exception to the old axiom that men of genius derive chiefly from their mothers. That injudicious paternal and grandmotherly encouragement made him a prig, according to Mr. Gosse: only an exceptional strength of character could have averted the permanent mischief done to Leigh Hunt by like premature applause. Yet his father did him the service of cultivating that fastidious and aristocratic taste which distinguished his mature years, by marking the best passages in the classics he placed in the boy's hands. By seventeen or thereabouts he had written the first draft of his later-published poems, 'The River' and 'The Woodman's Daughter'; and before that he had differentiated himself from most young poets by enthusiastic study of science (chiefly chemistry) and mathematics. In the latter he seems to have attained much and real advancement. His after-years were bitterly scornful of science; but both studies point to an inherent quality of his mind, which possessed the dry intellect to a degree not usual among poets. For the rest, he was brought up or grew up an agnostic until his eleventh year, when a devotional book suggested "what an exceedingly fine thing it would be if there were a God." In his case, even more than in Ruskin's, personal idiosyncrasy turned its back on boyish training concerning matters of religion. For religion was to be one of his chief preoccupations. The other—love—manifested itself at seventeen in a passion for Mrs. Gore's eighteen-year-old daughter at Paris, where he was put to school. By his own account, it had shown itself yet earlier. But, despite the private publication of the two poems already mentioned, after his return from Paris, and a very characteristic glimpse of Leigh Hunt, his real introduction to life and letters began with the publication of a volume of 'Poems' in 1844. Mr. Gosse truly observes that the influence most notable in this volume, apart from the genuine if immature personal quality, is (very curiously) that of Mrs. Browning. It was virulently assailed by Blackwood (of course), but praised by Leigh Hunt, and privately by Bulwer Lytton. Above all, it introduced him to the chief poets of the day; and his friendship with Tennyson was his main solace under the poverty which simultaneously fell upon him. His father came to grief, fled to the Continent, and left him without support. Another poet, Monckton Milnes, at last came to his practical aid, by securing for him an Assistant Librarianship in the British Museum.

It was his sole period of struggle. Thereafter, he almost ceases to have an external history. He married thrice, thrice changed his residence, and died. There is scarce more to chronicle. But the marriage to his first wife, Emily Augusta Andrews, daughter of a Congregational minister, whom he met and wedded after his appointment to the British Museum, is of cardinal importance in his spiritual history. For it was she who recalled him to poetry, from which he had receded, and inspired him with the design of a poem in praise of nuptial love—the poem which became 'The Angel in the House.' Another influence tending in the same direction, and belonging to the same period, was his close intimacy with Rossetti and the members of the P.R.B. Despite his small literary performance, they looked up to him with something of the admiration he bestowed on Tennyson; and he contributed to the now-famous Germ. The first result of the new influences was the 'Tamerton Church Tower' volume of 1853, containing fragments also of 'The Angel.' In 1854 appeared the first instalments of 'The Angel in the House'; more followed in 1856; in 1858 a revised and unified edition of the whole poem was put forth; and in succeeding years came out the sequel to 'The Angel,' now included under the general title of 'The Victories of Love.' Except for a review in our own columns 'The Angel' was not badly received; and, privately, it was warmly praised by Tennyson, Carlyle, Ruskin, Leigh Hunt, and the Brownings—Hunt prophesying that it would be the most popular poem of its day. He was right. From the time when it and its sequel were united in the collective two-volume edition of Patmore's poems in 1863, it sprang into a popularity which has steadily increased ever since. A quarter of a million copies had been sold at his death. Yet, by a perverse fate, its popular acceptance was coincident with a reaction of critical contempt. Thenceforward, till well on in the eighties, the name of Patmore was scarcely breathed among the arbiters of literary fame; there was even a very general impression that this forgotten minor poet was dead.

'Tamerton Church Tower' had been a great advance on the earlier poems; and in its Pre-Raphaelite descriptive detail clearly foreshadowed the characteristic style of the succeeding poem. 'The Angel in the House' was entirely mature, and exhibits the perfection of the poet's first manner. Assuredly it does not merit the critical neglect which so long kept it obscure. Misled by the amatory and domestic subject, critics have failed to realize the lofty seriousness of its aim—which is nothing less than to vindicate the dignity of married love as a symbol and prophecy of the love between Christ and the soul.

Patmore, following Pre-Raphaelite principles, resolved to relate a simple story of modern domestic courtship and marriage, shrinking from no realism of detail. The sincerity of passion would ennoble all. The period in which he wrote has unfortunately been against him. The peculiar dowdiness of early Victorian middle-class life, caught with photographic and often unconscious fidelity, hangs about the narrative like stale tobacco-smoke. A future generation, which has not our own meanness of associations with that period, may perhaps find nothing to repel it—may even wonder at our repulsion. But meanwhile it exists. We cannot quite follow Mr. Gosse in considering the narrative portion altogether negligible. That would be to admit the poem a failure as a poem. Despite its disadvantages, it is deftly told, and full of ardent poetry. But we entirely agree with him that the finest parts of 'The Angel' are the preludes and epilogues which enclose, as in a corolla, the narrative sections. This Patmore admitted, giving as the reason that they were "pure lyricism." They are, in fact, lyrics of the whitest fervour, and exquisitely finished, with a singular moral and mystical elevation. The language reveals the emotion with an often miraculous intimacy, never strained or violent. Patmore claimed that the mysticism which flames visibly in 'The Unknown Eros' was already implicit in 'The Angel'; and of the preludes and epilogues this is true. Paradox and antithesis play over them like forked lightning. Other of them, again, are memorable aphorisms and epigrams. More pregnant quotations might be made from them than from any writer since Pope. For calling the attention of readers to this portion of 'The Angel,' which is just the portion most readers neglect, Mr. Gosse deserves thanks. His entire exposition of this poem is an admirable and acute piece of work. Our one objection is to the statement, afterwards more definitely made, that the symbolic raptures of the poem are illusive, and the outcome of purely physical ardour. There are many, undoubtedly, to whom—no less than to Patmore himself—that symbolic fervour is a true and vitally significant thing, a veritable spiritual prophecy. To them, as to him, the apparent irrationalities of the lover are explained as types and foreshadowings of divine realities.

Patmore's second and crowning period was ushered in by his first wife's death in 1862, and his embracing of Catholicism after a period of agonizing grief and struggle. It is characteristic that, as 'The Angel' resulted from the union with Emily Andrews, so this decisive change had a prelude in his encounter in Rome with the Catholic lady who soon after became his second wife, Marianne Caroline Byles. The influence of woman marked each fresh epoch in his life. She brought him means which thenceforth placed him beyond the necessity for struggle, and allowed him to lead a life of retired contemplation, diversified only by the management of the estate he bought at Heron's Ghyll in Sussex. Later he removed to Hastings, and during the last few years of his life to Lymington, opposite the Isle of Wight.

The gradual outcome of his middle years was the series of odes now collected under the title of 'The Unknown Eros.' The first nine, privately printed, were coldly received by his friends, and burnt in a fit of chagrin. But a few copies were kept by his daughters, and the greater part of the odes were published in 1877. Ignored at first, they very slowly made their way, and the new reputation which dawned on him as the eighties drew to a close was mainly based on these odes of 'The Unknown Eros,' completed and afterwards issued in a single separate volume. He lived to be aware that his time of recognition was at length coming; and death, which he had long expected, arrived at last suddenly from angina pectoris.

'The Unknown Eros' is to Coventry Patmore what 'Paradise Lost' was to Milton. It is not only the crown of his work; it reveals also an altogether new altitude of power, not indicated by his previous work. Ardour, exquisiteness, elevated intensity of emotion, tenderness, minute finish, and intimate precision of diction he had shown in 'The Angel.' But in these 'Odes' he put forth a power, a breadth of handling, an amplitude of wing, which are not only unlike but seemingly incompatible with the qualities of that earlier poem. It is as though a Pre-Raphaelite should begin suddenly to paint like Rembrandt. The largeness and majesty of the 'Odes' are at times Miltonic. Yet the intimate justice of minute expression is retained where it is fitting, and singularly wedded with the ampler manner, so as to form one homogeneous style. This union of almost contradictory qualities is among the most striking features of the execution. Single lines, again, have a more than Wordsworthian penetration of feeling, such as

More transient than delight, and more divine.

The occasional descriptive touches (fullest in the 'Amelia') have a marvellous breadth and vividness. For distilled and concentrated quality of emotion certain of the 'Odes' stand apart in lyric poetry. But over and above these various and varying characteristics is the profound and grave rapture which informs all the finest of them. Their pathos is piercing and sparing, or it had not been tolerable. Their sweetness is no less sparing, and no less keen. The exaltation of the greatest 'Odes' is astonishing, yet unfaltering, and without sense of effort.

Their mystic character, in which earth, heaven, and man maintain a continual interplay of reflex symbolism, answering each other like harp to harp, makes against popularity. The aim of Patmore was to do for divine what 'The Angel' had done for human love. But he carried out his scheme only in a fragmentary, or rather intermittent fashion. The chief flaw of 'The Unknown Eros,' as Mr. Gosse emphasizes, is the handful of political odes. We may differ from him as to the hopeless falsity of Patmore's political prophecies. But that is immaterial. The point is that these 'Odes,' with some amount of exception, forfeit the dignity which marks the rest. They are violent, at times almost to outrageousness.

From Mr. Gosse we dissent also concerning the metre, which appears to us majestic, flexible, and beautiful in a high degree, answering the feeling like the pulses of the blood. Certainly based on 'Samson Agonistes' and other models, it is yet in large measure original, and to us appears radically different from the Cowleian "Pindarics" with which Mr. Gosse compares it.

Mr. Gosse is nowhere more brilliant and attractive than in his personal sketch of the poet. For this species of work he has a peculiar aptitude. In Patmore he had an excellent subject, for no man was more original or less like his supposed personality. Mr. Gosse does not shrink from the less pleasing features of his model, and gives us something very different from the colourless abstractions usual in contemporary biography. 'The Angel' determines all conceptions of the poet, who is imagined as a mild and amiable amorist. The reality was a gaunt giant, with drooping lids over eyes like the narrow gleam of a scimitar-edge, a masterful personality, and a grim vein of sardonic humour. The softer qualities deducible from his poetry were not on the surface. Mr. Gosse draws him vividly,

"sailing along the Parade at Hastings, his hands deep in the pockets of his short black velvet jacket, his grey curls escaping from under a broad, soft wide-awake hat,.....the long, thin neck thrust out, the angularity of the limbs emphasized in every rapid, inelegant movement," no less than in the crackle and cough of his laughter, and the singular originality and fascination of his intimate talk. Yet sometimes we doubt whether he does not exaggerate a point. He accuses Patmore himself of exaggeration (quite truly), and tells a story of how the poet said, in company, that by the side of a certain living writer "Herrick was nothing but a brilliant insect"! We can hardly mistake the writer intended, for in a published essay Patmore has used this very phrase. And what he there says of the writer whom he criticizes is that, intellectually, Herrick was by comparison "a splendid insect," yet none the less a greater poet. One cannot but question whether the qualification may not have escaped in Mr. Gosse's recollection of the conversation; and the qualification makes just the difference between exaggeration and sanity. It is in this personal chapter and that on the poet's literary position and aims that we find most to challenge. That, for example, Patmore did not recognize his own lyric genius, but constantly desired to excel in "epic, gnomie, and didactic poetry," is a statement for which Mr. Gosse may have warrant, but he shows none in this book, and we find it a hard saying. In view of his lack of personal sympathy with the poet's religious beliefs and ideas, he attains a remarkable measure of perception; yet the lack of sympathetic understanding now and again makes itself felt. But these are occasional limitations in an able and welcome aid to the appreciation of a poet even now far from general appreciation—a poet whose greater qualities, in his books as in life, yield themselves only to intimacy.

A History of the English Church in the Reigns of Elizabeth and James I. By W. H. Frere. (Macmillan & Co.)

MR. FRERE possesses one of the main qualifications for an ecclesiastical historian, as understood by men like the late Canons Robertson and Perry. He is persistently, rigidly, and conscientiously dry. His writing is never redeemed by charm from its pedestrian accuracy. His outlook is purely and narrowly ecclesiastical. There is no period richer in imaginative and pictorial interest than that of the reign of Elizabeth, none which is capable of brighter treatment, as the works of Creighton and Prof. Maitland abundantly illustrate. Yet of all this Mr. Frere will have nothing. Dreary as are the Vestiarian and the Marprelate controversies, they become drearier in this narrative, which, strangely enough, ignores the admirable chapter of Dr. Maitland in the "Cambridge Modern History." There is none of the quaintly romantic air of the late Canon Dixon's writing, that chivalrous touch of high imagination which belonged to one who found in the Church of England not merely a refuge but a home, not only a teacher but a mother. This volume will be useful to those who really want to know more about the period, but it will never attract or lure the general reader. It may clear the notions of many of the clergy; it will not appeal to the cultivated laity. They will no more think of reading it than they would the works of Archbishop Whitgift. As the book (being without notes) is presumably intended for this class, we think that the work is almost as much of a failure as that of Mr. Trevelyan on the Stuart period is a success.

But of course Mr. Frere would have his reply. His book is a work of original investigation, not popularization, and you cannot cater for two classes of readers at once. That is true. Still, we cannot see why it is necessary to reduce a period in many respects exciting to a level of monumental dullness.

On the other hand, the book will be found useful. If it does not say the last word on the various subjects discussed (we suppose that will never be said), at any rate it very distinctly sets things in the right light, and uses the very best sources of information. Nothing, for instance, could be better than the following estimate of the Puritanism of Cartwright and his followers:—

"Thus gradually Nonconformity became a definitely Presbyterian organization, pledged to work within the Church for the abolition of episcopacy, for a new view of the ministry which was not that of the Book of Common Prayer, for a new system of discipline which was not that of the English Church, and for a new scheme of worship which should tolerate much that at present was not tolerated and forbid much that was at present enjoined. The movement was thus not one for liberty of opinion or practice, but merely for the substitution of a new coercive system in place of the old one."

This is admirably said. There is still, in spite of all the work that has been done, a lingering superstition that Puritanism was in its essence a movement towards freedom and tolerance, so that it is well to have the truth once more stated. Freedom was the result of the internecine quarrels between the sects, or rather of the fact that no one party was able to exterminate the other. It was not the deliberate conquest of a party devoted to reason, but the fruit derived by all parties from the failure of others. Least of all was it the crown of the militant Presbyterianism of Cartwright and Travers, for whom the cardinal use of religion was the power to excommunicate their adversaries, its main comfort the doctrine of arbitrary reprobation, and a chief dogma the belief that Scripture ordered the execution of Papists.

On the other hand, this book is no apology for the Elizabethan régime. We know of no modern Anglican work which so frankly recognizes its evils. Mr. Frere has no hesitation in expressing his contempt for the State-enforced conformity, the spiritual apathy, the episcopal avarice, which characterized the time. He shows how, even when the bishops might have mitigated the abuses of their Courts, the lawyers prevented them, and that the attack on the Court of High Commission had much to justify it. Probably, indeed, one thing that makes the book such dismal reading is the writer's resolute refusal to echo the cry of "ecclesia restaurata." Still, he is one of the first to do real justice to Whitgift, and he sees very strongly the defects of the Puritan party, that "they lacked a sense of proportion and a sense of humour." He judges in no measured terms the attempt to combine the legal forms of one system with practical adherence to another:—

"They had used only such of the rites of the Church as they pleased, worn what they pleased, preached as they pleased, done what they pleased, and depraved everything with which they were displeased."

This is true, and the misleading use of the term Nonconformist confirms the vulgar error. The Puritans of Elizabeth's reign were not persecuted voluntaries, they were merely disorderly clerics. Discipline within the Church does not necessarily mean persecution. It may, however, be pointed out that their action is not without a parallel; and that their attitude, even down to the attacks on the bishops, has been in our own day imitated by a party which is at the opposite ecclesiastical pole.

On the other hand, we do not think that all Mr. Frere's strictures are made out. There is no disloyalty in working a constitution while striving to change it. A member of Parliament or a peer has a perfect right to work for the abolition of the House of Lords. The charge against the Puritans is not that they desired change, which they had a right to do, but that they refused to work the system they were sworn to work. After all, Wycliffe himself said "Mass," though his views were utterly subversive of the existing ecclesiastical polity. It is only in days when every one recognizes the rights of voluntarism that a man is to be told he must leave his church if he does not approve of its system, nor do we think that the appeal is justified so long as he believes in the society and the possibility of bringing it round to his notions. A Socialist is not bound to exile himself from an individualist State.

Lastly, we think Mr. Frere is very ill-advised in attempting to defend the ex officio oath. He seems hardly aware of the principle that a man ought not to be made to incriminate himself; yet we thought this was nowadays an elementary principle of justice. He ought, also, to have produced further evidence for his statement that "truthfulness never was the Puritans' strong point." If this is meant for a view of the ethos of Puritanism throughout its history, it needs a very long array of evidence, for it contradicts the established conviction of the modern world that Puritanism, whatever its defects, trained strong, just, and honourable citizens. If Mr. Frere really thinks that Puritanism had as evil an effect on the conscience as, say, "Probabilism," he ought to develop his view in a volume, and not scatter so grave a charge as an obiter dictum. We have no love for Puritanism; it was intolerant, opposed to culture, in its own way very superstitious, and as authoritative and scholastic as Duns Scotus. But that it was really hostile to truthfulness—except so far as all party spirit is—is so definite and sweeping and (if proved) so absolute a condemnation, that it needs more proof than the unsympathetic sarcasms of the least imaginative historian it has been our lot recently to read.

The Collected Works of William Hazlitt. 12 vols. Edited by A. R. Waller and Arnold Glover. With an Introduction by W. E. Henley. (Dent & Co.)

(First Notice.)

THIS year is the centenary of Hazlitt's first appearance in print. His reputation is now both secure and general, and he is presented "in questionable shape"—tabernacled in twelve portly volumes, heralded by Henley, interpreted by Arnold Glover and Mr. A. R. Waller. Let us, with the aid of the two latter, draw the curtain, unlock the shrine, and interrogate the "affable archangel" within.

It has been said of Hazlitt—and the remark is, to some extent, confirmed by his own confessions—that "he was a man of few books and fewer authors"—books and authors, moreover, of the past solely. There is an element of truth in this criticism. Hazlitt, though of a strongly bookish temper, was not erudite. He was an intellectual voluptuary, and read, as he dabbled in painting and metaphysic, for his pleasure merely. His excursions in philosophy were limited to a round dozen of writers, English and French, from Gassendi and Hobbes to Hume and the 'Système de la Nature'; and even these he did not study and digest after the fashion of the disciplined metaphysician, but tasted and discussed them as a man of letters. His speculative writings show little trace of technical terminology; the style is not scientific, but literary. In certain fields of English poetry, again, his attainments were slender—notably in the dramatic literature of Elizabeth's day, a subject, nevertheless, on which he lectured with much aplomb at the Surrey Institution.

But if Hazlitt lacked breadth of literary culture, his range was wider, on the modern side more particularly, than either he or Henley would lead us to suppose. Hazlitt, when he testifies of himself, is the most unreserved of witnesses; but where passion or prejudice intrudes he is apt to conceal or distort the truth. Henley's account of Hazlitt's choice of reading—Shakspeare, Cervantes, Rabelais, Boccaccio, Milton, Richardson, Rousseau, Fielding, Burke—is well enough so far as it goes, but it does not go far enough: it ought to include certain contemporaries—Cowper, Wordsworth, Scott, Coleridge (in his lyrics and poetic dramas)—and, of the elders, Chaucer, Spenser, and Pope, at least. It happens that we possess, in a certain marked feature of Hazlitt's style, a clue to his literary preferences. Whatever appealed to his taste he read attentively; and what he read attentively, a remarkable adhesiveness of mind led him to quote repeatedly (we refer now to the borrowed phrases, the literary tags, with which he is wont somewhat to overpunctuate his pages). In this connexion, Hazlitt's latest editors have rendered an important service to the critical reader. By recording in each case the source of these adventitious ornaments, they have furnished a key to the personnel of Hazlitt's hierarchy of letters, and simplified the process of determining the order and precedence of the several thrones, principalities, and powers. We have, in fact, but to count the number of tags accredited to each name, and to compare the totals, in order roughly to fix the preponderance of any given influence.

If we apply this test to Wordsworth—a writer whom Hazlitt, when astride his political hobby-horse, vilifies through every mood and tense—we shall find ourselves driven to a conclusion directly opposite to that indicated by Hazlitt's insolent and venomous allusions. In Hazlitt's eyes Wordsworth stood for a common renegade, who had bartered his birthright for a pitiful mess of pottage. He is never done girding at Wordsworth the stamp-distributor; and yet his very diatribes betray the ineffaceable impression made on him by Wordsworth the poet. Of all Hazlitt's literary creditors, Shakspeare ranks first in regard of the number of phrases—too often, indeed, they are forced loans—supplied. Now for every four quotations from Shakspeare, Hazlitt has one from Milton, and for every two from Milton, he has one from Burke and one from Wordsworth. Wordsworth and Burke, that is to say, stand on the same rung of Hazlitt's literary ladder. Both have sinned, and forfeited their high estate; yet their sometime votary is unable to break the spell still exercised by the glowing eloquence of the one and the austere, impassioned verse of the other, and so, as he writes, he falls, half unconsciously, into their very tricks and turns of speech, repeating the happy phrases branded upon his memory by fond and early association.

Henley, who avers that Hazlitt "was never an exalted Wordsworthian," says that "once, in a moment of supreme geniality, Hazlitt likened Wordsworth's best passages, not to their advantage, to those of the classic Akenside." So far is this from being true that the very reverse is the truth. What Hazlitt originally (1814) wrote was that the poet's "powers of description and fancy seem to be little inferior to those of thought and sentiment." In 1817, embittered by the fall of Napoleon, and desiring so far as he could to disparage the poet who had sold himself to the Treasury, he cancelled this passage, and substituted one to the effect that "Wordsworth's powers of description and fancy seem to be little inferior to those of his classical predecessor, Akenside"—a revised judgment delivered, not in a supremely genial moment, but at a time of recent and intense exasperation. Here, as in every case where Hazlitt revised his work for republication, the editors print in full the variations and omissions shown by a comparison of the earlier with the later text. Indeed, those who have read Hazlitt on 'The Excursion' only in the revised text of 'The Round Table' can form but a faint conception of the writer's fervid admiration for that poem, or of his loud acclaim of the poet's transcendent powers. His 'Observations on "The Excursion"' first appeared in The Examiner for 1814. There, in a passage omitted from 'The Round Table' (1817), he writes of Wordsworth:—

"There is in his sentiments and reflections on human life a depth, an originality, a beauty and grandeur, both of conception and expression, which place him decidedly at the head of the poets of the present day—or, rather, which place him in a totally different class of excellence.....It is not in our power to add to, or take from, the pretensions of a poem like the present, but if our opinion or wishes could have any weight, we would take our leave of it by saying—ESTO PERPETUA!"

Here speaks the true Hazlitt, as he speaks nine years later in 'The Literary Examiner':—

"It has been asked whether Lord Byron is a writer likely to live. Perhaps not: he has intensity of power, but lacks distinctive character. In my opinion, Mr. Wordsworth is the only poet of the day that is likely to live—should he ever happen to be born! But who will be the midwife to bring his works to light?"

—a question which many eminent literary accoucheurs have striven to solve, and, perhaps, have succeeded in solving between them.

On Hazlitt's attitude towards Coleridge we shall have something further to say. Meanwhile, let us not delay to acknowledge our large debt to the editors of these volumes. They have taken ample time and pains with their work, and have done it thoroughly. The sheets have been read with a carefulness uncommon nowadays. Diligent research has brought to light a mass of new material—much of it journalism, no doubt; but all of it Hazlitt's, and some of it literature. The bibliographical notes are excellent of their kind—those in the last two volumes especially, in which the intricacies and overlappings of the early posthumous collections are explained with conspicuous skill. In view of the slender room at their disposal, the editors' commentary is remarkably full. The difficulty here was one of selection and omission; but by dint of a wise economy and the exercise of stern self-repression, room has been found for everything essential, including those textual "cuts" and variations which frequently supply a clue to the understanding of Hazlitt's fluctuations of temper and opinion. On the subject of Mr. Waller's editorial prowess there is no need to enlarge: it is amply attested by his work in connexion with the "Cambridge English Classics," and has recently won honourable recognition at the hands of the Senate of that University. Of his lamented fellow-worker we will take it upon us to say that, whether for accurate scholarship, for sound and impartial judgment, for special knowledge of the period, or for strict literary conscience, no fitter man could have been found for the task of editing Hazlitt's remains. From all who have at heart the cause of English literature congratulations are due to the surviving editor on the completion of his arduous and beneficent labours. We cordially wish him joy; but that must, indeed, be "a defeated joy" which he feels as he surveys the fruits of his collaboration with Arnold Glover, and recalls the pleasant trade interrupted by death.

Amongst the pieces now first identified and collected is an essay 'On the Character of the Country People,' which reminds us of the famous tirade on the same subject in 'The Round Table,' and contains a good story about Charles Lamb. While visiting Winterslow in 1810, Lamb had ordered a pair of snuff-coloured breeches from "the little hunch-backed tailor" of Pitton (a neighbouring village),

"instead of which the pragmatistical old gentleman, having an opinion of his own, brought him home a pair of lively Lincoln-green, in which he rode in triumph on Johnny Tremain's cross-country caravan through Newberry into Oxford,.....the abstract idea of the jest of the thing prevailing in his mind (as it always does) over the sense of personal dignity."

Hitherto it has been supposed that, after the rejection of 'Zapolya' by the Drury Lane Theatre Committee in May, 1816, nothing more was heard of Coleridge's drama as a stage-play. This is an error. On February 10th, 1818, 'Zapolya,' "compressed into three Acts, to make it tedious and brief," and accompanied with music, was produced at the Royal Circus and Surrey Theatre (later Astley's Amphitheatre), and ran for eight nights between that date and March 2nd, when it was performed for the benefit of Tom Dibdin. Of Hazlitt's stock quotations, perhaps the most obstinately coy to research was that which first occurs in an Examiner essay of 1815 (xi. p. 268):—

Sithence no fairy lights, no quickening ray,
Nor stir of pulse, nor objects to entice
Abroad the spirits; but the cloistered heart
Sits squat at home, like Pagod in a niche Obscure.

These vigorous lines, which recur more than once in Hazlitt's pages (cf. xi. pp. 224, 428; iv. p. 311), were advertised in Notes and Queries, and their source inquired for in every quarter, likely or unlikely, that suggested itself. At length Arnold Glover had the satisfaction of lighting on them in Dodsley's 'Collection of Poems,' 1758, vol. vi. p. 138. They occur in a poem addressed by the Rev. Sneyd Davies 'To the Honourable and Reverend F[rederick] C[ornwallis], afterwards Archbishop of Canterbury. It was probably not in Dodsley, however, that they were found by Hazlitt (whose familiarity with the poem is proved by his occasional citation of other passages from it), but in the pages of that once-familiar school-book, 'Enfield's

Speaker,' a work which appears to have supplied Coleridge also with one of his quotations in the Preface to the 'Poems' of 1796. Probably Hazlitt had committed the entire poem to heart in boyhood. It was known to Lamb, also, in all likelihood, through the medium of 'Enfield.' He quotes the opening lines in a letter to Southey dated August 10th, 1825. So loosely did Hazlitt cite his authors that we have sometimes thought that another of his quotations,

'Tis the taste of the ancients ; 'tis classical lore, was merely a random shot at Campbell's well-known verse :—

'Tis the sunset of life gives me mystical lore.

SOME AMERICAN MEMOIRS.

A Belle of the Fifties. Edited by Ada Sterling. (Heinemann.)

Hannah Logan's Courtship. Edited by Albert Cook Myers. (Philadelphia, Ferris & Leach.)

Robert Cavelier. By William Dana Orcutt. (Heinemann.)

THE Duke in 'Lothair,' though he did not approve of Americans in general, made an exception in favour of "an American gentleman with large estates in the South," whom he regarded as a "real aristocrat." The very interesting book which Miss Ada Sterling has prepared from the diaries and recollections of Mrs. Clay-Clopton deals with the fortunes of such a family. This venerable American lady was known to fame in a past generation as the beautiful and dashing Mrs. Clay of Alabama, wife of one of the Confederate leaders in the rebellion of 1861 and the Civil War. It was to her husband, Senator Clement C. Clay, that the task fell of renouncing Alabama's allegiance to the United States on the memorable day of January 21st, 1861. Mrs. Clay gives a graphic description of the scene which took place on this occasion, important in the annals of the world as well as in those of America. Senator after senator rose, and, in a few solemn words, declared that the people for whom he spoke had "adopted an ordinance whereby they withdrew from the Union, formed under a compact styled the United States, resumed the powers delegated to it, and assumed their separate station as a sovereign and independent people."

Such a rupture of a legislative body had hardly been known since Cromwell purged the Long Parliament; indeed, the only parallel instance of a voluntary separation of such a kind is to be found in the disruption of the Scottish Church in 1843, though, happily, that event, great as have been its issues, did not portend a civil war. Mrs. Clay draws a vivid picture of the emotion caused by the renunciation of these senators' allegiance :—

"As each Senator, speaking for his State, concluded his solemn renunciation of allegiance to the United States, women grew hysterical and waved their handkerchiefs, encouraging them with cries of sympathy and admiration. Men wept and embraced each other mournfully. At times the murmurs among the onlookers grew so deep that the Sergeant-at-Arms was ordered to clear the galleries; and, as each speaker took up his portfolio and gravely left the Senate Chamber, sympathetic shouts rang from the assemblage above. Scarcely a member of the Senatorial body but was pale with the terrible significance of the hour. There was everywhere a feeling of suspense, as if, visibly, the pillars of the temple were being withdrawn and the great Government structure was tottering."

Mrs. Clay's lively narrative throws a good deal of light upon the events which led up to the Civil War, from the point of view of an ardent Southerner. Brought up in an atmosphere of land-owning aristocracy, and accustomed to regard slavery as a "domestic institution," which was only productive of good to the negroes, who were treated, in all the good families of the South, at least as well as the British squire treated his labourers, she was wholly unable to recognize the real ground which the North had for resisting any attempt to divert the Union from its foundation of liberty and equality for all men. "Our physical prosperity," she says,

"no less than the social security we enjoyed, had caused us to become objects of envy to the rough elements in the new settlements, especially of the North-west."

There is a certain amount of truth in this view, and it comes as a useful corrective to the modern idea that the American Civil War was purely a crusade against slavery—a view at least as erroneous as that set forth by Mrs. Clay, that it was a war of conquest and spoliation on the part of the North. However, though Mrs. Clay's memoirs add considerably to our knowledge of the Southern attitude before and during the war, it is rather the personal element in them to which the reader's interest is chiefly directed. We find in these pages many lively and picturesque descriptions of Washington society before the war—a society to which the high-spirited and witty ladies of the South, among whom our heroine herself played a leading part, contributed much of its most characteristic and brilliant life.

The book is very gracefully written, and the account, to select one instance among many, of the fancy-dress ball to which Mrs. Clay went in the character of the American Mrs. Partington is as good as anything of its kind to be found in the works of contemporary American novelists. The story of Senator Clay's imprisonment, along with Jefferson Davis, after his surrender to the United States Government, is full of thrilling incident. The assassination of Lincoln—of which Mr. Clay was erroneously surmised by the Northern mob to have had a guilty foreknowledge—raised public feeling to a dangerous height, and for some months his life trembled in the balance. Mrs. Clay, at any rate, was convinced that it was only her personal efforts in intercession with President Johnson which saved him from being condemned by the military tribunal. She found a valuable assistant in General Grant, who was totally opposed to all reprisals on the vanquished Southerners, and declared, shortly after Lee's surrender had ended the war, that, if he had his way, he would release every Southern prisoner without conditions. The story is well worth reading, and the book as a whole presents a delightful picture of a charming and original personality.

We recently had occasion to speak in terms of praise of 'Sally Wister's Journal,' a human document which Mr. Albert Cook Myers rescued from the oblivion of time. Encouraged by the success of that delightful book, he has now given us the story of 'Hannah Logan's Courtship,' as related in the diary of her lover, the Hon. John Smith, of Philadelphia, who was a notable colonial politician from 1736 to 1752. Hannah Logan was the daughter of the venerable statesman and scholar James Logan, of Stenton, and, like her father and her husband, belonged to the Society of Friends. A contemporary has left a pleasant account of her appearance when she was twenty-four. "To return to the Lady," says this young buck :—

"I declare I burnt my Lips more than once, being quite thoughtless of the warmth of my Tea, entirely lost in Contemplating her Beauties. She was tall, and Slender, but Exactly well Shap'd, her Features Perfect, and Complexion tho' a little the whitest, yet her Countenance had something in it extremely Sweet. Her Eyes Express'd a very great Softness, denoting a Compos'd Temper and serenity of Mind. Her Manner was Grave and Reserv'd, and to be short she had a Sort of Majesty in her Person, and Agreeableness in her Behaviour, which at once Surprized and Charmed the Beholders."

According to her lover, "the Charm of her Conversation Excelled, if possible, those of her person." As Charles Lamb said of his friend Hester Savory, the Quaker rule could not cool the human feeling in her. She seems, indeed, to have been a very charming woman, and the lapse of a century and a half cannot destroy the interest with which the reader follows the vicissitudes of the passion which John Smith conceived for her. There was no very striking incident in his courtship, which had to overcome a certain amount of coyness and disinclination for marriage on Hannah's part, but ended happily, without the need of any melodramatic expedient—though more than once the young lover was obliged to realize "in how much pain is a situation between hope and Despair." The value of his diary, as the editor points out, lies not merely in the love-story which it placidly unfolds. It also helps us to recall the daily life of a prosperous American in the first half of the eighteenth century, and to understand the Quaker community, to which the success of Pennsylvania was largely due :—

"It presents Quaker social life, not all in ascetic drab and grey, but also in many of its more attractive aspects—travelling and visiting, genial hospitality and quiet good living, dining and tea-drinking, fishing and sliding and skating and other mild diversions."

The extreme frankness and naïveté of the diary, which was intended for no eyes but those of Smith himself, add to the pleasantness of the book, for which we are grateful to Mr. Myers, though we cannot like the dignified Hannah Logan quite so well as the lively Sally Wister.

Mr. Orcutt's historical novel presents a readable account of La Salle's life and his discovery of the Mississippi, which holds a good deal of romance. The United States is said to have a much larger reading public than Great Britain. It certainly shows a vivid interest in its historical figures which is wanting in our own population taken as a whole.

Chatham. By Frederic Harrison. "Twelve English Statesmen." (Macmillan & Co.)

AFTER many delays, due to the divergent activities which possess Mr. John Morley, the notable series of "Twelve English Statesmen" has at last been brought to a conclusion. Mr. Frederic Harrison, to whom he delegated the writing of the volume on Chatham, must have approached the topic with some qualms. The ground had already been covered by Macaulay in two of his most eloquent essays; secondly, the author could not help feeling out of sympathy with many of the ideals of his subject. We may say at once that both difficulties have been triumphantly surmounted. Mr. Harrison brings much freshness of treatment to bear upon Chatham's career, particularly during its earlier periods. Though conquest and empire may be repugnant to him, literary honesty comes to the rescue, and when he cannot praise the wisdom of the statesman's aims, he dwells upon the loftiness of his motives. The result is a singularly dignified portrait of a figure of lonely majesty, and an appreciative analysis of a character which, despite its histrionic exaggerations, conveyed the lesson of moral dignity to his country at an hour when it was sorely needed.

Mr. Harrison makes no attempt to reconcile the inconsistencies of William Pitt's political beginnings. Consumed by honourable ambition, and destitute of family influence, he was driven to play for his own hand. At one time he denounced Hanoverian subsidies; afterwards he advocated them; his own policy when he attained power bore some resemblance to that of Carteret which, in opposition, he had mercilessly vituperated. Yet, with prophetic insight, he invariably perceived where the true interests of his country lay. As Mr. Harrison acutely remarks:—

"To prevent Prussia being crushed by the gigantic confederacy of five Powers was a very different thing from assisting Maria Theresa to regain her ancestral dominions. Lastly, to protect Hanover from being absorbed by France, because the Elector of Hanover was King of England, was a very different thing from flinging away English blood and treasure to promote the ambition and second the quarrels of the Elector of Hanover. Pitt's policy, as he clearly showed, was this:—he would not sacrifice British interests for Hanoverian objects, but he would not let Hanover be sacrificed solely by reason of its connection with England. This was a perfectly intelligible policy; and it was a sound policy. Pitt's change of front was startling; but it has an adequate defence."

Pitt scorned to take a side merely because it was popular, and few incidents in his life redound more to his honour than his efforts on behalf of Admiral Byng. But he generally read the temper of the nation correctly, even if he was tempted to work too persistently on its passions. No more luminous remark has ever been elicited from a nature essentially opaque than George II.'s: "You have taught me to look elsewhere than to the Commons for the sense of my subjects!" Pitt had, indeed, the secret of bringing out the higher qualities of all about him. The House of Commons endured his arrogance because, as Charles Butler said, "there was something in him finer than his words; the man was infinitely greater than the orator." It must be remembered besides that the grand manner was sedulously cultivated in the pre-Revolutionary age, and that Pitt's artificialities were only a carrying to an extreme of the device which every one attempted. It was imported into private life; and though no contemporary correspondence is quite so Grandisonian as Chatham's with his nephew Lord Camelford, yet Temple addresses his own sister as "Dear Lady Hester." Charles Fox was the great simplifier of debate, and, in the same way, biography offers few contrasts more complete than his unstudied outpourings on ancient and modern literature to Lord Holland, and Pitt's stilted injunctions to Camelford that he should "drink as deeply as he could of the divine springs," the Iliad and Virgil.

The survey of the victorious campaigns organized by Pitt during the Seven Years' War is as complete as Mr. Harrison's space permitted. "America was to be won in Germany"; in other words, France was to be exhausted in the struggle with Prussia, and thus leave Canada and the Mississippi Valley to be occupied by the British. Historians are in practical agreement, however, that Pitt pursued hostilities beyond their legitimate ends. As Mr. Harrison well puts it:—

"Any attempt to crush back the rival nations of Europe into a secondary rank, to maintain a permanent and exclusive domination on the high seas, must at last provoke a combined resistance, and in the end must exhaust an island of moderate size."

The Treaty of Paris is as justifiable from the English standpoint as the Treaty of Utrecht, only both were brought about by the most despicable political intrigues. Mr. Harrison alludes briefly but sufficiently to Pitt's exclusion from power, and the corruption and proscription employed by Bute and his colleagues to force the peace upon the House of Commons. The grimy story can be best studied in Lord Edmond Fitzmaurice's "Life of Lord Shelburne." But Mr. Harrison becomes unnecessarily indignant when he stigmatizes the interview of some two years afterwards between George III. and the fallen minister as "outrageously indecent and irregular." Pitt had right of perpetual access to the king as a member of the Privy Council, and the solidity of government by Cabinet had not then been established with the precision of modern times. The days were not far remote, indeed, when Governments formed on fixed principles were held up to public opprobrium as "juntos," and the outcry against the "connexions" had a very similar meaning. Pitt recurred to the system of William III. when he deliberately formed his second administration out of men chosen without regard to party, group, or family. The experiment failed, owing to the fatal mistake of transforming the "Great Commoner" into the Earl of Chatham, his mental collapse, and the incurable levity of Charles Townshend. But it may be questioned if it would ever have succeeded, even if, as Mr. Harrison suggests, George had been Victoria and Pitt had possessed the vitality of Palmerston or Gladstone. Administrations constructed on what our ancestors used to call "a broad bottom" have never endured except in quiet times. The times during which America was hastening towards independence were far from tranquil. Anyhow, Chatham ended his days in isolated opposition, protesting to the last against the coercion of the United States by arms, but unwilling to concede separation after the French had entered into alliance with the colonists.

